

PORTRAIT OF VISCOUNT STRATFORD DE REDCLIFFE, V.C.B.—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH TAKEN CONSTANTINOPLE.

THE EDINBURGH GAZETTEER.
 OR COMPENDIOUS
Geographical Dictionary;

CONTAINING A DESCRIPTION OF THE VARIOUS COUNTRIES, KINGDOMS, STATES, CITIES, TOWNS, PORTS, SEAS, RIVERS, HARBOURS, &c. OF

(THE WORLD;)

an Account of

THE GOVERNMENT, CUSTOMS & RELIGION, OF THE INHABITANTS, THE BOUNDARIES
 AND NATURAL PRODUCTIONS OF EACH COUNTRY &c.

FORMING A COMPLETE BODY

(OF) Geography
 ()

PHYSICAL, POLITICAL, STATISTICAL, & COMMERCIAL.

Abridged

FROM THE LARGER WORK IN SIX VOLUMES.

ACCOMPANIED BY MAPS CONSTRUCTED BY J. ARROWSMITH.

EDINBURGH:

PRINTED FOR ARCHIBALD CONSTABLE AND CO. EDINBURGH; LONGMAN AND CO. AND HURST, ROBINSON AND CO.

(London.)

1826

INTRODUCTION.

Some views of the history and principles of the science of Geography, seem to be necessary as an Introduction to the EDINBURGH GAZETTER. The subject may be treated under the three following divisions: 1. The History of Geography. 2. A general view of the Physical Divisions and Structure of the Globe. 3. A general view of Civil and Political Geography.

GEOGRAPHY OF THE ANCIENTS.—The geographical notions of the ancients were very imperfect. The first occasion on which it was reduced at all into the form of a science, was by the school of Miletus, of which Thales was the head. The age in which he flourished formed, indeed, the only period in which mathematical and astronomical knowledge was diligently cultivated in Greece. It appears that he understood thoroughly the construction of the gnomon, the earliest instrument by which latitude could be accurately observed, though its first erection in Greece is due to Anaximander, his disciple. There appears reason to think, that for this, and other lessons in astronomical geography, the Milesian school was indebted to the Egyptians and Babylonians. Thales also discovered, or at least communicated, the passage of the sun from tropic to tropic, and the consequent distribution of the year into four seasons; he established also its division into 365 days. These improvements in geography are entirely inconsistent with the ancient belief, which represented the earth as a circular plane. The geographers of the Milesian school were sensible that it must be a round and solid body, but were yet unable to assign to it the regular spherical form. The next geographical improver was Herodotus, who prosecuted his inquiries by travelling, the only mode then within his reach. He had made a long residence in Egypt, the cradle of science; he had afterwards visited Magna Græcia (Southern Italy), the banks of the Danube, the shores of the Black sea, and probably also Babylon and Susa. Besides the observations made in his own travels, Herodotus had the opportunity of collecting those made by Darius, during his expeditions to India and against the Scythians; to which we may add that of Cambyses against the Ethiopians. Darius boasted of having conquered India; but it does not appear that he ever reached far beyond the Indus. In regard to Africa, it is reported that Pharaoh Necho had sent an expedition under Phœnician navigators, to explore its form and extent; and that the persons so employed, having set out from the Red sea, after a voyage of three years, entered the Straits, and reached Egypt by way of the Mediterranean. From this report, Herodotus derived a conviction of the peninsular form of Africa, though without any adequate idea of its dimensions. In Asia, Herodotus describes fully the provinces of the Persian empire. The Caspian he describes justly as an inland sea, and even gives its dimensions with tolerable precision. From the expedition of Darius, Herodotus had derived very considerable light respecting the tribes to the north of the Euxine. He could not indeed penetrate to the sources of the Borysthenes and the Tanais; but his information, on the whole, will appear in a very advantageous light, when compared with that of Strabo and others of his successors, whose knowledge scarcely reached beyond the mouths of these rivers. The Danube, to a considerable height, with the rivers which fall into it, are well delineated; but all the west of Europe, Gaul, Britain, with the greater part of Germany, of Spain, and even of Italy, were unknown to Herodotus. In Africa, he appears to have collected some valuable information. During a long residence in Egypt, he made very anxious inquiries respecting those mysterious regions which compose its interior. The course of the Nile, the grand geographical problem of antiquity, was traced by him higher than any modern has actually ascended it; and his indications clearly point out that larger branch coming from the south-west, which remained unknown in Europe till about the middle of the last century. From some travellers who had been made prisoners, and carried into the interior of the continent, he learned the existence of a river running from east to west. This river, which Major Rennell supposes to be the modern Niger, appeared to Herodotus the remote head of the Nile. The Carthaginians were known to be expert and courageous voyagers; but we want materials for illustrating their discoveries. The short voyage undertaken by Hanno, has given occasion to great controversy among the learned; so that, though he appears to have visited the western coast of Africa, it is uncertain, and is matter of dispute, to what extent he traversed it. The expedition of Alexander into Persia gave a great impulse to the study of geography in the Grecian world. Alexander was constantly accompanied by two engineers, Diogenetus and Bæton, who made careful surveys of all his marches. When he was in India, also, he followed the example of Darius, in sending an expedition down the Indus, which, commanded by Nearchus, entered the ocean, and returned by the Persian gulf. The successors of Alexander did not cease to contribute to the progress of geography; and at Alexandria, all the materials which were collected by the enterprising travellers who were sent out on exploring expeditions, were arranged and systematised. This city, chosen by Alexander with such peculiar felicity, soon became a centre for the commerce of the three continents, and afforded excellent opportunities of geographical inquiry. These advantages were improved by the splendid and enlightened patronage of the Ptolemies, particularly of Ptolemy Philadelphus. That prince sent into India, for the purpose of making additional observations, Megasthenes and Dionysius, who appear to have penetrated as far as the Ganges. Science was still more benefited by the immense library which that prince formed at Alexandria. Eratosthenes, who was its librarian, was the first who reduced geography to a system, and which, in respect to the soundness of its general principles, surpasses perhaps that of any other ancient geographer. His successor Hipparchus made considerable improvements, particularly in the astronomical parts of the science. He introduced the practice of expressing longitudes and latitudes in degrees and minutes, and of employing curve lines in maps to express the meridians and parallels. For all our knowledge, however, of the system of both these geographers, we are indebted to Strabo, whose work alone has survived the wreck of time. But in the outline drawn of the habitable globe in this great school of geography, there was much inaccuracy; the scientific processes by which the distance and bearings of places are now fixed with so much precision, being at this early period almost quite unknown. Longitudes and latitudes were observed, the one not at all, the other in a very limited and imperfect manner. There were not even any itinerary surveys conducted on trigonometrical principles. Distances were laid down almost entirely from time; they were calculated according to the number of days employed in passing from one place to another. Little need be said to prove the imperfection of so loose a mode of estimating distance. In the geographical description of the globe by Strabo, there are innumerable inaccuracies and mistakes. At its western extremity was Spain, which, though several parts of it were known and frequented, had by no means at this time been fully explored. The ancient geographers appear to have given to it nearly the precise form of a parallelogram, or, according to the rude expression of Strabo, "a hide spread out." The Pyrenees terminated this figure on the east, and were made to run directly from north to south. France was continued on the same line, and formed nearly a square, bounded on the east and west by the Pyrenees and the Rhine, which were supposed nearly parallel to each other. The whole of its coast was made everywhere parallel to, and at a small distance from, Britain. So far was this idea carried, that the west of Britain, now Cornwall, was placed immediately opposite to the Pyrenees, while the Cassiterides (Scilly islands) were attached to Spain, and fixed near Cape Ortegal. Britain, in the system of Strabo, forms a species of triangle, but one of which the longest side is that opposite to Gaul. Ireland is stated to be about 100 miles north from the centre of Britain. Such is the description given by Strabo, without any apparent doubt of its correctness. Rumours of a different kind, however, had been brought by Pytheas, a navigator of Marseilles, at that time by far the greatest commercial city in Europe, who professed to have visited the most northerly point of Britain, and to whom Eratosthenes seems to have attached considerable credit. Strabo, on the contrary, adopts an entirely different opinion, and treats the whole narrative as a tissue of falsehood and imposture. This subject accordingly gave rise to a geographical controversy in these ancient days, in which we have still Strabo's arguments handed down to us; and from his statements there is every reason to suppose, that Py-theas, the Massylian navigator, had actually visited the British coasts, and had reported truly all that he saw. It is supposed that Pytheas had entered the Baltic, and explored its shores; and the knowledge of the school of Eratosthenes respecting these shores, does not seem to have extended beyond the slight notices which he brought them. The eastern coast of Asia was supposed to be washed by an ocean called the Eastern or Atlantic ocean. India was considered the most easterly country of Asia; and the coast of Coromandel was conceived to run almost due south, till it joined that of Northern Asia. The Ganges, in consequence, fell into the Eastern ocean; and the continent, being bounded by a line drawn along the frontier of India, of Thibet, of Independent Tartary, and immediately north of the Caspian, was reduced to about a third of its real dimensions. The immense regions of Siberia, Chinese Tartary, China, and India beyond the Ganges, were all excluded. Africa, in this system, appears of the same truncated form and dimensions as its bordering continent. At a certain distance south of the equator a line was drawn, termed the "limit of the habitable earth;" the zone included within which was supposed to be scorched with a heat so intense, as to be altogether unfit for the abode of man. In delineating the general figure of the earth upon mathematical principles, much was done by this school of geography. Its globular form was now universally recognised; and Eratosthenes applied himself very diligently to form an estimate of its circumference. An important era was formed in geography, by the final triumph of Rome, and by the diffusion of her arms over the greater part of the known world. At the beginning of the second Punic war, when the invasion of Hannibal, by way of Spain and Gaul, was apprehended, the Romans caused a general survey to be made of those countries. A measurement on a much greater scale, including the whole Roman world, took place after the full establishment of the power of Julius Cæsar. That conqueror appointed three of the most eminent men of science whom Rome could afford, to survey every part of the empire. Twenty-five years, however, elapsed before this great work could be completed and laid before the senate. It has never reached modern times in its original shape; but it probably furnished materials for most of the great geographical works which were published during the first and second centuries. Alexandria, however, still continued the centre of geographical knowledge. The founder of the new school was Marinus, a native of Tyre, whose work is known only from the extracts and notices of Ptolemy. This new school was entirely astronomical and mathematical. The division of the great circle of the earth into degrees and minutes, first formed by Hipparchus, was now the method employed for fixing the position of every spot upon its surface. But their system involved several capital errors, in consequence of which, the whole length of the known world, from his first meridian at the Fortunate Islands to the extremity of Asia, amounts in the system of Marinus to 210 degrees, or not much less than double the real extent.

Ptolemy applied himself, with diligence, to correct and new-model the system of his predecessor. His general course seems to have been, in a summary manner to reduce them to one half; yet his longitudes even then do not make any approach to correctness. His greatest length of the known world, extending from the Fortunate Islands to Scra and Thina, the farthest extremities of Asia, amounts to 180 degrees, or half the circumference of the globe, instead of about 125 degrees. He overrated the length of the Mediterranean about 30 degrees, or 1800 geographical miles. In the geography of Ptolemy, the west of Europe appears pretty nearly in its proper form and dimensions; and Spain, Gaul, and Britain, bear the due relation to each other. France has thus a western coast, and Britain is separated from Spain; yet it leaves behind the Cassiterides, which remain Spanish, and are placed near Cape Ortegal. England and Ireland appear correct in their general outline; and even the details of the Scottish coast are given with tolerable accuracy, particularly the great bay into which the Murray frith opens. The coast of Germany was very well known to Ptolemy, and he has even represented tolerably the peninsula of Jutland. But Scandinavia appears merely as an island, termed Scania, about 100 miles long and 50 broad. The west of Poland forms part of great Germany; the east, with Russia, composes European Sarmatia, to the north of which rolls the Sarmatic ocean. A coast running to the north as far as our geographer's information reached, bounded this ocean; and the rest of Europe, with all the north and east of Asia, was, in the world of Ptolemy, terminated by unknown land. The Caspian therefore appears now as an inland sea; but the Aral being conceived to form part of it, produces an extension from west to east, instead of from north to south. Northern Asia is included under the general appellation of Scythia, a vast region, divided into two portions by a chain of mountains, bearing the widely extended name of Imaus. Central Asia was composed of the countries of Bactriana, Sogdiana, and of the Sacæ, stretching along those immense chains which separate India from the regions of Northern Asia. Across these formidable barriers, the boldness of mercantile enterprise induced a caravan to penetrate, which setting out from Byzantium, traversed nearly the whole breadth of Asia as far as Serica, the most easterly country known to the ancients. Yet what country was designated by this name has been a subject of much controversy among modern inquirers. In navigating along the southern shores of Asia, the ancients had not advanced beyond the coast of Malabar; but they there gained information, which enabled Ptolemy to continue his delineation as far as the coast of Siam. Africa, in the system of Ptolemy, exhibits the same increase of actual knowledge, along with the same erroneous general views. Navigators had now explored the eastern coast, as far probably as Cape Delgado (about lat. 10° S.). In the interior of Africa, not only the course of the Nile, but the remoter sources upon the Niger, appear to have been better known to Ptolemy than to any of his predecessors. Pliny, in his great work on Natural History, has included a complete system of geography. He appears to have collected, with very great diligence, whatever was then known respecting all quarters of the world; but not possessing the mathematical knowledge of the school of Alexandria, nor having arranged the results of his knowledge into the form of maps, he did not exhibit so distinct or connected a system. Along with the fall of the Roman power, the science of geography at the same time declined, and was at last totally extinguished in the night of barbarian darkness which succeeded.

GEOGRAPHY OF THE MIDDLE AGES.—Ignorance, for many ages, continued to reign undisturbed over the west; but, during that era, a bright light began to shine in an opposite quarter. The fanatic hordes, who were led to victory under the name of Mahomet, trampled, at first, on all the monuments of science which met them in their course. But the first rude chiefs were soon succeeded by more polished and enlightened princes; the Saracens caught and rekindled the expiring flame of science in the Greek empire; and the throne of the caliphs, under the auspices of Haroun and Almamun, reached almost the first heights of literature and civilisation. The departments of mathematics and astronomy were among those most especially pursued; and geography, so nearly allied to both, was not likely to be neglected. The Arabian geographers universally adopted the original idea of an ocean by which every part of the earth was bounded. Africa was now universally considered as a peninsula; but its precise form was not fully ascertained. Abulfeda, following the system of Eratosthenes, expressly described the sea as terminating it immediately on the other side of the Mountains of the Moon. But Edrisi, who appears to have known a greater extent of its eastern coast, represents it, like Ptolemy, as running parallel to that of Asia, and its farthest extremity as situated upon the sea of China. But the most interesting, and at the same time most perplexing to the moderns of all their statements, are those which relate to the Niger, and the kingdoms situated upon its banks. They describe that river, under the appellation of "Nile of the Negroes," as covered with opulent and flourishing kingdoms, carrying on an extensive commerce in slaves and gold; but they represent it as flowing from east to west, and falling into the sea; while the Niger known to us has its course in the opposite direction, and towards the interior of the continent. Whether this statement was erroneous, or whether it referred to some other river, whose course is yet unknown to Europeans, is a problem which yet remains for modern discovery to solve. The Arabians had completely subdued, not only Egypt, but the whole northern coast of Africa, where their descendants, under the name of Moors, still continue to hold sway. From thence they had formed that series of caravan routes through the great desert, by which the interior commerce of the continent has ever since been maintained. In Asia the Arabs, besides all the countries bordering on Africa and southern Europe, had occupied Persia, Cabul, Bukharia, and all the finest provinces of Hindostan. They acquired thus very extensive opportunities of becoming acquainted both with the interior and with the eastern extremities of this continent. In consequence of the perpetual hostility of the Arabs against all the Christian nations, the accounts given by their geographers of the European countries are very imperfect, and not deserving of much attention. Europe, during the middle ages, presents almost an entire blank in the history of geography. Charlesagne indeed appears to have bestowed attention on it; and the sovereigns of England displayed a laudable zeal with regard to the statistics of their own kingdom. The impulse, however, by which Europeans were led to the discovery of unknown and distant countries, arose from a different quarter. The journeys to the holy sepulchre, to which superstition at all times prompted, produced, even in the darkest ages, some descriptions of the intermediate regions. These became much more frequent, when the crusades occurred, to give a new and romantic interest to this quarter of the world. At the same time, the gigantic conquests of Jenghis Khan and Timur drew an equal attention to the yet almost unknown regions of Tartary. The travels of Marco Polo, which extended over all the east, opened a new world to the eyes of Europe; and though they excited a portion of that scepticism which the discoverers of any new region are destined to experience, they at least enlarged the minds of men, and prepared them for the brighter light which was to burst upon them from another quarter. We allude to that brilliant career of maritime discovery on which Europeans now entered.

MODERN GEOGRAPHY.—Since the close of the 15th century, scarcely a year has elapsed without some important accession being made to our stock of geographical knowledge. The Portuguese began almost alone this grand career of maritime enterprise, when they pursued their progress along the western coast of Africa. Having passed Cape Bojador, successive navigators discovered the Senegal, the Gambia, the coasts of Guinea, Congo, and at last approached the southern extremity of Africa. In 1498 Vasco de Gama performed the grand exploit of doubling the “Cape of Tempests,” which had already changed its name to the Cape of Good Hope. He sailed along the African coast, as far as Melinda; and from thence across to Malabar. The succeeding twenty or thirty years presented a continued series of discovery and conquest, and the Portuguese flag was seen flying through all the Eastern seas. Meantime Spain had opened to herself a still more splendid career, by the discovery of the New World. The voyage of Columbus, the conquest of Mexico and Peru, splendid events, which are familiar to every reader, opened quite a new scene to the eye of Europeans. Magellan, in 1520, sailed through the straits which bear his name, and crossing the Pacific, first accomplished the circumnavigation of the globe. He was followed, half a century after, in the same track, by Sir Francis Drake, and successively by Cavendish, Scouting, Quiros, Dampier, and other great navigators. Meantime a passage to the East Indies was zealously sought by another quarter of America. Cabot having discovered Newfoundland, Cortereal, a Portuguese navigator, following in his steps, came to the north of Hudson's bay, to which he gave the name of the strait of Anian; while the great opening into the bay appeared to him a portion of the Pacific ocean. From this time, it appeared undoubted that India might be reached by this channel; but the first attempts to penetrate through it were made by the Spaniards from California. The attempt was afterwards made from the opposite side by Elisha, Davis, and Baffins, who, in this fruitless search, explored the great bays of Hudson and Baffins, the coast of Greenland, and the country of the Esquimaux, along the frozen regions of Northern Asia. Nova Zembla was discovered; also the strait of Waygatz, and Spitzbergen. Russia also began now to enter the lists of maritime discovery. Peter the Great employed the Danish navigator Beering in enterprises of this nature. This celebrated navigator rounded the eastern shore of Asia, and discovered a great land which was not yet known to be America. Notwithstanding all these discoveries, the extent and boundaries of the Pacific were by no means precisely defined. It was reserved for the immortal Cook, to complete the survey of this vast expanse of ocean. He established completely the non-existence of a southern continent; he examined the north-west coast of America, explored the eastern coast of New Holland, sailed round New Zealand, discovered New Caledonia, and made Europe intimately acquainted with the beautiful groupes of the Society, the Friendly, and the Sandwich islands. A succession of French and English circumnavigators, Prouse, Vancouver, Labillardiere, Wilson, &c. found still some gleanings after so rich a harvest. More recently Peron and Flinders have completed the survey of that group of large islands designated by the name of Australasia. The greatest maritime discovery in our time has been made by Captain Parry, who, penetrating into the ocean bounding the American continent on the north, by Baffin's Bay, at Lancaster's Sound, where formerly it was supposed there was land, reached beyond the 113th degree of W. long. He set out on a second voyage in 1821, and entering Hudson's Bay, in place of farther exploring his former route, he was stopt by the ice, and returned without effecting any farther discovery. Along with Parry's first voyage, a land expedition was also fitted out under Captain Franklin, which penetrated to the Northern ocean, but without making any important discovery. In modern times, Africa, great part of the interior of which remains unknown, offers a wide field for discovery. Park, Brown, Barrow, and other eminent travellers, have accordingly added largely to our knowledge of Africa; while in North America, Captains Lewis and Clarke have penetrated across the continent to the Pacific ocean. South America has also been much illustrated by the travels of Humboldt, and by those of several Spanish missionaries. The interior of Asia has also its terra incognita, which comprises nearly all the territory included between the Hemallah and the Altai mountains; Great and Little Thibet, Bukharia, Cashgar, the desert of Shamo and Cobi; of all which countries very little is known, beyond the mere fact of their existence. The spirit of discovery, however, which has been roused both in Europe and in our Indian possessions, promises soon to throw much new light upon this quarter of the world.

PHYSICAL GEOGRAPHY.—The objects comprehended under this branch of geographical science are of the most extensive and multifarious nature. They may be thus divided: 1. The Atmosphere. 2. The Sea. 3. The Earth. 4. Metals and Minerals. 5. Vegetables. 6. Animals.

The Atmosphere.—This active and invisible fluid, by which the surface of the globe is everywhere surrounded, and which is essential to the maintenance of animal and vegetable life, forms one of the grand elements in the system of nature. Its phenomena, as far as we are concerned with it in the present inquiry, may be considered under the heads of Temperature, Winds, and Rains.

Although the leading cause by which the temperature of any region on the surface of the globe is determined, is undoubtedly its distance to the north or south of the equator, there are yet others, which, within a limited sphere, exert a very powerful influence. Of these, the most important is elevation. Under the burning tropic, a height of 6000 or 8000 feet gives a temperature similar to that of France or Britain; while, at 13,000 or 14,000 feet, the climate is the same as under the Arctic circle; and all the summits which rise higher are clad in perpetual snow. Thus, above the glowing plains of Peru and Hindostan, vast regions of eternal ice are seen towering. Hence, along the great chains which traverse the tropical regions of Asia and America, the journey of a few days often transports the traveller through all the successive climates which diversify the terrestrial hemisphere; from the depth of polar winter above, to the varied aspect and productions of the temperate regions, and at length down to all the luxuriance of tropical vegetation. The sea produces an important influence on the temperature of the globe. Its tendency seems to be of an equalising nature. Under the tropical regions an extent of ocean spreads coolness through all the tropical lands adjoining to it. It affords a perpetual succession of refreshing breezes, to temper the severity of the solar action. The islets, which are scattered over the expanse of the Pacific, enjoy almost a perpetual spring. On the contrary, the districts which are surrounded on every side by tracks of continent, experience no mitigation of the evil, and are often utterly consumed by heat and drought. The influence of the trade winds is here to be taken into consideration. Blowing from east to west across the continent of Africa, they produce, on its western coast, a most intense heat, much greater than is experienced on the eastern. In passing across the Atlantic, they are considerably cooled; and though, in traversing South America, their temperature is again raised, yet, before reaching the opposite coast, they meet the tremendous snow clad summits of the Andes, which stop their progress, and diffuse a wide coolness around. The nature of the surface has a striking effect upon the temperature of any range of country. An arid soil absorbs and retains the rays of the sun with extraordinary force. The vast desert of the Sahara, in Africa, becomes a species of furnace, which warms not only the contiguous regions, but great part of Europe and Asia. On the contrary, land overgrown with woods, which prevent the solar influence from penetrating into the earth, is much colder than the same district would be, if cleared and cultivated. France, Germany, and even Italy, appear to have experienced, in ancient times, a much severer climate than now, and the two former to have been even incapable of producing the vine. The greater cold experienced under the same latitude in North America than in Europe, may doubtless be imputed, in a great extent, to the same cause.

The motion of the air, or the Winds, forms another feature, by the varying phenomena of which the different regions of the globe are strikingly distinguished. Between the tropics, the winds are governed by regular laws, and in particular tracks and seasons, blow almost invariably in the same direction. The most remarkable are the Trade Winds, which blow from east to west across nearly the whole circumference of the globe. This current, which is evidently connected with the movement of the earth, and the influence of the solar rays, is modified by two others descending from the north and from the south, in consequence of the influx of the cold air of the polar regions upon the rarefied tropical atmosphere. The consequence is, that, to the north of the equator, the trade wind blows north-east; and, to the south of the equator, south-east. This wind reigns uninterrupted over the vast expanse of the Pacific ocean. In the other parts of the earth's circumference, where the continuity of ocean is broken by continents and large islands, this general trade wind receives many modifications. All the coasts between the tropics are refreshed, more or less, by sea and land breezes. The vapours exhaled during the day by the burning heat of the sun, rush in upon the land, and are there accumulated, till, when night arrives, a reflux takes place. A more marked exception is that which occurs along the coast of Guinea, where south and south-west winds almost perpetually blow. In proportion, however, as we leave Africa and approach the American coast, the regular east wind resumes its power. The most remarkable anomaly, however, is that which occurs in the Indian ocean, where the regular course of the trade winds seems almost entirely subverted. From the southern tropic, indeed, to the 10th degree of south latitude, they prevail as usual; but to the north of this last boundary, begins the empire of the monsoons. From April to October, a strong wind blows constantly from the south-west, bringing with it rain and tempest; during the rest of the year, a dry and agreeable wind blows from the north-east. The change from the one monsoon to the other takes place gradually, and is accompanied with violent storms and hurricanes. On passing this limit, and entering into the temperate zone, the various winds occur so irregularly, and depend on such complicated causes, that they have hitherto baffled all attempts to reduce them to any general rule.

Rains form another branch of atmospheric phenomena equally important, from their influence on the fertility of the earth, and on all the operations of agricultural industry. The rains, like the winds, in the regions between the tropics, occur regularly at certain periods of the year. In the African continent, which forms the greatest mass of tropical land on the surface of the globe, the rains occur regularly in the following order: In the northern tropic some showers begin to fall in the mountainous regions in April, and become more frequent in May; but it is not till June that the great and general flood takes place. Its approach is announced by violent storms and tornadoes; and for the three following months it pours down in torrents almost without intermission. The face of nature is soon entirely changed; the rivulets, before dried up, swell and become like rivers; the rivers overflow their banks and resemble seas; and, in many instances, large tracks of country are entirely laid under water. In the course of September, the rains abate, and at length entirely cease; the sun re-appears, and calls forth an unbounded luxuriance of vegetation. From this time till the following spring, not a drop of rain falls. In the southern tropic, this arrangement of seasons is entirely reversed. The rains begin in October, and continue till March; after which the dry season commences, and continues during the rest of the year. In India, the rains are brought by the south-west monsoon, which, as already noticed, continues from April to October. In America, the immense chain of mountains which runs parallel to its western coast, modifies greatly the operation of the rains. The sides of these mountains, and the table lands at their foot, are deluged by frequent and copious showers; but the plains interposed between them and the Pacific ocean, though overhung with almost perpetual clouds, are entirely destitute of rain. In the vast regions between the Andes and the Atlantic, the rains are regulated by nearly the same laws as on the opposite continent of Africa. In all the temperate climates, rain, like the other atmospheric phenomena, is governed by complicated causes, and cannot be calculated by any fixed rule.

The Sea.—This mighty element, which occupies more than two-thirds of the terraqueous globe, must attract a large portion of the attention of the geographer. It is calculated by M. Malte Brun, that in the northern hemisphere the land bears to the sea the proportion of 419 to 1000, or nearly a half; but in the southern hemisphere only of 129 to 1000; so that the whole mass of land is to that of sea as 274 to 1000. Almost the whole of this prodigious extent of ocean is collected in one mass, part of which, called the Southern ocean, surrounds the South Pole in a continuous depth of 50 degrees, interrupted only by a small section of America; while another is formed by the opposite shores of Asia and America, into a vast basin, called the Pacific ocean. To both these masses of water, the general name of South Sea has been commonly applied. The space between America and Africa is filled by the Atlantic, a great ocean, though it cannot rival the expanse of the Pacific. The North Pole is surrounded by a smaller expanse, called the Arctic or Northern ocean. The bed of the ocean seems to present the same irregular aspect which is observed on the dry land, diversified by rocks, mountains, plains, and deep hollows. The utmost depth to which soundings have yet reached, does not amount to 5000 feet, being not quite a fourth part of the ascertained height of the Andes. The movements, however, of this mighty element are, among all the phenomena which it presents, the most memorable and important. The most universal of these are the tides, produced by lunar attraction, modified in some degree by that of the sun. This movement takes place in every part of the globe, but much more strongly in some than in others. The torrid zone may be considered as the centre of the action by which the tides are produced; and they are propagated from east to west around its circuit. From thence they are propagated northward and southward to the temperate and frigid zones. The tides are strongest when they come from a great extent of ocean upon an irregular and embayed coast, where their force is reflected and concentrated. Thus they are peculiarly strong upon the western shores of Europe, the eastern shores of Asia, and the western shores of America. In some parts of the English channel they are said to rise as high as 50 feet. In land-locked seas, as the Mediterranean and the Baltic, tides are scarcely at all felt; and the earliest Greek and Roman writers do not seem to have been aware of their existence.

The Earth.—The grand distinction in the earth's surface is between mountains and plains. The former are sometimes detached, but more generally in large groups or chains, resting on an elevated base. Hence the grand distinction into high land and low land, which Mr Jameson lays down as the foundation of his survey of the globe. That excellent observer gives the following distinct and perspicuous view of the high and low lands of Europe. "In Europe we find but two high lands and one low land. The one is the great European or Southern, the other the Scandinavian or Northern. The one has its middle point in Switzerland, in the Tyrol, and in the Alps of Savoy. Hence it passes through three-fourths of France, traverses the whole of Portugal and Spain, includes nearly two-thirds of Germany, passes through the greater part of Italy, and also part of Hungary and Turkey, and terminates on the borders of the Black sea. The course of this high land determines that of the great low land. Saxony lies nearly on the border of this low land or plain. It passes through the north part of Saxony, to the east or Baltic sea. It also passes by the foot of the Rocky mountains, through the upper part of Westphalia, and further through the whole of Holland, the Netherlands, and a small part of France; it even reaches the east coast of this island. It extends very considerably towards the north, including in its course Prussia, Poland, and nearly all Russia in Europe, and reaches to the Uralian mountains, including the greater part of Moldavia. The other high land rises in Norway and Sweden, comprehends a portion of Russia, and extends with some interruption to the Uralian mountains." As Mr Jameson has not extended this delineation to the other continents, we shall endeavour to give a slight sketch of the situation of their respective ranges of high and low land. The most remarkable range of high land that occurs on the globe is the American Andes, which extend along the whole western coast of America, parallel to, and at a short distance from, the Pacific ocean. The chain seems quite unbroken from Cape Horn to Mount St Elias, and even as far as Bering's straits. Another chain on the opposite side of the continent runs parallel to the Atlantic. Behind the United States it is called the Allegany and Appalachian mountains. The mountains of Kamtschatka and of north-eastern Asia are conceived by Humboldt to be a prolongation of the western chain of America. Under the titles of the Stanovay, Yablonay, and Altai mountains, they extend in a long south-western line through Asia, till, in approaching the sea of Aral, they meet another chain from the south-east, which, under the names of Hemalleh and Hindoo Coosh, has been supposed to include the loftiest summits on the globe. These chains, in traversing Persia, become much lower, but throw up considerable masses in Armenia, Asia Minor, and the frontier of Syria. These two great high lands form Asia, like America, into three low lands, of which the first, between Hemalleh and the Indian ocean, consists of the maritime provinces of Persia, of Hindostan, and India beyond the Ganges; the second, between the Hemalleh and Altai mountains, includes Bukharia, the great desert of Shamo and Cobi, and the greater part of China; the third, stretching from the Altai to the Northern ocean, is composed of the bleak plains of Siberia. It is in a part of Africa only that we can make the distinction with any degree of certainty. The Atlas at the north-western extremity rises to a great height, but it sinks entirely before reaching the eastern coast. To the south of the Atlas extends an immense plain, composed chiefly of sandy desert. At its termination are found two very high ranges of mountains, running inwards, one from the eastern, and the other from the western coast, and which are generally supposed to unite and form a continuous chain across the continent. From this general view it will appear, that the principal chains of America and Asia are arranged in a species of irregular arch; and it is not improbable, if we could connect the mountains of Arabia with those of Abyssinia and central Africa, that they would form a continuation of the same figure, and the whole would be found ranged around the shores of the great ocean, in a species of semicircle corresponding to that formed by the shores of the three continents. This wide circuit of high land might then be considered as the main bulwark by which the habitable globe is secured against the approaches of the watery element. The low land of the globe may be divided into vallies and plains. The vallies or river districts consist of a hollow track, often bordered on each side by mountains or hills, and at the bottom of which runs the river, into which a succession of tributaries usually fall. The extensive vallies, traversed by great rivers, are commonly the finest and most beautiful regions of the earth. Large plains, diversified neither by mountains nor rivers, are often found, especially under the torrid zone, to labour under the want of moisture. Hence immense tracks are found covered either with loose sand, or with a hard and impenetrable clay, both equally unproductive of any valuable vegetation. Of all the phenomena to which mountains are liable, the most remarkable is the volcano. This terrible convulsion is peculiar to certain mountains on the globe, and occurs in these at a longer or shorter interval. The chief volcanoes in Europe are Parnassius, Etna, Hæcla and others on the island of Iceland, and Stromboli. In Asia there are few or none on the continent, unless in the peninsula of Kamtschatka; but those in the Asiatic islands are numerous, particularly in the Kurile islands, Japan, Sumatra, and Java. There is no record of any volcano on the continent of Africa; but almost all the groups of islands by which that continent is girt contain one or more subject to these eruptions; the Azores, Madeira, Canaries, Cape de Verd islands, Bourbon, &c. But the mighty chain which runs parallel to the western coast of America, is all, as it were, in one blaze of volcanic fire. From Cotopaxi to the South sea, Humboldt reckons more than forty volcanoes, and a considerable number more from thence to the north-west extremity of the continent. The earthquake is another phenomenon which is intimately connected with the volcano, and it occurs usually in volcanic countries, though less remarkably in the immediate vicinity of the eruption. Violent tremor of the earth, the overthrow, and sometimes the entire swallowing up of the objects on its surface, and the rushing in of the sea, are the well known symptoms of this alarming convulsion. Before completing our view of the earth's surface, it will be necessary to take a survey of its interior waters. Of these, the principal are rivers. These great channels, which diffuse beauty and fertility over the finest regions of the globe, take their rise usually near the summit of the highest mountain chains; and the origin of the greatest streams may often be traced to a gentle rill, which, swelled by continual accessions, pours down at length an ample flood upon the plain. A remarkable phenomenon is presented by rivers which overflow their banks at certain seasons of the year. This occurs only in the tropical regions, all of which are periodically flooded by immense rains, which pour such a vast addition into the almost dried up channels of the rivers, as they are scarcely ever capable of fully containing. In the hilly tracks, however, where the channel is usually deep, the inundation is very partial, and the stream merely rises to a great height, and thunders down with noise and rapidity. But on the wide and level plains, it soon overflows its banks, and lays the adjacent country, often to an immense extent, under water. Such is the case with the Nile in Egypt, with the Ganges, the Indus, the river of Siam, the Senegal, the Orinoco, the Amazons, and more or less in every tropical river; also with the Mississippi in North America. Some great streams pour all their waters into the sea by one channel; while others, before reaching that receptacle, divide into various branches, and form the district which they traverse into a number of alluvial islands. To the track thus intersected and usually subject to inundation, the name of Delta, first applied to that of Egypt, is now usually extended. Deltas are formed by rivers which roll sluggishly through an extensive level region; for those of rapid course usually force their way in a direct channel. The most remarkable delta is that of the Nile, after which may be mentioned the Ganges, the Indus; in South America, the Amazons and the Orinoco; in North America, the Mississippi with its tributary streams; and, in our climate, the Rhine. Although the sea may be considered as the general receptacle of rivers, yet there are some which terminate before reaching it. Of these, the greater number, falling into hollows in the interior of a continent, spread themselves out and form lakes. The most considerable is the Caspian, about 300 miles in length, and 60 or 70 in breadth, which receives the Volga, the largest of the rivers of Europe; and the Aral, which receives the Oxus and the Jaxartes, two very considerable rivers. The lakes of North America, notwithstanding their vast extent, yet being situated in a cold climate, do not afford an adequate receptacle to the St Lawrence, which passes through them all, and pours still a mighty stream into the ocean. South America presents no lakes of any magnitude; the most considerable, which is that of Chucuito or Titicaca, in Peru, bearing no proportion to those of the other continents. Besides common water, there are dispersed over the globe springs impregnated with a variety of mineral and saline particles. Springs impregnated with sulphur are usually warm, and situated in the neighbourhood of earthquakes and volcanoes. The heat is sometimes accompanied with violent ebullition, which throws the water to a great height, in the form of a natural jet d'eau. There is a considerable number of these in Iceland, and in the Azores; and the celebrated one in the former island, called the Geyser, throws the water to the height of upwards of 100 feet.

Metals and Minerals.—The metals which chiefly deserve notice are gold, silver, iron, copper, lead, tin, and mercury. Gold, the most precious of all the metals, is usually found in a perfectly pure state. By far the most copious supplies occur in alluvial soils; situated along the foot of large ranges of mountains, from which it is apparently washed down by the rivers. It occurs likewise, though in smaller quantities, in veins and beds diffused through granite, gneiss, and other primitive rocks; also in porphyry and sand-stone; and it is generally accompanied with quartz and iron pyrites. Alluvial gold is found in small quantities in different parts of Europe; in Scotland, Ireland; in primitive rocks in Salzburg, the Tyrol, Transylvania, and at Edelfors, in Sweden, as well as in the golden sands poured down by the Danube, Rhine, Tagus, and other European rivers. Africa is much more prolific of this valued metal. All the streams which flow from the great mountain ranges in the centre of that continent appear to impregnate their sands with gold. It is found most copiously in Bambouk, Manding, Wangara, and the countries behind the Gold coast. A large quantity is also collected in the mountains behind Mosambique. The islands of Sumatra, Borneo, and Celebes, in the East Indies, contain large stores of alluvial gold, the working of which has been so much improved by the industry of the Chinese, as to render those regions nearly independent of supply from the west. Nothing on the globe, however, can equal the abundance in which gold occurs throughout the vast regions of South America. The Mexican gold is chiefly alluvial, but partly found in primitive mountains, and mixed with silver, in the mines of that metal. The situation of the Peruvian gold is nearly similar, but the mines do not pay the expence of working; and the chief riches here, as elsewhere, is obtained by washing. The ample supply of gold which is drawn from Brazil is entirely alluvial, deposited along the foot of that great range of mountains which forms the western frontier of that settlement. Humboldt calculates the entire annual produce of the Spanish colonies at 25,000 lbs. Troy, and that of the Portuguese at somewhat above 20,000. Silver presents itself in veins only, and in a much greater variety of forms. The most valuable silver mines in Europe are those situated in various parts of the Austrian dominions. Others of less value are found in Saxony, and other parts of Germany, in Russia, and in Sweden. Different parts of Siberia produce silver. But all these mines sink into insignificance, when compared with the immense richness of those found in the new world. Humboldt calculates the produce of those mines, in the course of three centuries, at 316,023,000 lbs. of pure silver, and the value of silver imported from America, between 1492 and 1803, at L.1,166,775,000 sterling. He gives the following table, here reduced into sterling money, of the produce of gold and silver mines in different quarters of the world:

	Gold.	Silver.	Total.
Europe -	L.178,697	L.468,177	L.646,874
Northern Asia	74,124	192,966	267,090
America -	2,382,315	7,071,830	9,454,145

L.2,635,136 L.7,732,973 L.10,368,109

Iron, the most truly useful of all metals, presents itself abundantly, and in a great variety of forms. The most extensive iron mines in the world are situated in Great Britain and France, particularly in the form of clay iron-stone. Sweden contains large mines of magnetic iron-stone; which, being particularly suited for bar iron, afford a subject of import into this country. Extensive iron mines are also found in Russia, in Germany, particularly in Austria, in the United States of America, and in Spain. Copper, next to those mentioned, may be considered as the most important metal. The most copious store is found in England, particularly in Cornwall. It occurs also in Norway, Sweden, Germany, particularly the Austrian dominions, in Russia, and in the whole of Siberia and Chinese Tartary. Japan produces copper of peculiar excellence. This metal is also found in Morocco, and to a great extent in Southern Africa; also in the southern extremity of America. Mr Jameson estimates the produce of Britain at 200,000 quintals: that of the rest of Europe at about 180,000. Lead appears also in a considerable number of ores, as well as combined with the arsenic, phosphoric, and sulphuric acids. It too is found most abundantly in Great Britain, particularly at Leadhills and Wanlockhead in Scotland. It is found also in immense quantities in Louisiana, in North America. Tin is found in Cornwall (by much the largest repository), in the Saxon Erzgebirge, and in Spanish Galicia; also in different parts of Eastern Asia, and in Banca, near Sumatra. It exists also in Mexico, and, according to report, in Chili. Mercury occurs native, amalgamated with silver, in various ores, but most abundantly combined with sulphur in the form of cinnabar. It occurs throughout the globe only in small and detached portions. Other metals described by the mineralogist are platina, manganese, titanium, zinc, bismuth, tellurium, antimony, molybdena, cobalt, nickel, arsenic, tungsten, uranium, tantalum, and cerium. Among the useful minerals, coal seems to hold the most conspicuous place. It occurs to a vast extent in different parts of Britain, particularly around Whitehaven and Newcastle, on the opposite coasts of the north of England, and on the shores of the frith of Forth. It is found in Auvergne, the Cevennes, and other parts of France. It appears in almost all the chains by which Germany is traversed, but is not abundant in any of the other countries of Europe. It is raised in large quantities in China and in North America, and was found by Humboldt at a very great height in the Andes. Other inflammable minerals are naphtha, petroleum or mineral oil, bitumen or mineral pitch. These occur in different parts of the world, particularly in Asia: they are used for giving light, for varnish, and they anciently served for cement. The mineral next in importance seems to be salt, which is found in England, in the north of Germany, Hungary, Transylvania, and Moldavia; but the greatest deposition in Europe occurs in Galicia, or Austrian Poland. It is widely diffused through Northern Africa, Abyssinia, and the western part of the desert of the Sahara. Vast hills of rock salt are found in Asia. In South America, to the westward of the Paraguay, there are immense saline plains, which extend between 600 and 700 miles in length, and 150 in breadth; in Louisiana also, and in other parts of North America, salt is everywhere found, frequently on the surface of the ground, as well as in the mines and springs. It has also been discovered on the east coast of New Holland.

Vegetables.—It is in the torrid zone that nature displays the most profuse and brilliant vegetation. It is not, however, to beauty only that the tropical forests are subservient; they minister copiously to all the uses of human life. In the equatorial forests, the trees produce food almost as abundantly as the most cultivated fields. All the palms distil from their trunk a rich and refreshing juice; the sago palm, distinguished also for its beauty, yields a juice so thick and nutritious, that it is imported into this country and administered as a light and wholesome diet. The bread fruit tree and plantain yield a farinaceous fruit, resembling the bread prepared from grain. Thus the equinoctial regions of India, Africa, and the Pacific, even where totally uncultivated, are capable of maintaining a crowded population beneath the shade of their eternal forests. For shipbuilding, the teak of India appears to surpass even the oak in firmness and durability. The ornamental and dye woods, mahogany, logwood, camwood, are the exclusive product of this part of the globe. The smaller trees and shrubs are not less rich in valuable products. The warm aromatic plants, as well as those which diffuse the richest fragrance, the cinnamon, the clove, the nutmeg, the myrrh, balsam, and frankincence, spring exclusively in the heart of this favoured zone. These advantages are, however, in general balanced by the evils arising from the union of heat and moisture, which are the great characteristics of these climates, and which generate the most pestilential diseases. The next division of the globe, so far as respects vegetation, may be considered as included between the tropics and the 50th degree of latitude. This last limit at least applies to Europe and Western Asia;—in America it does not reach so high. This climate, without displaying the same bold luxuriance of vegetation, yields in greater abundance most of those commodities which minister to the use and pleasure of man. Within these limits are raised, in their most perfect state, wheat and barley, the grains which yield the most nutritive bread. There almost exclusively are produced the vine: the olive, subservient to so many agreeable purposes; and the mulberry. The fruits of this climate, though less substantial than those of the torrid zone, are nearly equal in elegance and flavour. These advantages it obtains, without suffering from that intensity of the heat, or from those prodigious rains and tempests, accompanied by inundation, by which the fertility of the tropical regions is dearly purchased. In this climate, the eye suffers somewhat from the want of verdure, as it exhibits neither the inexhaustible vegetative power which lives in the equatorial forests, nor the almost perennial green of the northern woods and meadows. Its plains have somewhat of a brown and scorched aspect; though, when diversified with hills and rising grounds, the action of the sun on the varied forms of vegetation produces a singularly picturesque and brilliant effect. Beyond this northern temperate climate, there extends for about 10 degrees another, which bears a character materially different. It comprehends, among many other regions, Britain, a great part of Germany, of Poland, of Russia, and of the United States of America. The luxuriant and elegant fruits and products of the preceding climate cease to grow under this severer sky; they are raised at least only artificially, and in small quantities. But the grains which form the main support of human life may, by the hand of industry, be raised in nearly equal abundance; the pastures are richer, the verdure more constant. Wheat is raised with difficulty in the higher latitudes of this climate; but oats, hemp, and flax, find there the soil most advantageous for their culture. The absence of the exquisite fruits of the preceding climate is not ill compensated by the apple, the pear, the cherry, the strawberry, and gooseberry. In the climates more remote from the equator, nature assumes a gloomy and severe character. The pines and firs rear their tall heads, and cover the hills with their constant mantle of dark green. Nature, to protect these trees against the external cold, has filled their vessels with a copious internal sap, and when pierced, they pour out, not the rich and delicate juice of the palm and cocoa nut, but a strong, thick, and glutinous liquid, which, under the titles of tar, pitch, and turpentine, is subservient to many important commercial uses. In favourable situations only, a precarious crop of some coarse species of grain can be raised; and the inhabitants of these ungenial regions are obliged, with the produce of their woods, to purchase the means of subsistence. In proceeding towards the north, every species of vegetation which can be available to human subsistence, entirely fails; and nothing appears but dwarf trees, the different species of lichen, and a few wild berries.

Animals.—Ascending in the scale of nature, we come now to treat of the animal creation. There are certain animals which thrive almost equally in all the zones, until the severity of the polar frosts chills them, or the hardened ground refuses subsistence. In this class, a beneficent nature has placed all those whose services, in a domesticated state, are most useful to man. These are the ox, the sheep, the hog, the goat, the horse, the dog, and the cat; also the fox, the hare, the stag, the rabbit, the rat, and the mouse. The torrid zone teems with the same rank luxuriance of animal as of vegetable life. The inundated meadows, and the banks of rivers, are covered with the most overgrown and gigantic forms. The mighty elephant here dwells in the depth of the ancient forests, while the rhinoceros and the hippopotamus roll their enormous bulk along the banks of the streams. Other wild animals distinguish themselves by power and fierceness. The lion and the tiger extend little beyond the torrid zone. The same may be said of the leopard, the panther, the ounce, and the hyena. This zone produces also some animals of striking beauty, and of a gentle and harmless character; the antelope, the zebra, the camelopard. It is still more advantageously characterised by an eminently useful species, that of the camel and dromedary, without whose services vast tracks of land in this zone would be wholly uninhabitable; and to which may be added, in the New World, the lama and the vicuna. The exuberance of life by which this burning zone is characterised, manifests itself in a much more pernicious manner, by the swarms of the reptile species which it generates; all odious, and some armed with a poison fatal to life. The boa constrictor, and other African species, are compared to the masts of the largest vessels. These huge forms, however, contain no poison; that instrument of death is lodged only in the rattlesnake, and other smaller species. The lizard tribe are equally gigantic and formidable; the crocodile, the alligator, the gavial, the caiman, fill all the great rivers of the torrid zone, and are ready to devour the unwary passenger. The feathered creation are numerous, adorned with the most brilliant plumage, and utter a sound in some instances resembling that of the human voice: but they do not pour forth those melodious notes which charm the inhabitants of the temperate climates. Several, as the ostrich, the cassowary, and the condor, display a magnitude rivalling that of quadrupeds, to whose form the two first bear a certain resemblance. Even the insect tribe, in this world of life, exhibit themselves on a scale of which we can form no conception. Locusts, and even flies, assemble and move in such close and immense bodies, as to lay waste the earth, and drive nations before them. The tropical seas are also populous. The shark here displays a ferocity rivalling that of the wild beasts of the forest. All the fishes which shine with brilliant colours, and the flying fishes, to which air and water are alike, are peculiar to the seas of the torrid zone. The shell fish are larger, and afford more luxurious food than elsewhere. A race of marine insects, insignificant in themselves, are remarkable for the effects which they produce. These are the class of zoophytes; the corals, madrepores, and millepores, furnished with stony cases and appendages, which remain after the death of the animal, and which, gradually accumulating and adhering to each other, at length form large rocks, and even islands.

The temperate climate, as far as the 60th degree, displays a continual diminution of this immense profusion of life; yet this diminution is felt rather in the monstrous, ferocious, and noxious species, than in those which are really useful to man. The animals of prey are chiefly the wolf and the wild boar, which, though fierce, cannot come into comparison with the mighty lords of the African and Indian forests. The reptile race gradually diminish till they entirely disappear. The insect tribe also wear no longer a harassing and destructive character. But the horse, the ox, the sheep, and other valuable domestic animals may, with care, be reared very nearly in equal perfection. In approaching, however, to the 60th degree, these become small and stunted; and a little beyond they give place to quite a new creation. The plains, almost deserted by man, are now covered with the elk, the martin, the sable, the ermine, animals protected by nature from the cold with a covering of fur, at once rich and beautiful, and which is eagerly sought for by man for purposes of comfort and luxury. The rein-deer, a more valuable species, peculiar to this rigorous climate, serves all the purposes of a domestic animal, both for draught and food. It is remarkable, that even here, the short but violent heats of summer engender a swarm of insects almost equal to what is produced under the torrid zone. In approaching the limit of perpetual snow, the quadruped species again assumes a fierce and formidable character. The bear stalks horrid amid his frozen solitude, and fiercely defends it against the daring approach of man. But the great scene of life over the Polar regions is in the oceans by which they are watered. It is here that the mightiest of the animal creation, the enormous Cetacea, roll through the Northern seas, and mingle their frightful roarings with the sound of the tempest. The Northern seas also swarm with herings and other smaller species.

THE EDINBURGH GAZETTEER.

OR GEOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY.

A A R

Aa three rivers of Switzerland, which run east into Lake Lucerne, another into Lake Wilt, and another into the Aar.

Aa a river of France, which falls into the sea at Gravelines; another joins the canal of Dunkirk and Mardyke, while a third joins the canal of Calais.—21. In the Dutch province of Overijssel, which falls into Lake Guter.

Aa or Aade, a river of Dutch Brabant, which runs into the Dommel.

Aa, a small river in Saxony, which falls into Lake Blunden.—There are three rivers of this name in Westphalia, which fall into the Wehr, the Vecht, and the Jure, and two in Holland, which fall into the Vecht and the Old Yssel.

Aa, a river of Semgudja, Courland, which falls into the gulf of Riga.

Aach two rivers in Sardinia, which fall into the sea into the Iller, and the other into Lake Costanza.—Also one in Switzerland, which falls into Lake Constance.

Aachen, a town of Germany, in Munster. Population 16000.

Aarborg one of the four bishoprics of North Jutland. Population 90,000.

Aarborg the capital of the preceding Jutland bishopric, situated on the Lammford. It is a large and populous town, and has various manufactures, and a good harbour.

Aarsmeer a village of Holland. Pop 1500.

Aarts a town of Dutch Gelderland, on the frontier of Munster. Population 1520.

Aar a river of Switzerland, which falls into the Rhine.—2d. Of the grand duchy of the Lower Rhine, which falls into the Rhine.

Aa a river which falls into the Lake.

Aa a river of Holland. Population 1000.

Aa a river of Holland. Population 1000.

Aa a river of Holland. Population 1000.

Aa a river of Holland. Population 1000.

Aa a river of Holland. Population 1000.

Aa a river of Holland. Population 1000.

Aa a river of Holland. Population 1000.

Aa a river of Holland. Population 1000.

Aa a river of Holland. Population 1000.

Aa a river of Holland. Population 1000.

A B B

Abbeville It has a good trade and a safe harbour, and exports chiefly corn. 46 miles S. of Arras. Long 10 11 E. Lat 46. 10. N.

Abbeville, a post township of the United States, in Centre county, Pennsylvania.

Abdon a town of St. Abdon, the island of New South Wales, on which St. Malou built.

Abadi, a village of Egypt, on the left bank of the Nile, 80 miles S. of Cairo.

Abadi, a town of Parma, province of Parma. Population 6000.

Abadi, a river of Brazil, province of Minas Geraes, which falls into the Rio Francisco.

Abakan, a river of Asia, which joins the Enisei. 16 miles S. of Abakansk.

Abakan, a fortified town of Siberia, on the river Abakan, in the province of Kolyvane. Population 1250. 140 miles E. of Kolyvane. Long 91 14 E. Lat. 54. 0. N.

Abasco, the capital of a province of the same name in Peru, 80 miles N. W. of Cuzco.

Abasco, a town of Italy, in Padua, noted for its hot sulphureous baths. Population 3000.

Abbsford, a small seaport of Norway, 48 miles S. W. of Christiania.

Abbsford, a village and parish of England, 7 miles N. W. of Shrewsbury. Pop 1000.

Abbsford, a town of France, department of Somme, celebrated for its manufactures of velvet, cotton and linen cloths, &c.

Abbsford, a county of the United States, North Carolina. The chief town is of the same name, situated on Savannah river.

Abbsford, a village of Ireland, 30 miles from Limerick.

Abbsford, a village of Scotland, 4 miles from Lanark. Population in 1811, 600.

Abbsford, an ancient village of Ireland, in Queen's county, 11 miles N. W. of Dublin.

Abbsford, a village and parish of England, in Dorsetshire. Population 767.

Abbsford, a village of England, in South Devon, 21 miles from Andover.

Abbsford, a village of England, in South Devon, 21 miles from Andover.

Abbsford, a village of England, in South Devon, 21 miles from Andover.

Abbsford, a village of England, in South Devon, 21 miles from Andover.

Abbsford, a village of England, in South Devon, 21 miles from Andover.

Abbsford, a village of England, in South Devon, 21 miles from Andover.

ABINGDON, a town of England, 6 miles S. of Oxford. Population 1533.

ABINGDON, a small town of England, 8 miles S. W. of Dorchester. Population 407.

ABINGDON, a village and parish of Scotland, 10 miles S. of Perth. Population 3257.

ABINGDON, a village of England, in Hertfordshire. Population 1732.

ABINGDON, a village of England, in Somersetshire. Population 317.

ABING HEAD, ST. a noted promontory of Scotland, forming the most southern point of the shore of the frith of Forth. Long. 1. 56. W. Lat. 55. 54. N.

ABIDA, a province on the western coast of Morocco. Population 500,000.

ABENBERG, a town of Bavaria, 22 miles N. Eichstadt. Population 1900.

ABENBERG, a village of Hesse, 31 miles N. W. Worms. Population 950.

ABENBERG, a town of Spain, 20 miles S. W. Ciudad Real.

ABER, a village of Wales, in Caernarvon, on the sea coast, where is a ferry to the island of Anglesea. Pop. 621. 9 miles from Conway.

ABERAVON, a small town of Wales, in Glamorgan. Population 365.

ABERBROTHOCK, or ABERBROTH, a seaport town of Scotland, in the county of Angus or Forfar, situated at the mouth of the rivulet Brothock, which flows into the German ocean. Besides churches for the established religion, it contains an Episcopal chapel, and other places of worship for dissenters. It has a small but secure harbour, though of difficult entrance. Sail-cloth is its staple manufacture. In consequence of an attack by a French privateer in the year 1781, a battery of six twelve-pounders was erected on a neighbouring eminence, which commands the adjacent shores. Aberbrothock united with Aberdeen, Brechin, Bervie, and Montrose, in sending a representative to parliament. Here are the ruins of a celebrated abbey, founded in honour of Thomas a Becket, in the year 1178, by William the Lion, king of Scotland, who, dying in 1214, was interred within its precincts. The spot of his sepulture is not denoted by any memorial; but human remains, conjectured to be those of the founder, were discovered in the course of some repairs made in the year 1814. This magnificent structure was destroyed in 1560, at the reformation. Population 5873. 48 miles N. N. E. Edinburgh, and 12 S. W. Montrose. Long. 2. 34. 15. W. Lat. 56. 32. 30. N.

ABERCONWAY, or CONWAY, a small seaport of Wales, in Caernarvon, at the mouth of the river Conway. It has lofty walls; and the remains of a castle project from a rock, into the river. Population 1105. 25 miles from Caernarvon.

ABERDEEN, a small village of Scotland, 12 miles W. Edinburgh. Population 1044.

ABERDEEN, a village of Scotland, 4 miles from Perth. Population 490.

ABERDEEN, a maritime county of Scotland, bounded on the north and east by the German ocean, on the south by the counties of Perth, Forfar, and Kincardine, and on the west by those of Banff, Elgin, and Inverness. Its extreme dimensions are 85 miles in length from east to west, and 40 in breadth from north to south. The principal rivers are the Dee and Don. Besides these, there are the Deveron, which receives the river Boggie, the Ythan, Ury, Ugie, Islay, and many tributary streams. There are mineral waters at Peterhead, Frazerburgh, Aberdeen; and the Wells of Panmure are in the upper parts of Mar. A fifth part of the whole surface of the county consists of lofty mountains; and the waste land, hill, moor, and sand, irreclaimable by the plough, occupies no less than 1250 square miles, while the arable land is calculated at about 750. Lime is abundant in various places; there are quarries of excellent slate; and millstones may be obtained of good quality. One of the most useful minerals is an extremely hard granite, difficult to be worked, disposed in immense quantities, and in very large masses. The mountains of Braemar contain numbers of coloured crystals, or cairngorms, and a few real topazes have been found here, as also the beryl. A large portion of the surface of Aberdeenshire is clothed with woods, which affording shelter to the wild deer, these animals are rapidly increasing. There are considerable fisheries on the coast and in the rivers, particularly of salmon in the Dee, Don, Ugie, and Ythan, the produce of which is sent to London. Pop. 155,347.

ABERDEEN, ORDA, a city of Scotland, in the county of Aberdeen, situated on the river Don, about a mile from the sea; so called, in contradistinction to the town of that name about a mile distant. Previous to the year 1153, Aberdeen, then denominated villa, that is, a town, or a village, was constituted a bishopric and city, by the translation hither of the episcopal see of Morlich, in the county of Banff. It had a cathedral, dedicated to St. Machar, with a lofty tower and a spire, whose fall demolished the eastern part of the church; and only a portion of the structure founded originally in the reign of David I. previous to 1153, or, according to some, in 1357, and completed in 1511, now remains for divine worship. It has three hospitals, a neat town-house, and a university called King's college, endowed in 1403. It has professorships of divinity, civil law, medicine, humanity, Greek, moral philosophy, natural philosophy, mathematics, and oriental languages. Belonging to the university are a very considerable number of libraries or endowments for the support of students. The library contains 12,935 volumes of printed works, and several curious manuscripts. Population 1483.

ABERDEEN, a seaport town of Scotland, in the county of Aberdeen, situated on the Don and Dee, at their confluence into the German ocean. It has a safe and spacious harbour, though the heavy surf from the German ocean created a bar at its mouth, which prevented the entrance of large vessels. To obviate this inconvenience, a pier was built, and carried a considerable way into the sea; and by an act obtained in 1810, it was extended about 300 yards farther into the German ocean. Numerous improvements have of late years been made in the buildings and general aspect of this city. The old entrance from the north was through narrow and winding streets, equally intricate and inelegant. A new entrance has been formed, which leads directly into the town through Union-street; and to facilitate this access, a fine bridge of granite, of a single arch, and of 132 feet span, was erected at an expence of £10,000. There are about 21 places for divine worship in this city, being the East and West church, and five chapels of ease connected with the established religion; four meeting-houses for Seceders; three chapels for persons professing the Episcopal persuasion; four for Anabaptists, and some others described as characterizing themselves by adhering to the Old and the New Light; one Methodist meeting-house; a Roman Catholic Chapel, in which there is a good organ; and a Quaker meeting-house, attended by only 10 or 12 individuals. The city has numerous charitable institutions, and a university called Marischal college, founded here in the year 1593, and endowed by George, earl of Marischal. This university has a good library, containing about 10,000 volumes; a museum, and a very complete apparatus for demonstrating the principles of astronomy, and the various branches of mechanical philosophy. The languages, mathematics, natural philosophy, natural history, and other departments of science and literature, are taught here. The public buildings are a structure consisting of the town-house, prison, and a mason-ledge, from a square tower in the middle of which, a spire rises 120 feet high; a bridewell opened in 1809; military barracks erected in 1790; and a neat and small theatre. The manufactures consist chiefly of woollen, linen, and cotton, in all their different stages. Hosiery, in particular, was a very considerable branch of manufacture, until greatly depressed by the late war. Coarse cloths and carpeting are likewise made; and coarse yarn is spun by machinery, and is partly exported in its original state, partly worked into canvas, sail-cloth, and sheeting. One of the most extensive flax spinning-mills in the kingdom stands on the river Don, in the vicinity. The manufacture of thread, both bleached and coloured, is carried on. In the year 1779, the cotton manufacture was first introduced, and the principal establishment lately employed 8000 persons. Besides these, there are manufactories of nails and cordage, and all materials connected with ship building, which must contribute to a considerable extent to the vessels for the West India, Mediterranean, and Atlantic trade, and also for the transport service, have been built at Aberdeen. There are also fisheries; also several breweries, which produce about 22,700 barrels of malt liquor annually. The principal exports are grain, fish, thread, hosiery, cotton, and linen goods; and not less than about 7000 tons of granite yearly are exported for paving the streets of London. The imports are principally articles of ordinary consumption. About 336 vessels belong to the port of Aberdeen, whose aggregate burden amounts to 37,280 tons, and are engaged in the whale fishery, foreign and coasting trade. A navigable canal, 18 miles in length, extends from this city to the bridge over the Don at Inverury. Aberdeen is an ancient place, and seems to have carried on trade in the beginning of the 13th century. It soon after became of some repute. The records of the town are preserved from the time of William the Lion, who died in 1214; and the journals of the successive magistrates and town council, from the year 1308, are almost complete. In the commencement of the 14th century, an English garrison having occupied the castle of Aberdeen, it was put to the sword by a sudden rising of the citizens; but in 1335, or 1336, the town was burnt by a fleet of Edward III. In the year 1647 it was visited by a pestilence, which was fatal to 1600 of the citizens. Aberdeen unites with Berric, Brechin, Montrose, and Arbroath, in returning a member to parliament. Population 43,312. 108 miles N. Edinburgh. Long. 2. 8. W. Lat. 57. 9. N.

ABERDORN, a village of Scotland, on the coast of Aberdeenshire. Population 1095.

ABERDORN, a village of Scotland, in Fifeshire, on the N. shore of the frith of Forth. Population 1409. 10 miles N. W. Edinburgh.

ABERDORN, a village of Scotland, in Perthshire 10 miles N. W. Dunkeld, on the Tay.

ABERDORN, a parish of England, Yorkshire, on the Cook. Pop. 900. 8 miles from Leeds.

ABERDYLL, a village of Scotland, in Perthshire, 9 miles E. Kippen. Population 730.

ABERDRAW, a town of Wales, in Anglesea. Population 1204. 20 miles E. S. E. Holyhead.

ABERCAVENNY, a town of England, in Monmouthshire, at the confluence of the river Gavenny with the Usk, over which there is a fine bridge of 15 arches. It has woollen manufactures, and iron-works in the neighbourhood. Population 3502. 145 miles W. London.

ABERGFLY, a seaport of Wales, in Denbighshire. Population 2317. 12 miles from Aberconway.

ABERGWILLY, a village of South Wales, 2 miles E. Caermarthen. Pop. 2183.

ABERLADY, a village of Scotland, in Haddingtonshire. Population 1033. 16 miles from Edinburgh.

ABERLEATHO, a village of Scotland, in Forfarshire, on the South Esk. It has singular obelisks, covered with rude sculptures. Population 1040. 4 miles S. Brechin.

ABERNETHY, an ancient town of Scotland, in Perthshire. Here is a curious and ancient pillars 74 feet high, and 16 in diameter. Population 1701. 7 miles from Perth.

AZERBAYDZAN, a village of Scotland, in Elginshire, 30 miles S. E. Inverness. Pop. 1908.

AZERBETH, a village of England, in Monmouthshire. Population 4059.

AREWYTWITH, a seaport of South Wales, in Cardigan, at the mouth of the river Ystwith, which is crossed by a neat stone bridge. Population 3556. 39 miles N. Cardigan.

ABIAN, BAHR EL, a river of Africa, now considered the head of the Egyptian Nile. It is formed by the union of numerous torrents descending from the Mountains of the Moon, several hundred miles S. Darfur.

ABINGDON, a town of England, in Berks, situated at the confluence of the Ock and the Thames. It consists of several streets well paved, with a spacious market-place and market-house in the centre. Here are two churches, two places of worship for dissenters, and a Quaker meeting-house; also two hospitals for indigent persons, a free school and charity school. The principal manufactures consist of sacking. Population 5137. 56 miles W. N. W. London.

ABINGDON, the chief town of Washington county, Virginia. Houses 200.

AHO, the capital of Finland, lies at the extremity of the promontory formed by the gulfs of Bothnia and Finland, on the river Aura-joki, which runs through the town. It has a commodious harbour, and a considerable trade. Population 11,500. Long. 22° 7' E. Lat. 60° 22' N.

ABOMEY, capital of the kingdom of Dahomey, in Africa. It is built without any order or regularity. Population 24,000. Long. 0° 55' E. Lat. 7° 50' N.

ABOUGARA, a small town of Egypt, with a castle, situated about 10 miles N. E. of Alexandria, where Sir Ralph Abercromby disembarked his troops, for the invasion of Egypt, in 1801.—Also a small island, near the town.

ABOUKIR BAY, formed on the west side by the point of land on which the town is situated, and on the east by that which lies at the mouth of the Rosetta branch of the Nile. In this bay was fought the famous battle of the Nile by lord Nelson, in 1801.

ABRAHA, a fortified town on the Tagus, in Portuguese Estremadura, 45 miles E. Lisbon.

ABRAH-BANYA, a small town in Transylvania, with gold and silver mines. Long. 22° 10' E. Lat. 46° 20' N.

ABRUZZO, one of the four great provinces of the kingdom of Naples, bounded east by the Adriatic, north and west by the States of the Church, and south by the provinces of Terra di Lavoro and Capitanata. It is divided into two districts, separated by the river Pescara; the one called ABRUZZO CITRA, the other ABRUZZO ULTRA. Population 557,719.

ABU DHABI, a walled city of Arabia, in the Emirate of the same name, 60 miles N. Long. 42° 36' E. Lat. 16° 45' N.

ABY, a village of England, in Wiltshire, 10 miles N. from Marlborough. Population 688.

ABOZZAZ, a considerable market town in Upper Egypt, on the site of the ancient Abotis. It is celebrated for the best opium. 170 miles S. Cairo. Lat. 26° 40' N.

ABYSSINIA, an extensive kingdom of Africa, bounded E. by the Red sea, N. by Sennaar, and S. partly by Sennaar and Kordofan, and partly by vast and barbarous regions, of which the names have scarcely reached us. It is estimated at about 770 British miles in length, and 550 in breadth.

The ancients had but a very imperfect knowledge of Abyssinia. Several enterprises were sent to this country by the Portuguese, in the course of the 14th century. But it was chiefly brought into notice, by the celebrated Mr Bruce, who, by personal intrepidity and vigour of character, made his way through all the dangers which attended an expedition through this wild and savage region, and brought home a much fuller and more interesting account of the striking features which it presented, than any preceding traveller. The two succeeding journeys of Mr Salt in 1805 and 1809, however, have also made important accessions to our knowledge of this country.

In regard to its physical structure, Abyssinia is entirely a country of mountains. A lofty range, called Lamlalom, bars the entrance from the Red sea. The mountains of Samen, between the Tacazze and the Coror, are still more elevated. To these we may add the mountains of Gojam, which give rise to the Bahr-el-Azrek, or Abyssinian Nile; the high Land of Efat; and finally, a lofty range, which is said to run along the whole of its southern frontier, and forms probably a branch of the Mountains of the Moon. From recent observations, it seems clear, that these mountains, if they do not attain, at least approach, to the limit of perpetual congelation.

These mountains pour down rivers of great magnitude, which traverse nearly the whole of Abyssinia. The largest and most celebrated is the Bahr-el-Azrek, or Blue river, which rises from two mountains near Geesh, in the country of the Agows, and in Lat. 16° unites with the Abiad, or principal branch of the Nile. The next great stream is the Tacazze, which rises a little to the west of Antalo, and pursues a north-west course through Sennaar to the Nile. Other rivers of minor importance are the Arequa and Mareb, which fall into the Tacazze; the Dender and Maleg, which fall into the Bahr-el-Azrek; and the Hanazo and the Hawash, which direct their streams towards the Red sea, though the latter is lost in the sands, before reaching that receptacle.

The climate of Abyssinia is on the whole fine, the ranges of mountains with which it is everywhere intersected, tempering the extreme heat, and affording a supply of water sufficient to maintain fertility. Wheat is raised in considerable quantity on the higher grounds. Teff, on the contrary, which is a herbaceous plant, grows on every soil, and affords the bread which is an universal use. On the lowest grounds is raised a plant called Toussa, which yields a black bread for the lowest classes. Other important vegetable products are the papyrus, so celebrated among the ancients, as the original material of paper. The balsam, myrrh, cassia, and opocarpusum, are produced along the coast of the Red sea, but more copiously beyond the limits of Abyssinia, from Zeyla to Cape Guardafui, which may be considered as the native country of these juicy and odoriferous woods. In some swampy districts, where excess of moisture would prevent the raising of grain, its place is supplied by a plant called Ensete, the stalk of which, when stripped of its green covering, is said by Bruce to be the very best of all vegetable food. Abyssinia contains, besides, many rare trees, plants, and flowers, and affords an unexhausted field of study to the botanist. Mr Salt, in his two journeys, added to science 8 genera, and 128 species; and an ample harvest doubtless remains for future labourers.

Abyssinia, from the great variety of its surface, and the uncultivated state of some of its districts, produces a great variety of wild animals. Of these, the most numerous and characteristic is the hyena. The elephant and rhinoceros are numerous in the low grounds, and in places full of moisture. There is a species of rhinoceros with two horns, found only in a few districts. The antelope species also is very numerous. The buffalo is here one of the most ferocious of animals. Hippopotami and crocodiles abound in all the rivers. The lion is found only occasionally. There are several species of the leopard. The zebra is frequent in the southern provinces of Fazule and Narea, where its name adorns the collars of the war horses. A small animal called Jerboa, about the size of a rat, burrows in the fields, both here and in Barbary. The domestic animals are not very different from those of Europe. The most remarkable is a species of Galla oxen, bearing horns of enormous magnitude. Mr Salt saw one four feet long, and 21 inches in circumference at its root. Mr Bruce is said to be mistaken, however, in representing this as a disease. It is the characteristic of a species, though one not very common. Abyssinian horses are strong and beautiful. The feathered creation in Abyssinia bears more than its usual proportion to the other species. The vast profusion of insects, grains, and plants; even the waste and destruction attending the continual wars, afford them an uncommon supply of food. The nisser, or golden eagle, perhaps the largest bird of the old continent, and a beautiful species called the black eagle, are particularly noticed by Mr Bruce. To these Mr Salt adds a new species called galie-godie, the size of the falcon. Storks, snipes, pigeons, and swallows, occur in great number and variety. Mr Bruce never saw a woodcock, sparrow, magpie, or bat. Among insects, the most numerous and useful are bees. Honey constitutes everywhere an important part of the food of the people. Several provinces, particularly that of the Agawa, pay a large proportion of their tribute in this article. The honey assumes different appearances; sometimes black, sometimes blood-red, according to the plant on which the insect feeds. Of a very different character is the locust, which commits here ravages nearly as terrible as it does in all the other countries of Northern Africa.

The political condition of Abyssinia is as unfavourable as can be conceived. The country is the continual prey of intestine confusion, and the most sanguinary hostility. It presents a scene of perpetual bloodshed, not from frontier hostilities, but from such as are carried on in the very bosom of the country; nor is a single district for a moment secure from its devastation. This perpetual state of civil war and confusion seems to be the main cause of that peculiar barbarism and brutality, by which the manners of Abyssinia are characterised. All the feelings by which man is restrained from shedding the blood of his fellows, seem entirely blunted. Human life seems scarcely to be respected more than that of the brute. Mr Bruce seldom went out at Gondar without seeing dead bodies lying in the streets, without being even allowed the rites of sepulture, but left to be devoured by the dogs and hyenas. But the circumstances which seems to place the Abyssinians below even the most savage tribes, is the extreme consciousness of their festive indulgences, on which occasions they devour the raw flesh of animals, as it is immediately cut in slices from the animal alive, which is described by Mr Bruce, as in the meantime roaring under the pain of the wound. Mr Salt affirms that the animal is first killed. It is also the practice to cut steaks from a living animal, then to close up the wound, and to continue driving him on. This was also contradicted by Mr Salt; but in his second journey he was himself a witness to this brutality. At their feasts their manners are grossly licentious. The Abyssinians profess Christianity, with a large admixture, however, of Jewish observances.

The only display of architectural magnificence in Abyssinia, is in the churches. The houses of the sovereign and grandees are also large and commodious; though, in this warlike country, the camp is considered as his more proper residence. All the other houses are mere hovels of a conic form, with a thatched roof. Their dress consists chiefly of a large piece of cotton cloth, 24 cubits long, and one and a half broad, which they wrap round them like a mantle, to which they add close drawers, reaching to the middle of the thigh, with a girdle of cloth. Their food consists of honey, the different species of grain already enumerated, and raw meat at festivals. The most general drink is botta, a species of sour beer, made from the fermentation of their cakes, particularly those left at entertainments. Hydromel is also made in great quantities. Wine is produced only in one district. Their agriculture is very rude and imperfect; as also their manufactures, which chiefly consist of cloths, arms, and instruments of iron and brass. Sheep skins are tanned in some quarters; at Axum they are made into parchment. The foreign commerce of Abyssinia is carried on entirely by way of Massuah, whence the communication with the interior is maintained by the channel of Adowa. The imports are chiefly lead, block tin, gold foil, Persian carpets, raw silk from China, velvets, French broad cloths, coloured skins from Egypt, glass beads and decanters from Venice. The exports consist of gold, ivory, and slaves. The slaves are reckoned more beautiful than those which come from the interior of Africa.

This country is now formed into three great divisions. 1. Tigre, comprehending the track between the Red sea and the Tacazze. The principal districts are Tigre proper, Agame, Enderia, Wogjerat, Wofla, Lasta, Avergule, Samen, Zemben, Sire, and the kingdom of the Baharnegash. The chief towns are Adowa, Antalo, Dixan, and Axum. 2. Amhara, comprehending the provinces west of the Tacazze. The principal are Amhara proper, Dembea, Damm, Gogam, and Begemder. Gondar, the capital, and Enfras, are situated in this division. 3. This division consists of the southern provinces of Shoa and Efat, which are now, as already noticed, under an Abyssinian government, but entirely distinct from that which reigns in Tigre. Ankober and Tegulet seem to be the principal towns.

With regard to the population of Abyssinia, there seems scarcely to exist data on which we can form even a conjecture.

ACAPULCO, or LOS REYES, a town of New Mexico, and capital city of the government of New Spain, situated on the coast of the Pacific ocean, with an excellent bay and harbour. Its port, which is one of the finest in the world, and capable of containing any number of vessels in perfect safety, is an immense basin, cut out of the granitic rocks, and incloses a space between three and four miles in breadth. The small island of Roqueta or Grifo lies at the entrance of the port of Acapulco, and forms two entrances, the one on the west of the island, between 700 and 800 feet in breadth, and the other between a mile and half a mile, with from 24 to 33 fathoms of water. The town stands on a bay north-west from the road, formed by the curvature of the coast and a small promontory, on which is situated the castle and royal fort of San Diego, mounted with 51 pieces of artillery, for the defence of the port. In the bay to the north-west, ships may ride at anchor two cables length from the shore, and be sheltered from the storm by the point of land under the fort. This bay contains, in its whole extent, but one shallow, which is not above 100 feet deep. There is another little bay to the south-east, which is still safer than the former, and therefore frequented by such vessels as have occasion to winter at Acapulco. The principal trade of Acapulco is with Manila, one of the Philippine islands, to which it has for a long period sent out annually a large vessel. The lading from Acapulco to Manila generally consists of silver, a very small quantity of cochineal from Oaxaca, of cocoa from Guayaquil and Caracas, wine, oil, and Spanish wool. Its cargo from Manila consists of muslins, printed calicoes, coarse cotton shirts, raw silks, china, silk stockings, articles of jewellery from Canton or Manila, by Chinese artists; spices, and aromatics.

Acapulco, though it has been celebrated for its trade with the east, is but a miserable town, with only 4000 inhabitants, mostly people of colour, which are increased to 9000 by the resort of strangers to the annual fair, held at the time of the arrival of the Manila galleon. It is surrounded on all sides by a lofty chain of rocky mountains, which, by reverberating the sun's rays, and excluding the air, add greatly to the suffocating heat of the climate. To give a freer circulation to the air, a passage has been actually cut through the chain of mountains which surround the town, and this improvement, by giving a free access during the heats of summer, to the sea breeze, has not been without its utility. But Acapulco, owing to its position, is still extremely unhealthy; and the unfortunate inhabitants, besides being tormented with earthquakes and hurricanes, breathe a burning air, full of insects, and vitiated by putrid emanations. Bilious fevers, and the cholera tantus, are very frequent; and the Mexicans, who descend from the table land to purchase goods, on the arrival of the galleon, are frequently the victims of those mortal diseases. The natural insalubrity of the climate is greatly increased by the poisonous vapours which exhale from a marsh situated to the east of the town. The stagnant water of this marsh disappears every year, which occasions the death of an innumerable quantity of small fishes. These, rotting in heaps under the ardour of a tropical sun, diffuse their pestilential emanations through the neighbouring air, and are justly considered one of the principal causes of the putrid bilious fevers which prevail on the coast. In summer, the temperature of the air at Acapulco remains, during the day, almost continually between 88 and 96 degrees of Fahrenheit. It falls, however, before sun-rise, to 64 and 62; to which great and sudden depression Humboldt ascribes the most fatal effects. Long, according to Humboldt, 99. 46. W. Lat. 16. 50. 29. N.

ACCABA, or CALAAT EL ACCABA, a fortress of Arabia Petrea, 150 miles E. S. E. Suz.

ACCOMAC, a county of the United States, in Virginia. Population 15,743.

ACCUSSET, a river of the United States, in Massachusetts, which flows into New Bedford harbour.

ACHEN, a kingdom occupying the northern extremity of the island of Sumatra, and extending about 50 miles inland.

ACHEN, a city of Asia, the capital of the kingdom of Schoen, situated near the northern extremity of Sumatra, on the south side of Acheen, about two miles from the sea. It is irregularly built, containing 8000 houses raised on posts, to secure them from the sudden inundations by which the surface of the ground is overflowed. A good deal of trade is carried on in Acheen; and a number of vessels resort to it from the coast of Cochin and the Maldives. Long. 95. 46. E. Lat. 6. 25. N.

ACHENSO'S HAVEN, a village of Scotland, in Sheddin, Lanashire, on the firth of Forth.

ACHENSO RIVER, a small river of Lower Canada, which falls into the Assumption.

ACHEN, an island on the western coast of Ireland, in the county of Mayo.

ACHEN, or ACHEN, a considerable town of Upper Egypt, on the left bank of the Nile. The streets are well disposed, broad, and straight, which is very unusual in Egypt; and this would be a very handsome town were the houses built with better materials than bricks not burnt, but merely baked, and cemented with clay. This place was anciently called Panopolis or Chemmis, the former the Greek name, the latter Egyptian. The city contains a church of some antiquity, and held in much veneration; but its chief ornament is the granite pillars, taken from the ruins of Panopolis. 209 miles S. Cairo. Long. 31. 55. E. Lat. 26. 40. N.

ACHEN, a large village of Upper Egypt. Pop. 5000. 120 miles S. Cairo. Long. 31. 10. E. Lat. 26. 10. N.

ACHEN, a village of Ireland, in the county of Sligo. 16 miles W. Sligo.

ACHENKA, a well built town of Russia, in the government of Chareov, on a rivulet of the same name. Population 12,313. 40 miles W. S. W. Chareov.

ACHEN'S KEYS, two small islands, about 50 miles S. E. from the Bahamas.

ACHOBAMBA, a town of Peru. Long. 74. 32. W. Lat. 13. 16. S.

ACHOCAGUA, a province of the kingdom of Chili, which is bounded on the north by the province of Quillota, east by the Andes, south by Santiago, and on the west by the province of Quillota. Population 8000.

ACHOCAGUA, a town of Chili, in the above province, formerly its capital.

ACHOCAGUA, a river of the above province, which enters the Pacific ocean in Lat. 33. S.

ACORRY, or ACORRY, a town of Hindostan, 12 miles N. W. Attock, on the river Indus.

ACQUA, a town of Italy, in Tuscany, celebrated for its baths. 15 miles E. Leghorn.

ACQUA-NEGRA, two towns of Italy, in the duchies of Mantua and Milan.

ACQUAFEDENTE, a small town of Italy, 35 miles N. N. W. Rome.

ACQUA-VIVA, a small town of Naples, almost destroyed by an earthquake in 1795.

ACQUA, or AQUI, a town of Italy, in the duchy of Montserrat, on the Dornio. Population 6000, who are chiefly engaged in the silk manufacture. 44 miles S. E. Turin.

ACUA, a town of Hindostan, in the district of Condapilly, 16 miles N. E. Condapilly.

ACRA, a kingdom on the Gold coast of Africa, about 26 miles in length, and from 12 to 20 in breadth. Both the English and Dutch have forts at Acra. There is also a Danish fort. Long. 6. 10. W. Lat. 5. 31. N.

ACRA, an ancient city of Palestine, a seaport in the paralia of Acra, situated on a bay, which stretches along nine miles of a semicircular coast, as far as the promontory of Mount Carmel, but in a situation rendered unhealthy from the neighbouring marshes, and from its own construction. The town is small, but very populous, and well fortified. It is now greatly reduced from its ancient extent; for it was originally begirt by triple walls, and by a fosse cut out of the rock, from which it is at present a mile distant, and which it occupies an hour's journey to encircle. The interior of the city is confined; the streets are so narrow, that it is affirmed when a camel traverses the broadest, no other animal can pass at the same time. The houses are built of cut stone, not of bricks, as usual in the east; and they are flat roofed, with terraces. Few of the ancient buildings with which this city was once decorated, remain. There is a large edifice in a state of decay, formerly called the iron castle, which was used as an hospital and palace by the Knights Templars. The palace of the grand master of the Knights of St John of Jerusalem serves for the same purpose to the pacha of Acra; and in one of its towers is a spacious hall, with a fountain of various coloured marble in the centre, made by Daher, the son of Omar. Djazzar pacha built an elegant mosque, with a fine cupola; besides which, there are several others, a Greek and Armenian church, a Jewish synagogue, and a small monastery of Franciscans, which, in 1807, contained only four monks. There are two bazars or market places, three khans or inns for the reception of goods, in one of which Europeans are lodged; also baths and fountains. A beautiful fountain, close to the pacha's palace, has been built of white marble, from the remains of the ancient Casarca, a neighbouring city on the shore. There are several coffee-houses, the resort to which enlivens the city; but the shops are poor, and the most favourable prospect of Acra is from without. Some trade is carried on in the export of cotton, and the import of rice; but the harbour is bad, though better than most others on the coast. The population of Acra was computed at 16,000 by the Abbe Mariti, in 1760, and at 18,000 or 20,000 by Mr Browne, in 1797.

This city has been celebrated from remote periods of antiquity: it was known by the name of, Acra, Ake, Accor, and St John D'Acra. It remained long in possession of Alexander's successors; it was afterwards taken by the Romans; and when the Saracens began to be formidable, they rendered themselves masters of Acre, calling it Acca, as of old. During nearly two centuries it became the principal theatre of the crusades. The Saracens were expelled from this city by the Christians in 1104, from whom it was recovered by Saladin, sultan of Egypt, in 1187. It again fell into the hands of the Saracens, after a siege, in 1291; and was finally taken by the Turks, who still retain a precarious possession of it, governing it by pashas. In 1799 Acre was besieged by Bonaparte, and was gallantly and successfully defended by Sir Sidney Smith, the enemy retreating from under its walls, after having invested it 61 days, and after all his attempts to carry the place by storm had proved ineffectual. Since the siege in 1799, the fortifications have been considerably enlarged. 23 miles N. N. W. Jerusalem, 27 S. Tyre.

ACRON, or AKRON, a division of the Pansee Territory, on the Gold coast of Africa. This town, with most of its inhabitants, was destroyed by the Ashantes, on the 1st March 1811. About a week after, the fort was plundered by Attah, the late king of Akim, who laid nearly the whole of it in ruins. 50 miles E. N. E. Cape Coast.

ACROTIRI, a town on the island of Santorin, in the Greek Archipelago. Long. 25. 24. E. Lat. 36. 27. N.

ACRON, a village and parish of England, formerly resorted to for its mineral waters. Population 1829. 5 miles from London.

ACTON-BURNELL, a village of England, in the county of Salop. Population 305.

ACUL, a small seaport of St Domingue, on the north coast; stormed by the English in 1794. 8 miles S. S. W. Cape François.

AD, a river of Scotland, which falls into the sea at Crinan, in the county of Argyle.

ADARA, an ancient town of Ireland, now reduced to a poor village, situated on the river Matg. 6 miles S. W. Limerick.

ADAMPA, a territory on the Gold coast of Africa, extending from Acre to the Volta.

ADAMS, a county of the United States, in Pennsylvania, bordering on Maryland. Population 38,182.

ADAMS, a county of the United States, in Mississippi, on the Mississippi river. Chief towns, Natchez and Washington. Population 18,000, including 5674 slaves.

ADAMS, a county of the United States, in Ohio, on the Ohio river, between Scioto and Brown counties. Chief town West Union. Population 1814, 16,416.—Also the name of various townships of the United States.

ADAMSCROW, a village and parish of Ireland, county of Wexford. Population 1970.

ADAMIA, a town of Asiatic Turkey, the capital of the district or government of Aladula, situated on the river Adama, or Selahoun. Population 2000 or 3000, who are Turks, Armenians, and Jews. It is much more so than other towns of the purchase of wine, fruit, and corn. 150 miles S. E. Konieh. Long. 36. 6. E. Lat. 36. 59. N.

ADANAH, a town of Hindustan, in the province of Malabar. 25 miles S. E. Calicut.

ADANAQUE, a town of Kurdistan, on the river Dowl, which flows into the Tigris.

ADDA, a large river in Italy, which has its source in the country of the Grisons, and joins the Po, near Cremona.

ADDISON, a county of the United States, in Vermont, on Lake Champlain, and on Otter creek. Chief town Vergennes. Population 19,993.—Also the name of several townships.

ADENAPUR, a town in Hindustan, one degree N. Lahore.

ADEN, a seaport town, the capital of the state of Aden, situated on a rocky peninsula in the south-west extremity of Arabia, projecting into the sea. It was formerly strongly fortified, and the most opulent city of Arabia; but it has altogether declined from its consequence; and although it has a tolerable harbour, is now almost in ruins. Most of the houses consist of basket-work and matting; and the sultan resides in a very indifferent edifice. Long. 46. 10. E. Lat. 12. 56. N.

ADENSOOT, a town of Hindustan, in the Carnatic, 5 miles S. Volconda.

ADIRAMPAR, a town of Hindustan, in Travancore, 35 miles N. E. Porah.

ADULIN'S HEAD, SE, a lofty promontory of England, on the coast of the county of Dorset, rising 440 feet almost perpendicularly from the sea, with the ruins of a small square chapel on the very verge of the precipice.

ADIGE, a large river which rises in the country of the Grisons, on the borders of Tyrol, enters the latter territory at Glurentz, and, after traversing the principality of Trent, directs its course across the district of Verona, in Italy, where it becomes navigable, and at length discharges itself into the gulf of Venice not far from the mouth of the Po.

ADILABAD, a town in the Mahratta dominions, province of Khandesh, 20 miles S. Burlampour.

ADJODIA, or PAUKPUTERN, a city of Hindustan, province of Moultan, on the Selegee, and the annual resort of numerous Mahometan pilgrims. Long. 73. 30. E. Lat. 30. 21. N.

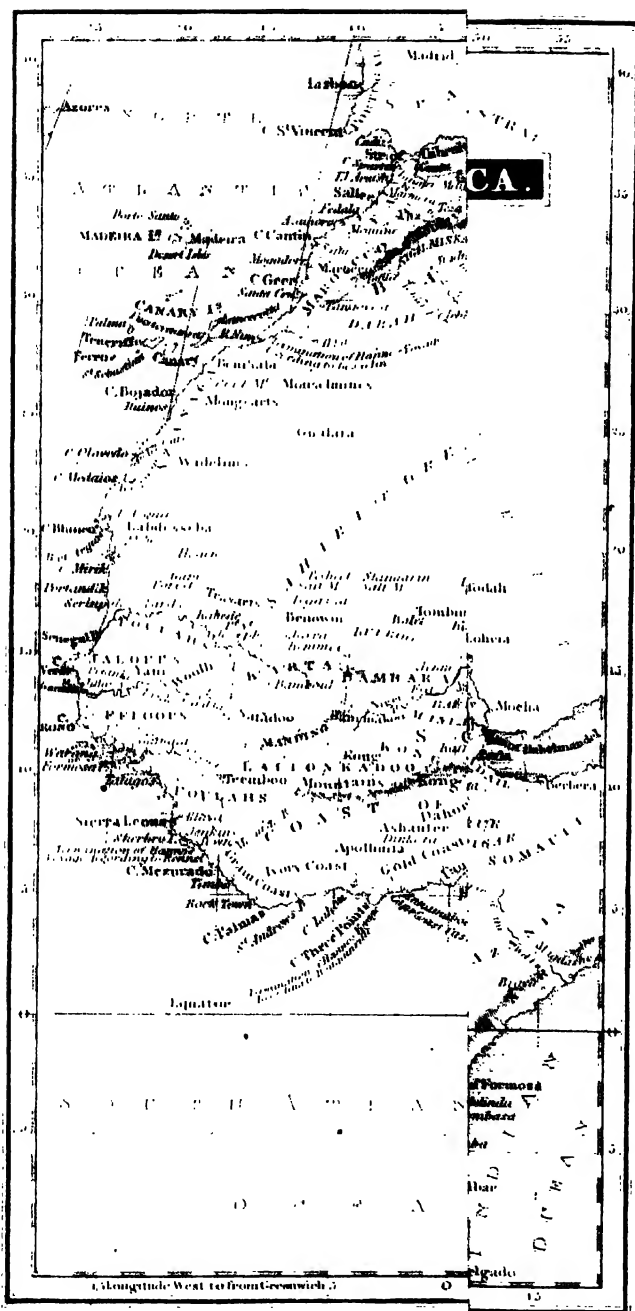

ADMIRALTY ISLAND, the name given to an island near Nova Zembla, in the Frozen ocean.

ADMIRALTY ISLAND, a large island on the west coast of North America, between King George the Third's Archipelago and the continental shore, about 90 miles long, and 25 broad. Long. 226. 10. to 230. 31. E. Lat. 57. 2. to 58. 24. N.

ADMIRALTY ISLANDS, a number of small islands at the entrance of Admiralty bay, N.W. Zealand. Long. 105. 2. W. Lat. 40. 48. S.

ADMIRALTY ISLANDS, a cluster of 20 or 31 islands in the South Pacific ocean, of which the largest, called Great Admiralty island, is from 55 to 60 miles in length. Lat. 1. 36. 50. to 2. 20. S.

AJO, a small island of Russia, in the gulf of Bothnia, not far from the coast of Finland. Long. 20. 14. E. Lat. 60. 10. N.

ADONY, a district in Hindoostan, in Golconda, containing a town of the same name, 168 miles N. Seringapatam. Long. 77. 18. E. Lat. 15. 57. N.

ANOF, a town of Saxony, on the banks of the Elster, 12 miles from Egra. Population 1600. Long. 12. 16. E. Lat. 51. 15. N.

ADOUR, a river of France, which rises in the Pyrenees, and falls into the bay of Biscay, about 3 miles below Bayonne.

ADOWA, the capital of Tigre, in Abyssinia, and residence of the sovereign since the Galla gained possession of Gondar. It is situated partly on the side, and partly at the foot of a hill, and commands a magnificent view of the mountains of Tigre. The houses are all of a conical form, pretty regularly disposed into streets or alleys, interspersed with trees and small gardens. It contains 800 houses, and 8000 inhabitants. It has manufactures of cotton cloths. It has also an extensive trade in cattle, corn, salt, and slaves. Long. 39. 5. E. Lat. 14. 12. 30. N.

ADRA, the capital of a district of the same name, in Spain, and province of Granada, on the Mediterranean, 45 miles S. E. Granada. It is situated near the river Adra.

ADRIA, an episcopal town in Italy, situated on a peninsula formed by the river Tartaro and an arm of the Po, in the ancient Venetian territory called the Polesino di Rovigo, now belonging to Austria. Population 7200. 15 miles E. Rovigo. Long. 12. 2. E. Lat. 45. 2. N.

ADRIAMPATAM, a town of Hindoostan, on the sea-coast of Tanjore, 37 miles S. E. Tanjore. Long. 79. 30. E. Lat. 10. 20. N.

ADRIANOPLE, a large town on the Marizza, in the government of Romania, in European Turkey, 130 miles N. W. Constantinople. It was in ancient times the capital of the country of the Bessi, a Thracian tribe, and was named Ukadama. Its present name was received from the emperor Adrian, who was its second founder. The Turks took thence in the year 1360; and it continued to be the seat of the Turkish empire until the taking of Constantinople by Mahomet II. in 1453. It is nine miles in circumference, agreeably situated, but unhealthy. Next to the palace of the sultans, and the great repository for foreign goods, the numerous mosques merit our notice. Of these the mosque of the sultan Selim is the most splendid. There is here a multitude of booths and retail shops, stored with merchandise of all descriptions. The principal merchants are Greeks, Jews, and Armenians, but the town is also inhabited by Wallachians, Turks, and other oriental tribes. The Greeks have here an archbishop. An important branch of commerce is the wine and fruit raised in the adjacent country. It suffered much from fire in the years 1754 and 1773. Long. 22. 30. E. Lat. 41. 11. N.

ADRIATIC SEA, or GULF OF VENICE, is that part of the Mediterranean which extends from south-east to north-west, between the coasts of Italy and Illyria, from Lat. 40. to 46. 30. N., and whose southern extremities are the Capo di Leuca in Sicily, and the north point of the island of Corfu. It derives its name from the once flourishing towers of Adria, in the Polesino di Rovigo. It is in general nearly 110 miles in breadth, and is bounded on the south-west by Naples, on the west by the Ecclesiastical States and the kingdom of Lombardy, on the north and north-north-east by Carniola and Istria, and on the east, by Croatia, Dalmatia, Ragusa, and Albania.

ADRIAT, a town of Arabia, on the south side of the Persian gulf, inhabited by Arabs. Long. 48. 20. E. Lat. 26. 8. N.

ADUR, a river of England, rising in Sussex, which falls into the Lee at New Shoreham.

AERZEN, a large and well built town of Switzerland, in the Valais, 30 miles E. Sion.

AERON, a river of Wales, flowing into Cardigan bay.

ALBENHOUT, a strong town of the Netherlands, in Austrian Brabant, on the Demer. Population 2300. 20 miles S. E. Antwerp.

AFGHANISTAN, a considerable kingdom, situated between Persia and Hindoostan, bounded E. by the Nileh or the Indus river, N. by a range of lofty mountains, separating it from Bulkh and Budukhsan, W. by Persia (Herat being its frontier town), S. by Baluchistan. It lies between Lat. 29. and 36. N. and Long. 61. and 71. E.; comprehending the ancient kingdoms of Zabulistan (Ghizne and Kandahar) and Kabulistan. The inhabitants are esteemed generous, hospitable, and brave, but illiterate, refractory, ferocious, and seditious. They are not supposed to exceed 3 000,000.

AFRICA, one of the four great quarters of the world. It forms a peninsula, connected with Asia only by the narrow link of the isthmus of Suez. This continent is bounded N. by the Mediterranean, W. by the Atlantic, E. by the Red sea and the Indian ocean, while its southern point touches upon the Great Pacific ocean. Its greatest length, from Cape Serra to Cape Agulhas, includes from about the 37th degree of north to the 35th of south latitude, and its greatest breadth from Cape Verd to Cape Guardafui, about the 10th degree of west and the 31st of east longitude. It is thus about 4320 geographical miles in length, and 410 in breadth. The knowledge of the ancients respecting any part of Africa, except that immediately bordering on the Mediterranean, was but imperfect. On the decline of the Roman empire, Egypt and the Mediterranean provinces were occupied by the victorious arms of the Saracens, who formed routes across its desert wastes; and traversing its vast expanse, arrived on the fertile shores of the Niger. This region presented ample temptations to migratory and commercial a people; colonies were formed, which gradually swelled into kingdoms; and the eastern part of Nigeria was speedily covered with Arabian settlements. Early in the 15th century, different parts of Africa were visited by Leo Africanus, while the Portuguese navigators were, in the mean time, surveying its coasts; and towards the end of the century, in 1497, the Cape of Good Hope was, on the 27th June, doubled by Vasco de Gama, who sailed to Mosambique; and thus, by the successive efforts of these different navigators, the form of this continent, so long the subject of dispute, was completely ascertained. The survey of the coasts was thus completed; but the interior remained for several centuries almost entirely unknown; and it is only in our own times that any efforts have been made to obtain an accurate knowledge of the interior. The shores of Africa were indeed crowded with European vessels, but solely for the nefarious purpose of procuring slaves for the supply of the West India colonies. A sufficient number being either found on the coast, or brought down by caravans from the interior, there was no sufficient inducement to encounter the hardships of penetrating into the country. An association for this purpose was formed in this country by a body of illustrious individuals, impelled by no sordid views, but who were guided by the noblest principles of science and humanity. Their judicious exertions, and singular good fortune in finding a traveller such as Park, enabled them, in a few years, to make greater discoveries than had been achieved since the period of the first discovery. These have now kindled such a zeal in the nation and government, as will soon, we trust, dissipate that cloud of ignorance which so long rested on the geography of Africa. However imperfectly the physical structure of this great continent is known to us, it obviously presents some remarkable features. Its mountain chains are not much inferior in elevation and extent to those of any of the other quarters. Mount Atlas, the only great chain whose direction has been fully explored, extends across more than half the continent, and in its highest elevation exceeds 13,000 feet above the level of the sea. The central mountains, however, must be of still more formidable magnitude, if we may judge by their fame throughout the continent, and by the mighty rivers of which they contain the source. The loftiest portion appears to be that lying to the south of Abyssinia, known to the ancients under the poetical appellation of the Mountains of the Moon. These certainly contain the remotest sources of the Egyptian Nile, as well as of other great rivers, with which we are yet unacquainted. On the other side of the continent, and nearly under the same parallel, we find the mountains of Kong, which stretch without interruption from Cape Verde to about the meridian of Zambouzo. The southern shores of Africa are overlooked by mountains, not of the same magnitude, but by no means inconsiderable. The rivers of this continent are equally remarkable with its mountains, and their sources are still deeper mystery. The Nile, and its numerous tributary streams; but from its peculiar situation, these, after a short course, are either received into the ocean, or lost in the sands of the desert. The river of longest course, so far as yet ascertained, appears to be the Nile. The origin of this celebrated stream, after much speculation, appears now fixed in the Mountains of the Moon, some hundred miles to the south of Darfur. The immense mass of waters poured down from thence, swelled by large tributary streams from Abyssinia, forces its way across the sands of Nubia, and spreads fertility over the plains of Egypt. Still deeper interest has been excited in modern times by its brother stream of the Niger. Its source, as well as those of the Senegal and Gambia, is now fixed in the mountains of Kong, on the western side of the continent. Next in interest to these two rivers is the Zaïre or Congo, which certainly pours into the ocean an extraordinary mass of waters, with a rapidity and impetuosity almost unparalleled, and in which, according to the speculations of some, the Niger terminates its course. The rivers which discharge themselves into the Indian ocean, are the Zambeze, the Quilimanet, and the Magdasha, though of all these the source and the greater part of the early course are equally unknown. Although the mountains and rivers of Africa are thus of no ordinary magnitude, they are yet insufficient, under a tropical sun, to diffuse moisture and fertility over so vast a range of continent. Hence arises one of the great peculiarities of the African continent, namely, the immense expanse of its deserts. The plain which intervenes between Barbary and Nigritia, is of such extent, that the waters descending from the Atlas, and from the central chains, are unable to penetrate it; hence a track of about 3500 miles in length, and 700 or 800 in breadth, is abandoned to complete and hopeless aridity. Only a few scattered spots, favoured with springs, rise like verdant islands, amid the immeasurable waste. Besides this mighty desert, others on a smaller scale occur in almost every part of the continent; and even the most fertile regions inclose within them large portions of desert. No art of irrigation yet known to man, seems capable of making the least impression on this immense mass of sterility. Art, however, aided by nature, has completely overcome the obstacle thus presented to the intercourse of nations. By the help of the camel, these bleak portions of the continent are traversed as easily and as rapidly as its most fertile and smiling regions. Every part of this desert sea is covered with land fleets, which convey, from one extremity to the other, the varied productions of these regions, between which it forms so wide a separation. Of the numerous races which inhabit the continent of Africa, the Moors and the negroes occupy the largest portion of it. The appellation of Moors is used in a very vague and undistinguishing manner; but the basis of the population so called, seems to consist of foreigninvaders or settlers, chiefly from Western Asia, who, ever since the Saracen invasion, have been pressing hard upon the native tribes. The river boundary, formed by the Senegal and Niger, may be considered generally as a line of separation between these two races; though for a certain space on each side they mix or alternate. In Bornou, to the east, the Moors form the ruling class; but both there and in Cassina, and in other countries along the Niger, the mass of the population is Negro. The Moorish character is usually described in very unfavourable colours. Rude and roving habits, a dark and ferocious superstition, and a barbarism which has no tincture of simplicity, are represented as forming its prominent features. To every European visitor in particular, the Moors have been found inaccessible enemies. Their colour is tawny and sunburnt, but makes no approach to the deep black which forms the complexion of almost all the native races of this continent.

The Negroes are distinguished from the Moors, not more by their features and colour, than by their general character and habits of life. They possess less activity, information, and vigour of mind; but they redress these defects by many amiable qualities. With the usual habits of barbarous life, they are simple, gentle, and hospitable; their domestic affections are warm; and their religion, whatever it be, has no tincture of intolerance. The Negroes of Western Africa are daily divided into the two classes of Foulahs and Mandingoes. The Foulahs occupy as their principal kingdom, the country between Sierra Leone, of which Teen Loo is the capital. Between the Senegal and Gambia they have Bondou, Fouta Torra, and the Siratic; with Masina between Barcharra and Tombuctoo. The Mandingoes appear, by the name, to have come originally from Manding, a high mountain tract, not very remote from Fouladou, and they form now the great mass of the population in all these districts.

While man is excluded, or able imperfectly to occupy, many portions of this vast continent, his place is supplied by the wild portion of the animal creation, which abound to an extraordinary degree throughout its whole extent; there are indeed many tracts, of which they claim almost the sole dominion. The lion ranges everywhere through the African forests; and there are few tracts in which the traveller is safe from his terrible onset. Tigers are not so numerous or so fierce as in Asia; it has even been doubted whether the animal so denominated here ought not more properly to be accounted a panther. The hyæna is chiefly confined to Northern Africa. But of all species, the most numerous is that of elephants, who roam in vast herds, through the plains and forests of the interior. All the great rivers of Africa are peopled in its undigested parts of them and with crocodiles and hippopotami; considered together thus mixed passages; for not only are they attacked by these animals, but the hippopotami often beat so large a hole in the forest as to occasion its sinking. The various descriptions of monkeys and baboons leap in myriads through all the woods of Africa. The more odious and pernicious serpent brood are equally numerous. Of the tame animals of Africa, the camel holds the principal rank. His large and flat hoof, his patience of every privation, the power of retaining water for his own use and that of his master, eminently qualifying him for traversing the immense wastes of Africa. For swiftness, the dromedary is useful. This animal can walk with ease 50 miles a day; and when made to gallop, will travel 200 miles for several successive days. The Moors even assert, that in cases of exigency, they can make him go 300 miles in 20 hours. Dromedaries are trained by the Moors on the borders of the desert, for the purposes of war and plunder. In the countries south of the Niger, consisting chiefly of mountainous and broken ground, the camel would be useless. There the animal universally used for travelling is the ass. All the other domestic animals of Europe are reared, but only for milk and food.

In the vegetable kingdom, some striking peculiarities are presented by the African forests. The baobab or calabash tree exhibits certainly dimensions the most extraordinary of any that occur in this kingdom of nature. Its height does not exceed 60 or 70 feet, and bears no proportion to the immense extent of its trunk. The branches, which extend horizontally in all directions, are as large as common trees, so that a single baobab constitutes a species of forest. Another remarkable tree is the mangrove: it grows only upon the banks of rivers, and its branches, penetrating the river, strike root in its bed. They thus form beneath a species of natural arcade, and above a terrace, which might be walked over were it not too much encumbered with leaves. The shea, or vegetable butter tree, forms in this class a curious and valuable production. On the borders of the desert is found the Jolus tree, a shrub celebrated in Africa from the earliest ages, and giving the name of Lotophagi to a numerous race of its ancient inhabitants. The Flora of Africa has scarcely been at all explored, unless in Abyssinia and the Cape of Good Hope. There it has been found rich, and has added to botany a number of interesting species. Doubtless, from the vast mountain regions in the interior, an ample harvest yet remains to be reaped. In regard to the metals, although various descriptions are found in its different quarters, yet none can be considered characteristic of this continent, except the precious one of gold. It is very widely diffused, being found more or less at the foot of every part yet known of the central mountains, both on their southern and northern side. Argentiferous and the arts, through all the native states of this continent, are in a very rude and imperfect state. In the cultivation of the land, the hoe, employed by the hand, is the only instrument used. The cultivated tracks appear as if were a mere encroachment on the domain of the forest.

Manufactures appear to be in a still less advanced state. The most extensive one, that of cotton cloth, is carried on by each family for its own use, and does not constitute the peculiar occupation of any individuals. The trades which stand in this predicament are those of the smith and of the dresser of leather. Considerable skill is displayed in both these departments; and the latter, almost alone of all African manufactures, forms an object of exportation to Europe.

Of all the branches of industry, commerce is that which displays the greatest activity. Maritime commerce, indeed, unless on the coasts of the Mediterranean and the Red sea, never was nor could be in a flourishing state. The rest of Africa had no opposite coast with which to trade; nothing but an immeasurable waste of ocean extended before it. Its native navigation was therefore almost entirely confined to intercourse in boat, along the coast. The interior commerce, carried on by land, has always been the prevailing one, and has closely united the most remote nations, who, in establishing it, have overcome the mightiest obstacles which nature ever opposed to mutual communication. Deserts, whose wide desolation seemed fatal to every thing endued with life, are regularly and safely traversed by large and numerous caravans. The principal are those which maintain the communication between Northern and Central Africa, across the desert of the Sahara. Here the camel, called the ship of the land, is almost exclusively employed. The number of camels composing a caravan is various, but is generally between 500 and 9000. They travel usually at the rate of three miles an hour, and for six or seven hours in the day. The only measure of space adopted in these regions is the day of a caravan's travelling, which, according to the above data, ought to be about 20 miles, but is only about 16 miles; and in one of very great length, not even 13. The most terrible evil which they have to dread is, when any of the wells to which they trust for a supply of water, happens to be dried up. From such a failure in 1805, a whole caravan, consisting of 2000 persons, coming from Coahuacan to Morocco, is said to have perished.

The chief basis of the trade from Northern to Central Africa, is salt. The whole region watered by the central rivers is destitute of that necessary of life. The most extreme longing, however, is felt for its use; and pieces of it are even sucked in the mouth like sugar or sweetmeats. On the other hand, Berberia abounds in gold, of which the northern part of the continent is destitute. The exchange, therefore, of salt for gold, has from time immemorial formed the staple trade of Africa. The salt is sold in slabs, one of which, 24 feet long, is sold for L.2 to L.2

10s. To the staple export of gold, may be added the equally extensive one of slaves. All the caravans which cross the desert carry with them large troops of these unfortunate victims. The whole amount of this interior slave trade has been estimated at 30,000 annually.

The following appear to be the leading divisions of Africa:—1. Northern Africa, comprehending Egypt and the Barbary states. 2. Western Africa.—This comprises a vast extent of coast, including the countries on the Senegal and Gambia; the Ivory, Gold, and Slave coasts of Guinea, Benin, Lower Guinea, or Congo. 3. Southern Africa.—The centre of this division is situated in the country surrounding the Cape, from whence it extends northward indefinitely, to the frontier of Congo and Mosambique. 4. Eastern Africa.—The eastern coast is much less known than the western, being colonised only by the Portuguese, who are not communicative as to their discoveries. Under this division, it would appear that Abyssinia must be included, though it is more generally viewed as forming a division by itself. 5. Central Africa.—On the Niger are enumerated the kingdoms of Tombuctoo, Houssa, Cassina, and Wangara; to the west and north of that river, those of Bornou, Ashem, Bergoa, and Begherme. Of the nations situated farther to the south, not the slightest rumour has yet reached Europe. 6. The numerous islands with which Africa is in a manner encircled. The most remarkable are the Azores, which some refer to Europe; Madeira, with its adjunct of Porto Santo; the Canaries; the Cape Verde islands; and the solitary rocks of Ascension and St Helena. On the east coast occurs the great island of Madagascar, with the smaller contiguous ones of Bourbon and Mauritius; some small groups, as the Comorro islands, the Seychelles, and Socotora, at the mouth of the Red sea.

AFRICA, a seaport of Tunis, 40 miles S. E. Tunis. Long. 11. 10. E. Lat. 35. 30. N.

AFRIQUE, St, a town of France, department of the Aveyron. Population 3580.

AFZELIGUR, a town in Hindostan, on the northern border of Rohilkund.

AGADEEP, a town in Bengal, on the bank of the Bhagarutty, 14 miles S. Plassey.

AGADIR, or SANTA CRUZ, the most southern port in the empire of Morocco. It is built on the summit of a mountain, and defended by batteries. Its population was transported to Mogador by Seedy Mahomet; and it contains only 300 inhabitants.

AGARON, a town of Hindostan, in the Carnatic, 15 miles N. W. Tingar.

AGANUM, a town of Hindostan, in the Mysore, 6 miles E. S. E. Bangalore.

AGAWAM, a river of the United States, in Massachusetts, which runs into the sea.—Also a township in Hampden county, Massachusetts.

AGDE, a town of France, in Languedoc, on the Herault. Population 7200. 8 leagues S. W. Montpellier.

AGEDA, a town of Portugal, in the province of Beira, on the Agêda.

AGNY, a town of France, department of Lot and Garonne, on the Garonne, 30 leagues S. E. Bourdeaux. Population 10,834. Long. 6. 42. E. Lat. 44. 12. N.

AGGERHUUS, or CHRISTIANIA, the largest and most southerly of the four bishoprics of Norway, and on many accounts the most important part of the kingdom. To the north it is bounded by Drontheim, to the west by Bergen and Christiansand, to the south by the Skager-Rack, and to the east by Sweden. Population 100,000—Aggerhuus is also the name of a royal bailiwick, of several smaller districts, and of the strong castle in Hordens on the west side of the gulf of Christiania, three miles from the town of that name.

AGGERNOR, an island in the gulf of Christiania, not far from the main land.

AGGERSE, Danish island in the Great Belt. Long 11 12 E. Lat 55 12 N.

AGGERSEY, a small island in the Celtic gulf, Norway.

AGHABOY, a village and parish of Ireland, in Queen's county. Population 181.

AGHABOY, a village of Ireland in the county of Kerry 3 miles S. W. Killybeg.

AGHABOY POINT, a cape on the west coast of Ireland, in the county of Galway. Long 9 E. Lat 53 4 N.

AGHRIM, a village of Ireland in the county of Wicklow.

AGHRIM, a decayed village of Ireland in the county of Galway, 28 miles E. Galway.

AGHRIM POINT, a cape of Ireland 11 miles W. Sligo.

AGHSCOTER, a village of France, department of the Pire-de-Guy, noted for its victory gained here by the English in 1155. Population 500.

AGHTE, or AGHA, a town of Piedmont, 7 miles S. W. Ivrea. Population 3240.

AGHTE, a village of Ireland, in the county of Waterford, 101 miles from Dublin.

AGMET, or AGMET, a town and district of Morocco, on the W. declivity of the Atlas 18 miles S. F. Morocco.

AGNES, St., one of the Scilly Islands, of irregular figure, containing a superficial tract of 500 acres. Population 200. Long 6 20 W. Lat 49 13 N.

AGOA DE PAO, a town of St. Michael's one of the Azores, 12 miles E. of Ponta del Gada.

AGOV, a town of France, on the N. coast of Normandy. Population 1550.

AGONICHE, a river of Nova Scotia, which enters the sea at the mouth of Fundy Bay.

AGOO, a district on the Gold Coast of Africa, extending 20 miles from east to west, and 15 from north to south. The population is sufficient to supply from the late inland of the Abbecco, and cannot at present be estimated at more than 10,000 souls.

AGRA, or AGRA, a famous town in the Subcontinent of India, in the N. W. of India, 110 miles S. of Agra. It was destroyed by a great earthquake in 1693, and which, it is said, it has been rebuilt after a regular plan, with 1000 houses. Its harbour is now one of the safest ports in the island. Population 15,000. Long 15. 14. E. Lat. 37. 16. N.

AGOR, a small island in the English channel. Long 2. 4. W. Lat. 48. 38. N.

AGOWA, a remarkable people of Abyssinia, inhabiting a territory to the east of the sources of the Bahir-el-Azrek, or Abyssinian Nile. This district is uncommonly fertile, particularly in cattle and honey, with which it supplies Gondar, the capital, almost exclusively. The country is also very populous, and though scarcely 60 miles in length and 30 in breadth, can bring into the field 4000 cavalry and an equal number of infantry. There is another tribe of the same people called Echeret Agows, who inhabit a district on the northern bank of the Facceze.

AGRA, an extensive province of Hindostan, bounded on the north by the province of Delhi, on the south by Mithan, on the east by Oude and Alibabad, and on the west by Amree, being in length about 200, and in breadth 100 miles.

AGRA, a celebrated city of Hindostan called by the Mahomedans Akbarabad, the capital of the Agra province, and the seat of the British civil authority. It is situated on the S. W. bank of the river Jumna. Long 77. 41. E. Lat. 27. 13. N. The houses of this city are built of stone, and are very lofty, but the streets are so narrow, chiefly to admit the passage of carriages, that the greater part of it is, however, in a tunnel-like. On the opposite side of the river are several Hindu sanctuaries. Agra was taken in the year 1784 from the Marathas by the Mahomedan Madadji Sindia, and remained in the hands of his successor till 1803, when it was captured by the British army.

AGRAMONT, a town of Spain, in Catalonia, 5 miles from Lleida.

AGREY, St., a town of France, in the Vivarais. Population 2540.

AGRORE, a town of Naples, 22 miles S. S. E. Salerno.

AGUA CALIENTE, a city of Mexico, in the kingdom of New Galicia. It contains two convents, and about 500 Spanish families, besides mulattoes and those of a mixed blood, and is noted for its warm springs. It is 110 leagues N. N. W. Mexico.

AGUEDA, a river of Spain, in the province of Salamanca, which falls into the Douro.

AGUEIRA, a small town of Portugal, in Beira, 21 miles E. N. E. Limgo.

AGUIAN, a town of Spain, in the province of Cordova, 32 miles S. Cordova.

AGUIAR DE CAMPO, a town of Spain, in the province of Palencia. Population 1500. 10 miles N. W. Burgos.

AGUANIA, a kingdom on the Gold Coast of Africa, extending from the Ancobra to the Channah, bounded on the west by Agorler, and on the east by the Fantee territories.

AHAR, a town of Hindostan, in the district of Gohud. Long 78 30. E. Lat. 26. 14. N.

ARABYMAON, a village of Ireland, in Galway, 78 miles N. W. Dublin.

ARADINGAR, a town of Hindostan, on the Gograh, 40 miles S. S. E. Goorackpore.

ARLIX, a town of Suabia, 40 miles N. W. Augsburg. Population 1039.

ARMEDARAH, the capital of the province of Gujerat, Hindostan, on the Sahermaty. Long. 72. 37. E. Lat. 23. N.

ARMEDPORE, a town of Hindostan, in the province of Orissa, 34 miles S. Cuttack.

ARMOON, a town of Gujerat, belonging to the Mahrattas. Long. 73. 3. E. Lat. 22. N.

ARNOHILL, a village of Ireland, in the county of Antrim, 94 miles from Dublin.

ARNBURG, a market town of Germany. Population 3390. 3 miles S. W. Ohrenlau.

ARNWELLEN, a town of Germany, on the Ahr. Population 1779.

ARTEB, a town of Agra, in Hindostan, on the Chumbul. Long. 78. 33. E. Lat. 26. 43. N.

ARUS, a town of France, department of the Creuse. Population 1570.

AJACCIO, the chief town of Corsica, and the best built, being walled and protected by a citadel built by marshal de Ternes. It is delightfully situated on the north side of the gulf of Ajaccio, which forms below the town a secure and commodious harbour. Population 6345. It is remarkable for being the birth-place of Napoleon Bonaparte. Long. 8. 53. E. Lat. 41. 46. N.

AJAS, or AJASSO, a seaport of Asiatic Turkey, in a bay of the Mediterranean, called the Gulf of Ajasso. 20 miles N. Scanderoon.

AICH, a small river of Wirtemberg, which falls into the Neckar, not far from Göttingen.

AICHACH, or AICHA, a town of Upper Bavaria, on the river Par. Population 1600. 12 miles E. N. E. Augsburg.

AICHSTETTEN, a town of Bavaria. Population 1380.

AIGLE, or HAIS, capital of a district of the same name in Switzerland. Population 2500. 36 miles E. N. E. Geneva.

AIGNAN, a town of France, in the department of the Gers. Population 2610.

AIGNAN, St. a town of France, province of Berry. Population 2500. 8 leagues S. Blois.

AIGRE, a town of France, in the department of the Charente. Population 1430.

AIGRE-FRÉVILLE, a town of France, department of the Lower Charente, with 250 houses. 23 leagues E. S. E. La Rochelle.

AIGRE-PERSE, a town of France, in Auvergne, which forms, properly speaking, but a single street along the river of Beuron. Population 5050. 64 leagues N. Clermont-Ferrand.

AIGUES-MORTES, a town of France, in Lower Languedoc. Population 2540.

AISVILLON, a town of France, at the conflux of the Lot and Garonne, in Guienne. Population 2380. 54 leagues N. W. Agen.

ASIAH, a town of Arabia Petrea, on the coast of the Red sea. 108 miles E. S. Long. 40. 5. E. Lat. 28. 55. N.

AULY-SUR-SEINE, a town of France, 3 N. W. Amiens. Population 1050.

ASMEER, or RASPOOTANA, an extensive province in the centre of Hindostan, to the south of the provinces of Delhi and Moultan. It is about 350 miles long, and 220 broad.

ASMEER, a city of Hindostan, in the centre of the Rajpoot states. It possesses a tolerably strong fort, and the remains of a palace and extensive gardens, built by the emperor Jehangire, about the year 1615. It was in this city that Sir Thomas Rowe, the English ambassador, was introduced to the Great Mogul in the year 1716, since which period it has greatly declined. Long. 74. 48. E. Lat. 26. 36. N.

AIX, a department of France, which is formed out of the ancient districts of Bresse, Bugey, and a part of Burgundy. It extends about 22 leagues from E. to W. and 17 from N. to S. Population 322,608.

AINAD, a town of Arabia, in Hadramaut. Long. 55. 50. E. Lat. 13. 25. N.

AINTAI, or ANTAI, a large open town of Syria, about three miles in circumference, situated on two hills, and in the valley between them. A small river, the Sejour, runs by it. On the north side there is a castle garrisoned by janissaries; and on the south an extensive cemetery, which resembles large suburbs. The town is inhabited by Mahometans and Christians; and contains a church and five principal mosques. The chief trade is in coarse stamped calicoes, and various coloured woollens; also leather and raw hides; and skins are dyed red and yellow, into what is called Turkey leather. 40 miles N. Aleppo. Long. 37. 25. E. Lat. 36. 25. N.

AIRDRIE, a town of Scotland, in the county of Lanark. It is regularly built, and consists chiefly of one street, about a mile in length. It has manufactures of cotton, and iron-works; also a distillery. 12 miles E. Glasgow. Population 4860.

AIRE, a river of England, in Yorkshire, which falls into the Ouse, near Howden.

AIRE, a town of France, department of the Landes, on the Adour, 65 miles S. S. E. Bourdeaux. Population, including the neighbouring village of Le Mas, 3000.

AIRE, or ARIEN, a strong town of France, department of the Pas de Calais, on the river Lys, 22 miles S. Dunkirk.

AIRON, a river of France, department of the Nièvre, which falls into the Loire.

AIRTH, a small town of Scotland, in the county of Stirling, on the Forth. It has an inconsiderable harbour. 8 miles from Stirling.

AIRVAUX, a town of France, department of the Deux Seves. Population 2070.

AISLINGEN, a town of Bavaria. Population 1170. 4 miles S. Dillingen.

AISSE, or AINE, a department of France, consisting of portions of the Isle de France, Champagne, and Picardy. Population 432,237.

AISSE, a considerable river of France, which joins the Oise, near Compeigne.

AITRACH, a tributary stream of the Iller.

AIX, an ancient city of France, formerly the capital of Provence, now in the department of the Mouths of the Rhone. It was founded by Caius Sextius Calvinus, a Roman general, 130 years before the Christian era, and received the name of Aque Sextor, from its famous springs. The number of its gates is eight. The streets are in general well lighted and paved, but dirty. It has a beautiful public promenade, and an elegant square. One of the sides is occupied by what is called the Palais, an old building, containing some spacious halls, formerly occupied by the parliament and other public bodies. It has also a town-hall and a cathedral, which is not without striking beauties. The chapel of Notre Dame de l'Esperance is much frequented by the pious Catholics. The monastery of Jacobins or Dominicans, would be one of the finest structures in Provence, were it completed. The mineral springs from which the town took its ancient name were accidentally discovered in 1704, when the medals, inscriptions, and other ancient monuments at that time dug up, confirmed the opinion of antiquaries as to their being the springs known to the Romans.

AIX, a town of Savoy, 12 miles N. Chambery, noted for warm baths. Population 1600.

AIX D'ANGULON (L.), a town of France, department of the Cher. Population 1230.

AIX, a town of France, department of Upper Vienne. Population 2160.

AIX-EN-OTHE, a town of France, in Champagne, department of the Aube. Pop. 1570.

AIX-LA-CHAPELLE, an old and well built town in the grand duchy of the Lower Rhine, situated between Juliers and Lieburg, on the left bank of the Rhine; included formerly in the circle of Westphalia. It is divided into the inner and outer town, and contained in 1807, 3060 houses, with 27164 inhabitants. Its manufactures, though they have greatly decreased, are still considerable. The most important are those of broad cloth (no less than 34 in number), chiefly from Spanish wool, and the needle works, by which many thousand individuals are supported. There are, besides, copper and brass works, with a thimble manufactory. The town contains four parish churches, and the collegiate church of St Adelbert, built by the Emperor Henry II. It had at one time 21 monasteries and convents, most of which are now suppressed. Among the other public buildings, the most remarkable are the town-house and the masquerade-room. Elegant private houses are to be met with in every street. Aix-la-Chapelle was long the favourite residence of Charlemagne, and for some time the capital of his empire; hence it was long customary to hold the coronation of the emperors of Germany in this town; and in the convent chapel are to be seen the imperial robes and regalia used at the coronation. Strangers are also shewn a statue of Charlemagne, a copy of the gospels written in golden characters, and an immense number of relics.

Aix-la-Chapelle is celebrated for its baths, which are seven in number, and issue from five distinct springs. In this city two celebrated treaties of peace have been concluded; the first in 1668, between France and Spain, and the second in 1748, between the different powers engaged in the war of the Austrian succession. Aix-la-Chapelle now belongs to Prussia. 25 miles N. E. Liege, 30 S. W. Cologne. Long. 5. 34. E. Lat. 50. 52. N.

AIZENAY, a town of France, department of La Vendee. Population 3500. 15 leagues N. W. Fontenay.

AKDASCH, a town of Persia, province of Schirvan, on the Kur. It has 300 houses.

AKHALA, a town of Turkish Armenia, 24 miles W. N. W. Erzerum.

AKHAR, a town of the Arabian Irak, on the Tigris, 30 miles N. W. Bagdad.

AKISKA, AGHALZTOTE, or GHALZTO, a province of Asiatic Turkey, in Armenia, on the south-west confines of Georgia. It derives its name from the chief town Akiska, situated on the river Kur, which is open, and without fortifications; but it has a very strong and lofty castle, which the Russians endeavoured in vain to take lately. Its inhabitants are of various nations, Armenians, Turks, Jews, and Christians; and carry on an active trade with Batuman, a port on the Black sea, 100 miles distant, and intermediate places. Besides mosques, it contains two churches for the Christians; and the Jews have a synagogue. Houses about 4000. 90 miles N. N. W. Erivan.

AKKER, a town of Syria, in the pachalic of Tripoli, on the river Akker, 66 miles N. W. Damascus. Long. 36. 10. E. Lat. 34. 32. N.

AKLAT, a town of Kurdistan, on the Lake Van. Long. 41. 22. E. Lat. 38. 35. N.

AKSEKI, a town of Asiatic Turkey, in Carmania, consisting of 150 houses. 60 miles N. E. Konieh. Long. 34. E. Lat. 38. 57. N.

AKSHEIR, a town of Asiatic Turkey, in Natolia. It exports to Smyrna fine carpets, wool, wax, gum tragacanth, and galls. Akshair was taken by Famerlane in 1402. 60 miles S. S. E. Karahissar.

AKSHEULUR, a town of Natolia, on the Black sea, 90 miles E. Constantinople.

ALA, a market town on the Adige, in the principality of Trent. Population 4000.

ALABAMA, a considerable river in East Florida. Also said to be the name of a branch of St Mary's river.

ALABAMA, one of the United States, bounded N. by Tennessee, E. by Georgia, S. by Florida and the gulf of Mexico, W. by Mississippi. A large portion of the state still belongs to the Indians. Square miles, 44,000. Population in 1810, less than 10,000; in 1816, 29,663; in 1818, 70,406. Cahawba is the seat of government. The land on the coast is low and level; as you proceed into the interior it becomes hilly, and in the north it is in some places mountainous. The soil is generally fertile, particularly on the banks of the rivers. The lands between the Tombigbee and Alabama rivers, are among the best in the state. Cotton is the staple production, and the great article of export. Blakely and Mobile are the principal ports. The Creek Indians occupy the south-east part of the state; the Cherokees the north-east, the Choctaws the south-west, and the Chickasaws the north-west.

ALABAMA RIVER, a river of the United States, in Alabama, is formed by the union of the Coosa and Tallapoosa, and flowing S. S. W. unites with the Tombigbee to form Mobile river, 45 miles from the head of Mobile bay.

ALABASTER, or ELEUTHERA, one of the Bahama or Lucayo islands.

ALAGON, a town of Spain, in Arragon, 12 miles N. W. Saragossa.

ALAGON, a river of Spanish Estremadura, which falls into the Tagus, near Coria.

ALAGORE, a town of Hindostan, in the Mysore, 23 miles E. Seringapatam.

ALAIS, a town of France, in Lower Langue-doc, on the Gardon, 13 leagues N. Montpellier. Population 7002. It carries on some trade in grain, olives, oil, wine, and silk.

ALAN, a river of England, in Cornwall, which falls into the sea 2 miles below Padstow.

ALANCHIE, a town of France, department of the Cantal. Population 2500.

ALAND, an island in the Baltic, not far from the point of meeting of the gulfs of Bothnia and Finland, and lying between the coasts of Finland and Upland in Sweden. The channel which runs between it and the coast of Finland, is of dangerous navigation. It is about 40 English miles long, and 30 broad. Population 11,260. It was ceded to Russia in 1809. Long. 20. E. Lat. 60. 18. N.

ALAND'S BAY, on the S. coast of Ireland, between Waterford harbour and Tramore bay.

ALARA, a town in the island of Majorca, with 2400 inhabitants.

ALARSAC, a town of France, department of the Correze. Population 3170.

ALBA, a town of Italy, in Piedmont, on the river Tanaro. It contains a cathedral, and 3 parish churches. Population 9650. 18 miles S. E. Turin.

ALBACETE, a trading town of Spain, in the province of Murcia. Population between 7000 and 8000. 80 miles S. W. Valencia.

ALBAN, St., a town of France, in Langue-doc. Population 2109.

ALBANIA, a large province in European Turkey, bounded N. by Dalmatia and Servia, E. by Macedonia and Thessaly, S. by Livadia, and W. by the Adriatic, along with that part of the Mediterranean called the Ionian sea. It thus comprehends, in its widest acceptation, the ancient Illyria and Epirus, and is at present included in the Turkish government of Romania.

ALBAURO, a well built town of Italy, in the kingdom of Lombardy.

ALBAURO, a small well built town of Italy, in the Campagna di Roma, 14 miles S. S. E. Rome.

ALBAN, St., a town of England, in Hertfordshire, on the Great Ouse. It contains the principal of three streets, divided into three parishes, with a parish church, and a convent, St. Michael's, and St. Helen's. It carries on a considerable trade, and has a manufacture of straw-plaiting. A market is held weekly. It returns two members to parliament, having been incorporated by Edward IV. in 1553. In the years 1451 and 1481 two engagements were fought in the neighbourhood, between the adherents of York and Lancaster. Population 4472. 21 miles N. N. W. London.

ALBAN'S HEAD, St., a cape of England, on the coast of the county of Dorset. Long. 2. 10. W. Lat. 50. 4. N.

ALBANY, a city of the United States, in Albany county, New York, on the W. bank of the Hudson, 160 miles N. New York, 30 N. Hudson, 170 W. Boston, and 230 S. Montreal. Population 9356. It is the seat of government, and in population, wealth, and commerce, the second city in the state. It is finely situated for commerce, at the head of sloop navigation on the Hudson; and the canals now in progress will soon connect it with Lake Champlain and Lake Erie. Among the public buildings are a stone state-house, and an elegant academy of red freestone, a jail, 4 banks, and 11 houses for public worship.

ALBANY, a river of North America, which falls into James' bay, Long. 84. 30. W. Lat. 51. 30. N.; runs N. E. through a chain of small lakes, from the S. end of Winnipeg lake. The British fort is on the river, in Long. 87. 30. W. Lat. 53. 10. N.

ALBARRAZIN, a strong town of Spain, in the province of Arragon, on the Guadalquivir. Population 1800. 100 leagues E. Madrid.

ALBEMARLE, a central county of the United States, in Virginia. Chief town Charlottesville. Population 18,268.

ALBEMARLE SOUND, in the United States, on the coast of North Carolina, in the N. E. part of the state, is 60 miles long from E. to W. and from 4 to 15 wide. It communicates with Pamlico Sound and the ocean by several narrow inlets, and with Chesapeake bay by a canal cut through Disual Swamp.

ALBENQUE, a town of France, department of the Lot. Population 1920.

ALBERCHE, a river of Spain, province of Toledo, which joins the Tagus, near Talavera de la Reyne.

ALBIN, or AUBIN, a town of France, department of the Aveyron. Population 3180. Long. 2. 20. E. Lat. 44. 31. N.

ALBION, NEW. A large indefinite track of the N. W. coast of America is thus called. This designation was first given by Sir Francis Drake to California, with part of the adjoining coast, when he first took possession of it. But recent geographers, and among others Humboldt, limit the denomination of New Albion to that part of the coast which extends from Lat. 43. to 48. N.

ALBSINGEN, a considerable village of Switzerland, in the canton of Fribourg.

ALBONA, a town of Istria, in the gulf of Carnaro, near the mouth of Arsa river. 16 miles E. Rovigno.

ALBOR, a town on the coast of Portugal, in the province of Algarve, 3 miles E. of Lagos.

ALBON, a small island of the North Atlantic ocean, one of the Bahamas.

ALBONK, a town and parish of England, in the county of Wilts. Population 1585.

ALBOVERNE, a small seaport of Morocco. Long. 2. 54. E. Lat. 35. 16. N.

ALBERT, a town of France, department of the Landes. Population 1000.

ALBUFEIRA, a town of Portugal, province of Algarva. Population 1900.

ALBUQUERQUE, a town and castle in Spanish Extremadura, on the frontiers of Portugal. Population 5500. 20 miles N. Badajoz.

ALBUQUERQUE, a town of Mexico, on the Rio del Norte. Population 6000.—It is also a village in Mexico.

ALBY, a village of England, county of York, 10 miles N. E. York.

ALBY, or ALBI, a town of France, department of the Tarn, on the left bank of Tarn river, 15 leagues N. E. Toulouse. Population 9900. The promenade La Lée is very beautiful. The archiepiscopal palace on the banks of the Tarn, affords an extensive prospect. The manufactures are linen, woolen, baize, and serge.

ALCALA DE GIBVERT, a town of Spain, province of Valencia. Population 3000.

ALCALA DE HENARPE, a town of Spain, in Toledo, 15 miles E. Madrid. Population 5000. It contains 3 parish churches, 28 cloisters, 4 hospitals, and a university.

ALCALA LA REAL, a town of Spain, in Andalusia, 9 leagues from Jaen, with a rich abbey. Population 8000. Long. 4. 10. W. Lat. 37. 43. N.

ALCANTARA, a town of Portugal, in Estremadura, on the Tagus, near Lisbon.

ALCANTARA, a fortified town in Spanish Extremadura, on the Tagus, which is here crossed by an old Roman stone bridge. The trade is in wool and cloth. Population 3000. 130 miles W. S. W. Madrid.

ALCANTARA, or ALCANTARILLA, a town of Spain, in Seville, near Guadalquivir river.

ALCANTARA, a thriving town of Brazil, in Maranham, opposite the island of Maranham.

ALCARAZ, a town of Spain, in La Mancha. Population 3300. 105 miles S. S. E. Madrid.

ALCISTER, a town of England, in Warwickshire, at the confluence of the AIn and Arrow. Population 2229. 102 miles N. W. London.

ALCKMAER, or ALCKMAAR, the chief town in North Holland, neatly built and well fortified. It has a trade in corn, cheese, butter, flower-roots, and seeds. It was taken by the British in 1708. 24 miles N. W. Amsterdam.

ALCORTYNS, a town and castle of Portugal, province of Algarva. Population 1000.

ALCOY, a town of Spain, in Valencia, with flourishing manufactures of cloth, &c. Population 10,000.

ALCUDIA, an ancient town of Majorca, opposite to Minorca. Population 1000.

ALCUDIA DE CURIT, a town of Spain, in Valencia, with about 2000 inhabitants.

ALD, a river of England, in Suffolk.

ALD, a river of Siberia, which rises on the confines of China, and joins the Lena, in Long. 122. 30. E. Lat. 62. 22. N.

ALDBOROUGH, a seaport town of England, in Suffolk, on the Ald. It is a corporation and sends two members to parliament. Population 1212. 94 miles from London.

ALDBOROUGH, a town of England, West Riding of Yorkshire, on the Ouse. It returns two members to parliament. Pop. 484.

ALDRAY, a village and parish of England, in the county of Hertford. Population 676.

ALDRA NUEVA, a village of Spain, with 1500 inhabitants, on the frontiers of Leon.

ALDENHAM, a village and parish of England, in Hertfordshire. Population 1399.

ALDERBURN, a town of England, county of Wilts. Population 588.

ALDERNEY, an island of Great Britain, in the English channel, 7 miles from Cape la Hague, in Normandy. The intermediate channel, called the Race of Alderney, is of dangerous navigation in stormy weather. The island forms part of a chain extending to the Chalks, whereon a light-house has been erected lately. Population in 1811, 1300. 18 miles N. E. Guernsey.

ALDSTONE MOOR, a town and parish of England, in Cumberland, on a hill, at the bottom of which is the river Tyne, crossed by a stone bridge. About 1100 men are employed in its lead mines. Population 5699. 19 miles from Penrith.

ALLON, a town of Lower Normandy, capital of the department of the Orne. The suburbs are St. Blaise, Casau, Mont-sor, La Barre, and Laneret. Population 13,234. Its trade is in cloth, in linen, coarse and fine, but particularly in point-lace. It has extensive tanneries, glass-houses, and smelting-houses. It has four gates, and was once fortified; but only part of the wall now remains, and a large and strong castle, in which is a square tower, 150 feet in height. 35 leagues S. W. Paris.

ALFENTJO, the largest province in Portugal, bounded north by Estremadura and Beira, east by the Spanish frontier, south by Algarva, and west by the Atlantic. Population 339,368.

ALEPPO, a city of Syria, capital of a pachalic of the same name, whose limits are not explicitly defined to Europeans. It is situated on 8 small hills, and is intersected by the river Kowick. The city itself is not above three miles and a half in circuit, and is surrounded by an ancient strong stone wall and ditch; but including the suburbs, the whole is about 7 or 8 miles in compass. The wall is flanked by frequent towers, but the fosse is partly filled up with rubbish, or occupied by kitchen gardens, and the city being commanded by heights, is not defensible as a military post. It has nine gates, all known by different names. Aleppo is esteemed the fourth city of the Ottoman empire, being exceeded only by Constantinople, Cairo, and Damascus. In regular arrangement of the streets, however, and interior elegance of the houses, as also in cleanliness, the others seem not to be compared to it. In general it is well built, the houses of the opulent consisting of white stone. The streets are for the most part broader than usual in the east, though appearing gloomy from the height of the walls on each side. They are well paved, and have two commodious foot-paths raised six inches high. Almost all the houses are surmounted by terraces, separated by purple walls, except those having domes; and on these terraces the inhabitants sleep during summer. The seraglio or palace of the pacha is spacious, with magnificent gates. A distinct quarter of the city is allotted to Jews, and the Europeans have another. Mosque an enormous in Aleppo, 700 feet in circumference, but none have more than a single minaret or steeple. The members of the Greek Armies, Syrian, and Maronite communion, have each a church, and the Europeans formerly had four small convents, but in the year 1807 there was only one, containing 9 Italian monks. About 20 Christians are in the city, spacious quadrangular edifices, one to six high, are dispersed through the city and coffee-houses, with a fountain in the middle and a gallery for musicians. Pop. 200,000 chiefly Turks and Arabs, among them are 80,000 Christians, and 7000 Jew. Women are not seen in the streets of Aleppo at dusk. Its manufactures are of silk and cotton. The produce of Aleppo exports consists from Antioch, Meidin, Chio, and Antil, osanabughs from Aleppo and Damascus, and printed cottons from Diarbekir, also galls, different drugs, and copper, and a variety of other articles. The exports from Europe are cloths, Lyons stuffs, and bonnets after the fashion of France, from France, maces, indigo, tea, sugar, paper, soap and great quantity of coral ornaments. Four caravans annually proceed through Natcha to Constantinople, others arrive from Bagdad and Bassora, with coffee brought from Mecca on the Red sea, round the Persian gulf, as also muslins and shawls from India. Aleppo is liable to the plague, and other serious maladies. It was nearly overthrown by an earthquake in 1822, in which it is said that about 25,000 persons perished. 70 miles S. E. Alexandretta, 234 N. Damascus. Long 37 16. E. Lat 36. 11. N.

ALECHAM, or AYLCHAM, a town and parish of England, in Norfolk county, near Thym river. Population 1835 12 miles N. Norwich.

ALEXANDRIA, or ALEXANDRIA, a strong town, with a citadel, on the Tanaro, in Upper Italy. It is the see of a bishop, and contains a cathedral, 12 parishes, 2 collegiate churches, 17 monasteries and nunneries. Population 35,216. 88 miles S.W. Milan.

ALESSANO, a town of Naples, in Terra d'Otranto, 300 miles E. S. E. Naples.

ALEUTAN, or ALEUTIAN ISLANDS, a chain of islands, amounting to 40, in the North Pacific ocean, stretching from the peninsula of Kamtschatka, in Asia, to Cape Alaska, in North America, comprehended under the general name of Islands, in Asiatic Russia.

Behring's island, Astor, and Oupishka, are the largest. Long. 168. to 195. E. Lat. 54. N. Only a few are inhabited.

ALEXANDRIA, a county of the Illinois, at the angle between Ohio and Mississippi rivers.

ALEXANDRETTA, or SCANDARON, a seaport of Syria, at the south-east part of a bay in the Mediterranean. It is now reduced to a village of 185 houses. 70 miles N.W. Aleppo.

ALEXANDRIA, a village of Scotland, in Dumfriesshire, 4 miles N. Dumfries.

ALEXANDRIA, a town of Russia, in Cherson, 70 miles W. Katerinopolis. It is the name of various small places throughout Russia.

ALEXANDRIA, a large and celebrated city, the ancient capital of Egypt, founded in the year 331 A.C. by Alexander the Great, and which, under the dynasty of the Ptolemies, reached such a height of glory, who placed their glory in commerce and the sciences, made great progress in population in splendour. They erected an island opposite to the mouth of the harbour, Island of Light, which was a beacon of the wonders of the ancient world. Alexandria then grew to the commerce of India the grand object of ancient and modern navigation. It was also the seat of the centre of science connected with mathematics, astronomy, geography, and was illustrated by the famous library, surpassing all others of which antiquity could boast which was founded there by Ptolemy Philadelphus. Even after its subjection to the Roman empire, Alexandria scarcely lost any of its splendour. It continued also to be the channel by which the commodities of India, Arabia, and Eastern Africa, were transported to Europe. Alexandria, however, received a fatal blow, when, in 640, it was reduced by the caliph Omar, and subjected to the Syrian yoke, under which it continued to decline, and the discovery of a passage to India by the Cape of Good Hope gave the final blow to its importance and trade. Alexandria is situated at the western extremity of the Egyptian coast, upon the borders of the Libyan desert, to which it may almost be said to belong. It lies upon a long and narrow neck of land, between the sea and the lake Mareotis. It communicates with the Nile by a canal, commonly called the canal of Cleopatra. It is divided into the new and old town, the latter of which is incomparably the most extensive. It is partly inclosed within walls, which are about 8 miles in circumference. They are evidently of Sarracenic structure, of great thickness and solidity, and flanked by 100 towers; but the space which they enclose forms only a small part of the ancient city of the Ptolemies, whose ruins can be distinctly traced over more than 3 times that circuit. Amid this total wreck of ancient grandeur a few objects only rise distinguishable from the surrounding desolation. Of these the most remarkable by far is that called "Ptolemy's Pillar." The height has been estimated at 117 feet but appears by more exact measurements, not to exceed 24 or 26. It is composed of 3 pieces of the finest granite, one of which serves for the pedestal, the other for the shaft, and the third for the capital. The mean diameter is 7 feet 9 inches, so that the entire contents of the column may be estimated at 6000 feet. The next most remarkable object consists of the two obelisks, one thrown down and the other standing, vulgarly called Cleopatra's Needles. Their height, which is equal, is said to be 58 feet 6 inches, and the breadth of each side of their base 7 feet. They are composed each of a single block of granite, and entirely covered with hieroglyphics. A more useful, and even more magnificent labour, consisted in the reservoirs with which ancient Alexandria was supplied with water. The construction of these excavated the whole ground upon which that city stood. A conduit, communicating with the canal of Cleopatra, extended the whole length of the city. When this was judged to be filled by the overflows of the Nile, the chiefs of the city went in great ceremony to open it, and admit the water into the cisterns. These reservoirs, which were formerly very numerous, are now reduced to half a dozen, which, however, are sufficient for the reduced consumption of the city. The catacombs begin at the extremity of the old city, and extend along the coast: they consist of small sepulchral grotto cut in the rock, which is a soft calcareous substance; the interior of the galleries is plastered with mortar, difficult to break; each cavity contained three coffins piled over each other. Alexandria, even in its state of decay, is still to Europeans the most interesting of the cities of Egypt. It is built chiefly along the coast, and occupies only a small portion of the space inclosed within the Saracenic walls. Alexandria, says a modern traveller, now exhibits very few marks by which it could be recognised as one of the principal monuments of the magnificence of the conqueror of Asia. Its houses, like all those of the Levant, have flat terraced roofs; the place of windows is supplied by apertures which themselves are almost entirely obstructed by a projecting wooden lattice, through which the light can scarcely penetrate. The streets, narrow and awkwardly disposed, have neither pavement nor police; the eye of the traveller is arrested by no public nor private edifice; and, but for the ruins of the old city, there would be nothing to attract a moment's attention. The population of modern Alexandria has been variously estimated. Some have carried it as high as 20,000, while others assert that the stationary numbers cannot exceed 5000; in addition to which, however, there is a continual resort of strangers from all quarters of the world. The basis of the population consists of Turks, Copts, and Jews. Long. 30. 5. E. Lat. 31. 16. N.

ALEXANDRIA, a county of the United States, district of Columbia. Pop. 8552.

ALEXANDRIA, a city and port of entry of the United States, in the district of Columbia, on the west bank of the Potomac, 7 miles south of Washington. Pop. in 1810, 7327. It has a commodious harbour, and trades extensively in flour.—It is also the name of various other townships.

ALEXANDROVSKAIA, a fort of Russia, on the Dnieper, 114 miles N. E. Cherson.

ALEXANDROW, the chief town of a circle in Vladimir, Russia. 48 miles E. Moscow.

ALEXANDROWKA, the name of several small towns of Russia, in Cherson, Ekaterinoslav, Tambov, &c.

ALEXOPOL, the capital of a circle in Pultawa, Russia, 30 miles S. of Pultawa.

ALVARO, a town of Spain, at the conflux of the Alama and Ebro. Population 4700. 9 miles S. W. Tudela.

ALVAYATES, a fortified place of Portugal, 150 miles N. E. Lisbon.

ALFELD, a town of Hanover, on the river Leine. Population in 1800, 2076.

ALFORD, a town of England, in Lincolnshire. Pop. 1506. 30 miles E. Lincoln.

ALFORD, a village of Scotland, in Aberdeenshire, 23 miles N. W. Aberdeen. Pop. 820.

ALGETON, a market town and parish, of England, in Derby, in which stockings and earthen-ware are manufactured. Population 4689. 14 miles W. Derby.

ALGUEVA, or ALGABIA, the south province of Portugal, bounded on the west and south by the Atlantic. Population 96,000.

ALGUESI, or ALGUESIA, a town of Spain, in Valencia, 18 miles S. Valencia.

ALGEZIRAS, a maritime town of Spain, in Andalusia, in the gulf of Gibraltar, between Cape Algeiras and the rock of Gibraltar. Population about 4500. 7 miles W. Gibraltar.

ALGHISE, a town of Upper Italy, in the Lombardo-Venetian kingdom, on Savarona river. Population 3000.

ALGERIE, a territory of Northern Africa, forming one of the principal of the Barbary states. It is bounded on the N. by the Mediterranean, on the W. by Morocco, from which it is separated by the desert of Agades, on the E. by Tunis, and on the S. by the Atlas, which separates it from the Bled-el-Jeride, or Country of Dates. It extends from about 8. 30. E. to 1. 30. W. long. or 490 geographical miles, E. to W. The breadth from N. to S. is very varying and indefinite; but there are few points at which it extends inland much more than 100 miles. It comprehends the greater part of the Numidia and Mauritania Tingitania of the ancients.

The territory of Algiers is traversed by branches of the great mountain chain of Atlas, particularly those called Lawat and Ammer, inhabited by two Arab tribes of the same name. These mountains are covered nearly to the summit with vineyards and forests. The mountain of Jurjura, which extends about 60 miles in a S. E. direction from Algiers to the interior, is of a much greater elevation, and covered with snow during the greatest part of the year. It may probably be considered only as another branch of the general chain. From these mountains descend numerous streams. The soil is excellent, and produces wheat and barley, and all the fruits and vegetables of Europe. It contains mines of lead and iron. Near the lake of Marks is a solid mountain of salt; and the lake, when it dries up in summer, leaves its bed deeply incrustured with it. The salt pits near Arzew are about 6 miles in compass. The manufactures of Algiers are very inconsiderable. They consist of silk, particularly sashes and handkerchiefs, and in carpets, and a coarse kind of linen. The exports are coral, wool, bees' wax, ship timber, ostrich's feathers, grain, pulse, hides, goat and sheep skins, camel's hair, cattle, sheep, of the annual value of £42,175. The imports consist of European manufactures and colonial produce. Linens, muslins, and hardware, are prominent articles. In this kingdom, as in the rest of Barbary, the towns are inhabited by Moors, Jews, and Turks, with a few Europeans. The plain country is chiefly in possession of the Arabs, and the mountains are inhabited by a hardy race, called Brebers, or Berebers.

Algiers is divided by Dr Shaw into three provinces. 1. The most western, or that of Tlemcen or Tremecen, which borders immediately on Morocco. The principal towns are Tlemcen and Oran. 2. Titterie, or Algiers proper, which forms the central province, and contains the capital and Boujeiah. 3. Constantina, or the western province, a very fertile region, which formerly belonged to Tunis, but has been wrested from that state by the Algerines. Its principal towns are Constantina and Bona.

ALGERES, a large and celebrated city, capital of the country of the same name. It is situated upon the coast of the Mediterranean, and on the declivity of a hill, on which the houses rise gradually in the form of an amphitheatre, and terminate nearly in a point at the summit. It is not above a mile and a half in circuit; but the population is large in proportion to the ground which it covers; for every house is three stories high, and occupied by several families. The streets are very narrow, and run from the top of the hill towards the sea, or from S. to N. The largest street is 1900 paces in length, but not above 12 feet wide. In this street are situated the mansions of the opulent, the warehouses of the principal merchants, the markets for corn, bread, meat, fish, &c. The fronts of almost all the houses are supported by rafters, extending from one to another across the street. The houses, in white in architecture is here so great, that the outside and inside of all the houses, mosques, and public edifices, are rarely washed once a year. The roofs are flat, and the sides fenced by a brick wall, about three feet high; and where the height of the houses is great, a communication is formed between them, so that the inhabitants can walk from one to another siderable distance, and can perform visits along the tops of the houses. The population is reckoned by Dr Shaw at 100,000; metans, 15,000 Jews, and 2000 Christian slaves.

Algiers has been supposed to be the ancient Iconium; but it does not contain any antiquities of importance. Of modern buildings, the largest are the dey's palace and the seraglio of his favourite wife. They are both of great magnitude, and adorned with marble pillars of curious workmanship. There are 10 great mosques, and 50 smaller ones. The finest is the new mosque, begun by the dey about 1790. It is 60 feet by 40, three stories high, and supported by pillars of white marble, imported from Genoa. The walls are built of white stone, brought from the ruins of Oran; and one of the principal employments of Christian slaves consisted in dragging them from the mole. The city is entirely destitute of fresh water, and the inhabitants at one time depended entirely upon the supply from rain. Aqueducts have been since constructed, which supply water from 150 fountains. The city is surrounded by a wall about a league in circumference; it is 12 feet thick, 30 feet high towards the land side, and 40 feet towards the sea. There are also four castles; but all these fortifications on the land side are of little avail, and it is the harbour only that can be considered as well defended. This harbour is a work of immense labour. It is formed by two moles, one running directly N.; the other N. E., and meeting at an island called the Lantern. It is 130 fathoms long, 80 broad, and 15 feet deep. It is unsafe, and vessels lying along it must be strongly fastened by cables. The entrance is defended by a round castle and several batteries, the guns of which are of brass, well mounted, and in good condition. The government is a tumultuous and ill-regulated despotism. The dey is elected by the soldiery, or rather, when a vacancy occurs, the boldest and most popular seizes the sovereignty, which he is either allowed to retain, or immediately strangled by the orders of a more fortunate rival. He possesses, so long as he enjoys his office, despotic power. But he holds his situation by rather precarious tenure; namely, the good will of a licentious soldiery, by whom he is frequently deposed and murdered.

Britain has had the glory of putting a period to the predatory expeditions for which this piratical state was so long famous. On the 27th August 1816, after a desperate conflict, the British fleet, under Lord Exmouth, succeeded in completely destroying the Algerine fleet and batteries; and the dey had no resource but to submit to whatever terms were imposed, which were the restoration of all his present captives without ransom, with the repayment of ~~sums~~ formerly received, and the abolition of Christian slavery in his dominions. Long. 3. 30. E. Lat. 36. 42. N.

ALGERIAN-HEAD, a promontory on the north-west coast of Scotland, Ross county. Long. 5. 44. W. Lat. 57. 46. N.

a town of Spain, in Arragon, 7 miles S. Teruel.

ALFARROA, a town in Portuguese Estremadura, on the Tagus, 16 miles N. E. Lisbon. Population 1360.

ALICANTE, or ALICANT (the Lucentum of the ancients), a maritime town of Spain, in Valencia. It stands on a sort of peninsula, in a bay of the Mediterranean, at the bottom of a rocky mountain, on the summit of which is the castle, now fortified in the modern style. The harbour is at some distance from the town, and is one of the best in Valencia. The exports from this place are barilla, pasarillas, anise, dates, saffron, figs, capers, brandy, raisins, silk, but especially wine and soap. Pop. 16,950. 37 miles N. E. Murcia, 75 S. Valencia. Long. 0. 24. W. Lat. 38. 35. N.

ALICATA, a fortified town of Sicily, 18 miles E. S. E. Girgenti.

ALICUDI, one of the Lipari islands, off the coast of Sicily, 15 miles W. Lipari.

ALIPER, a populous town of Hindostan, in Cochín. Pepper, grain, and timber, are exported. Lat. 0. 42. N.

ALISHUNG, a district of Afghanistan, in India, situated between 35. and 36. N. lat. and 63. and 69. E. long.

ALJUBARROTA, a market town of Estremadura, 10 miles S. Leiria. Population 1600.

ALJUSTREL, a neat town of Portugal, in Alentejo, with 1500 inhabitants.

ALLAHABAD, a province of Hindostan, between Lat. 22. and 26. N. and Long. 79. and 83. E.; bounded N. by the provinces of Oude and Agra, S. by Gundwana, E. by Bahur, and W. by Malway and Agra. Seven-eighths of the inhabitants are supposed to be Hindoos; the remainder Muhometans. It produces diamonds, saltpetre, opium, sugar, indigo, cotton, grain, and fruit.

ALLAHABAD, an ancient city, and capital of the above province, at present the residence of the British judge and collector of the province. At two miles distance is situated, at the junction of the rivers Ganges and Jumna, the celebrated fortress of Allahabad, founded by the Emperor Akbar, in the year 1583, and one of the most esteemed places of Hindoo worship and ablution, to which, every summer, multitudes of pilgrims resort from all parts of India. The fort stands in Lat. 25. 27. N. Long. 81. 50. E., being, by the course of the Ganges, 820 miles from the sea. It was finally transferred to the English in 1801, along with the province.

ALLAN-SHEH, or CITY OF GOD, a town of Asiatic Turkey, in Natolia, situated on three or four hills, and exhibiting the remains of a wall. Here is a large cathedral, and 24 churches, only six of them in repair. The Greeks have a bishop and chief priest. The town is situated on one of the principal roads to Smyrna, whither a caravan goes and returns regularly. It is greatly frequented, especially by Armenian merchants. The coffee-houses and baths are much resorted to. There are about 300

Greek families. This city is the ancient Philadelphia, so liable to earthquakes. 30 miles S. E. Bart of Sardia, and five days journey from Smyrna.

ALLAINE, a town of France, in Brittany, near the Vilaine, with 4300 inhabitants.

ALLAN, a river of Scotland, which runs into the frith of Forth, 2 miles N. W. Stirling.

ALLAN, BRIDGE OF, a village of Scotland, situated on the river Allan.

ALLAN'S CREEK, a river of the United States, which enters the Genesee.

ALLEGHANY, a county of the United States, in New York, on Genesee river, bordering on Pennsylvania. Population 1942. Chief town, Angelica.—2d, Of Pennsylvania, at the junction of Alleghany and Monongahela rivers. Chief town, Pittsburg. Population 25,317.—3d, In Maryland, the north-west end of the state, on Potomac river. Chief town, Cumberland. Population 6909.—The name of several townships in Pennsylvania.

ALLEGHANY MOUNTAINS, in the United States, commence in the north part of Georgia, and running north-east nearly parallel with the coast of the Atlantic ocean, at the distance of 250 miles, pass through North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, and New York, and terminate near Hudson river. They divide the waters which flow into the Atlantic, from those which flow into the Mississippi. The Catskill mountains, at the north-east extremity, are the highest summits in the range. They do not rise in any part above the height of 3560 feet.

ALLEGHANY, a river in the United States, which rises in Pennsylvania, and at Pittsburg unites with the Monongahela, to form the Ohio. It is navigable to Hamilton, 200 miles above Pittsburg.

ALLEN, a river of England, which rises in Dorsetshire, and runs into the Stour.

ALLEN, a river of Wales, in Flintshire.

ALLEN, ISLE OF, a village of Ireland, county of Kildare, 5 miles N. E. Kildare.

ALLEN, a county of the United States, in Kentucky.

ALLENDALE, a parish of England, county of Northumberland. Population 4029.

ALLENDORF, a town of Germany, in the electorate of Hesse-Cassel, on the Werra. Population 2500.—Also of Hesse-Darmstadt, between Marburg and Giessen. Population 1030.—It is the name of several other small towns in Germany.

ALLENSTEIN, a town in East Prussia. Population 2000. 60 miles S. Königsberg.

ALLENSTOWN, a town of the United States, in Rockingham county, New Hampshire, 10 miles S. E. Concord. Pop. 346.—It is the name of several other townships and villages.

ALLEPPE, a town of Hindostan, on the Malabar coast, 40 miles N. Cochín. Pop. 13,000. Pepper and other spices are procured here for the East India ships. It is a missionary station.

ALLEN, a village of England, Somersetshire.
ALLEN, two townships of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Pop. 1488 and 1676.

ALLIER, a river in the heart of France, which falls into the Loire.

ALLIER, a department of France, divided into the arrondissements of Mont Luçon, Moulins, Gannat, and Palisse. Pop. 251,558.

ALLIGATOR, a river of the United States, in North Carolina, which runs through Alligator Swamp, into Allamakee Sound.

ALLIGATOR, an English fort in Hindostan, situated between the Ganges and the Jumna. Long. 78. 24. E. Lat. 27. 55. N.

ALLOA, a seaport town of Scotland, in the county of Clackmannan, situated on the north bank of the Forth, where that river is about 500 yards wide. The town is irregularly built. It has an excellent harbour, and adjoining to it a dry-dock, suitable for receiving large vessels; to the west of which is a ferry across the river, with good piers projecting down to low water mark. There are extensive collieries and distilleries in the neighbourhood. There is also a glass-house, where ordinary green glass bottles are made. Malt liquors are brewed here, which are in much repute. The imports are principally grain, limestone, ironstone, and goods from the Baltic. Population 5577. 27 miles N. W. Edinburgh.

ALLOWAY CREEK, a tributary of the Delaware, in the United States, in New Jersey.

ALMARI, a town of Spain, in the province of La Mancha, with 3000 inhabitants.

ALMANZA, or ALMANCA, a town of Spain, in Murcia, noted for a victory gained by the French over the allies in 1707. Population 6000. 54 miles S. W. Valencia.

ALMORA, a town of Spanish Castremadura, 12 leagues from Talavera de la Reyna. Population 1000.

ALMEIDA, one of the strongest fortresses in Portugal, in the province of Beira. 113 miles N. E. Lisbon.

ALMLOO, a town of Holland, in the province of Overijssel, 20 miles E. N. E. Deventer. Population in 1790, 2162.

ALMERIA, a rich maritime and episcopal town of Spain, in Granada, on the river and gulf of the same name, with a good harbour, and a castle. 54 miles S. E. Granada.

ALMERIA, a town of Mexico, in the province of Vera-Cruz. Long. 97. 30. W. Lat. 20. 18. N.

ALMODOVAR DEL CAMPO, a beautiful town, with a castle, in Spain, province of La Mancha. Population 3000. 18 miles S. Ciudad Real.

ALMONSBURY, a town of England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, situated on the river Calder, near Huddersfield. Pop. 5679.

ALMOND, two rivers of Scotland, one of which enters the frith of Forth at Cramond, 5 miles N. W. Edinburgh; the other rising in the Grampian hills, enters the frith of Tay.

ALMORA, capital of a district of the same name, in the north-east part of Hindostan. Long. 78. 43. E. Lat. 23. 35. N.

ALMURCIA, a town of Spain, in Granada. Population 3000. 30 miles S. S. W. Granada.

ALMURCIA, a town of Spain, province of Saragosa, 7 leagues from Saragosa. Pop. 3000.

ALMURCIA, a town of Spain, in La Mancha, 8 leagues from Manzanares.

ALNE, a river of England, which flows into the German ocean, at Alnemouth.

ALNWORTH, a town of England, in Northumberland, at the mouth of the river Alne. 5 miles from Alnwick.

ALNWICK, or ALN WICK, a town of England, in the county of Northumberland, situated on a declivity near the river Alne. There is a spacious square for a market-place, where a market is held weekly, and a large town-house ornamented with a tower and piazzas. Alnwick was formerly fortified, and vestiges of its walls and gates still remain. At the north entrance to the town stands Alnwick castle, an elegant mansion belonging to the duke of Northumberland, which is supposed to have been a strong hold in the time of the Romans. It is embellished with statues in various attitudes; and the chapel belonging to it has recently been ornamented after the Gothic fashion. At the south entrance to the town, a column has been erected, in honour of the late duke of Northumberland. There is a cross, called Malahide's cross, erected on the spot where Malcolm III. of Scotland is said to have received a mortal wound from a soldier, who came to offer to surrender to him the keys of the castle on the point of escape. The parish of Alnwick, which is chiefly engrossed by the town, contains 5927 inhabitants. 34 miles N. N. W. Newcastle, 310 N. London.

ALROSE, or ALROSE, a town of the Netherlands, in Flanders, on the Dender. Population 11,000. 15 miles N. W. Brussels.

ALROSE, a town of Holland, on the Rhine, between Laxden and Woerden. Pop. 2000.

ALRINGTON, a village and parish of England, in Devonshire. Population 1070.

ALPS, a long and stupendous ridge of mountains, which lie almost in the heart of continental Europe, and divide Italy from all its northern neighbours, France, Switzerland, and Germany. They stretch in the form of a crescent from the county of Nice through Provence, Dauphine, Savoy, Switzerland, the Tyrol, Trent, Brixen, Suabia, the electorate of Salzburg, Carinthia, Carniola, and the territory of the ancient republic of Venice. They begin near the mouth of the Var, on the gulf of Genoa; and after many windings and aberrations, terminate at the river Arsa, on the Adriatic. Their length is between 600 and 700 miles, their breadth very various. The principal subdivisions are the following:—the Maritime, the Cottian, the Greek or Grecian, the Pennine, the Rhodian, distinguished into the High Alps, the Lepontine, and the Rhodian proper; the Tyrolean and Tridentine, including those of Suabia, the Noric, the Carvian, and the Julian.

The Alpine mountains are composed of immense masses of rock, piled upon each other to a height which varies from 4000 to 12,000 feet, and are separated only by narrow valleys. The most rugged are those between Savoy and the Valais, in which Mont Blanc rears to lofty summit to the height of 15,500 feet, being the highest mountain in Europe. Another highly elevated peak is that of Mont Canis, 34 miles to the south of Mont Blanc. From the Pays de Vaud in Switzerland, about 1000 feet above the level of the sea, the tops of the Alps are seen gilded by the sun, three quarters of an hour after his setting. The summits of most of these mountains are covered with perpetual snow.

ALPS, the Saakan or Wirttemberg, a long and rugged chain of mountains, 70 miles in length, and from 15 to 20 in breadth, which separates the channel of the Danube from that of the Neckar, and occupies the south-eastern corner of the kingdom of Wirttemberg.

ALPS, LOWER, a department of France, formed of the north-east part of Provence. Extent 373 square leagues. Pop. 117,916.

ALPS, UPPER, a department of France, having north and east the Cottian Alps, which separate it from Piedmont. Extent 251 square leagues. Population 121,523.

ALRESFORD, a small market town of England, in the county of Southampton, consisting of two parishes, Old and New Alresford. Population 1661. Old Alresford is a little north.

ALREWAN, a village and parish of England, in the county of Stafford. Population 1192.

ALSACE, a province of France, now formed into the departments of the Upper and Lower Rhine; which see.

ALSEN, an island in the Baltic, between the island of Funen and the E. coast of Slewick. 18 miles long, and 9 broad. Population 15,045.

ALSFELD, a town of Germany, in Hesse, with 3020 inhabitants. 50 miles N. E. Frankfurt on the Maine.

ALSLEIM, a town of Germany, in Hesse. Population 1030.

ALSTEDT, a town and castle of Prussia, on the Saale. Population 1070.

ALSTON, a town of the United States, in North Carolina, on Little River, 20 miles W. Brunswick.

ALT, a river of England, which rises in Lancashire, and falls into the Irish sea.

ALTAI MOUNTAINS, a vast chain of mountains in Asia, rising in about 68, and terminating at East Cape, in 170 degrees E. long. Their height is computed at 10,730 feet.

ALTAMAH, or ALATANAH, a town of the United States, in Georgia. Long. 83. W. Lat. 33. 54. N.

ALTAMURA, a town of Naples, province of Bari, at the foot of the Appennines. Population 15,906.

ALTEA, a town of Spain, in Valencia, 24 miles N. E. Alicante.

ALTEN, a manufacturing town in the Prussian grand duchy of the Lower Rhine. Population 3300.

ALTENAU, a mining town of Hanover, in the middle of the Harz. Population 1100.

ALTENBERG, a small mining town of Saxony. Houses 200. 18 miles S. Dresden.

ALTENBRUCK, a well built town of Hanover. 27 miles N. W. Stade. Population 2600.

ALTENBURG, the capital of a principality in Upper Saxony. It has manufactures of cotton and wool, and a trade in corn and cattle. Population 9500. 20 miles S. Leipzig.

ALTENBURG, a town of Hungary, at the influx of the Leitha into the Danube. 40 miles S. E. Vienna.—The name of several small towns in Germany.

ALTENHEIM, a town of Baden, circle of the Kinzig, on the Rhine. Population 1300.

ALTENKIRCHEN, a town of Germany, in the Westerwald, with 100 houses. 15 miles N. N. E. Coblenz.

ALTENSTADT, a village of France, in Lower Alsace, on the Lauter. Population 1000.

ALTENSTADT, a small town in Lower Austria, 55 miles N. W. Vienna.

ALTENSTEDT, a town of Wirttemberg, on the river Nagold. Population 1400.

ALTE DE CHAON, a town of Portugal, in Alentejo. 84 miles E. N. E. Lisbon.

ALTENBURGSDORF, a town of Germany, in Upper Lusatia. Population 2600.

ALTENBURG, a town of France, department of the Upper Rhine. Population 1623.

ALTMOON, a town of Ireland, in the county of Tyrone.

ALTMOHL, a river of Franconia, which falls into the Danube at Kelheim, in Bavaria.

ALTON, a market town of England, in Southamptonshire, on the Wye. It has manufactures of woollen, silk, and worsted. Population 2499. 17 miles W. S. W. London.

ALTONA, or ALTENA, a large city, about two English miles west of Hamburg, on the Elbe, belonging to Denmark. Both the inland and foreign commerce here is considerable. Ship-building is an important branch of employment; and there are also manufactures of velvet, silk stuffs, calico, stockings, leather, gloves, tobacco, vinegar, starch, wax, and looking-glasses, with sugar refineries and brandy. The principal public establishments are an academy, a library, a house of correction, and an orphan-house.

ALTONF, a well built town in Switzerland, capital of the canton of Uri, near the river Reuss. Pop. 4000. 20 miles S. E. Lucerne.

ALTONY, a small town of Bavaria, in the circle of Rezat. 12 miles E. S. E. Nuremberg.

ALTRINGHAM, a township of England, in Cheshire. Population 2302.

ALTSTADT, a town of Wirttemberg, near Rotwell. Population 1600.

ALTURA, a village of Spain, in Valencia. Population 1510.

ALTZEY, a town of Germany, in the grand duchy of Hesse-Darmstadt, on the Selach. Population 3051. 23 miles N. W. Worms.

ALVA, a village and parish of Scotland, in Stirlingshire. Pop. 1150. 4 miles N.

ALVA DE TOMER, a town of Spain, province of Leon, 4 leagues S. S. E. Salamanca.

ALVANO, a town in Portuguese Estremadura, with 1900 inhabitants.

ALVARADO, an abundant river of Mexico, which runs into the gulf of Mexico, about 36 miles S. S. E. Vera Cruz.

ALVARADO, a town of Mexico, near the mouth of the above river.

ALVECHURCH, a town and parish of England, in Worcestershire, on the Worcester canal. Pop. 1413. 117 miles from London.

ALVETON, a town and parish of England, in the county of Stafford. Population 1103.

ALWEN, a river of North Wales, which runs into the Dee, 7 miles N. N. E. Bala.

ALYTH, a town and parish of Scotland, in Perthshire. It manufactures yarn and brown linen. Population 2669. 12 miles W. Forfar.

ALZIRA, or ALGECIRA, a fortified town of Spain, province of Valencia, on the Xucar. Its streets are narrow and crowded. Population 10,000. 20 miles S. Valencia.

AMALFI, or AMALPHI, a town of Naples, principality of Salerno. Population 2750. 10 miles S. W. Salerno.

AMAND, St., a fortified town in French Flanders, on the Scarpe, 3 leagues N. Valenciennes.

AMAND, St., a town of France, department of the Cher, on which river it is situated. It has iron-works, and some trade in corn, wine, &c. Population 5080.

AMAND, St., a town of France, in Languedoc. Population 3300.

AMAND, St., a town of France, on the Loire, in Languedoc. Population 2015.

AMAND, St., a town of France, in the Nivernois. Population 1500. There are several other small towns of this name in France.

AMANT-ROCHE-SAYNE, St., a town of France, in Auvergne, with 1880 inhabitants.

AMANT-TALLENDE, St., a town of France, department of the Puy de Dôme. Pop. 1715.

AMANTEA, a town of Naples, on the coast of Calabria Citra. Population 2700.

ANAPALLA, a town of South America, province of Nicaragua. This town gives name to a large gulf of the same name, 220 leagues S. E. Guatemala.

AMARANTE, a town of Portugal, in the province of Entre Douro e Minho, on the river Tamega. Pop. 4000. 30 miles E. N. E. Oporto.

AMASIA, a town of Asiatic Turkey, in the province of Natolia, intersected by the river Kizilirmak, winding at the bottom of the hills whereon it is built. The town is surrounded by mountains, and is commanded by a fort situated on a sharp pointed rock. This is an extensive and populous place, but the streets are narrow and dirty. Most of the houses are built of wood, but many are built of stone, and are covered with tiles. There is only one mosque, a fine edifice, with two lofty minarets of hewn stone, of which material the numerous baths are also constructed. Population 60,000 or 70,000. 30 miles E. Constantinople. Long. 28° 13' E. Lat. 40° 43' N.

AMASIA, a town of Asiatic Turkey, in Natolia, on a cape in the Black sea, 150 miles N. E. Constantinople.

AMARANT, MARANON, or ORIELANA, a town of South America, and one of the largest in Peru. It is formed by the united waters of the Tumbagunga and the Ucayali, and it is a doubtful question which of these two rivers ought to be considered as the main stream. The Tumbagunga takes its rise from the lake Lauricocha, in the kingdom of Peru, in Lat. 10° 29' S.; while the Ucayali is formed by the conjunction of the Apurimac and the Beni, the head waters of which are found in the 10th and 10th degrees of S. lat. Computing the windings of the river, its course will be found to extend to the prodigious length of more than 4000 miles. The mouth of the river is about 180 miles wide; the tide water is distinctly felt at Obidos, which is 400 miles from its mouth. Of the rivers which fall into the Amazons from the north, those most worthy of consideration are the Santiago, Morona, Pastaza, Tigre, Napo, Negro, Putumayo, Yapura, Yaguaripi, Curupatuba, and Yari; and to the south the principal streams which fall into it are the Guallaga, Ucayali, Cuchivara, Yahuarí, Yutay, or Yotau, Cavari, Madera, Topaia, Chingu, Guanapá, Muja, besides others of inferior note. Its banks are clothed with immense and impenetrable woods, which afford a haunt for tigers, bears, leopards, wild boars, and an infinite variety of venomous snakes and serpents. The waters swarm with alligators, some of which grow to the length of from 20 to 30 feet. The turtles are held in much esteem, and are reckoned the most delicious that are known. The neighbouring woods abound with a variety of birds of the most beautiful plumage, and with innumerable species. The current of the Amazons has great violence and rapidity, and its depth is unbottomable. The swellings and freshes which come on with the periodical rains, are usually very great; and when these happen, an extensive track of country for several hundred miles is laid under water. This great river falls into the ocean under the equinoctial line.

AMRATO, ASSIENTO DE, a town of Quito, on a river of the same name, 18 leagues from Quito. Long. 78° 25' E. Lat. 1° 14' S.

AMBAZAC, a town of France, in the Limousin, with 2800 inhabitants.

AMRELACHIA, a large Grecian village in Thessaly, on the Peneus, which carries on a flourishing trade in slaves and Turkish yarn.

AMBERO, the capital of what was the Upper Palatinato, near the river Vile, which runs through its centre, dividing it into the upper and lower towns. The houses are mostly of wood, but well built, and the streets are broad and clean. In the principal square stands the town-house, an old Gothic building, the splendid parish church of St. Martin, with valuable paintings, monuments, and other curiosities. There is here an academy and lyceum; also a well-endowed hospital, and several religious houses. A convent of nuns maintains a public school for young girls, and has a new and magnificent church. The other public buildings are the electoral (now royal) castle, the arsenal, the government buildings, where the colleges of justice and finances and their settings, and the mint, which is reckoned one of the finest buildings of the kind in Germany. It has manufactures of linen, cotton, wool, tobacco, and iron. There is also a great repository for sale. Population 9000. 32 miles N. Katisbon. Long. 11. 30. E. Lat. 49. 25. N.

AMBAJAYE-KAY, an island, 70 miles long, but narrow in the bay of Honduras. Long. 82. 38. W. Lat. 15. 30. N.

AMBAISE, a town of France, department of the Ain. Population 2850.

AMBAISE, a town of France, on the Dore, department of the Puy de Dome. It has manufactures of woollen stuffs, needles, &c. Population 6407. 27 miles E. Issire.

AMBAZEUSE, a small maritime town of France. Population 890. Lat. 50. 48. N.

AMBAZAT, a town of France, in the Tournaine, at the confluence of the Amasac and Loire. It has manufactures of woollen and silk stuffs, and hardware. Population 5660.

AMBAON, a town and district of Hindostan, in the territory of Arcot, 108 miles W. S. W. Madras. Long. 78. 50. E. Lat. 12. 51. N.

AMBOURAY, a town of France, in Burgundy. Population 1510.

AMBOY, or FRITH AMBOY, a city and post township of the United States, in Middlesex county, New Jersey, on a point of land at the union of Maritan river with Arthur Kill Sound, 35 miles S. W. New York. Population 815.

AMBOYNA, an island in the Eastern sea, the chief of the Molucca islands, all the others being dependent on its jurisdiction. It is between 60 and 60 miles in length, narrow, and deeply penetrated by two bays which divide it almost asunder into two peninsulas, called Letimor and Hitoe, the former twice the size of the latter. The great production of Amboyna is the clove tree, which has been carefully cultivated for centuries. The cloves are collected twice a year; the average quantity produced in the island exceeds 600,000 lbs.; in some years it amounts to a million. Coffee is plentiful in Amboyna; and the soil and climate are well adapted for the culture of indigo, which is there of fine quality. An abundant source of subsistence is found in the sago tree, whose stem this island still more useful than the sugar cane. Deer and wild boar are found in the woods; there are few sheep, and still fewer black cattle, scarcely enough being found to supply the European part of the population. Buffaloes, horses, and goats are kept; but of the various domesticated, none except those are indigenous to the country.

Amboyna is inhabited by four distinct races of people; the Ambonians, the Amboynese properly so called, Chinese, and Europeans. The Dutch expelled the Portuguese from Amboyna in 1606 or 1607; and the English in 1615 made an unsuccessful attempt to share in the advantage of their conquest. They contrived, however, to keep a factory here until 1622, when the Dutch governor, by unexampled treachery, got the whole members of it into his power, and put them to death by the most cruel tortures. Amboyna, after having enjoyed a long period of undisturbed repose, was conquered by a British force under admiral Rainer, in 1701. It was restored on the peace of Union in 1801, and re-captured in February 1810. The island was again delivered up by the treaty of Paris in 1814. Population estimated at 45,252. Long. 128. 16. E. Lat. 3. 40. S.

AMBOYNA, a town, the capital of the island of that name, situated in the peninsula of Letymor, in a deep bay. At the site of the town it is two miles across, with deep water. On the south shore of the bay, and in front of Amboyna, is Fort Vittoria, mounting six pieces of cannon, and containing several public offices. Between the covered way and the town there is an esplanade of nearly 350 yards in length, terminated by a row of handsome houses, and a double row of nutmeg trees, where the principal inhabitants reside. Amboyna is a clean and neat town, regularly built, in form of an oblong square; the streets, which are wide and unpaved, intersecting each other at right angles. Amboyna contains two well built churches, a town-house, consisting of two stories, an hospital, and a fine garden, with a menagerie of wild beasts in the neighbourhood. Long. 128. 16. E. Lat. 3. 40. S.

AMBOYER, three small islands on the coast of Benin. Lat. 4. 15. N.

AMBRÈRE, or AMBRÈRES, a town of France, department of Mayenne. Population 2230. 3 leagues N. Mayenne.

AMMOIX, St. a town of France, department of the Gard. Population 2250.

AMRONGA, a city of Hindostan, the capital of a country of the same name, at the foot of the Balaghaut mountains. The celebrated Aurangzebe died here in 1707. 60 miles N. E. Poona.

AMSELIA, a county of the United States, in Virginia. Population 10,591. Slaves, 7186. At the court-house is a post village, 58 miles S. W. Richmond.

AMSTIA, an island in the Atlantic, on the coast of East Florida, 7 leagues N. St. Augustine, at the mouth of St. Mary's river. Lat. 30. 28. N. It is 13 miles long, and 4 broad. Chief town, Fernandina.

AMERICA, one of the four divisions of the globe, and the largest of the whole, being in length nearly 10,000 miles, and on an average from 1400 to 2000 miles broad. It extends to the south as far as the 60th parallel, when it terminates at Cape Horn. Its boundary to the north cannot be exactly fixed, as we have no accurate delineation of its northern coast. But Mr Hearn, who was dispatched in 1776, by the Hudson's Bay company, to explore its limits in this direction, reached the Frozen ocean in Lat. 72. N. which is the most northern point of this great continent yet discovered. Mr Mackenzie, who, in attempting to penetrate by land to the Pacific ocean, was carried by the stream on which he embarked to the north, reached the same ocean in Lat. 69. N. about 24 degrees to the westward of the same point at which Mr Hearn arrived in 1771. This vast country extends from the 55th to the 165th degree of longitude west from Greenwich. It is washed by the two great oceans of the Atlantic and the Pacific, which separate it, the one from Europe and Africa, and the other from Asia; and it is divided into two large continents; namely, South and North America, by the isthmus of Darien, which, about Lat. 9. N. is little more than 30 miles broad. The continent of America, to the north and south, here forms the gulf of Mexico, covered with numerous islands, which have received the appellation of the West Indies, to distinguish them from the eastern parts of Asia, called the East Indies, with which, when they were first discovered, they were supposed to be connected. In America nature seems to have assumed a peculiar aspect of sublimity and magnificence. Whether we consider its mountains, its rivers, its lakes, its forests, or its plains, it appears to be distinguished in all these, its leading features, by a grandeur not to be found in the other parts of the globe. Of the mountains, the great range denominated the Cordillera de los Andes, extends from Cape Pillars, in the straits of Magellan, where the high land begins to appear, northwards to the isthmus of Darien. Passing through this isthmus, those mountains spread over the kingdom of New Spain, and continue their course through North America, under the name of the Rocky or Stony mountains, until they reach the northern limits of the American coast on the Frozen ocean. The mean height of the Andes has been estimated at 15,000 feet; but from all the ridge, mountainous summits arise to the prodigious height of 18,000 and 19,000 feet; and Chimborazo has been ascertained, by barometrical measurement, to attain the extraordinary elevation of 21,410 feet, equal to about four miles above the level of the sea. Those stupendous ranges of mountains give rise to streams of suitable magnitude; and owing to the peculiar configuration of the American continent, all its great rivers pursue a course inclining towards the east, and finally pour their waters into the Atlantic ocean, or into the inland seas connected with that ocean. From the Western or Pacific ocean the land of America rises suddenly and abruptly into the great ridges of the Andes in the south, and of the Rocky mountains in the north; so that in many parts it attains its highest point at about 200 or 300 miles from the western shore, while towards the eastern slopes more gradually, and frequently extends to the length of 1600 or 2000 miles, before it reaches the ocean. This vast declivity is diversified by partial ranges of mountains, and by valleys of suitable magnitude and compass; and those valleys being the recipients of all the superfluous moisture which falls on the higher grounds, become the channels of rivers, of which the magnitude is determined by the nature, extent, and climate of the country from which their waters are collected. By the peculiar disposition of the American continent, an immense range of country is allotted for the formation of its rivers; and hence in North America are formed the great rivers of the St Lawrence, the Missouri, and the Mississippi; and in the southern hemisphere, the Orinoco, the Amazons, and the Rio de la Plata. By these immense streams, the eastern declivity of America is chiefly drained of its waters. Between the Rocky mountains, however, on the west, and the Atlantic ocean to the east, the Alleghany range is interposed. These mountains, which are generally of the height of 3000 feet above the level of the sea, extend in a direction west of south from the 42d to the 34th degree of N. lat. approaching the sea in the state of New York, but gradually receding in their progress towards the south. The main ridge, which divides the Atlantic from the western waters, preserves throughout a nearly equal distance of 250 miles from the Atlantic ocean, and a nearly uniform elevation of 3000 feet above the level of the sea. The principal rivers formed in this space are the Delaware, the Susquehanna, the Potomac, the Roanoke, Peck, Santee, and Savannah, which fall into the Atlantic, and the Chatahouchee and the Alabama, which taking a southerly course, fall into the gulf of Mexico. Between the Alleghany mountains on the east, and the Rocky mountains on the west, the country is extended into an immense valley from 1200 to 1500 miles in breadth, which is chiefly drained of its waters by the Missouri from the west, and the great river Mississippi from the north, with their tributary streams, namely, the Illinois and the Ohio, which are the great western drains of the Alleghany mountains; besides various other inferior streams tributary in general to the above. These two rivers join together in 38. 55. N. lat., and 83. 57. W. long.; previous to which the course of the Missouri has been calculated to extend to the enormous length of 3096 miles. The length of the Mississippi is estimated at 2000 miles. After the junction of the Missouri and the Mississippi, they flow with an immense and rapid stream to the gulf of Mexico; and in this part of their course they receive from the Rocky mountains the Arkansas and the Red river, two immense streams, which receive a great number of smaller streams, and which, taking all their meanders into account, are estimated to run, the one 2000, and the latter about 1500 miles. The Rio del Norte, which falls into the gulf of Mexico, rises in a valley situated between two ridges of the Rocky mountains. On the western side of the Rocky mountains, the descent to the Pacific ocean extends from about 500 to 700 miles; and from Cook's inlet to the gulf of California, the only considerable rivers which flow from the mountains to the ocean are the Columbia and the Rio Colorado. The Unjiah, or Peace river, discovered by Mackenzie, is supposed, and apparently on probable grounds, to belong to the head waters of the Columbia. In the new kingdom of Granada, about the 2d degree of north latitude, we find the river Magdalena, which pursues its course in a northerly direction to the sea. To the eastward of the Andes the country is spread out into an extensive valley, which in the Caraccas is interrupted by ridges diverging irregularly in different directions; and in the centre of these interior mountains rises the far-famed Orinoco. To the south of the Orinoco, from the 2d degree of N. lat. to the 20th degree of S. lat., the Amazons or Marañon, with its tributary waters, cover almost the whole breadth of the American continent. Throughout the whole extent of this vast track of country, comprehending the eastern declivity of the Andes, to within some hundred miles of the western shore, and extending from north to south between 1630 and 1700 miles, not a single stream arises which does not finally bring the tribute of its waters to swell the vast stream of the Amazons. Towards the north, the waters of the Orinoco and the Amazons are in many parts divided by a slight ridge; and it is remarkable that the Rio Negro, one of the largest rivers, which falls into the Amazons, upon the north bank, sends off a branch in the same direction, which, under the name of the Cassiquiare, falls into the Orinoco, and thus unites those two immense streams. In addition to the Rio Negro, several important rivers fall into the Amazons from the north, such as the Rio Japura, the Ica, and the Rio Napu, each of which forms a channel, through which are drained off the waters of an extensive valley. The other rivers which fall into the Amazons from the south are the Guallaga, the Cenayale, considered by many to be the main river, the Jutay, the Jurua, the Purus, the Madera, the Topias, the Chingu, the Tocantins, and several others of inferior note. To the southward of the head streams of the Amazons, the American continent is drained of its waters by means of the great river de la Plata, which receives from the east the Pilcomayo, the Vermejo, the Salado, the Rio Dulce, &c. The Rio Francisco is the only considerable river which, from the 2d degree of N. lat. to the 35th degree of S. lat. is unconnected with the Amazons and the Plata, the two great rivers by which this portion of the American continent is drained of its waters. The Parana and the Uruguay fall into the Plata from the west. To the southward of these rivers are the first Desaguadero, or Rio Colorado, which falls into the Atlantic ocean, after a course of 1000 miles, and the Rio Negro or Cusu Leuvu, which falls into the Atlantic between the 35th and 36th degrees of S. lat. The immense lakes which are formed, especially in North America, far exceed in size any other collections of fresh water in the globe. Of the North American lakes, the most remarkable are Lake Superior, in length 381 miles, and in breadth 167; Lake Huron, 218 miles long from east to west, and 100 in breadth; Lake Michigan, 268 miles in length, and 55 in breadth; Lake Erie, 231 miles in length, and 63 in breadth; Lake Ontario, 171 miles in length, and 59 in breadth. In South America there are several remarkable lakes, namely, Maracaiibo and Valencia, both in the Caraccas, the first of which is 150 miles long, and 90 broad; Lake Titicaca, situated among the western ridges of the Andes, about 240 miles in circumference; Lake Xarayes, in the plains of Paraguay, during the rainy season, 330 miles in length, and 120 in breadth, and spread over such a flat country, that on account of its hollowness, it is only navigable for boats and small craft.

The most remarkable animals in America are the jaguar or American tiger, which in size and ferocity is little inferior to the Asiatic tiger; the cougar, which is not so thick and strong as the jaguar, but equally ferocious; the puma, or American lion, which is smaller than the lion of Africa; the bear, white and brown, which grows to a remarkable size, and is of uncommon ferocity; the panther, the leopard, the ounce, the lama, which is about four feet high, and five or six feet long, the neck like that of the camel, to which the animal itself bears a strong resemblance, excepting the hump on the back. The paco or vicuña is a species of animal subordinate to that of the lama, in the same degree as the ass is to the horse. Both the lama and the vicuña inhabit the most mountainous districts, and seem to be most vigorous and thriving where the climate is coldest. In addition to these animals, we find in America the deer of almost every species, the elk, the buffaloe, the antelope, the wolf, the beaver, the rabbit, the horse, the fox, the squirrel, the glutton, the wild-cat, the tiger-cat, the hedge-hog, the martin, the weasel, the lynx, the badger, the sloth, and generally all the other more ordinary animals which are common to Europe.

Of the birds in America, there is an infinite variety of species: 1st, The condor, which usually frequents the higher Andes, and which for size and strength, combined with rapidity of flight and rapacity, deserves the pre-eminence over all the feathered creation. According to Humboldt, the size of this bird across the wings is 9 feet, and its extreme length 3½ feet. Many of the birds which inhabit the northern and southern parts of America, are merely simple varieties of species that are found in Europe. Of this number are the geese, ducks, divers, plovers, herons, kites, falcons, blackbirds, pigeons, crows, partridges, and domestic fowls. Carrion vultures are very common, and fly in large flocks. They feed upon the numerous carcasses of the cattle slaughtered for the sake of their hides. They are also found extremely useful in devouring snakes and other vermin. Of eagles there are various sorts. A species of ostrich is also to be found in the Pampas, or plains, which stretch out to a vast extent on the east of the ridges of the Andes. It has a long neck, small head, and the bill flattened like that of the ostrich; but in other respects it more resembles the cassowary. It runs with such swiftness, that the fleetest dogs are thrown out in the pursuit. In the tropical regions of America, it is impossible to enumerate the different species of birds, far less to give a distinct account of each, particularly of the beauty of their various plumage.

Owing to the uncleared state of the country, which is overspread with forests, and in many parts with marshes, America abounds in a variety of disagreeable insects and reptiles. In the tropical regions this pest is most severely felt, to such a degree as continually to threaten the life and destroy the comfort of the inhabitants. Serpents abound of various kinds, particularly snakes. Of these, the most common, and at the same time the most poisonous, are the corales, or coral snakes, the cascabels, or rattlesnakes. There are also serpents of a larger species, similar to the Roa constrictor, found on several of the islands in the Indian ocean. Besides these serpents, America abounds in monstrous centipeds, which in Don Juan de Ulloa's voyage, are described as being a yard in length, and in breadth about five inches; in spiders of an enormous size, scorpions, uiguis, a species of insect which insinuates itself into the legs, the soles of the feet, or toes, and pierces the skin with such subtlety, that they are not perceptible until they have made their way into the flesh; flies of various sorts, mountain maggots, and bats of every species. America produces great varieties of butterflies, vying with each other in the beauty of their colours and decorations; and the mosquito, which is a source of continual torment, abounds in most parts; besides noxious insects of every species, and in countless variety.

The rivers are well stored with fish of every different species. They abound also with lizards and alligators, some of which grow to the enormous size of above 18 feet. A fish is found in the lakes of the Caraccas and Venezuela, namely the electric eel, possessing the singular faculty of stunning its prey by an electric discharge.

The climate of America is distinguished from that of all other hemispheres, by a pre-dominance of cold, inasmuch that countries which, by their geographical position, should be mild and temperate, and should produce all the fruits which are to be found in the south of Europe, are exposed to long and rigorous winters, during which they lie buried under snow; and these still further removed from the equator, corresponding to the countries in Europe which are the scenes of industry and improved cultivation, are almost uninhabitable from the extreme rigour of the season. Various causes have been suggested in order to account for this remarkable peculiarity of the American continent; and of these, one of the most obvious and striking is the general and prodigious elevation of the soil. Another cause is the uncultivated state of this continent, in consequence of which a great portion of it still continues one vast wilderness, covered with forests, marshes, frozen lakes, and snowy mountains. Throughout North America the north-west is the prevailing wind during the winter. This wind, sweeping over a desolate country, overspread with marshes, forests, frozen lakes, and mountains, buried under eternal snows, contracts an intense degree of cold, and in its progress northward, passing over a wilderness, where the ground is shaded by forests from the solar rays, its original character is in no respect changed. It slowly yields to the dominion of the climate, and retains its temperature long after it has penetrated into the regions of heat. To the prevalence of these northerly winds, therefore, to the extraordinary elevation of the ground, and to the uncultivated state of the country, the cold of the climate of North America seems chiefly to be ascribed.

America abounds in gold and silver, copper, quicksilver, iron, antimony, sulphur, nitre, lead, loadstone, and marbles of every sort and colour. It produces also precious stones, diamonds, rubies, emeralds, amethysts, granites, alabaster, rock crystal; and it formerly possessed pearl fisheries, which were prosecuted on the coast of the Caraccas with such fatal industry, that the shell-fish which contained the pearl was destroyed faster than it could be multiplied. Its fields produce every kind of grain, fruit, pulse, herbs, plants, and flowers, native to Europe, besides an immense variety of others peculiar to the climate, such as the cacao tree, the cinnamon, pepper, sarsaparilla, vanilla, scarlet dye, an infinite variety of balsams, Brazil and logwood, bark, sassafras, aloes, fine smelling incense, gums, berks, resins, and medicinal herbs. The number of cattle is incredible, and the breed of European horses and mules is held in great estimation.

America is distinguished into two great divisions, namely, North and South. North America consists, I. Of the four British provinces; namely, Upper Canada, Lower Canada, to which are annexed New Britain and the island of Cape Breton, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, to which is annexed St John's island and the island of Newfoundland. II. Of the territories of the United States, originally divided into 13 states, which have been subsequently increased to 20, by the addition of new states. Besides these, there are the three governments of Illinois, Michigan, and Louisiana, and the provinces of East and West Florida, which belong to Spain. III. Of the viceroyalty of New Spain, which is divided into 16 provinces or intendancies; namely, Merida or Yucatan, Vera Cruz, Oaxaca, Pve.

ble de los Angeles, Mexico, Valladolid or Madagascari, Guadalajara, Guanaxaco, Zacatecas, San Luis Potosi, Durango, Sonora, New Spain or New Mexico, and the Californias. South America contains, belonging to Spain, the viceroyalty of New Granada, including the kingdom of Terra Firme, the new kingdom of Granada, and the kingdom of Quito; the viceroyalty of Peru; the viceroyalty of the province of Buenos Ayres, or of the Rio de la Plata; the captainship-general and presidency of Chili. There is, besides, the territory of Guiana, occupied partly by the Dutch, French, and Portuguese; and Brazil, belonging to the Portuguese. Vast tracts, however, in the interior are but little known, being inhabited by barbarous tribes, who are scattered over all parts, and who live in the most savage state in the mountains, forests, and among the lakes and rivers.

AMERKATE, a celebrated fortress in the desert of Sindh, in India, the birth-place of the Emperor Akbar in 1542. Long. 70. 20. E. Lat. 26. 23. N.

AMERN, ST GEORGE and ST ANTONY, two neat villages of Germany, each with 1400 inhabitants. They lie E. N. E. Ruremonde.

AMERONGEN, a town of the Netherlands, in the province of Utrecht. Population 1020.

AMERPORE, a town in Hindostan, district of Mockwanpore, on the Bagmatty river. Long. 85. 26. E. Lat. 27. 31. N.

AMERSFORT, a fortified town in the Dutch province of Utrecht, on the Eem. It has manufactures of dimitics, bombacens, and other stuffs. Here is also a glass-house. Population 6584. 32 miles S. S. E. Amsterdam.

AMERSHAM, a town of England, county of Buckingham, near the river Colne. It consists of one long street, crossed by another of smaller dimensions. There is a church, two almshouses, a free school, and a neat town-house. Cotton, sacking, and lace, are the chief manufactures. It has a weekly market, and two annual fairs. Population 2612. 26 miles N. W. London.

AMESSURY, or AMBRESBURY, a town and parish of England, in the county of Wilts, on the Avon. It is now an inconsiderable place, noted for the ruins of an abbey, the vicinity of Stonehenge, and for having been the birth-place of Mr Addison. Population 810. 78 miles from London.

AMHARA, a division of Abyssinia, comprehending the provinces W. of the Tacazze.

AMHERST, the shire-town of Hillsborough county, New Hampshire, United States, 48 miles N. W. Boston.

AMHERST, a county of the United States, in Virginia, on James river. Population 10,548. Area, 2207. At the court-house is a post village. 130 miles W. Richmond.

AMIENS, formerly the chief town of Picardy, now the capital of the department of the Somme. It is situated on that navigable river, 14 leagues from the sea. The town has a very pleasant situation, streets for the most part broad, straight, and well built, regular squares, a good citadel, a much admired cathedral, about 600 houses, and by the latest enumeration nearly 40,000 inhabitants. They manufacture serges and other woollen stuffs. There are likewise manufactures of ribbons, linen, and green soap. The definitive treaty of peace between Britain and France was signed here on 25th March 1802. 10 leagues S. E. Abbeville.

AMLWCH, a seaport town of Wales, in the island of Anglesey, which has arisen from the state of a poor fishing town, in consequence of the opening of copper mines in 1708. It has a good port, which is an excavation from the solid rock. The mines, about 2 miles distant from the town, contain inexhaustible veins and masses of copper ore. Population 5292. 18 miles from Holyhead.

AMMERWEYER, a town of France, in Alsace, department of the Upper Rhine, containing 400 houses. 4 miles N. W. Colmar.

AMOI, a populous city of Asia, in Great Bukharia, on the left bank of the Jihon. 150 miles W. Samarcand.

AMOND, a river of Wales, in the county of Caernarthen, which falls into the Loughen.

AMORA, a town of the pachalic of Bagdad, on the Tigris, 120 miles S. E. Bagdad.

AMORBACH, a town of Germany, with 1500 inhabitants. 20 miles N. E. Heidelberg.

AMORGO, an island in the Greek archipelago. Long. 25. 50. E. Lat. 36. 53. N.

AMORGO PORLO, an island in the Archipelago, 6 miles W. Amorgo. Long. 25. 44. W. Lat. 36. 45. N.

AMORIA, a town of Asiatic Turkey, in Nattolia, on the Sakaria, 50 miles S. W. Angora.

AMOTALA, a considerable seaport on the north-north-east of Madagascar.

AMOU, a town of Hindostan, province of Coimbatore, 18 miles N. Darapornu.

AMOUR, Sr, a town of France, department of the Jura. Population 2800. 25 leagues N. E. Lyons.

AMPARAK, a town of Peru, 10 miles N. W. La Plata. Long. 67. 3. W. Lat. 10. 12. S.

AMPLEPUIS, a town of France, department of the Rhone. It has manufactures of linen. Population 3300.

AMPTHILL, formerly AMETULLE, a market town and parish of England, in Bedfordshire. Population 1527. 12 miles N. Dunstable.

AMPERIAS, a walled town of Spain, in Catalonia. Population 2200. 58 miles N. E. Barcelona.

AMRAN, a small walled town of Arabia, 90 miles E. Lohcia.

AMRAN, a town and fortress of Hindostan, province of Gujerat. Long. 70. 33. E. Lat. 22. 35. N.

AMRETSIR (the Pool of Immortality), formerly called Chak, a town of Hindostan, in the province of Lahore, the chief place of religious worship of the Seik nation, who resort thither to immerse themselves in the sacred basin, constructed by Ram Dass; and being on the high road between Cabul and Delli, Cashmere and the Dekkan, is a great emporium of trade.

AMSTEL, a small river of Holland, which, running through the city of Amsterdam, joins the arm of the Zuyder Zee called the Wye.

AMSTELVEEN, a village of Holland, on the Amstel, 6 miles S. Amsterdam. Pop. 550.

AMSTERDAM, the largest, richest, and most populous city in the Netherlands, situated in Lower Holland, on the arm of the Zuyder Zee called the Y or Wye. It consisted in former ages of a single village, meanly built, and inhabited by fishermen. It first acquired the name of a commercial town about the year 1370, was encompassed with walls and other fortifications in 1402, and after receiving successive accessions in size and population (particularly in the years 1535, 1593, 1612, and 1655), became, in the 17th century, one of the greatest trading cities of Europe. The river Amstel divides it into the Old or Eastern, and the New or Western Towns. From the marshy nature of the soil, it has been necessary to build almost the whole city on oaken piles driven into the ground. It is intersected throughout by canals, which cut each other in a thousand different ways. Several streets are lined with trees, and form agreeable promenades. On the land side it is defended by a wall and regular bastions, with a broad and deep ditch; and by means of the sluices the whole adjoining country can be laid under water. Towards the sea it is provided with no fortifications; but the entrance to the harbour is guarded by two rows of piles, with openings for the admission of vessels, which are shut at night. The stadhous stands on a foundation of 13,659 piles, in an open square in the centre of the city. It is built of freestone, (except the ground floor, which is brick), is 202 feet long, 235 broad, and, without reckoning the tower, 116 high. Its interior is adorned with marble, jasper, statues, paintings, and other costly ornaments. Among the other edifices, are the magnificent East and West India houses, exchange, bank, admiralty, three weigh-houses, corn exchange, and tower. In the old church is a chapel, with windows of painted glass. The new church contains the tombs of De Ruyter, Bentinck, and Vondel. The Jews possess splendid synagogues. The principal public establishments are the arsenals and dock-yards, the academy, grammar school, anatomical and surgical college, the work-house, house of correction or rasp-huis, orphan-house, hospital for old men, establishment for widows, lazaretto, lunatic asylum, the botanic garden, &c. The exchange, so long famous in the mercantile world, is a plain but stately fabric of freestone, covered with tiles, and is in length 230 feet, and in breadth 130. It is fitted to contain about 4500 persons, and is daily resorted to after mid-day by all concerned in exchange or other mercantile business. In former days it was not uncommon to see 100 vessels in the port with the same tide; and there commonly lay together in the harbour 600 vessels and upwards. The objects of this commerce were grain, wine, groceries, spices, dye-stuffs, fish, Virginian and Brazil tobacco, all Baltic merchandise, cotton, and other productions from the Levant and Barbary; the products of Italy, Spain, France, and the north of Europe; gold, silver, jewellery, and all kinds of colonial produce. In the town and adjoining country are manufactured all sorts of stuffs, damasks, galloon lace, velvet, woollen cloths, carpets, and leather; there are also refineries of sugar, borax, camphire, cinnabar, sulphur, &c. The famous bank of Amsterdam was instituted by the states of Holland on 31st January 1609, and is known in Germany by the name of the Dutch bank. The magistrates of the city, under authority of the states, declared themselves the perpetual bankers of the inhabitants, and ordered that all payments above 300 guilders (1.27) and all bills of exchange, should be made at the bank. The motives to this measure are to be found in the debased state of the current coin of Holland, which the trade of Amsterdam brought from all quarters of Europe. The amount of the capital of the bank, in its days of prosperity, was never exactly ascertained. It was originally constituted by deposits of coin, but came afterwards to be increased by deposits of gold and silver bullion.

The general commerce of Holland declined greatly during the 20 years that preceded the general pacification of 1814, and that of Amsterdam participated in this depression. From 1810 to the fall of Bonaparte, Amsterdam was the chief town of the French department of the Zuyder Zee, and the third town in the French empire, taking rank after Paris and Rome. Its population amounted in 1785 to 230,000, but was afterwards reduced below 200,000. 5 miles W. of the Zuyder Zee, 65 N. of Antwerp, and 240 N. by E. of Paris. Long. 4. 40. E. Lat. 52. 25. N.

AMSTERDAM, a post township of the United States, in Montgomery county, New York, on the Mohawk river. Population 3639.

AMSTERDAM, a small island in the Pacific ocean. Long. 76. 54. E. Lat. 37. 47. S.

AMSTERDAM, New, the seat of government of Berbice, in Guiana, near the confluence of the Berbice and Canje. Long. 67. 15. W. Lat. 6. 20. N.

ARTZELL, a market town of Wirtemberg, district of the lake of Constance. Population 2130. 8 miles E. Ravensburg.

ARAB, a town of Persia, in Mazanderan, on the Arasbel, here crossed by a stone bridge. 126 miles E. N. E. Cashin.

ARWELL, a village of England, in Hertfordshire, 21 miles N. London. Pop. 1110.

ARWELL, a post township of the United States, in Hunterdon county, New Jersey. Population 5777.—Also a township of Washington county, Pennsylvania.

ANA, a town in the Arabian Irak, or palace of Bagdad, extending in a single street, five or six miles along the western bank of the river Euphrates. Pop. 3000. 260 miles E. Dambour. Long. 41. 15. E. Lat. 34. N.

ANA CAPRI, a small town on the Neapolitan island of Capri, on a rocky elevation.

ANAGNI, a decayed town in the Campagna di Roma, 28 miles S. E. Rome.

ANAKIAC, the ancient Indian name of New Spain, or Mexico.—See Mexico.

ANAKOPIA, a small fortified town of Abassia, on the coast of the Black sea. Long. 39. 45. E. Lat. 43. 30. N.

ANAMRAGUR, a town of Hindostan, in the province of Bejapoor, 20 miles W. Moodgul. Long. 79. 32. E. Lat. 16. 17. N.

ANANPOUR, a town of Hindostan, in Bednora, 129 miles N. W. Seringapatam. Long. 75. 3. E. Lat. 13. 33. N.

ANASTAPOORAM, a town of Hindostan, in Wandicotta, 63 miles N. E. Cuddapah. Long. 78. 6. E. Lat. 14. 41. N.

ANANTPOUR, a town of Hindostan, in the Mysore, taken by the British in 1763. 149 miles N. N. E. Seringapatam. Long. 77. 23. E. Lat. 14. 45. N.

ANASURI, a town and fortress of Georgia, in the district of Senuti, situated on the rivulet Akkala. 40 miles N. N. W. Teflis.

ANAPA, or ANAPEA, a fortified town of Chircassia, on a bay of the Black sea, called Sundjik bay. The fort was built in 1734, by the Turks. 70 miles E. S. E. Theodosia. Long. 37. 10. E. Lat. 41. 40. N.

ANAPFES, a town of France, on the Marne, department of the North, 2 leagues from Lille. Population 2000.

ANBAR, a town of the Arabian Irak, on the Euphrates. 35 miles W. Bagdad.

ANCASTER, a village and parish of England, in the county of Lincoln. Population 433. 8 miles from Grantham.

ANCE, or ANSÉ, a town of France, on the Saône, department of the Rhone. Population 1640.

ANCENIS, a town of France, on the Loire, department of the Lower Loire. It trades in wood, corn, and wine. Population 3295.

ANCERVILLE, a town of France, in Lorraine. Population 2200. 4 leagues S. W. Bar.

ANCHOLME, a river of England, rising in Lincolnshire, and joining the Humber.

ANCIAONS, a town of Portugal, in Trasillos-Montes, 10 miles W. Torre de Moncorvo.

ANCISA DE MONCORVO, a town of Italy, near the Arno, 10 miles S. E. Florence.

ANCLIFFE, a hamlet of England, in the county of Lancashire.

ANCOCUS CREEK, a tributary of the United States, in Delaware, New Jersey.

ANCONA LA MARCA, a large province of Italy, in the Ecclesiastical state, lying between the Apennines and the Adriatic sea, and having the Marca di Fermo on the south and the duchy of Ancona on the north.

ANCONA, a celebrated trading town in the former province, lies on a point of land projecting into the gulf of Venice. It is seated between two hills, on one of which stands the citadel (a place of considerable strength), and on the other the cathedral church. On one of the peaks in the harbor is a triumphal arch, erected in honour of Trajan. The articles exported are grain, wool, skins, silk, sail-cloth; ship-biscuits, soap, alum, sulphur, and the fruits of the south. From England are brought tin, lead, herrings, and cumblets; from Holland, various raw materials, sugar, cocoa, coffee, spices, and cloth; from Russia, leather; from Sweden, tar; from Roum and Turkey, cotton; and from Germany iron. The other articles of import are linen and fish. Population 20,000. 116 miles N. by E. Rome. Long. 13. 33. E. Lat. 43. 36. N.

ANCRE, a town of France, on a river of the same name, department of the Somme. Population 1940. 5 leagues E. N. E. Amiens.

ANCRUM, a village of Scotland, in Roxburghshire, on the Teviot. Population 1300.

ANCY-LE-FRANCE, a town of France, department of the Yonne. Population 1210. 10 leagues E. Auxerre.—There are several other small towns of this name in France.

ANDAHUAILAS, the capital of a province of the same name in Peru.

ANDALUSIA, a general name for the Spanish provinces, or, as they were formerly called, Kingdoms of Seville, Cordova, Jaen, and at one time also Granada. Granada is still occasionally denominated Upper Andalusia, and the other three provinces ought properly to be called Lower Andalusia.

ANDAMAN ISLANDS, several islands on the eastern side of the bay of Bengal, called the Great and Little Andaman. Population 2500. Long. 92. E. Lat. 10. 32. 14. N.

ANDERFINGEN, a market town, with 2000 inhabitants, in the Swiss canton of Zurich.

ANDELS, or ANDELES, LEA, a town of France, in Upper Normandy, properly consisting of two, viz. the Great and Little Andeli, the latter on the Seine, the former close by it. Population of the two, 5256.

ANDELI, a small river of France, in Normandy, which falls into the Seine.

ANDENAR, a town of Usbeck Tartary, at the base of the mountains separating India and Persia from Great Bukharia. Long. 68. 40. E. Lat. 36. 3. N.

ANDERLECHT, a neat well built town of the Netherlands, near Brussels. Pop. 1930.

ANDERNACH, an old town of Germany, situated on the Rhine, between Coblenz and Bonn. Population 2020. 6 miles S. W. Coblenz.

ANDERSON, a county of the United States, in East Tennessee. Population 3959. Slaves 260. Chief town Clinton.

ANDES, called by the Spaniards Cordillera de los Andes, an immense chain of mountains which runs through the whole continent of America, in a direction from south to north. They commence near the straits of Magellan, in Lat. 54. S. and passing along the coast of the Pacific ocean, through Patagonia, Chili, Peru, and New Granada, cross the isthmus of Parien into North America, where still pursuing a northerly course, they pass through Guatimala, New Spain, the United States, and British America, and terminate, it is supposed, on the Frozen ocean, in Lat. 70. N. In Chili the Andes are about 120 miles in breadth, and consist of a great number of mountains, all of them of prodigious height, which appear to be chained to each other. To the north various chains diverge in a straggling manner into the interior from the main chain, some of which stretching from La Paz, Potosi, and Tucuman, towards the province of St Paul in the Brazils, connect the Andes of Peru and Chili with the ridges of Brazil and Paraguay. In the kingdom of Peru the Andes are divided into three irregular ridges, which continue till about the 6th degree of S. lat. where they are formed into a single chain. They again divide, on entering the kingdom of Quito, into two distinct chains, which, viewed from the central plain, present a most extraordinary appearance, the most elevated summits being arranged in two lines, and forming as it were a double ridge to the Cordillera. Farther to the north, in the kingdom of New Granada, from about the 2d to the 5th degree of N. lat. the Cordillera of the Andes is divided into three parallel ridges. Of these, the eastern ridge which divides the valley of the river Magdalena from the plains of Rio Meta, nowhere rises to the region of perpetual snow. The central chain, which divides the waters of the Rio Magdalena from those of Rio Cauca, often attains the limits of the perpetual snows, and greatly surpasses it in the colossal summits of Guauacas, Baragan, and Quindiu. This central chain, illuminated by the rays of the rising or setting sun, presents a most magnificent spectacle when seen from the city of Santa Fe. The western chain separates the valley of Cauca from the province of Choco, and from the coasts of the South sea. Its highest elevation is scarcely 5000 feet, and it sinks so low in its progress northward, that its course can scarcely be traced into the isthmus of Panama. These three chains are blended together in the 6th and 7th degrees of N. lat. After passing through the isthmus of Darien, the Andes are extended in the kingdom of New Mexico into vast plains, which rise to the height of from 6000 to 8000 feet above the level of the sea. From these plains insulated mountains, with volcanic summits, covered with perpetual snow, occasionally rise to the extraordinary height of 15,000, 16,000, and 17,000 feet.

The elevated summits of the Andes may be distinguished into three different forms, namely, the conical, the peaked, which are of a conical shape, and which consist generally of volcanoes yet burning; and lastly, volcanoes, the summits of which having sunk, after a long course of eruptions, exhibit ridges bristled with points leaning in different directions, and broken rocks falling into ruins. The heights of some of the most remarkable summits have been estimated as follows by Condamine, who, with other philosophers, ascended them in 1765; and in later times by Humboldt and Bonpland, by whom these countries were visited in 1802: Chimborazo, 21,440 feet; the volcanic cone of Tunguragua, 16,500; Pichincha volcano, 14,862; crater of Antisana, 13,150; dreadful volcano of Cotopaxi, 13,900; volcano of Sangai, 16,000.

The Andes which run through the equatorial regions of South America, from their extraordinary elevation, comprehend within a short space every possible variety of temperature, and all the diversity of the vegetable tribes. On the declivity of the Andes, at an elevation of from about 3000 to 4000 feet, there reigns perpetually a soft spring temperature, which never varies more than seven or nine degrees of Fahrenheit. The limits of perpetual congelation under the equator has been fixed, by Humboldt, at 15,700 feet, and at 15,000 feet in the latitude of 20 degrees. The different plants and trees peculiar to the different regions of the globe appear in regular succession, as we ascend from the level of the ocean to the height of the Andes. In the lower grounds, between the tropics, from the level of the sea to the height of from 3000 to 5000 feet, cassava, cacao, maize, plantains, indigo, sugar, cotton, and coffee, are cultivated. Indigo and cacao, the plantain or the banana tree, and the cassava root, require great heat to be brought to maturity, generally a climate of which the mean temperature is 75 degrees. But cotton and coffee will grow at a considerable elevation, and sugar is cultivated with success in the temperate parts of Quito. Maize is cultivated in the same climate as the banana; but its cultivation extends over a much wider sphere, as it arrives at maturity at an elevation of 9000 feet above the level of the sea. The low country within the tropics is also the region of oranges, pine apples, and the most delicious fruits. Between the altitudes of 6000 and 9000 feet lies the climate best suited for the culture of all kinds of European grain. Within the limits in which European grain flourishes is to be found the oak, which, from an elevation of 9200 feet, never descends, near the equator, below that of 5500 feet, though it occurs under the parallel of Mexico at the height of only 2020 feet. Beyond this limit of 9000 feet the large trees of every kind begin to disappear, although some dwarfish pines are to be found at the height of 13,000 feet, nearly 2000 feet from the line of perpetual snow. The grasses clothe the ground at an elevation of from 13,500 to 16,100 feet, and from this to the regions of ice and snow, the only plants visible are the lichen, which covers the face of the rocks, and seems even to penetrate under the snow.

ANDAL, a town of France, in Lower Alsace. Population 3150. 13 miles S. & W. Strasbourg.

ANDOLSHEIM, a village of France, in Alsace. Population 1300.

ANDOVER, a town of England, in South-amptonsire, on a rivulet called Ande. The church is an ancient structure; and here are an alms-house for six poor men, and a charity school for 30 boys. A considerable manufacture of malt is carried on here, as also of shalloon, but the latter is now declining. There is a weekly market. Population 4219. 63 miles W. London.

ANDOVER, a post township of the United States, in Essex county, Massachusetts.—It is the name of several other townships.

ANDRACIO, or ANDRACY, a well built town in the island of Majorca.

ANDRAGIRY, or INDRAGIRY, a river of the island of Sumatra, which falls into the sea on the east coast, in about Lat. 0. 30. S.

ANDRASTADT, or ANDRE, St. a town of the Austrian empire, in Lower Carinthia.—It is the name of several other towns in France, and other parts of the Continent.

ANDRE O'APONON, St. a village of France, department of the Loire. Population 1500.

ANDRE DE CUREAC, St. a trading town, with 2580 inhabitants, on the Dordogne, in Guienne. 4 leagues N. Bourdeaux.

ANDRE DE NANCONIS, St. a town of France, in Languedoc, 6½ leagues W. by N. of Montpellier. Population 1400.

ANDRE DE VALBORNE, St. a town in Languedoc, 14½ leagues N. W. Nismes. Population 1650.

ANDRE LE VILLENEUVE, St. a fortified town of France, in Languedoc. Pop. 3300.

ANDREA, a town of Western Africa, on the Mesurado, containing about 40 or 50 houses.

ANDREA, St. a town of Naples, in the Principato Ultra. Population 2203.

ANDREAS, St. the name of a group of islands in the gulf of Venice, N. of Ragusa, in one of which is a small town of the same name.

ANDREASBERG, a mining town of Hanover, principality of Grubenhagen. The mine is of silver. Population 3359.

ANDREW'S, St. a city of Scotland, in the county of Fife, formerly the metropolitan see of Scotland, situated near the verge of a precipice which overlooks a spacious bay. The harbour is safe and commodious, though the entrance is narrow. The town is about a mile and a half in circuit, and consists of three principal streets, intersected by a few inconsiderable lanes. It contains two churches of the established religion, two places of worship for dissenters, and one for Episcopalians, and a university consisting of two colleges.

The parish church is a spacious structure, 102 feet in length, by 63 in breadth. Here is a lofty monument of white marble, erected to the memory of Archbishop Sharp. To the north is situated the college church, founded by bishop Kennedy in 1458, on which whose tomb, about the year 1623, six highly ornamented silver maces were found, three of which are preserved in the university, and three were sent to the other universities of Scotland. A university was instituted in St Andrew's in 1412. It formerly consisted of three colleges, St Salvador's, St Leonard's, and St Mary's, of which the two former were united in 1743, and the buildings of St Leonard's were alienated and converted into dwelling-houses. There is a library consisting of about 36,000 volumes. Fifty-six bursaries or endowments, which are conferred on students, belong to the university. The number of students at the university is nearly 200. St Andrew's has a manufactory of sail-cloth and of golf-balls, the Scots game of golf being much practised here. A market is held weekly, and there are five annual fairs. St Andrew's is a royal burgh, uniting with Cupar, Perth, Dundee, and Forfar, in returning a member to parliament. St Andrew's, though decayed, still possesses some remains of its past consequence. There is a chapel, and a square tower 108 feet high, called the chapel of St Regulus or St Rule, and supposed to be of greater antiquity than all the other edifices in the place. It formerly had a magnificent cathedral, completed in 1311, which was demolished by the reformers in 1559. Several religious houses stood here, of which a ruinous chapel belonging to the Blackfriars is greatly admired. It had a castle, founded in 1200, which is now demolished, and its picturesque ruins serve as a landmark. George Wishart, a preacher of the reformed doctrines, was burnt in 1545; and in 1546, the primate Cardinal Beaton was put to death by the Protestants. Pop. 6399. 9 miles E. Cupar, 39 N. N. E. Edinburgh. Long. 2. 50. W. Lat. 56. 19. 33. N.

ANDROS, or ANDRO, one of the Cyclades, islands in the Archipelago. Population 10,000. Long. 24. 50. E. Lat. 37. 50. N.

ANDROS, the capital of the foregoing island, situated on its east coast.

ANDROS ISLANDS, or ISLES DEL ESPIRITU SANTO, a range of islands among the Bahamas, which extend about 120 miles from N. to S. Long. 77. to 78. 15. W. Lat. 24. to 25. 20. N.

ANDROSCOGGIN, a river of the United States, in the district of Maine, which rises in Umbagog lake, and empties into the Kennebec, 18 miles from its mouth.

ANDREU, a town of France, in Languedoc, department of the Gard. It has manufactures of woollen stuffs, stockings, and hats. Population 5000. 11 leagues N. Montpellier.

ANDUXAN, a town of Spain, province of Jaen, in Andalusia, on the Guadalquivir. Population 1400.

ANET, a town of France, department of the Eure and Loire. Population 1570.

ANGAN, ANGAN, or HINDSHAM, an island in the Persian gulf, on the south side of the island of Kishnee, above 12 miles in circuit, barren and uninhabited.

ANGEAC, a town of France, department of the Charente. Population 1500.

ANGEL, a river of Wales, in the county of Montgomery, which falls into the Dovey.

ANGEL, a river of Westphalia, which rises near Alen, and joins the Embs, near Munster.

ANGELES, PUEBLA DE LOS. See Puebla de los Angeles.

ANGELICA, a post township of the United States, and capital of Alleghany county, New York, on Genesee river. Population 439.

ANGELO, St, a town of Naples, in the province of Capitanata. The town is the see of a bishop suffragan. Population 11,500. 10 miles N. N. E. Lauvia.—It is the name of several other smaller towns in Italy.

ANGENWEEI, a town of Hindostan, in the province of Concan, 55 miles S. Bombay.

ANGERBACH, a river of Prussia, which falls into the Havel, near Potsdam.

ANGERBURG, a town in East Prussia, circle of Selensten. Population 2100. 55 miles S. E. Königsberg.

ANGERMANNLAND, an extensive district of Sweden, province of West Norland, 150 miles in length, and 100 in breadth.

ANGERMANNLANDS, of ÅSELE-LAPPMARK, the most southern division of Swedish Lapland, on both sides of Angermann-Aa river.

ANGERMUNDE, a town in the duchy of Berg. Population 969. 7 miles N. Düsseldorf.

ANGERMUNDE, a town of Prussia, in the Ucker Mark of Brandenburg, circle of Stolpe. Population 2276. 40 miles N. Berlin.

ANGERN, a neat village of Prussia, in the duchy of Magdeburg. Population 820.

ANGERS, a handsome city of France, formerly the capital of Anjou, and now of the department of the Maine and Loire. It had before the revolution a celebrated university, and an academy of great celebrity, and two commanderies of the order of Malta. The cathedral church is dedicated to St Maurice, and is not less remarkable for its length than for the height of its nave, which is accounted one of the finest in France. Here are manufactured beautiful stamine, fine camlets, serge, and other stuffs, hats, and all sorts of leather goods. It has a castle, standing on a rock, and inaccessible on the side of the river. Pop. 8927. 22 leagues W. Tours, and 30 S. E. Rennes. Long. 0. 28. W. Lat. 47. 28. N.

ANGERVILLE, a village of France, in the Orleannois, 9 leagues S. Versailles.

ANGERVILLE L'ANCHER and ANGERVILLE LA MARTEI, two towns in Upper Normandy, now in the department of the Seine Inferieure. Population 1000.

ANGIARI, a well built town of Italy, in the grand duchy of Tuscany. There is also a town of this name near the Adige.

ANGIERA, a small town of Italy, on the Lago Maggiore, at the mouth of the Ticino.

ANGISTOLA, a river of Naples, which rises in Calabria Ultra, and runs into the gulf of Eufemia.

ANGLADE, a town of France, department of the Gironde. Population 1500. 7 leagues N. Bourdeaux.

ANGLE, a town of France, in Poitou, department of La Vienne. Population 1325. 10 leagues E. S. E. Poitiers.

ANGLES, or ANGLE, a town of France, in Lower Languedoc, with 2500 inhabitants.

ANGLESEY, an island and county of North Wales, in the Irish sea, separated from the mainland of Britain by a narrow strait called Menai. It is of a triangular form, but its figure is irregular, extending about 20 miles from N. W. to S. E., and about 17 in breadth, and its superficial area is calculated at 402 square miles. The climate is temperate; but liable to fogs. The principal streams are the Alaw, Brunt, Cefni, Fraw, and Dulaw. Anglesey is famed for its mineral riches, possessing most productive mines, both of copper and lead. Copper ore is found within a few feet of the surface, and instead of being disposed in veins, it forms a connected mass or bed, in some parts 60 feet thick, constituting a large portion of the Parys mountain. The ore contains about 25 per cent. of metal. Lé d ore, yielding from 6 to 10 cwt. per ton, is also found here; and from a ton of ore 57 ounces of silver may be extracted. These mines, ever since they were explored in 1763, have been a source of incalculable wealth. Coal is obtained at Maltræth in considerable quantity. Grain, of which 100,000 bushels are exported in favourable seasons, and cattle, are the chief products of Anglesey. The chief towns are Beaumaris, situated on a fine bay, and Holyhead, whence regular packets sail for Ireland. The others are Amlwch, Llanerchymedd, and Llangefui. It consists of 6 hundreds, and is divided into 77 parishes, containing 8737 houses, and 45,063 inhabitants. Anglesey was incorporated with the kingdom of England, and afterwards constituted a county by Henry VIII. sending two representatives to parliament. Curious stone tables are to be seen in this island, which are of great antiquity; and there are also several remains of architectural and monumental antiquities in the island; and coins, implements, and arms, both Roman and British, are sometimes dug out of the earth. 250 miles from London.

ANGLET, a town of France, department of the Lower Pyrenees. Houses about 320. Half a league W. S. W. Bayonne.

ANGOLA.—This is usually described as a small kingdom of Western Africa, situated immediately S. of Congo. M. Degrandpre, however, the only recent traveller in that quarter, states that the whole coast, from Cape Lopez Gonsalvo to St Philippe de Benguela, or from about the 1st to the 12th degree S. latitude, is called, in mercantile language, the coast of Angola. The chief, and almost sole object for which this coast is resorted to, is the trade in slaves. At St Paul de Loango, about 8½ degrees S. latitude, the Portuguese have a large establishment, which they have always made the principal channel of supplying Brazil with Negroes; and the French, previous to the revolution, nearly engrossed the trade of Loango, Malemba, and Cabenda, which has now fallen into the hands of the Spaniards and Portuguese, who are estimated to transport annually from this coast, 40,000 slaves.

ANGORA, ANKERI, or ENKURE, a large fortified city of Asiatic Turkey, in Nattolia, on the Tabaia. The vestiges of an amphitheatre are yet to be seen here; also the ruins of a magnificent senate-house. It is a neat city, and its streets are causewayed with large blocks of granite, but have no foot-paths. The inhabitants consist both of Mahometans and Christians. The latter have a Greek and an Armenian archbishop, and 7 churches. Though trade has decayed, a great quantity of yarn, Angora stuffs, and shawls, are still made here. The shawls, made from the hair of the Angora goat, are of an extremely delicate texture, and are much valued. This is the ancient Ancyra, and was taken by Tamerlane in 1402. 212 miles E. S. E. Constantinople. Long. 33. 13. E. Lat. 40. 4. N.

ANGOLEME, a town of France, on the Charente, 20 leagues from Bourdeaux. It is poorly built. The inhabitants, about 1,000, carry on a trade in wine, brandy, salt, &c. They manufacture, besides, excellent paper, linen and woollen cloth.

ANGOMARS, a province of France, now distributed among the departments of the Charente, the Charente Inferieure, the Dordogne, and the Deux Sevres.

ANGOKA, a small river of Mosambique, on the E. coast of Africa. Lat. 16. 30. S.

ANGRA, a seaport town, the capital of Terceira, one of the Azores. It was formerly very strong, but of late all the fortifications on these islands have been neglected. The town contains 5 parishes, a cathedral, 4 monasteries, and as many nunneries; also the royal magazines of naval stores. It is the residence of the English, French, and Dutch consuls. Long. 27. 14. W. Lat. 33. 33. N.

ANGRA DE LOS REYES, a city of Brazil, province of Rio Janeiro. Long. 41. 11. W. Lat. 23. 4. S.

ANGUILLA, or SNAKE ISLAND, the most northerly of the Caribbees, 30 miles long, and 9 broad. Long. 63. 10. W. Lat. 13. 12. N.

ANGUILLA, one of the Bahama islands, about 20 miles long and 5 broad. Long. 73. 50. W. Lat. 23. 36. N.

ANGUILLARA, a small town of Italy, vicariate of Padua, with 2000 inhabitants.

ANGUS. See Forfar, County of.

ANHALT, a principality of Germany, having the Mark of Brandenburg on the N.; the duchy of Saxony on the E. and S.; the county of Mansfeld on the S. W.; and Brunswick, Halberstadt, and Magdeburg on the N. W. Its greatest length is 60 miles, and its breadth varies from 12 to 16. Population 110,000.

ANHEIMBAS, a small river of Brazil, province of Paraguay, which enters the Parana.

ANHOLT, a small Danish island in the Cattegat, between Lessee and Zealand. Here is a light-house. In 1811, the Danes made an unsuccessful attempt on this island, then in possession of the British. Long. 11. 35. E. Lat. 56. 33. N.

ANHOLT, a small town of Germany, 90 miles E. Nimeguen.

ANIANE, or ST BENOIT, a town of France, department of the Herault. Population 1810. 5½ leagues W. by N. Montpellier.

ANJENGO, a town and fortress of Hindostan, in Travancore, at the mouth of a broad and deep river, by which it is nearly encircled. 40 miles N. W. Travancore. Long. 76. 51. E. Lat. 11. 39. N.

ANIMALLY, or ANIMALAYA, a town of Hindostan, in Coimbatour, on the Alima. It contains 400 houses. 18 miles S. Coimbatour. Long. 77. 3. E. Lat. 10. 41. N.

ANIMAS, RIO DE LOS, a river of Mexico, which joins the Nabajou, a little below its junction with the Rio Colorado.

ANJOU, the name of an ancient province and government of France, which was bounded N. by Maine, W. by Brittany, S. by Poitou, and E. by the Touraine. It is now formed into the departments of the Maine and Loire, the Loire Inferieure, the Vendee, the Indre and Loire, the Sarthe, the Ille and Vilaine, the Mayenne, and Deux-Sevres.

ANKER, a river of England, in Leicestershire, falling into the Tame, Warwickshire.

ANKERFIELD, a village of Scotland, in Ross-shire, 4 miles S. Tain.

ANKLAN, the chief town in the circle of the same name, in Pomerania. Pop. 3345. 36 miles S. S. E. Stralsund.

ANKOBEN, the capital of the province of Efat, in Abyssinia.

ANN, CAPE, the north cape of Massachusetts bay, as Cape Cod is the south cape. Long. 70. 17. W. Lat. 42. 45. N.

ANN, ST, a river of Lower Canada, which, after a course of 70 miles, falls into the St Lawrence, about 50 miles above Quebec. On its eastern bank, near its mouth, stands the village of St Ann, containing about 30 houses.

ANNABERG, ST, a mining town of Saxony, in the circle of the Erzgebirge, in Misnia. Population 4500. 36 miles from Dresden.

ANNACH, a village of Ireland, in the county of Cork, 5 miles from Charleville.

ANNACH, a small island on the west coast of Ireland, between the isle of Achil and the mainland of the county of Mayo.

ANNACH, a small island of Ireland, in Lough Conn, in the county of Mayo.

ANNACH NAX, or ANNACHAN, a small island of Ireland, on the S. W. coast of Galway.

ANNAH, a town of Asiatic Turkey, on the Euphrates, 150 miles from Bagdad.

ANNA-LIEVEY. See Liffey.

ANNALONG, a decayed village of Ireland, on Annalong river, in the county of Down.

ANNAMAHOF, a town on the Gold coast of Africa, formerly the most flourishing of any, and forming, along with Cormantine, the great market for the slave trade. It was laid waste by the king of Asiantee, and the inhabitants slaughtered. Population formerly 10,000.

ANNAMOOKA, or ROTTERDAM, a small island, one of the Friendly islands, in the South Pacific ocean. Long. 174. 31. W. Lat. 20. 15. S.

ANNAN, a borough, market town, seaport, and parish of Scotland, in the county of Dumfries, situated on the river Annan, which is crossed by a bridge of five arches near to this place. It has a good harbour; and carries on a considerable coasting trade: foreign timber is also imported. It has manufactures of cotton, and an excellent salmon fishery at the mouth of the river. In conjunction with Dumfries, Kirkcudbright, Lochmaben, and Sanquhar, Annan sends a member to parliament. It has been considerably improved of late. Population 4486. 14 miles from Dumfries, 56 S. Edinburgh.

ANNAN, a river of Scotland, which enters the Solway frith, after a course of 30 miles.

ANNANDALE, a district of Scotland, in Dumfriesshire, on both sides of Annan river.

ANNAPOLIS, a city of the United States, in Ann-Arundel county, Maryland, on the S. bank of the Severn, 30 miles S. Baltimore. Population about 2000. It is the seat of the state government.

ANNAPOLIS, a river of Nova Scotia, which runs into the bay of Fundy.

ANNAPOLIS, a county on the above river.

ANNAPOLIS ROYAL, a city and burgh of Nova Scotia, which stands on the south side of the river and bay of Annapolis. The port of Annapolis is one of the finest in the world, being large enough to contain several hundred ships. The city, though not large, has some very handsome buildings: it is strongly fortified. Long. 65. 22. W. Lat. 44. 49. N.

ANNE ARUNDEL, a county of the United States, in Maryland. Population 26,668. Slaves 11,693. Chief town Annapolis.

ANNECY, the capital of the Savoy part of the duchy of Genevois, on the lake of the same name, 30 miles from Geneva. Population 3440. Long. 5. 57. E. Lat. 45. 56. N.

ANNELEARN, a village of the Netherlands, in the province of Zealand. Population 1100.

ANNET, one of the Scilly islands, about a mile from that of St Agnes.

ANNEULIN, a village of France, in the department of the North. Population 1500.

ANNISON, a river of Wales, in the county of Pembroke, which falls into the Irish sea.

ANNONDY, a town of France, in Lower Languedoc, situated at the junction of the Cauce and Deume. It has manufactures of paper, leather, and dye-stuffs: the culture of silk is likewise very flourishing. Population 5800. Long. 6. 50. E. Lat. 43. 15. N.

ANNOR, a town in Provence, in the department of the Lower Alps. Pop. 1030.

ANNOTO, a river of the island of Jamaica, which runs north, into the sea.

ANNONAH, or ANNONAY, a town of Algeria, in the province of Constantina, 32 miles E. Constantina.

ANNON, a port on the east side of Cape Breton land. Long. 60. W. Lat. 47. N.

ANNON, a small town on the river St John, in the province of New Brunswick.

ANONTPOOR, a small town of Hindostan, in Bednore. Long. 75. 22. E. Lat. 14. N.

ANOOPSHEER (the Incomparable City), a town of Hindostan, province of Delhi, on the Ganges, in Lat. 28. 21. N. Long. 78. 13. E. It trades in cotton, indigo, and salt.

ANSON, a county of the United States, in North Carolina, on the Yadkin, S. W. Raleigh. Chief town Wadesborough. Population 8831. Slaves 2325.

ANSBACH, ANSBACH, or ONOBZBACH, a considerable district in Francoania, which, by a recent distribution, made in 1810, is mostly included in the circles of the Rezat and the Upper Danube. It was given to Bavaria by Bonaparte in 1806, and has been confirmed to that power by recent treaties, an indemnity having been given elsewhere to Prussia.

ANSBACH, or ANSBACH, now the capital of the preceding margravate, lies on the Lower Rezat. It has 4 suburbs and about 100 houses. The objects that deserve notice, are the prince's castle and gardens; the church of St John, with the tombs of the princes; a well endowed orphan-house for 60 children, and an hospital: the prince's library and cabinet of medals, begun to be collected by the margrave William Frederic in 1720; and the academy. The articles principally manufactured at Ansbach, are woollen and cotton cloths, earthen-ware, white lead, and playing cards. Population, including the neighbouring communes, 11,000. 30 miles S. W. Nuremberg. Long. 10. 33. E. Lat. 49. 12. N.

ANSTRUTHER, EASTER and WESTER, two small burghs and seaports of Scotland, in Fife, on the north shore of the frith of Forth, which unite with Crail, Pittenweem, and Kilrenny, in returning a representative to parliament. Population of the first, 1020. 10 miles S. St Andrew's. Population of the second, 429. 23 miles N. E. Edinburgh.

ANTALO, or ANTALOU, a considerable town of Abyssinia, capital of the province of Enderata. Population 10,000.

ANTEQUERA, a large town of Spain, with straight and broad streets. It has a Moorish castle, 4 churches, 14 monasteries, and 8 nunneries. Pop. 13,000. 26 miles N. N. W. Malaga. Long. 4. 47. W. Lat. 37. 6. N.

ANTHEME, a town of France, department of the Puy de Dome. Pop. 3020.

ANTHONY, ST, FALLS, or, in the river Mississippi, are above 3000 miles from the entrance of the river into the gulf of Mexico, and situated in Lat. 44. 50. N. The perpendicular height of the fall is 164 feet; besides 58 feet more of a rapid below.

ANTHONY, ST, a cape on the coast of the province of Buenos Ayres, the south point of entrance into the Plata.

ANTHONY'S KILL, a river of North America, which joins Hudson's river from the west.

ANTHONY'S NOSE, a lofty headland of New York, on Hudson's river.

ANTIBES, a town of France, department of the Var, in the Mediterranean. The inhabitants, amounting to 5270, are chiefly employed in the sardel fishery, and in the manufactory of earthen-ware. Long. 7. 11. E. Lat. 43. 35. N.

ANTICOSTI, a large island in the mouth of the St Lawrence, 125 miles long, and in its widest part 30 broad. Long. of the east point, 62. 0. W. Lat. 49. 5. N.

ANTICTAN CREEK, a river of the United States, in Maryland, which joins the Potomac.

ANTIGUA, an island in the West Indies, 21 miles long, nearly about the same in breadth, and 50 miles in circumference. It contains 59,830 acres of land, of which about 34,000 are appropriated to the growth of sugar, including those which are annexed as pasture grounds. The other principal staples are cotton, wool, and tobacco, and in favourable years great quantities of provisions are raised. The island was first settled by a few English families in 1632. Population in 1817, white inhabitants 2102, people of colour 1717, blacks 31,890. Long. between 61. 38. and 61. 53. W. Lat. between 17. and 17. 12. N.

ANTILLES, a cluster of islands in the West Indies, distinguished into the Windward and Leeward islands, and into Greater and Lesser. The Greater comprehend Cuba, Hispaniola, Jamaica, and Porto Rico; and the Less, Antigua, Barbadoes, St Christopher's, Guadeloupe, Martinico, Granada, Trinidad, St Thomas, Santa Cruz, Dominica, St Vincent, Tobago, St Lucie, &c.; an account of which will be given under their respective titles.

ANTIOCH, now called Antaki or Antakie by the Turks, a city of Syria, situated on the south bank of the river Orontes, which is 50 yards wide, and is here crossed by a substantial bridge. It is surrounded by walls, inclosing a space of more than a mile and a half in diameter, including hills, with ancient fortifications. They consist of stone in a decaying state, and are flanked by strong towers at unequal distances. The ancient gate on the way to Aleppo is magnificent, but it is in a decayed condition. Only a small portion of the original city, of which the extent is ascertained by the line of wall, is contained, along with some kitchen gardens, within their present inclosure. Antioch is restricted to one corner in its modern state. The streets are narrow, with very elevated footpaths on each side; the houses built of stone, and covered with tiles, which is unusual in Syria; and their general appearance is dull and monotonous. This city is governed by a mohassel, dependent on the pacha of Aleppo, but appointed by the porte, who lives in great state. It is also the residence of a patriarch of the Greek church. The population is supposed to consist of 15,000 Mahometans, 3000 Christians, and 750 Jews. Antioch was founded by Antigonos, and continued a splendid city during the whole period of Roman greatness. It was almost overthrown at various times by some tremendous earthquakes. These occurred in 145 B. C., 115, 458, 529, and 687, at which last period about 30,000 persons perished. In the contests which took place between the rival empires of Rome and Persia, Antioch was taken and plundered in the year 242 by Sapor, king of Persia: on two subsequent occasions it was attacked and taken by the same monarch, who levelled all its public edifices to the ground. In the 6th century it again fell into the hands of the Persians, by whom it was sacked and plundered; and in 634 it was taken by the Saracens, from whom it was recovered by the Romans, and remained in their possession until conquered by the Turks. The crusaders made themselves masters of it towards the close of the 11th century. It was the scene of many contests; but was finally taken by the sultan of Babylon in 1268, on which occasion 15,000 citizens were killed, and 100,000 carried into captivity. Antioch was afterwards incorporated with the Turkish empire, but it never regained its pristine celebrity. An earthquake happened in 1759, by which a portion of the city was thrown down. 67 miles W. Aleppo. Long. 35. 17. E. Lat. 36. 6. N.

ANTIOCHETTA, a town of Asiatic Turkey, on the coast of Chamaunia, 88 miles S. Konieh. Long. 32. 20. E. Lat. 36. 6. N.

ANTIOQUIA, a province and government of the New Kingdom of Granada. Its capital is Santa Fe.

ANTIPAROS, an island in the Grecian archipelago, between Paros and Siphanto, 16 miles in circuit. Long. 25. 13. E. Lat. 37. 2. N.

ANTISANA, a volcanic summit of the Andes, 19,150 feet above the level of the sea.

ANTISANA, a hamlet, in the Andes, of the kingdom of Quito, 13,500 feet above the level of the sea. It is the highest inhabited place on the surface of our globe.

ANTOING, a market town of the Netherlands, in Hainault. Population 1600.

ANTON, ST, a town of the Netherlands, in Dutch Brabant. Population 1700.

ANTONIN, ST, a town of France, in the department of the Tarn and Garonne. It has manufactures of woollen stuffs and leather. Population 5400. 7 leagues S. W. Ville.

ANTONIO, ST, a city of Mexico, and capital of the province of Texas, situated near the source of the river of this name. Population 2000. Long. 101. W. Lat. 29. 50. N.

ANTONIO, ST, DELLA FELICIDA, a town of Chili, in the province of Maule.—Another on the coast of the South sea, in the province of Milipilla. Long. 71. 41. W. Lat. 33. 39. S.

ANTONIO, ST, the name of numerous small rivers in Brazil, Buenos Ayres, &c.

ANTONIO, ST, a river of Mexico, province of Texas, which falls into the Guadalupe.

ANTOXY, a town of France, department of the Seine. Pop. 1220. 2 leagues S. S. W. Paris.

ANTRAGUES, a town of France, department of the Ardèche. Population 1500.

ANTRAIX, a small town of France, department of the Ille and Vilaine. Pop. 1375.

ANTRIM, a maritime county of Ireland, province of Ulster, about 54 miles long, by 35 broad, bounded N. and E. by the sea, S. by Lough Neagh and the county of Down, and W. by the county of Londonderry. The surface is mountainous, and there are bogs on the top of the hills. The principal rivers are the Bush, Rewel, Braid, Six Mile Water, Crumlin and Glenavy, none of which are navigable. A stupendous assemblage of basaltic columns, the Giants' Causeway, is seen on the maritime confines of Antrim; as also Fair Head, and other lofty capes and promontories. The principal manufacture of this county is linen yarn, and white and brown linen; but of late years both have declined. The other manufactures are in wool, canvas, paper, kelp; and there is an iron foundry. Considerable fisheries are carried on, and great quantities of butter made and sold for exportation. The chief towns are Antrim, Belfast, Carrickfergus, and Lishburn. Population 240,000.

ANTRIM, a town of Ireland, in Antrim county, situated at the north end of Lough Neagh, near the point where it receives the Six Mile Water. It has a good road and a pier, and carries on the linen manufacture. Population 2103. 12 miles N. W. Belfast, 84 N. Dublin. Long. 6. 26. W. Lat. 51. 45. N.

ANTWERP, a large and well built city of the Netherlands, in the duchy of Brabant, on the Scheldt. It has a deep and capacious harbour, and is defended by a strong citadel. Here are numerous canals, by which vessels can penetrate into the very heart of the town, and there deposit their cargoes. In former times Antwerp was the greatest place of trade in Europe. But its commerce, previously injured by civil and religious wars, was effectually suspended in 1648, by a stipulation in the treaty of Westphalia, between Spain and Holland, for shutting up the navigation of the Scheldt. When the French conquered Holland, the navigation of this river was declared open by public authority. In 1803, preparations were made for enlarging the harbour, and extensive docks and naval storehouses were at the same time begun. The cathedral church of Antwerp, and the stadhous, are elegant buildings. The exchange is the finest in Europe; and the depot called the warehouse for Baltic or east country merchandise, is an edifice of vast dimensions. The parish churches are five in number, and very large: in that of St James are deposited the remains of the great painter Rubens. The population of Antwerp is on the increase, and now amounts to 61,800. Antwerp has frequently suffered from the calamities of war. In 1576 it was plundered by the Spaniards; surrendered to Marlborough in 1706; and the French took it in 1746, but restored it at the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle. It was again taken by the French in 1794, and occupied for 20 years. 22 miles N. Brussels. Long. 4. 23. E. Lat. 51. 14. N.

ANWEILER, a town in the duchy of Denz-Ponts. Pop. 1800. 6 miles from Landau.

AOSTA, the chief town of a duchy of the same name, in Piedmont, on the Doria. It is meanly built: the only edifice of note is the Episcopal palace. Population 5550. 11 miles N. N. W. Turin.

APALACHIAN MOUNTAINS. See Allegheny Mountain.

APALACHIE, a river of Georgia, the south branch of the Oconee, which it joins, 4 miles W. Greensborough.

AFANORMIA, a town of the Turkish island of Santorin, in the mouth of the Archipelago. Long. 25. 24. E. Lat. 35. 35. N.

AFENRADE, a town in the duchy of Sleswick, on an arm of the Baltic. Pop. 2700. Long. 9. 26. E. Lat. 55. 3. N.

APHION, or ARTUM-KARA-HISSAR, the Black City of Opium, the principal town of a district of Natchia, situated on the river Mar-syas, or Mindra. It is about three miles in circuit, surrounded by walls, and defended by a castle, surmounting an isolated rock of prodigious height. The houses are built of all different materials, such as mud, wool, and stone. It contains several mosques, one of which is magnificent; it has also several baths and a custom-house. It has manufactures of carpets; also chintzes and fire-arms; but the staple commodity is opium. Population, according to Olivier, 60,000. 162 miles E. Smyrna. Long. 30. 26. E. Lat. 38. 46. N.

APOLABAMBA, a province of Peru, in La Paz, N. of Larecaja. Population 30,000, chiefly civilised Indians.

APOLDA, a town of Saxony, in Thuringia, 4 miles from Jena. Population 4000. 40 miles S. W. Leipzig.

APOLLONIA, a kingdom on the Gold coast of Africa, situated to the west of the river Anobra. It stretches about 100 miles along the coast, and 20 inland.

APPOQUININK, a creek in Newcastle county, Delaware, in the United States, runs into Delaware bay, 2 miles below Reedy island.

APPALACHICHA, a town of East Florida, 100 miles N. E. Pensacola.

APPALACHICOLA, a river of Florida, formed by the junction of Chatahoochee and Flint rivers, which empties into St George's Sound.

APPELDOORN, a town in Dutch Gelderland. Pop. 2670. 13 miles N. W. Zutphen.

APPENNINES, a chain of mountains in Italy, which begins near Mount Appio, one of the maritime Alps in the territory of Genoa, and after running for a considerable way to the east, traverses Italy in its whole length from north to south, dividing it into two parts, nearly equal. When near the end of their course, they separate into two branches, one of which advances to the south-east to the Capo di Leuca, in the Terra di Otranto, and the others westward to the strait of Messina, which separates Sicily from Calabria.

APPENZELL, a canton of Switzerland, which is environed on all sides by that of St Gall. It contains 326 square miles, and 45,000 inhabitants.

APPENZELL, the principal village in the canton just described, is seated on the river Sitter. It is large and well built. Population 3000. 40 miles E. Zurich.

APPIN, an extensive district of Scotland, in the county of Argyle.

APFLEY, a borough and market town of England, and chief town of Westmoreland, on the Eden. Population 824. 10 miles from Penrith.

APFLEDORF, a seaport town of England, in the county of Devon, on Barnstaple bay.

APPOMATOX, a river of Virginia, a south branch of James river, which empties at City point.

APRICENA, a town of Naples, with 3640 inhabitants, in the province of Capitanata.

APT, a town of France, department of the Vaucluse. Population 4621. 10½ leagues E. Avignon.

APULIA, or PUGLIA, the common name for the country comprised in the three Neapolitan provinces of Bari, Otranto, and Capitanata, which extend along the western shore of the Adriatic.

APURE, a river of South America, which rises in New Granada, in one of the ridges that diverge from the eastern chain of the Andes, and after running in an easterly course for 500 miles, and receiving numerous tributaries from Venezuela, falls by several mouths into the Orinoco.

AQUAMBO, a kingdom in the interior of the Gold coast of Africa, extending 20 miles along the Rio Volta, and 100 miles inland.

AQUAPIM, a kingdom in the interior of the Gold coast of Africa, bordering on Aera, and to the west of the Fante country.

AQUIAVILCO, a river of Mexico, in Vera Cruz, which runs into the gulf of Mexico, Long. 96. 30. W. Lat. 18. 30. N.

AQUIGNY, a town of France, in Normandy. Population 1500.

AQUILA, a small isle off the east coast of Minorca, often dangerous to navigators.

AQUILA, a province of the Kingdom of Naples, known also by the name of Abruzzo Ultra. The chief town, Aquila, is situated on a hill, on the river Aterno. It contains, exclusive of the cathedral, 24 parish churches, and no less than 29 cloisters. Population 13,015. 50 miles S. E. Rome.

AQUILEIA, a once famous, but now decayed town, in the Austrian Littorale, a few miles from the gulf of Venice. Population 500. 20 miles S. Friuli.

ARABAT, a small town of the Crimea, 60 miles S. E. Perekop.

ARABIA, an extensive country of Asia, the general outline of which forms an irregular quadrangle, bounded S. by the Indian ocean, W. by the Red sea, E. by the gulf of Persia, and N. by Syria and the river Euphrates. From the north-east extremity on this river to Cape Babelmandel, Arabia is 1500 miles in length: the southern coast, from the mouth of the Red sea to the Persian gulf, extends 1200 miles, and its breadth between Bussorah and Suez is 900. Arabia is commonly divided into three parts; Arabia Felix, or Happy Arabia, bordering on the Persian gulf, the Indian ocean, and the southern part of the Red sea; Arabia Petraea, or Stony Arabia, lying on the Red sea north of Arabia

Felix; and Arabia Deserta, or the Desert, including all the interior and northern parts of the country. Among the Arabians these names are not known: that which we call Arabia Deserta, they call Nedjed; Arabia Petraea is denominated Hedjas; and Arabia Felix is divided into the kingdoms of Yemen, Hadramaut, Ommon, and Iasha. All the towns are near the coast. The general aspect of Arabia is a vast and arid desert, intersected about the centre by a range of mountains, supposed to stretch from the shores of the Red sea by Mecca, to those of the Persian gulf at the Bahrein islands, interspersed with spots of fertile ground. In the mountainous parts the climate is temperate, but in unsheltered situations intolerable heat prevails, aggravated by the pestiferous wind called the Simoom, which frequently surprises the traveller in the desert, and almost suffocates him, while he is overwhelmed by moving clouds of sand. The edges of the country on the sea coast contain some flourishing provinces and settlements; but in all parts they suffer for want of water, there being no river of any consequence in all Arabia, and no rain for months, and sometimes a year, together. In the cultivated spots there are numerous date trees, as well as abundant fields of rice and maize: coffee is also produced in great plenty; and a valuable drug called the balsam of Mecca is procured from an indigenous plant. The most noted animals of Arabia are the camel and the horse; the last of which has been celebrated in all ages. These animals, of which the breed is carefully preserved, are remarkable for speed, admirably adapted for battle, very sprightly, full of fire, and they never appear fatigued; they are, besides, extremely mild and well tempered. Horses are very rare at Mecca, instead of which asses are used, remarkable for swiftness and other valuable properties. But the principal dependence of the Arabians is on the camel, an animal which is found eminently useful from the earliest period of its existence; and peculiarly fitted for the inhabitants of a desert, being docile, capable of fatigue, and of enduring uncommon abstinence. The natives of Arabia are of middle stature, thin, with slender extremities, black eyes, hair, and beard, and of swarthy complexion. The women are fairer; many, when young, are handsome, but their features become extremely ugly when they turn old. They all lead a frugal and abstemious life. Many depend for subsistence entirely on the produce of their flocks. The flesh of the camel is used as food, but this is rare, and it is chiefly reserved as a delicacy for great occasions. Porcupines, weasels, rats, lizards, and locusts, constitute a part of the food of the Arabians. The common food is not bread properly so called, but soft thin cakes half baked, prepared from a species of millet. Wine is prohibited by the law of Mahomet, but different kinds of spirituous liquors are made from honey, sugar, or raisins, and other fruits.

The dress of the Arabs varies in different parts of the country: the men wear wide drawers and a shirt; they have a cape or handkerchief tied round their heads, and in the hottest parts of the country they go almost naked. The dress of the women consists of a cloak, a very wide shift, and pantaloon in proportion; and also of veils. The majority of the people dwell in tents made of camel's hair, wandering about with their whole property from place to place, and many inhabit villages, towns, and cities. The government of Arabia is principally ecclesiastical, because all civil proceedings rest on the law of the Koran. But the various tribes into which the Arabs are divided are ruled by their own independent chiefs, called imams, emirs, and sheikhs, whose peculiar character and authority are different. All the Arabs are soldiers, though destitute of military organisation. Their arms are a shield, spear, a large curved knife, an iron or wooden mace, which is a formidable weapon, and a richly decorated scabbard. Sabres of fine workmanship, with an etched or figured blade, are highly prized by them, and valued even as high as £500. But they are quite unfit to oppose regular troops. Polygamy is practised among the Arabs, in common with other Mahomedans, though they are in general satisfied with a single wife. Their habits and dispositions are cruel and ferocious, and many of the tribes are a lawless banditti, hostile to good order, ever on the watch to pillage the unguarded traveller, who may deem himself fortunate if he escape with life. Even amidst all the hospitality with which a stranger is received, they have been accused of committing the same outrage upon him when he has passed beyond their boundaries. The arts are universally in the lowest stage. A modern traveller declares, that in Mecca, which may be considered the capital city of Arabia, no person could be found capable of making a lock or a key. In other parts of Arabia the arts are not in a more flourishing state than at Mecca. Matchlocks of indifferent workmanship are produced: a glass-house is established at Mocha, and a linen manufacture is carried on in Yemen. The Jews inhabit the cities are the chief and principal artists in gold and silver works. Carpets and tent covers are made of camel's hair: the sinews of that animal are fashioned into strong cords, and the skin is made into bags and slippers. The exports of Arabia, with which Europeans are best acquainted, consist of coffee, gum arabic, myrrh, and frankincense. Its inhabitants seem to be fond of aromatics, as the shops for selling them are numerous in Mecca. Their imports are more numerous, especially from the east, being gold and other metals, fire-arms, cotton, and slaves. There are few cities in Arabia, and none of considerable size are known to Europeans, except Sana, Mecca, Mocha, Djidda, Maskat, and it would appear, Drusaia. We have no data for making any estimate of the population.

ARABKEH, a town of Asiatic Turkey, in the government of Sivas, on the Euphrates. 80 miles S. W. Erzerum.

ARABOG, a small seaport of Arabia, on the Red sea. Long. 38. 52. E. Lat. 22. 31. N.

ARACENA, a town of Andalusia, in the Sierra Morena, 30 miles N. N. W. Seville.

ARAD-VAHLOYE, a county in Hungary, 48 miles long, and from 9 to 14 broad. Population 162,930.

ARAFAT, MOUNT, a hill of Arabia, 15 miles S. E. of Mecca, consisting of a granite rock about 150 feet high, which is one principal object of the Mahometan pilgrimages to that city.

ARAGUAYA, a large river of Brazil, which has its source in the 10th degree of S. lat. and running north, flows into the great river Tocantins, in Lat. 6. S.

ARAIKIE, FL. OF IARACHIE, a seaport town of Morocco, in the province of El Garb, at the mouth of the river El Kos, and fortified. In 1700, all Europeans were ordered to quit the town. Pop. 3000. Lat. 35. 11. N.

ARAKEERY, a town of Hindostan, in Mysore, 8 miles from Seringapatam.

ARAL, a lake or inland sea of Asia, in Independent Tartary, 150 miles long by 60 broad.

ARAMONT, a town of France, in Lower Languedoc, on the Rhone. Population 2200.

ARAMPALL, a town of Hindostan, in Madura. Its trade is considerable.

ARAXACUA, a large river of Chili, territory of Coquimbo, which falls into the Pacific.

ARANDA DE DUERO, a town of Spain, on the Duero, 90 miles N. Madrid. Population 3000.

ARANJUEZ, a beautiful palace belonging to the kings of Spain, situated on an island formed by the Tagus, the Xarama, and a canal, in the province of Toledo, 6½ Spanish leagues from Madrid. The adjoining town of Aranjuez was at first an inconsiderable village, and is indebted for its enlargement and present importance to Ferdinand VI. It is regularly built, in broad and parallel streets, with fine pavements. The principal church stands in the great square, along with the Franciscan monastery and covered market-place. Population during the residence of the court, about 10,000.

ARARAT, a lofty mountain of Armenia, held in great veneration, from a belief that Noah's ark rested on it. Height 9500 feet.

ARAS, anciently ARAXES, a river of Asia, which rises in Armenia, 20 miles S. of Erzerum, and joins the Kur, in about Long. 48. 30. E. Lat. 40. 5. N. 60 miles from the Caspian sea.

ARAU, a town of Switzerland, canton of Aargau, on the Aar. Population 2000.

ARAUCAIANS, a barbarous nation of Indians of the kingdom of Chili, who inhabit that delightful country situated between the rivers Biobio and Valdivia, and between the Andes and the sea, extending from 36. 44. to 39. 50. S. lat. They were formerly accustomed to carry on a trade with the Spaniards.

ARAURE, a city of South America, in the province of Venezuela, on the Acarigua, and N. N. E. of the city of Truxillo.

ARAY, or AORRIDH, a river of Scotland, which enters the sea at the head of Loch Fyne.

ARBE, or ARBA, an island in the gulf of Quarnero, in the Adriatic, off the coast of Croatian Littoral. Population 4000.—It has a town of the same name.

ARBISLOT, a village and parish of Scotland, in the county of Forfar. Pop. 1062.

ARBOIS, a town of France, in Franche Comte, with 900 houses, and 6420 inhabitants.

ARCADIA, the well known name of the mountainous province in the Morca which is now called Braccio di Mafua. The town that now goes by the name of Arcadia, formerly Cyparissa, is in the province of Belvedere. 40 miles N. W. Misitra.

ARCELES, a town of France, department of the Eastern Pyrenees, 12 miles S. E. Perpignan.

ARC-EN-BARROIS, a town of France, department of the Upper Marne. Pop. 1770.

ARCHANGEL, or ARCHANGELSKOE, a government in the Russian empire, containing, with the island of Nova Zembla, no less than 356,400 square miles, and 115,000 inhabitants. It lies under an inclement sky, where the summer is short, and the winter of uncommon severity. The principal wealth of the country lies in its fisheries, which extend along the whole coast. In the south there is a number of large forests, many wild animals, valuable for their fur, and good breeds of domestic cattle. It is divided into the eight circles of Archangel, Onega, Chelimgar, Schenkursk, Senegit, Kola, Meson, and Kem.

ARCHANGEL, or St MICHAEL, the capital of the above government of Russia in Europe, and a well known trading place, is seated at the mouth of the Dwina, a few miles from the White sea, and derives its name from a monastery, founded here in 1584, and dedicated to the archangel Michael. It became the chief town of the government in 1710. Archangel contains about 1200 houses, for the most part of wood; many of the streets are also paved with the same kind of materials. As a place of commerce it is much frequented by the traders of all nations, but in particular by the English, the Dutch, and the inhabitants of Bremen and Hamburg. The trade of this place was greatly injured by the erection of Petersburg into a commercial town. Archangel contains the chief deposit of foreign articles destined for Siberia. In summer is held the great market, in which train oil, tallow, tar, linseed, furs, wax, iron, and coarse linen, are exposed to sale, chiefly for the accommodation of foreigners. The harbour is rendered very inconvenient, and even dangerous, by an extensive sand-bank, with only 12½ feet of water. There are here 11 Russian churches, 1 Lutheran, and 1 Calvinist. Population from 5000 to 7000. 400 miles N. E. St Petersburg.

ARCHIAC, a small town of France, department of the Lower Charente. Pop. 1540.

ARCHIDONA, a town of Spain, on the frontier of Granada. Population 5000.

ARCHIDONA, a city of Quito, in the province of Quixas and Macas. In 1744 it was almost ruined by an explosion of the volcano of Cotopaxi. Population 700. 80 miles S. E. Quito. Long. 76. 48. W. Lat. 0. 45. S.

ARCHIPELAGO.—This term is applied to any track of sea abounding in small islands, and more particularly to the Aegean sea, or that part of the Mediterranean between the coasts of Asia Minor and Greece. Long. 23. to 27. E. Lat. 35. 30. to 40. 40. N.

ARCS-OUR-ARDE, a town of France, in Lower Champagne, on the Aube. Pop. 2320.

ARCO, or ARON, a town, with a castle, on the Sarca, and confines of Tyrol. Pop. 2700.

ARCOLE, a village of Italy, in the Veronese, about 15 English miles to the S. E. of Verona, remarkable for the defeat of the Austrians by the French, in a series of sanguinary actions, in 1796.

ARCOS, or ARCOS DE LA FRONTERA, a town of Spain, in Andalusie. It contains two parish churches, and seven convents. Population 12,000. 49 miles S. Sevilla.

ARCOF, a city of Hindostan, the capital of the Carnatic, on the river Pakar, here half a mile wide, but containing little water in the dry season. The town is extensive, and surrounds a large fort, which is in disrepair. Its chief manufacture is cotton cloths. The present town is of modern date, and owes its origin to the Mogul armies in 1716, who were forced to remove to it from the more unhealthy parts of the country. 73 miles from Madras, 217 from Seringapatam. Long. 79. 29. E. Lat. 12. 52. N.

ARDAGH, a town of Ireland, in the county of Longford, 5 miles S. E. Longford.

AREATOW, a town of Russia, government of Simbirsk. Population 780. 90 miles W. Simbirsk.

AREATOW, a town of Russia in Europe, government of Nischnei-Novgorod, with 150 houses.

AREBRACCAN, a village and parish of Ireland, in the county of Meath.

ARDECHE, or ARDECE, a river of France, which rises in the Cevennes, and after a course of about 15 leagues, falls into the Rhone.

ARDECHE, a department of France, on the north of Languedoc, which comprises the whole of the ancient diocese of Viviers, or the Upper and Lower Vivarais. It has its name from the far going river, and is bounded E. by the department of the Drome, from which it is separated by the Rhone; S. by the department of the Gard; W. by the departments of the Lozere and Upper Loire, from which it is separated by the Cevennes; N. W. by the department of the Loire; and N. E. by that of the Isere. It contains 2376 square miles, and had in 1816, a population of 284,743.

ARDEE, a town of Ireland, in the county of Louth, now much decayed. 35 miles N. W. Dublin.

ARDELAN, a province of Persia, forming the eastern division of Kurdistan. It extends 200 miles in length, from the stream Sharook to the Turkish district Zohaul, and is nearly 160 miles in breadth. From the Sharook to Senna, the capital of the province, the surface presents successive clusters of hills, heaped, as it were, on each other, on great table lands, covered with tents; and the flocks of tribes passing the summer months here, and in winter migrating towards Bagdad. Tobacco is cultivated in small quantities; and the extensive forests of oak on the mountains west of Senna, afford abundance of timber and gall nuts. The former is floated down the Tih in rafts, and the latter exported to India. Various tribes inhabit Ardelan, which are represented as brave and hospitable, but addicted to war and rapine, and scarce considering murder as a crime. The capital, Senna, is situated in Long. 40. E. Lat. 35. 12. N.

ARDENELLE, a town of Hindostan, in Coimbatore, 47 miles S. E. Seringapatam.

ARDENNES, a very extensive forest in the department of Ardennes, which reaches from Sedan and Mezieres, to Philippeville on the one side, and Avesnes on the other.

ARDENNES, a department in France, having the Netherlands and the department of the Meuse to the N. and E., the department of the Aisne to the W., and that of the Marne to the S. It is 25 leagues long, and 18 broad: its area contains 1,020,189 square acres, and on this surface there are 346,000 inhabitants. In the north it is full of mountains and woods, in the south-east the soil is chalky, in the south-west it consists of a rich loam, and in the east it is stony. It is watered by the Aisne and Meuse, and produces grain of all kinds, wood, iron, coal, and slate. But its riches lie in its forests, its pastures, and its cattle. The iron mines are productive.

ARDES, a town of France, department of the Puy de Dome. Population 1640.

ARDESILLAS, a village of Ireland, in the county of Clare, 13 miles from Limerick.

ARDEVIL, or ARDEBIL, a town of Persia, in the province of Azerbaijan, formerly of importance, but now chiefly remarkable for the tomb of sheik Seff, a celebrated saint. 56 miles N. E. Tabreez.

ARDFERT, a town of Ireland, formerly capital of the county of Kerry, but now a ruinous and decayed village. 4 miles N. W. Tralee.

ARDFINNAN, a village of Ireland, county of Tipperary, 6 miles N. W. Clonmel.

ARDGLASS, a seaport town of Ireland, county of Down, 5 miles S. E. Downpatrick.

ARDILLATS, LES, a town of France, department of the Rhone. Population 1000.

ARDINGAY, a town of Hindostan, 44 miles S. W. Tanjore.

ARDIS, a town of Asiatic Turkey, government of Diarbeshir, on the Tigris, 30 miles N. N. W. Diarbekir.

ARDISTAN, a town of Persia, province of Irak, 80 miles N. N. E. Ispahan.

ARDMORE, a village of Ireland, county of Waterford, 7 miles S. W. Dungarvon.

ARDMOY, a village of Ireland, in the county of Antrim, 8 miles N. E. Ballymoney.

ARDOCH, a village of Scotland, in Perthshire, 8 miles N. Dumblane.

ARDOYE, a town of the Netherlands, with 5900 inhabitants, not far from Bruges.

ARDRA, or ARDRAH, a considerable territory on the Slave coast of Africa, immediately east of Whidah.

ARDRA, called also AZEM, a large city, capital of the kingdom of Ardra, in Africa. It is situated about 40 miles inland. The walls are said to be nine English miles in circumference, though it is not peopled in proportion to this extent, as the streets are very broad, and the houses, from the dread of fire, built at some little distance from each other. Long. 1. 52. E. Lat. 6. 36. N.

ARDRE, or ARDRES, a well fortified town of France, 6 miles from Calais. Pop. 1600.

ARDROSSAN, a seaport and parish of Scotland, in Ayrshire. It is a resort for sea-bathing. Population of the parish 3105.

ARDSTINGHAR, or STINGHAR, a river of Scotland, in Ayrshire, which falls into the sea at Ballantrae.

ARDSTRAW, a village and parish of Ireland, in the county of Tyrone. Population of the parish 18,122. 6 miles S. Strabane.

ARDVERT, a town of France, department of the Lower Charente. Population 2600.

AREBO, or ARBON, a town of Benin, on the river Fornosa, 60 miles from its mouth. Long. 5. 8. E. Lat. 5. 58. N.

AREDA, EL, a ridge of mountains in Arabia Deserta.

AREGH, or ARRACK, a town of Hindostan, in Bejapoor, 10 miles E. Merritch.

ARENDONK, a town of the Netherlands, in the quarter of Antwerp. Population 2850.

ARENDSEE, a town of Prussia, in Brandenburg. Population 1000.

ARENS DE MAR, a town of Spain, on the coast of Catalonia, 12 leagues from Girona. It manufactures silk and cotton stockings, and other stuffs. The women are employed in making lace. Population 3500.

ARENSBERG, a town of Germany, on the Roer, in Westphalia. Population 2535.

ARENSBURG, the chief town of the island of Osel, in the Baltic. It has a castle. Population 1400.

ARENSWALDE, a town in the circle of the same name, in the New Mark of Brandenburg. Population 2150.

AREQUIBA, the capital of the province of the same name in Peru, founded by order of Pizarro in 1536, in the valley of Quilca, at 20 leagues distance from the Pacific ocean. It is one of the largest towns in Peru, containing about 40,000 inhabitants; and the houses are well built of stone, and vaulted.

It is watered by the river Chili, which is let off by sluices, to irrigate the environs, and to enrich the fields. It has been frequently nearly destroyed by earthquakes, in 1562, 1600, 1604, 1687, 1725, 1732, and 1738. 217 leagues S. E. Lixia, 60 from Cuzco. Long. 71. 54. W. Lat. 16. 16. S.

ARAYALO, a town of Spain, in Old Castile. Population 2600.

AREZZO, a town in the grand duchy of Tuscany, at the influx of the Chiano into the Arno. It is the see of a bishop, has two collegiate churches, 15 parish churches, 18 religious houses, and four hospitals. It was the birth-place of Petrarch in 1304. 34 miles S. E. Florence.

ARGANA, a town of Asiatic Turkey, in Diarbekir. General Gardanne affirms that it consists of only 60 houses. Mr Jackson describes it as a large and populous town. Long. 39. 20. E. Lat. 36. 15. N.

ARGANIL, a town of Portugal, province of Beira. Population 1100.

ARGÈS, a village of France, department of the Eastern Pyrenees, 5 leagues S. E. Perpignan. Population 1360.

ARGES, a river in Upper Suedia, which falls into Lake Constance, N. of Bregentz.

ARGENCE, a village of France, in Lower Normandy, 5½ leagues E. S. E. Caen.—Also the name of two other villages.

ARGENT, a village of France, department of the Cher. Population 1050.

ARGENTAC, or ARGENTAT, a town of France, department of the Corrèze. Population 2529.

ARGENTAN, a well built town in Lower Normandy. It has manufactures of paint lace, linen cloth, light stuffs, and leather. Population 5533. 44 leagues W. Paris.

ARGENTÉIL, a town of France, surrounded by walls and ditches, on the Seine, two leagues from Paris. Here was formerly a Benedictine nunnery, of which the celebrated Heloise was prioress. Population 4760. 3 leagues N. E. St Germain.

ARGENTÉUIL, a town of France, in Champagne, department of the Yonne. Pop. 1000.

ARGENTIERA, or KIMOLI, a small island in the Archipelago. Long. 24. 42. E. Lat. 36. 47. N.

ARGENTIERE, a town of Languedoc, department of the Ardeche, on the Ligne. Population 2000.

ARGENTON, a town of France, department of the Indre, on the Creuse. Population 3400.

ARGENTRE-SOUS-LAVAL, a town of France, department of the Mayenne. Pop. 1650.

ARGENTRE-SOUS-VITRE, a town in Brittany, 9 leagues E. Rennes. Population 2300.

ARGIEN, a populous village in the pachalia of Bagdad, on the Euphrates, 25 miles N. Sur.

ARGISCH, a river which rises in the mountains between Wallachia and Transylvania, and joins the Danube.

ARGITE, a small island in the gulf of Egina, near the mainland of Greece.

ARGOS, the name of a small but well known kingdom of the Peloponnesus, which now constitutes, along with Corinth and Nicyon, the province of Saccania, or Romania Minor. Argos, the chief town, stands on the river Nacho, anciently Inachus, and has still nearly 10,000 inhabitants. Long. 22. 47. E. Lat. 37. 46. N.

ARGOSTOLI, the chief town of the Ionian islands of Cephalonia, with a good harbour. The houses are small and neatly built. Population 5000. 8 miles W. S. W. Cephalonia.

ARGOËRE, a town of France, in Lower Normandy, with 230 houses.

ARGVIN, a small island, situated in a gulf of the same name, on the western coast of Africa. Long. 16. 20. W. Lat. 20. 23. N.

ARGVX, a river of Tartary, which rises from a lake in 119. 14. E. long, and 49. N. lat. and is considered the source of the Amur. 100 miles E. Netschinsk.

ARGVSKOI, a town and fortress of Siberia, on the Argon, 163 miles from its mouth.

AUGVIE, or AUGVIL, a maritime county on the west coast of Scotland, consisting partly of the mainland, and partly of islands. It is bounded N. by Inverness-shire, E. by Perth and Dunbarton-shires, S. by the Irish sea and the river Clyde, and W. by the Atlantic. Its shores consist of many long promontories and deep bays and inlets, in which the herring fishery is prosecuted with success. The continental part is 115 miles in length and 68 in breadth. The total superficial area is calculated at 3390 square miles, of which 1063 are insular, and 2326 continental; and it is computed that the sea-coast of the latter occupies a line of 600 miles. A large portion of Argyleshire consists of heath, rocks, and mountains, of which last Ben Crumchan rises 3320 feet above the level of the sea. Lead, copper, and iron, are produced in this county; and coal is wrought near Campbelltown. There is a profusion of beautiful marble, of different colours, which is susceptible of the highest polish; there are also inexhaustible quarries of fine blue slate. The lands of this county are particularly adapted for grazing farms; numbers of black cattle are accordingly reared, and sent to the market of the low countries. Extensive districts have lately been converted into sheep farms. Kelp is made along the shores, and some of fine quality is produced from the islands. The great bulk of the inhabitants are occupied in the fisheries, and in agricultural and pastoral pursuits. Argyleshire is divided into six districts: Argyle, Cowal, Kintyre, Lorn, Islay, and Mull, which constitute 50 parishes. It contains two royal burghs, Inverary and Campbelltown, and three post towns, Oban, Lochgilphead, and Tarbert, and it returns one member to parliament. Pop. 97,316; families 18,309, of which there are 8689 occupied in agriculture, 3468 in trade and manufactures, and 5552 others.

ARGVRO CASTRO, a small town of Albania, on the left bank of the Drino.

ARRELLIGEN, a village of Germany, in Hesse. Population 1390.

ARIANCOPANG, a small town of Hindostan, on the Carnatic coast, 3 miles S. Pondicherry.

ARIANO, a town of Naples, with a domain, situated on a steep hill in the Principato Ultra; the see of a bishop. It was visited by earthquakes in 1456 and 1732. Pop. 10,700.

ARICA, the capital of a province of the same name, in Peru, on the coast of the Pacific, with a convenient port. It was destroyed by an earthquake in 1605. 210 miles N. W. La Plata. Long. 70. 14. W. Lat. 18. 20. S.

ARID ISLAND, an island in the South Pacific ocean. Long. 41. 40. E. Lat. 46. 30. S.

ARIETORE, a town of Hindostan, in the Carnatic, 32 miles N. Tanjore.

ARIMOA, an island in the Eastern seas, lying off the eastern coast of Timor.

ARINOS, a river of Brazil, which enters the Tapayes.

ARINTHOD, a town of France, in Franche Comte. Population 1315.

ARISALA, a town of Hindostan, in Mysore, 40 miles E. Chinnah Baharum.

ARISE, a small town of France, in Champagne, with 1300 inhabitants.

ARISH, EL, a town of Egypt, on the Mediterranean, on the frontier of Syria, celebrated for the convention concluded there by Sir Sidney Smith with the French army. 101 miles N. W. Cairo.

ARISPE, a town of Mexico, in the intendancy of Soloma, near the source of the river Yaqui. Population 7600.

ARKADINSKAIA, a town of Russian Tartary, on the river Medveditza. 240 miles N. E. Azoph. Long. 43. 4. E. Lat. 50. 10. N.

ARKANSAS, a county of the United States, in Missouri. Population in 1817, 5000.

ARKANSAW, a river of North America, rises in the Rocky Mountains, above 41. N. lat. and running S. E. more than 2000 miles, falls into the Mississippi 100 miles above the mouth of Red river. It is navigable almost to its source. Next to Missouri it is the longest tributary of the Mississippi.

ARKANSAW TERRITORY, in the United States, bounded N. by Missouri territory and state, E. by the Mississippi, S. by Louisiana and the Spanish dominions, W. by the Spanish dominions. Population in 1810, 1062, exclusive of Indians; in 1817, about 5000. The principal rivers are Arkansaw, White, St Francis, and Wichita. The country on the Arkansaw furnishes fine hunting grounds. It abounds with buffaloes, deer, elk, bears, wolves, panthers, &c.

ARKEVEN, a town of Asiatic Turkey, government of Trebisond, on the Black sea.

ARKAVIA, a town of European Turkey, in Walachia, on the borders of Transylvania.

ARKEEKO, or ERKEIRO, a seaport of Abyssinia, at the bottom of the bay of Massauh; a mere collection of miserable huts, as described by Lord Valentia. Long. 39. 45. E. 15. 32. N.

KINGARTHDALE, a town and parish of Scotland, in the North Riding of Yorkshire. Inhabitation 1512.

ARKLOW, a seaport town of Ireland, in the county of Wicklow, on the Avoca or Oroca, near the Irish sea, which is crossed here by a bridge of 19 arches. 12 miles S. Wicklow.

ARLANT, a town of France, in Lower Auvergne, on the river Dore, département of the Puy de Dôme. Not far from it stands the borough of Arlant. Pop. of both 8350.

ARLANZA, a small river of Spain, which falls into the Arlanzon, near Burgos.

ARLANZON, a river of Spain, in Old Castile, which falls into the Pisuerga, on the borders of Leon.

ARLE, a small town in the electorate of Saltzburg, 10 miles S. W. Stadtadt.

ARLES, a large, ancient, and well built town of France, in Lower Provence, on the left bank of the Rhone, where the canal of Craponne unites itself with the river, which here divides into two branches. It is now in the diocese of the archbishop of Aix. Besides the cathedral church, there were a collegiate church, 6 parish churches, 2 abbays, 17 religious houses, a Jesuits' college, a hospital, and a royal academy of sciences founded in 1639. Here have been held, at different periods, no less than 13 ecclesiastical councils. Here are the remains of a magnificent Roman amphitheatre. It carries on some trade in corn, wine, oil, fruit, sheep, and sausages, and has a few manufactures of serge, gold and silver articles, and saltpetre. Population 21,000. 174 leagues S. S. E. Paris. Long. 5. 43. E. Lat. 43. 40. N.

ARLES, a town of France, département of the Eastern Pyrenees, with hot mineral springs. Population 1230.

ARLESHEIM, a village of Switzerland, in the canton of Bale, 3 miles S. Bale.

ARLEUX, a town of France, on the river Sene, département of the North. Pop. 1460.

ARLON, a district and small town of the Netherlands, in the duchy of Luxemburg. Population 3130.

ARMA, or SANTIAGO DE, a city of South America, province of Antioquia. 160 miles N. E. Popayan. Long. 75. 36. W. Lat. 6. 33. N.

ARMACOTTA, a town of Hindostan, in the Southern Carnatic, 75 miles S. E. Tanjore.

ARMAGH, a county in Ireland, so called from a city of the province of Ulster, is bounded N. by Lough Neagh, W. by Tyrone and Monaghan counties, S. by Louth, and E. by county Down. It is 20 English miles in breadth, and 31 in length from N. to S. containing an area of 293,871 acres, or 459 square miles, of which 244,000 acres are in general fit for cultivation. It is traversed by a chain of mountains, which abound in prospects highly picturesque. It is also well watered. This county sends two members to parliament. Population 141,381.

ARMAGH, a city of Ulster, anciently the metropolis of Ireland, and now the capital of the county of Armagh, situated on a hill, near the river Callen. It is the seat of the consistorial court of the archbishop of Armagh, the primate and metropolitan of the Ireland. Armagh was, in the middle centuries, an extensive and populous city, but had much declined from its ancient magnificence. Its cathedral had been frequently plundered and laid waste. By the princely munificence of its primate, Dr Robinson, afterwards Baron Rokeby, the cathedral was repaired, and the town altogether renovated. He built and endowed an observatory, a library, and a palace, with a chapel on the glebe adjacent to the city; also a parish church, and a school where children are to be educated gratuitously, according to the modern improved system. A very elegant county courthouse, in which the business of the assizes, quarter sessions, &c. is transacted, has been lately built; and on the west side of the city is a charter-house, or eleemosynary poor school. The Presbyterians, Catholics, Seceders, and Methodists, have each their several places of worship. A fair is held every Monday before the union sent two days of the week; it now only returns to the most copious and very large market every Tuesday. The principal commodity sold in it is linen cloth in the brown state. Population 7000. 62 miles N. Dublin.

ARMANÇON, a river of France, which falls into the Yonne.

ARMASAO, a small town of Brazil, in South America, which is a great fishing station for whales. Long. 47. 20. W. Lat. 27. 5. S.

ARMDALE, a village of Scotland, in the county of Sutherland.

ARMEGONG, a town of Hindostan, on the coast of the Carnatic, 66 miles N. Madras.

ARMENASS, a village of Syria, where glass is manufactured. 35 miles W. Aleppo.

ARMENIA, a kingdom of Asia, bounded N. by Georgia and Mingrelia, S. and E. by the territories of Julamerick and the province of Azerbaijan, and W. by the river Euphrates. It is traversed by the Tigris and Euphrates, by the Araxes, the Kars, and many other inferior streams. The country in general is mountainous, and owing to its height above the level of the sea, is of a colder temperature than might have been expected from its geographical position. The celebrated Mount Ararat forms an angle of an immense range of mountains, and rears its lofty peak amid everlasting snow. Armenia produces valuable minerals, such as gold, silver, copper, lead, and iron: salt-petre, sulphur, and bitumen. There are productive quarries of jasper and marble. Wheat and barley are most extensively cultivated. Cotton, hemp, tobacco, and raw silk, are also plentiful. Manna is produced in sufficient quantities to be exported; and honey and wax are obtained in the hilly districts. The principal manufactures and trade of this country are in copper and iron, silk and cotton, wine, tobacco, and manna. The country is subject to the Turks, Persians, and Kurds, though it is not certain in what proportion it is distributed between those different powers. No satisfactory estimate can be formed of the Population of this extensive country.

ARMENT, on the Nile, in Upper Egypt, now a mere village, but formerly a considerable town, under the name of Hieronutis. 16 miles N. Ene.

ARMENTIERES, a town in French Flanders, on the Lys, department of the North. It has manufactures of linen and other stuffs. Population 7600. 3 leagues N. W. Lille.

ARMIRA, a seaport of European Turkey, in Thessaly. Long. 23. 9. E. Lat. 39. 20. N.

ARMISE, a village of France, department of the Ain. Population 1200.

ARMLEY, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 4273. 2 miles from Leeds.

ARMSDALE HEAD, a cape on the N. coast of Scotland. Long. 3. 56. W. Lat. 58. 36. N.

ARMSTRONG, a county of the United States, in Pennsylvania. Population 25,317. Chief town Kittanning.

ARNA, a town, with a good harbour, in the island of Andros, in the Archipelago.

ARNSACH, a village of Wirtemberg, with 660 inhabitants.

ARNAS, a town of Sweden, province of Angermundland.

ARNAIS-LE-PORT, a town of France, department of the Upper Vienne. Houses 260.

ARNAU, a town of Bohemia, on the Elbe, 9 miles N. Koniggratz, with 220 houses.

ARNAY-LE-DEU, a town of France, department of the Cote d'Or. Population 2780. 10½ leagues S. W. Dijon.

ARNcliffe, a parish of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1063.

ARNHEIM, a borough in the Old Mark of Brandenburg, on the Elbe. Population 1007. Long. 12. 6. E. Lat. 52. 48. N.

ARSEDU, a town of Spain, in Burgos, near the Ebro. Pop. 2400. 3 miles S. Calahorra.

ARSEE, a town of Hindostan, in the Carnatic, 75 miles S. W. Madras.

ARSENUEDES, a small seaport on Walcheren island, 6 miles N. N. E. Flushing.

ARNHAGEN, a town of Germany, in Pomerania, 24 miles N. W. New Stettin.

ARNHEM, the capital of the Dutch province of Gelderland. It lies at the foot of a hill near the Rhine, 3½ miles from the spot where the Yssel branches off from that river. It is neatly built, and its fortifications were greatly enlarged by the famous Coehorn, in 1702. Population 10,060. 30 miles E. Utrecht. Long. 6. 37. E. Lat. 52. N.

ARNHEIM BAY, a spacious bay at the north-west extremity of the gulf of Carpentaria. Kangaroos are abundant, and parrots are seen in the woods. Lat. of the entrance 12. 11. S. Long. 136. 3. E.

ARNO, the principal river in Tuscany, has its source in the Apennines, and after traversing the grand duchy from east to west, loses itself in that part of the Mediterranean call'd the Tuscan sea.

ARNOLP, a town and parish of England, 4 miles from Nottingham. Population 357.

ARNOLD, a small river of Lower Canada, which falls into Lake Megantick.

ANNOTI, St. a town of France, department of the Eux and Loire. Pop. 1300. 27 miles S. N. W. Paris.

ANNSTEIN, a town of Germany, in Hesse-Darmstadt, 3 miles N. W. Worms.

ARNSTADT, a well built and thriving town of Saxony, on the river Gera. It has a considerable trade in corn and wool. Pop. 4600.

ARNSTEIN, a small town of Bavaria, on the Wehrn. Population 1200.

ARNSTEIN, a handsome town, with an abbey, on the Lahn. Population 2000.

ARONCE, a town of Spain, in Seville, 46 miles N. W. Seville.

ARONA, a town of Italy, in the Upper Novarese, on Lago Maggiore. Population 1000.

ARONA, a river of Italy, States of the Church, which falls into the Mediterranean.

AROU, an island in the Eastern sea, 110 miles long by 40 broad, south of Papua. Long. 135. E. Lat. 6. S.

AROS, a village and harbour of Scotland, in the island of Mull.

ARPAIA, a village of Naples, 6 miles S. S. W. Benevento.

ARPAJON, a town of France, on the Orge, 7 leagues S. Versailles. Population 2100.

ARPAJON, a town of France, department of the Cantal, with 320 houses.

ARRELSNIS, a village of the Netherlands, in Brabant, noted for its lime pits.

ARRENON, a river of France, department of the Cotes du Nord, which runs into the English channel.

ARQUES, a river of France, department of the Lower Seine, which loses itself in the English channel, near Dieppe.

ARQUES, a town of France, department of the Lower Seine. Population 1700.

ARRACAN, formerly an independent kingdom, but since the year 1783 a province of the Birman empire. It is situated to the S. E. of Bengal, extending from the river Naat to Cape Negroes, being about 500 miles in length, but various in breadth; the coast is also studded with a number of formerly fertile islands. On the east it is divided from Pegu and Ava by a range of mountains, through which there are very few passes. Considerable commerce is carried on with Bengal. The exports are chiefly honey, wax, ivory, drugs, sapphires, rubies, and gold; in exchange, they take back tissues, silks, muslins, European commodities of all kinds, pearls and diamonds.

ARRACAN, a city and capital of the above province, is on the Arracan. It is the residence of a viceroy. The harbour, it is said, has six fathoms water at the bar, and is capable of containing a large fleet. Long. 93. 55. E. Lat. 20. 40. N.

ARRACOLA, a village nearly nine miles from Deput. Population 1500.

ARRAGON, or ARRAGONIA, a province of Spain, formerly governed by its own king and awa. It is bounded by the Pyrenees on the N., Navarre and Castile on the W., Valencia on the S., and Catalonia on the E. The soil is productive, abounding in olives and other fruits. Here are raised also maize, hemp, madder, and saffron; and excellent wine is exported in considerable quantities. So early as the year 1170, silk worms were reared at Cespe, and the quantity of silk made and exported in 1784 was 300,000. The mineral products are alum, vitriol, jasper, marble, lead, and iron; but the breeding of sheep forms the grand branch of industry. The wool is in high esteem with foreigners, particularly with the English, who use it in their finest cloths. There are few manufactures. Mining is carried on to a considerable extent. Population, 630,000.

ARRAGOS, a river of Spain, province of the same name, which joins the Ebro in Navarre.

ARRAIT, a town of Georgia, province of Melran, on the Arabian Sea. Long. 63. E. Lat. 25. 25. N.

ARRAN, a town of Scotland, in the province of Behn. Long. 84. 48. there were a N.

ARRAN, an island in the Firth of Clyde, west of Scotland, near the mouth of the Clyde, 80 miles in length, by from 1 to 11 in breadth, and containing a superficial area of 165 square miles, or 195,311 acres, of which about 11,131 are cultivated. In the mountains are found marble, jasper, agates, calcareous, and a fine species of rock crystal, commonly called the Arran Diamond. On the coast are two good harbours, Lamlash and Loch Hanan; besides commodious small ones, some of which were lately formed. Most of the high land was at one time a common, which afforded a scanty subsistence to the cattle during summer. The whole of the cultivated land is now subdivided and inclosed, and the hills laid out in sheep walks. Small patches of flax are cultivated, and an inconsiderable quantity of linen, and some woollens, are manufactured. The shores of the island are frequented by shoals of salmon, herring, and white fish. A few red deer are also still found in the island; and black cock and other species of grouse are plentiful. Arran is divided into two parishes, Kilbride and Kilmore; and its principal town, or rather village, is Lamlash. Conjoined with Bute, it forms a county under the name of the latter. The island has been several centuries in possession of the family of the dukes of Hamilton. Population 6541.

ARRAS, a large and strongly fortified town of France, the capital of the department of the Pas de Calais, on the Scarpe, 13 leagues N. E. Amiens. It is one of the oldest towns in the kingdom, having been, in the time of Caesar, the seat of the Atrebatum, under the name of Nemetacum, or Atrebatum. Besides the manufacture of fine linen, Arras is known by its tapestry. It contains likewise manufactures of dimity; and the breweries are very considerable. An active trade is also carried on in grain, lace, and porcelain. Arras was the birth-place of Robespierre. Population 18,672. Long. 2. 51. E. Lat. 50. 17. N.

ARAYOTOS, a town of Portugal, province of Alentejo. Population 2700.

AREAU, a town of France, department of the Upper Pyrenees, 10 leagues S. Tarbes.

ARECIFE, a town of the province of Buenos Ayres, on a river of its name. Long. 60. 27. W. Lat. 34. 4. S.

ARIANA, a small village, two leagues to the north of Tunis.

ARRIEGE, a river of France, which rises in the Pyrenean mountains, and joins the Garonne.

ARRIEGE, a department of France, bounded E. by that of the Aude, S. E. by that of the Eastern Pyrenees, S. by a part of the Pyrenean mountains, and W. and N. by the department of the Gironde. It includes the towns of Foix, Couserans, and a small sea. This department. Its extent is 21 leagues, of very fine, and its population, according to the last recent returns, 222,936. chiefly of wine.

ARUN, the most con. town of Hindostan, district of the containing about 300 houses. 53 miles for Trichinopoly.

ARUN, a small but very fruitful island in the Baltic, S. W. Funen. Population in 1803, 7573. Long. 19. 20. E. Lat. 54. 53. N.

ARUN, another small Danish island in the Little Belt, between the island of Funen and the coast of Sleswick.

ARROE, a cluster of islands in the Red sea, about midway between Mocha and the opposite coast.

ARROESKOPING, a small but flourishing town of the island of Arroe, in the Baltic, with a good harbour. Population 1300.

ARROH, a small river of France, department of the Nièvre, which joins the Loire.

ARRONCHES, a fortified town of Portugal, in Alentejo. Population 1700.

ARROS, a river of France, department of the Landes, which joins the Adour.

ARROUX, a river of France, which rises in the department of the Cote d'Or.

ARROW, two rivers of England, one falls into the Lug, in Herefordshire; the other into the Avon, in Worcestershire.

ARROW, a river of Ireland, which flows from Loch Arrow to the sea, 5 miles S. W. Sligo.

ARROYA DE ELMEDINA, DE PABEN, DE RAMALLO, DE L. CHINA, four towns of the province and government of Buenos Ayres.

ARROYOS, a town of South America, in Paraguay, 61 miles E. Assumption.

ARS, or ARTS, a small island of France, on the west coast of Brittany.

ARS, a town of France, on the coast of the island of Rhé. Population 3000.

ARSAC, a town of France, in Gascony, department of the Lower Pyrenees. Population 1015. 12 leagues E. S. E. Dax.

ARSACIDES, an archipelago in the South Pacific ocean, to which the name of Solomon's islands is now given by modern geographers.

ARSAMAS, or ARSAWAS, the chief town in the circle of the same name, in the government of Nishnei-Novgorod, in European Russia, on the river Tescha. The houses are meanly built. It has manufactures of linen, leather, soap, potash, dye-stuffs, and other articles. Population 6000.

ARSEEWAN, a town of Hindostan, in the circle of Orissa.

ARSK, a small town of Russia, on the Kaska, with a wooden fortress and 100 houses. 40 miles N. N. E. Kasan.

ARSCH, ASOR, ARSAP, or ARSID, a hamlet on the coast of Syria, 10 miles N. Jaffa.

ART, or UNTERART, a well built town of Switzerland, in the canton of Schwitz. Population 2300. 17 miles N. Schwitz.

ARTA, or LARTA, a town of European Turkey, in Albania, on the river of the same name. Its trade is in cattle, wine, tobacco, cotton, flax, pulse, fur, leather, and other commodities. It has also manufactures of coarse woollen and other cloths. 360 miles W. N. W. Constantinople. Long. 21. 8. E. Lat. 39. 30. N.

ARTAK, a town of Asiatic Turkey, in Naticolia, on the sea of Marmora, 90 miles S. W. Constantinople.

ARTANNE, a town of France, on the Indre, department of the Indre and Loire, with 260 houses.

ARTENAC, a town of France, department of Lower Charente. Population 1500.

ARTENAY, a town of France, department of the Loiret. Population 1500.

ARTERN, a town of Germany, county of Mansfeld. Pop. 2240. 10 miles W. Eisleben.

ARTHEZ, the name of two towns in France, department of the Lower Pyrenees. Populations 800, 2080.

ARTHER KULL. See Newark Bay.

ARTIBONITO, a large and abundant river of St Domingo.

ARTOIS, a county and government of France, which had Picardy on the S. and W., French Flanders on the N., and French Hainault and Cambresis on the E. It is now divided into the departments of the Pas de Calais, the Somme, and the North.

ARTON, a town of France, department of the Loire Inferieure, 7 leagues W. S. W. Nantes.

ARTORNE, a town of France, department of the Puy de Dome, on the river Morges. Population about 1100.

ARTZEN, a market town of Hanover, principality of Calenberg, with 130 houses.

ARTY, VARMEGYE, or ORAWA, a county in Hungary, situated among the Carpathian mountains, with an inclement atmosphere and barren soil. The inhabitants, who are chiefly Bohemian Slavonians, amount to 74,973.

ARVA, a river of Hungary, which falls into the Waag.

AREBA, a town of Persia, in the province of Bickran, 90 miles E. Mekran.

ARUDY, a market town of France, department of the Lower Pyrenees. Pop. 1629.

ARVE, a river in Savoy, which falls into the Rhone near the town of Geneva.

ARUN, a river of England, which flows into the sea, at Little Hampton, in Sussex.

ARUNDEL, a town of England, in Sussex, on the Arun, which is here navigable; and over it is a neat stone bridge. Arundel is a borough by prescription, and has sent two members to parliament from the time of Edward I. It was formerly a place of great strength, and was besieged by Henry I. in person, by whom it was taken, after a gallant resistance, from the earl of Arundel. The castle was completely repaired by the late duke of Norfolk, at a great expence. Weekly market on Thursday. Population 2511. 57 miles S. London.

ARZAC, a small town of France, in the department of the Lower Pyrenees.

ARZAMUS, a town of Asiatic Russia, in the government of Nishnei-Novgorod, 64 miles from Nishnei-Novgorod. Long. 43. 34. E. Lat. 55. 20. N.

ARZANEAU, a town of France, in Brittany, department of Finistère. Population 4150.

ARZBURG, a market town of Bavaria, in the circle of the Maine. Population 1100.

ARZENOIN, a town of Asiatic Turkey, government of Erzerum, on the Euphrates, 45 miles W. Erzerum. Long. 39. 50. E. Lat. 39. 40. N.

ARZEW, a seaport town in the western part of the kingdom of Algiers. It appears to be the ancient Arsenaria, and contains many relics of antiquity. 16 miles E. Oran. Long. 1. E. Lat. 35. 52. N.

ARZIGNANA, a well built and populous place in Upper Italy, territory of Vicenza, 15 miles W. S. W. Vicenza.

ARZILLA, a seaport of Morocco, the first that occurs on the Mediterranean, after passing Cape Spertel. Population 1000.

ARZON, a town of France, department of the Upper Loire. Population 1500.

ASAD-ABAD, a large and populous town of Persia, 70 miles N. W. Hamadan.

ASANGARO, a province of Peru, to the N. E. of Lake Chacuito. Population 5000.

ASARKE, St., a town of North Wales, in the county of Flint, consisting of little more than a single street. The cathedral, which is a plain building, is 170 feet long, and 90 feet deep. The episcopal palace is a spacious and commodious building. Population 3294. 23 miles W. Chester, 317 N. W. London.

ASARIX, a town of Westphalia, in the principality of Munster, 4 miles S. E. Asen.

ASARKE, a large kingdom in the interior of Africa, between Fezzan and Cashna.

ASARUS, a town in the Prussian grand duchy of the Lower Rhine.

ASARUS, a town of France, department of the Lower Pyrenees. Population 1700.

ASARUS, a town of Palestine, on the sea coast, 30 miles S. W. Jerusalem.

ASARUS, a barren and uninhabited island in the Atlantic, between the coast of Africa and that of Brazil. It is ten miles in length, and five or six in breadth. Long. 14. 28. W. Lat. 8. 41. S.

ASCENSION, the capital city of the island of Margarita, founded in 1525.

ASCENSION FLAX, on the E. side of the peninsula of Yucatan, in the bay of Honduras. Long. 88. 58. W. Lat. 19. 30. N.

ASCH, a market town of Germany, on the rivulet of the same name, with 420 houses, in the Bohemian circle of Egra.

ASCHACH, a large market town of Upper Austria, with a fine castle, on the Danube.

ASCHAFFENBURG, a fortified town of Franconia, on the Main, a town which there is a neat stone bridge. The electors of Mentz had here an elegant camp. The public buildings are the houses of the elector, and St Alexander, a Protestant church. Foundation called St. Pauli. Long. 63. 8. E. Lat. 49. 50. N.

ASCH, a town of Prussia, in the principality of Halberstadt, between the rivers Elbe and Wipper, 16 miles S. E. Halberstadt. It was formerly a Hanse town, and has good manufactures of frieze and flannel. Here is a Lutheran and a Calvinist school, with four churches.

ASCH, a town of Prussia, in the principality of Halberstadt, between the rivers Elbe and Wipper, 16 miles S. E. Halberstadt. It was formerly a Hanse town, and has good manufactures of frieze and flannel. Here is a Lutheran and a Calvinist school, with four churches.

ASCH, a town of Prussia, in the principality of Halberstadt, between the rivers Elbe and Wipper, 16 miles S. E. Halberstadt. It was formerly a Hanse town, and has good manufactures of frieze and flannel. Here is a Lutheran and a Calvinist school, with four churches.

ASCH, a town of Prussia, in the principality of Halberstadt, between the rivers Elbe and Wipper, 16 miles S. E. Halberstadt. It was formerly a Hanse town, and has good manufactures of frieze and flannel. Here is a Lutheran and a Calvinist school, with four churches.

ASCH, a town of Prussia, in the principality of Halberstadt, between the rivers Elbe and Wipper, 16 miles S. E. Halberstadt. It was formerly a Hanse town, and has good manufactures of frieze and flannel. Here is a Lutheran and a Calvinist school, with four churches.

ASCH, a town of Prussia, in the principality of Halberstadt, between the rivers Elbe and Wipper, 16 miles S. E. Halberstadt. It was formerly a Hanse town, and has good manufactures of frieze and flannel. Here is a Lutheran and a Calvinist school, with four churches.

ASCH, a town of Prussia, in the principality of Halberstadt, between the rivers Elbe and Wipper, 16 miles S. E. Halberstadt. It was formerly a Hanse town, and has good manufactures of frieze and flannel. Here is a Lutheran and a Calvinist school, with four churches.

ASCH, a town of Prussia, in the principality of Halberstadt, between the rivers Elbe and Wipper, 16 miles S. E. Halberstadt. It was formerly a Hanse town, and has good manufactures of frieze and flannel. Here is a Lutheran and a Calvinist school, with four churches.

ASCH, a town of Prussia, in the principality of Halberstadt, between the rivers Elbe and Wipper, 16 miles S. E. Halberstadt. It was formerly a Hanse town, and has good manufactures of frieze and flannel. Here is a Lutheran and a Calvinist school, with four churches.

ASCH, a town of Prussia, in the principality of Halberstadt, between the rivers Elbe and Wipper, 16 miles S. E. Halberstadt. It was formerly a Hanse town, and has good manufactures of frieze and flannel. Here is a Lutheran and a Calvinist school, with four churches.

ASCH, a town of Prussia, in the principality of Halberstadt, between the rivers Elbe and Wipper, 16 miles S. E. Halberstadt. It was formerly a Hanse town, and has good manufactures of frieze and flannel. Here is a Lutheran and a Calvinist school, with four churches.

ASCH, a town of Prussia, in the principality of Halberstadt, between the rivers Elbe and Wipper, 16 miles S. E. Halberstadt. It was formerly a Hanse town, and has good manufactures of frieze and flannel. Here is a Lutheran and a Calvinist school, with four churches.

ASCH, a town of Prussia, in the principality of Halberstadt, between the rivers Elbe and Wipper, 16 miles S. E. Halberstadt. It was formerly a Hanse town, and has good manufactures of frieze and flannel. Here is a Lutheran and a Calvinist school, with four churches.

ASCH, a town of Prussia, in the principality of Halberstadt, between the rivers Elbe and Wipper, 16 miles S. E. Halberstadt. It was formerly a Hanse town, and has good manufactures of frieze and flannel. Here is a Lutheran and a Calvinist school, with four churches.

ASCH, a town of Prussia, in the principality of Halberstadt, between the rivers Elbe and Wipper, 16 miles S. E. Halberstadt. It was formerly a Hanse town, and has good manufactures of frieze and flannel. Here is a Lutheran and a Calvinist school, with four churches.

ASCH, a town of Prussia, in the principality of Halberstadt, between the rivers Elbe and Wipper, 16 miles S. E. Halberstadt. It was formerly a Hanse town, and has good manufactures of frieze and flannel. Here is a Lutheran and a Calvinist school, with four churches.

ASCH, a town of Prussia, in the principality of Halberstadt, between the rivers Elbe and Wipper, 16 miles S. E. Halberstadt. It was formerly a Hanse town, and has good manufactures of frieze and flannel. Here is a Lutheran and a Calvinist school, with four churches.

ASCH, a town of Prussia, in the principality of Halberstadt, between the rivers Elbe and Wipper, 16 miles S. E. Halberstadt. It was formerly a Hanse town, and has good manufactures of frieze and flannel. Here is a Lutheran and a Calvinist school, with four churches.

ASCH, a town of Prussia, in the principality of Halberstadt, between the rivers Elbe and Wipper, 16 miles S. E. Halberstadt. It was formerly a Hanse town, and has good manufactures of frieze and flannel. Here is a Lutheran and a Calvinist school, with four churches.

ASCH, a town of Prussia, in the principality of Halberstadt, between the rivers Elbe and Wipper, 16 miles S. E. Halberstadt. It was formerly a Hanse town, and has good manufactures of frieze and flannel. Here is a Lutheran and a Calvinist school, with four churches.

ASCH, a town of Prussia, in the principality of Halberstadt, between the rivers Elbe and Wipper, 16 miles S. E. Halberstadt. It was formerly a Hanse town, and has good manufactures of frieze and flannel. Here is a Lutheran and a Calvinist school, with four churches.

ASCH, a town of Prussia, in the principality of Halberstadt, between the rivers Elbe and Wipper, 16 miles S. E. Halberstadt. It was formerly a Hanse town, and has good manufactures of frieze and flannel. Here is a Lutheran and a Calvinist school, with four churches.

ASCH, a town of Prussia, in the principality of Halberstadt, between the rivers Elbe and Wipper, 16 miles S. E. Halberstadt. It was formerly a Hanse town, and has good manufactures of frieze and flannel. Here is a Lutheran and a Calvinist school, with four churches.

ASCH, a town of Prussia, in the principality of Halberstadt, between the rivers Elbe and Wipper, 16 miles S. E. Halberstadt. It was formerly a Hanse town, and has good manufactures of frieze and flannel. Here is a Lutheran and a Calvinist school, with four churches.

ASIA

English Miles

Scale of Miles

ine, i.e.
 The 7.
 ant cam,
 are in the 1.
 Persia, prove
 In 1861, Hong 65.
 7, but bishits, 10, since of 8, there were a N.
 N. 100, 2, this east of n of the Ohn to 1

Longitude East Go

to Turkey, and those besides Siberia under the rule of Russia. To these must be added the Japanese empire; also the islands constituting the empire of Japan, Borneo, Sumatra, Java, the Philippine islands, Celebes, the Spice islands, and numerous others. Amid the various modes of faith professed in Asia, idolatry is the most frequent. The doctrines of Mahomet also prevail to a great extent; and several Pagan tribes, scattered throughout the regions bordering on Mount Caucasus, have been reclaimed from their idolatry to the religion of the prophet. But upon the whole, the number of the Mahometan proselytes is decreasing, from the progress partly of idolatry, and partly of a reformed sect of religion named the Wahabees, who, though they admit the divine mission of Mahomet, deny his most essential tenets, and those most likely to conduce to the propagation of his faith. Christianity is in general rejected throughout Asia; but the powerful exertions of the Europeans for its introduction have now begun to break down that barrier of superstition by which the progress of Christianity in the east has hitherto been opposed; and many of the Hindoos, from the preaching of the British missionaries, have become converts to the Christian faith, having alured their former superstitions, and their odious practices of sacrificing human beings to their idols, and of burying the living with the dead.

ASIA MINOR, the most western portion of the great continent of Asia, bounded N. by the Black sea, E. by the river Euphrates, and W. by the Mediterranean, the sea of Marmora, and the straits of the Hellespont and Bosphorus. Its figure is irregularly oblong, extending about 1000 miles in length from east to west, and between 400 and 500 in breadth from north to south. The whole country is under the Turkish government; and it is divided into several provinces, of which it is understood that Natolia and Carmania are the most important.

ASINARA, a small island in the Mediterranean, off the north-west point of Sardinia.

ASKASY, a town of Abascia; at the mouth of a river, near the Black sea. Long. 37. 40. E. Lat. 44. 6. N.

ASKRING, a market town of England, North Riding of Yorkshire. Population 765.

ASOLA, a town of Upper Italy, in Brescia, on the Chiave. Population 4000.

ASOLO, a town of Italy, on the Adriatic. Population 3650. 45 miles N. E. of Venice.

ASPECT, a neat town of France, in the Garonne. Pop. 3220. 19 leagues S.W. of Toulouse.

ASPEREN, a town of Holland, on the Linge, 23 miles E. Rotterdam. Pop. 440.

ASPERO, a market town of Württemberg. Population 1283.

ASPERN, a town of Austria, on the Danube, below Vienna, the scene of a great battle in 1809, between Bonaparte and the Austrians.

ASLEY, a village and parish of England, county of Bedford. Population 348.

ASPENMONT, a town in the county of Nice, with 1300 inhabitants.

ASPENMONT, a village of France, department of the Meuse.

ASPROFITI, a small place of European Turkey, in Livonia.

ASSARLI, a town of European Turkey, in Romania, 44 miles E. S. E. Philippopolis.

ASSE, the name of three small towns of France, in the department of the Sarthe.

ASNEECOMAH, a town and district in the interior of Fantee, on the Gold coast of Africa.

ASSEN, a town of Holland, in Overijssel. Population 60.

ASSENDELS, a village in Holland, with 2150 inhabitants.

ASSENED, town in the U. S. under. Pop. 3120.

ASSINIBOIN or ASSINIBOIA, a river of North America, which flows into the south-east.

ASSINI, a small place of the Pope's dominions, in the district of Assisi.

ASSONAGUT, a town of the district of Assisi, in the province of Assisi.

ASSON, a town of France, department of the Deux-Sèvres. Population 2000.

ASSONNE, a town of France, department of the Deux-Sèvres. Population 2000.

ASSUMPTION, one of the Ladrone islands, in the Pacific ocean. Long. 140. 55. E. Lat. 19. 45. N.

ASSUMPTION, the capital city of the province of Paraguay, in South America, on the Paraguay, 18 miles above the junction of the first mouth of the Pilcomayo, and 48 above that of the second. It is inhabited by about 500 families of Spaniards, and several thousands of Indians and Mestizoes. It exports hides, tobacco, and sugar. Long. 59. 35. W. Lat. 24. 47. S.

ASSUMPTION, a post township of the United States, in Lafourche county, Louisiana, on the Lafourche, 50 miles S. Baton Rouge. Population 2472.

ASSUNGIOVA, a considerable town in European Turkey, two days journey west from Adrianople.

ASTAFFORT, a town of France, department of the Gers, consisting of 300 houses.

ASTAFORT, a town of France, department of the Lot and Garonne. Population 4140.

ASTARA, a river of Persia, which runs into the Caspian sea, Lat. 38. 35. N. The town of Astara is situated on it.

ASTERABAD, a town of Persia, capital of a province of the same name, situated on the S. E. shore of the Caspian sea, at the mouth of the Aster or Ester, which forms a convenient bay for shipping. 300 miles N. N. E. of Ispahan.

ASTI, the capital of the ancient county of the same name, on the Tanaro, in Upper Italy. It is well built, and contains many churches and monastical institutions, with 23,000 inhabitants. They carry on a considerable trade in corn, wine, and silk. 24 miles E. Turin.

ASTRES, St., a town of France, department of the Dordogne. Population 2220.

ASTLEY, a township of England, county of Lancaster. Population 1882.

ASTORGA, a town in Spain, of great antiquity, on the bank of a small river, in Leon. It is the see of a bishop; and contains 4 parish churches, 2 chapels of ease, and 2 religious houses. It was formerly walled; but its fortifications are now decayed. 17 leagues from Leon.

ASTRACAN, or ASTRAKHAN, a province of Asiatic Russia, in the government of Caucasus, of considerable extent.

ASTRACAN, an archiepiscopal city of Asia, the capital of the province of that name, situated on an island about 32 miles from the mouth of the Volga, which is discharged into the Caspian sea. This city is three miles in extent, of a very irregular figure, and is surrounded by a wall. Its buildings were 222,936, chiefly of wood. 101 of the public buildings are two commodities, for the reception and sale of merchandise, one for the Tartars, the other for the Persians. The modern houses are in general built of brick, or of a kind of freestone. The Kremlin, which is uninhabited, stands on a hill; it contains the cathedral, a spacious brick edifice. There are in this city 26 Russian churches and 2 convents; likewise a church for Roman Catholics. The Armenians also have a metropolitan church. There are also several natives of Moultan who reside in a certain quarter of the city, and follow their own particular rites of religion in one of their own temples: in the year 1784, their number amounted to 86. The population of Astracan consists of a mixture of Russians, Armenians, Greeks, Tartars, Persians, Jews, Indians, English, and French. It is a great place for trade and manufactures. Wine is made; and the Nogay women of Astracan spin quantities of cotton yarn. There are said to be 50 manufactories of silk in the city, all in the hands of the Armenians; extensive salt-works are also carried on, and manufactures of gunpowder. Among the exports may be enumerated fish, pig and bar iron, about 40,000 pounds of cochineal annually, and some indigo; woollen and linen cloths, Russian leather, brocade, taffetas, satin, and foreign velvets. The imports are raw and spun cotton, and stuffs of the same material; raw and manufactured silk, shawls from Thibet and Cashmere, and some furs. There is a considerable trade in jewels; oriental turquoises are sold in great numbers, and at low prices, by the Astracan merchants; and the Indians deal in rubies and emeralds. The chief traffic with Persia is carried on by Armenians. It was taken from the Mongol Tartars in 1554. 1040 miles S. S. E. Petersburg. Long. 47. 44. E. Lat. 46. 21. N.

ASTROP, a village of England, county of Northampton, 6 miles W. Brackley.

ASTURIA, or ASTURIAN, a principality in the north of Spain, which forms an unequal parallelogram, bounded N. by the bay of Biscay, E. by Las Montañas and the province of Biscay, S. E. by Old Castile, S. by Leon, and W. by Galicia. Population 340,000.

ATACAMA, the chief town of a province of this name in Peru, about 100 miles from the coast of the Pacific ocean. Long. 69. 30. W. Lat. 23. 30. S.

ATALAYA DE ALAGOUTA, a town in Portuguese Estremadura, 18 miles N. W. Lisbon. Population 1400.

ATCHINSK, a town of Asiatic Russia, government of Tobolsk. Long. 69. 30. E. Lat. 56. 20. N.

ATCHISKAI, a town of Asiatic Russia, government of Tobolsk.

ATRIEN, a town of Egypt, on a narrow canal of the Nile, 35 miles S. Cairo.

ATH, or AETH, a fortified town of the Netherlands, in Hainault, on the river Denelder, noted for its manufactures of linen. It has, besides, several bleachfields and iron works, and considerable trade. Population 7650. 25 miles S. W. Brussels.

ATHANOLI, a town of Turkey in Europe, on the Black sea. 68 miles N. E. Adrianople.

ATHAPESKOW, a lake in the N. W. part of North America, in the 59th degree of N. lat.

ATHROY, a town of Ireland, county of Meath, 29 miles N. W. Dublin.

ATHURNEY, an islet of England, in the county of Somerset.

ATHELSTANFORD, a village and parish of Scotland. Population 909. 2 miles from Haddington.

ATHENRY, a village of Ireland, in the county of Galway, 10 miles E. Galway.

ATHENS, anciently the capital of Attica, now a town in the Turkish province of Livadia, on the rivulets of Ilissus and Cephissus, a few miles from the western shore of Attica, 100 miles N. E. Mistra (Sparta), and above 300 S. W. Constantinople. Athens, though much decayed from its ancient glory, is still famous for many beautiful remains of antiquity. A considerable portion of the acropolis, or ancient citadel, is still in existence. Of the temple of Victory, there still remain six beautiful columns of white marble, of the finest architecture, with gateways between them. Of the Parthenon, eight columns of the eastern front, and several of the side porticoes, are still standing. There are various other splendid remains of ancient architecture and architecture to be found in the streets, the houses, the churches, and the fountains. The ancient temple of Theseus is still entire, with the exception of the roof, which is of modern construction. The areopagus, or hill of Mars, which was almost in the centre of ancient Athens, is outside of the present town, and is used as a burying place by the Turks. Here may still be discerned the steps cut in the rock, to ascend to that famous tribunal, as well as the seats of the judges, the accusers and the accused.

The ruins of Athens have been of late ransacked by European travellers; and Lord Elgin, while British ambassador at the Porte, collected some of the most valuable specimens of Grecian ingenuity and taste. Casts and drawings were made of those which could not be removed; and the whole collection is now the property of the public, having been purchased by parliament for 1,35,500. The Athenians carry on some trade in wool, silk, wax, oil, olives, and honey. The modern town of Athens is a small open place, with streets narrow and irregular. The houses are mostly mean and straggling; many have large courts or arenas before them. The population is from 8000 to 10,000, of whom one-fourth are Turks, and the remainder Greeks. The latter have here several churches and chapels; and the Turks several mosques and public baths. Of the three small harbours of Athens, the most ancient is the Phalerum or Phalerus: the strongest Munychia, but the most celebrated is the Piræus. This last, which was in its day the best frequented port of Greece, is five miles distant from the town, and is formed by a recess from the shore, with a narrow entrance guarded by two rocky points. It is now known by the name of Porto Leone. Long. 23. 53. E. Lat. 38. 2. N.

ATHENA, a county of the United States, in Ohio. Population 2791. Chief town Athens.

ATHENS, a post town of the United States, in Greene county, New York, on the Hudson, opposite Hudson city, 28 miles below Albany. Population about 1000.—Also, the name of several other townships.

ATHERSTONE, a market town of England, county of Warwick. Population 3434. 107 miles N. N. W. London.

ATHERTON, or CHOWBENT, a township of England, county of Lancaster. Pop. 1145.

ATHIS, a town of Normandy, department of the Orne. Population 3350.

ATHLONE, a market town of Ireland, in the county of Westmeath, on the river Shannon, by which it is intersected; and the opposite sides are connected by a long, narrow, ancient stone bridge. It has a charter school for 40 boys, and it sends one member to parliament. Athlone forms the great pass between Connaught and Leicester. In 1691, it was taken by General Ginkle. 55 miles W. Dublin. Long. 7. 50. W. Lat. 53. 20. N.

ATHOL, a town of Massachusetts, 35 miles N. W. Worcester, and 72 from Boston.

ATRY, a town of Ireland, county of Kildare, intersected by the Barrow. 10 miles S. Kildare.

ATLANTIC OCEAN, that immense expanse of water which lies between Europe and Africa to the east, and America to the west.

ATLAS, an extensive and lofty chain of mountains, stretching through the greater part of Barbary, and dividing most of its cultivated territory from the vast desert of sand which fills the greater part of Central and Northern Africa. The mountains which form the eastern boundary of the empire of Morocco are by far the loftiest part of this chain. Their height, according to repeated observations, rises to upwards of 13,000 feet; and their summits, even in this tropical region, are covered with perpetual snow.

ATOOI, or ATOWAY, one of the largest Sandwich islands, in the South Pacific ocean, 30 miles in length. Population 54,000. Long. 200. 20. E. Lat. 21. 57. N.

ATROQUIA, a town of Portugal, with 1300 inhabitants, on the coast of Estremadura.

ATRATO, a large river of the province of Darien, which enters the gulf of Darien. Long. 77. 6. W. Lat. 2. 2. N.

ATRI, of ATRIA, a considerable town of Naples, in Abruzzo, 20 miles N. E. Aquila.

ATTERCLIFFE, a town of England, in Yorkshire, 1½ mile S. of Sheffield. Pop. 3172.

ATTLEBOROUGH, a market town and parish of England, in Norfolk. Population 1659.

ATTOCK, or ATTOCK BEXARAS, a celebrated town and fort on the Indus. Long. 71. 15. E. Lat. 33. 6. N. The present fortress was built by the Emperor Akbar, in 1581.

ATTOON, a town of Hindostan, in Dindigul, 6 miles S. S. W. Dindigul.

ATTOON, a town of Hindostan, in Barmaul, 70 miles N. W. Pondicherry.

ATTA, or ATTOO, one of the Aluetian islands, about 60 miles in length. Long. 172. E. Lat. 54. N.

ATUNXAUXA, a town of Peru, 70 miles E. Lima. Long. 75. 48. W. Lat. 11. 45. S.

ATWOOD'S KEYS, four or five small islands among the Bahamas. Long. 73. 40. W. Lat. 23. 8. N.

AT, a market town of Bavaria, in the circle of the Isar. Population 600. It is the name of several other small villages in Germany.

AVA, or BRUMAN EMPUR, is bounded N. by Assam and Thibet, S. by the territories of Siam and the ocean, E. and N. E. by Laos, Cambodia, and China, and W. by Bengal and the sea, comprehending the space between Lat. 9. and 26. N., and Long. 92. and 104. E., being nearly 1100 miles in length, but varying very much in breadth. It is divided into 10 provinces, viz. Ava proper, Cassay, Yunshan, Lowashan, Arracan, Pegue, Tongho, Martaban, Tanneseerin, and Junk Ceylon. Its soil produces all kinds of grain and vegetables, also all the tropical fruits; but its principal production is the celebrated teak timber, or Indian oak, which is said to be more durable, and to resist the worm better than any wood that is known. The mines of this country produce gold, silver, tin, lead, antimony, arsenic, and sulphur; also rubies, sapphires, crystal, and amber, in great abundance. Some beautiful marble is also procured here, and the celebrated petroleum oil, which yields a very large revenue to the government.

The animals of this country are elephants, tigers, buffaloes, kine, horses of a small breed, dogs, deer, and goats; but what is very extraordinary, they have neither sheep nor jackals, both of which abound in Bengal. The principal part of the food of the natives is rice and salt fish, or carver dressed with oil. Being followers of Buddha, they are forbidden by their religion to kill any animal, but are permitted to eat it if killed by accident, or if it dies a natural death; but on this head some of them are not very scrupulous, nor do they pay much attention to the forms of religion, though those who have been converted to Christianity are remarkable for the correctness of their conduct. The government of Ava is despotic, although the king seldom undertakes any measures without the approbation of a council composed of all his ministers. The capital is Umrappa.

AVA, or AUNGMYA, the ancient capital of the Birman empire, situated in Lat. 21. 51. N. Long. 95. 58. E.

AVAT, or BAHREIN, the largest of the Bahrein islands, in the gulf of Persia, being 30 miles long and 12 wide. Long. 48. 4. E. Lat. 26. 36. N.

AVALLON, a town of France, department of the Yonne. Population 4200.

AVAR, AVAR, or OAR, a city and mountainous district of Persia, in the province of Leughistan, in the eastern parts of Caucasus. The city consists of 600 houses. Fine shawls are manufactured here.

AVATSCHA, a spacious bay on the eastern coast of Kamtschatka, into which the rivers Avatschka and Paratounka discharge. The entrance is in Long. 158. 49. E. Lat. 52. 51. N. There is a village of the same name.

AVAUZ, a town of France, in Champagne, with 1500 inhabitants.

AVB, or AWB, a town of Franconia, on the river Gollach. Population 1120.

AVBAGNE, a town of France, in Provence, department of the Mouths of the Rhone. Population 5600. 17 leagues N. W. Aix.

AUBE, a river of France, which rises in the department of the Upper Marne, and after a long course, falls into the Seine at Marsilly.

AUBE, a department of France, bounded N. by the department of the Marne, E. by that of the Upper Marne, S. E. by that of the Cote d'Or, S. W. by that of the Yonne, and N. W. by that of the Seine and Marne. It comprehends part of the south of Champagne, and a small part of Burgundy. Its area amounts to 2400 square miles, and its population to 238,819. The capital is Troyes.

AUBEL, a village in the Netherlands. Population 3000.

AUBENAS, a town of France, department of the Ardeche. It contains silk mills and extensive cloth works. Population 3315. 135 leagues S. S. E. Paris.

AUBERTON, a town of France, on the Aube, department of the Aisne. Population 1100.

AUBIERES, a town of France, department of the Puy de Dome, with 200 houses.

AUBIGNAC, a town of France, department of the Indre. It contains 800 houses.

AUBIGNAN, a town of France, department of Vaucluse. Population 1320.

AUBIGNE, a town of France, department of the Sarthe. Number of houses 310.

AUMENY, or AVIGNE, a town of France, department of the Cher. Population 2550.

AUBIN, a manufacturing town of Switzerland, in the canton of Neuchâtel.

AUBIN, Sr., a small town in the island of Jersey, on the west side of a bay of the same name. 4 miles W. St Heliers.

AUBIN DE CORMIER, Sr., a town of France, department of the Ile and Vilaine. Pop. 1460.

AUBONNE, a town of Switzerland. Pop. 1600. 11 miles W. S. W. Lausanne.

AUBURN, a post village of the United States, capital of Cayuga county, New York. It has numerous mills and manufactories. Population in 1817, about 2000. 170 miles W. Albany.

AUBUSSON, a town of France, on the Creuse, department of the Creuse. Here is a carpet manufactory of silk and wool. Pop. 3520.

AUCH, or AUCH, a town of France, department of the Gers. Here are manufactures of serge and of coarse woollens. The cathedral church is of great beauty. Population 8800. 16 leagues W. Toulouse.

AUCHINBLAY, a village of Scotland, in Kincardineshire. 9 miles N. W. Johnshaven.

AUCHMITHY, a fishing village of Scotland, on the east coast. 3½ miles N. E. Arbroath.

AUCHNACRAG, a village in the island of Mull, where is a ferry to Oban in Argyshire.

AUCHTERADEN, a town and parish of Scotland, in Perthshire. Population 2370.

AUCHTERMUCHT, a town and parish of Scotland, in the county of Fife. It has a manufactory of brown linen. Pop. 2751.

AUCHTERTOFT, a parish and village of Scotland, county of Fife. Pop. 536.

ACHY, a town of France, department of the Pas de Calais. Population 2000.

AUCKLAND, BISHOPS, a market town of England, in Durham. Population 2180. 12 miles S. S. W. Durham.

AUDE, a river of France, which rises in the Eastern Pyrenees, and divides into two branches, one of which falls into the lake of Vendres, the other into the lake of Sigean.

AUDE, a department of France, which includes the south-west part of Languedoc. It has the department of the Herault to the N. E., that of the Tarn to the N., the Mediterranean to the E., the department of the Eastern Pyrenees to the S., and that of the Arriege to the W. Its extent is 324 square leagues, or about 2350 square miles, peopled by 240,000 inhabitants.

AUDENICK, a town of France, in Picardy. Population 2060.

AVERNO, a town of Portugal, province of Beira. Pop. 7000. 33 miles S. Oporto.

AVELLINO, a well built town of Naples, in the Principato Ultra, with narrow, crooked, and gloomy streets. The cathedral is a mean edifice, in a concealed situation. It has a considerable manufacture of blue cloth. Pop. 9000.

AVENAY, a small town of France, department of the Marne. Population 1500.

AVENCHY, a town in Switzerland. Pop. 1300. 18 miles S. W. Berne.

AUERBACH, a town in the Saxon part of Vogtland, on the river Golsch. Population 2000. 60 miles W. S. W. Dresden.

AUERBACH, a town of Germany, in the Upper Palatinate. Population 1340.

AVERSA, a town of Naples, in the Terra di Lavoro. It is situated in a very fine plain, covered with vineyards and orange trees. It has 9 parish churches, and 16 cloisters of different orders. Pop. 13,000. 8 miles N. Naples.

AVERNSTADT, a village of Prussia, in the province of Thuringia. Near it was fought a decisive battle between Bonaparte and the Prussians, on 14th October 1806.

AVES, or BIRD'S ISLAND, in the West Indies, situated in Long. 63. 15. W. Lat. 18. 30. N.

AVESNES, or AVENNES, a well fortified town on the river Hecres, in Hainault, 3 leagues from Maubeuge. Population 2700.

AVESSE, a town of France, department of the Sarthe. Population 1000.

AVEYRON, a rapid river in France, which discharges itself into the river Tarn.

AVEYRON, or AVEIRON, a department of France, bounded N. by the department of the Cantal, N. E. by that of the Lozere, E. by that of the Gard, S. E. by that of the Hérault, S. W. by that of the Tarn, and W. by that of the Lot. Population 318,047.

AVEZZANO, a town of Naples, in Abruzzo Ultra. Population 2700. 18 miles S. Aquila.

AVGILA, a district and town of Africa, on the route between Siwah and Fezzan. Long. 22. 25. E. Lat. 29. 35. N.

AVESBURG, an ancient city of Bavaria, at the conflux of the Lech and Wertach. It is large, and has still some fortifications in the old style, with four principal gates and six smaller ones. It has some considerable manufactures in silver, fine cotton, wire, looking-glasses, and tobacco.

Book-selling and engraving on copper are also important branches of business. The Catholics have six churches and eight monasteries, and the Lutherans six churches. In the public library there is a valuable collection of Grecian works, both in manuscripts and print. There is also an academy, a lyceum, and a polytechnic school; the Catholic students, long separated from the Protestants, are now taught in the same classes.

Of the public edifices, the cathedral, the town-house, with the peristyle-tower, the artificial fountain, and the bishop's palace (in one of the halls of which was presented the celebrated Augsburg confession in 1530), are all worthy of attention. The elector of Treves fixed his residence here, after the secularisation of his territories. A wooden bridge of ingenious structure was built on the Lech at Augsburg, in 1808. 40 miles N. W. Munich. Long. 10. 63. E. Lat. 48. 17. N.

AVOST, the name of three small villages in Switzerland.

AUGUSTA, a county of the United States, in Virginia. Population 14,308. Slaves 2880. Chief town Staunton.

AUGUSTA, a city of the United States, and capital of Richmond county, Georgia, on the Savannah river, just below the falls, 127 miles N. W. Savannah by land. Population in 1819, more than 4000. It is well situated for commerce.

AUGUSTINE'S, ST. a port and river on the Labrador coast.—Also a number of small islands on the same coast.

AVIGLIANO, a village of Piedmont, 11 miles W. Turin. Population 2890.

AVIGNON, a large and beautiful city on the Rhone, in Provence. It is traversed by an arm of the river Sorgue, and has narrow streets, but contains elegant churches and other public buildings. The church of the Franciscans incloses the tomb of Laura, immortalised by the muse of Petrarch. The palace formerly occupied by the pope is built in the old Gothic style; and around the town there runs a fine avenue of trees, fully a league in circuit. Avignon contains extensive manufactures of silk stuffs, saltpetre, oil of vitriol, and aquafortis, with several printing establishments and copper-works. Its trade consists in wine, brack, almonds, dried fruit, olives, oil, saffron, truffles, corn, and wool, all the products of its territory. This tract was formerly called the state or sovereignty of Avignon. It belonged to the Pope till the period of the French revolution; when, in 1791, it was conquered by France. Population of the town 23,211. 16 leagues N. W. Aix, 168 S. E. Paris. Long. 1. 53. E. Lat. 43. 56. N.

AVIGNONET, a town of France, 8 leagues S. E. Toulouse. Population 1760.

AVILA, a town of Spain, in Old Castile, on the river Adaga, once one of the richest cities in Spain, but now in decay. Population 4000. 50 miles N. W. Madrid.

AVIS, a walled town of Portugal, on the river Avis, in Alentejo. Population 1500.

AULAY, ST. a town of France, department of the Dordogne. Population 1060.

AULDEARN, a village and parish of Scotland, in the county of Nairn. Pop. 1623.

AULENDORF, a market town, with 1900 inhabitants, in Suabia.

AULNAY, two towns, about a mile distant, in Normandy: the one has 1500 inhabitants, the other 3000.—Also a town in the department of the Lower Charente. Pop. 1250.

AULPS, a town of Provence, department of the Var. Population 3000.

AULT, a maritime town of France, department of the Somme. Population 1235.

AUMALE, a town of France, in Upper Normandy. Population 1739.

AUMOOTINA, a town of Hindostan, in the Mysore, 17 miles W. S. W. Periapatan.

AUNEUIL, a town of France, in Picardy, department of the Oise. Population 1060.

AVOLD, ST. a town of Lorraine, on the Moselle, 9 leagues E. Metz. Pop. 2500.

AVON, a river of Scotland, which rises in the county of Banff, and falls into the Spey.

—2d, Another in the county of Lanark, which falls into the Clyde, near Hamilton.—

3d, Another which falls into the frith of Forth west of Borrowstounness.

AVON, a river of England, in Wiltshire, which falls into the English channel.—2d, Another of South Wales, which runs into the Bristol channel.—3d, Another of North Wales, which flows into the Irish sea.

AVON, LITTLE, a river of England, which runs into the Severn near Berkeley.

AVON, LOWER, a river of England, in Wiltshire, which flows into the Severn.

AVON, UPPER, a river of England, which flows into the Severn at Tewkesbury.

AVON, a river of Nova Scotia, which falls into the Atlantic, eastward of Halifax.

AVRANCHES, a town of Lower Normandy, in the department of La Manche. The cathedral church was founded in the year 1120. Here is likewise a castle and an episcopal palace. It trades in grain, flax, hemp, cattle, butter, wheat, salt, and cyder. Population 6000. 222 miles W. Paris.

AURAY, a town of France, department of Morbihan, on the gulf of Morbihan. Population 3200.

AURAY, a river of France, which runs into the English channel, Long. 2. 50. W. Lat. 47. 34. N.

AURELIUS, a post township of the United States, and capital of Cayuga county, New York, on Cayuga lake. Pop. 4642. It contains 3 post villages, Auburn, Cayuga, and Union Springs.

AURICH, the capital of the principality of East Friesland, in the kingdom of Hanover. Population 2200. 12 miles N. E. Embden.

AURIGNAC, a handsome town in Gascony, department of the Upper Garonne. Pop. 1230.

AYMILLAC, a town of France, on the river Jordan, the chief town in the department of the Cantal. Here are manufactures of woollen stuffs, carpets, staminc, shalloon, and lace. Pop. 10,332. 111 leagues S. Paris.

AYRIOL, a town of France, department of the Mouths of the Rhone. It has some woollen manufactures. Population 3700. 5 leagues N. E. Marseilles.

AURORA, a post village of the United States, in Cayuga county, New York.

AURUNGAN, province and city. See Dowlatabad and Ghurka.

AUSPITZ, a town of Moravia, in the circle of Brunn, with 2215 inhabitants. 42 miles S. S. W. Olmutz.

AUSTERLITZ, or SLAWKOW, a small town of Moravia, circle of Brunn, 12 miles E. S. E. Brunn. Population 1620. It has a magnificent castle and gardens. It is noted for a great battle fought near it, on the 2d December 1805, between the French and the united forces of Austria and Russia.

AUSTIN'S CREEK, a river of Georgia, which runs into the Savannah.

AUSTLE, ST., a town and parish of England, county of Cornwall, near which are several tin mines; as also porcelain clay, which is exported to different places for the potteries. Besides the parish church, there are three others. Population 6175. 13 miles N. N. E. Truro.

AUSTONLEY, a township of England, in Yorkshire. Pop. 968. 3 miles from Huddersfield.

AUSTRALASIA, in modern geography, the fifth great division of the globe. It includes New Holland, Van Diemen's Land, Papua or New Guinea, New Britain, New Ireland, New Caledonia, and New Zealand, together with a multitude of islands surrounding them in all directions. Some geographers also comprehend within its limits, Kerguelen's islands, or the islands of Desolation, and also the islands of St Paul and Amsterdam.

AUSTRIA, CIRCLE OF, the largest of the ten circles into which the empire of Germany was divided, has Bohemia, Bavaria, and Suabia to the north, Bavaria, Switzerland, and the country of the Grisons, to the west, the duchy and gulf of Venice to the south, and Hungary to the east. It comprehends Austria proper, Styria, Carinthia, Carniola, part of Friuli and the Littorale, Tyrol, Vorarlberg, certain districts in Suabia, Trent, Brixen, and several domains belonging to the Teutonic order. Salzburg and part of Passau have likewise been included in it since 1802. The sovereign of these extensive territories is the emperor, and they are divided into Upper, Lower, Inner, and Anterior Austria. Their united areas contain 49,940 square miles, and 4,442,700 inhabitants.

AUSTRIA, ARCHDUCHY OF, or, as it is frequently called, the 'Hereditary States' of the house of Austria, is a part of the circle just described. It is bounded N. by Bohemia and Moravia, E. by Hungary, S. by Styria, and W. by Salzburg and Bavaria. Its area contains 12,092 square miles, and the population amounted, by the latest returns, to 1,665,559. This archduchy is divided by the river Enns into two great parts, namely, Upper Austria and Lower Austria. Population of the latter, 1,100,000; and it contains 7768 square miles, 38 cities, 241 market towns, and 4327 villages. It is subdivided into the following four quarters, on the south bank of the Danube, the quarter 'above the forest of Vienna,' and the quarter 'below the forest of Vienna;' on the north bank of the Danube, the quarter 'above the Mannhartsberg,' and the quarter below that mountain track. Upper Austria in like manner contains four divisions, viz. those of the Traun, Hausruck, and Inn, on the south bank of the Danube, and that of the Muhl on the north bank. It contains 5104 square miles, 14 cities, 92 market towns, 6411 villages, and 620,948 inhabitants.

AUSTRIA, EMPIRE OF, comprehends not only the provinces described above, but all the various states which are under the dominion of the imperial house of Austria. It is bounded W. by Piedmont, Switzerland, and Bavaria, N. by Bavaria, Silesia, and Poland, E. by Russia, Moldavia, and Walachia, and S. by Turkey in Europe, the Adriatic sea, and Middle Italy. The Danube, the largest river in Europe, runs through its whole extent from W. to E.; the most northern part of the empire is in Bohemia, and the most southern in the territory of Cattaro in Dalmatia. The size and population of this great monarchy will be best exhibited by the following table of its extent, population, and revenue:—

	Square Miles.]	Population.]	Revenue in Sterling Money.]
Circle of Austria, Saltzburg, Berchtols-Gede, and Passau,	45,769	4,224,700	£1,400,000
Bohemia,	4,578	255,000	140,000
Moravia,	20,900	3,112,000	2,000,000
Austrian Silesia,	10,200	1,364,000	700,000
Galicia, with the Bukowine,	1,830	286,000	150,000
Hungary, including Transylvania, Slavonia, & Austrian Croatia and Venetian territories, and Chorg Larn,	53,400	4,934,000	1,600,000
Dalmatia, with Cattaro, Ragusa, and the islands,	130,92	9,400,000	1,800,000
Lonbardy, viz. the territories of Milan and Mantua,	15,130	2,801,000	1,500,000
Landships of V. E. E. B. and Ch.	8,030	1,350,000	400,000
	1,350	108,700	50,000

Total in round numbers. 1,000,000 28,000,000 12,000,000

To these are to be added some portions of territory lately acquired along the Rhine, part of the duchy of Ferrara, and the principality of Isenburgh. The chief towns in the Austrian empire are Vienna, Linz, Saltzburg, Innspruck, Prague, Olmutz, in Moravia; Leunberg, or Leopold, in Galicia; Presburg, Pest, and Buda, in Hungary; Hermannstadt, Carlstadt, and Zagrab; Laybach, Clagenfurt, and Gratz; Trent, Venice, Trieste, Ragusa, Milan, Mantua, Verona, &c. Austria exports corn, wine, saffron, catdce, horses, gold, mercury, copper, iron, steel, lead, precious stones, &c. The chief products of industry are thread, cotton, linen, lace, various sorts of silk stuffs, stockings, spirituous liquors, wrought iron, steel, and brass, kitchen and farming utensils, glass, porcelain, and earthenware. The imports consist, for the most part, in raw materials, such as wool, cotton, raw silk, rice, oil, drugs, and spices, of all which a great part comes from the Levant. In Hungary, the nation shares the legislative, and even the executive power, with the emperor; the Tyrolese possess to a certain degree the same privileges. In other parts of the empire there are indeed provincial diets, but they are consulted only as to the mode of raising the taxes in their particular districts; so that the emperor is in a great measure an unlimited sovereign. In Austria the taxes are levied almost entirely on the land, and on objects of interior consumption. The other sources of revenue are the imperial domains, the monopoly of tobacco, and the duties on stamps, hair-powder, china, glass, starch, wine, beer, brandy, carriages, and other objects of luxury; legacy duties, fines on titles of nobility, and a toleration tax on the Jews. The total revenue amounts to about twelve or fifteen millions sterling. The public debt exceeds £1,160,000,000, of which, however, two-thirds being created by the issue of paper, is not deemed repayable at its nominal amount. The military force amounts to 300,000 men. To these are to be added 1 regiment of Tyrolese chasseurs, 4 regiments of provincial militia, the corps of engineers, sappers, pontonneers, &c., the imperial guard of Vienna, the German and Gallician guard of archers, the Hungarian guard, and the trabant, or halberdier guard.

ASTWICK, a township of England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 556.

ATTALUGA, a county of the United States, in Alabama, lately formed.

AUTHON, a town of France, department of the Eure and Loire. Population 1200.

AURUN, an ancient town of France, on the Arroux, department of the Saone and Loire, 65 leagues S. E. Paris.

AV-VAE, a river of the United States, in Illinois, which flows into the Mississippi.

AVVERONE, a province of France, now chiefly divided into the departments of the Puy de Dome in Lower Auvergne, and the Cantal in Upper Auvergne. Population about 800,000.

AVVILLARS, a town of France, department of the Tarn and Garonne, on the Garonne. Population 2080.

AUXERRE, an ancient town of France, department of the Yonne. It manufactures woollen stuffs, and trades in wood, and in the excellent wines raised in the neighbourhood. The only manufacture is that of woollen stuffs. The episcopal palace is an elegant building. Pop. 11,300. 37 leagues S. E. Paris.

AUXON, a town of France, department of the Aube. Population 2340.

AUXON, a town of France, department of the Upper Loire. Population 1500.

AUXONNE, the capital of a county of the same name in France, in Burgundy, on the Saone. It is regularly fortified, has manufactures of serge and other cloths, and a brisk trade in wine, corn, and wood, and has 5280 inhabitants. 7 leagues S. E. Dijon.

AUXY-LA-REUNION, a town of France, in Picardy, on the Authie. Population 2470.

AUZANCE, a town of France, department of the Creuse. Population 1230.

AUZAT, a town of France, department of the Puy de Dome. Population 1200.

AX, a town of France, department of the Arriege. Population 1500.

* AX, or AXE, a river of England, which falls into the sea a little below Axmouth.—Another which falls into the Bristol channel, about 8 miles lower down.

AXBRIDGE, a town and parish of England, in the county of Somerset. Population 988. 130 miles W. London.

AXEL, a town of Flanders. Population 1343. 27 miles W. Antwerp.

AXMINSTER, a market town of England, in Devonshire, on the Ax, 26 miles from Exmouth. Here are manufactured carpets, broad and narrow cloths, cotton tapes, druggs, and leather articles. Population 2742.

AXMOUTH, a village and parish of England, in the county of Devon. Pop. 520.

AXPE, a town of Spain, in Valencia. Population 4000.

AXUM, the ancient capital of Abyssinia, of which little more than the ruins remain. Of these the most remarkable is a large obelisk, 80 feet high, which stands in the midst of the principal square. In the same place are scattered the ruins of 40 or 50 similar monuments. The church of Axum appears to have been built in 1657, and is considered by Mr Salt as the finest in the province of Tigre, except that of Chelicut. Houses 600.

AY, a town of France, on the river Marne. Population 2585.

AYAMONTE, a fortified town of Spain, in Seville, at the mouth of the Guadiana. Population 5000.

AYAMONTE, a town of Portugal, in the province of Alentejo, 3 miles N. W. Minfort.

AYAS, a village and castle of Caramania. Long. 35. 48. 34. Lat. 36. 46. N.

AYASH, a village on the coast of Caramania. Long. 34. 12. E. Lat. 36. 29. N.

AYCLIFFE, a village and parish of England, in Durham, 5 miles from Darlington. Population 1379.

AYLESBURY, a borough and market town of England, nearly in the centre of the county of Buckingham. The parish church is a largest structure; besides which there are places of worship for Presbyterians, Methodists, Anabaptists, and Quakers. Lace-making is carried on to a considerable extent. A weekly market is held here, and there are six fairs annually. Aylesbury is an ancient town, and sends two representatives to parliament. Population of the town and parish 2283. 30 miles W. N. W. London.

AYLESFORD, a town and parish of England, in the county of Kent, on the river Medway, which is crossed by a stone bridge. Population 1136. 32 miles E. London.

AYR, a maritime county of Scotland, extending about 60 miles in extreme length, 30 in the broadest part, and containing a superficial area of about 1600 square miles. It is bounded N. by Renfrewshire, E. by the counties of Inverclyde and Dumfries, S. by Galloway, and W. by the Irish channel and frith of Clyde. The insular rock of Ailsa and the two islets Cumbræ are annexed to it. Besides the frith of Clyde, which washes for a considerable extent the confines of the county, there are the rivers Stinchar, Girvan, Doon, Irvine, Garnock, and Ayr, from which last the whetstone, so useful to mechanics, are obtained; and also several lakes. Most of the rivers rise in the county, and fall into the sea or the Clyde. A considerable portion of the county is hilly and uncultivated, to which cause the humidity is commonly ascribed. Copper, lead, and iron, are found here; also black lead and antimony. There is vast abundance of coal of different kinds, in successive seams, great part of which is exported; limestone, free-stone of the best quality, agates, porphyry, jasper, and calcareous petrifications. There are manufactures of woollen, cotton, muslin, thread, and iron. The chief towns and villages are Ayr, Kilmaronock, Irvine, Maybole, and Ardrossan. Population 127,200.

AYR, a royal borough and seaport of Scotland, in Ayrshire, of which it is the capital, situated at the mouth of the river of the same name, on a dry sandy soil. The coast is flat, and the depth of water in the harbour is about 11 or 12 feet. Here are still the remains of a citadel, whose walls inclose an area of 11 or 12 acres. There are two churches, a theatre, a public library and reading-room, and a weekly newspaper. The charitable institutions are a charity work-house, a dispensary, and savings-bank. The principal manufactures carried on are tanning, boot and shoe-making, and soap-boiling. Most of the trade of this port is carried on with Ireland. There are two weekly markets, and four fairs are held here yearly. Ayr returns, in conjunction with Irvine, Rothesay, Campbeltown, and Inverary, a representative to parliament. Population 7455. 75 miles S. W. Edinburgh. Long. 4. 37. W. Lat. 55. 27. N.

AYR, a river of Scotland, which falls into the sea, and forms a harbour at the town of Ayr.

AYR, NEWTOWN OF, a town and parish, opposite to the town of Ayr. Population 4027.

AYR HEAD, a cape on the west coast of Scotland. Long. 4. 40. W. Lat. 55. 29. N.

AYTON, a village and parish of Scotland, in Berwickshire, on the Eye. Pop. 1520.

AYTON, GREAT, a village and parish of England, in the North Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1023.

AZAMBUJA, a town of Portuguese Estremadura, containing 700 houses.

AZAMOR, a port of Morocco, on the Morbeya. Population 1000. 50 miles N. Morocco.

AZAY, a town of France, department of the Indre and Loire. Population 1700.

AZEITAO, a town in Portuguese Estremadura. Population 2350.

AZENAY, a town of France, department of La Vendee. Population 3000.

AZERBIJAN, or ADERBEITZAN, a province of Persia, part of ancient Media, bounded E. by Ghilan and the Caspian sea, and W. by Kurdistan and Armenia. It is separated from the latter by the Araxes, and from the province of Irak on the S. by Kizilazzein, or the golden stream. The climate is temperate, but extremely cold in winter. The cultivation of the land is carried on chiefly by irrigation. Most of the villages are agreeably embosomed in orchards and gardens, which produce fruit of almost every description. A considerable quantity of wine is made; and provisions are cheap and abundant; but the people are much oppressed by their rulers. Tabriz, or Tauris, is the capital.

AZEROCHE, BAK-EL, or the BLACK RIVER, the principal stream of Abyssinia, which passes through the lake of Dembea, and after a winding course through Abyssinia and Sennar, falls into the Nile above Gerri.

AZMUT, an ancient and extensive town of Asia Minor, in Natolia, 84 miles S.E. Scutari.

AZORH, the ancient Pulus Mentis, an inland sea of Asiatic Russia, on the confines of Tartary, communicating with the Euxine by a narrow channel, called the straits of Jenicale. Its figure is extremely irregular, the extreme length from the town of Azoph to Perecop being between 330 and 350 miles, and the extreme breadth about 180; but the average dimensions cannot be estimated to exceed 200 miles by 120. The soundings in general give from 35 to 40 feet in depth. The whole surface, except a portion towards the centre, freezes during about a month in winter. Long. 33. to 39. 30. E. Lat. 45. 20. to 47. 20. N.

AZORH, a fortified town of Asiatic Russia, on the eastern extremity of the sea of Azoph, at the mouth of the river Don. It is situated on a high ridge, in the same place where the ancient Tanais is conjectured to have stood. But it no longer possesses its former importance, as the whole establishment does not exceed 60 houses, with a corresponding population. 320 miles E. Otschakoff, 812 N.E. Petersburg. Long. 39. 14. E. Lat. 47. N.

AZORES, or WESTERN ISLANDS, a group of islands situated in the Atlantic ocean, between the 37th and 40th degrees of N. lat. and the 25th and 32d W. long. They are divided into three smaller groups, of which the most eastern consists of the island of St Michael, with the small adjacent one of St Mary; the middle and largest is composed of the five islands of Terceira, Graciosa, St George, Pico, and Fayal. The small islands of Corvo and Flores, lie considerably further west, and appear almost detached from the others. The Azores are distinguished by their physical structure and phenomena; the surface bears marks of volcanic action; and many of the hills by which it is diversified, are apparently the product of volcanic agency. These islands have been at different times laid waste by earthquakes, of which the most formidable on record is that of 1691, which continued 12 days without intermission, and destroyed entirely the flourishing town of Villa Franca. At other times, new rocks or islands are seen emerging, through the force of the subterraneous action, into the sea. It is mentioned by Kircher, that after an earthquake of eight days, fire broke out from the surface of the sea, and rose to the clouds, accompanied with vast showers of sand, scorias, lava, and mineral substances. Successive groups of rocks then made their appearance, which, after undergoing violent agitation, were at length consolidated into a species of island. In 1720, an English captain witnessed a similar phenomenon, and in February 1811, a similar eruption took place. The rocks, however, on this last occasion, did not penetrate above the surface of the water. Besides these occasional and terrible explosions, the presence of subterraneous fire is constantly indicated by numerous hot springs throughout the islands. The soil throughout these islands may be considered as exceedingly fertile; and wheat, barley, and Indian corn, besides fruits of all kinds, are produced much beyond the consumption of the inhabitants. The best vines are, raised on the lofty sides of the Pico, and from which wine is made. Pico exports a fine species of wood, little inferior to mahogany. The trade was formerly cramped, by being carried on through the medium of Portugal; but since the emigration of the court, the inhabitants have begun to traffic directly with England and America.

B.

BAADSTED, or BATSTED, a seaport town of Sweden, province of Schonert. Long. 12. 45. E. Lat. 56. 28. N.

BAAGOE, the name of two small islands in the Baltic. Long. 12. 3. E. Lat. 54. 56. N.

BAARLE, a village of the Netherlands, in Brabant, with 1550 inhabitants.

BABAHOTO, the capital of a district of the same name in South America, situated on the shore of the river Guayaquil, and for six months there is a continual fair for the sale of the productions of this and of the other provinces. Lat. 1. 47. S. Long. 78. 15. W.

BABAHOTO, a village of the Guayaquil.

BABAHOTO, a village of the Guayaquil.

BARENHAUSEN, a market town of Bavaria, with 1600 inhabitants. 16 miles S. E. Ulm.

BABIC, or BABABEO, a town of Persia, towards the north-west confines of the province of Kerman, formerly a fine city, but now falling into decay. It is entered by four gates, from each of which long streets lead to the market-place in the centre, dividing it at right angles. Long. 54. 18. E. Lat. 30. 3. N.

BABINOWITSCH, a small town of European Russia, in the government of Mohilev, 60 miles N. Mohilev. Long. 30. 14. E. Lat. 54. 52. N.

BABUYANES, a number of islands lying about 30 miles N. of the island of Luzon, and generally considered the most northern of the Philippines. Long. 121. 15. to 122. 5. E. Lat. 18. 58. to 19. 42. N.

BACCHIGLIONE, a navigable river in Upper Italy, which falls into the lagunes of Venice.

BACCONIERE, a town of Franco, department of the Mayenne, with 260 houses.

BACHARACH, or BACARATH, a town of the Prussian states, on the Rhine. Population 1250. 23 miles S. Coblenz.

BACHIAN, or BATCHIAN, the largest of the Molucca islands, separated by a narrow channel from the island Gilolo. It is 34 miles long, and 30 broad. Long. 127. 53. E. Lat. 1. N.

BACIMOTH, the chief town of a circle in the government of Ekaterinoslav, in European Russia. Houses 400. Long. 37. 44. E. Lat. 48. 25. N.

BACKAR, or BEHKUR, a district and town of Hindostan, province of Moultan, on an island formed by the river Indus. It has a strong fort. Long. 70. 2. E. Lat. 28. 31. N.

BACKEROUNG, a town in the province of Bengal, capital of a district of the same name, 120 miles E. Calcutta. It trades in rice, salt, cotton cloths. Long. 89. 30. E. Lat. 22. 42. N.

BACKENAU, a town of Wirtemberg, district of the Lower Neckar. It has woollen manufactures. Population 3020.

BACONO, a river of South America, province of the Caraccas, which enters the Guanaré.

BADAJOS, the capital of Spanish Estremadura, on the Guadiana, over which is a handsome bridge of 28 arches, 1074 feet long, and 20 broad. It is a town of great antiquity. It is entered by five gates. The streets are narrow, and frequently crooked. There are in this town 5 parish churches, 7 monasteries, 5 nunneries, and 5 hospitals. The cathedral church is the only edifice deserving notice. Badajoz was a town of some note under the Romans, who called it Pax Augusta. It was always a place of strength, and now forms an important barrier fortress on the side of Portugal, from which it is distant only 44 miles. It was stormed by the British under Lord Wellington, in 1812. Population 14,500. 82 miles N. N. W. Seville, Long. 6. 47. W. Lat. 38. 48. N.

BADAKSHAN, a populous town of Great Bukharia, 150 miles E. of Bulk.

BADALONA, a town of Spain, on the coast of Catalonia, 4 miles N. E. Barcelona.

BADDAMMY, a town of Hindostan, in Bengal. Long. 74. 34. E. Lat. 18. 6. N.

BADEN, a grand duchy of Germany, bounded S. by Switzerland and the lake of Constance, E. by Wirtemberg, N. by Bavaria and Hesse Darmstadt, W. by the Bavarian circle of the Rhine, and the French departments of the Upper and Lower Rhine. It was erected into a grand duchy in 1806, and divided, the following year, into a landgraviate, a margraviate, and a palatinate, or the provinces of the Upper, Middle, and Lower Rhine; but this was changed in 1809, into the following distribution into ten circles:—the Lake (Seckreis), the Danube, the Weissen, the Treisam, the Kinzig, the Murg, the Pfalz and Enz, the Neckar, the Odenwald, the Main and Tauber. In 1806 it contained 5632 square miles, with 924,307 inhabitants.

BADEN, a town of Germany, in the grand duchy of Baden, noted for its mineral baths. Population 2000. 22 miles N. E. Strasburg.

BADEN, on the Limmat, in Switzerland, noted for its mineral baths. Population 1700. 14 miles N. W. Zurich.

BADEN, a town of Lower Austria, noted for its baths. Population 1800. 12 miles S. S. W. Vienna.

BADENWILLER, a town of Franco, on the Blette. Pop. 1770. 15 miles E. Lunoville.

BADIA, LA, a small town of Italy, on the Adige, 15 miles W. N. W. Rovera.

BADRACHILLUM, or the SACRED MOUNTAIN, a town of Hindostan, on the Godavery, with 100 huts. 150 miles E. Hydrabad.

BADUATO, a thriving town of Naples, in Calabria Ultra, 14 miles S. S. E. Squillace.

BAENA, or VAENA, a town of Spain, in Cordova. Pop. 4000. 18 miles E. S. E. Cordova.

BAENA, or BAENA, a town of Spain, in the Andalusian province of Jaen. Its streets and squares are handsome and spacious: one of the latter is adorned with a beautiful fountain. It is much fallen from its ancient grandeur. Population 15,000. 70 miles N. N. E. Cordova.

BAFFA, a seaport town on the west coast of the island of Cyprus, now reduced to a place of little consequence. It is situated on a rocky eminence close to the sea; and its harbour, once good, is now choked up with sand. Numerous ruins and antiquities are dispersed in its vicinity. Long. 32. 18. E. Lat. 34. 48. N.

BAFFIN'S BAY. This deep inlet, formerly supposed to be a bay, was entered in 1818 by Captain Parry, who found an open sea, where it was formerly supposed that there was land. He proceeded west into this sea, to which he gave the name of Lancaster's sound, and returned, after penetrating to 113. 47. W. long.

BAGHDAD, a Turkish pachalic or government of Asia, sometimes called the Arabian Irak. It is computed to be 840 miles long, by 636 broad, and is esteemed the second or third government of the Ottoman empire.

BAGHDAD, a city of Asia, the capital of the Turkish province of Bagdad, intersected by the Tigris, but principally situated on the east side of the river. It is of an oblong figure, about 1500 paces in length, by 800 in breadth, and is surrounded by a high brick wall, between 4 and 5 miles in circuit. The houses of Bagdad, which are mostly of brick, are for the most part only one story high; the streets are dirty and unpaved, and so narrow that two horsemen can scarcely pass each other abreast. The houses of wealthy individuals are very handsome, having windows of Venetian glass, ornamented ceilings, and a court-yard in front, with a small plantation of orange trees. The governor's palace is a spacious edifice. The baths and coffee-houses of the city, though not kept in good repair, are well frequented; the markets are well supplied with provisions, and the expence of subsistence is very moderate.

It is a city of great trade, and a noted emporium for the products of Arabia, India, and Persia, as well as for many European manufactures. The bazars consist of a magnificent display of 1200 shops, wherein every description of eastern merchandise may be found. Its principal manufactures are of red and yellow leather, which is much esteemed; also of silk, cotton, and woollen stuffs; and of late, a foundry of cannon has been established. There is a great resort of passengers hither, either for commercial purposes, or to visit the tombs of saints, among which is that of the Jewish prophet Ezekiel. The temperature of Bagdad is extremely hot in the summer, and the inhabitants are forced to retreat to subterraneous apartments for shelter. The population, composed of Turks, who constitute three-fourths of the inhabitants, of Persians, Jews, and a small proportion of Christians, amounts to 60,000, or according to some travellers, to 90,000. Bagdad was founded in 766. In the 9th century, the famous Haroun al Raschid reigned here. It underwent many revolutions since; and was nearly destroyed in 1633, by Amurath IV. to whom it surrendered. In the course of later years its safety has been menaced by a predatory race, the Wahabees. 300 miles N. N. W. Bassora, and 1350 E. Constantinople. Long. 44. 24. E. Lat. 33. 20. N.

BAGNA CAVALLIO, a neat town of Italy, States of the Church, 24 miles S. S. E. Ferrara.

BAGNA DI ACQUA, a small town of Italy, grand duchy of Tuscany, 15 miles E. Leghorn.

BAGNARA, a town of Naples, in Calabria Ultra. Population 5000. It was destroyed by the great earthquake in 1783, but has recovered from this calamity.

BAGNERES DE CANNAN, or EN BIGORRE, a town of France, on the Adour, department of the Upper Pyrenees, famed for its hot mineral springs.

Βάγνον, ἀφ' οὗ καὶ ἡ βασιλεια department of the Upper Garonne. Population 1200. 60 miles S. W. Toulouse.

BAGNOLES, a village of France, department of the Orne, with 110 houses.

BAGNOLO, a town of Piedmont; at the foot of the Alps. Population 2000.

BAGNOLO, a town of Italy, in the territory of Venice. Population 1500.

BAGNOLS, a town of France, department of the Gard. It has a manufactory of various kinds of silk. 22 miles N. E. Nismes. Population 4000.

BAGOLINO, a town of Italy, in the territory of Venice. Pop. 3600. 24 miles N. Brescia.

BAHAMAS, GREAT, ISLAND OF, one of the Bahamas, of great extent, 63 miles long and about 9 broad, situate on the north side of the Little Bahama bank, 37 miles from the coast of East Florida. Long. 78. 10. to 80. 24. W. Lat. 26. 40. to 27. 5. N.

BAHAMA CHANNEL, or GULF OF FLORIDA, the narrow sea between the coast of America and the Bahama islands, 135 miles long and broad.

BAHAMA BANK, GREAT, a sand-bank extending from near the island of Cuba, Lat. 22. 20. to the Bahama islands, Lat. 26. 15. N. There is also a smaller bank of the same name, which lies to the north of the island of Bahama.

BAHAMAS, or LUCAYOS ISLANDS, in the Atlantic ocean, situated opposite to the coast of Florida, comprehending under that denomination all that chain of West India islands lying to the north of Cuba and St Domingo, and situate between the 21st and 28th degrees of N. lat. and the 71st and 81st degrees of W. long. These islands have never been regularly surveyed, nor their numbers ascertained with any certainty. They have been estimated at 600, but of these a great proportion are nothing more than cliffs and rocks. The following are the principal: Abaco, Acklin's island, Andros island, Atwood's key, Great Bahama, Berry islands, Bimini, Crooked island, Cooked island, Eleuthera, Exumas, French keys, Hog island, Hog key, Harbour island, Heneaguas, Little island, Long island, Long key, Mavagwana, Ragged island, Rose island, ~~W~~ island, Rum key, Russel island, St Salvador, Turk's island, Watling's island. The Bahama islands stretch from Turk's islands, which are at no great distance from St Domingo, in a north-west direction, to the north end of the Great Bahama bank near the coast of Florida. The climate is in general salubrious. The more northern islands, during the winter months, are rendered cool and agreeable by the north-west breeze from the continent of America. The more southern islands are hotter throughout the year. These islands are generally low, flat, barren, and rocky. The soil is mostly light or sandy, but is interspersed with partial spots of good land. They are generally ill supplied with fresh water, but it is found by digging wells in the rocks, to the depth of the sea level. The Bahama islands were taken possession of in 1718 by the English government, and the seat of government was fixed at New Providence, upon which island Fort Nassau was built. From this period a regular colonial administration has been maintained. Population in 1803, 14,318, including 11,395 blacks and people of colour.

BAHAR, an extensive, populous, and valuable province in Hindostan, formerly called Magadha, and once an independent kingdom. It is situated between the 23d and 27th degrees of N. latitude, and the 84th and 88th of E. longitude, and is bounded on the N. by the territories of Nepal, on the S. by those of Berar, on the W. by Oude and the Maharratta dominions, and on the E. by Bengal. It is computed to contain 25,000 square miles, and is one of the most fertile and highly cultivated districts of India.

BAHAR, a district of the above province. BAHAR, the capital of the above district, 35 miles S. E. from Patna. It has now fallen much to decay, but is still resorted to by pilgrims. Long. 85. 37. E. Lat. 25. 13. N.

BAHREL-GONOK, a town of Hindostan, in the country of Baglana, on the river Godavery. Long. 74. 52. E. Lat. 19. 43. N.

BAHREIN, a cluster of islands on the south-west side of the Persian gulf, near the coast of Arabia, the principal of which are named Bahrein or Awal, Samahe, and Arad, or Eanebi Saleh. The first, which is considered the chief, lies about 15 miles from the coast, and 90 W. N. W. Bushire. A pearl fishery, the richest and most productive in the world, is carried on at these islands.

BAHIA, HOKDA, a large and well sheltered port of the island of Cuba. Long. 83. 6. W. Lat. 22. 58. N.

BAHIA DE TODOS SANTOS, a province and captainship of Brazil, so named from the capacious bay on which its capital, St Salvador, is built.

BAHIA, CITY OF. See St Salvador.

BAHLINGERN, a well built village in the grand duchy of Baden. Population 1620.

BAHN, a town of the Prussian states, in further Pomerania. Population 1300.

BAJA, or BAJAS, an ancient town of Naples, of which nothing remains but a few small cottages. 11 miles W. Naples.

BAJA, a considerable market town of Hungary, in the county of Bodrog, 81 miles S. Buda.

BALAS, or BALAT, a town of Syria, situated at the north-east corner of the bay of Alexandretta, supposed to be the ancient Issus in Cilicia. 16 miles from Alexandretta.

BAKOURDJI, a town of Turkish Armenia, on the Black sea, 45 miles N. Erzerum.

BAIKAL, a lake of Siberia, in the government of Irkoutsk, sometimes called the sea of Baikal, or the Holy sea. It extends 366 miles in length from S. W. to N. E., by from 20 to 53 miles in breadth. The depth varies from 22 to 90 fathoms, but it is said the bottom is penetrated some thousand feet by gulfs. It is frozen over during winter. Not fewer than 2000 seals are taken annually on this lake. Several hot springs and mineral waters are seen on the margin; and naphtha is sometimes found floating on the surface. Long. 104. to 110. E. Lat. 52. to 55. 41. N.

BAILAN, a village of Syria, 9 miles E. Alexandretta.

BAILDEN, or BAILDON, a town of England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 679. 203 miles from London.

BAILIEBOROUGH, a small market town of Ireland, county of Cavan, 14 miles S. E. Cavan.

BAILLEUL, or BELLE, a dismantled town in French Flanders, on the river Lys, with 9000 inhabitants. Large quantities of thread, lace, and woollen stuffs, are manufactured here. 13 miles W. N. W. Lille.

BAILLEUL, a small town of France, in Normandy, with 400 houses.—It is the name of several other small towns in France.

BAIN, a town of France, department of the Ille and Vilaine. Population 3450.

BAIRNBRIDGE, a township of England, in the North Riding of Yorkshire. Pop. 872.

BAIX, two villages of France, one in the department of the Eastern Pyrenees, 15 miles S. W. Perpignan; the other in the department of the Vosges. Pop. of each, 1800.

BAIRDSTOWN, a post township of the United States, and capital of Nelson county, Kentucky, 33 miles S. W. Frankfort, on a branch of Salt river. Population 821.

BAIROUT, anciently Berytus, a seaport town of Syria, in the pachalik of Saïde, or Acre, situated on a plain. The streets are narrow and irregular, and the suburbs are nearly as large as the town, consisting of houses interspersed with gardens, which, being planted with fruit trees, have a beautiful appearance. The population amounts to 7000 or 8000, composed of Druses, Maronites, Greek schismatics, Turks, and Arabs. Long. 35. 32. E. Lat. 33. 45. N.

BAIX, a town of France, province of Maine, with 300 houses. 8 miles E. Mayenne.

BAKER'S ISLAND, an island of the United States, in Massachusetts, off Salem harbour, 5 miles E. N. E. Salem. On its N. end is a light-house.

BAKER ISLAND, an island in the Polar sea, discovered by Captain Parry. Long. 97. 54. W. Lat. 74. 58. N.

BAKER'S RIVER, a river of the United States, in New Hampshire, which runs into the Merrimack at Plymouth.

BAKEWELL, a market town and parish of England, in Derby, near the confluence of the rivers Wye and Derwent. There are mines and quarries in the neighbourhood. Population 9162. 11 miles from Chesterfield.

BAKHISHISARAI, a large town of European Russia, in the Crimen. It consists of irregular streets and houses, mostly of wood. Population formerly 20,000, now reduced to 5770. Here are manufactures of Turkey leather, saddles, silk stuffs, and cutlery. Long. 33. 52. E. Lat. 45. 10. N.

BAKTEGAN, or BAKTEGHIAN, a salt lake of Persia, in the province of Fars, about 75 miles in circuit. 10 miles S. E. Schiraz.

BAKU, or BADKU, a town and principality of Persia, province of Schirvan, occupying the peninsula of Absharon, in the Caspian sea, to which it is chiefly restricted. The town stands on a declivity, near to the sea. It is defended by a double wall and deep ditch, and there are two strong forts, under the protection of which, vessels can anchor within 80 yards of the shore. A great quantity of cotton is cultivated in the neighbourhood, which is particularly prized. It is exported from Baku, together with fruit, opium, rice, silk, wine, rock salt, and naphtha. Wine is made by the Armenians at Schamaghi, from which silks are imported, as well as cloths, dye-stuffs, iron, and linen, from Astracan. Its principal trade is with this city, from which six or eight vessels arrive yearly. Petroleum is obtained in vast abundance from wells in the principality, particularly about eight miles from the town. The principality was taken possession of by the Russians in 1791. Long. 51. 7. E. Lat. 42. 22. N.

BALA, a market town of North Wales, and a borough by prescription, in the county of Merioneth, situated on Bala Pool. The inhabitants knit woollen gloves and stockings. Population 1163. 26 miles N.W. Welshpool.

BALACHINA, a town of European Russia, in the government of Nischnei-Novgorod, on the Volga. Population 5000. 120 miles E.S.E. Petersburg. Long. 43. 29. E. Lat. 56. 30. N.

BALACHANSKOI, a town of Russia, in the government of Irkoutsk, 30 miles N.N.W. Irkoutsk. Lat. 53. 45. N.

BALAGUER, a town of Spain, in Catalonia, on the Segre. Population 3790. 63 miles N.W. Barcelona.

BALAKAWA, a small seaport town of European Russia, in the Crimea, government of Taurida. Long. 33. 14. E. Lat. 44. 35. N.

BALAMBANGAN, a rich and fruitful island in the Eastern seas, between Borneo and Magindano. Long. 117. 6. E. Lat. 7. 15. N.

BALASORE, a seaport of Hindostan, in Orissa, on the Booree Bellam river. The English, Dutch, and Portuguese, formerly had factories here for the manufacture of fine cotton cloths. 110 miles S. W. Calcutta. Long. 87. 13. E. Lat. 21. 31. N.

BALATON, a lake in Hungary, between the counties of Szalad, Wesprim, and Schumeg, 40 miles long, and from 1 to 4 broad.

BALASTRO, a town of Spain, in Arragon, 30 miles E. N. E. Saragossa. Pop. 5000.

BALNEC, anciently HELIOFOLIA, a town of Syria, situated in a fertile valley, at the foot of Antilibanus. It is small and meanly built, and is surrounded by ruinous walls, flanked by square towers, four miles in circuit. The population, long decreasing, is now computed at 1200. Here are to be found some splendid remains of antiquity, particularly a magnificent temple, dedicated to the sun, said to have been built by the Emperor Antoninus Pius. 40 miles N. N. W. Damascus. Long. 36. 11. E. Lat. 34. 1. N.

BALNIBOGAN, a fishing town of Ireland, county of Dublin, 15 miles N. Dublin.

BALNY, a village of England, West Riding of Yorkshire, 1 mile S. W. Doncaster.

BALCARRY, a seaport of Scotland, on the Solway frith, 10 miles E. S. E. Kirkcudbright.

BALDERSTON, a township of England, county of Lancaster. Population 705.

BALDIVIA. See Valdivia.

BALDOCK, a market town and parish of England, in Hertford. Corn and malt are the chief articles of traffic. Population, 1850. 38 miles N. London.

BALÉ, BASEL, or BASEL, one of the nineteen cantons of Switzerland, bound W. by the Sundgau, N. by the Brigau, E. by the Frickthal, and S. by Solothurn. It contains 187 square miles, peopled with 37,000 inhabitants; has 3 towns, 27 parishes, and is of the reformed religion.

BALÉ, the capital of the foregoing canton, and the largest town in Switzerland, lies on the Rhine, which divides it into two unequal joined together by a bridge of 600 feet in length. The munster, or cathedral church, the town-house, and the arsenal, are objects worthy of attention. The university, founded here in 1453, has an excellent library, a cabinet of medals, and botanic garden. It has manufactures of silk ribbons, silk stuffs, cotton, paper, linen, and gloves; there are also considerable bleachfields and dye-houses. Long. 7. 31. E. Lat. 47. 40. N.

BALEARIC ISLANDS, part of the group of islands in the Mediterranean, lying off the east coast of Spain, and formerly constituting the kingdom of Majorca. The principal are Majorca, Minorca, and Cabrera; which see.

BALFRON, a village and parish of Scotland, in Stirlingshire, with manufactures of cotton. Population 2841. 23 miles N. Glasgow.

BALFRON, an open town of Persia, in the province of Mazanderan. It is of an irregular form, and about a mile and a half in circuit. 20 miles W. Fehrad. Long. 52. 40. E. Lat. 35. 55. N.

BALHART, a fortified village of Hindostan, in Mysore, 187 miles N. Seringatam.

BALI, BALLY, or LITTLE JAVA, one of the Sunda islands, separated from Java by the straits of Bally, six leagues wide. It is about 75 miles long, by 40 broad. Population 200,000. Long. 115. E. Lat. from 8. to 9. S.

BALINGEN, a town of Wirtemberg. Pop. 3000. 36 miles S. Stuttgart.

BALINTREE, a village of Ireland, county of Roscommon; 80 miles from Dublin.

BALIZE, a river of South America, which falls into the bay of Honduras, Long. 91. 15. W. Lat. 14. 50. N.

BALIZE, a seaport of Yucatan, situated at the mouth of the river of the same name, and the only regular establishment which the English settlers have formed in this country. The number of houses is about 200. Many of those which belong to opulent merchants are spacious, commodious, and well furnished. At the back of this settlement is an immense swamp, the moist exhalations from which are corrected by the regularity of the sea breezes which generally prevail here, and the place is in consequence not unhealthy.

BALKEE, a town of Hindostan, now decayed to an extensive village. Long. 77. 29. E. Lat. 17. 40. N.

BALL, a village of Ireland, in the county of Mayo, intersected by a stream. 107 miles W. Dublin.

BALLAGHY, a village of Ireland, county of Londonderry, 18 miles S. Coleraine.

BALLANTYRE, a village of Scotland, in Ayrshire. Pop. 1280. 20 miles S. S. W. Ayr.

BALÉAS, a trading village on the Nile, in Upper Egypt, 10 miles S. Dendera.

BALLASSA-GYARMATH, a large market town of Hungary, in the county of Neograd.

BALLENSTEDT, a town of Germany. Pop. 2500. 27 miles N. E. Nordhausen.

BALLEROY, a village of France, in Normandy. Population 1150. 18 miles S. Caen.

BAILEY-SALLEY, a village of the I. Man, 5 miles from Castletown.

BALLYMORE, a town of Ireland, in the county of Westmeath, 10 miles N. Athlone.

BALLINA, a town of Ireland, in the county of Mayo, on the Moy, 6 miles S. Killala.

BALLINAHINCH, a village of Ireland, in the county of Down, 12 miles S. Belfast.

BALLINAKIL, a market town of Ireland, in Queen's county, with woollen manufactures. 14 miles W. Carlow.

BALLINANAUGHT, a village of Ireland, county of Cavan, 64 miles from Dublin.

BALLYASLOE, a thriving and populous town of Ireland, in the county of Roscommon, on the Suck, 30 miles W. Galway.

BALLYDERRY, a village and parish of Ireland, in the county of Antrim, 73 miles from Dublin. Population 3500.

BALLYMORE, a town of Ireland, in the county of Mayo, 15 miles S. Castlebar.

BALLINTRY, a village and parish of Ireland, county of Antrim. Population of the village 300 or 400. 150 miles from Dublin.

BALLOU, a town of France, province of Maine, on the Orne. It has manufactures of linen cloths. Pop. 3560.

BALLY, an island in the Eastern sea, about two miles in circuit. Lat. 0. 30. S.

BALLYV, a considerable town on the east coast of the island of Loughbock. Long. 110. 28. E. Lat. 8. 31. S.

BALLYWAY, a village of Ireland, county of Monaghan, 0 miles S. Monaghan.

BALLYBOUGH BRIDGE, a village of Ireland, a mile from Dublin.

BALLYWHITTAS, a village of Ireland, in Queen's county. Population about 600.

BALLYCAGOR, a village of Ireland, in Wexford, 6 miles S. Newborough.

BALLYCASTLE, a small seaport of Ireland, in the county of Antrim. It is divided into an upper and lower town. Population 700. 30 miles N. Antrim.

BALLYCONNEL, a small market town of Ireland, county of Cavan, 11 miles from Cavan.

BALLYCOTTON, an island in St George's channel, on the south-west coast of Ireland. Long. 7. 59. W. Lat. 51. 50. N.

BALLYDOWGAX, BALLYDOVELIN BAYS, two bays on the south-west coast of Ireland.

BALLYELA BAY, a bay on the west coast of Ireland. Long. 9. 20. W. Lat. 52. 53. N.

BALLYGAWLY, a village of Ireland, in the county of Tyrone, 74 miles from Dublin.

BALLYHACK, a village of Ireland, in the county of Wexford. Pop. 400.

BALLYHAYS, a market town of Ireland, county of Cavan, 57 miles from Dublin.

BALLYMENA, a town of Ireland, county of Antrim, on the Maine. Linen manufactures are carried on here; and there is a weekly market for horses and cattle. Pop. 2500. 20 miles N. W. Belfast.

BALLYMONEY, a village of Ireland, in the county of Antrim, where there is a monthly market for linens. Population 1800. 23 miles N. Antrim.

BALLYMURTAGH, a village of Ireland; in the county of Wicklow.

BALLYNAHINCH, a village of Ireland, county of Galway. Here is a chalybeate spring.

BALLYNASKELAGH, a village and bay of Ireland, in the county of Kerry.

BALLYQUINTIN POINT, a village of Ireland, county of Down, 7 miles E. Downpatrick.

BALLYRAGGET, a village of Ireland, county of Kilkenny, on the Nore, consisting of 214 houses. 50 miles from Dublin.

BALLYADEERE, a village of Ireland, county of Sligo.

BALLYSHANNON, a town of Ireland, county of Donegal, situated on a bay at the mouth of a river flowing from Lough Erne, which is crossed by a bridge of 14 arches. There is a good harbour here, and two fisheries of eels and salmon. 40 miles S. W. Londonderry.

BALLYTORE, a village of Ireland, county of Kildare, 28 miles from Dublin.

BALMERINO, a village and parish of Scotland, in Fife, on the Tay. Population 965. 8 miles N. W. St Andrew's.

BALNAKYLE, a village of Scotland, on the island of Lewis.

BALSALL, a hamlet of England, in the county of Warwick. Population 1066.

BALSTAL, a market town of Switzerland, canton of Solothurn, 10 miles N. E. Solothurn.

BALTA, or BALTO, a town of European Russia, in Podolia, 65 miles N. N. E. Bender.

BALTIC PORT, a seaport of European Russia, in Esthonia, 160 miles N. Riga. Population 220.

BALTIC SEA, a well known inland sea in the north-west of Europe, which is, to speak properly, a great gulf of the German ocean. It begins at the Danish islands of Zealand and Funen, and is formed by the coasts of Denmark, Germany, Prussia, Russia, and Sweden. It extends beyond the 65th degree of N. lat., being above 600 miles in length, and varying from 75 to 150 in breadth. The number of square miles in its surface is estimated at 120,000. It is frozen for about three months every year, so as to prevent navigation altogether. There are three passages from the Cattegat into the Baltic—the Sound, the Great Belt, and the Little Belt; of these, the most frequented is the Sound. At each a toll is paid, for the purpose of maintaining light-houses.

BALTIMORE, a decayed town of Ireland, in the county of Cork, situated on a headland projecting into the sea, with a good harbour. 13 miles S. Bantry.

BARTIMORE, a county of the United States, in Maryland, on the west side of Chesapeake bay, N. of Patapsco river. Chief town, Baltimore. Population 29,258, exclusive of the city and its precincts.

BALTIMORE, a city and port of entry of the United States, in Baltimore county, Maryland, is on the north side of Patapsco river, 14 miles from its entrance into Chesapeake bay. It is generally well built. The houses are chiefly of brick; many of them are handsome, and some splendid. The principal street is Market or Baltimore street, 86 feet wide. It runs nearly east and west, parallel with the harbour, and is intersected by others at right angles. North and east of the city, the land rises to a considerable elevation, from which there is a noble view of the city and harbour. There are several literary institutions in this city. A medical college was founded in 1807. The city is built around a bay, which sets up from the north side of the Patapasco, and affords a spacious and convenient harbour. The strait which connects this bay with the river is very narrow, and is well defended by Fort M'Henry. A small river, called Jones' Falls, empties into the north side of the harbour, and divides the city into two parts, called the town and Fell's point, which are connected by bridges. Baltimore contains the state penitentiary; the city and county almshouse; a court-house; a museum; a theatre; a custom-house; an hospital, in which there is a fine collection of anatomical preparations in wax; an exchange, an immense edifice recently erected; 3 market-houses; 10 banks; 31 churches for Roman Catholics, Episcopallians, Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, &c. Population of the city and precincts, in 1790, 13,503; in 1800, 26,514; in 1810, 46,555, of whom 10,343 were blacks; and in 1820, 62,627. Long. 76. 30. W. Lat. 39. 17. N.

BALTINGLASS, a town of Ireland, county of Wicklow, on the Slaney. It has manufactures of linen and woollen cloths. 29 miles S. W. Dublin.

BALTONSBURY, a hamlet and parish of England, county of Somerset. Pop. 671.

BALZAC, a village of France, on the Charrente, with 210 houses.

BANBA, the largest and richest province of the kingdom of Congo, extending along upwards of 70 leagues in the interior. Long. 13. 52. E. Lat. 7. 2. S.

BANBARAH, an ancient city in the province of Sinde, in Hindostan, now in ruins. Long. 67. 50. E. Lat. 24. 46. N.

BAMBARRA, a large and powerful kingdom of Central Africa. It has on the W. Kaarta and Manding, on the N. Ludamar and Beettoo, on the E. Tombuctoo and Baedoo, and on the S. Kong and Mamana. The country is in general fertile, and is traversed by the Niger, which, from west to east, is navigable by canoes through the whole of this extent. Mr Park, in travelling through this country, passed many populous towns. Sego, the capital, has 30,000; Samanding, 10,000 or 11,000; and Jenne is probably larger than either.

BANNEBO, the capital of the principality of the same name, now of the circle of the Maine, in the Agarian dominions, is situated on the Regnita, which enters into the Maine a little below the town. It contains a cathedral, besides various churches and monasteries, which are all worthy of regard. One of the most interesting of the public institutions is the university, originally founded in 1147; and the principal charitable establishments are the Ludwig's hospital, the Lazaretto, the house of correction, and the work-house. The most important of the manufactures is the chimis and cotton printing. Bamberg is noted for its excellent garden vegetables. 30 miles N. W. Nurnberg. Long. 10. 35. E. Lat. 50. 50. N.

BARNBOROUGH, a village and parish of England, in the county of Northumberland, once a royal borough, returning two members to parliament. It stands on the sea coast, and has a castle close to the shore, which, according to ancient historians, was built by Ina, king of the Northumbrians, in 548. Population 3342. 5 miles E. Belford.

BAMBOUR, a kingdom of Central Africa, lying between the Senegal and Gambie, on the eastern bank of the Falemme, and to the south of the kingdom of Gallam, or Kajaga. It is about 100 miles from north to south, and 80 from east to west. It is divided into three provinces, Bamboor proper, Konkodoo, and Satadoo. All the three abound with gold, but the first most particularly.

BANCENY, an island lying off the coast of Chittagong, in Bengal.

BANIAN, a city of Persia, in the province of Bulkh. Long. 60. 57. E. Lat. 24. 30. N.

BAMNAROO, a town of Bambarra, in Africa, on the Niger. Long. 5. 48. W. Lat. 12. 50. N.

BAMPTON, a market town and parish of England, in Oxford, on the Isis. Pop. 2304.

BAMPTON, a market town and parish of England, in Devonshire. Population 1633. 164 miles W. London.

BANAUGHAN, a town of Ireland, in King's county, on the Shannon, 15 miles S. Athlone.

BANAGANPILLY, a village of Hindostan, in the Balaghaut ceded territories, celebrated for its diamond mines. Long. 76. E. Lat. 14. 20. N.

BANAWARA, a town of Hindostan, in Mysore, consisting of about 500 houses, with a mud fort. Long. 76. 14. E. Lat. 13. 14. N.

BANBURY, a market town and parish of England, in Oxford, on the Charwell. Plush is manufactured in this town. Population 3300. 224 miles N. Oxford.

BANCA, an island in the Indian sea, about 130 miles in length, by 40 or 50 in breadth, separated from Sumatra by the straits of Banca, celebrated for its tin mines, which are said to be worked by a colony of about 10,000 Chinese. Banca was ceded to Holland in 1814, for Cochin. Long. 105. 15. to 106. 40. E. Lat. 1. 37. to 2. 4. S.

BANCALLARY, a large and populous town near the western extremity of the island of Madura, where the sultan resides.

BANGARUA, a large town and district of Hindostan, in the province of Bejapoor.

BANGARUA, a town of Hindostan, in Mysore. 100 miles N. W. Bangalore.

BANCOCK, a town and district of the kingdom of Siam. Long. 101. 16. E. Lat. 13. 40. N.

BAYCOTT, or FOUR VICTORIA, a fortified island of Hindostan, on the coast of Cochin. Long. 72. 26. E. Lat. 17. 50. N.

BANDA ISLANDS, a group of islands in the Eastern sea, about 300 miles E. S. E. Ambon. They are ten in number; Banda Neira, Banda Lantoe, which is Banda proper, Pulo Ay, Pulo Rando, Pulo Pisang, Rongien, Coata, Ocapita, Souangy, and Goung Apou. All are high, with precipitous mountains. Their chief produce is nutmeg. These islands are under the dominion of the Dutch, who only allow the cultivation of the nutmeg in four islands, extirpating it in all others. The population, which formerly amounted to 15,000 whites, is now 4000, composed of a few natives of Holland and half casts, together with their descendants, convicts, and slaves. Only 1000 are free. These islands, which were taken by the British, were restored at the peace of Amiens, in 1801. They were again captured in 1810, and restored at the general peace of 1814. Long. 120. E. Lat. 4. 30. S.

BANBOW, a river of Ireland, county of Cork, which flows into the sea at Kinsale.

BANDON, or BANDONBRIDGE, a town of Ireland, in the county of Cork, on the river Bandon. It has two churches, a handsome Roman Catholic chapel, a court-house, two market-houses in different parts of the town, and a spacious quay on the south side of the river. Lintens, camblets, and coarse woollen stuffs, are manufactured; and there are works for tanning, brewing, and dyeing particularly blue colours. Bandon returns two members to the imperial parliament. Population 14,120. 13 miles S. W. Cork.

BANFF, a maritime county of Scotland, bounded N. by the Murray frith, S. and E. by the county of Aberdeen, and W. by the counties of Elgin and Inverness. It extends about 64 miles in extreme length, and 36 in extreme breadth; but the superficial area does not exceed 622 square miles, or 398,000 square acres. About 35,000 acres are waste, and 18,000 are in wood. It is in general hilly and mountainous, with fertile valleys interspersed. It produces limestone, marble, and also slates, and bones or whelstones. In the mountain of Cairngorm, and in other parts of that elevated range, are found rock crystals and topazes, commonly called cairngorms. The principal rivers are the Deveron and Spey, on which are productive salmon fisheries. The state of agriculture is very various, being considerably improved in some places, while it is rather backward in others. The manufactures of this county are not considerable. The county is divided into 23 parishes, and contains 2 royal burghs, Banff and Cullen; besides several towns and villages, as Keith, Pettibon, Cullinstown, and Pochabera. The valued rent of the county in 1793, 200 Scots; and in 1811, according to the assessment for the property tax, the real gross rent of the lands was £. 75,341. 13. 4d. and of the houses £. 5014. 21. 6d. Pop. 12,561.

BANFF, a handsome seaport town of Scotland, in the county of Banff, at the mouth of the Deveron, over which is a fine bridge of seven arches; and the harbour is protected by a half-moon battery of eight guns. There is a well built town-house, and a new prison. The principal manufactures are thread, linen, stockings, soap, and tanning. Banff was constituted a royal borough by a charter of Robert II. dated 1373; and, along with the burghs of Cullen, Elgin, Kintore, and Inverury, returns a member to parliament. There are here several good seminaries for education. Population 3006. 44 miles N. W. Aberdeen, 106 N. Edinburgh. Long. 2. 26. W. Lat. 57. 35. N.

BANGALORE, a fortified town of Hindostan, in Mysore, formerly the capital of a kingdom, and afterwards taken possession of by Hyder Aly, who constructed a fort; and the town was farther improved by Tipoo, who built a fine palace here, which had extensive gardens. It was taken by assault, under Lord Cornwallis, and plundered by the army. 74 miles N. E. Seringapatam. Long. 77. 46. E. Lat. 12. 37. N.

BANGOR, an ancient city and bishop's see of Wales, in the county of Caernarvon. It is greatly decayed; but the whole parish now contains only 565 indifferent houses. Population of the parish 3570. 15 miles S. W. Aberconway.

BANGOR, a village and parish of North Wales, in Flintshire, on the Dee. Pop. 1336.

BANROON, a town of Ireland, in the county of Down, in Carrickfergus bay. Here there is a small harbour. A fishery is carried on for soles, plaice, and turbot, and during winter for cod and oysters. 90 miles N. E. Dublin.

BANJALUKA, a fortress and town of European Turkey, in Bosnia, on the river Vrbasa. Houses 2000. 144 miles W. Belgrade.

BANNALEC, a town of France, in Brittany, 15 miles E. Quimper. Population 4700.

BANNBRIDGE, a village of Ireland, in the county of Down, 30 miles W. Downpatrick.

BANTROCKBURN, a village of Scotland, county of Stirling, on the Bannock, noted for the defeat of the English by the Scots, in 1314. 4 miles E. Stirling.

BANTAN, a kingdom on the north-west coast of Java. The capital, of the same name, was once a rich and flourishing place, but is now, declined into a miserable village. 61 miles W. Batavia.

BARTLE, a town of Ireland, on the east coast of a bay of that name, county of Cork, with a small harbour. 40 miles S. W. Cork.

BARTY BAY, a spacious bay on the south-west coast of Ireland, in the county of Cork, about 25 miles long by 6 or 8 broad. In 1794, a French fleet anchored in this bay.

BAPAUME, a seaport town of France, in the department of La Pas de Calais. Pop. 3130. 90 miles N. Paris.

BARTAR, or AL COMAR, a small river of France, which joins the Seine below Rouen. Bar, or Bana, a small but thriving town of France, in Lower Alsace. Pop. 4100. 16 miles S. W. Strasburg.

BARBACOA, an island in the Atlantic ocean, within the gulf of Darien.

BARBACOA, a city of Quito, in the province of Emmeraldas, on the coast of the Pacific ocean, 120 miles N. Quito. Long. 72. 8. W. Lat. 1. 42. S.—2d, A town of South America, in the province of Venezuela, at the source of the Tucuy.—3d, A village in the same province, E. of Lake Maracaibo.

BARBADOES, one of the Caribbees, and the most eastern of the West India islands. It is about 21 miles in length and 14 in breadth, and contains 106,470 acres of land, most of which is under cultivation. It lies 20 leagues E. St Vincent, which may be seen in a clear day; 25 from St Lucia, and 28 S. E. Martinico. The houses of the planters are very numerous all along the country, which, with the luxuriant productions of the soil, and the gently swelling hills, form a delightful scene. Barbadoes, from the most authentic accounts, appears to have declined both in its population and its trade. This decline is ascribed to the dreadful succession of hurricanes with which this and the other West India islands have been visited. The capital of the island had scarcely risen from the ashes to which it had been reduced, when it was torn from its foundations, and the whole country made a scene of desolation, by the storm of the 10th October 1780, in which above 4000 of the inhabitants miserably perished, and the damage of property was computed at above one million sterling. Independent of those sudden calamities, arising from the fury of the elements, the trade and cultivation of this island suffers considerably from the duty already mentioned of 44 per cent. granted by the inhabitants to Charles II. on all produce exported. Barbadoes was settled in the year 1624 by the English, who laid the foundation of James Town. In 1627, the island was made over by patent to the Earl of Carlisle, who afterwards conveyed his rights to Lord Willoughby. After the restoration, the legislation of the island was vested in the crown; and the planters, on being legally confirmed in the possession of their estates, agreed to impose, for the benefit of the crown, a duty of 44 per cent. on all commodities, the growth of the island, exported into any part of the world. Population is 1811, whites 10,300; free people of colour 3302; slaves 62,258. Barbadoes is situate in 13. 10. N. lat. and in 59. W. long.

BARBARY, or the BARBARY STATES, is the name given to an extensive tract of territory along the coast of Northern Africa. It is bounded on the one side by the Mediterranean, on the other by that immense desert which stretches southward as far as the straits. It is intersected by the great mountain chain of Atlas, which is immediately in Morocco, but extends with diminishing it, and in various branches, along the whole southern frontier of Algiers and Tunis. Between this chain and the sea is interposed a valley of from 50 to 200 miles in breadth, which constitutes the cultivated land of Barbary. The soil, in consequence of the innumerable streams with which it is watered, displays an exuberant fertility; and the loose and sandy character which it shares with all this part of the continent, serves only to enable the husbandman to obtain with less labour an abundant crop.

The mountains of Barbary produce silver, copper, and lead. Iron and copper occur pretty copiously in that division of the chain which traverses the southern part of Morocco. Antimony also is a copious product of the western Atlas. The plains are distinguished by the immense abundance of saline substances. All the lakes are nearly as salt as the sea, and, when dried up by the summer heats, exhibit their beds covered with this mineral in a state of incrustation. Salt springs are more numerous than fresh; nor is there any water fit for drinking in the territory of Tunis, except what falls in the form of rain. Nitre is also found in various places. The soil, as already observed, wherever it is sufficiently watered, is of exuberant fertility. Its productions, though somewhat more abundant, do not materially differ from those of southern Europe; nor does it yield more than one crop in the year. The principal grains are wheat and barley; beans and lentils are also plentiful; but oats are rare, and pease have been introduced from Europe. Fruits are abundant, and of excellent quality. The domestic animals are nearly the same as in Europe. The breed of goats is much esteemed, and their skins yield the leather so highly valued in Europe. The mountainous and desert tracks of Barbary all abound in wild animals, such as the lion; the panther, sometimes mistaken for the tiger; the hyena, the jackal, the jerboa, the antelope, &c. Serpents are numerous; several of them whose bite is certain death. The boa constrictor is also found on the borders of the great Sahara desert. Scorpions swarm everywhere in summer, filling the houses, and even the beds. The insect tribe presents, in the locust, a plague of a much more destroying nature. It is bred in the desert tracks, from whence, at periods which cannot be foreseen, its swarms pour down in vast bodies upon the fertile regions, and speedily consume every green substance, leaving the inhabitants in complete wretchedness. Eastern Barbary is distinguished, in a very remarkable manner, by the grandeur of the monuments of antiquity with which it is covered. The following are the different classes which compose the basis of the population: 1. The Moors; 2. The Jews; 3. The Arabs; 4. The Berbers, or ancient natives. The Moors, forming that portion of the Mahometan conquerors of Northern Africa who have addicted themselves to a settled mode of life, along with all the inhabitants who have been incorporated with them, and trained to the same habits, are the ruling people. Their religious creed is chiefly Mahometan, with all its troublesome ceremonies of ablutions, &c.

The Jews exist in considerable numbers throughout all the cities of Barbary, and are the object of perpetual insult, contumely, and oppression. The Arabs, with their flocks and herds, occupy all the interior and pastoral districts of Barbary. The Berbers are the inhabitants of the mountain districts. They have a language of their own, which seems to be indigenous. Unlike the Arabs, they live in fixed villages, and cultivate the ground.

BARRASOTT, a small seaport of Morocco, a little to the west of Ceuta.

BARRISSEUX, a small town of France, department of the Charente. Population 2749. 44 miles N. E. Bourdeaux.

BARUDA, one of the Caribbee islands, in the possession of the English. It is 21 miles long and 12 wide. Pop. 1500. 12 leagues N. E. Antigua. Long. 61. 49. W. Lat. 17. 36. N.

BARZY, the chief town of a county in the Prussian states, on the Elbe. Population 2814. 14 miles S. E. Magdeburg.

BARCA, a seaport town in a territory of the same name, between Tripoli and Egypt. Long. 20. 25. E. Lat. 32. 26. N.

BARCELONA, a city of Spain, the capital of the province of Catalonia, on the Mediterranean, in a situation highly convenient for foreign commerce. It is strongly fortified, is divided into the upper and lower town. The principal manufacturing establishments are 30 calico presses, many rooms for silk, wool, and cotton, and manufactories of hats, laces, ribbons, stockings, and soap. Here also are fabricated excellent muskets, pistols, swords, and other small arms. There are, besides, several steel and brass works. The harbour, though very spacious, is difficult of entrance. A private school is established for the instruction of engineer officers in mathematics, and in the principles of fortification. There are also academies for jurisprudence, practical medicine, natural philosophy, history, and the fine arts. A school for painting has also been set on foot by some merchants. The town is elegantly built, has nine parish churches, 34 cloisters, six colleges, six hospitals, one of which is fitted up to contain 3000 sick, a theatre, and dock-yard. In the great arsenal, the chief object of interest is the cannon foundry. Barcelona was besieged during the war of the Succession, by the duke of Berwick, to whom it surrendered in 1714, after an obstinate defence. To overawe the inhabitants for the future, a strong citadel was erected on the east side of the town. It is protected on the west by a fort on Montjuic. Population, with the contiguous town of Barceloneta, 131,500. 59 miles N. E. Taragona, and 276 E. N. Y. Madrid. Long. 2. 9. 57. E. Lat. 41. 21. 44. N.

BARCELONA, a province of the government of Cuchana, in South America, one of the three of which the government is composed; bounded W. by Cumana, E. by the Caracacas, and S. by the river Orinoco, which also divides it from Guayana. It is generally a plain country, of great extent, and covered with cattle.

BARCELONA, a city of South America, in the province of Cumana, on the river Neveri, at half a league's distance from the sea. It is neither handsomely nor agreeably constructed. Its streets are unpaved, and either muddy or covered with a light dust. The great number of hogs which are fed in the city contributes also to engender filth and disease. Population estimated by Depons at 14,000, composed half of whites and half of people of colour. It has a single parish church. Long. 61. 47. W. Lat. 10. 10. S.

BARCELONETTA, a town of Spain, in Catalonia, in the immediate vicinity of Barcelona. It is quite new, and has the appearance of a suburb, being situated to the south-west, between the harbour and the light-house. It is in the form of a square, laid out in 24 streets, each of at least 25 feet in breadth, and intersecting each other at equal distances. The church is in the form of a Greek cross. Population 10,000.

BARCELONETTE, a town of France, 66 miles N. W. Nice. Population 1900.

BARCLORE, a town of Hindostan, in Canara. Long. 74. 45. E. Lat. 13. 45. N.

BARNOR, a river of England, running into the Rea, in Northumberland.

BARNZEV, an island on the coast of Wales, about two miles long, and one broad.

BARSANTA, or KAVASANTA, a town of Persia, province of Kerman, 53 miles E. N. E. Serghun. Long. 59. 20. E. Lat. 29. 50. N.

BAREILY, a city of Hindostan, and capital of Bareilly district, on the Sautra, 40 miles E. of the Ganges, and 486 N. W. Calcutta. Long. 79. 21. E. Lat. 29. 22. N. It is large and populous, and the seat of the British judicial establishment for the district, and is one of the stations of the Church Missionary Society.

BARENTHON, a town of France, in Normandy. Population 3120.

BARBELEU, a town of France, department of La Manche. Its harbour is now choked up with sand. 12 miles E. Cherbourg.

BARBEREN, a cape on the coast of France, 18 miles E. Cherbourg.

BARNA, a town of Tuscany, on the Serchio. Population 9000.

BAROS, a town in Piedmont, at the foot of the Alps. Population 6900.

BARYKAN, a village of Scotland, in the county of Renfrew, near Paisley.

BARI, the chief town of a province of the same name in Naples. It lies on the gulf of Venice, and is well fortified. It has manufactures of linen. It trades also in wine, oil, and fruit. 120 miles E. N. E. Naples. Pop. 13,000.

BARJAC, a town of France, in Hanguan, department of the Gard. Population 1400.

BARJOIS, or BARJOUX, a town of France, department of the Var. Population 3020. 27 miles N. Toulon.

BARKING, a market town of England, in Essex, on the Rhoding. Population 6324. 7 miles E. London.

BARKSTAND, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 2224.

BARAGO, a town of Hindostan, in Canara, 10 miles S. Barcelore.

BARKWAY, a town and parish of England, in Hertford. Population 993.

BARLAHMOET, a town in French Hainault, on the Sambre. Population 1800.

BARLE, a river of England, which flows into the Exe, 5 miles below Dulverton.

BARLITTA, a small but populous seaport town of Naples, in the Terra di Bari, on the gulf of Venice. The streets are wide and well paved; the houses large, lofty, and built of beautiful hewn stone. It has a cathedral church, remarkable for its antique columns of granite; and a spacious citadel. In the market-place stands a colossal bronze statue, above 17 feet in height. The inhabitants trade in salt, almonds, and liquors. Population 15,923. 100 miles E. N. E. Naples.

BARTOW, GREAT, a township of England, in Derby. Population 708.

BARTON, a seaport town of Wales, in the county of Merioneth. The town is built on very unequal ground, so that at the mouth of the Maw or Alyn, the houses gradually rise above each other in successive terraces. There are two weekly markets on Tuesdays and Fridays.

BARNARD'S CASTLE, a town of England, in the county of Durham, on the river Tees. There is a castle here of great antiquity, belonging to the earl of Darlington; and an hospital, which was founded by John Baliol. Considerable manufactures of cumblits, stockings, leather articles, and other goods, are carried on. There is a weekly market, and four annual fairs. Population 3561. 246 miles N. London.

BARNAU, a town of Siberia, situated on a river of the same name, which falls into the Ob. It consists of 1900 houses.

BARNESLEY, a market town of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. It has considerable manufactures of iron, wire, nails, hardware, bottles, linen, and cotton. There is a weekly market on Wednesday, and three fairs annually. Population 8294. 171 miles N. London.

BARNET, CHIPPING BARNET, or HIGH BARNET, a town of England, in Hertford. It has almshouses for 12 old women, and a free school. In 1740 an obelisk was erected near Barnet, to commemorate an engagement between the adherents of the houses of York and Lancaster in 1471. Population 1703. 11 miles N. London.

BARNSTADT, a well built town of the Netherlands, with 2770 inhabitants. It is 10 miles N. W. Arnheim.

BARNSWICK, a town of England, in the county of Yorkshire. Population 1334.

BARNSTABLE, a seaport town of England, in the county of Devon, on the Taw, which is crossed by a bridge of 10 arches. 404 streets are well paved, and the houses are built of stone. The principal manufacture is of hair and woollens. It holds a weekly market, and is a borough, returning two members to parliament. Population 5079. 61 miles W. Taunton.

BARNSTABLE, a county of the United States, in Massachusetts, in the S. E. part of the state. It comprises the whole of the peninsula of Cape Cod, and is separated from Plymouth county by a narrow isthmus extending from Barnstable bay to Buzzard's bay. Population 22,311. The soil is principally sandy and barren, and the inhabitants depend on the sea for subsistence.

BARNSTABLE, a seaport of the United States, and capital of Barnstable county, Massachusetts, on Barnstable bay, 68 miles S. S. E. Boston. Population 3646. The harbour has a bar, which prevents the entrance of large vessels. The inhabitants are largely concerned in navigation and the fisheries. The amount of shipping in 1815, was 15,964 tons.

BARNWELL, a district of the United States, in South Carolina. Pop. 12,200. Nileses 1453.

BARQUISIMETO, an ancient city of South America, in the province of Venezuela. The city is placed on a level, whose elevation exposes it to every breeze; and this tempers the excessive heat. The houses are well built; the streets on a line, and wide. The parish church is handsome. The inhabitants, amounting to 11,300, are industrious and affluent. 120 miles W. S. W. Caracas.

BARN, a village and parish of Scotland, in the county of Ayr. Population 837.

BARRA, a village of Italy, in Naples. Population 5230.

BARRA LINDING, a populous town, capital of a kingdom of Africa, of the same name, on the north side of the Gambia. It trades in cotton cloths, elephants' teeth, and gold dust.

BARRACONDA, a considerable town of Africa, about 400 miles up the Gambia. Long. 13. W. Lat. 13. 36. N.

BARRAGON, BAY OF, in the river Plata, about 12 miles below Buenos Ayres, to the S. E.

BARRATABIA BAY, a bay of the United States, in Louisiana, in the gulf of Mexico, W. of the Balize. Long. 90. W.

BARRAUX, a fortress of France, in Dauphiny, on the Isere. Population 1330.

BARWAY, one of the Hebrides of Scotland, about 8 miles in length. Population 2303.

BARREN, a county of the United States, in Kentucky. Population 11,386. Slaves 1724. Chief town Glasgow.

BARREN, a river of the United States, in Kentucky, which runs N. W. into Green river, between Logan and Warren counties. Mouth of Little Barren river 60 miles above.

BANGOR ISLAND, an island in the bay of Bengal, 18 miles in circuit. Lat. 12. 15. N.

BARKEN LALAND, a small island in Chesapeake bay.

BARKEN ISLAND, CAPE, an island of the South Pacific ocean, lying in Glass Straits. Long. 143. 10. E. Lat. 46. 22. S.

BARREN ISLES, about 3 leagues from Cape Elizabeth, N. E. point of Cook's Inlet. Long. 200. N. Lat. 66 55 N.

BARRIS, a town of Queen's county, Nova Scotia, on the south side of the bay of Fundy.

BARRINGTON, a post township of the United States in Suffolk county, New Hampshire.

BARROW, a hamlet and parish of England, county of Salop. Population 462.

BARROW, a town and parish of England, in Leicestershire, on the Soar. Pop. 1558.

BARROW, a river of Ireland, which falls into the sea at Waterford bay.

BARROW'S STRAIT, a deep inlet in Baffin's bay, about 60 miles broad at the mouth, where it was formerly supposed there was land, until it was entered by captain Parry in 1818, who penetrated into the Polar sea, as far as the 114th degree of W. long.

BARROWFORD, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 2168.

BARSAK, a town of France, on the Garonne. Houses 450. 38 miles S. E. Bourdeaux.

BAR-DEU-AVENE, an old town of France, in Lower Champagne. Its manufactures are soap, linen, serge, and leather. Population 3000. 30 miles E. by S. Troyes.

BAR-SUR-ORNAIS, a town of France, on the river Orna. Here are manufactures of woollen stuffs, calicoes, stockings, hats, and leather. Pop. 10,000. 42 miles W. Nancy.

BAR-SUR-SEINE, a town of France, in Burgundy, on the Seine. Population 2270. 18 miles S. E. Troyes.

BARTEN, a town of East Prussia, 40 miles S. E. Königsberg. Population 1330.

BARTENSTEIN, a town of East Prussia, 28 miles S. Königsberg. Population 3150.

BARTH, or BARUT, a well built town of the Prussian states, in Higher Pomerania. It exports corn and wool to Sweden.

BARTHELEMY, a river of the United States, in Louisiana, which, after a course of about 150 miles, joins the Ouachita.

BARTHELEMY, St., a town of France, department of the Lot and Garonne. Population 2360.

BARTHOLOMEW, St., one of the Caribbee islands in the West Indies, about 15 miles in circumference, and very fertile.

BARTOLOMEO IN CASINO, St., a town of Naples, province of Capitanata. Pop. 3500.

BARTON, a river of the United States, in Vermont, which runs into Lake Memphremagog.

BARTON'S CREEK, a river of the United States, in Tennessee, which runs into the Cumberland.

BARTON ON HUMBER, a market town and parish of England, in Lincolnshire, on the south side of the Humber. Here are two churches. An extensive manufacture of cordage is carried on. Pop. 1307. 34 miles N. Lincoln.

BARTON ON INWELL, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 707. 7 miles from Manchester.

BARTON UNDER NEEDWOOD, a township of England, in Staffordshire. Population 1207.

BARTRACH, an island of Ireland, in the bay of Killybeg. Long. 11 N. Lat. 54 13 N.

BARTUN, a town of Saxony, S. S. E. Potsdam. Population 1600.

BAS, a small island of France, on the coast of Brittany. Long. S. E. W. Lat. 41 43. 40 N.

BAS-DE-BASSET, a market town of France, department of the Upper Loire. It has manufactures of blond lace, tobacco pipes, and earthen-ware. Population 2700.

BASSEE ISLANDS, five islands in the Chinese sea, north of which are two rocky islets. Long. 123 E. Lat. 20. 21. to 20. 40. N.

BASILICATA, a province in Naples, having Bari and Capitanata on the north, the Principato Ultra, the Principato Citra, and the Tuscian sea on the west, Calabria on the south, and the gulf of Tarento on the east.

BASILIDIANOS, or simply BASILIA, the ancient Basra, a river of European Turkey, in the south of the Morea, which falls into the gulf of Kolokyta.

BASING, Old, a township and parish of England, in the county of Southampton. Population 1073. 43 miles W. London.

BASINGSTON, a market town and parish of England, in Southamptonshire. It has an ancient church, and a market-house, with a town-hall. There are four charity and five schools. Pop. 3165. 47 miles W. London.

BASMAN, a village of Persia, in the province of Khorassan. Houses 150. Long. 50. 52 E. Lat. 28. 36 N.

BASOUNA, a town of Hindostan, in the district of Bilsah. Long. 74 13 E. Lat. 23 34 N.

BASQUE ISLAND, a small island in the river St Lawrence, near the coast of Lower Canada.

BASQUEVILLE, a town of France, in Lower Normandy. Population 2190. 20 miles N. Rouen.

BASRODE, a town of Flanders, on the Scheldt. Population 2150.

BASS, a singular rocky islet of Scotland, in the frith of Forth, about three miles from the south shore, 400 feet high.

BASSANO, a flourishing trading town of Italy, in the Venetian territory, on the Brenta. The trade in silk, cloth, and leather, is thriving. 20 miles W. Treviso.

BASSE TOWN, the chief town in the island of St Christopher's, in the West Indies, with 800 houses. Long. 62 36 W. Lat. 17 24 N.

BASSE TERRE, PORT DE LA, a castle of the island of Guadeloupe, on the west coast. BASSE LA, a town in French Flanders, 5 miles N. W. Douay. Population 2300.

BASSEN, a considerable seaport town on the west coast of Hindostan, on an island which is separated by a narrow strait from the island of Salsette. 27 miles E. Bombay.

BASSTYTHWAITE, a township and parish of England, in Cumberland. Pop. 337.

BASSTONARA, a town of Upper Italy, 5 miles N. Alexandria. Population 3000.

BASSORA, BUSSORA, or BASSAL, a city of Asia, in the government of Bagdad, situated on the western bank of the Shat-ul-Arab, about 70 miles from the mouth of that stream, which is navigable either by vessels of 500 tons burden. The walls, which are washed by the river, are at least 7 miles in circuit, from 20 to 24 feet thick, and mounted with a great number of cannon. They are entered by five gates, and surrounded by a broad and deep ditch, which is filled from the river. The city is indifferently built; the streets are irregular, and notwithstanding the advantage of numerous canals which intersect the streets, they are kept in a very filthy state. The English factory is esteemed the finest building in the city; the other public buildings are not particularly handsome. Bassora is inhabited by a great variety of nations, such as Arabs, Turks, Persians, Armenians, and some Europeans, who reside in the factories belonging to their respective countries. Its commerce is extensive. From the various ports of Hindostan, Bassora receives silk, muslin, linen, white and blue cloth, for the clothing of the Arabians, gold and silver stuffs, various metals, sandal wood, and indigo; pearls from Bahrein, and coffee from Mocha; shawls, fruit, and the precious metals, from Persia; spices from Java; and European commodities from different ports. The latter are scarce and dear, and a decided preference is given to articles of English manufacture, especially broad cloth and watches. The trade with the interior is conducted by means of caravans to Aleppo and Bagdad, whence the goods are conveyed to Constantinople. The situation of the place is unhealthy, occasioned by the inundations of the river; and the peasants are also greatly harassed by tribes of predatory Arabs. Bassora was founded in the year 656. It was taken by the Turks in 1668; by the Persians in 1777, and evacuated in 1778, when the Turks again took possession of the place. They were expelled by the Arabs in 1787, but afterwards recaptured the city. Though it has fallen from its ancient celebrity, Bassora still contains between 50,000 and 60,000 inhabitants. 210 miles S. Isfahan. Long. 44. 46. E. Lat. 30. 32. N.

BASTIA, a town of France, on the island of Corsica, situated on a hill, in the form of an amphitheatre. It is ill built, and has narrow streets, but is defended by a strong citadel, and has a safe harbour. It trades in skins, wine, pulse, oil, and figs, in all of which the surrounding country is very productive. The aticcio made here are much valued by the Italians. It was annexed to France in 1768, and, with the exception of a short period after its capture by the English in 1794, has remained ever since in the hands of that power. Pop. 11,500. 53 miles E. N. E. Calvi.

BASTIJS, LA, a town of France, in Quercy, with 1800 inhabitants.

BASTIJS DE CLERANCE, LA, a town of France, department of the Lower Pyrenees. Pop. 2000. 6 miles E. S. E. Bayonne.

BASTIJS DE SÈVRES, LA, a town of France, department of the Arrige. Pop. 1700.—The name of other small towns in France.

BATAVIA, a city and seaport on the north coast of the island of Java, the capital of the Dutch East India. Batavia, when it was first founded in 1619, was situated at the mouth of the petty river which takes its name from the territory through which it flows. Along the banks of this river, and of another still smaller (both being navigable for boats of inconsiderable size), which joins it from the west, the principal population of the town is situated, divided into quarters of mean appearance for the native part, and into more regular streets for the European part. The most respectable part of the European inhabitants have, however, of late years, been driven southwards, and now occupy Molenvliet and Ryswijk, two handsome streets in the suburbs, from a mile to two miles distant from the stadt-house, in the centre of the old town. The following are the principal public edifices of Batavia: the stadt-house, a Calvinist church, a Lutheran church, a Portuguese one, some Mahometan mosques, entirely destitute of beauty and elegance; and some Chinese temples. Batavia is noted for its unhealthy climate, which gives rise to a fever, chiefly of the intermittent kind. This fever is brought on by the miasmata generated in the putrid mud banks and stagnant canals which are within two miles of the shore, and is strictly confined to that limit. The population, consisting of Europeans, descendants of Europeans, Arab natives of Hindostan, Malays, Javanese, natives of Celebes, Balinese, Sumbavas, natives of the Moluccas, natives of Timor and Butan, Chinese and their descendants, and slaves, amounts to 47,217. The town of Batavia, captured by the British in 1811, was restored in 1816. Long. 106. 51. E. Lat. 6. 10. S.

BATAVIA, a post township of the United States, and capital of Genesee county, New York. The village is a busy, thriving place, with two churches, for Presbyterians and Episcopalians; a court-house, a state prison, and about 60 dwelling-houses. Pop. 3646.

BATCALE, a seaport of Hindostan, coast of Malabar, 20 miles N. Barcelora.

BATE, or BHATTA LEE, a barren island in Hindostan, at the south-west extremity of the gulf of Cutch, with a good harbour, and a fort. Houses 8000. Long. 68. 21. E. Lat. 22. 22. N.

BATH, a city of England, in Somersetshire, bounded on the N. W. and E. sides by hills of considerable elevation, and intersected by the river Avon, rendered navigable to Bristol in 1757. Bath had long been considered one of the most elegant cities of Europe. The streets and houses are of very superior construction. The Queen's square, Circus, Crescents, and Paradees, are particularly admired, and have the advantage of being built with a fine freestone. This city has been long celebrated for its medicinal waters, as well as for its various sources of amusement, both for valetudinarians and the votaries of pleasure. Bath contains six churches, eight chapels, and also convenient places of worship for the Methodists, Independents, Baptists, Moravians, Roman Catholics, Unitarians, and Quakers. The cathedral, begun in 1496, is the last and purest specimen of ecclesiastical Gothic architecture in England, and is much admired for its magnificence. The beneficent institutions are numerous. Of these, the chief are the general hospital, first opened in 1742, for the reception of the sick poor from every part of the kingdom; the City Dispensary, the Casualty, St John's, St Catherine and Millicent hospitals, the Eye Infirmary, and the Ewerlup Charity. In addition to these claims on its support, this city may justly boast of many schools for the education of poor children, and various associations and societies for the promotion of industry, and the furtherance of religion. The hot springs, to which Bath principally owes its celebrity, were in use among the Romans, who fully appreciated their valuable properties. There are five public baths, four of which are the property, and under the direction, of the corporation. The temperature of the different springs vary from 93 to 117 degrees of Fahrenheit. Bath is of great antiquity: it was known to the Romans under the appellation of Aquæ Salis—Fontes Calidi. In the 10th century, it is said to have been principally maintained by the fabrication of woollen cloths; and in succeeding years, when the country was restored to peace and tranquillity, and rights and privileges were granted by Elizabeth, great attention was paid to its enlargement and embellishment. In 1760, assembly-rooms, on a considerable scale, were built, but greatly surpassed both in size and acceptance by a new edifice of the same description in 1771. The present theatre is suited to the increase of population and visitors; it was first opened in 1805. Population 36,811. 107 miles W. London, 12 E. S. E. Bristol. Long. 2. 27. 30. W. Lat. 51. 22. 32. N.

BATH, a town of the United States, in the state of New York, on the Conhocton. Houses 50. 200 miles N. Philadelphia.

BATH, a port town and port of entry of the United States, in Lincoln county, Maine, on the Kennebeck. Population 2491. 153 miles N. E. Boston.

BATH, a post town of the United States, in Graham county, New Hampshire, on Connecticut river. Population 545.

BATH, a village of the United States, in Rensselaer county, New York, on the Hudson.

BATH, a county of the United States, in Virginia, on the Jackson. It has two hot springs, which are resorted to for rheumatism. Population 4637. 227 miles from Washington. It is in the name of several other townships in the United States.

BATH, a village of Jamaica, noted for a medicinal spring in its vicinity.

BATH-EASTON, a town and parish of England, in Somersetshire.

BATHGART, a town and parish of Scotland, in the county of Linlithgow. Population 3383. 18 miles W. Edinburgh.

BATHURST, a flourishing British settlement in West Africa, formed within a few years, on the island of St Mary's, at the mouth of the Gambia, between 13. and 14. N. lat. for the purpose of trade. Population in 1810, 1890, besides the garrison. The duties on wax, ivory, gum, gold, and hides, exported to Great Britain, amounted to L. 11,000 sterling.

BATISCAN, a tributary of the St Lawrence, in Lower Canada.

BATLEY, a town of England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 3717.

BATORISZA, a considerable town of Moldavia, in the intendancy of Durango.

BATTALAN, a town of Hindostan, province of Lahor. Long. 75. 3. E. Lat. 31. 34. N.

BATTECOLLAH, an open town of Hindostan, on the coast of North Canara. It consists of 500 houses.

BATTLE, or BATTLE, a market town and parish of England, in the county of Sussex, noted for a manufacture of gunpowder, which goes by its name. Population 2852. 6 miles N. Hastings.

BATZESSE, a village and parish of England, in the county of Surrey, on the Thames, across which is a bridge to Chelsea in Middlesex. Population 4052. 4 miles W. London.

BATTLEBRIDGE, or STANDFORDBRIDGE, a village of England, East Riding of Yorkshire, on the Derwent, 10 miles N. E. York.

BAVARIA, THE CIRCLE OF, formed one of the great divisions of Germany, according to the former constitution of the empire, and was bounded E. by Austria, W. by Swabia, N. by Franconia and Bohemia, and S. by Tyrol. It comprised 16,588 square miles, with 1,300,000 inhabitants.

BAVARIA, formerly a duchy, now a kingdom, one of the most considerable of the secondary states of Europe. It is bounded E. and S. by the Austrian dominions, W. by Wirtemberg and Baden, and N. by several small German states. It is divided into the eight following circles:

Circles.	Chief Towns.
The Isar,	Munich.
The Lower Danube,	Pasau.
The Regnitz,	Ratisbon.
The Upper Danube,	Augsburg.
The Rezat,	Anspach.
The Upper Main,	Bayreuth.
The Lower Main,	Wurtsburg.
The Rhine,	Speyer.

Bavaria contains at present 32,000 square miles, and 3,060,000 inhabitants. It has risen gradually to its present rank among the nations of Europe. In 1601 it contained only 22,000 square miles, and 2,302,000 inhabitants; but during the prosperity of Bonaparte, Bavaria generally sided with France in her wars with other European powers; and was paid for her attachment by extensive territorial aggrandizements made chiefly at the expense of Austria. In 1813, after the defeat of Bonaparte, the king changed his line of policy, and concluded a secret treaty with the allied powers, in which he engaged to furnish a certain number of troops in support of the common cause, and received in return a pledge that the integrity of his territories should be respected. On the side of the Tyrol, the country is rugged and mountainous; the rest of it is a fine level as far as the Danube; to the north of which another chain of lofty granite mountains separates Bavaria from Bohemia. The southern, or upper province, is full of lakes, forests, and tracks of sand; so that the extent of arable land is here comparatively small. The most fertile tracts are to the east of Munich. Lower Bavaria, on the other hand, is abundantly productive in wheat, rye, oats, barley, hops, flax, and fruit. Cattle are bred, particularly swine, which are exported in great numbers to Bohemia and other parts of Germany. The principal wild animals which exist in the mountains are artics, beavers, lynxes, bears, and wolves. Fish abound in most of the rivers and lakes. There is only one iron mine in the whole duchy. The other minerals are salt, vitriol, lime, marble, gypsum, mill-stone, pot-ash, and various kinds of argillaceous earth. The manufactures consist chiefly of coarse woollen and cotton cloths, dye-stuffs, playing cards, glass, earthenware, hardware, paper, &c.; but they are confined to Munich and one or two other towns. Friedburg is noted for its clocks and watches, and Nymphenburg for its porcelain. In Munich are made very accurate philosophical instruments; and it is here that lithography, or the art of engraving on stone, was first discovered, and has been most successfully cultivated. At Hohen-Aschau, where is the great iron mine, are a number of forges and foundries, the produce of which, with grain, wine, vitriol, salt, and wood, form the chief articles of export.

The form of government in Bavaria is an unlimited monarchy. The succession to the crown is hereditary in the male line, but when it is extinct in all its branches, the supreme power may be vested in a female. The principal sources of revenue, exclusive of the direct taxes, are the excise, customs, tolls, royal domains, forests, and sporting grounds, the salt-works, mines, post-office, letters, stamp-duties, and the tax paid by public functionaries on being admitted into office. The total revenue has not been ascertained with accuracy, but is estimated at about £2,600,000 sterling. Bavaria has long been burdened with a public debt, which was not a little increased by the assumption of the debts of her newly acquired dominions, by the heavy expense of her war establishment, and the repeated marches of hostile armies through her territory. The military establishment of Bavaria, including the staff, amounts to between 40,000 and 50,000.

The prevailing religion in Bavaria is the Roman Catholic, one-fifth only of the inhabitants being Protestants. The Protestants not only enjoy the unrestrained exercise of their worship, but are eligible to civil and military offices.

BAVAR, a small but old town in Eruch Hainault, department of the North. It has manufactures of woollen stuffs, stockings, and iron plate. Population 1500. 4 miles N. E. Quency.

BAFCHIVILLE, a village of Lower Canada, on the St Lawrence, 10 miles N. W. Montreal.

BAUD, a town of France, department of Morbihan. Population 6200.

BAUERWITZ, a town of Silesia, principality of Sagan. Population 1400.

BARGE, a town of France, department of the Maine and Loire. It trades in cattle, wood, hats, serge, stamens, and combs. Population 3000. 20 miles E. by N. Angers.

BAUGES, a town of France, department of the Ain, with 250 houses.

BAUGAN, a considerable trading town of Bengal, on the Duumooda. Long. 86. E. Lat. 22. 30. N.

BAIKUN, a large town of Bengal, to the north-east of the Ganges.

BAISSE, a town of France, in the department of the Loire, on the Loire. Houses 440.

BAIME LES NOIES, BAIME LES DAMES, or BAIME LES MOINES, a town of France, department of the Doubs. It contains 300 houses. Pop. 2300. 16 miles N. E. Besancon.

BAUMGARTEN, a village of Silesia, circle of Ralckheim. Population 1200.

BAUSKE, a small town and village of European Russia, in Courland, 18 miles S. Mittau.

BAUSSET, a town of France, department of the Var. Population 3000. 18 miles E. S. E. Marseilles.

BAUTZEN, a town of Saxony, on the river Spree, with a strong castle. The town-hall, the academy, the orphan-house, and house of correction, are all worthy of attention, as well as the ingenious water machines, and the public walks. There are considerable manufactures of cloth, and the knitting of worsted stockings is carried on with no less spirit. There are, moreover, manufactures of linen, fustian, leather, and paper. Near this place was fought, in June 1813, a bloody battle between the French and the allies, in which the latter were worsted. 30 miles E. N. E. Dresden.

BAUX, a town of France, department of the Mouths of the Rhone, with a castle on a steep rock. Population 3500.

BAWDSLEY, a town and parish of England, in Suffolk. Population 414.

BAWLEY, a town of England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire. It exports mill-stones from Thrybergh, and lead and iron manufactures from Sheffield. Population 1627. 9 miles S. E. Doncaster.

BAZACHON, a town of the province of Buenos

AYRES, on the Paraná, near Santa Fe. Long. 60. 44. W. Lat. 31. 44. N.

BAY or ISLAND, the name of several bays, in the straits of Magellan; on the W. coast of King George III.'s archipelago; on the W. coast of Newfoundland; and on the N.E. coast of New Holland. Lat. 70. 31. S.

BAY or ISLAND, a bay on the E. coast of New Zealand. Long. 185. 30. W. Lat. 33. 14. S.

BAYAMO, a town of the island of Cuba. Long. 76. 56. W. Lat. 20. 48. N.

BAYAZID, a city of Turkish Armenia, in the pachalik of Erzerum, surrounded by a wall and ramparts. It contains two churches, three mosques, and a monastery, celebrated for its beautiful architecture, its grandeur, and antiquity. Population 30,000. 140 miles E. Erzerum. Long. 43. 46. E. Lat. 39. 24. N.

BAYENSBURG, a village of Württemberg, district of the Black Forest. Population 2250.

BAYENSBURG, a town of Bavaria, 12 miles N. Nuremberg. Population 1150.

BAYEUX, a town of France, in Lower Normandy, on the river Aure, department of Calvados. It has a magnificent cathedral, with three towers, besides churches, convents, and a castle. The inhabitants trade in corn, hemp, cattle, woollen stuffs, stockings, lace, and leather. Population 10,000. 145 miles W. N. W. Paris.

BAYKUL, a town of Hindostan, province of Canara, 25 miles S. Mangalore.

BAYLA, or BEILA, a town of Persia, in the province of Mekran, on the river Poorah. It consists of above 2000 houses, built of mud, on a frame of wood, of which 250 or 300 are inhabited by Hindoos. The streets are narrow; but they are always dry, owing to the elevated rocky situation of the town; and the bazar is kept very neat and clean. 203 miles N. Kelat. Long. 66. 40. E. Lat. 23. 16. N.

BAYONNA, a town of Spain, in Galicia, on a bay of the Atlantic, 2 miles S. W. Vigo.

BAYONNE, a well built, opulent, and commercial town of France, in Gascony, department of the Lower Pyrenees, situated at the confluence of the Nive and Adour. These rivers here form a commodious harbour, two miles from the Bay of Biscay, and divide the town into three parts. A citadel, constructed by Vauban on the top of an embankment in the suburb, commands both the harbour and the town, which are farther defended by small redoubts. The cathedral is a venerable structure; the quay is a superb and much frequented promenade; but the most beautiful part of the city is the Place de Grammont. A wooden drawbridge, which allows vessels to pass, and where a small toll is levied, connects the suburbs with the town. A considerable commerce is carried on at Bayonne with Spain, French and foreign goods being given in exchange for wool, iron, brass, gold, and silver. The principal objects of the maritime trade are the cod and whale fishery. The names of Bayonne have long been famous, and its wines and chocolate are exported in great quantities to the north of Europe.

The military weapon called the bayonet, takes its name from this city, where it was invented in the 17th century. 310 miles S. N. W. Paris. Long. 1. 24. W. Lat. 43. 20. N.

BAYONNE, a river of Lower Canada, which falls into the St. Lawrence, nearly opposite to the mouth of Richelieu river.

BAYEUX, a town of Germany, in Franconia, chief town of the principality of the same name. It is a fine town, with broad and regular streets, and six gates. The most remarkable buildings are the old castle, destroyed by fire in 1733, but since rebuilt; the elegant new castle, the manège or riding-house, the barracks, the mint, the Lutheran parish church, the Calvinist church, the Catholic chapel, the hospital church, the Gymnasium Literar. founded in 1664, and the orphan-house, which is on an excellent plan. Here are manufactures of cloth, pottery, ware, and tobacco pipes. 164 miles N. Ratisbon.

BAYS, a town of France, department of the Mayenne. Population 2100.

BAZA, a town of Spain, in Granada. In it are three parish churches, and six convents. The trade in hemp is very considerable. 20 miles N. E. Guadix.

BAZAR, a town of France, department of the Gironde, 30 miles S. E. Bordeaux. Long. 0. 7. E. Lat. 44. 20. N.

BAZEUGES, a town of France, department of the Upper Garonne, with 300 houses. 12 miles S. E. Toulouse.

BAZOUCHES LES CALLEHANS, a town of France, department of the Loiret. Pop. 1650.

BAZOUGES, two towns of France, departments of the Mayenne and Sarthe, the one with 400, and the other with 270 houses.

BEACRY HEAD, a noted promontory of England, on the coast of Sussex, 27 miles W. S. W. Dungeness. Long. 4. 15. E. Lat. 50. 44. N.

BEACONSFIELD, a market town and parish of England, county of Buckingham. It consists of four streets arranged as a cross. Pop. 1736. 23 miles W. N. W. London.

BEACLI, a town and fortress of Hindostan, in South Canara. Houses 100. Long. 75. 0. E. Lat. 12. 22. N.

BEALK, a river of Ireland, which runs into the Shannon. Another joins the Medway.

BEANLEET, a village of England, in Essex.

BEAMINGTUN, a town of England, county of Dorset. "The tower of the church is nearly 100 feet high; sail-cloth, also iron and copper goods, are manufactured here; and the town has a weekly market. It has frequently suffered from fire. Population 2000. 12 miles W. N. W. Dorchester.

BEAMISH, a township of England, in the county of Durham. Population 1643.

BEANE, or BEVERICIAN, a river of England, which joins the Lea, between Hertsford and Ware.

BEAR CREEK, a river of Kentucky, which runs into Green river. Another falls into the Tennessee.

BEAR ISLAND, an island in Bantry bay, on the S. W. coast of Ireland, 6 miles long, by 1½ broad.

BEAR LAKE, GREAT, a lake in the N. W. part of North America, near the Arctic circle.

BEAT, St., a town of France, department of the Upper Garonne. Population 1000.

BEAUCAIRE, a well built trading town of France, on the right bank of the Rhone, department of the Gards, chiefly remarkable for the great annual fair held on 22d July, (St. Magdalen's day), and the five following days. It has a trade in silk, wine, oil, diamonds, spices, drugs, leather, wool, cotton, &c. Population 5000. 12 miles E. Nismes.

BEAVER, a county of the United States, in Pennsylvania, on the Alleghany river. Chief town Beavertown. Population 12,168. The name also of several townships.

BEAVER CREEK, a river of the United States, in New York, which runs 35 miles N. E. and falls into Popacton river, a branch of the Delaware.

BEAVER-DAM, a creek of the United States, in Georgia, which runs S. E. and falls into Brink Creek, a mile below Jacksonborough.

BEAVER ISLANDS, a chain of islands in Lake Michigan, 40 miles S. W. Mackinaw.

BEAVERTOWN, a post township of the United States, and capital of Beaver county, Pennsylvania, at the junction of Highbeaver river with the Ohio, 30 miles below Pittsburgh. Population 426.

BEAUFORT, a town of Savoy, 30 miles E. N. E. Chambery. Population 3000.

BEAUFORT, a county of the United States, in North Carolina. Population 7308. Slaves, 2608. Chief town, Washington.

BEAUFORT, a district of the United States, in South Carolina, on the sea-coast, between Savannah and Combarce rivers. Chief towns, Beaufort and Coosawatchie. Population 25,807. Slaves 20,074.

BEAUFORT, a seaport and post township of the United States, in Beaufort district, South Carolina, on Port Royal island, at the mouth of the Coosawatchie, 73 miles S. Charleston, 60 N. Savannah. Population 1000. Shipping in 1815, 1837 tons. Its harbour is deep and large, and was once a station of the British fleet. Here is a chartered college, with funds of 60,000 or 70,000 dollars.

BEAUFORT, a seaport of the United States, and capital of Carteret county, North Carolina, on Core sound. Population about 500. 27 miles from Cape Lookout. Lat. 34° 42' N.

BEAUFORT-MONMORENCY, a small town of France, department of the Aube, with 180 houses.

BEAUFORT-EN-VALE, a town of France, department of the Maine and Loire. It carries on an active trade in grain, wine, and hemp, with manufactures of linen and woollen stuffs and lace. Population 5000.

BEAUFORT, a town of France, department of the Loiret, on the Loire, over which there is a stone bridge. It trades in wine and brandy. 13 miles S. W. Orleans.

BEAUGEN, a town of France, department of the Rhone. Population 1600. 27 miles N. N. W. Lyons.

BEAULEY, a village of Scotland, county of Inverness. 10 miles W. Inverness.

BEAULEY, a river of Scotland, county of Inverness, which flows into the Murray faith.

BEAULIEU, a river of England, in Hampshire, which flows into the English channel.

BEAULIEU, a town of France, department of the Corrèze, with 1000 inhabitants—also a town of France, department of the Indre and Loire. Population 1800—3d, A town of France, department of the Loiret, with 300 houses.

BEAUMARCHAIS, a town of France, department of the Gers.

BEAUMARIS, a seaport town and borough of the island of Anglesey, on a spacious bay. Here is a handsome church, with a lofty square tower; and an elegant town-hall, a custom-house, and a free school. Beaumaris sends one representative to parliament. Population 2205. 28 miles E. S. E. Holyhead.

BEAUMONT, a town of the Netherlands, in Hainault, with 1400 inhabitants—Also a town of France, department of the Vienne, with 810 houses—3d, A town of France, in Perigord. Pop. 1500—It is the name of various other small towns and villages in France.

BEAUMONT DE LOMAGNE, a town of France, 28 miles N. W. Toulouse. Population 3700. Here are manufactures of coarse cloth, hats, and leather.

BEAUMONT SUR OISE, a town of France, 20 miles N. Paris. Population 2150.

BEAUMONT LE ROGER, a town of France, in Normandy, department of Eure. Population 1400.

BEAUMONT LE VICOMTE, a town of France, department of the Sarthe. Population 2400.

BEAUNE, a town of France, department of the Cote d'Or. It is tolerably well fortified, and has a castle, with five suburbs, and an hospital. It is celebrated for its wines, 20 miles S. S. W. Dijon.

BEAUNE, a town of France, department of the Loiret. Population 2000.

BEAUREPAU, a town of France, department of the Maine and Loire. Pop. 1600.

BEAUVILLE, a river of Lower Canada, which falls into the Chaudiere.

BEAUVREUIL, a town of France, department of the Var. Pop. 2000. 7 miles N. W. Toulon.

BEAUVREUIL, a well built commercial town of France, department of the Oise. It carries flourishing manufactures of linen and woollen cloth, particularly calicoes, and silks, along with a fine tapestry, with on the model of those in Flanders. Other, moreover, several manufactures, and considerable trade. Before the revolution it was the see of a bishop (who had under his inspection 600 parishes), a governor, and several royal offices. The cathedral of Beauvais is much admired. There are here also three abbey churches, six colleges, and three parochial churches. Population 12,500. 20 miles S. Amiens. Long. 2. 19. E. Lat. 49. 25. N.

BEAUVILLE, a town of France, department of the Lot and Garonne. Population 1868.

BEAUVORN sive Mex, a town of France, department of the Vendée. Pop. 1868.

BECAVOORA, a considerable river of Lower Canada, which joins the St. Lawrence.

BECHTES, a market town and parish of England, in the county of Suffolk, on the river Waveney. It has an elegant Gothic church, a town-hall, and a jail. Pop. 2492. 15 miles S. W. Yarmouth.

BECHAN, a tributary of the Severn, in North Wales.

BECHIN, a town of Bohemia. Houses 300. 50 miles S. Prague.

BECKEN, a town of the Prussian states, 17 miles S. E. Münster. Pop. 1460.

BECKINGTON, a town and parish of England, in Somersetshire. Population 1645. 2 miles S. E. Frome.

BECHAKHAN. See Bahukahan.

BECHALE, a market town of England, in the county of York, on a rivulet which runs into the Swale near Gatesley. The church is a large structure, and contains some ancient monuments. Population 1127. 6 miles from Northallerton.

BECHAMUNGHUR, a town of Hindoostan, in the Mysore. Long. 78. 24. E. Lat. 12. 58. N.

BECHARDISE, a town of France, 5 miles N. Avignon. Population 1700.

BECHARTREUX, a town of France, department of the Moravik. It has manufactures of drugget and other woollen stuffs. Population 3540. 33 miles W. Montpellier.

BECHUNG, a town of the Prussian states, 20 miles N. E. Aix-la-Chapelle. Population 1400.

Bedford, an inland county of England, bounded on the N. and N. W. by Northamptonshire, on the E. by the counties of Huntingdon, Cambridge, and Hertford, and on the W. by the counties of Buckingham and Northampton. It is about 36 miles by 22 in extreme length and breadth, 145 miles in circuit, and its superficial area containing about 450 square miles. The surface is in general diversified with low hills and valleys, together with some extensive level tracts; and on the south a ridge of chalk hills rises to a considerable elevation. The western and eastern parts of the county are in many parts sandy; the centre is flat, and three-fourths of the whole is judged to be alluvial soil. Limestone, coarse marble, and imperfect coal, are obtained here; and a variety of petrifications, particularly the ostræa ammonis, and different shells, as also petrified wood. Mineral waters exist in different parts. The principal rivers are the Ouse, Ivel, Lea, and Great Ouse. The manufactures of the county are confined almost exclusively to the plucking of straw and making thread-lace, in which nearly three-fourths of the female population are employed, as few stone antiquities are occasionally discovered in the county. The remains of both Saxon and Gothic architecture are to be seen in several of the churches, as also a few specimens of stained glass in their windows. Bedfordshire sends two representatives to parliament. Population 83,718.

Bedford, a town of England, capital of the above county, situated on both sides of the river Ouse, which is here crossed by a handsome stone bridge, erected in 1815, on the site of a very ancient bridge. It contains five churches. The first, St. Paul's, is a very handsome Gothic edifice. There are, besides, three independent meeting-houses. The Methodists have a chapel here, and the Moravians have also had an establishment since 1745. A free grammar school was founded, and liberally endowed, by Sir William Harpur, a native of Bedford, who had been lord mayor of London, in the 16th century. There is a house of industry, erected in 1709, a also a county asylum for the reception county infirmaries, which was built in 1801; of lunatics, built in 1812. The amusements and seasons for the county are held in the shire-hall, an edifice constructed in 1753. Bedford is a borough and corporation by prescription; its earliest charter on record is in 1190, and it has sent two members to parliament since the year 1295. The right of election is vested in about 1400 voters. The principal manufacture of this town is lace; and there is a considerable trade in corn; as also in coals, timber, and iron, which are brought by the river from Lynn and Yarmouth. There are two markets weekly, and six annual fairs, besides the wool fair established by the agricultural society of the county. Bedford is an ancient place; it is supposed to be the Medicauford of the Saxon Chronicle. It had a castle, whereof the ruins are still perceptible, which stood a siege by king Stephen in the year 1137, and was taken by Henry III. about the year 1224. Pop. 6566. 22 miles S. E. Northampton.

Bedford, a township of England, county of Lancaster. Population 2320.

Bedford Level, an extensive tract of land in England, in the counties of Norfolk, Suffolk, Huntingdon, Northampton, Lincoln, Cambridgeshire, and the Isle of Ely, consisting of about 300,000 acres, a large portion of it being marshy ground. About 100,000 acres of this tract are now reclaimed and converted to use.

Bedford, a post township of the United States, in Westchester county, New York, 40 miles N. by E. New York. Pop. 2374.

Bedford, a county of the United States, in Pennsylvania, bordering on Maryland. Pop. 15,746. Chief town, Bedford.

Bedford, a post township of the United States, and capital of Bedford county, Pennsylvania. It is regularly laid out on a branch of the Juniata. Population 1342. 200 miles W. Philadelphia.

Bedford, a county of the United States, in Virginia, on the south side of James river. Chief town, Liberty. Population 10,110. Slaves 9167.

Bedford, a county of the United States, in West Tennessee, on Duck river. Pop. 3282. Places 1130. Chief town, Shelbyville.

BEAFORD CAPE, a cape at the north-east extremity of New Holland. Long. 214. 45. W. Lat. 15. 16. S.

BEASIAS, a town of Mingrelia, 80 miles E. Japan.

BEASIS DU GOMERA. See Gomera.

BEAUMONTE, a township of the United States, in New Jersey. Population 1312.

BEAUMONT, a town of Hindostan, the capital of the district of Bednore, and formerly the capital of Canara. It is a place of considerable size, and at the time of the sultan Tippon's death, consisted of 1600 houses, besides huts. It is said to have been once a splendid and magnificent city, containing 20,000 houses, fortified by natural and artificial defences, but has been greatly reduced in the course of its successive captures by Hyder Aly, the British, and lastly, by Tippon. 187 miles N. W. Seringapatam, and 330 N. N. E. Bombay. Long. 75. 6. E. Lat. 13. 45. N.

BEAUMONT, a tribe of wandering Arabs, who inhabit the desert, and are of predatory habits, plundering and murdering, without pity, the defenceless traveller.

BEAUMONT, a village of Arabia, province of Medina, between Mecca and Medina.

BEAUMONT, a town of England, county of Wilts. It sends two representatives to parliament. Pop. 1828. 70 miles W. London.

BEAUMONT, a village of Hindostan. Houses 150. Long. 74. 43. E. Lat. 13. 40. N.

BEAUMONT, a town and parish of England, county of Warwick. Population 3513.

BEER, BAERICK, BIR, or HIRADICHIK, a town of Asiatic Turkey, on the left bank of the Euphrates. Here is a bridge of boats, by which caravans from Aleppo to Orfa generally cross the river, for which privilege a postage is paid at the town; houses 500, mostly in a decaying state, and protected by a dilapidated wall. 144 miles N. E. Aleppo. Long. 38. 6. E. Lat. 36. 48. N.

BEER, or BEER REGIA, a market town and parish of England, in the county of Dorset. Population 1069. 111 miles W. London.

BEERFELDEN, a village in Frisian county of Eibach. 200 houses were consumed by fire in 1000.

BEERINGS ISLAND, an uninhabited island in the North Pacific ocean, which is classed with the Aleutian chain by some geographers, and by others excluded from it. The island is 104 miles in length, by 15 in breadth, and is mountainous and sterile. 153 miles N. E. of the harbour of St. Peter and St. Paul, in Kamtschatka. Long. 167. E. Lat. 55. N.

BEERINGS STRAIT, the narrow sea between the west coast of North America and the east coast of Asia, so called from captain Beer, who, with Behrskow, sailed from Kamtschatka in quest of the New World. These straits vary in breadth from 13 leagues, their width at their nearest approach to Lat. 66, to 100 leagues aunder. The depth of water in the mid-way between them is 20 and 30 fathoms, decreasing gradually as either continent is approached.

BEERSTRA, a village of the Netherlands, in Dutch Guiana. Population 1600.

BEERSTRA, a cape of England, forming the western extremity of the county of Cumberland, in the Irish sea. 4 miles S. W. Whitehaven.

BEERSTRA, a town in the Prussian states. Population 1800. 45 miles E. S. E. Berlin.

BEERSTRA, a town of France, department of the Upper Rhine, on the small river Hall. It carries on an extensive trade in Burgundy and Champagne wines, as well as in iron and other commodities. 70 miles S. W. Strasbourg. Long. 6. 57. E. Lat. 47. 33. N.

BEERSTRA, a town of France, department of the Cotes du Nord. Population 2400.

BEERSTRA, a rich and valuable province of Abyssinia, to the east of Dembea. It is 180 miles in length, and 60 in breadth.

BEERSTRA, an extensive country, though very little known, in the eastern part of Central Africa.

BEERSTRA, a village of France, on the Garonne. Houses 430. 11 mile from Bourdeaux.

BEERSTRA, a town of Persia, province of Fars. The walls are about 2 miles in circuit. Population 10,000. 165 miles from Shiraz.

BEERSTRA, a town of Portugal, province of Alentejo. It is a town of some antiquity. Population 6008. 72 miles S. S. E. Lisbon.

BEERSTRA, or BEERSTRA, a town of Upper Egypt, 24 miles E. N. E. Beniuef.

BEERSTRA, a town of Hindostan, in Orissa, 60 miles N. W. Visnagapatna.

BEERSTRA, a town of Hindostan, on the Conjee river. Long. 86. 35. E. Lat. 36. 35. N.

BEERSTRA, or VISNAGPATNA, a province of Hindostan, bounded on the N. and E. by the provinces of Aurungabad and Bader, on the S. by North Canara and the river Toombudra, and on the W. by the sea. It extends about 350 miles in length, by about 200 in breadth. Its chief rivers are the Toombudra, Krishna, Beemah, and Gutputha. The province is traversed by a great chain of mountains, a continuation of the western Ghats, 40 or 50 miles from the sea, which produces a sensible effect on the climate. Its population is calculated at 7,000,000, of which the Mahomedans constitute a twentieth part; the remainder are Hindus.

BEERSTRA, or VISNAGPATNA, a city of Hindostan, the capital of the above province, situated in a fertile plain. It consists of 9 towns within each other; the innermost is the citadel, a mile in circuit; the next is the fort, 6 miles in compass, environed by a wall. But a great proportion of the city included is covered with ruins, and no conjectures can be entertained with respect to the population. The fort is protected by high walls, strengthened by many towers, and is surrounded by a ditch. It has 7 gates, 4 of which are in use, and it contains several cannon of enormous dimensions. The citadel is a place of great strength. Several mosques and mauleums, adorned with all the embellishments of eastern architecture, are to be seen in Bejaour. Bejaour was besieged by Aurungzebe, and surrendered by capitulation in 1699. Long. 75. 42. E. Lat. 17. 9. N.

BEJAA, a fortified town in Spanish Estremadura, noted for its mineral springs.

BEJWEE, or BESHEZU, a town of Russia, in the government of Tver. It has an annual fair, at which are sold grain, iron, silk, and cotton stuffs. Population 3100. 48 miles N. N. E. Tver.

BEJWETZ, a small town of the Prussian states, in the grand duchy of the Lower Rhine, situated on the Moselle, 23 miles W. Coblenz. Long. 7. 8. E. Lat. 50. 0. N.—There is another town of the same name, 5 miles S. Dillenburgh.

BEILSTERN, a town of Wirtemberg, celebrated for its medicinal bath. Population 1250. 14 miles N. Stuttgart.—The name also of several other small towns.

BEINAC, a town of France. Pop. 1470.

BEIKHEIM, a town of France, in Alsace. Population 1650. 20 miles N. N. E. Strassburg.

BEIRA, a province of Portugal, bounded on the N. by the province of Trás-os-Montes and Entre Duero e Minho, on the E. by Spain, on the S. by Portuguese Estremadura and Alentejo, and on the W. by the Atlantic. Its area is commonly given out at 11,000 square miles, and the population in 1810 was 690,002.

BEIR EL FASSA, commonly called Bertlesack, a town of Arabia, situated on a barren sandy plain, without walls, but having a castle for its protection against the predatory Arabs, wherein the governor resides. It is celebrated for its trade in coffee. 24 miles E. S. E. of Lohia and Mideida. Long. 43. 23. E. Lat. 14. 32. N.—Beit is the name of various other small towns and villages in Arabia.

BERRA, a town and parish of Scotland, in the county of Ayr, and a small part in Renfrewshire. The manufactures of bleached and coloured thread is carried on here to a considerable extent; and most of the young women in the town are employed in tambouring and flowering muslin for the manufactures of Paisley and Glasgow. It has only one fair in the year. Population 4472. 8 miles N. Irvine.

BEKEE, or BEKEESH, a populous and thriving market town of Hungary, in the county of Bekesch, on the Black Kármén.

BEKIA, BECDYAT, or Boadto, a small island in the West Indies, among the Grenadines. Lat. 13. 2. N.

BEKIA, a large town of Hungary, in the county of Zips.

BEI-ALCAZAR, a town of Spain, in Andalusia. Pop. 2500. 35 miles N. N. W. Cordova.

BEILASPORT, a town of Hindustan, district of Raseel. Long. 70. 15. E. Lat. 21. 56. N.

BEILAWN, a small island in the Soloo archipelago. Long. 121. 57. E. Lat. 6. 5. N.

BEI SEU, a town of Egypt, near the Syrian frontier. In 1798, the fortifications were strengthened by Buonaparte. Population 5000. 25 miles N. E. Cairo.

BELEA, a river in Piedmont, which falls into the Tanaro, near Alexandria.

BELECASTRO, a small town of Naples, in Calabria Ultra, near the gulf of Squillace.

BELEA, or BELEA, a considerable town of Austrian Galicia, in the circle of Zollien, with a castle. 148 miles E. Cracow.

BELEM, a town of Portuguese Estremadura, on the Tagus. It contains, besides the royal palace, an hospital for decayed noblemen, and a rich monastery of Hieronymites. In the middle of the Tagus is a square tower also called Belem, which is considered the citadel of Lisbon; here vessels pay custom in ascending the river, and on the opposite side is the station for quarantine. 3 miles W. Lisbon.

BELEWEE, an old town of France, department of the Orne. Population 2710.

BELEFAST, a seaport town of Ireland, in the county of Antrim, situated at the efflux of the river Lagan into Carrickfergus bay, which forms a spacious estuary. An old bridge, about 2500 feet long, and consisting of 24 arches, crosses the river at the east end of the town, and another bridge, built in 1814, about half a mile up the river, on the south of the town, connects the counties of Antrim and Down. The town is well built, chiefly of brick, and the streets are broad, straight, well paved, and lighted. Its public edifices are two Episcopal churches, both very elegant, four Presbyterian dissenting meeting-houses, two chapels for the Roman Catholics, who are about 4000 in number, besides churches for other dissenters. There are various charitable institutions, a linen-hall, an exchange, over which is a good assembly-room; and barracks for 500 men. Belfast has considerable manufactures of linen and cottons. There are also manufactories of glass, vitriol, pottery, and several sugar refineries. The chief exports are linen, butter, beef, pork, and oatmeal. Considerable trade is carried on with the West Indies, America, and other parts of the world. Convenient docks have been constructed. There are several other commercial and literary institutions; and in 1810, one called the New College, a seminary on an extensive scale, was founded. Belfast is a royal borough, and sends one representative to the imperial parliament. The progress of Belfast in population and commerce has been remarkably rapid, and its population is computed at 34,000. 80 miles N. Dublin. Long. 6. 46. W. Lat. 54. 35. N.

BEI FAST, a seaport and port township of the United States, in Hancock county, Maine, on Penobscot bay, 9 miles from Castine, across the bay. It has a good harbour, and is a place of trade. Here is no academy. Population 1274.

BEI DON, a town of England, in the county of Northumberland, on the great road between London and Edinburgh. The church is a neat edifice, and was built in 1760. Population 1200. 12 miles N. Alnwick.

BELGARD, a town of the Prussian states, in Farther Pomerania. Population 1720. 28 miles N. W. New Stettin.

BELGERIE, a town of the Prussian states, in Saxony, on the Elbe, 36 miles N. W. Dresden. Population 1800.

BELGIOSOSO, an ancient town of the duchy of Milan, district of Pavia, 6 miles E. Pavia.

BELGIUM, the name given by the French, since the revolution, to what was before called the Austrian Netherlands, which they annexed to their empire in 1793.

BELGRADE, a village of European Turkey, in Rumania, 11 miles N. N. W. Pera.

BELGRADE, a famous town and fortress of European Turkey, in Servia, near the conflux of the Save and Danube. It consists of four parts. First, the Fortress, standing on a steep eminence in the centre of the whole, inclosed with high walls, and commanding the Danube. Second, the Water-side division, lying on the north side, not far from the junction of the two rivers. It is in like manner defended by walls and ditches, has a large market-place, and is the best built part of the town. Thirdly, the Russian town, in the direction of the Save, is inclosed with walls and palisades; and fourthly, the Palanka, which encircles the fortress on the south and east. The number of mosques in the town is 14. This important fortress was taken by Solyman, the Turkish emperor, in 1522; retaken by the Imperialists, under the elector of Bavaria, in 1683; and again lost in 1690. It surrendered to Prince Eugene in 1717, but was taken by the Turks in 1730. The imperialists retook it in the year 1780, but were forced to restore it at the peace of 1791. In the year 1800 it was taken by the Serbian insurgents, 150 miles S. S. E. Buda, 440 N. W. Constantinople. Long. 20. 10. E. Lat. 44. 43. N.

BELGRADE, a small town of Italy, in Lombardy, on the Tagliamento.

BELGRADE, a town of Hindostan, province of Oude. Long. 86. S. E. Lat. 27. 13. N.

BELGRADE, a town of the Prussian states, in Brandenburg. Population 1400. 28 miles S. W. Berlin.

BELLEG, a town of France, department of the Upper Vienna. Population 3900. 30 miles S. E. Poitiers.

BELLAGIO, a considerable village of Italy, in Milan, on the lake of Como.

BELLARIO, small town of Italy, in the duchy of Milan, on the lake of Como.

BELLAY, a town of Portugal, in Estremadura, 8 miles N. W. Lisbon. Pop. 1200.

BELLASPORE, a regular and well built town of Hindostan, province of Delhi, on the Sutledge. Long. 76. 21. E. Lat. 31. 33. N.

BELLEPERRE, a town of France, department of the Cote d'Or. Population 1720.

BELLEPERRE, a barrier fortress of France, on the side of Spain, department of the Eastern Pyrenees, on one of the Pyrenean mountains. Population 600. 15 miles S. Perpignan.—The name also of several other villages in France.

BELLE-ÎLE, or BELLEISLE EN MER, a small island of France, in the bay of Biscay, on the south coast of Brittany, lying between the mouth of the Vilaine and the gulf of Morbihan. It is about 15 miles long, and from 5 to 12 broad, and is so surrounded by sharp rocks, that there are only three landing places, and these by no means good. Population 5570. 1 mg. S. E. W. Lat. 47. 17. N.

BELLEISLE, an island at the mouth of the straits of this name, 21 miles in circuit, and 16 from the nearest land on the coast of Labrador. Long. 53. 15. W. Lat. 51. 53. N.

BELLE-ISLE, an island of North America, near the east coast of Newfoundland. Long. 55. 35. W. Lat. 50. 50. N.

BELLEVILLE, a village of France, 5 miles N. E. Paris. Population 2900.

BELLEVILLE SUR SAONE, a neat town of France, department of the Rhone. Pop. 2000.

BELLEVY, a town of France, in Burgundy, department of the Ain. Population 3000. 38 miles E. Lyons.

BELLINGHAM, a town in the circle of the Rhine, subject to Bavaria. Population 1500.

BELLINGHAM, a town of England, in Northumberland. Population 400.

BELLINZONA, a town of Switzerland, capital of Bellinzona district. It is built on two rocks, which form the main pass to St. Gothard, on the side of Italy. Population 1500.

BELLOVAN, a well built town of the Austrian empire, in Croatia, with 350 houses, 12 miles from the frontiers of Hungary.

BELLVICH, a town of Spain, in Catalonia, 70 miles W. N. W. Barcelona. Pop. 1200.

BELL ROCK, or LEISY CAPE, a dangerous rock on the east coast of Scotland, near the mouth of the river Tay, about 12 miles S. W. Aberbrothock, on which is a light-house, finished in 1811.

BELLUNGO, It., a mountainside district of Upper Italy, in Lombardy.

BELLUNGO, the capital of the firegoing district, stands on a hill between the Ardo and Pave. It has a large suburb called Compagna, 14 churches, 6 cloisters, and a large aqueduct, through which water is conveyed into the town across a brand valley. Population 7400. 43 miles N. Verney.

BELMONT, a town of France, department of the Seine. Population 1700.

BELMONT, a town of France, department of the Aveyron. Population 1500.

BELUCHISTAN, a country of Asia, situated on the north-west coast of the Indian peninsula. In its most comprehensive population, Beluchistan includes the whole space within Lat. 24. 53. and 30. 30. N., Long. 58. 55. and 67. 30. E., to which are also to be added, some districts beyond these boundaries. Thus it extends from Belush and the country of the Affghans on the N., to the Indian ocean, and from the provinces of Kavistan and Kerman on the W. to that of Sind on the E. It consists of five, or six, divisions: if Hindu, whose ruling chiefs and a great proportion of the inhabitants, who are Belooches, be included. 1. The provinces of the lawna and Baghel together with the district of Kelat. 2. The provinces of Baluch and Las. 3. Kohistan, or the Country of Hills, west of the former. 4. The district of the province of Dutch Cashmere, and the district of Hurruah Dehel. The superficial aspect of this extensive country is extremely diversified; and, of course, the climate in the higher parts is extremely cold, while the heat during the summer season is scarcely supportable in the plains. There is a general scarcity of water. A large proportion of the country is mountainous, and, independent of Kohistan, the eastern part is particularly of this description. Gold, silver, lead, iron, copper, and tin, are obtained in this country; also grey marble, rock salt, alum, natpêtre, and sulphur. Vegetables flourish abundantly; and the gardens in the vicinity of the towns produce the finest fruits. All sorts of grains are cultivated. In the northern districts, madder, cotton, and indigo, are produced, the latter of excellent quality. Assafetida, which is a favourite kind of food among the Belooches, grows among the hills. Trees of large size are seen, although Beloochistan does not seem generally to be a woody country. The domestic animals are horses, mules, asses, camels, dromedaries, buffaloes, black cattle, sheep, goats, dogs, and cats, besides fowls and pigeons. They have neither geese, turkeys, nor ducks. The wild animals are lions, tigers, leopards, hyenas, wolves, jackalls, tiger-cats, wild dogs, foxes, hares, mongooses, mountain goats, antelopes, elk, red and musk-deer, wild asses, &c. which inhabit the mountains, from whence they descend to commit depredations among the flocks. Of birds they have almost every species to be met with either in Europe or India. This country is occupied principally by two great classes of inhabitants, namely, the Belooches and Bruhoes, differing from each other in their outward appearance, as well as in their manners. These are divided into an infinite variety of tribes, which it is unnecessary to enumerate. In their domestic life, the Belooches are almost all pastoral; they usually reside in ghedons or tents, made of black felt or coarse blankets, stretched over a frame of wicker work; an assemblage of these constitutes a village, and the people a tribe or society. Though naturally indolent, they are fearless of danger, and in battle fight with great gallantry. They are a race of lawless robbers, however, and undertake distant excursions in quest of booty, or for the purpose of carrying off the inhabitants of other countries for slaves. All the Belooches are Mahometans of the Soopce faith, and entertain a great antipathy to other sects. Polygamy is common among them.

The chief town of Beloochistan is Kelat, consisting of about 3750 houses, where the khan or sovereign of the whole country resides. All the subordinate tribes are bound to pay him a certain tribute, and to assist him with a quota of troops, in the event of war. His revenues are moderate, not exceeding 1,00,000 pagodas, a great proportion of which is paid in produce. His power also has declined of late, in consequence of some of the tributary chiefs having declared themselves independent.

BALFORD, a market town of England, in Derbyshire. It has manufactures of various descriptions, particularly cotton. Population 7535. 8 miles from Derby.

BALTIC, GREAT and LITTLE, the name of two narrow straits, which connect the Baltic with the Cattegat. The former lies between the islands of Zealand and Funen, and varies in depth from five to twenty fathoms. The Little Belt separates the island of Funen from the coast of Jutland; and, at the fortress of Fredericia, where the tolls are levied, does not exceed a mile in width; so that the entrance from the Cattegat is completely commanded. In other parts of the strait, however, the water expands in width to an extent of 8 or 10 miles. The current from the Baltic to the Cattegat is of great strength.

BELTUNN, a village of the Netherlands, in Dutch Guelderland. Population 1300.

BELTUNNET, a town of Ireland, in the county of Cavan, on the Erne. Distilling and brewing are carried on, and a weekly market is held. 8 miles N. W. Cavan.

BELYKNEZ, a town of European Turkey, near the Morca, 65 miles W. Corinth.

BELLEVUE, a town of France, department of the Dordogne. Population 3000.

BRINZ, a town of Saxony, 20 miles E. Magdeburg. Population 1000.

BRINA, or BRINK, a fortified town of Piedmont, district of Mondovì, defended by a castle. Population 3000. 28 miles N. Turin.

BENANT, a town of France, on the Loire, with 310 houses. 9 miles E. N. E. Maumur.

BENARH, a large and valuable district of Hindustan, lying on both sides of the river Ganges, situated between the 24th and 27th degrees of northern latitude, containing 1200 square miles of fertile soil, which produces all kinds of grain, and a quantity of sugar, indigo, and opium.

BENARH, called also CASHY, the capital of the above district, and the most celebrated university of Hindoo learning, situated on the Ganges, Long. 83. E. Lat. 25. 30. N. It is about four miles long, by two broad, but the streets are narrow, and many of the houses, which are built of stone, five or six stories high; and, during the religious festivals, the concourse of people is immense. The bank of the river is entirely lined with stones, formed into flights of steps; and adorned by numerous temples, in the midst of which rises the superb mosque built by the Emperor Aurangzeb, in the 17th century. This city carries on a very extensive trade with all parts of India; and its bankers have been known to grant bills to the confines of Russia. It is the principal mart for the diamonds found in the mines of Bundelcund; and its manufactures of gold and silver lace, silks, and brocades, are carried to all parts of the east. The rajah's palace is at Ramnaghar, on the opposite side of the river, but some miles higher up the stream. There is also a very superb temple on the opposite side of the river, built by rajah Cheit Sing. Benares is the residence of the British court of circuit. 400 miles from Calcutta. Population 600,000.

BENAVARRE, or BENABARIS, a town of Spain, in Arragon. Population 2000.

BENAVENTE, a town of Spain, in Leon, on the Exla. Population 3000. 20 miles N. Zamora, 36 S. Leon.

BENBOWIA, an island of the Hebrides, between the islands of North and South Uist.

BENBURY, a village of Ireland, in the county of Tyrone.

BENCOOLEN, the name of the only British settlement on the island of Sumatra. The official name of the fort and town is Marlborough. The town is a petty and inconsiderable place, inhabited, as usual in these parts of the world, by a mixed population of natives of the country, Malays, Javanese, natives of Bengal, Malabar, and Coromandel, and a trifling proportion of Europeans and their descendants. The English settled here in 1683, after they were compelled to quit Batavia. Long. 102. 16. E. Lat. 3. 49. N.

BEN-COWSE, or NIO COWSE, a fortified village in the southern part of the Algerine territory, 63 miles S. W. Constantine.

BENDER, a small but strong and regularly fortified town of European Russia, in Bessarabia, on the Danister, the capital of the territory of the same name. It is built close by the river, in the form of a crescent, and has a strong citadel on an eminence. In 1770, the Russians took Bender by storm, and reduced the town to ashes. They again took it in 1789, almost without firing a shot; they also made themselves masters of it in the last war, and retained it at the peace of 1812. Population before it was taken by the Russians in 1770, 30,000. 100 miles E. Jassy. Long. 29. 30. E. Lat. 46. 56. 32. N.

BENDER DELAM, a town of Persia, province of Fars, on the Persian gulf, 130 miles W. Shiraz. Long. 50. 12. E. Lat. 29. 55. N.

BENDER KIOK, or BENDER KIOK, a small seaport of Persia, province of Fars, on the northern side of the gulf. Houses 600. 35 miles N. Bushire.

BENDER RISSER, or RISCHAHAN, a fortress of Persia, province of Fars, 18 miles S. E. Bushire. Long. 51. 6. E. Lat. 29. 18. N.

BENDORF, a town of Germany, on the Rhine. Pop. 1800. 6 miles N. Coblenz.

BENELAB, a town of Upper Egypt, 3 miles long, on the borders of the desert. Population 12,000.

BENEDICT, ST., a large market town of Hungary, county of Barsch.

BENEŠCHAV, a town of Bohemia, in the circle of Kaurzim, 20 miles S. S. E. Prague.

BENEŠCHAV, a town of Bohemia, circle of Lauteritz.

BENEVENTE, a town of France, department of La Creuse, with 1160 inhabitants.

BENEVENTO, a city of Italy, chief town of the duchy of the same name, consisting of the town of Benevento, and a small district around it, about 11 miles square. It is included in the kingdom of Naples. It is situated between two narrow valleys, and is several miles in circuit, containing 8 parish churches, 12 convents for monks, and 2 for nuns, with 14,000 inhabitants. No place in Italy, with the exception of Rome, contains so many interesting remains of antiquity. Among other remains, the triumphal arch, which was erected in honour of the Emperor Trajan, A. D. 114, is still in good preservation. The cathedral is a clumsy edifice in the Gothic style; and the church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is remarkable for nothing but its antiquity. This city is of great antiquity, and is supposed to have been one of the principal towns of the Samnites. 25 miles E. Capua. Long. 14. 38. E. Lat. 41. 7. N.

BENVELDEN, a town of France, in Lower Alsace. Population 1310.

BENGAL, an extensive and valuable province of Hindostan, situated between the 21st and 27th degrees of N. lat. and between the 86th and 92d degrees of E. long.; being in length about 400 miles, and in breadth 300. The fertile soil of Bengal produces every thing requisite for the sustenance of man. In variety of fruits and animals, it is equally abundant, and yields every article essential to the comfort, or even luxury of man. Exports are principally rice, cotton, sugar, both raw and manufactured; indigo, sugar, saltpetre, ivory, tobacco, and drugs of various kinds; hemp and flax is also to be procured in great abundance. Its imports by sea are gold and silver, copper and bar iron, woollen cloths of every description, tea, salt, glass and china ware, wines, and other commodities for the use of its European inhabitants, and a few Arabian and English horses. The south-east districts produce fine elephants, which vary in price from £50 to £1000. Bengal is intersected by the Ganges, the Brahmaputra, Damooda, and several other rivers, so connected by various streams, and the annual inundations, that there is scarcely a town which does not enjoy the benefits of an inundation. The greater proportion of the inhabitants of Bengal are Hindoos: they are very dark, but not so black as the Africans. A tenth of the population may be Mahometans; they are the descendants of the African and Mogul conquerors, and Arabian merchants, softened, in the course of time, by an intermixture with Hindoo women, converts, and children, whom they purchased during a scarcity, and educated in their own religion. The year is there divided into three seasons, viz. the hot, the rainy, and the cold. During the hot season, the thermometer rises as high as 100 degrees. Bengal was first invaded and conquered by the Afghan Mahometans in A. D. 1203, and continued tributary to the emperor of Delhi till the year 1340. From this period it continued independent till 1539, when it was subdued by Shere Shah, from whose descendants it was conquered by the Emperor Akbar, and continued subject to Delhi, or nominally so, till the year 1757, when it fell into the hands of the English. Under their government, the country is divided into three districts, in each of which there is a provincial court of appeal and circuit, viz. Calcutta, Dacca, and Moorsheadah; besides which, there is a resident English judge, a magistrate, and a collector of the revenues, in the different districts of the country. In Calcutta there is a supreme court of judicature established, to which all the inhabitants of the city of Calcutta, and all Europeans in the country, are amenable. There are five military stations in Bengal, besides Fort William, viz. Barrackpore, Berhampore, Chittagong, Dacca, and Tajepore; but in each district there is a provincial battalion, for assisting the police and protecting the inland commerce. The civil government of Bengal consists of a governor (who is also governor-general of India), and three members of council, one of whom is the commander-in-chief, the other two selected from the company's civil servants, who are changed every three years. The revenues of Bengal arise chiefly from a land-tax, which in 1811 produced £2,530,000 sterling.

BENGUELA, an extensive territory of Western Africa, to the S. of Congo and Angola, extending from 10. 30. to 16. 15. S. lat.

BENQUELA, NEW, or ST PHILIPPE DE BENQUELA, was built by the Portuguese, and is now the chief centre of their trade upon the African coast. Long. 13. 30. E. Lat. 12. 23. S.

BENI, a large and navigable river of the province of Cuzco, in Peru, which enters the Ucayale, a branch of the Amazons.

BENICARLO, a town of Spain, in Valencia. Population 2300. 85 miles N. E. Valencia.

BENIGNO, ST, a large village of the Sardinian states, on the Malone. Pop. 4500.

BENIN, a kingdom of Western Africa, the limits of which are not very precisely ascertained; but the name seems most properly applied to that part of the coast extending from the Rio Lagos to the Rio Formosa.

BENIN, a city of Africa, capital of the above kingdom. It is said to be 18 miles in circumference. Daily markets are held in the great streets, and separate quarters are allotted to each distinct species of merchandise.

BENIN-DAXY, ST, a town of France, department of the Nièvre. Population 1600.

BENISSEH, or BENESSEH, a flourishing town of Upper Egypt. 60 miles S. Cairo.

BEN-LENI, a mountain of Scotland, county of Perth. Height 3003 fath.

BENLOMOWN, a mountain of Scotland, in Dumbartonshire. Height 3262 feet.

BENNECKENSTEIN, a town of Saxony. Population 2500. 13 miles N. Nordhausen.

BEN-NEVIS, a mountain of Scotland, in Dumbartonshire. Height 4370.

BENNINGTON, a county of the United States, in the south-west part of Vermont, bounded N. by Rutland county, E. by Windham county, S. by Massachusetts, and W. by New York. Chief town Bennington. Population 15,893.

BENNINGTON, a post township of the United States, in Bennington county, Vermont, 37 miles N. E. Albany. Population in 1810, 2524.

BENOIT DU SAULT, ST, a town of France, department of the Indre. Population 1100.

BENSHEIM, a town in the grand duchy of Hesse. Population 3100.

BENSINGTON, a village and parish of England, county of Oxford. Population 901.

BENTHEIM, a market town of Hanover, 32 miles N. W. Munster.

BENWICK, a hamlet of England, Isle of Ely. Population 514.

BENAT, or ANNAUTH BELGRADE, a town of European Turkey, in Albania, with 12,000 inhabitants, the capital of a pachalic.

BENBENA, a district of Africa, extending from the straits of Babelmandel to Cape Guardafui. It is the native country of myrrh, incense, and gums.

BENBENA, a large town, capital of the above district. Here an annual fair is held, greatly resorted to by caravans from the interior.

BENICE, a river of South America, in Surinam or Dutch Guiana, which rises in the mountains, about 100 miles from the coast, and enters the Atlantic ocean, in Long. 57. 20. W. Lat. 6. 20. N.

BENICE, a district of Guiana, which formerly belonged to the Dutch, but is now in possession of Britain, having been finally ceded to this country by the peace of Paris in 1814.

It extends from Albury creek on the west, to Courantyne river on the east, along the sea coast, about 150 miles. Since coming into the possession of the British, it has been so rapidly improved, that in the course of about eight years, by means of British capital and industry, a tract of country was peopled and brought into a useful state, which appeared by nature to belong to the sea, being a low marshy coast, covered with overgrown timber and underwood, and inundated by every rising tide. Population of Berbice in 1811, whites 550; coloured 240; blacks 23,169; total 25,959. By an act of the 50th George III. the Dutch proprietors resident in Berbice are confined to the Netherlands, both for a supply of European articles, and for a market to their own produce, which must be exported to Europe in Dutch vessels.

BERCHEM, a town of Dutch Brabant. Population 1659.

BERCHTEGADEN, a market town of the Austrian empire. Population 3000. It has an elegant church. 13 miles S. Salzburg.

BEAUCY, a village of France, department of the Seine. Population 1700.

BEAULIEU, a town of England, county of Devon. It is an ancient borough by prescription, and sends two members to parliament. 215 miles W. London.

BEREZINA, a river of Russian Lithuania, rendered famous in the present day by the disastrous passage of the French, in their retreat from Russia in 1812. It rises in White Russia, near Polozk, and falls into the Dnieper. The small town of Berezina is situated on it. There is another river of this name which runs into the Dnieper.

BEREZINSKOI, a town of Siberia, in the government of Tobolsk, 40 miles E. Tobolsk.

BEREZOV, a Russian town of Siberia, on the Soyma. Here are three churches built of stone, and a chapel. 600 miles N. N. W. Tobolsk. Lat. 64. N.

BEREZOVSKOI, a town and fortress of Asiatic Russia, in the government of Orenburg.

BEN, a duchy of Germany, in the circle of Westphalia, bounded N. by the duchy of Cleves, E. by the county of Mark and the duchy of Westphalia, S. by the Westerwald, and W. by the Rhine. It contains 1100 square miles, with 295,000 inhabitants.

BEN, the chief town of a county of the same name, in the Netherlands. Population 700.—It is the name of several other small towns in Germany.

BERGA, a town of the Prussian states, 16 miles E. Jena.—2d, Of Spain, in Catalonia.—3d, Of Norway, 66 miles E. N. E. Christiania.—4th, Of Switzerland, in the canton of the Ticino.—6th, Of Saxony. Pop. 1070.

BERGAMASCO, a district in Upper Italy, which takes its name from the city of Bergamo. It has the Valteline N.; the Proseiano E.; the Cremonese S.; and the Milanese W. Its length is 40 miles, and its breadth 30. Population 360,000.

BERGAMO, a city of Upper Italy, in the Lombardo-Venetian kingdom, the capital of the above district. It is situated between the rivers Brembo and Serio, and is about half a league in length, including the suburbs. It is built in the form of an amphitheatre, on the side of a rocky hill, and is provided with walls, bastions, and ditches. It is, besides, protected and commanded by a castle, to which there is a covered passage from the city. It contains 13 parish churches, 12 convents for men, and 10 for women. The cathedral contains many valuable paintings. One of the most remarkable edifices in Bergamo is the place for the annual fair, a stone building, containing more than 600 booths. The charitable institutions are numerous, there being no less than 7 hospitals. The great article of trade is silk; also wine, iron, and grindstones. The merchants of Bergamo import fine cloths from England, France, and Holland; camlets from Holland and Flanders, and coarse cloths, spices and drugs, from Germany. It is an ancient city, having existed under the Romans. 23 miles N. E. Milan.

BERGEBORF, a town of Saxony, 2 miles E. S. E. Hamburg. Population 2000.

BERGEN, a town of Norway, the capital of the bishopric and government of Bergenhus, one of the largest and best built places in that country. It lies at the bottom of a long bay, inclosed on all sides by rugged and barren rocks. The houses are in general good, although, from their being founded on rocks, many of the streets are uneven and slanting. It has frequently suffered from fire. The inhabitants, amounting to 15,000, employ themselves chiefly in navigation, trade, and fishing. It is resorted to by the inhabitants of the adjacent province of Norland, who exchange their dried fish and train oil, with the Dutch, English, Swedes, and other nations, for corn. Here is a German church, and three Danish parochial churches. There is also an hospital for the reception of persons infected with leprosy, and a town-school. 270 miles S. W. Drontheim. Long. 7. 14. E. Lat. 60. 10. N.

BERGEN, a town of the Netherlands, in North Holland, 3 miles N. Alkmaar.

BERGEN, a town of the electorate of Hesse, 6 miles N. N. W. Hanau.

BERGEN, the capital of the island of Rugen, in the Baltic, at the end of a small lake. Pop. 1600. 13 miles N. E. Stralsund.

BEREN, a county of the United States, in New Jersey, on the Hudson, opposite New York. Pop. 16,603. Chief town Hackensack.

BERGEN, a township of the United States, in Bergen county, New Jersey, 3 miles W. New York. Pop. 2690. Here is an academy.

BERGENHUS, the name given to the most westerly province of Norway, or the bishoprick of Bergen. It lies W. Aggerhus.

BERGEN-ON-ZOOM, an important fortress and town of Dutch Brabant, not far from the Easter Scheldt, with which it has communication by a canal. Population of the town 4800. 18 miles N. N. W. Antwerp.

BERGERAC, a town of France, department of the Dordogne, on the river Dordogne, which separates it into two parishes. Before the revocation of the edict of Nantes, there were no fewer than 40,000 Calvinists in this town and neighbourhood. That impolitic measure proved a death-blow to the prosperity of Bergerac. The trade at present consists in wine, brandy, corn, &c. The chief manufactures are earthenware, paper, woollen caps, and other stuffs. 40 miles E. Bourdeaux.

BERGETX, a village of Dutch Brabant, with 1340 inhabitants.

BERGHEIM, a town of France, department of the Upper Rhine. Population 2500.

BERGOO, an extensive territory in the interior of Africa, having Dattur E., Berherme W., and N. Bornou.

BERG-REICHENSTEIN-KASCHERSCHER-HORY, a royal mining town of Bohemia, in the circle of Prachin. Population 3000. 29 miles W. Prachititz.

BERGES ST VINON, or BERG ST VINON, a town of France, department of the North, on the river Colme. The principal articles of trade are corn, butter, cheese, and thread. Population 5100. 5 miles S. Dunkirk.

BERGUM, a village of the Netherlands, in West Friesland. Population 1200.

BERGZABERN, a town of Bavaria, 6 miles S. S. W. Landau. Population 2000.

BERHAMSTEAD, ST MARY, or NORTH CHURCH, a village and parish of England, in Hertford. Population 1025.

BERKHAMSTEAD, a town of England, in the county of Hertford, on the Bulbourn. It consists of two principal streets, at the N. E. end of one of which are the remains of an ancient castle, of an elliptical form, defended on the N. W. by a double, and on the other side by a triple moat. At present it has a weekly market. Population 2310. 26 miles N. W. London.

BERKLEY, a market town of England, in the county of Gloucester, on the Little Avon. Population 835. 19 miles N. N. E. Bristol.

BERKLEY, a post township of the United States, in Bristol county, Massachusetts, on Taunton river. Population 1011.

BERKLEY, a county of the United States, in Virginia, on the Potomac, W. of the Blue ridge. Population 11,479. Slaves 1539. Chief town Martinsburg.

BERKLEY'S SPRINGS, a post village of the United States, in Berkley county, Virginia, on the Potomac, 110 miles above Washington. The waters of the springs are warm, and much resorted to.

BERKS, or BERKSHIRE, a county of England, bounded N. by the counties of Oxford and Buckingham, from which it is separated by the river Thames, E. by Surrey, S. by Hampshire, and W. by Wiltshire. Its figure is very irregular. It is 42 miles in length, 28 in breadth, though in one part contracting to 7; 208 in circuit; and contains a superficial area of about 476,100 square acres, or nearly 744 square miles. Of this, 255,000 acres are arable, and 30,000 waste; the remaining pasture, occupied by meadows, sheep walks, woods, buildings, roads, and rivers. Berkshire is watered by the Thames, Kennet, Loddon, Ock, Aulhorn, and Lambourn. Chalk abounds here in deep beds; and strata of fossil shells are found below the surface. A considerable portion of the eastern part of Berkshire is occupied by Windsor Forest, which is estimated to be 56 miles in circuit, including a great part of Hogditch-heath. In many other places this county is well clothed with timber, particularly oak and beech. It is divided into 20 hundreds, and contains 148 parishes, and 12 market towns. Berkshire was formerly one of the principal seats of the clothing manufacture, which was carried on until the middle of the 17th century; but it has since entirely declined. Cotton, sacking, paper, and blankets, are manufactured in different places, and also silk on a small scale; and there are extensive works for the manufacture of copper. Berkshire is traversed by Roman roads, and is said to have contained three Roman stations. Traces of Roman antiquities have been frequently found. Population 131,977.

BERKS, a county of the United States, in Pennsylvania, on the Schuylkill. Population 43,146. Chief town Reading.

BERKSHIRE, a county of the United States, in Massachusetts, the west part of the state. Population 35,907. Chief town Lenox. It is crossed from N. to S. by the Green Mountains. Quarries of marble are opened in Stockbridge, Sheffield, Lanesborough, and other places.—The name also of several townships.

BERSTADT, a town of French Flanders, with 1000 inhabitants.

BERTEGHE, a town of the Prussian states, in the Lower Rhine. Population 1750. 70 miles E. Cologne.

BERTEHUSEN, a village of Wirtemberg. Population 1120.

BERTEYR, a village of Dutch Brabant. Population 1690. 3 miles E. Bois le Duc.

BERLIN, the capital of the Prussian states, situated on the Spree, in the Middle Mark of Brandenburg, and one of the most beautiful cities of Europe. The circumference of its walls and parkades is about 11 English miles, and the entrance is through 15 gates. The streets are for the most part broad and straight, and the squares regular and spacious. The population made a rapid progress during the last century. In 1693 it was only 6500, while in 1803 it was 153,000. Berlin is indebted for its chief embellishments to the celebrated Fredrick II. who is supposed to have expended yearly, in the improvement of this city, 100,000 dollars. The city is made up of five distinct towns.—1. Berlin Proper, founded in 1163, and containing 30 streets. Among the most remarkable buildings in this part of the city are the post-office, the governor's house, and the council chamber; the Calvinist parish church, and Joachimsthal academy; the garison church, built in 1722, and adorned with the portraits of Generals Schwartz, Keith, Winterfeld, Zethen, and Von Kleist, the poet. Here also are deposited a quantity of columns and other trophies taken in the field. The other buildings here are the Lutheran parish churches of St Nicholas and St Mary, the Brandeburg county meeting-house, the Jewish synagogue, the new guard-house, the French church, the united Berlin and Colne Lutheran academy, the royal arsenal, from which the whole Prussian army is supplied with clothing; Frederick's hospital, in which above 300 children are educated gratis; the porcelain manufactory, the seminary for cadets, in which 224 young noblemen are instructed in language, sciences, and the exercises of the field; the new theatre, &c. In the suburbs are to be seen the large workhouse, the new mint, the public storehouse, the summer palace of Mon Bijou, with its pleasure gardens, the extensive hospital of La Charite, the sugar refineries, and the hospital of invalids, built in 1740, and fitted to contain above a thousand inmates. Across the main branch of the Spree, between Berlin Proper and Cohn, there is a fine freestone bridge, of five arches, and 160 feet in length, ornamented with the statue of the elector Frederick William. 2. Cohn, or Cologne on the Spree.—The most remarkable edifice here is the royal castle, 430 feet in length, and 276 in breadth. In this castle is also to be seen the cabinet of antiquities, minerals, and medals, with the museum of natural and artificial curiosities. Near the castle stands the magnificent cathedral, opened for public worship in 1760, belonging to the Calvinists. The remaining objects worthy of notice are the new custom-house, the royal news, the gallery of paintings, the military school, in which 15 young noblemen are educated for a military life, at the expense of the state; the market-place, the new tilt-yard, &c.—3. Frederichswerder, or Frederick's Island, contains the medical college, the old custom-house, the old mint, the royal hunting lodge, in which is at present the royal bank, the palaces of the margrave Von Schwedt and the prince of Prussia, the royal arsenal and foundry, the stamp-office, &c.—4. Doroteendamm, or New Town, contains, among other public buildings, the royal academy of sciences, with its elegant hall, library, and cabinet of medals; the observatory, the anatomical theatre, &c.—5. Frederichstadt, founded by the elector, Frederick III. in 1713. Here are situated the principal courts of law, the gold and silver fabrics, connected with the orphan-house at Potsdam, the porcelain manufactory, the magnificent palace of the grand master of the order of Malta, the palace of Count Reuss, the Jerusalem, Trinity, and French churches, and the Bethlem church, belonging to the Lutherans of Bohemia. The principal manufactures of Berlin are in silk, serge, flustian, muslin, camdets, and other woollen, linen, and cotton stuffs; also stockings, carpets, embroidery, jewellery, bronze, iron and steel, black and white lead, borax, vitriol, dye-stuffs (particularly Prussian blue), tobacco, wax, starch, powder, soap, leather, hats, clocks and watches. Berlin was taken by the Austrians and Russians in 1760, and was occupied by Bonaparte in 1806, after the battle of Jena. 25 miles E. Brandenburg, 45 N. W. Frankfort on the Oder, 75 S. W. Stettin. 300 N. by W. Vienna. Long. 13. 22. E. Lat. 52. 31. 45. N.

BERLIN, a township of the United States, in Worcester county, Massachusetts. Population 591.—2d. In Washington county, Vermont, on Onion river, opposite Montpelier. Population 1067.—3d. In Hartford county, Connecticut. Population 3793.—4th. In Rensselaer county, New York. Population 3012.

BERLICHEN, a small town of the Prussian states, 36 miles N. N. E. Custrin.

BERMUDA HUNDREN, a small village of the United States, in Chesterfield county, Virginia, on a point of land at the confluence of the Appomattox with James river. On this peninsula, 2 miles S. W. of the village, is City-point.

BERMUDAS, or SOMERS' ISLANDS, a cluster of small islands in the Atlantic ocean, in number about 400, but for the most part so small and barren, that they have neither inhabitants nor name. They extend from N. E. to S. W. about 45 miles. They were discovered by Juan Bermudas, a Spaniard, in the year 1522. The largest of these islands is St George, which is 16 miles long, and two in breadth; St David, Cooper, Ireland, Somerset, Long island, Bird island, and Nonesuch. On the first there is a town, containing 500 houses; the two following have some villages, and throughout the others there are only some scattered farms. The island of St. George has different ports, and two castles. But the whole group is so completely hemmed in with rocks, that no other fortification is necessary, it being with difficulty that a vessel of 10 tons burden can enter the roads. The temperature is so good, that a perpetual spring prevails, except during the middle of summer, when the heats are oppressive. The number of white inhabitants in these islands is estimated at 5462; that of the blacks at 4919. They cultivate Indian tobacco, legumes, and fruit. The English first established themselves here in 1612. The north point of these islands lies in Long. 63. 23. W. Lat. 32. 51. N.

BERN, a canton of Switzerland, formerly the largest in the republic, but now reduced. Its present boundaries are Uri, Unterwalden, and Lucerne on the E.; Aargau and Solothurn on the N.; the Jura mountains, Fribourg, and Val d'Aud on the W.; and the Valais on the S. It is divided into 24 upper bailiwicks, and comprehends 3672 square miles, and 215,000 inhabitants.

BERN, the capital of the foregoing canton, stands on the declivity of a hill near the Aar. It is large, in part fortified, and has some beautiful edifices. The three principal streets are furnished with piazzas on both sides. The chief public buildings are the cathedral, founded in the year 1471, a beautiful Gothic edifice; the church of the Saint Esprit, the council-house, the arsenal, the great hospital, the new orphan-house, the town library and cabinet of medals and antiquities, the economical society, and the concert hall. Here are manufactures of crepe, silk, linen, woollen and cotton stuffs, leather, clocks and watches. 75 miles N. E. Geneva. Long. 7. 26. E. Lat. 46. 56. 55. N.

BERNANG, or BERNENG, a village of Switzerland, 8 miles E. N. E. Appenzel.

BERNARD, GREAT ST., a mountain of the Alps, in Switzerland. Height 11,000 feet.

BERNAR, a town of the Prussian states, 14 miles N. N. E. Berlin. Population 1000.

BERNAY, a town of France; department of the Eure. It trades in corn, cattle, cider, and flax, with manufactures of paper, wax-candles, linen and woollen cloths. Population 6470.

BERNBURG, a town of Germany, 24 miles S. Magdeburg. Population 2560.

BERNSTADT, a town of the Prussian states, 18 miles E. N. E. Treves. Population 1270.

BERNSDORF, a village of Silesia, in the circle of Hirschberg. Population 1356.

BERNSTADT, a town of Silesia, 20 miles E. Breslau. Population 2350.—Also of Saxony, in Upper Lusatia. Population 1600.

BERRE, a town of France, department of the Mouths of the Rhone, 16 miles N. W. Marseilles. Population 1800.

BERSCH, a town of France, in Lower Alsace. Population 1400.

BERTHIER, a village and seignior of Lower Canada, on the river St. Lawrence. Houses 80. Pop. of the seignior 5000.

BERTHOUD, a town of Switzerland, canton of Bern, 9 miles N. E. Bern.

BERTIE, a county of the United States, in North Carolina, on the Roanoke, at its entrance into Albemarle Sound. Population 11,218. Slaves 6059. Chief town Windsor.

BERTIOGA, a small seaport on the coast of the Brazils, about 15 miles S. St. Sebastian.

BERVIE, or EVERHERD, a town and parish of Scotland, in the county of Kincairdie, situated on the sea coast, at the mouth of a stream called Bervie, which forms a small harbour for fishing-boats. It is a royal burrough, and it unites with Aberdeen, Arbroath, Brechin, and Montrose, in returning a member to parliament. Population 1692. 13 miles N. E. Montrose.

BERWICK, a county of Scotland, bounded N. by the county of Haddington, E. by the German ocean, W. by the county of Mid-Lothian, S. by Roxburghshire and the river Tweed. It extends in extreme length 31 miles, and in breadth 19, but the mean dimensions are computed at 26 miles by 17, and its superficial area contains about 446 square miles, or 285,440 English acres, of which upwards of 100,000 are arable, and 185,000 are in bill and pasture. The principal rivers are the Tweed, Whitadder or Whitewater, and Blackadder or Blackwater, both of which are tributary to it; the Leader, Eden, and the Eke, a small stream flowing into the sea at Eyemouth. The surface of the country is unequal, unless on the banks of the rivers. No minerals of importance have hitherto been discovered. Small quantities of lime have been obtained near Foulden, and at other places, and gypsum in the parish of Chirnside. The county is in general bare of wood; but some of the proprietors having made extensive plantations, this deficiency will in time be supplied. The hilly tracks are not waste and unprofitable, being converted to extensive sheep pastures. Agriculture in all its branches is carried to great perfection in Berwickshire; and it is on its agriculture that its prosperity depends. Its manufactures are quite inconsiderable; that of paper, made at two extensive works, is the only article of exportation. The only harbour, properly so called, is at Eyemouth, which has been improved at great expence, and is private property. Berwickshire consists of 31 parishes, and its principal towns are Dunse, Greenlaw, Lauder, Eyemouth, and Coldstream. Population 33,365.

BERWICK-UPON-TWEED, a town and county in itself, on the Tweed, within half a mile of its confluence with the German ocean. It was formerly the chief town in the county of Berwick, and the theatre of many sanguinary conflicts between the English and Scottish armies; but was finally ceded to England in 1502. All its ancient privileges were confirmed, and several new ones conferred on it by James VI. on account of the loyal reception given him by Berwick, on his accession to the English crown. The town is surrounded by walls, upon which a considerable number of cannon are placed; but the fortifications are going to decay. The bridge over the Tweed contains 15 arches, and men uses 1154 feet long and 17 wide. The town-house is a handsome structure, with a stately spire 159 feet high, where there is a choir of 8 bells. The barracks, with the store-house, form a handsome square, and are capable of maintaining 6000 men. The borough sends two members to parliament. Beside the church, which is a spacious building, without a spire, there are four places of worship for Presbyterians. The Baptists, Methodists, and Catholics, have each a chapel. There are no manufactures of any importance carried on in the town. Its chief trade consists in exporting corn, pork, eggs, and salmon. A new pier was begun here in 1811. It now stretches a considerable way into the sea. Population 8723. Market days, Wednesday and Saturday; and a fair annually, for the sale of horses and black cattle, on the Friday of Trinity week, 336 miles N. W. London, 54 S. E. Edinburgh, Long. 1.45. W. Lat. 45.43. E.

BERWICK, NORTH, a town and parish of Scotland, in the county of Haddington, situated on the coast of the firth of Forth, with a small harbour, but with very little trade. It unites with Haddington, Dunbar, Lauder, and Jedburgh, in returning a member to parliament. Population of the parish 1624. 22 miles E. Edinburgh.

BERWICK, a township of the United States, in York county, Maine, on Salmon-fall river, 14 miles N. W. York.

BERWICK, SOUTH, a post township of the United States, in York county, Maine, 12 miles N. W. York. Population in 1810, 445.

BERWICK, a post township of the United States, in Columbia county, Pennsylvania.

BERANGON, a large, ancient, and well built city of France, on the river Doubs, which nearly surrounds it, dividing it into two parts, joined together by a bridge. It has six gates, and is strong both by nature and art, having been fortified by Louis XIV., and being, besides, protected by a citadel standing on a sharp rock. The university, which was dissolved at the revolution, was re-established in the form of a lyceum and college, in 1801. It has manufactures of arms, woollen stuffs, silk stockings, linen, calico, leather, huts, clocks and watches. The trade consists in corn, wine, cattle, cheese, iron, pins, &c. Population 20,200. The learned institutions of this place are, an academy of sciences, a literary and military society, and an academy of painting and sculpture founded in 1773. It is an ancient place, being known to the Romans, and a few of the streets still preserving Roman names. The library here contains some rare manuscripts, and a valuable collection of coins and medals. 235 miles S. E. Paris.

BESIGHEIM, a town of Württemberg, with 1960 inhabitants. 23 miles N. Stuttgart.

BESMAREZIA and BENZIAE, or BOUDZIAE, two small provinces of Russia in Europe, lying on the Black sea, between the northern mouth of the Danube, and the Dniester, and bounded to the west by Moldavia, of which they once formed a part.

BESSE, a town of France, department of the Puy de Dôme. Population 1920.

BESSE, a town of France, with 1530 inhabitants. 18 miles N. E. Toulon.

BESSE-COURTENVILLE, or BESSE, a town of France, 3 miles S. St. Calais. Pop. 1800.

BESINES, a town of France, department of the Upper Vienne. Population 2510.

BESSON, a town of France, department of the Allier. Population 2960.

BETHANY, a small village of Palestine, 3 miles S. Jerusalem.—Also a town of Palestine, 15 miles N. Jerusalem.

BETHLEHEM, a town of Palestine, situated on a mountain entirely covered with vines and olives; although the latter are decreasing, being destroyed amid the continual floods of the inhabitants. This town is remarkable as the birth-place of Christ. There is a subterraneous grotto, in which is an altar and a fine picture, enriched by numerous silver and crystal lamps. The convent is a great solid structure, rather resembling a fortification, and includes three religious houses, for Franks, Greeks, and Armenians; but in 1807 it had only 10 monks, of whom 7 were Spaniards. The inhabitants, amounting to 500 families, are active and industrious. 6 miles S. Jerusalem.

BETHLEHEM, a post township of the United States, in Northampton county, Pennsylvania, on the Lehigh. Population 1436.—2d, Of Albany county, New York, on the Hudson. Population 4420.—3d, Of Hunterdon county, New Jersey, on a branch of the Raritan. Population 1733.—The name of several other townships and villages.

BETHLEHEM, East, a town of the United States, in Washington county, Pennsylvania, on the Monongahela. Population 1849.

BETHEUNE, a town of France, department of the Pas de Calais. Here is made excellent cheese, in which, as in corn and flax, a tolerable trade is carried on. There are, besides, manufactures of linen. The houses and streets are of mean construction, but the market-place is large and regular. Population 7000. 134 miles N. Paris.

BETLEY, a town and parish of England, county of Stafford. Population 932.

BETLIS, a town of Armenia, in Kurdistan, situated in a fine and highly cultivated valley, producing fruit, grain, and honey. Population of the town and neighbourhood, 20,000 Kurds, Turks, Armenians, and Syrians.

BETTENHAUSEN, a town of Germany, 6 miles W. Meiningen. It has manufactures of linen. Population 6520.

BETTENHOVEN, a town of the Prussian states, 8 miles E. Juliers. Population 1600.

BETTIAT, the capital of a district of the same name in Hindostan, and formerly reckoned a strong fortress. It is now a middling-sized town. Long. 94. 40. E. Lat. 26. 47. N.

BETTOON, a flourishing town on the Ganges. Long. 80. 5. E. Lat. 26. 52. N.

BETTOONIAH, a district of Hindostan, province of Bengal, 100 miles long by about 20 broad, situated on the N. E. bank of the Ganges.

BEVELAND, NORTH and SOUTH, the name of two islands of the Netherlands, in the province of Zealand, formed by the divided branches of the Scheldt.

BEVEREN, a town of Flanders. Pop. 4920.

BEVERLEY, a town of England, in the East Riding of Yorkshire, situated near the river Hull. It is about a mile in length: the principal streets are broad, well paved, and the whole town is neat and clean. The church of St Mary is a Gothic structure, beautifully ornamented. There is, besides, the Minster, formerly a collegiate church. There is a very commodious edifice, in which are held the sessions for the East Riding of the county. A theatre and assembly-rooms were erected some years ago. The market place is very spacious, occupying four acres. This town has a good free school, with two fellowships, six scholarships, and three exhibitions to St John's college, Cambridge; also a charity-school, workhouse, and seven almshouses. It holds two markets weekly, which are copiously supplied. The principal trade of Beverley consists in corn and coals. It sends 12 members to parliament. Population 7613. 9 miles N. W. Hull.

BEVERLY, a town of York county, Upper Canada, S. W. York.

BEVERLY, a post township of the United States, in Essex county, Massachusetts, N. E. Boston. Population 4500.

BEKENWYCK, a village of North Holland. Population 1048. 9 miles N. Haarlem.

BEVILACCA, a town of Italy, 28 miles S. W. Padua.

BEUKELDORT, a village of the Netherlands. Population 4300.

BEUTENBACH, a town of Württemberg, 8 miles S. E. Stuttgart. Population 1500.

BEUTHEN, a town of Silesia, 32 miles N. E. Ratibon. Population 1500.

BEUTHEN, LOWER, a town of Lower Silesia, on the Oder. Population 2400.

BEUZEVILLE, a village of France, department of the Eure. Population 2450.

BEWLEY, or BRAULEY, a town of England, county of Worcester, on the Severn. It contains a neat church built in 1748, besides several meeting-houses. A considerable trade is carried on in salt, malt, leather, and iron ware. It returns one member to parliament. Population 3725. 14 miles N. Worcester.

BEZIERS, a well built town of France, in Lower Languedoc. It carries on a trade in almonds, olive oil, muscadel wine, brandy, corn, nuts, soda, wool, and silk; and has manufactures of cotton, calico, fastian, and other stuffs; also of earthenware, brandy, and leather. The academy of sciences here was founded in the year 1723. Besides the cathedral, it has a collegiate church, several religious houses, and two hospitals. Population 12,500. 38 miles S. W. Montpellier.

BIADRINATH, a town and celebrated temple in Hindostan, which is an object of pilgrimage from all parts of India. Long. 79. 36. E. Lat. 80. 43. N.

BIAGLIOTTA, a town of Hindostan, in Bejapour, 65 miles S. Bejapour.

BIATONGO, a city of Nepal, and once the residence of an independent dynasty. It contains a palace, and 12,000 brick houses.

BIEND, a town of Hindostan, province of Agra. Long. 76. 47. E. Lat. 26. 34. N.

BIERTPORE, a fortified town of Hindostan, in the province of Agra. Long. 77. 28. E. Lat. 27. 13. N.

BIALA, a town of Galicia, circle of Myslenicz, on the river of the same name. Population 2720.

BIALOGORON, a small town of Russia, in the government of Wilna. Pop. 1500.

BIALYSTOCK, a well built town of European Russia, in the government of Grodno. Population 5000. 24 miles N. Bielsk.

BIANA, an ancient city of Hindostan, formerly capital of the province of Agra. Long. 77. 16. E. Lat. 26. 56. N.

BIERACH, a town of Wirtemberg, on the Riess, in Suabia, 18 miles S. S. E. of Ulm.—The name of several other small towns and villages.

BIBERSTEIN, a small town of Switzerland, canton of Bern.

BIC, a small island in the river St. Lawrence, 153 miles below Quebec.

BICANEER, a town of Hindostan, and capital of a district of the same name. Long. 73. 30. E. Lat. 28. 55. N.

BICESTER, a market town and parish of England, county of Oxford, situated on a tributary of the Charwell. The chief trade carried on is in malt liquors. Population 2544. 11½ miles from Oxford.

BIDACHE, a town of France, in Gascony, on the Bidouze, 16 miles E. Bayonne. Population 2000.

BIDASSOA, a river which rises in the Pyrenees, and falls into the bay of Biscay, between Andaye and Fontarabia.

BIDDEFORD, a seaport of the United States, in York county, Maine, on Saco river, opposite Saco, 28 miles N. E. York. Pop. 1863.

BIDEFOON, a seaport town of England, in the county of Devon, occupying both sides of the Towridge, which is crossed by a bridge of 24 Gothic arches. There is a church here, and two large meeting-houses; also a custom-house, and a fine quay. A great quantity of earthen-ware is manufactured and exported to Wales; and a manufacture of woollen stuffs and carpeting is carried on. Ships of war, and vessels of inferior size, are built here. It exports grain and cargoes of oak bark. Population 4053. 40 miles N. Exeter.

BIDOUZE, a small river of France, which falls into the Mediterranean, E. Montpellier.

BIDOUSE, a river of France, which joins the Adour, near Bayonne.

BIDESKOPF, a town of the grand duchy of Hesse, 15 miles N. W. Marburg. Population 2600.

BIEGAR, a town of Silesia, circle of Reichembach. It contains four Catholic and Lutheran churches. Population 0700.

BIELEFELD, a town of the Prussian states. It has manufactures of leather, soap, woollen stuffs, linen, and thread, along with excellent bleaching grounds. Population 5500. 25 miles E. Munster.

BILEW, a town of Russia in Europe, government of Thoula, on the Oka. Houses 600.

BIELGORON, an old town in European Russia, government of Kursk. Houses 1000.

BIELLA, a town of Piedmont, 35 miles N. N. E. Turin. Population 8250. It contains 4 churches.

BIELOPOLCE, a town of European Russia. Pop. 9950. 555 miles S. S. E. St. Petersburg.

BIELOSEK, a town of European Russia, in the government of Novgorod. Population 2800. 220 miles E. N. E. Novgorod.

BIELSK, or BIELCZ, a town of European Russia. Population 2830. 100 miles E. N. E. Warsaw.

BIENNE, a well built town of Switzerland, canton of Berne. Population 2670.

BIEZLIET, a town of the Netherlands, situated on an island of the same name, 20 miles N. Ghent. Population 1100.

BIERLEY, NORTH, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 6070.

BRETIGHEIM, a town of Wirtemberg, 18 miles N. Stutgard. Population 2200.

BIGBONE CREEK, a river of the United States, in Kentucky, which falls into the Ohio.

BIGHURST BAY, a bay of the English channel, on the coast of Devonshire.

BIGBY RIVER, a tributary of the Missouri, in Lat. 49. N.

BIGGAR, a town and parish of Scotland, in the county of Lanark. Population 1727.

BIGGLESWADE, a market town and parish of England, in the county of Bedford, on the river Ivel. The church is a handsome Gothic.

this structure. It has a great weekly market on Wednesday for grain, and it has five fairs yearly. Pop. 2778. 24 miles N. Hertford.

BIONORN RIVER, a river of North America, which rises in the Rocky mountains, and falls into the Yellow Stone river, Lat. 47. N.

BIG SANDY RIVER, a river of North America, which falls into the Ohio, in Lat. 38. 30. N.

BIJANAGER, or ANNAGOONDY, a ruinous city of Hindostan, in the Balaghaut ceded territories, situated on the river Poombudra, once the capital of a great sovereignty. Long. 76. 34. E. Lat. 15. 14. N.

BIJAYPUR, a town and fortress of Hindostan, province of Agra, taken by the British in 1803.

BILBOA, a town of Spain, capital of Biscay proper, on the Ybaicalval, six miles from the sea. It has a spacious harbour, and five parish churches. It carries on an extensive commerce in wool. The other exports are iron, chestnuts, olive oil, saffron, and wine. The imports are stock-fish, Baltic hemp, materials for ship-building, ship stores, cocoa, sugar, coffee, linen, English woollen manufactures, drags, French wines, &c. Pop. 15,090. 220 miles N. Madrid.

BILEDULGERIN, the usual name given to an extensive region of Africa, situated immediately to the south of Algiers and Tunis. It forms the transition from the fertile plains of Barbary, to that desert of sand which covers so great an extent of interior Africa.

BILESWAR, a town of Hindostan, in Bejapour. Long. 73. 45. E. Lat. 17. 53. N.

BILSNEY, a town of Hindostan, in the Mysore, 192 miles N. W. Seringapatam.

BILTZ, a town of Austrian Silesia, on the river Biala. Population 3369.

BILLENIAT, a town of England, in the county of Essex, 24 miles E. London.

BILLESDON, a town and parish of England. Pop. 751. 8 miles E. Leicester.

BILLETON, an island in the Eastern seas, 50 miles long by 45 broad, between Sumatra and Borneo.

BILLON, a town of France, department of the Puy de Dome. Population 5200.

BILSAH, a town of Hindostan, in the province of Mulwah, on the Betwah. The town is not very extensive, but contains some good streets. Long. 77. 50. E. Lat. 23. 33. N.

BILSDALE, a township and chapelry of England, in Yorkshire. Population 780.

BILSEN, a town of the Netherlands. Population 1960. 14 miles N. Liège.

BIRSTON, a town of England, in the county of Stafford. It has great iron works, and numerous manufactories for japanned enamelled goods, and iron ware. The Birmingham and Staffordshire canal runs through this town. Pop. 12,003. 11 miles N. W. Birmingham.

BIRTAUX, a town and parish of England, in Suffolk. Population 814.

BIRJAPATAM, a village and seaport of Hindostan, 34 miles S. S. W. Cicacole.

BIR, a town of Hindostan, circar of e, 12 miles S. Vizianagram.

BIXAROS, a seaport of Spain, in Valencia, with 1100 houses. 30 miles S. E. Tortosa.

BIXASCO, a small but strong town of Italy, 10 miles S. E. Milan.

BIXBROOK, a town of England, in the county of Lincoln, on the Anklam. Pop. 796.

BINCHE, a town of the Netherlands. Population 3800. 12 miles E. S. E. Mons.

BINDRABUND, a town of Hindostan, province of Agra, on the Jumna.

BINGAZI, a seaport of Barca, in Africa, formerly a large and beautiful city, and still containing 5000 inhabitants, with an excellent harbour. Long. 20. 0. E. Lat. 32. 20. N.

BINGEN, a town in the grand duchy of Hesse, on the Rhine. Population 2700. 30 miles S. Coblenz.

BINGHAM, a town and parish of England, county of Nottingham. Population 1574.

BINGLEY, a town and parish of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population, including the town of Micklethwaite, 7375.

BIONTO, a considerable river of the kingdom of Chili, which enters the Pacific, two leagues from the bay of Concepcion.

BIOGRAD, a decayed place of Dalmatia, 18 miles S. E. Zafra.

BIOLLE, a town of Savoy. Population 1040. 12 miles N. Chambéry.

BIOLIO, a town of Piedmont, with 1900 inhabitants. 8 miles E. Biella.

BIORNEBORG, a maritime town of European Russia, 65 miles N. Abo.

BIRNHOOM, a district in the province of Bengal, situated about Lat. 24. N.; being 65 miles long by 30 broad.

BIRCHINGTON, a small seaport and parish town of England, in the isle of Thanet. Population 700.

BIRD ISLAND, the name of various islands, discovered by navigators, chiefly in the Eastern seas, and the Pacific and Atlantic oceans.

BIRMINGHAM, a market town of England, in the county of Warwick, situated on the river Rea, which joins the Thame. The town extends about two miles in length, including the hamlets of Deritend and Bordesley. It is comprised in one parish, and has three churches, St Martin's, St Philip's, and Christ Church. There are likewise five chapels connected with the establishment, severally dedicated to St Bartholomew, St Mary, St Paul, St John, and St James. Birmingham contains also a great many other places of worship, among which are two for Unitarians, three for Independents, four for Baptists, three for Methodists, two for Roman Catholics, and two Jewish synagogues. There are various charitable establishments here, as King Edward VI.'s free school, the present edifice having been erected in 1707, with his statue in front; the blue coat school, established in 1724 for 180 boys and 40 girls; the dissenters' charity school, in which 36 girls are educated and maintained. A school upon the plan of Mr Joseph Lancaster, was established soon after the adoption of the system in the metropolis. There is also a well arranged establishment upon the plan of Dr Bell. A work-house on a large scale is established in Birmingham; and there is a general hospital, which can accommodate upwards of 100 patients; also a dispensary for the relief of indigent sick persons at their own residences, the original plan of which has been extended. There is a handsome theatre, built in 1792. Adjoining to it there is an assembly-room. A handsome public office and convenient prison have within these few years been erected, where the justices of the peace hold their sittings twice in the week. Birmingham has been long distinguished for the variety and importance of its useful and ingenious manufactures. Coarse iron articles were manufactured previous to 1688. The manufacture of buttons and buckles next began to flourish, and soon afterwards there seems to have arisen a gradual and general spirit for the fabrication of every variety of hardware, from the most ponderous machines, such as steam-engines, cylinders, pumps, flyes, wheels, levers, and pinions of iron, which astonish by the vastness of the power displayed, down to those which are framed for operations of the most nice and minute accuracy. The rude material of iron is now manufactured into all sorts of useful and elegant instruments, by an endless variety of the most complicated and ingenious devices. Birmingham contains establishments on a great scale for the stamping of money; and it is here that the national coinage of copper is struck. Among the various articles made here are rolled metals, machinery for mills, and copying machines. Muskets for the supply of our own forces and those of foreign powers, have occupied, and still engage, a considerable number of workmen. Side-arms and all sorts of fire-arms are extensively manufactured in this town; as also buttons of all descriptions. At the pin-works 12,000 pins can be cut and pointed in an hour, and in the same time 50,000 pin-heads can be made from the wire. Steel screws, watch-chains, and every article of domestic economy, are made in this place: gilding, plain or inlaid, and plating, are brought to great perfection. Vast quantities of toys are likewise manufactured. There are very extensive brass foundries, and numerous articles, useful and ornamental, are executed of that material: there are also manufactories of whips, and papier maché commodities. The art of staining glass has also been carried to great perfection here by Mr Eginton. Birmingham has three markets weekly, and two annual fairs. It has the benefit of several canals. Birmingham is not an incorporated town; and, notwithstanding its size and importance, has no representation in parliament. This town is supposed to have existed in the reign of king Alfred; but it was not a place of note for centuries after. In the year 1700, it consisted only of 30 streets, whereas there are now about 300.

The parish of Birmingham contains 106,722 persons. 62 miles N. W. Oxford, 87 N. Bristol, and 109 N. N. W. London.

BIRNA, a river of Asia, which flows into the straits of Malacca.

BIRNAGUR, an ancient city of Gujerat, in Hindostan, now a heap of ruins.

BIRR, formerly called PARSONS TOWN, a town of Ireland, and chief town of King's county, 34 miles N. E. Limerick.

BIRSEN, a town of European Russia, in the government of Wilna. Long. 23. 50. E. Lat. 55. 16. N.

BIRT, a town of Asiatic Turkey, on the Euphrates. Population from 3000 to 4000.

BIRTERBURY BAY, a bay on the west coast of Ireland. Long. 9. 50. W. Lat. 53. 20. N.

BIRTHIN, a river of England, which falls into the Usk, near Usk, in Monmouth.

BISCARA, a town of Algiers, capital of the province of Zaab, 150 miles S. S. E. Algiers.

BISCAY, in the extended acceptation of the word, comprises the three provinces of Alava, Guipuscoa, and Biscay proper. On the east it is separated by the Bidasoa from France, on the north it is bounded by the bay of Biscay, on the west by Las Montañas de Santander, and on the south by Burgos. Population 310,000.

BISCAY PROPER, a canton or district of the foregoing province, is inclosed by the bay of Biscay, Old Castile, Alava, and Guipuscoa. Its population is about 120,000.

BISCAY, BAY OF, that part of the Atlantic ocean which lies between the island of Ushant in France, and Cape Ortegal in Spain, having the Spanish province of Biscay to the south. It washes the whole west coast of France, and the north coast of Spain.

BISCAY, NEW, one of the provinces in which the kingdom of Mexico, or New Spain, was formerly divided, and which now forms part of the intendency of Durango.

BISCHORSBERG, an open town in East Prussia. Population 1600. 54 miles S. Königsberg.

BISCHORSHEIM, a market town of France, in Alsace. Population 1550.—Also a town of Baden, 64 miles S. E. Mentz. Population 1700.—It is the name of several other small towns and villages in France and Germany.

BISCHORSACK, a town, with a decayed castle, in Upper Carniola, 72 miles S. N. E. Trieste.

BISCHOFSTEIN, a town of East Prussia. Population 2220. 42 miles S. Königsberg.

BISCHOFSWERDA, a town of Saxony, 20 miles E. Dresden. Population 1000.

BISCHOFSWERDER, a town of Prussia, 63 miles S. S. E. Dantzic. Population 1140.

BISCHOFZELL, a town of Switzerland, canton of Thurgau, 12 miles S. Constance.

BISCHWEILER, a well built and flourishing town of France, in Alsace. It has manufactures of cloth, madder, tobacco, and leather. Population 3400. 10 miles N. Strassburg.

BISEGLIA, a town of Naples, in the Terra di Bari, near the coast of the Adriatic. Population 10,000.

BISENTZ, a town of Moravia. Population 2550. 14 miles S. W. Hradisch.

BIAHRESH, a town of Lower Egypt, on the Nile. It appears to be the ancient Bubaste, and still exhibits stupendous remains of antiquity. 19 miles N. E. Cairo.

BISHOP AND HIS CLERKS, a cluster of dangerous rocks off the coast of Pembrokeshire, Wales, on which a light-house was erected in 1777.

BISHOP'S CASTLE, a town and parish of England, in the county of Salop. It is an ancient corporation, and has sent members to parliament ever since the reign of Queen Elizabeth. Population 1330. 16 miles S. S. W. Shrewsbury.

BISHOP'S ISLAND, a small island near the west coast of Ireland. Long. 9. 35. W. Lat. 52. 34. N.

BISHOP'S ISLANDS, a chain of small islands, among the Scots Hebrides.

BISHOPSTON, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 2072.

BISHOP STORTFORD, a town and parish of England, in Hertford, on a navigable canal, which communicates with the river Lea. It is built in the form of a cross, and consists of four principal streets, directed to the cardinal points, which are kept very clean by means of the river. The church is a venerable Gothic structure. Fronting it, in the centre of the High-street, is the free school, a neat edifice; and there are several well-endowed almshouses for aged persons. The principal manufacture of the place is malt, of which large quantities are sent to London; and there is a good weekly market for corn. The vestiges of a castle, built by William the Conqueror, on an artificial mount, are to be seen here. Population 3368. 30 miles N. London.

BISHOP'S WALTHAM, a town and parish of England, county of Southampton. Population 2126.

BISHOP WEARMOUTH, a parish of England, in the county of Durham. Pop. 11,542.

BISIGNANO, a town of Naples, in Calabria Citer. 146 miles S. E. Naples.

BISLEY, a town and parish of England, county of Gloucester. Population 5421.

BISNETT, the capital of a district of the same name in Hindostan. Long. 90. 46. E. Lat. 24. 28. N.

BISNÉE, a town of Bootan, 166 miles E. Moonsiedabad.

BISAGOS, a group of small islands, in number about 16, which lie off the western coast of Africa, between the Gambia and Sierra Leone, near the mouth of the Rio Grande. These islands are inhabited by a tall and intrepid race of men, fond of war.

BISAGO, one of the largest in the archipelago of the Bisagos. It is 40 miles long by 10. Long. 14. 10. W. Lat. 11. 24. N.

BISAKRA, a place of pilgrimage in the mountains of Northern Hindostan. Long. 79. 30. E. Lat. 30. 36. N.

BISOULEE, the capital of a district of the same name in Hindostan. Long. 74. 42. E. Lat. 32. 22. N.

BISSOULY, a town of Hindostan, province of Delhi, ruined in 1774 by the invasion of the Rohillas. Long. 78. 50. E. Lat. 28. 20. N.

BISSUKRORE, the capital of a district of the same name in Bengal. Long. 87. 25. E. Lat. 23. 4. N.

BISSUNTORE, a town of Hindostan, province of Allahabad. Long. 84. 40. E. Lat. 25. 40. N.

BISSUNTORE GOLAH, a town of Bengal, district of Purneah. Long. 87. 52. E. Lat. 25. 20. N.

BISTAM, a town of Persia, 240 miles N. N. E. Isphahan. Long. 54. 30. E. Lat. 35. 30. N.

BISTRITZ, or BISTRITZA, a town of Moldavia, on a river of the same name, 20 miles S. W. Jassy.

BISTRITZ, a town of Transylvania, on a small river of the same name. Population 6000. 256 miles E. Vienna.—Also a small town of Moravia, 8 miles E. S. E. Premau.

BISTRITZA, a river in Austrian Galicia, which falls into the Dniester, at Mariemopol.

BITFORD, a town of England, in the county of Warwick, 101 miles N. W. London.

BITONTO, a town of Naples, in the Terra di Bari, in a beautiful valley, about 8 miles from the Adriatic. 110 miles E. by N. Naples.

BITSEN, a fortified town of France, department of the Moselle. Population 2300. 18 miles E. Weissenbourg.

BITTBERG, a town of the Prussian states. Population 1630. 30 miles N. E. Luxemburg.

BITTERFELD, a town of Saxony, on the Melda. Population 2000.

BIZERTA, or BEZZERT, a town in the kingdom of Tunis, 30 miles N. Tunisia.

BLACK LAKE, a river of the United States, in Louisiana, rises in the north-west part of the state, and joins the Saline, 9 miles N. E. Natchitoches.

BLACK LICK, a river of the United States, in Ohio, joins the Big Walnut, 9 miles above its entrance into the Scioto.

BLACKBURN, a market town of England, in Lancashire, on the Derwent, which is crossed by four stone bridges. The town is irregularly built; it contains nine places of worship, a free grammar school, a charity school for girls, one national and one Lancasterian school, and several Sunday schools. The manufactory of calicoes, or cotton goods, is very extensive. There are now two weekly markets, on Wednesday and Saturday, and five annual fairs. Population 21,040. 24 miles from Manchester.

BLACK CREEK, a river of the United States, in South Carolina, runs into the Pedee, in Liberty county.

BLACK HEAD, a cape on the east coast of Ireland.—3d. On the south coast of Ireland, on the west side of Kinsale harbour.—3d. On the west coast of Ireland, on the south side of the entrance into Galway bay.—4th, On the west coast of Scotland, in the county of Wigton, 6 miles W. S. W. Stranraer.—5th, Of England, off the coast of Cornwall. Long. 6. 4. W. Lat. 56. 1. N.

BLACKHEATH, a hamlet of England, on an open and elevated situation, at the north-west extremity of the county of Kent. In the vicinity is Morden College, an hospital erected by Sir John Morden, several years preceding his death, in 1700, for the reception of decayed merchants. Many fine villas stand on the heath, which has been the scene of some remarkable transactions in history.

BLACKLEY, a township of England, in the county of Lancaster. Population 2911.

BLACKNESS, a village of Scotland, in the county of Linlithgow, on the southern banks of the Forth. 15 miles W. Edinburgh.

BLACKPOOL, a straggling village of England, on the coast of the county of Lancaster.

BLACK RIVER, a river of Ireland, which runs into Lough Corrib.

BLACK RIVER, a river of the United States, in Vermont, runs into Lake Memphremagog.—2d, Another runs into the Connecticut at Springfield.—3d, In New York, runs into Lake Ontario above Sackett's harbour, in Hungry bay, after a northerly course of 120 miles.—4th, In North Carolina, joins Cape Fear river on the east, 23 miles above Wilmington.—5th, In Ohio, runs into Lake Erie, 30 miles E. Sandusky bay.—6th, In the Michigan territory, runs into Lake Michigan, north of the river St. Joseph's.—The name of various other insignificant streams.

BLACK RIVER, BIG, a river which rises in the heights near the sources of the Gasconade, and falls into White river, 60 miles below the town of Lawrence, in about Long. 92. W. Lat. 36. N.

BLACK ROCK, a small island near the south-east coast of Ireland.

BLACK ROCK, a considerable village of Ireland, on the south side of Dublin bay, much resorted to for sea-bathing.

BLACKROCK, a post village of the United States, in Niagara county, New York, on the Niagara, 2 miles below Buffalo.

BLACKROVE, or BLACKRON, a town of England, county of Lancaster. Population 2436.

BLACKSDON POINT, a cape of Ireland, county of Mayo, at the entrance into Blacksod bay.

BLACKSTONES, a village of Ireland, in the county of Kerry.

BLACKWALL, a hamlet of England, county of Middlesex, adjoining to London, on the east side of the Thames.

BLACK WARRIOR, or CABO, a river of the United States, in Alabama, enters the Tombigbee from the east, 80 miles above St. Stephen's.

BLACKWATER, a river of England, in the county of Essex, which flows into Blackwater bay.—2d, Also a river of England, in Dorset-shire, which joins the Stour near its mouth.—3d, A river of Ireland, which falls into the sea at Youghall bay.—4th, A river of Ireland, which runs into Lough Neagh.

BLACKWATER, a town of Ireland, county of Armagh, on the Blackwater, 5 miles N. N. W. Armagh.

BLACKWATER, a river of the United States, in New Hampshire, flows into the Contacook, in Hopkinton.

BLACAWATER, a river of the United States, in Virginia, joins Nottoway river, 5 miles above the boundary of North Carolina.

BLADEN, a county of the United States, in North Carolina, on the south side of Cape Fear river. Population 5671. Slaves 1908. Chief town, Elizabethtown.

BLADENSBURG, a post township of the United States, in Prince George's county, Maryland, on the east branch of the Potomac, at the forks.

BLAESAVON, a village of England, in Monmouthshire, near Abergavenny.

BLAIN, a town of France, department of the Lower Loire. Population 15000.

BLAIR ATTOUL, a village and parish of Scotland, in the county of Perth. Pop. 2402.

BLAIR GOWRIE, a village and parish of Scotland, county of Perth, from which it is distant 17 miles. Population 2253.

BLAIZE, CAPE, on the coast of West Florida, in the Gulf of Mexico.

BLAKEY, a post township of the United States, in Mobile county, Alabama, on the Tensaw, or eastern outlet of Mobile river, 6 miles from Mobile bay, 10 E. N. E. Mobile. Lat. 30. 43. N. It is a new town, laid out in 1813.

BLAKENEY, a village and parish of England, in Norfolk. Population 803.

BLAMONT, a town of France, department of the Meurthe. Population 16000.

BLANC-BERRY, LE, a town of France, department of the Indre, situated on the Creuse, which divides it into two equal parts. Population 3350. The trade of the town consists in wine and fish.

BLANCKENBERGH, a town of Flanders, between Ostend and Sluys. Pop. 1920.

BLANCO, CAPE, the most westerly point of the coast of Africa, discovered by the Portuguese in 1441. Long. 16. 58. E. Lat. 20. 47. N.—The name of various other capes in different parts of the world.

BLANDFORD, or BLANDFORD FORUM, a neat and well built town and parish of England, in the county of Dorset, on the river Stour, noted for an extensive manufacture of shirt buttons. It has frequently suffered from fire. Population 2443. 103 miles W. London.

BLANDFORD, a town in Oxford county, Upper Canada, on the Thames.—2d, A post township of the United States, in Hampton county, Massachusetts, 16 miles W. Springfield. Population 1613.—3d, A township in Prince George county, Virginia.

BLANLS, a small seaport town of Spain, in Catalonia, with a small harbour. 34 miles N. E. Barcelona.

BRAGY, a town of France, in Normandy. Houses 700.

BRANKENBURG, a town of the Prussian states, 20 miles S. E. Cologne.

BRANKENBURG, the chief town of a principality of the same name in Germany. Population 2700. 9 miles S. Halberstadt.

BRANKENSE, a village of Denmark, on the Elbe. Population 2000. 9 miles from Hamburg.

BRANKENHAYN, a town of Saxony. Population 1840. 9 miles S. W. Jena.

BRANTYRE, a village and parish of Scotland, in the county of Lanark.

BRANZEY, a village of Ireland, county of Cork. Houses 90. 25 miles W. Cork.

BRAS, SAN, a seaport of Mexico, on the Pacific ocean, province of Guadaluajara, at the mouth of the Santiago. Long. 105. 2. W. Lat. 21. 32. N.

BRASKETS, or FERRITERS ISLANDS, a cluster of islets in the Atlantic ocean, near the W. coast of Ireland.

BRATHEURIN, a town of Wirtemberg, situated on the Aeh. Population 1750.

BRAYE, an old town of France, in Guienne, on the Gironde. Population 4700. 21 miles N. Bourdeaux.

BRAZEY BAY, a bay in the English channel, on the coast of the county of Cornwall.

BRECHINGLEY, a town and parish of England, in Surrey. Population 1137. 20 miles S. London.

BRECHINGTON, a village and parish of England. Pop. 570. 6 miles N. Oxford.

BRICHEROD, a town of the Prussian states. Population 1900. 9 miles S. W. Nordhausen.

BRISWYK, a village of the Netherlands, in Holland, with 1200 inhabitants.

BRINKEN, a province of Sweden, in South Gothland, having Smaland on the north, Schonen on the west, and the Baltic on the south and east. It is 100 miles long, and 26 broad. Population 67,200.

BRUNHEIM, or BLINDHEIM, a village of the Bavarian dominions, in the circle of the Upper Danube, which gives name to a great battle fought in its vicinity, on the 13th August 1704, by the English and Imperialists, under the duke of Marlborough, with the French and Bavarians, who were completely defeated. 8 miles S. W. Donawert.

BRERE, a town of France, department of the Indre and Loire. Population 2550.

BRESSINGTON, a market town of Ireland, county of Wicklow, 30 miles N. W. Wicklow. Population 400.

BREYSTADT, a small mining town of Bohemia, 75 miles W. Prague.

BRUNSCATELL, a town of the Prussian states, 6 miles W. Deux-Ponts. Population 1300.

BRIND HARBOUR, a bay on the south coast of Ireland, in the county of Cork.

BRON ISLAND, off the coast of Rhode Island, 24 miles S. S. W. Newport. It is about 7 miles long and 4 broad. Population 722. Long. 71. 30. W. Lat. 41. 8. N.

BLOCKLEY, a township of the United States, in Philadelphia county, Pennsylvania, on the Schuylkill, 3 miles W. Philadelphia. Population 1616.

BLOCKZIEL, or BLOCKZELSCHANS, a town of the Netherlands, 28 miles S. Leuwarden. Population 1401.

BLOIS, an ancient city of France, in the Orleanois, department of the Loir and Cher, on the Loire, which is here crossed by an elegant stone bridge. The streets are narrow, and many of the houses low. The castle stands on a rock overhanging the river. The principal public buildings are the cathedral, the Jesuits' college (now a provincial school) and the Episcopal palace, the terrace of which affords a very pleasant walk. The trade of the town consists in wine, brandy, corn, wool, and fruit; there are manufactures of serge, stamine, and other cloths, as well as of hardware and glass. Population 13,000. 109 miles S. S. W. Paris.

BLOEMENDAAL, a pleasant village of the Netherlands. Population 1060.

BLOEVE, a small island of European Russia, in the gulf of Bothnia. Long. 20. 52. E. Lat. 63. 31. 55. N.

BLONDVACRY, a town of France, department of the Upper Vienne. Houses 540.

BLOODY FARLAND POINT, on the north-west coast of Ireland, county of Donegal.

BLOWITZ, a market town of Bohemia, 10 miles S. S. E. Tepl. Population 1260.

BLOZHEIM, a town of France, department of the Upper Rhine. Population 1500.

BLUEFIELDS BAY, on the south-west coast of the island of Jamaica.

BLUE MOUNTAINS, a range of mountains in the island of New Holland, north-west of the British settlement at Port Jackson.

BLUE RIDGE, the easternmost ridge of the Allegheny mountains, in Pennsylvania and Virginia, about 130 miles from the Atlantic, and rising to the height of 4000 feet.

BLUE STONE, a river of the United States, in Virginia, which runs into the Kenhaway, in Giles county.

BLUEWATER, a river of the United States, in the Missouri, which runs north into the Missouri, 9 miles below Kansas river.

BLYSOON, a river of South Wales, in the county of Pembroke, which joins the Tyvy.

BLYTHBOROUGH, a town and parish of England, county of Suffolk. Population 513.

BLYTNE, a market town and parish of England. Pop. 3456. 3 miles N. Nottingham.

BLYTNE, a seaport town of England, county of Northumberland, at the mouth of the river Blythe. The chief trade is in coals and salt. Population 1803.

BLYTNE, four rivers of England; one runs into the German ocean, near Southwold; another into the sea at Tame, county of Warwick; another into the sea at Blythe, county of Northumberland; another into the Trent, about 6 miles E. Ragleby.

BOAN, a town of Hindostan, in Orissa, on the river Mahanuddy, 100 miles W. Cuttack. Long. 84. 18. E. Lat. 20. 50. N.

ROBBIO, a small town of Upper Italy, on the "Trebbia," where that river receives the waters of the Bobbio. It is surrounded with walls, and has six gates. Population 3400. 24 miles S. S. E. Pavia.

BOMER, a river of Lower Silesia, in the principality of Schweidnitz, which falls into the Oder, near Crossen.

BOBENSBERG, a small town of the Prussian states, 6 miles S. Crossen, 70 E. S. E. Berlin.

BONIGER, a town and fortress of Hindostan, circular of Cicacole, 32 miles W. Cicacole.

BONINGEN, a town of the Bavarian states, 9 miles S. Augsburg. Population 1400.

BOBRYTSK, a small town of European Russia, on the river Berezhina.

Boca Chica, a narrow passage into the port of Carthage.

Boca del Drago, the strait of the Atlantic ocean which divides the island of Trinidad from the continent of America.

BOCAS DOZ, RIO DE, a large river of South America, in Brazil, which falls into the Tocantins.

BOCHNIA, a town of Austrian Galicia, in the circle of the same name, famous for its mines of salt.

BOCKHOLT, a town of the Prussian states, 36 miles W. S. W. Munster. Pop. 2600.

BOCKING, a town of England, county of Essex, situated on the river Pant. Population 2706.

ROCKY, a town of European Russia, in the government of Grodno. Population 1600.

BODEGRAVEN, a village of the Netherlands, between Leyden and Werden. Population 1700.

BODENWERDER, a town of Hanover, on the Weser, 8 miles N. Bevern. Pop. 1300.

Bodio, a village of Switzerland, canton of the Ticino.

BODMIN, a market town and borough of England, in the county of Cornwall, consisting at present principally of one wide street, extending nearly a mile from east to west. It extending nearly a mile from east to west. It has a spacious church, a county jail, and a bridewell. The principal manufacture carried on is in serge. Bodmin has had the privilege of returning members to parliament over since the reign of Edward I. Population 2902. 8 miles S. S. W. Camelford.

BODNOC, a river of Hungary, which rises in the Carpathian mountains, and falls into the Turkey, 15 miles S. Smyrna. Long. 26. 35.

E. Lat. 38. 16. N.

Bog, a river of European Russia, which issues from a lake on the N. frontier of Pod-

ROSENKOPK, a town of Denmark, on a bay on the island of Funen.

BOGGAM, a town of Hindoostan, province of Behar. Long. 84. 30. E. Lat. 27. 10. N.

BOOR, a river of Scotland, in Aberdeenshire, which enters the Deveron, near Huntly.

BOGILCUND, a district of Hindostan, province of Allahabad, situated about the 24th degree of northern latitude.

BOSLION, a market town of the Austrian empire, province of Istria, 27 miles S. S. E. Trieste.

BOOLIRORE, the capital of a district of the same name, on the Ganges. It is a handsome and flourishing town. Long. 86. 50. E. Lat. 25. 11. N.

• BONNA, a small river of Upper Italy, which falls into the Tosa, near Domo d'Ossola.

BOSNOR, a village of England, on the coast of Sussex, 66 miles S. Chichester.

BOBROVNIKOV, a considerable town of European Russia, in the government of Charkov. Population 6800. 64 miles N. N. W. Charkov.

BOCONODITZE, a town of Russia in Europe. It consists of eight principal, and six cross streets. Population 5000. 456 miles S. S. E. St Petersburg.

Bogorodsk, a small town of European Russia, 28 miles E. Moscow. Pop. 500.

BOGOTA, Rio de, a large river of South America, in the new kingdom of Granada, which rises near the city of Santa Fe, and precipitates itself with a thundering noise down a narrow outlet, near the farm of Tequendama, which gives name to this remarkable fall.—Another river of South America, province of Atacames.

BOGWANGOLA, a large and prosperous trading town of Bengal, district of Moorshedabad, on the south bank of the Ganges. Long. 88. 29. E. Lat. 24. 21. N.

BOGWANPORE, a town of Hindostan, province of Behar. Long. 83. 46. E. Lat. 25. N.

BOHAIN, a town of France, in Picardy, on the Scheldt. Population 2209.

BOHEMIA, a kingdom of Europe, forming part of the Austrian dominions, and situated nearly in the heart of Germany. This kingdom comprehends that tract of country which has Bavaria on the W., the kingdom of Saxony on the N., Silesia and Moravia on the E., and Austria proper on the S.; stretching from Lat. 46. 30. to 51. 5. N., and from Long. 12. to 15. 60. E. Its greatest length is 200 miles, its greatest breadth 150, and its superficial extent about 20,000 English square miles. It is separated by the river Moldau into two parts nearly equal: The other principal river is the Elbe. It has been divided since 1751 into the sixteen following circles, exclusive of the metropolis: Prague, which ranks as a separate district; Buntzlau, Königgratz, Bittschow, Chrudim, Czeslau, Brdweis, Tabor, Pilsch, Písek, Klattau, Saatz, Elnbogen (including the small district of Fogg), Leutomeritz, Jaksowitz, Beraun, and Haurzum.

Bohemia is surrounded on every side by high mountains. The soil is fertile, however, and yields corn, pulse, hops, flax, hemp, fruit, and all kinds of garden vegetables in abundance. Saffron is produced in a smaller proportion; and wine, though made of an excellent flavour, is raised but in small quantity. Nearly one-third of the country is covered with woods, which, besides furnishing all kinds of game (particularly pheasants), afford superior facilities for the establishment of manufactures. The fishing in the rivers is likewise very productive; pearls are found in the Ottawa, and occasionally in the Moldau. It formerly had mines of gold; and still has mines of silver, tin, iron, quicksilver, cobalt, zinc, arsenic, bismuth, calamine, antimony, sulphur, saltpetre, vitriol, alum, and pit coal; garnets, sapphires, topazes, hyacinths, chrysolites, amethysts, opals, chalcodons, cornelians, and agates, are also found. The Bohemian diamond is a species of rock crystal. This country abounds likewise in marble, alabaster, porphyry, jasper, asbestos, serpentine, gypsum, and moonstone, as well as in porcelain earth and granite. Mineral waters are found in various situations. Bohemia has manufactures of yarn, linen, cambric, veils, thread, lace, stockings, ribbons, printed linen, wax-cloth, woollen stuffs, glass, mirrors, glass pearls, garnets, and other minerals (exclusive of metals); also other manufactures, such as cotton and silk stuffs, hats, paper, leather, wooden articles, musical instruments, alum, vitriol, gunpowder, &c. Besides these, there are exported great quantities of metals, both raw and wrought, vegetable products, cattle, and wool. The principal articles of import are salt, wine, colonial products, spirituous liquors, silk, Spanish wool, cotton, quicksilver, iron, lead, hardware, jewels, trinkets, and dye-stuffs. The established religion of Bohemia is the Roman Catholic, which, after the banishment of the Hussites and Protestants, in the 15th and 17th centuries, was almost the only one in the kingdom, except the Jewish. The total number of dissenters from the church of Rome is about 100,000, of whom 46,000 are Jews, 34,000 Calvinists, 11,000 Lutherans, and the remnant of the Greek church and other persuasions. Population in 1811, 3,137,495.

BOHEMIA, a river of the United States, in Maryland, which runs into Elk river, 11 miles below Elkton.

BONNENKIRCH, a market town of Württemberg, amid the Suabian Alps. Pop. 1400.

BONON, or BOON, one of the most southern of the Philippine islands.

BORUS, or BARUS, a government of Sweden, in West Gothland, now forming the greater part of the province of Gotheborg.

BOJADOR, Cape, stretches far into the Atlantic, beyond the southern limit of the kingdom of Morocco. It is very tempestuous. Long. 14. 20. W. Lat. 26. 16. N.

BOJANO, a town of Naples, 42 miles N. Naples.

BOJANOWA, a town of the Prussian states, grand duchy of Posen. Population 2700.

BOIS-LE-DUC, a strongly fortified town of the Netherlands, in Dutch Brabant, situated at the conflux of the rivers Dommel and Aa. The town is entered by four gates, and is approached by water at three openings. The cathedral church, built in 1360, is one of the finest structures in the Netherlands. Of the four parish churches, there is only one now appropriated to divine service, namely, that of St Catherine, the others being used as granaries and warehouses. A considerable trade is carried on, particularly in corn; they have also manufactures of knives and needles. Commerce is greatly promoted by the many canals which pass through the town. This city surrendered in 1794 to the French under General Pichegru, without much opposition. In January 1814, it surrendered to the Prussian army under General Bulow. 42 miles S. S. E. Amsterdam.

BOISSERON D'ARMONTEL, a town of France, department of the Tarn. Pop. 3100.

BOITZENBURG, a town of Germany, 33 miles E. S. E. Hamburg. Houses 230.

BOLABOLA, or BOLABORA, one of the Society islands, in the South Pacific ocean, about 24 miles in circumference. Long. 151. 52. W. Lat. 16. 32. N.

BOLL, a large town of Asiatic Turkey, in Natolia, 140 miles E. Constantinople.

BOLINGBROKE, a town of England, county of Lincoln. Population 753.

BOLKENHAYN, a town of Silesia. Population 1350. 10 miles N. W. Schweidnitz.

BOLL, a small town and castle of Switzerland, 10 miles S. Fribourg.

BOLLEBEK, a town of Normandy, department of the Lower Seine.

BOLLENT, a town of France, 10 miles N. Orange. Population 4050.

BOLIGNA, the second city in point of magnitude and opulence, in the Ecclesiastical states. It is six Italian miles in circuit, and lies at the foot of the Appennines, between the rivers Savena and Reno, in a rich and fertile valley. Here is a number of elegant churches and cloisters, which are adorned in the interior with beautiful paintings. The palace, the residence of the Pope's legate, and of several other personages of distinction, is more remarkable for size than for beauty. Among the other public edifices may be noticed the two towers degli Asinelli and de Garisendi; the former 371 feet in height; the latter originally 130 feet in height, but now reduced to nearly 70. Bologna is of considerable note in Italian history, from the number of illustrious families of which it is the residence. It was too the seat of the school of Caracci, who restored a correct taste in painting, after Michael Angelo and Raphael. Here is a famous university, which had the honour of first drawing the attention of Europe to the Roman law. Bologna contains manufactures of cloth, silk stockings, and other stuffs; satins, damasks, taffeta, velvet, gauze, craps, and linen. The other products of Bologna and its environs are fruit, wine, the well known soap-ball, cheese, oil, and honey. The French entered this city in 1796. It is now restored to the Pope. 180 miles N. N. W. Rome.

BOLOGNESE, or LEGATION OF BOLOGNA, a province of Italy, in the Pope's dominions, having the Ferrarese on the N., Romagna on the E., Tuscany on the S., and Modena on the W.; and comprising 300 towns and villages, with 200,000 souls.

BOLSCHAJA RIEKA, a river of Kamtschatka, which falls into the sea of Okhotsk, in Lat. 54. 52. N.—The town and fortress of Bolschetsk, consisting of 37 houses, and 235 inhabitants, is situated on its banks. Long. 157. E. Lat. 53. N.

BOLSENA, a small town of the Pope's dominions, 8 miles S. Orvieto.

BOLSOVER, a town of England, county of Derby. Population 1333. 5 miles E. Chesterfield, and 148 N. London.

BOLSWAARD, a very old town of the Netherlands, in West Friesland. It carries on a thriving trade in butter, and in fine woolen stuffs. Population 2300.

BOLTON, a village of England, in the North Riding of Yorkshire, 10 miles S. E. Richmond.

BOLTON, a town of Richelieu county, Lower Canada, on Lake Memphremagog, S. E. Montreal. Pop. 800.—2d, A post township of the United States, in Chittenden county, Vermont, on Onion river, 18 miles N. W. Montpelier. Pop. 249.—3d, A post township in Worcester county, Massachusetts, 53 miles W. Boston. Pop. 1637.—4th, A post township in Tolland county, Connecticut, 11 miles E. Hartford. Pop. 700.—5th, A post township in Warren county, New York, on Lake George, 14 miles N. Caldwell. Pop. 726.

BOLTON LE MOOR, a town of England, in the county of Lancaster, consisting of two townships, Great and Little Bolton. The increase of this town has been principally owing to its manufactures of fustian, muslin, and calico. Two markets are held here on Saturdays and Mondays, and two annual fairs. Besides its ancient and handsome parish church, there is a modern church and chapel in Little Bolton, nine dissenting chapels, a Catholic chapel, and a grammar school. There is a dispensary, public library, and news room, besides other charitable and useful institutions. Population of Great Bolton, 22,037, of Little Bolton 9258. 11 miles N. Manchester.

BOMAA, a port on the coast of Elicay, 7 leagues E. Cape Razatini. Lat. 6. 10. S.

BOMBAY, an island on the west coast of Hindostan, containing the city of the same name, which is the capital of all the British settlements on that side of the peninsula. It is 6½ miles long and about 1 mile broad, is separated from the mainland by a narrow strait; and it forms, along with the neighbouring islands of Colabah, Salsette, Butcher's island, Elephanta, and Carajah, a commodious and well sheltered harbour. Near the southern extremity of the island of Colabah, which is separated from that of Bombay by a narrow strait, stands the light-house, which is of a circular form. It rises from the sea to the height of 130 feet, and shows its light at the distance of 21 miles.

The city of Bombay is about a mile in length, and a quarter of a mile in breadth. It is surrounded by strong fortifications. The castle is a regular quadrangle, with numerous works, particularly towards the sea; and the whole is encompassed by a broad deep ditch, which can be floated at pleasure. In the centre of the town is the Green, a large open space, which is surrounded with many large and well built houses. Here is the English church, an extremely handsome edifice; to the left of which is the government-house, which has a shewy and magnificent appearance; on the right is the bazaar or marketplace; and at the entrance to this street stands the theatre, which is a handsome building. This part of the town suffered greatly by fire. Besides the English church, there are numerous temples for the worship of the Hindoos, mosques for the Mahometans, and a synagogue for the Jews. The Portuguese Roman Catholics have also several chapels; and a Presbyterian church has been lately established for the benefit of the Scots resident in Bombay.

From the situation of Bombay, it commands an extensive commerce with the countries situated in the Persian and Arabic gulfs, with both the western and eastern coasts of India, as well as with the islands in the Eastern ocean, and with China. Of the trade to China, the principal commodity is cotton-wool; the other articles of which the trade of Bombay consists are sandal-wood and pepper, the produce of Malabar and the other adjacent countries; gums, drugs, and pearls from Arabia, Abyssinia, and Persia; elephants' teeth, corallians, and other produce from Cambay; storks' firs, birds' nests, and other articles from the Maldives and Laccadive islands. With Europe also, and with different parts of America, Bombay carries on a considerable trade. The imports from Europe are principally articles for the use of the natives and Europeans, consisting mostly of the finer manufactures of Europe, piece goods, and treasure. The art of ship-building is carried to great perfection by the Perses, who are accounted excellent ship-carpenters. There are excellent rope-walks, which are equal to any in England, with the exception of the king's-yard at Portsmouth; and its dock-yard is large and well contrived, and has abundance of naval stores, together with large quantities of timber for building and repairing ships, and stores for all kinds of smith's work. The new dock, constructed by Major Cotper, is a truly magnificent work, both as to design and execution.

The inhabitants of this island are estimated at to amount to 220,000, of whom about three-fourths are Hindoos, 8000 Perses, 8000 Mahometans, and 3000 or 4000 Jews: the Portuguese are also found in considerable numbers. The Perses are an active and industrious race, and have attained to a high degree of consideration and opulence. Besides the Perses, many considerable Portuguese, Armenian, and Hindoo merchants, reside at Bombay, who, along with property, have acquired the reputation of great integrity.

Bombay was obtained by the Portuguese in 1530; it was ceded to Britain in 1601, and transferred to the East India company in 1668. 620 miles N. W. Seringapatam, 770 from Madras, and 1300 from Calcutta. Long. 72. 38. E. Lat. 18. 50. N.

BOMMEI, a town in Dutch Guelderland, on an island formed by the Maese and the Waal. Pop. 2900. 7 miles N. Bois-le-Duc.

BOMMELWAERT, an island of the Netherlands, in Dutch Guelderland, which is formed by the waters of the Maese and the Waal, and is about 15 miles long, and 6 broad.

BOMMESE, NEW, a small fortified place of the Netherlands, province of Zealand.

BONA, a considerable seaport of Algiers, in the province of Constantina, with a commodious harbour. It was one of the settlements of the French African company, established during the reign of Louis XIV.: but the intercourse with this coast having been interrupted by the revolutionary war, England, in 1805, obtained the cession of Bona and the other parts belonging to the African company. 66 miles S. N. E. Constantina. Long. 7. 45. E. Lat. 36. 52. N.

BONANZA, a town of Spain, the harbour of Seville, near the mouth of the Guadalquivir.

BONAVENTURE, an island, or rather barren rock, of Lower Canada, in the district of Gaspe.

BONAVINTA, the largest of the Cape de Verde islands, next to St. Jago, being about 48 miles in circumference. Northern side, according to captain Cook, Long. 22. 50. E. Lat. 10. 17. N.

BONAVISTA, CAPE AND BAY OF, lie on the east side of Newfoundland. The cape lies in Long. 52. 32. W. Lat. 48. 15. N.

BONAWAST, a small town of Hindostan, in North Canara. Houses 500.

BONDORF, the chief town of a county of the same name in Sussia, 23 miles N. Zurich.

BONDOR, a kingdom of Central Africa, situated on the western bank of the Faleme.

BONGHIN, a town and district of Hindostan, 24 miles E. Hyderabad.

BONI, an island in the Eastern seas, on the N. E. coast of Waygiou.

BONI BAY, called Buggess Bay by the Europeans, a spacious bay of the Eastern seas, on the S. coast of the island of Celebes.

BONIFACIO, a seaport town of Corsica, on the S. coast. It is neatly built, and tolerably fortified. Population 3170. 92 miles S. by land from Bastia.

BONIFACIO, CAPO DI, the south-east point of the island of Corsica.

BONN, a neat town of the Prussian states, in the grand duchy of the Lower Rhine, on the left bank of that river. It has four parish churches. It was formerly very strongly fortified, but was taken in 1793 by Marlborough, after a severe bombardment. 14 miles S. S. E. Cologne.

BONNAT, a town of France, department of La Creuse. Population 2050.

BONNE, a neat town of the Sardinian states, 10 miles E. S. E. Geneva. Population 2600.

BONNET DE JOUX, ST., a town of France, in Dauphiny, with 1320 inhabitants.

BONNET ISLANDS, five small islands in the Mergui archipelago. Lat. 10. 29. N.

BONNET LA RIVIERE, ST., a town of France, department of the Upper Vienne. Population 1120.

BONNET LACHAMPE, ST., a village of France, department of the Puy de Dome. Population 1320.

BONNET LE CHATEAU, ST., a town of France, department of the Loire. Population 1500.

BONNET, ST., a town of France, 37 miles N. Grenoble. Population 1500.

BONNETABLE, a town of France, department of the Sarthe. Population 4600.

BONNEVAL, a town of France, department of the Eure and Loire, on the Loire. Population 1600.

BONNEVILLE, a town of Savoy, 14 miles N. E. Agnecy. Population 1000.

BONNEVEUX, a town of France, department of the Vaucluse. Population 2500.

BONNEHEIM, a town of Wirttemberg, near the Neckar. Population 1800.

BONOA, a small island in the Eastern seas, Long. 120. 12. E. Lat. 2. 59. S.

BONSALL, a town and parish of England, in the county of Derby. Population 1396.

BONTHEIN, a town and district of the island of Celebes. Long. 120. 9. E. Lat. 5. 20. S.

BOOBY ISLAND, a small island in the West Indies, near St. Christopher's.—It is the name also of two rocky islets.

BOODICOTTA, a town of Hindostan, in Mysore, 30 miles S. E. Bangalore.

BOODROOM, or BODROUX, a small town of Asia Minor, in Caramania, situated at the head of a deep bay. It is supposed to occupy the site of the ancient Halicarnassus.

Many relics of antiquity are to be observed here, and in the vicinity. Vestiges of the ancient walls may be discerned; and above the town are the remains of a theatre, measuring about 240 feet in diameter, which appears to have had 36 rows of marble seats. Long. 27. 20. E. Lat. 37. N.

BOOEROOGE, a town of Hindostan, and capital of the province of Cutch. It has a considerable trade. Long. 69. 45. E. Lat. 23. 15. N.

BOEM, a town of Brabant, on the Nethe, 10 miles S. Antwerp. Population 3430.

BOONAH, a town of Asiatic Turkey, on the Black sea. Long. 33. E. Lat. 40. 44. N.

BOODRY, a town of Hindostan, province of Ajmeer. Long. 73. 35. E. Lat. 25. 28. N.
BOONE, a county of the United States, in Kentucky, on the Ohio. Population 3000. Slaves 500.

BOONSHAN, a city of Persia, province of Irak. Population 12,000.

BOONSHAN, a town and district of Hindostan, in Bengal. Long. 80. 33. E. Lat. 23. 32. N.

BOOTAN, an extensive region of Northern Hindostan, lying between Bengal and Tibet, principally between the 26th and 28th degrees of N. lat., supposed to be 200 miles from E. to W. and 60 from N. to S. Notwithstanding this country is very mountainous, and many parts of it extremely cold, it is still productive and highly cultivated, the slope of the mountains being cut into terraces for this purpose. As it is situated without the tropics, it is free from the periodical rains; and the climate is in general moderate, calculated to bring forth both European and Asiatic fruits and vegetables.

BOOTH GOLDSHAW, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 613.

BOOTH, HIGHER and LOWER, two townships of England, in Lancashire. Population 3172, and 1513.

BOOTHBAY, a post township of the United States, in Lincoln county, Maine. Pop. 1582.

BOOTLE, a township of England, county of Lancaster. Population 800.

BOPAL, a town and small territory of Hindostan, province of Malwah. Long. 77. 37. E. Lat. 23. 16. N.

BOFFINGER, a town of Suabia, on the Eger. Population 1600. 23 miles N.N.E. Ulm.

BOPPART, a town of the Prussian states, 8 miles S. Coblenz. Population 1500.

BOQUES CREEK, a river of the United States, in Ohio, which joins the Scioto.

BORAS, a town of Sweden, in West Gothland, on the river Wisla. Population 2000.

BORBA, a town of Portugal, province of Alentejo. Population 2700.

BORCK, a town of the Prussian states, grand duchy of Posen. Population 1300.

BORCELOE, a village of Dutch Brabant, 42 miles W. N. W. Munster. Pop. 1000.

BORP, a town of France, department of the Correze. Population 1800.

BORRERTOWN, a post township of the United States, in Burlington county, New Jersey, on Delaware river, 6 miles below Trenton, 24 above Philadelphia. It contains about 100 houses, and is the seat of an academy.

BORREK, LES, a town of France, department of the Arriege. Houses 350.

BORRISMAN, one of the smaller Shetland islands, near the W. coast of Mainland.

BORRAT, two of the smaller Hebrides, on the coast of Scotland.

BORRETTA, a small town of Italy, province of Iodi, on the river Lambrò.—Also a large village on the Mincio, to the N. of the town of Mantua.—The same also of several other small places in Italy.

BORCHOM, a fortress of Sweden, on the W. coast of the island of Oeland.

BORCHOLSHAGEN, a town of Westphalia. Population 1000.

BORCNE, a lake of the United States, in Louisiana, communicating with Lake Ponchartrain, 40 miles long, by about 16 broad.

BORGO, an old seaport town of the Russian dominions, government of Finland. Long. 25. 40. E. Lat. 60. 23. N.

BORGO DI SESTA, a populous town of Italy, duchy of Milan, 50 miles N. N. E. Turin.

BORGO DI ST. SOLENO, a town of Italy, in Tuscany, 48 miles E. S. E. Florence.

BORGO DI VAL DI TARO, a small town of Italy, 23 miles S. W. Parma.

BORGO DI VAL SERANA, a handsome market town of Tyrol, on the river Brenta.

BORGOVARE, a small town of Italy, in the duchy of Mantua, 7 miles S. S. W. Mantua.

BORGO FRANCO, a town of Piedmont, province of Ivrea, with 1400 inhabitants.

BORGWOM, or VAREM, a small town of the Netherlands, 10 miles W. Liege.

BORJA, a town of Spain, in Aragon, 34 miles W. N. W. Saragossa. Pop. 3000.

BORISOGLENSK, a town of European Russia, government of Jaroslav. Population 3000.—Also a town of European Russia, in the government of Tambov. Pop. 3000.

BORISSOW, a small town of European Russia, on the Beresina, 36 miles E. Minsk.

BORKEE, a town of Westphalia, 30 miles W. Munster. Population 2400.

BORKUM, an island of Hanover, on the coast of East Friesland, situated between the mouths of the East and West Ems, 12 miles in circumference.

BORVES, a town of France, department of the Var. Population 1320.

BORNIA, or BORMIDA, the name of two rivers in Piedmont, which join the Tanaro.

BORMIO, a town of Italy, at the influx of the Frollo into the Adda. Population 1000. 30 miles S. E. Coire, 45 N. W. Trent.

BORNA, a town of Saxony, 12 miles S. S. E. Leipzig. It has manufactures of wool and earthenware.

BORNEO, an island of Asia, which, next to New Holland, is the largest of any in the known world, extending about 800 miles in length, by 700 in breadth. The climate is in general temperate; on the west coast heavy rains prevail from November until May; and the thermometer ranges from 82 to 94 degrees. Violent earthquakes also are sometimes experienced. The coast, for 10 or 15 miles inland, is mostly marshy, a circumstance which renders the climate unhealthy to Europeans. Part of the island is mountainous: in the centre is an extensive ridge called the Crystal Mountains, from the abundance of crystal found among them.

Borneo, Banjaraning, and Passur, are the principal rivers. Gold is found in considerable abundance. There are also diamond mines; and diamonds are wrought for in the channel of rivers. Iron, copper, and tin, also abound; and pearls, and another of pearl shells, are obtained on the northern coast. The vegetables of this island are numerous and valuable, consisting of delicious fruits, pepper, the camphor tree, and one which produces a kind of resin called dammen. A breed of large cattle, called liang, frequents the north part of the island, and flocks of deer and wild hogs feed on the spacious plains; but the most singular quadruped, if such it may be called, inhabiting Borneo, is the ouran-outang, an animal bearing an intimate resemblance in figure and propensities to the human species. The salangane, or swallow, which constructs an edible nest, and bird of paradise, are common here. Borneo is inhabited by various races of men, hitherto indistinctly characterized by the names of Dejakese, Horafioras, Biajos, Idan, Ma-root, and Papuans. They are generally of the most barbarous habits, and have many cruel and superstitious customs. Many Chinese are settled here, who carry on a very active commerce, and engross the whole trade of the island; and the coast is inhabited by a mixture of Malays, Javanese, and the natives of Celebes. The total population is calculated at three millions. Borneo is divided into several districts, governed by independent sovereigns, who frequently wage war with each other. Several of the European powers have endeavoured to establish colonial settlements in Borneo; but with the exception of the Dutch, none of these have had any permanent success. During the late war, the British trade was infested by pirates from this island. An attack was in consequence made on Samblas in the year 1812, which failed, and the British were repulsed with considerable loss. A new attempt was made in 1813, and attended with complete success. Long. from 109. to 119. E. Lat. 4. N. to 7. 25. S.

BORNEO, a seaport and capital of the kingdom of Borneo, on the north-west part of the island, 10 miles distant from the sea. The houses, which occupy the banks on both sides of a river, are supported on posts, and are ascended with stairs; and the chief communication is by means of boats in front of the houses. Considerable trade is carried on between Borneo and China in black wood, exported for furniture, clove bark, camphor, cinis, pepper, dammen, and birds' nests. Long. 114. 44. E. Lat. 4. 56. N.

BOHNEM, a town of the Prussian states, between Bonn and Briel. Population 1100. —Also a village of Germany, 1 mile N. E. Frankfurt; and a small town of the Netherlands, in Brabant, 8 miles N. E. Dendermonde.

BORNUUM, an island of Denmark, in the Baltic, about 100 miles from the outermost point of Zealand, in length 30 miles, and in breadth 20. Long. 15. E. Lat. 55. 10. N.

BORRÓS, a town of Spain, province of Seville, with about 3000 inhabitants.

BORROR, an extensive kingdom in the interior of Africa. Its limits are very uncertain; but on the N. it appears to be bounded by the desert of Bilma and of Lybia; E. by countries unknown, probably desert; S. by Beryoo and Begherme; W. by Cassina and Ashen. The commerce of Borrour is chiefly carried on by the merchants of Fezzan, who set out from Mourzouk, which forms a central point for the interior commerce of Eastern Africa. The imports into Borrour consist of brass and copper for the currency of the country, valued at about four shillings sterling a pound; imperial dollars, which, compared with the dollars of Spain, are nearly as 16 to 15; red woollen caps, check linens, light coarse cloth, baize, barabans or alhaiks, small Turkey carpets, small plain carpets of Merurata, silk wrought and unwrought, tissues and brocades, sabre blades, Dutch knives, scissars, coral beads, small looking glasses, and Gooroo nuts from the south of the Niger. The exports are slaves, gold, and civet. The slaves are chiefly brought from Begherme, and other tributary districts to the south of Borrour, where a regular system of slave-hunting seems long to have been carried on. The gold is probably brought from Wangara, and other regions bordering on the central range of mountains.

BORROR, a large city, capital of the above empire. The population does not correspond with its extent, as the houses are built in the most straggling manner. Long. 23. 57. E. Lat. 24. 32. N.

BORODINO, a village in Russia, near the Moskwa, about 90 miles W. Moscow, remarkable for the great battle fought there, on 7th Sept. 1812, between the French and Russians.

BOROTUNNINGER, a borough and market town of England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, on the river Ure. Population 260.

BOROVITZEN, a town of European Russia, government of Novogorod. Pop. 2600.

BOROWSK, a town of European Russia, in the government of Moscow, on the Protwa. Population 1600. 60 miles S. W. Moscow.

BORUANA, a town of Spain, in the province of Valencia. Population 4000.

BORROR IN OSSORY, a village of Ireland, in Queen's county.

BORROWSTOWNNESS, frequently abbreviated to Borness, a seaport town of Scotland, county of Linlithgow, on the southern bank of the river Forth, where it is between 3 and 4 miles wide. The town is irregularly built, but has a very good harbour. The principal manufactures carried on here are salamoniac, salt, vitriolic acid, pottery, and distilling. There are extensive balleries, which afford fuel both for home consumption and export, which have been wrought during centuries, and penetrate far beneath the bed of the river. Most of the trade of Borrowstownness has, in consequence of the navigable canal between the rivers Clyde and Forth, been transferred to Grangemouth, at the termination of which Grangemouth is situated. Population 3018. 18 miles W. Edinburgh.

BORSCHON, a county of Hungary, containing above 93,000 inhabitants.

BOSA, a small seaport on the west coast of Sardinia, with a good harbour and a castle.

BOSCA REGALE, a town of Naples, in the Terra di Lavoro, with 2650 inhabitants.

BOSCAWEN, a post town of the United States, in Hillsborough county, New Hampshire. Population 1820.

BOSCO, or BOSCHI, a town of Piedmont, 8 miles S. E. Alessandria. Population 2600.

BOSHAM, a village and parish of England, county of Sussex, on an arm of the sea. The church is a spacious Gothic structure. Population 1410. 3 miles W. Chichester.

BOSHUANAR, a numerous class of tribes who inhabit a large territory in the interior of Southern Africa. The territory is said to extend from the 25th to the 20th degree of S. lat., 30 or 40 days journey north from the river Kuruman. These tribes are evidently of the same original stock with the Caffres, but surpass them in civilization and in the arts of life. Loetakod, one of their towns, is estimated to contain from 10,000 to 15,000 inhabitants; and though it has suffered by intestine broils, it seems still to contain 7000 to 8000.

BOSKOOP, a village of the Netherlands, province of Holland. Population 1300.

BOSNA, a river of European Turkey, in Bosnia, which discharges itself into the Save.

BOSNA-SERAJE, a town of European Turkey, the capital of Bosnia. It is newly built, with the exception of a few of the public offices. The old citadel, which stands at some distance from the town, is surrounded with thick walls, turrets, and bastions, planted with 80 cannon. Here are manufactures of lances, daggers, and other arms; there is likewise a considerable trade, chiefly with Dalmatia. Exclusive of the Turkish inhabitants, there are 100 Greek and 500 Catholic families, the latter of whom have a bishop. Population 12,000. 116 miles W. Belgrade; 330 S. Vienna.

BOSNIA, a country of the south of Europe, subject to the Turks; separated from Servia on the north by the Save, from Servia on the east by the Drina, from Dalmatia on the south by a ridge of mountains, and from Croatia on the west by the Verina. Its area contains about 13,200 square miles. It is full of mountains, but contains fruitful fields and vineyards, especially in the north. The total number of native inhabitants does not exceed 30,000; that of the Turkish militia is reckoned at 50,000.

BOSPHORUS, or STRAIT OF CONSTANTINOPLE, the narrow sea which forms a communication between the Black sea and the sea of Marmora, about 1 or 1½ mile broad, and 30 miles long.

BOSRA, a town of Syria, in the pachalic of Damascus, 30 miles S. Damascus.

BOSWILEY, or TRIVENNA, a town of England, county of Cornwall. It sends two members to parliament. Population 877.

BOSSEY, a village of the Netherlands, in Hattstadt, 6 miles from Mook.

BOST, a city of Persia, capital of a territory near the province of Seistan. Long. 64. 45. E. Lat. 32. 30. N.

BOSTAS, a town of Natolia, 50 miles N. N. W. Marmach.

BOSTON, a seaport and market town of England, in the county of Lincoln, situated on both sides of the river Witham, near its influx into the sea. It is an ancient town, and was formerly rich in monastic and religious institutions, though scarcely a vestige is now left of the six priories and three colleges which it once contained. The parish church, dedicated to St. Botolph, is a noble Gothic structure, justly admired for its elegance and simplicity. It was founded in 1100. Besides the church, there are four other places of worship belonging to Baptists of different denominations, to Unitarians, and Methodists; also a Quaker meeting-house. The theatre is a new and commodious building, neatly fitted up, and well adapted for dramatic representations. There are five free schools, viz. the grammar school, founded in the reign of queen Mary; a blue coat school for both boys and girls; one for the education of the children of poor freemen; one for educating poor children, on the plan of Mr. Lancaster's; and another established on the principle of Dr. Bell. Boston contains two public subscription libraries and news-rooms. The market-place is spacious and the markets, which are held on Wednesday and Saturdays, are well supplied. The neighbouring sea yields great plenty of fish; and a considerable trade is carried on in shrimps, crabs, and quantities of which are sent to London. Since the inclosure of the neighbouring fens, large quantities of oats are annually shipped for London. Boston is a corporate town, being incorporated in 37th Henry VIII. It has sent members to parliament (with only one intermission) since the 11th of Edward III. In the year 1804, a handsome iron bridge of one arch was erected over the Witham, in the place of the former wooden one. There are four annual fairs. Population 10,367. 30 miles S. E. London. Long. 0. 25. E. Lat. 53. 10. N.

BOSTON, a seaport of the United States, and capital of Massachusetts, in Suffolk county, and the largest town in New England. It is pleasantly situated at the bottom of Massachusetts bay, on a peninsula of an uneven surface, 2 miles long, and in the widest part about ½ mile wide. The harbour is one of the best in the United States. It has a sufficient depth of water for the largest vessels at all times of tide, and is accessible at all seasons of the year. The entrance is well defended by Fort Independence and Fort Warren. The houses in the older part of the town are plain, and the streets generally narrow and crooked; but in West Boston, and in several streets recently laid out, the private buildings are more splendid than in any other town in the United States. In 1817 there was erected on each side of Market-street, a block of brick stores more than 400 feet in length, and 4 stories high; and on Central Wharf, another immense pile of buildings was completed the same year, 1240 feet long, containing 54 stores, 4 stories high, having a spacious hall in the centre, over which is erected an elegant observatory. Among the public buildings are the state-house, which is built on elevated ground, and commands a fine view of the surrounding country; the new court-house, built of stone; Faneuil hall, where all town meetings are held; a theatre; an almshouse; a custom-house; and 28 places for public worship, 11 of which are for Congregationalists, 4 for Episcopalians, 4 for Baptists, 2 for Methodists, 3 for Universalists, 1 for Roman Catholics, 1 for Friends, a New Jerusalem church, and the seamen's chapel. Among the benevolent institutions are the general hospital, founded in 1818, which has been richly endowed by the liberality of the state and of individuals; and an hospital for the insane, the buildings of which are situated in Charlestown. There are also several extensive libraries. Boston is very extensively engaged in commerce. The population in 1800 was 24,937; in 1810, 33,250; and in 1820, more than 43,000. 210 miles N. E. New York, 300 N. E. Philadelphia, 436 N. E. Washington, and 300 S. S. E. Montreal. The country in the immediate vicinity is fertile and populous; and connected with the capital by fine roads. The Middlesex canal opens a water communication with the interior of New Hampshire. There are four bridges connecting Boston with the adjacent towns. Charles river bridge, which connects it with Charlestown on the north, is 1603 feet long, 42 broad, and stands on 75 piers. West Boston bridge, connecting it with Cambridge port on the west, is 3463 feet long, and stands on 180 piers. Cragie's bridge is between these two, and connects it with Cambridge. A bridge and dam were commenced in 1818 across the bay on the south-west side of the town, the object of which is to open a new avenue, and also to create a water power sufficient to put in operation extensive tide-mills, and other water works. The country around Boston is the admiration of every traveller of taste; and the view from the dome of the state-house surpasses any thing of the kind in this country.

BOZOWORTH, a town of England, county of Leicester. The church is spacious, and has a beautiful spire. Population 1117. About 3 miles from the town is Bosworth Field, where was fought, in 1485, the memorable battle between Richard III. and the Earl of Richmond, afterwards Henry VII.

BOZOWORTH, HUBBARD, a town of England, county of Leicester, 14 miles S. Leicester. Population 817.

BOZOGOSIMA, an island in the Chinese sea, south of Formosa. Long. 117. 21. E. Lat. 21. 57. N.

BOTANY BAY, a bay on the south-east coast of New Holland, discovered by Captain Cook in 1770. It has been since converted into a British settlement for the reception of exiled criminals. The climate is salubrious, the soil fertile, and the settlement flourishing. In 1810, the population was 10,454, viz. 5813 men, 2220 women, 2721 children. There were above 21,000 acres of ground in cultivation; and the stock amounted to 1114 horses, 11,276 cattle, 33,818 sheep, 1732 goats, and 18,593 hogs. The colony consists of four districts, Sidney, Parramatta, Hawkesbury, and Newcastle, and it has two dependencies, Holbert's town and Port Dalrymple, on Van Diemen's Land, about 300 miles distant. The chief commerce is in seal skins, oil, and whalebone, and a profitable contraband trade is carried on with China and the South sea islands.

BOTESDALE, a market town and parish of England, county of Suffolk. Pop. 584.

BOTETOWN, a county of the United States, in Virginia, W. of the Blue ridge. Pop. 13,301. Slaves 2275. Chief town Fincastle.

BOTANIA, an extensive province in the north of Europe, which is divided into East and West, by a gulf of the same name. The eastern division was ceded to Russia at the peace of Frederickshamm in 1809. East Bothnia lies on the east bank of the gulf; a chain of mountains separates it on the other side from the provinces of Archangel and Olonetz; it has Finland on the south, and Lapland on the north. Its length is 300 miles, and its breadth from 60 to 210. The population is proportionably small, not exceeding 70,000. The soil is remarkably fertile, but somewhat low and marshy towards the coast. The chief towns are Cafana, Ulea, Brahestad, Carleby, Jacobstad, Wasa, and Christianstad. West Bothnia, which belongs to Sweden, reaches, on the west side of the gulf, from the borders of Angermund to Tornea. It is divided into the four districts of Umea, Pitca, Lulea, and Tornea; so called from their chief towns. The inhabited part has been estimated at nearly 400 English miles in length, and 100 in breadth; yet the population, including a portion of Lapland, is only 46,000.

BOTHNIA, GULF OF, is that part of the Baltic which separates Sweden from Finland. It begins at the island of Ahna, and extends 360 miles in length and 180 in extreme breadth, to Tornea, between Lat. 60. 20. and 65. 50. N.

BOTHWELL, a village and parish of Scotland, county of Lanark, on the Clyde, famous for a battle fought in 1678, between the Scottish Covenanters and the royal forces, wherein the former were completely routed. Population of the parish, 1841.

BORTON, a parish of England, in Hampshire. Population 900.

BORSA, a small town of Italy, in the states of Parma, 4 miles N. N. W. Piacenza.

BOTTLEHILL, a post township of the United States, in Morris county, New Jersey, 16 miles N. W. Elizabethtown.

BOTTWART, a town in the kingdom of Wirtemberg, with 3000 inhabitants.

BOTZEN, or BOZEN, a celebrated trading town of the Austrian empire, in the district of the same name in the Tyrol. It is situated on the Adige, and is noted for its excellent wine. Pop. 6000. 27 miles N. Trent.

BOYASARAO, a small town of the Prussian states, 47 miles N. Berlin.

BOVA, a town of Naples, in Calabria Ultra. Population 2339.

BOUCHAIN, a well fortified town of France, in Hainault, on both sides of the Scheldt. The fortifications are of great strength, and the surrounding country can be laid under water to a great extent, by means of sluices. Population 1200. 7 miles N. N. E. Cambrai.

BOUCHOIX, a town of France, department of the Jura. Population 1000.

BOUDAY, a town of Switzerland, on the river Reuse, 14 miles S. W. Neuchâtel.

BOVES, a town of Piedmont, with 6700 inhabitants. 4 miles S. Coni.

BOVEY TRACEY, a market town and parish of England, in Devonshire. Pop. 1685.

BOGAINVILLE'S ISLAND, in the South Pacific ocean. Long. 155. 20. E. Lat. 6. S.

BOUGIAH, a considerable seaport in the eastern part of the kingdom of Algiers. It is fortified. The port is large, formed by a neck of land that runs out into the sea. 80 miles E. Algiers. Long. 5. 10. E. Lat. 36. 42. N.

BOUEPORA, a town of Hindostan, province of Bahar. Long. 84. 9. E. Lat. 25. 36. N.

BOUILLOX, the chief town of a duchy of the same name, in France, now belonging to the department of Ardennes. It lies on the Semois, near its junction with the Maese. It is small, but neatly built, and has a castle. 60 miles S. E. Namur.

BOUIN, a small fruitful island of France, department of La Vendée.—It has a town of the same name, with 2000 inhabitants.

BOVINO, a small town of Naples, 20 miles E. N. E. Benevento.

BOULAY, a town of France, in Lorraine, 12 miles E. by N. Metz. Population 2670.

BOULOGNE, an old seaport town of France, in the department of the Pas de Calais. The town is divided into Upper and Lower: the latter lies on the shore, and is better built, and considerably more populous, than the other, which stands on an eminence, 150 paces distant. The harbour is now nearly choked up with sand. In order to remedy this, dams were begun to be constructed in 1786, and the harbour has been of late years deepened. The inhabitants of Boulogne carry on an active trade in fresh and salt fish, especially herrings and mackerel, which are caught in great numbers off the coast; also in cod, salt, fresh and salted butter, soap, and other wares, as well as in the linen and woollen stuffs manufactured in the town. 30 miles from New Romney, in Kent, and 22 E. Calais.

BOULOGNE, a town of France, 40 miles S. W. Toulouse. Population 1300.

BOULOGNE, a town of France, province of Maine, with 1500 inhabitants.

BOURBONNOCK, a post township of the United States, in Somerset county, New Jersey, on the north side of the Raritan, 7 miles above New Brunswick.

BOURNON, an island in the Indian ocean, about 400 miles to the east of Madagascar. The island is composed of two mountains; the smallest is the southern one, in which the volcanic fires are still raging. A great part of the island is a complete volcanic desert, destitute of every kind of vegetation. In other parts, however, the soil is fertile, the air is pure, the climate delicious, and the sky always beautiful. Coffee has long been the staple product of Bournon. The tobacco grown here is also of good quality. The forests contain wood fit for ship-building; also aloes, ebony, palm, with a variety of trees that afford odoriferous gums and resins. Earthquakes are unknown here; but it is subject to violent hurricanes, which injure the crops, often throw down houses, root up trees, and occasion the destruction of shipping. The population has been variously stated from 20,000 to 30,000. Long. 85. 20. E. Lat. 21. S.

BOURNON, a county of the United States, in Kentucky, lying between Licking and Kentucky rivers. Population 12,000. Slaves 4109. Chief town Paris.

BOURNON L'ARCHAMBAUD, a town of France, department of the Allier.

BOURBON-LANCY, a town of France, department of the Seine and Loire. Pop. 2800.

BOURBONNE LES BAINS, a town of France, department of the Upper Marne. Pop. 3150.

BOURBOURG, a town in French Flanders, 9 miles S. W. Dunkirk. Population 2100.

BOURBURIAT, a town of France, department of the Cotes du Nord. Pop. 3000.

BOURDEAUX, one of the largest and most opulent cities of France, department of the Gironde, on the Garonne, 16 leagues from its mouth. The town in the interior is not remarkably handsome, the streets being for the most part crooked, narrow, and badly paved; but it has a number of handsome edifices. The most remarkable public buildings are the exchange, the ancient Hôtel des Fermes, the palace founded by Bonaparte in 1816, an elegant theatre, the old town-house, and the palace, first occupied by the dukes of Guienne, and afterwards by the parliament. The cathedral is a structure of great antiquity, and the other churches are also interesting; but many of them were greatly injured during the revolution. The institutions in literature are, the university, which was founded in 1441, and consists of two colleges, with a lyceum; the academy of arts and sciences, instituted in 1712, which has a library of 20,000 volumes, and a yearly distribution of prizes in natural philosophy; and the academy of painting, sculpture, and architecture, found.

ed in 1670, and revived in 1768. There are 14 sugar refineries, glass-houses, and manufactories of earthenware, woollen stuffs, and lac. Wine and brandy are exported in great quantities to Britain, Ireland, Holland, Sweden, Denmark, the Hanse Towns, and other northern states. Vinegar, plums, raisins, chestnuts, walnuts, wood, turpentine, cork, honey, and hams, are also exported. The principal imports are, from England, woollen stuffs, tin, lead, coal, herrings, salted flesh, leather, dye stuffs, and different kinds of provisions; from Holland, Denmark, and Sweden, staves, deals, timber for ship-building, hemp, pitch, copper, and cheese. A great trade is also carried on with the colonies. 325 miles S. W. Paris. Long. 0. 33. 59. W. Lat. 44. 50. 15. N.

BOURDEAUX, a village of France, department of the Drome. Population 1200.

BOURDETTE, a town of France, department of the Dordogne. Population 1560.

BOURG ST ANDREU, a town of France, on the Rhone. Population 4000.

BOURG EN BRESSE, a town of France, department of the Ain. Population 7300. It stands on the river Boissonne, and carries on a trade in grain, cattle, and hides. 260 miles S. E. Paris.

BOURG-LASTIC, SUR MER, D'OISANS, and DE MEAGT, four towns of France, in Auvergne, Guienne, departments of the Isere and of the Drome, with above 2300 inhabitants each; LA BRUXE and THEBOURG, departments of the Seine and the Eure. Pop. 750 and 900.

BOURG-MANRIEUX, a town of Savoy. Population 2175.

BOURGAUFRE, a town of France, department of La Creuse. Population 2000.

BORNET, a large but ill built town of France, department of the Cher. It stands on a rising ground, between the rivers Evre and Auron, which here unite their streams. The only public buildings of note are the fine Gothic cathedral, and the great tower, formerly used as a state prison. It has manufactures of silk, woollen, and cotton stuffs, as well as of stockings, caps, and other articles of clothing. The chief objects of trade are corn, wine, cattle, wool, hemp, and cloth. Population 16,400. 155 miles S. Paris.

BOURNEUF, a town of France, department of the Lower Loire. Population 2040.

BOURGAIN, a town of France, department of the Isere. Pop. 3000. 25 miles E. S. E. Lyons.

BOURBONN, a town of France, department of the Indre and Loire. Pop. 2810.

BOVING, a town of England, county of Lincoln. It is carried on here to a considerable extent, and there is a weekly market, and a fair annually. Population 3243. 55 miles S. Lincoln.

BOUANG, one of the Molucca islands, the largest next to Ceram, and the most westerly of the whole. It extends about 75 miles in length by 35 in breadth, and is exceedingly fertile, producing large quantities of rice and sago flour; oranges, lemons, citrons, other fruits, and pepper. The influence of the Dutch has been long predominant here. 55 miles W. Amboyna. Their fort stands in Long. 12. 4. E. Lat. 3. 24. S.

BOURTAG, a fortress of the Netherlands, in Groningen, in an extensive morass, 12 miles S. S. W. Winschoten.

BOURTH, a town of France, department of the Eure. Population 1640.

BORSCH, a town of Egypt, near the Nile, supposed the ancient Ptolemais.

BORSKA, a town of Central Africa, on the Niger, east of Tombuctoo, near which, according to the report of Amadi Fatouma, Mr Park was killed.

BOUSSY, a town of the Netherlands, in Austrian Hainault. Population 1900.

BORTON, an island near the south-east coast of Celebes, about 65 miles in length, by 20 to 30 in breadth, high and woody.

BORVINES, a fortified town of the Netherlands. Population 600.

BOTZOVILLE, a town of France, 18 miles S. E. Thionville. Population 1000.

BOW, or STRETFORD LE BOW, a village and parish of England, county of Middlesex. Population 2349.

BOW ISLAND, an island in the South Pacific ocean. Long. 141. 12. W. Lat. 18. 23. S.

BOWE, or NYMUR, a town and parish of England, county of Devon. Population 872.

BOWES, a town of England, North Riding of Yorkshire, consisting chiefly of a single street. Population 1095.

BOWDOIN, a post township of the United States, in Lincoln county, Maine. Population 1543.

BOWDOINHAM, a post township of the United States, in Lincoln county, Maine, on the Kennebeck. Population 1412.

BOWLING, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 3579.

BOWLING GREEN, a post village of the United States, and capital of Caroline county, Virginia, 48 miles N. Richmond—2d, A post village and capital of Warren county, Kent, about 30 miles E. Russellville. It has a bank. Population 155.—3d, A township of Licking county, Ohio, east of Newark.

BOWNESS, a hamlet of England, in Westmoreland, on the east side of the Lake Windermere.

BOX, a village and parish of England, county of Wilts, where is a medicinal spring. Population 1336.

BOXFORD, a town and parish of England, county of Suffolk. Population 944.

BOZZEL, a market town of the Netherlands, 5 miles S. Rois-le-Duc. Pop. 2650.

BOVANEZ, a large village of Sicily, with 1550 inhabitants.

BOYLE, a town of Ireland, county of Roscommon, on a river of the same name, crossed by two fine bridges, on one of which is a statue of King William III. The linen manufacture flourishes in the neighbourhood, and the town is now populous.

the union it sent two members to the Irish parliament. 10 miles S. Sligo.

BOYLE, a post-township of the United States, in Ontario county, New York, on the Genesee. Population 2860.

BOWNE, a river of Ireland, which rises in Queen's county, and running north-east by Trim and Cavan, falls into the Irish channel, 4 miles below Drogheda; noted for a battle fought near it between the adherents of James II. and William III., in 1690.

BOZOUIS, a town of France, province of Rouergue. Population 2310.

BAU, a town of Piedmont, on a hill on the Stura, opposite to Cherasen. It produces a superior kind of silk, and excellent pasture for cattle. Population 10,400. 10 miles S. E. Carmagnola.

BRABANT, DUCHY OF, one of the most important provinces of the Netherlands, is bounded N. by Holland and Guelderland, W. by Zealand and Flanders, S. by Hainault and Namur, and E. by Liege and Guelderland. Brabant was conquered in 1794, and confirmed to France by the treaties of Campo Formio (1797) and of Luneville (1801). It now became divided into the departments of the Deux-Nethes towards the north, and the Dyle towards the south. They also united Dutch Brabant to their empire in 1810, forming it, with part of Guelderland, into the department of the Mouths of the Rhine. Brabant now forms a central and highly valuable portion of the new kingdom of the Netherlands. The principal places in it, exclusive of the four chief towns of the quarters, are Tirlemont, Archholt, Diest, Genbloers, Judeigne, Nivelles, Breda, Bergen-op-Zoom, and Eindhoven.

BRACADALE, a village and parish of Scotland, in the Isle of Skye.

BRACCIANO, a small town of the Ecclesiastical state, patrimony of St Peter, on a lake.

BRACHT, a village of the Prussian states, 6 miles W. Cologne. Population 2060.

BRACKEN, a county of the United States, in Kentucky, on the Ohio. Population 3700. Slaves 356. Chief town Augusta.

BRACKLEY, a town of England, county of Northampton, near the source of the river Ouse. Population 1851.

BRADFELD, a town and parish of England, county of Essex. Population 822.

BRADFIELD, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 5208.

BRADFORD, a market town and parish of England, county of Wilts, on the Avon, which is here crossed by a bridge. The streets are narrow and irregular, but contain some good buildings. The church is spacious, and contains several monuments. There is also a charity school and an almshouse. It has manufactures of superfine broad cloth. Two weekly markets are held here, and two annual fairs. Population 10,231. 7 miles S. E. Bath.

BRADFORD, a market town of England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, situated on one of the tributary streams of the river Aire. Here is an endowed free grammar school, founded as early as the reign of Edward VI. Besides the parish church, which is a large and stately edifice, there is a new church, and five meeting-houses for dissenters. Manufactures of worsted stuffs are carried on here. There are also large iron-works near the town. Coal is very plentiful and cheap, and great quantities are sent by the canals into Craven. In the vicinity, also, are gut slags and slate, of excellent quality, of which there is a considerable export. There are two weekly markets, and several annual fairs. Population 13,064. 10 miles W. Leeds.

BRADFORD, a county of the United States, in Pennsylvania, formerly Ontario. Chief town, Meansville.—2d, A post township in Orange county, Vermont, on the Connecticut. Population 1302.—3d, A post township in Hillsborough county, New Hampshire. Population 1634.—4th, (EAST), a township in Chester county, Pennsylvania. Population 1663.—5th, (WEST), in Chester county, Pennsylvania. Population 1210.

BRADFORD, a post township of the United States, in Essex county, Massachusetts, on the south side of the Merrimack, opposite Haverhill, 10 miles above Newburyport. Vessels of considerable burden are built here. Great quantities of leather shoes are made for exportation. Bradford academy is highly respectable, and contains at present about 120 pupils. Population 1369. 28 miles N. Boston.

BRADING, a village and parish of England, on the Isle of Wight. Population 2023.

BRADLEY, NORTH, a township of England, county of Wilts. Population 1033.

BRADNICH, a town and parish of England, county of Devon, consisting chiefly of one irregular street, nearly a mile in length. Population 1511. 6 miles N. E. Exeter.

BRADSTAW, a hamlet of England, in the county of Lancaster. Population 713.

BRADSHAW-EDGE, a township of England, in the county of Derby. Population 1704.

BRADWELL, a township of England, county of Derby. Population 1130.

BRAEMAR, a mountainous district of Scotland, in the county of Aberdeen.

BRAGA, a new city of Portugal, the capital of the province of Entre-Douro-e-Minho, with 13,000 inhabitants. 80 miles N. Coimbra.

BRAGANZA, a town of Portugal, province of Trás-os-Montes. Population 2000.

BRANILOW, a large town of European Turkey, in Walachia. It stands with its strong citadel on a steep bank of the Danube. The trade in corn with Constantinople, as well as the sturgeon fishery, is considerable. In the year 1770, this town was nearly burned to the ground by the Russians.

BRANMAPOOTRA, the largest river in India, and known in Tibet by the name of the Sango. It joins the Megna in Lat. 24. 10. N., after a course computed at 1650 miles, mostly through territories unknown to Europeans.

BRAMMINAHAD, a celebrated city of Hindostan. Long. 67. 50. E. Lat. 24. 40. N.

BRAINÉ, a town of France, department of the Aisne. Population 1300.

BRAINÉ L'ALBU, a town of the Netherlands, in South Brabant. Population 2520.

BRAINÉ LE COMTE, a town of the Netherlands, 10 miles S. S. W. Brussels. Pop. 3000.

BRAINTREE, a town and parish of England, county of Essex. Population 2033.

BRAINTREE, a township of the United States, in Norfolk county, Massachusetts, on a bay. It is the birth-place of John Adams, the second president of the United States. Population 1351. 8 miles S. Boston.

BRAMPTON, an inconsiderable town of England, in Sussex, with only 98 inhabitants. It sends two representatives to parliament.

BRAMHAM, a village of England, West Riding of Yorkshire, 4 miles S. Wetherby.

BRAMLEY, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 4921.—Another small township in Surrey.

BRAMPTON, a town of England, county of Cumberland, on the Irthing. It holds two markets weekly, and two annual fairs. Population 3443. 6 miles N. Carlisle.

BRAMPTON, a town of England, county of Derby. Population 2317.

BRAMPTON RICKLOW, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Pop. 1263.

BRAMSTEDT, a large and thriving village of Denmark, duchy of Holstein. Houses 120.

BRAN, a small river of Scotland, in Perthshire, which falls into the Tay.

BRANCASTER, a town and parish of England, county of Norfolk. Population 770.

BRANDENBURG, MARK, or MARQUISATE OF, the most important of the Prussian states, has Brunswick and Hanover on the west, Mecklenburg and Pomerania on the north, the grand duchy of Posen on the east, and Silesia, with a part of Saxony, Anhalt, and Magdeburg, on the south. The whole is about 200 miles long, and 110 broad. Population 1,100,000.

BRANDENBURG, an old town of the Prussian states, in the Middle Mark of Brandenburg, on the Havel, which divides it into the old and new town. It has manufactures of cloth and fustian: there are, besides, many stocking weavers and knitters, and a coloured paper work. 31 miles W. Berlin.

BRANDON, a town of England, county of Bedford, on the Lesser Ouse. It has a trade in corn, malt, coals, and timber, and there are four annual fairs. Population 7770. 78 miles N. N. E. London.

BRANDON, a township of the United States, in Windsor county, Vermont, on the Lake Champlain, 4 miles N. Rutland, 40 S. W. Montpelier. Population 1373.

BRANDON BAY, on the W. coast of Ireland, between Trillick bay and Brandon-head.

BRANDON HEAD, a cape of Ireland, on the S. W. coast of the county of Kerry.

BRANDY POTS, a cluster of small islands in the St Lawrence, 163 miles below Quebec.

BRANDYWINE, a township of the United States, in Chester county, Pennsylvania. Population 1257.

BRANDYWINE CREEK, a river of the United States, which rises in Pennsylvania, and falls into Christina Creek, at Wilmington: noted for a bloody battle in 1737, in which the Americans were defeated.

BRANE, two rivers of South Wales; one runs into the Usk, the other flows into the Towy.

BRANFORD, a post township of the United States, in New Haven county, Connecticut. Population 1932.

BRANKE, a town of European Russia, government of Grodno. It contains 100 houses. Population 1150.

BRANT, a river of North Wales, in Anglesey, which runs into the Menai straits.

BRANTOME, a town of France, department of the Dordogne. Population 2400.

BRARA, a village of Italy, near the Adige. Population 2000.

BRASCHIN'S CREEK, a river of the United States, in Kentucky, which joins Salt river.

BRANLAV, a town of European Russia, 76 miles N. N. E. Wilna.

BRASPAS, a town of France, department of Finisterre, with 2320 inhabitants.

BRASSINGTON, a township of England, county of Derby. Population 639.

BRASSOS, a river of Mexico, which takes its rise in 34. N. lat. and 105. W. long. and discharges itself into the gulf of Mexico in 23. 40. N. lat. after a course of 700 miles.

BRATTLEBOUGH, a post township of the United States, in Vermont. Pop. 1391.

BRATTON, a township of England, county of Wilts. Population 1295.

BRATTON'S RIVER, a river of North America, which runs into the Missouri.

BRAVA, a seaport town on the eastern coast of Africa. Long. 44. 10. E. Lat. 1. 12. N.

BRACHIN, a village and parish of England, county of Hertford. Population 1228.

BRAUNAU, a well built and fortified town of the Austrian empire, on the Inn. Houses 290. 60 miles N. E. Munich.

BRAUNAU, a town of Bohemia, circle of Koniggratz, with 2450 inhabitants.

BRAUNTON, a town and parish of England, county of Devon. Population 1639.

BRAY, a village and parish of England, in Berkshire, on the Thames. Population 3340.

BRAY, a small seaport town of Ireland, county of Wicklow, 13 miles from Wicklow.

BRAY HEAD, a cape on the E. coast of Ireland, county of Wicklow.

BRAY-SUR-SEINE, a town of France, in Champagne. Population 2636.

BRAYS, an extensive country of South America, which comprehends the whole Portuguese territories in South America. It extends from the mouth of the great river Amazon, to the 35th degree of S. lat.; its length is 3000 miles; and its greatest breadth from E. to W. is nearly the same. Towards the S. however, it is contracted within much narrower limits. On the E. Brazil is bounded by the Atlantic ocean; on the W. by Peru and Paraguay, although the respective limits of those countries are not exactly defined; to the N. the great river Amazona presents a sufficiently distinct and conspicuous boundary; and to the S. the Plata seems in like manner to form the natural boundary, but the Spanish demarcations from the S. W. encroaching beyond this river, prevent the Portuguese territories from approaching to within 100 miles of its eastern shores. The following are the capitães or general divisions: Para, Maranhão, Ceará, Pernambuco, Bahia, Minas Geraes, Rio Janeiro, St Paul, Rio Grande, Goiás, and Mato Grosso. A finer country than Brazil; one blessed with a more genial climate, or a more fertile soil; more happily diversified with wood and water, and with abundance of navigable rivers; or more famed for its precious produce of gold and diamonds, is not to be found within the compass of the globe. It comprises within its bounds all the most valued productions of the earth. All the diversity of the vegetable tribes, which in other regions of the world are scattered far asunder, are found concentrated in this favoured country. Towards the interior the land rises by gentle gradations to the height of from 3000 to 5000 or 6000 feet above the level of the sea; and in these temperate regions European fruits and grain are reared in abundance, while the intermediate vallies are found extremely favourable for the raising of sugar, coffee, and generally for all sorts of tropical produce. In the northern parts, and in the neighbourhood of the Amazons, great heats prevail; in the higher parts, and towards the south, the climate is more temperate, and even cold, the thermometer falling as low as 40 degrees. The interior of Brazil forms in general a vast and impenetrable forest, the trees of which are closely interwoven with brush-wood, and with innumerable shrubs and creeping plants, which cling round them to their summits, and which, being generally adorned with the most beautiful flowers, give a peculiar and rich appearance to the scenery. These inaccessible forests afford a haunt to innumerable apes, and other wild animals, such as the jaguar, the wolf, the saratu, which has the appearance of a fox, the opossum, the sloth, the porcupine, the bunce, the tapir, about the size of a cow. Insects and reptiles abound in most parts, as well as some dangerous snakes. Of birds, there is the most splendid variety. These forests also abound in the greatest varieties of useful and beautiful wood, well adapted for dyeing, for cabinet work, or for ship-building. There are some woods, which have the property of hardening in a superior degree, and others which are very heavy, and have a peculiar fragrance. The most precious produce which is to be found in Brazil is gold and diamonds; and there is perhaps no greater obstacle to its improvement, than the blind eagerness of the inhabitants to search for these hidden treasures. The land in Brazil almost everywhere yields an abundant produce. Maize, beans, cassava-root, which is generally used as bread by all ranks, are very generally cultivated; also wheat and other European grain; and where the farmer has a sufficient supply of provisions, and has the means, he grows coffee, and prepares for cultivating and manufacturing sugar. But all those various advantages are neglected. Mining is the favourite pursuit; and so much has this prejudice affected the national manners, that a person engaged in mining is universally considered as of higher rank than an husbandman. The precious produce of gold and diamonds, for which Brazil has been so long celebrated, abounds in almost all the higher regions of the interior, and they are chiefly found in the beds of the mountain torrents, where the stream is most rapid. Through the country of Minas Geraes, which is one of the eastern provinces of Brazil, runs a ridge of mountains, in which those streams have their rise, which, running to the S. W. fall into the Parana, or, turning to the S. E., are carried by the Rio Francisco into the Atlantic. All those streams, more especially near their sources, have been found rich, both in gold and diamonds; and most of the towns in the interior of Brazil have grown out of settlements established by bands of adventurers, who, braving the perils of the desert, and the hostility of its savage inhabitants, have penetrated into those unfrequented regions, in quest of the rich produce they were supposed to contain. Almost all the towns in the interior, such as St Paul's, near the source of the Tiete, and containing about 15,000 inhabitants, and Villa Rica, near the source of the Paraila, were originally mining stations; also the village of Paracatu, containing 1000 inhabitants, about 300 or 400 miles N. N. W. Rio Janeiro; and Villa Rica, 80 miles W. Paracatu. On the river Cuinha, about 1000 miles into the interior, are situated the most western mining stations that are to be found in Brazil. They are established near the town of Cuinha, which is large, and is estimated to contain 30,000 inhabitants. The mines were discovered in 1713, and were long celebrated for the quantity of gold which they produced, which was estimated at about 500 lbs. annually. All the head waters of the other great rivers, which flow northward, and fall into the great river Amazona, such as the Chingu, the Topayos, and the Madern, are found productive of gold; and on the river Arinos, which flows into the Topayos from the west, some establishments for collecting gold were begun in 1747.

The inhabitants of Brazil are equally intent upon exploring the country for diamonds and other precious stones, as for gold. The old Portuguese government, however, dealt more hardly with its subjects in the case of diamonds than of gold, the latter having been only subjected to a tax of one-fifth, while there was an absolute prohibition on the sale of diamonds by any private adventurer whatever; and if he was detected with this commodity, he was subjected to all the penalties of imprisonment, or banishment, and sometimes of death. The district of Cerro do Frio, or of the Cold Mountains, in which the diamond works are established, consists of a range of rugged mountains that have a northerly and southerly direction, and are generally estimated to rise 4000 or 5000 feet above the level of the sea. The track of country termed the diamond ground extends about 50 miles from north to south, and about 25 from east to west. Nearly in the middle of it, in a barren country, stands the town of Tejuco, which contains about 6000 inhabitants. The diamond works, by which the town is chiefly supported, are in the neighbourhood. The principal establishment is situated on the river Jijilhonhoa, which falls into the Rio Grande; there are others situated on the Rio Velho, a branch of the Francisco, and on the Rio Pardo, as well as on various other small streams, which have their rise in this elevated country. Notwithstanding all the severities practised to prevent a contraband trade, there is little doubt that both gold and diamonds are smuggled in great quantities. The great value which they contain in such a small bulk, peculiarly fits them indeed for being the objects of an illicit trade. Under the old government of the mother country, the public revenue was raised by the most oppressive taxes, by transit duties imposed at certain ferries in the interior, on the passage of goods, which operated most injuriously; by a heavy duty on salt, which is absolutely necessary in this country, in the feeding of cattle. All commodities which pass into the gold or diamond districts, were subjected to a duty of 2d. per lb.; and a tithe in kind was imposed on cattle, poultry, and agricultural produce. In many parts the taxes were farmed out to the highest bidders; these again sub-set them to under farmers, who, for their own private emolument, imposed heavy exactions on the people. Brazil was discovered by Pedro Alvarez Cabral, a Portuguese navigator; but it was not till about the year 1549 that the court of Portugal sent a governor to regulate and superintend the affairs of the new colony. The possession of Brazil was long contested between the Portuguese and the Dutch; the latter were, however, at last driven from the country, of which Portugal has since retained possession. The trade between Portugal and Brazil was long subjected by the government at home to all the usual restraints imposed by the colonial system of Europe. But the court of Portugal, having in 1806 emigrated from Europe, and being greatly aided by Great Britain, a commercial treaty was afterwards concluded, by which all the ports of the Brazils were opened to the vessels and produce of Britain, on payment of a duty of 10 per cent. Several instructions have, since the emigration of the royal family, broken out in the Brazils, against the authority of the mother country. Some of these were quelled; but the standard of independence has been again reared, and apparently under more favourable auspices, the Brazilians having chosen the prince royal for their leader, and having disclaimed all further allegiance to the mother country. The country is still agitated by intestine strife. But it is probable that these disturbances will terminate in the establishment of independence. White population 200,000; blacks 600,000. According to other accounts, the whole population is 420,000.

BRAZZA, a considerable island in the Adriatic, opposite to the town of Spalatro, in Dalmatia, and belonging to the house of Austria. It is about 30 miles long, and from 6 to 9 broad; and contains 20 villages, with 15,000 inhabitants.

BREA HEAD, a cape on the south-west coast of Ireland. Long. 10. 16. W. Lat. 51. 50. N.

BREAGE, a town and parish of England, county of Cornwall. Population 3066.

BRECEY, a town of France, department of La Manche. Population 2100.

BRECHIN, a town of Scotland, county of Forfar or Angus, on the side of a hill rising from the northern bank of the river Esk, which is here crossed by a good bridge of two arches. A bishop's see was founded at Brechin about the year 1150, and well endowed by King David I.; and there are the remains, partly entire, of an ancient cathedral, 166 feet in length by 61 in breadth. The steeple is a fine square tower, with battlements on the top. It is surmounted by a hexagonal spire, and is 120 feet in height. Adjoining the church is an ancient round tower, commonly called the little steeple, which is 103 feet high. There is here both an English chapel and one of the Scots Episcopal persuasion, besides places of worship for Burghers, Antiburghers, and Methodists. Brechin is a royal borough, and unites with Aberdeen, Arbroath, Bervie, and Montrose, in sending a representative to parliament. Linen is the staple manufacture. There is a weekly market here, and several fairs annually. Brechin is an ancient place, having probably been built, like other towns, around its monastery. Population 5000. 8 miles W. Montrose.

BRECKENRIDGE, a county of the United States, in Kentucky. Pop. 3430. Slaves 563.

BRECKNOCK, a county of South Wales, bounded N. by the county of Radnor, W. by Cardigan, and Caernarvon, S. by Monmouth and Glamorgan, and E. by Hereford, together with Monmouth. It is mountainous in its surface, and extends about 38 miles in length by 30 in breadth; and contains a superficial area of 751 square miles. About a third of the whole is entirely waste, and unfit for cultivation. The county is watered by the rivers Wye, Uske, Irvon, and Tawe; as also the Taaf, which rises here. There are copper and lead, abundance of iron, and great quantities of coal and limestone, in Brecknockshire. The other exports are woollen cloth, wool, worsted stockings, timber, iron, cattle, sheep, swine, butter, and cheese. Brecknockshire is divided into 6 hundreds, and 67 parishes. It contains 4 market towns, Brecon or Brecknock, Builth, Crickhowel, and Hay. One member is returned to parliament by the county, and another by the principal town. Pop. 43,613.

BRECKNOCK, or BRECON, the county town of Brecknockshire, is situated at the confluence of the rivers Ciske and Honddu, or Hondey, the former of which is crossed by one bridge, and the latter by three. It is irregularly built, consisting principally of three streets, and the houses in general are of very indifferent structure. Here are three parish churches, St John's, St David's, and St Mary's, within the precincts of the ancient wall, and four places of worship for dissenters from the established religion. The old market-house stands near the middle of the town. It has also an arsenal. The principal manufactures are of cloth and cotton stockings. It has two markets weekly, and four fairs annually. One representative is returned to parliament. Population 3193. 62 miles W. Gloucester.

BRECKNOTHLE, a hamlet of England, in the county of Cumberland. Pop. 44.

BREDA, a large and strong town of the Netherlands, on the navigable river Merck, near the influx of the Aa, having an easy communication with the sea. The great church is an elegant structure, and remarkable for its tower: the height of the spire is 362 feet. The town-house is a regular and spacious building. The town is of a triangular form, with a gate at each angle. Since the repair and augmentation of its works in the 17th century, it has been accounted one of the strongest places in the Netherlands; its natural position, in the midst of a marsh, contributes materially to its defence, and the adjoining country can be laid under water by means of sluices which communicate with the Merck. It is further protected by a large castle, constructed by William, prince of Orange, afterwards king of England; the ramparts are lined with rows of trees. Breda was in former times a place of commerce, and had extensive cloth manufactories; but there only remain now little beyond a few manufactures of stockings, carpets, and hats, and several breweries. Population 11,000. 22 miles S. S. E. Rotterdam, 44 S. Amsterdam. Long. 4. 46. 36. E. Lat. 51. 35. 23. N.

BREDE, a river of England, which rises in Sussex, and joins the Rother, near Winchelsea.

BREDOX, a town of France, department of the Cantal. Population 1700.

BREDEBYT, a town of Denmark, duchy of Sleswick. Population 1504.

BREE, a town of the Netherlands, in the principality of Idgea, with 1200 inhabitants.

BREGENZ, a town of Germany, in Swabia, chief town of a county of the same name. Population 2000.

BREGENZ, a rapid river of Swabia, which falls into the lake of Constance.

BREGGIO, a small town of the Sarlinian states, 16 miles N. E. Nice. Pop. 930.

BREHAL, a town of France, in Normandy. Population 1370.

BREHAR, or BRER, one of the Scilly islands, situated west of the Land's End.

BREITENBACH, a market town of Saxony, 14 miles S. Erfurt. Population 2000.

BREMEN, a duchy in the Kingdom of Hannover, lying between the Weser and the Elbe, and having Hadeln on the E. and Lüneburg with Verden on the S. It has an extent of 2063 square miles, and 170,000 inhabitants. In the low grounds, along the banks of the rivers, the soil is excellent. In the central part, on the other hand, it is rather arid. The principal manufactures are linen, ropes, and sail-cloth; there are likewise along the river a few yards for ship-building.

BREMEN, one of the four free cities of Germany, lies in the duchy of the same name, and is divided by the Weser into the old and new towns, both of which are fortified. The buildings most deserving notice are the cathedral, the exchange, and the town-house; the principal street is of great length, and, like the greater part of the town, is well built and paved. The trade of Bremen is in part founded on its manufactures of refined sugar, cotton, woollen cloths, dye stuffs, &c.; but chiefly on the exportation of the products of Westphalia and Lower Saxony, and the importation of such foreign goods as find a market in these parts of Germany. 54 miles S. W. Hamburg. Long. 8. 46. 3. E. Lat. 53. 4. 45. N.

BREMER-BORDE, a market town of Hannover, 30 miles N. Bremen. Houses 135.

BREMENARTEN, a small town of Switzerland, 10 miles W. Zurich, 20 N. Lucerne.

BRESCILEY, a town and parish of England, county of Kent. Population 2284.

BRESCOLA, a spacious market town of Italy, in the district of Viganza.

BREKETS, a village of Switzerland, 10 miles N. W. Neuchâtel.

BREXO, a town of Upper Italy, district of Bresciano. Population 2000. Long. 10. 14. E. Lat. 56. 3. N.

BREXT, or SOUTH BREXT, a town and parish of England, in Devonshire. Pop. 1401.

BRENTA, a river of Italy, which loses itself in the Adriatic, a little N. of Venice.

BREXTROD, a town and parish of England, county of Middlesex, on the Thames. Brick-making, malting, distilling, and pottery, are the principal occupations of the inhabitants. 7 miles W. London.

BREXTWOOD, a township of England, county of Essex. Population 1423.

BRENTZ, a river of Wirtemberg, which gives name to the town of Brentz. Pop. 750.

BRESCIA, a large city of Italy, the capital of the district called from it the Bresciano, or county of Brescia. It stands on the Garza, and contains 12 parish churches, and 30 convents. The cathedral is a large edifice, built of a fine white stone, found in the neighbourhood. This town is surrounded with walls, ditches, and bastions, and the ramparts are lined with trees. It contains several handsome squares and streets; there is also a variety of fountains; and on the outside of the walls are to be seen the remains of an ancient aqueduct. The castle is built on a rising ground, but though strong, it is commanded by the neighbouring hills. There is here a number of presses for making oil from lupseed; and there are also manufactures of arms. The other articles of trade are silk, flax, wool, linen, and wine. Population 48,000. 54 miles N. Parma, 106 W. Venice. Long. 10. 14. E. Lat. 45. 32. N.

BRESCIANO, a district of Upper Italy, in Lombardy, which takes its name from the city of Brescia, and formerly belonged to the republic of Venice. It is bounded N. by Bormio and Trent, E. by the Lake of Garda, the Veronese, and the duchy of Mantua, S. by the same duchy and the Cremonese, and W. by the Cremasco, the Bergamasco, and the Valteline. It has an extent of 65 miles in length, and 25 in breadth, with no less than 500,000 inhabitants.

BRESLAU, the capital of Silesia, is situated in a principality of the same name, on the Oder, at the influx of the small river Ohlau, which runs through the town. It is divided into the old and new towns, contiguous to which are five suburbs; one standing on an island in the Oder. It is surrounded with strong walls and other fortifications, and has six large and six small gates. There are here 26 Catholic and 8 Lutheran churches; also a church for the Calvinists. The cathedral of St John, built on an island outside of the town, has 17 chapels. A Catholic university was instituted here in 1702. There is also an academy, and the town contains both a Jewish and a Calvinist school. The number of hospitals and other charitable institutions is 16; there are likewise several establishments for poor students. The staple article of trade is linen, printed cottons, calico, chintz, woolen stuffs, silk, Turkish yarn, and thread. 180 miles E. Dresden. Long. 17. 2. 18. E. Lat. 51. 8. N.

BRESEY, one of the Shetland Islands, about 4½ miles long and 3 broad, separated from the mainland of Shetland by Bresey sound, a fine harbour, where the Greenland whale ships and Dutch herring vessels frequently rendezvous. Long. 1. 12. W. Lat. 60. 14. N.

BRESEY, a town of France, department of the Deux-Sevres. Population 1960.

BRESEY, a well known seaport of France, the station of the French marine, and one of the best harbours in Europe, is situated on a bay on the west coast of Brittany, in the department of Finisterra. Brest was an insignificant village until 1631. It was subsequently fortified, and received the privileges of a city. The greater part of the town lies on a hill, and has narrow, winding, and dirty streets; in the suburb of Recouvrance, however, the streets are broad and regular, and the houses very handsome. The harbour, situated between this suburb and the town, is in the form of a long canal, and is capable of containing 16 ships of the first and second rank, 24 of the third, and 16 of the fourth, with 26 fire-ships, and other small vessels. On a steep rock at the entrance stands the citadel, which is defended towards the land by strong outworks. Opposite to it is a stately tower, which serves, with the citadel and several batteries, to protect the harbour. The principal public buildings, and objects of curiosity in the town are the barracks, rope-walks, cloth manufactories, forges, and foundries; the immense naval arsenal and dock-yard; the two quays which encompass the harbour; the house of correction, and the winter lodging of the galley-slaves; the hospital, the theatre, the two marine academies, the one founded in 1752, the other in 1810; and the fine walk called la Coura. Population 24,180. 127 miles W. Paris. Long. 4. 26. 45. W. Lat. 48. 28. 14. N.

BRESEY, a town of France, department of the Eure.

BRETHIL, a town of France, department of the Oise. Population 3160.

BRETIGNY, a village of France, department of the Eure and Loire.

BRETON, CAPE, a large island in the gulf of St Lawrence, North America, about 100 miles in length, and from 20 to 84 in breadth. It is separated from Nova Scotia by a narrow strait called the gut of Canso, about a league wide, and is about 60 miles from Newfoundland, the intervening space forming the entrance into the gulf of St Lawrence. This island derives its importance from the fisheries carried on in the adjoining seas, to which the possession of a port in the island became necessary. For this purpose, Louisbourg, which is the best harbour of the island, is well adapted. The harbour of St Peter's also, at the west end of the island, is a convenient station for carrying on the fishery. The peltry trade carried on from this island is very inconsiderable. Greater advantages are derived from the coal mines which are situated near the entrance of the harbour, the working of which, and the fishery, are the chief employment of the inhabitants. This island was first taken possession of in August 1713, by the French. It was finally ceded to the British in 1763.

BRETON, CAPE, a cape on the east coast of the island of the same name. Long. 50. 40. W. Lat. 48. 55. N.

BRETT, a river of England, county of Essex, which falls into the Stour.

BRETEN, a town of Germany. Population 2500. 16 miles S. E. Spire.

BREWOOD, a town of England, county of Stafford. Population 2283.

BREWSTER, a post township of the United States, in Barnstable county, Massachusetts, on Barnstable bay, 16 miles E. Barnstable. Population 1112.

BRIANÇON, a town of France, department of the Upper Alps, 50 miles E. S. E. Grenoble. Population 3000.

BRIANSE, a town of European Russia, government of Orel, with 4000 inhabitants.

BRIAR CREEK, a river of North America, which falls into the Savannah, in Georgia.

BRIARE, a town of France, department of the Loiret. Population 1050.

BRIAVELL'S, ST. a township of England, county of Gloucester. Population 1112.

BRICTZ, a river of Ireland, county of Kerry, which runs into the Coshin.

BRICKY, a river of Ireland, which runs into the bay of Dungarvan.

BRIDE, a river of Ireland, which falls into the Blackwater, in the county of Waterford.

BRIDGEFORD, a village and parish of England, county of Nottingham.

BRIDGEEND, a market town of Wales, in Glamorganshire, 20 miles W. Cardiff.

BRIDGEHASS, a small seaport town of Scotland, 17 miles W. Edinburgh.

BRIDGENORTH, a small borough town of England, county of Salop, divided by the Severn, into the Low and High towns. The two places are connected by a stone bridge, which has six arches. Out of the red sandstone hill on which the upper town stands, a great number of houses are excavated, and several caves, which were formerly used as cellars. Over these the inhabitants have gardens, through which the smoke, rising from the subterraneous dwellings, gives a singular and striking appearance to the aspect of this part of the town. It was surrounded with walls, part of which still remain. The castle was reduced to a heap of ruins by Henry II. In the reign of King John, the present terrific edifice was built on the site of the former structure. The square tower, a part of which, leaning 17 feet beyond its perpendicular, is almost the only relic left. At each extremity of the High town stand the churches of St. Mary Magdalene and St. Leonard. A weekly market is held on Saturday, and six fairs yearly. Immense quantities of excellent malt are made here, equal, if not superior, to any other place in the kingdom. It is an ancient royal borough, and sends two members to parliament. Population 4345. 20 miles E. S. E. Shrewsbury.

BRIDGEPORT, a seaport and borough of the United States, in the township of Stratford, Connecticut, on Long Island Sound, 24 miles W. Stratford, 17 S. W. New Haven. Population 1000. It has a bank, and two houses of public worship, one for Episcopalians, and one for Congregationalists. Shipping in 1815, 1414 tons.

BARNBETOWN, the capital city of the island of Barbadoes, in the West Indies. It lies in the bay of Carlisle, which is four miles in breadth and three in depth. It is esteemed one of the finest cities in the West India islands. The streets are wide, and the houses lofty. It has very convenient wharfs for loading and unloading of merchandises, with some strong forts and castles for defence. Its shops and magazines are well stored with all kinds of European productions; and it is filled with Englishmen and other foreigners, who come here to reside. Bridgetown has suffered at different times, both from fires and hurricanes. It was burnt down in April 1668. The greatest part of it was again burnt in 1766, 1768, and 1767. Bridgetown had scarcely recovered from the effects of the dreadful conflagrations, when it was torn from its foundations, by the storm of 10th October 1780, in which above 4000 of the inhabitants miserably perished. Long. 58. 38. W. Lat. 13. 10. N.

BRIDGE TOWN, a post township of the United States, and capital of Cumberland county, New Jersey, on Cohamie Creek, 80 miles above its entrance into Delaware bay, and 50 S. S. E. Philadelphia. The river is navigable to this place for vessels of 100 tons. Shipping in 1815, 14,493 tons. Here are a court-house and jail, a bank, and an academy.

—2d, Of Queen Anne county, Maryland, on the west side of the Tuckahoe, 8 miles E. Centreville.—3d, Of Kent county, Maryland, on Chester river, 18 miles above Chester, 45 E. Baltimore.

BRIDGEWATER, a town of England, county of Somerset, situated 12 miles from the sea, on the river Barret, over which there is a stone bridge. An iron bridge has also been lately erected over the river. The streets of this town are wide and well paved; but the houses are irregularly built. Besides the parish church, which is a spacious and handsome building, with a lofty spire, there are public worship for Presbyterians, Baptists, Quakers, and other dissenters from the established faith. Near the parish church is a free school built of stone. There is a large town-hall, and a high cross, with a cistern over it. Two markets are kept weekly, and there are four annual fairs. Bridgewater is a borough, and sends two representatives to parliament. Population 6165. 10 miles N. N. E. Taunton.

BRIDGEWATER, a township of the United States, in Somerset county, New Jersey, 9 miles N. Boundbrook. Population 2900.—2d, Of Plymouth county, Massachusetts, 23 miles S. Boston. Population 5155. Large quantities of hardware, nails, &c. are manufactured here. There is an academy in the south parish.—3d, A post township in Grafton county, New Hampshire, on the Merrimack, 28 miles N. N. W. Concord. Population 1102.

—4th, A township in Windsor county, Vermont, 17 miles N. W. Windsor. Population 1151.—5th, A post township in Ouda county, ty, New York, 12 miles S. Utica. Population 1170.—Id. In Luzerne county, Pennsylvania. Population 1417.

BRIDPORT, a neat seaport town in the English channel, in the county of Dorset, distant about a mile from its harbour. It lies between two branches of the river Brit, and consists principally of three spacious streets, and has been greatly improved in its general appearance within these few years. It is a place of great antiquity. The church, dedicated to St Mary in 1362, is a large Gothic edifice, in the form of a cross. The tower is 72 feet high. There are three almshouses, and an endowed charity school, besides many other benevolent institutions. The chief manufactures are in cordage, sail-cloth, nets, and twines of all descriptions. The vessels also built in the harbour are in great repute. The different sects of Unitarians, Independents, and Quakers, have each their respective places of worship, which are neat and commodious. Besides these, there is a chapel for the Wesleyan Methodists. Two markets are kept here weekly, on Wednesday and Saturday, and two annual fairs. This borough was incorporated in the reign of Henry III., and the charter has been confirmed by subsequent sovereigns. It is governed by a recorder, two of the aldermen denominated bailiffs, and a town-clerk, all chosen by the members of the corporation. Bridport sends two members to parliament, and the right of election is vested in the bailiffs, capital burgesses, and inhabitant householders paying scot and lot. The present number of electors is about 200. Its harbour has been greatly improved, so that it now admits ships of from 200 to 300 tons burden. Population 3742. 15 miles W. Dorchester.

BRIE, COMTE-ROBERT, a town of France, department of the Seine and Marne. Population 2000.

BRIGG, a well built and populous town of Silesia, in a principality of the same name, on the Oder, over which there is here a stately wooden bridge. It has 8700 inhabitants, and an elegant ducal castle. Here are also various work-houses, and establishments for the poor. It has manufactures of hats, stockings, and woollen stuffs. 24 miles E. Breslau.

BRIGNE, a handsome town in the Valais, on the Rhone, 66 miles E. Sion.

BRILL, or BURELIK, a town of the Netherlands, on the island of East Voorn, not far from the mouth of the Maene. It has a good harbour. It was here where the Dutch laid the foundation of the republic in 1572. It is a handsome, well built town, and strongly fortified. Population 3200. 13 miles S. W. Rotterdam.

BRÉHENNE, a town of France, department of the Aube. Houses 300.

BRITZEN, a town of the Prussian states, 32 miles E. Berlin. Population 1000.—Also a small town, 34 miles S. W. Berlin.

BRITZ, or BURETZ, St, a well built town of France, department of the Cotes du Nord. It has a trade in grain, flax, thread, linen, woollen, cattle, honey, wax, paper, leather, and iron, and has manufactures of earthenware, and thriving fisheries. Population 6250. 200 miles W. Paris.

BRIGA, I.A., a thriving town of the Sardinian states, county of Nice. Pop. 2500.

BRIGHTHELMSTONE, or BRIGHTON, a seaport town of England, in the county of Sussex, situated at the bottom of a bay formed by Beachy Head and Worthing Point, in the English channel. Until very recently, it was inhabited by little more than a few families of fishermen. It has rapidly increased, however, and is now one of the most fashionable places of resort, particularly for sea-bathing, in the kingdom. Brighton occupies an eminence gently declining towards a lawn called the Steyne, which is frequented as a promenade. It consists of a number of streets, most of them composed of new, commodious, and elegant houses, specially adapted for the accommodation of strangers, in addition to its permanent population. Besides the parish church, a chapel royal was lately erected in the centre of the town. There are also several other places of public worship, being the chapel of St James, a meeting-house for the Presbyterians, Unitarians, Baptists, Methodists, Arminians, Quakers, a Roman Catholic chapel, and Jewish synagogue. Brighton contains several free schools, and a school of industry, where a number of indigent females are educated. A new theatre, elegantly fitted up, was opened in 1807; and there are two assembly-rooms, both of considerable size, besides some other places of amusement. Six pieces of heavy cannon are mounted on a battery at the west side of Brighton. An elegant mansion, called the Marine Pavilion, was erected here for the Prince of Wales, in 1784, near the north-west corner of the Steyne. The promenades of Brighton render a residence here particularly agreeable. From its various attractions, the town is usually crowded during the summer season. Population 24,429. 54 miles S. London.

BRIGHTSTONE BURNLOW, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire, adjoining to Sheffield. Population 6616.

BRIENNON, a town of France, department of the Var. In the neighbourhood are raised excellent plums. Population 9000. 20 miles N. Toulon.

BRIEVEGA, a small town of Spain, province of Toledo. 40 miles E. N. E. Madrid.

BRINDISI, an ancient and celebrated seaport of Naples, in the Terra d'Otranto, near the entrance of the gulf of Venice. Its harbour is now nearly choked up. It contains 5000 inhabitants, has two churches and two convents, and is the see of an archbishop. 180 miles E. Naples.

BRINDLEY, a town and parish of England, county of Lancaster. Population 1574.

BRION, C'ARCHEVEQUE, a town of France, department of the Yonne. Population 2379.

BRIONNE, a town of France, department of the Upper Loire, on the river Allier. Population 5000.

BRISACH, OLD, an old town of Baden, 33 miles S. Strassburg. Population 2500.

BRISACH, NEW, a town and strong fortress of France, in Alsace, near the Rhine, opposite to the foregoing town of Brisach, 33 miles S. Strassburg.

BRISBAU, an extensive track of land in the south-west of Suabia, belonging, for the most part, to the grand duchy of Baden.

BRISTOL, a city and county of England, between the counties of Gloucester and Somerset, situated on the river Avon, which here receives the Frome, and is navigable for ships of great burden down to the Severn, at King-road, where commences the Bristol channel. The river is crossed by a bridge originally constructed 500 years ago, and rebuilt in 1768; it consists of three wide and lofty arches. The town is irregularly built, consisting of about 600 streets and lanes. It was constituted a bishop's see by Henry VIII.; and part of a monastery founded by Stephen, in 1140, has been converted into a cathedral, which, in its present mutilated state, is 175 feet long, the tower being 130 ft. 3 in. high, square, and ornamented with four pinnacles. The church of St Mark, opposite the cathedral, was formerly collegiate; it is the mayor's chapel. All the churches are neat, beautifully decorated, and most of them have many handsome monuments. This city has long been celebrated for its many well conducted and extensive charities. Amongst the charitable institutions of this city are a spacious infirmary, a Magdalen, a blind asylum, a Friend and Stranger society, a society for the loan of linen to women in parturition, and also one for distributing flannel clothing among poor women. It also contains many large almshouses and charity schools. The exchange in Corn-street is a fine edifice, of Grecian architecture, 110 feet in front, and 148 deep. A structure called the commercial rooms, for the use of the mercantile interest, was erected in 1809. An elegant and convenient theatre was built in 1766; and in Prince's-street is an assembly-room, with a fine front. Its other remarkable public buildings are the merchants' hall, council-house, guild-hall, a large and convenient custom-house, and a new jail. Bristol contains a vast number of dissenting meeting-houses, and places of worship for almost every kind of religion. There are 13 city companies, several of whom have some elegant halls. Very considerable manufactories of glass and sugar are carried on in this city; there are also large distilleries, and brass works, the largest in England; and near the city is a manufactory of pins and other articles, on a great scale. Soap and vitriolic acid, in large quantities, and earthenware, are likewise made. Bristol has long been engaged in a very extensive foreign trade, chiefly with the West Indies. Its commercial connections with Ireland are very extensive, and it has begun to take advantage of the new state of our Indian possessions. Bristol returns two members to parliament, who are elected by the freemen and freeholders of the city, now amounting to about 8000; and it is governed by a mayor, 12 aldermen, 2 sheriffs, and 20 common councilmen, with inferior officers. The city was erected into an independent county in 1372, by Edward III., and has since been endowed with various privileges and immunities. About a mile west of Bristol, close to the river, stands the village of the Hot Wells, celebrated for a tepid spring which has been found a powerful specific in various maladies. An act of parliament was obtained in 1803 for improving the harbour; and in the year 1809 the undertaking was completed, at the expense of nearly 1,600,000*l.* Bristol is mentioned, about the year 430, among the fortified cities of Britain, and also by Nennius about 620. In the reign of Henry II. it was a rich and flourishing place. Pop. 37,779, 417 miles W. London. Long. 2. 46. W. Lat. 51. 35. N.

BRISTOL, a post township of the United States, in Lincoln county, Maine, 13 miles E. Wiscasset. Population 2734.—24. Of Andrus county, Vermont, 25 miles S. W. Montpelier. Population 1179.—34. A county in Massachusetts, bounded N. by Norfolk county, E. by Plymouth county, S. by Buzzard's bay, W. by Rhode Island. Population 37,140. Chief towns, Taunton and New Bedford.—35. A county in Rhode Island, bounded N. and N. E. by Massachusetts, W. by Narraganset bay, E. by Mount Hope bay. Population 5072. Chief town, Bristol.—45. A seaport and capital of Bristol county, Rhode Island, on the east shore of Narraganset bay, 13 miles N. Newport, 15 S. Providence. It has a safe and commodious harbour, and is a place of considerable trade. Ship ton in 1815, 6944 tons. Population 2694. Lat. 41. 35. N.—63h. A post township in Hartford county, Conn. about, 16 miles W. Hartford. Population 1420.—7h. A post township in Ontario county, New York, 10 miles S. W. Canastota. Population 1319.—8th. A borough and post township in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, on the Delaware river, opposite Burlington, 20 miles above Philadelphia. Population 1639.—9th. A town in Trumbull county, Ohio, 12 miles N. Warren.

BRISTOL BAY, a large bay in the North Pacific ocean, on the west coast of North America.—Also, a river which empties itself into the above bay.

BRISTOL CHANNEL, a portion of the Atlantic ocean, on the coast of Great Britain, lying between the south coast of Wales and the counties of Somerset, Devon, and Cornwall in England, into which the Severn flows.

BRIT, a river of England, which runs into the sea, 2 miles S. Bridport.

BRITAIN, commonly called GREAT BRIT-

TAIN, the most considerable of the European islands, is situated between Lat. 50. and 53½ N. It is bounded N. by the North sea, E. by the German ocean, S. by the English channel, and W. by St George's channel and the Atlantic ocean. From north to south it extends about 580 miles in length; its greatest breadth from the North Foreland in Kent, to the Land's-end in Cornwall, is about 370, and its superficial area is computed at 87,502 square miles. Its whole coast is deeply penetrated by bays, creeks, and estuaries, which afford many safe and commodious harbours. The principal navigable rivers in the island are the Thames, Severn, Humber, and Mersey, in England; and the Forth, Clyde, Tay, Tweed, Dee, and Don, in Scotland. In different parts of the country, namely, in the north-west of England, and in the west of Scotland, numerous lakes are to be found; and in the more populous parts of the island the system of canal navigation is brought to unrivalled perfection.

The surface of the island is mountainous towards the north, and flatter in the southern parts. It is traversed by several chains of considerable length and altitude. The minerals produced are granite, porphyry, schistus, limestone, and very beautiful marble. Coal is produced in abundance; as also lead, iron, copper, tin, and small quantities of silver. In the mountains of Scotland are found great variety of transparent and coloured crystals; and real topazes have been found, as well as the beryl and garnet; and the well known spars which are produced in Derbyshire are well adapted for ornamental purposes. Fossil salt is extracted in large quantities from pits in Cheshire and Worcestershire; but the mineralogy of Britain is so diversified, that a simple enumeration of the substances would far exceed the limits allotted to this article. A considerable portion of the mountainous districts of the country is barren, and irclaimable by any efforts of the cultivator; the greater part, however, is fertile, and in favourable seasons abundant harvests are procured. The vegetable productions of Britain exist in considerable variety; those, however, are chiefly the products of art, only a small proportion of them being indigenous. Every species of fruit requires the most careful culture to attain perfection, and under the cold and variable climate of this northern island the produce of the orchard is always precarious. The zoology of Great Britain presents no remarkable features.

The manufactures of Britain are various and extensive, comprehending every possible variety of fabric into which the rude material can be fashioned by the hand of art. The most important are those of wool, cotton, linen, silk, leather, glass, pottery, the working of metals, such as iron, copper, and tin. The manufacture of silk has been recently greatly extended. Every species of leather is manufactured, and very good imitations are made both of Turkey and of Morocco leather. The commerce of Britain consists, generally speaking, in the export of her own manufactured produce for the rude produce of less opulent and improved countries; and there is no country in the world with which her merchants do not maintain an intercourse.

In Great Britain, literature, science, and all the liberal arts, keep pace with the advancement of commerce. Six principal universities are established in Great Britain; and other subordinate seminaries, both public and private, exist in every part.

The constitution of Great Britain is a hereditary monarchy. The king, lords, and commons, constitute the legislature; and their joint consent is necessary to the passing of every law. The lords are created by the sovereign, from whom all political honours flow. In the legislative body they vote in a house distinct from the commons, to which belong, 1st, all the nobility of England who have attained the age of 21, and who labour under no disqualification; 2dly, 16 peers from Scotland, who are the representatives of the peerage of that country; and 3dly, 28 from Ireland, as the representatives of the Irish peerage. There are, besides, 27 spiritual lords of England, and 5 are sent from Ireland. The house of commons consists of 658 members, namely, 513 representatives from England and Wales, 45 from Scotland, and 100 from Ireland.

The established religion in England is Episcopacy, in Scotland Presbyterianism. Universal toleration prevails; and so long as the wellbeing of society is preserved, no one can be disturbed on account of his religious tenets. In England the pressure of tithes for the support of the clergy falls heavy on property; but in Scotland the burden is comparatively light, both because the number of ecclesiastics is small, and the amount of the tithes or tithes has long been ascertained by a fixed valuation.

Great Britain contains many flourishing cities and towns. London, according to the census of 1821, contains 1,274,000 inhabitants; Edinburgh, including Leith, 138,236; Glasgow 147,048; Manchester 138,788; Liverpool 118,972; Birmingham 106,722; Bristol 87,779; Leeds 83,796; Plymouth 61,312; Norwich 50,283. None of the rest contain 50,000.

Colonies in all quarters of the world are dependent on the British islands. Of these the principal are two military posts in Europe—Gibraltar, and Malta; in Asia, the whole Indian peninsula, from about 23 degrees of north latitude to Cape Comorin; the island of Ceylon, New Holland, and others in the Eastern and Southern oceans; the Canadian territories, Newfoundland, and West India islands in America; the Cape of Good Hope, Sierra Leone, and Goree, in Africa. The population of the British islands and their dependencies is calculated to exceed 80 millions of soul; of whom about 40 millions inhabit the Eastern hemisphere. Those of Europe, excluding Malta and Gibraltar, are computed as follows:

England.....	11,261,437
Wales.....	717,438
Scotland.....	2,093,436
Army and Navy.....	387,447
Total in Great Britain.....	14,459,778
Ireland about.....	5,000,000
Isle of Man.....	40,061
Scilly Islands about.....	2,400
Guernsey.....	20,827
Jersey.....	23,600
Alderney, &c. about.....	1,700

19,553,306

BRITAIN, LITTLE, a township of the United States, in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania. Population 1700.

BRITAIN, NEW, a township of the United States, in Bucks county, Pennsylvania. Population 1474.

BRITAIN, NEW, an archipelago in the Eastern seas, consisting of several islands of different dimensions. Long. 146. 6. W. Lat. 1. 30. to 6. 50. S.

BRITAIN, NEW. The country lying round Hudson's bay, or the country of the Esquimaux, comprehending Labrador, New North and South Wales, has obtained the general name of New Britain, and is attached to the government of Lower Canada.

BRITFORD, a parish of England, county of Wilts. Population 713.

BRITISH AMERICA is divided into four provinces: viz. 1. Upper Canada. 2. Lower Canada; to which are annexed New Britain, or the country lying round Hudson's bay, and the island of Cape Breton. 3. New Brunswick. 4. Nova Scotia, to which is annexed the island of St John's. Besides these, there is the island of Newfoundland.

BRITTANY, or BRETAGNE, one of the largest provinces of France, occupies the north-west corner of the kingdom. It contains 1775 square leagues, and about 2,300,000 inhabitants, and is now divided into the five following departments, all large and populous. The first two are formed out of the upper provinces, the third and fourth out of the lower, and the last of part of both.

Departments.	Population.	Chief Towns.
Lower Loire	407,827	Nantes.
Ile de Vihaine	508,344	Rennes.
Finisterre	452,895	Quimper.
Morbihan	463,423	Vannes.
Cotes du Nord	519,690	St Brieux.
Total population	2,352,169

BRAYES, a neat town of France, department of the Corrèze. Population 5850. Long. 1. 26. E. Lat. 45. 10. N.

BRIVIO, a small town of Upper Italy, 18 miles N. N. E. Milan.

BRUX, or BRUXEL, a royal town of Belgium, 40 miles N. W. Prague. Pop. 3600.

BRUX, a town of France, department of La Manche. Population 9800.

BRUXEL, a town of the Austrian empire.

in Tyrol. It has five gates, an Episcopal palace, a magnificent cathedral, and a parish church. Population 3800.

BRIZHAM, a seaport of England, county of Devon, on Torbay. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the fishery, for which they have about 100 vessels, which carry their cargoes to London, Bath, or Bristol. Pop. 4002.

BROACH, a city, and capital of a district of the same name, situated on the Narbuddah river, about 25 miles from the sea. Long. 73. 6. E. Lat. 21. 41. N.

BROADALMIN, a post township of the United States, in Montgomery county, New York, 30 miles W. Albany. Pop. 2235.

BROAD BAY, a bay on the coast of Maine, in North America. Long. 63. 19. W. Lat. 43. 50. N.—(CREEK), the name of several rivers in the United States.—(RILL), a river which runs into Delaware bay.

BROADDAVEN, a bay of the Atlantic, on the west coast of Ireland.

BROADHEAD'S CREEK, a river of the United States, in Pennsylvania, which runs into the Delaware.

BROAD RIVER, an arm of the sea on the east coast of North America, which extends along the west and north-west sides of Beaufort or Port Royal island, on the coast of South Carolina, and receives the river Chocoma from the north-west.—2d. A river in Georgia, which runs into Savannah river, between Petersburg and Lisbon.

BROAD-STAIRS, a village of England, county of Kent, in the isle of Thanet, much resorted to for sea-bathing. 2 miles N. Ramsgate.

BROADWATER, a river of England, in Cumberland, which falls into the Irish sea.

BROADWATER, a village and parish of England, county of Sussex. Population 3726.

BROCKENHURST, a hamlet of England county of Southampton. Population 818.

BROCKFORD, a parish of England, in the county of Suffolk. Population 937.

BRON, a market town of Slavonia, 110 miles W. Belgrade. Population 1400.—The name of several other small towns in Hungary, Bohemia, &c.

BRONERA, a town of Hindostan, province of Gujerat, district of Champoucer. Long. 73. 24. E. Lat. 22. 13. N.

BRONY, a town of Austrian Galicia, in the circle of Brody or Zlocow. Population 15,000, of whom 13,000 are Jews.

BRONX, a flourishing village of the Netherlands, in North Holland. Population 750.

BRONCH, a village of the Prussian states, 3 miles from Eschweiler. Population 1500.

BROWN ISLANDS, a cluster of small islands in the bay of Bengal. Long. 92. 50. E. Lat. 19. 50. N.—Also other two small islands on the coast of New Guinea and in the bay of Bengal.

BROWNEN, a town of the Prussian states. Here are manufactures of leather, stockings, and linen stuffs; and a trade is carried on in corn, wool, timber, and leather. 30 miles N. W. Thorn.

BROMHAM, a township and parish of England, in Wiltshire. Population 1357.

BROMLEY, a town and parish of England, in the county of Kent. Population 3147. 10 miles S. S. E. London.

BROMSGROVE, a town of England, county of Worcester, on the Salwarp. The church has a handsome tower and spire. It has a weekly market, and two fairs annually. Population 7519.

BROMSWICK, WEST, a small town and parish of England, county of Stafford. Population of the parish 9505.

BROMYARD, a town of England, county of Hereford. The church is a handsome edifice. Population 1227.

BRODLO, a decayed town of Italy, 12 miles S. Venice.

BROW, a town of the Sardinian states, in Piedmont, with 2900 inhabitants.

BRUNTE, or BRONTI, a market town in the island of Sicily, in the Val di Demona, bestowed, with its territory, on Lord Nelson, in 1798, under the title of a duchy, in reward of his naval exploits.

BROWN CREEK, a river of the United States, in New York, which joins East river in West Chester.

BROOKE, a county of the United States, in Virginia. Population 5843. Slaves 332. Chief town Wellsburg.

BROOKFIELD, a township of the United States, in Orange county, Vermont. Population 1304. 17 miles S. Montpelier.—2d, A post township in Worcester county, Massachusetts. It is one of the oldest and most populous towns in the county. It contains 2 parishes, East and West. Population 3170. 18 miles W. Worcester, and 58 W. Boston.

—3d, A post township in Fairfield county, Connecticut. Population 1037. 6 miles N. E. Danbury, and 33 N. W. New-Haven.—4th, A post township in Madison county, New York. Population 4042. 22 miles S. Utica.

BROOKHAVEN, a post township of the United States, in Suffolk county, New York, on Long Island. Population 4176.

BROOKLYN, a post township of the United States, and capital of Windham county, Connecticut. Population 1900.—2d, In King's county, New York, on Long Island. Population 4402.

BROOKVILLE, a post township of the United States, and capital of Franklin county, Indiana, in the forks of White-water river. It was laid out in 1811, and already contains nearly 100 buildings, a market-house, a brick court-house and jail. 28 miles N. Lawrenceburg.

BROOME, a county of the United States, in New York, on the Susquehanna. Population 3128. Chief town Chenango.—2d, A post township in Schoharie county, New York, 58 miles S. W. Albany. Pop. 1842.

BROOK, or BRAC, a free town of Transylvania, with 3200 inhabitants.

BROGA, a village of Scotland, county of Aberdeenshire, on the sea coast.

BROSELEY, a town and parish of England, county of Salop, on the Severn. Here are extensive iron works. A weekly market is held here. Population 4814. 146 miles N. W. London.

BROTHERA, a cluster of small islands in the straits of Babelmandel. Long. 43. 19. E. Lat. 12. 10. N.—The name also of several small islands in the Eastern seas.

BROTHER'S VALLEY, a township of the United States, in Somerset county, Pennsylvania. Population 1314.

BROTHERTON, a parish of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1624.

BROTHOCK, a river of Scotland, in Perthshire, which runs into the sea at Aberbrothock.

BROUAGE, a fortified town of France, department of the Lower Charente, with 150 houses. 5 miles S. W. Rochefort.

BROOKER, a river of the United States, in Indiana, which joins the Wabash from the north, above Fort Harrison.

BROUGHTON IN FURNES, a township of England, county of Lancaster. Population 1253. 10 miles N. N. W. Ulverstone, and 280 from London.

BROUGHTY FERRY, a village of Scotland, on the Tay, 4 miles E. Dundee.

BROW HEAD, a cape on the south coast of Ireland, in the county of Cork.

BROWN, a county of the United States, in Ohio, on the Ohio, between Adams and Clermont counties. Chief town Ripley.

BROWNVILLE, a post township of the United States, and capital of Jackson county, Illinois, 40 miles S. E. Kaskaskia.

BROWNVILLE, a borough and post township of the United States, in Fayette county, Pennsylvania, on the south bank of the Monongahela. Next to Pittsburgh it is the most considerable place in the western part of the state. It has a bank and printing-office, and in its vicinity numerous mills and abundance of coal. Above 100 boats, each of 100 tons burden, are annually made here for the trade on the Ohio. Here is a steel manufactory, capable of making annually 70 tons of steel. Pop. (including Bridgeport), estimated in 1817 at 3000 or 4000. 33 miles S. Pittsburgh.

BRUCHAL, a well built town in the grand duchy of Baden, 11 miles S. E. Spire. Population 6000.

BUCK, a market town of Bavaria, 17 miles N. N. W. Anspach.

BRUCK ON THE LEYTHA, a town of Lower Austria, with 300 houses.—The name of several other small towns in Germany.

BRUG, a river of England, county of Somerset, which falls into the Bristol channel.

BURENA, a large and opulent city of the Netherlands, with a number of canals centering in it, about six miles from the sea. In the 14th century it was one of the greatest places of commerce in Europe, but toward the end of the 15th century began to decline. It still carries on a considerable trade with Ostend, Bruges, Ghent, and the north of Europe. The principal public buildings are the town-house, the exchange, and lycee, formerly the celebrated convent of the Downs de Dunes, and the church of Notre Dame, with its elevated spire. In the church of Notre Dame, the tombs of Charles the Brave, and his daughter, Mary of Burgundy, are preserved with great care. Bruges carries on a considerable trade in grain; and when the ports of England are open, immense quantities are bought and sold here every Saturday, for exportation. A good deal of coarse lace is made here by the female population, and there is some trade in linen. 33 miles N. E. Dunkirk. Long. 2. 13. 33. E. Lat. 51. 12. 33. N.

BRUGEN, a town of the Prussian states, 6 miles N. E. Ruremonde. Population 1900.

BRUGUIÈRE, a town of France, in Languedoc, with 4000 inhabitants.

BRÜHL, or BRUET, a town of the Prussian states, 8 miles S. Cologne. Population 1950.

BRUMATH, a market town of France, department of the Lower Rhine. Pop. 2700.

BRUMMES, a parochial village of the Netherlands. Population 2400.

BRUNN, the capital of Moravia, and the chief town in a circle of the same name, strongly fortified. It has manufactures of fine cloth, silk stuffs, hair cloth, and soap. Among the public buildings are the parish church of St James, the meeting-house of the states, the town-house, the palace of prince Lichtenstein, and the extensive manufactures in the suburbs. 100 miles S. E. Prague.

BRUNNEN, a neat and populous town of Switzerland, 24 miles S. W. Schweiz.

BRUNSHAWEN, a village of Hanover, duchy of Bremen, on the Elbe.

BRUNSWICK, a large and fortified town of the Brunswick states, the capital of the principality of Wolfenbüttel, on the river Ocker. The principal public buildings are twelve churches, the large public wine cellars, the exchequer, the meeting-house of the diet, the mint, the opera-house, the new town-house, the arsenal, and the cathedral of St Blasius, with the tombs of deceased members of the royal family. The manufactures are wool, yarn, linen, porcelain, pasteboard, paper hangings, and a variety of chemical preparations. 47 miles W. N. W. Magdeburg.

BRUNSWICK, a county of the United States, in North Carolina, on the sea coast, at the mouth of Cape Fear river. Population 4770. Slaves 2204. Chief town Smithville.

BRUNSWICK, a township of the United States, in Brunswick county, North Carolina, on Cape Fear river, 30 miles above its mouth, 17 below Wilmington.

BRUNSWICK, a post township of the United States, in Cumberland county, Maine, on the south-west side of the Androscoggin. The falls of the Androscoggin furnish many valuable sites for mills and manufactories. Bowdoin College was founded in this town by the legislature of Massachusetts, and endowed by them with grants of land in Maine. It was incorporated in 1794, and went into operation in 1802. Its name was given it in honour of Governor Bowdoin, its most liberal benefactor. It resembles Harvard college in its mode of instruction, and government. It has a president, two professors, and two tutors. A chemical apparatus, an excellent philosophical apparatus, and a very respectable mineralogical cabinet, belong to the college. Its funds were estimated in 1812 at about 84,000 dollars, of which 52,000 were in real estate. The income was about 3000 dollars. The library contains between 4000 and 5000 volumes. Population in 1810, 2682. 30 miles N. E. Portland.

BRUNSWICK, a seaport of the United States, and capital of Glynn county, Georgia, on the north bank of Turtle river, 10 miles S. Darien, 80 S. S. W. Savannah.

BRUNSWICK, a township of the United States, in Rensselaer county, New York, 9 miles E. Troy. Population 2302.—21. A county in Virginia, between Nottoway and Meherrin rivers. Pop. 15,411. Slaves 9300.

BRUNSWICK, NEW, a city of the United States, in Middlesex county, New Jersey, on the south-west bank of the Raritan. It contains a court-house, jail, college edifice, and five houses for public worship; one for Dutch Reformed, one for Presbyterians, one for Episcopalians, one for Methodists, and one for Baptists. The situation of the town is low, but not unhealthy. Queen's college was founded in this city by ministers of the Reformed Dutch church, for the education of their clergy, and incorporated in 1770. For a long period its prospects were gloomy, and its success discouraging. In 1810, a theological seminary was established in the city by the general synod of the Reformed Dutch churches, and to a certain extent connected with the college. The two departments, however, are maintained wholly by different funds, and are amenable to different tribunals. The college edifice is of stone, three-stories high, and unfinished. The exercises of the college have for some time past been suspended, and the building appropriated to the accommodation of theological students. The library contains 700 or 800 volumes. The theological department has two professors, and about 15 students. Population in 1810, including the township, 6312. 16 miles N. E. Princeton, 33 S. W. New York, 57 N. E. Philadelphia.

BRUNSWICK, NEW, one of the four British provinces in North America, bounded S. by the bay of Fundy, W. by the United States and part of Lower Canada, N. by Chaleur bay, E. by the gulf of St Lawrence.

BRUNY ISL., an island on the south-east coast of Van Diemen's Land, about 26 miles in length, and of very irregular figure. Long. 147. 29. E. Lat. 42. 21. S.

BRUREK, a village of Ireland, county of Limerick, 16 miles S. Limerick.

BRUSH CREEK, a river of the United States, in Ohio, which runs into the Ohio, in Adam's county.

BRUSSELS, a large and handsome city, the capital of the southern provinces of the kingdom of the Netherlands, is situated in Brabant, on the river Senne or Sienne. Its circumference is said to be seven English miles, and it has seven gates. The ramparts, which are planted with trees, now form most beautiful walks around the city. It has extensive suburbs, consisting of several villages, joined to the city by a continuity of streets. Brussels contains seven parish churches within the walls, and is divided into eight sections. It has also eight public squares, of great beauty and elegance. Its chief ornaments, however, are its public walks, no city in Europe possessing one superior to that which is called the Green Alley, or to the great interior square called the Park. In the great market-place stands the hotel de ville, an old but handsome edifice in the Gothic style. Its turret is 364 feet in height, and surmounted by a gigantic figure of St Michael, in copper, 17 feet high. The church of St Gudule is a magnificent structure, containing no less than 16 chapels, adorned in the interior with beautiful paintings. The chapel of Notre Dame is likewise an elegant building; and the church of the Capuchins was one of the finest that that order possessed in Europe. There are, besides, within the walls, several elegant mansions, belonging to noblemen. The opera-house is a stately edifice, in the Italian style, built in the year 1700. The public fountains are in number 20, and are all embellished with sculptures. There are, besides, numerous charitable foundations. A central school was established in Brussels, by the French government. Here there is a library, containing nearly 100,000 volumes, mostly saved from suppressed convents; an extensive and valuable collection of paintings, a cabinet of natural history, small but select. Brussels is celebrated for its manufactures of lace, camlets, and carpets, also of carriages. The other articles made here are ticking, various kinds of cotton and woollen stuffs, silk stockings, galleons, earthenware, &c. It carries on considerable trade, not only with the interior of the Netherlands, but with foreign countries, by means of the canals which bring it into communication with the Scheldt. This city owed its origin to St Gary, bishop of Cambrai, in the commencement of the 7th century. Population in 1814, 80,000. 23 miles S. Antwerp, 153 N. N. E. Paris Long. 4. 23. 18. E. Lat. 50. 54. 59. N.

BAYTON, or BAYWTON, a town of England, in Somersetshire. Stockings and some woollens are manufactured here. Pop. 3076.

BAYVIEW, a post township of the United States, in Cayuga county, New York, on the Erie canal, 8 miles N. E. Auburn. Population 2036.

BUCHERES, a town of France, department of the Yonne. Population 1800.

BUCHAN, a county of the United States, in Georgia, on the sea coast, separated from Chatham county by Ogeechee river. Population 2827.

BRECEANY, an open town of Austrian Galicia. Population 4377.

BRESC, or BRESST LITOV, a town of European Russia, government of Grodno, 100 miles E. Warsaw.

BUA, a small but fruitful and populous island in the north part of the Adriatic, near the coast of Dalmatia. Long. 16. 30. E. Lat. 43. 20. N.

BUCCARI, a market town of the Austrian empire, on the east side of the gulf of Venice. Population 3000. 6 miles E. Fiume.

BUCHAN-NESS, the most eastern point of Scotland. Long. 1. 43. W. Lat. 57. 25. N.

BUCHAREST, a large town of European Turkey, in Walachia, the capital of the province, on the Dembrowitza. The houses are for the most part wretched clay huts, with the exception of several stately edifices of stone. The prevailing religion is the Greek, and the town is the seat of an archbishop. There are here various classical schools. 250 miles N. N. W. Constantinople. Long. 25. 51. E. Lat. 44. 29. N.

BUCHEN, a town in the grand duchy of Baden. Population 1800.

BUCHWEILER, a town of France, department of the Lower Rhine. Pop. 2700.

BUCK CREEK, a river of America, which runs into the Ohio, Long. 86. 44. W. Lat. 37. 56. N.

BUCK'S CREEK, a river of the United States, in Kentucky, which runs into the Cumberland, Long. 84. 25. W. Lat. 36. 46. N.

BUCK'S HARBOUR, a bay of the Atlantic, on the south coast of Main, west of Machias bay. Long. 63. 34. W. Lat. 44. 42. N.

BUCKENHAM, New and Old, two parishes of England, county of Norfolk. Population 720—1134.

BUCKFIELD, a post township of the United States, in Oxford county, Maine, 6 miles S. Paris. Population 1251.

BUCKHAVEN, a small fishing town of Scotland, county of Fife.

BUCKINGHAM, a county of England, bounded N. by Northamptonshire, E. by the counties of Bedford, Hertford, and Middlesex, S. by Berkshire, and W. by the county of Oxford. It is about 45 miles in length by 18 in breadth, and is 138 in circuit. Its superficial area is computed at 745 square miles, or 478,790 square acres, of which 323,000 are arable and in pasture, and 30,000 in wood. The principal rivers are the Thames and the Ouse. The south-eastern part of the county is hilly. The other parts of the county, particularly the vale of Aylesbury, are noted for fertility. Good marble is quarried near Newport; and there are fuller's earth pits at Wotton, on the borders of Bedfordshire, about 3 miles N. of Woburn. Gypsum is obtained at Brill, and used for plaster; and also small quantities of amber. Buckinghamshire is celebrated for corn and cattle, which are its principal produce. The chief manufactures of the county are lace and paper. Buckinghamshire is divided into 8 hundreds, containing 200 parishes and 15 market towns. Fourteen members of parliament are returned from this county. Antiquities, occasionally discovered, such as a Roman pavement, coins, and fragments of arms, prove that the Romans have been established here. Population 124,068.

BUCKINGHAM, a town of England, and the county town of Buckinghamshire, is situated on the Ouse, over which there are three stone bridges. The buildings, which are principally of brick, are scattered over a considerable surface. The church, which occupies an elevated site, was built in 1780. Its tower and spire are 150 feet high. Calvinists, Independents, Methodists, and Quakers, have also places of worship. The new town-hall is a large brick building, at the top of which is a gilt swan; the borough arms. The town is governed by a bailiff and 12 burgesses, in whom the right of electing two members of parliament is vested. The principal occupation of the inhabitants is the making of white thread lace. There is a weekly market and ten annual fairs; and the vicinity of the celebrated gardens at Stowe add much to the advantage of its inhabitants. Population 1674. 26 miles N. E. Oxford.

BUCKINGHAM, a county in Lower Canada, chiefly in the district of Three-Rivers, on the S. side of the St. Lawrence.

BUCKINGHAM, a county of the United States, in Virginia, on James river, and extending south to the Appomattox. Population 20,089. Slaves 11,675. Chief town New Canton.—2d, A post township of Bucks county, Pennsylvania. Population 1713.

BUCKINGHAM, a town in York county, Lower Canada, on the Ottawa river, N. W. Montreal.

BUCKLAND, a township of the United States, in Hertford county, Lower Canada, 18 miles S. E. Quebec.—2d, In Franklin county, Massachusetts, 10 miles S. W. Greenfield. Population 1697.

BUCKOW, a considerable town of the Prussian states, 28 miles E. Berlin.

BUCKRAH, a town of Hindostan, province of Oude. Long. 63. 4. E. Lat. 26. 54. N.

BUDGE, a county of the United States, in Pennsylvania, on the Delaware. Pop. 32,671. Chief towns Doylestown, Newton, and Bristol.

BUDKIN, a township of the United States, in Ross county, Ohio, 18 miles N. W. Chillicothe. Population in 1813, 1680.

BUDAPEST, a city of Hungary, the capital of the lower division of the country, on the W. bank of the Danube. It is divided into four quarters, one of which has communication by an immense bridge of boats across the Danube, with the opposite town of Pest. The castle of this place was chosen by the Emperor Louis I. as his place of residence. Here Matthias I. founded a celebrated library, which was destroyed by the Turks in 1526. A Greek school is established here, where both ancient and modern Greek are taught. Buda is famous for its baths. Population 30,000. 123 miles E. S. E. Vienna. Long. 19. 2. 36. E. Lat. 47. 20. 44. N.

BUDAVOR, a town and district of Hindostan, in Delhi. Long. 72. 4. E. Lat. 31. 2. N.

BUDER, a small village and seaport of England, county of Cornwall, in the Bristol channel, 223 miles W. London.

BUDER, a village of the Netherlands, in Dutch Brabant, with 1900 inhabitants.

BUDIN, a town and castle of Bohemia, circle of Rakonitz. Houses 170. 20 miles N. Prague.

BUDLETON, a town and parish of England, in Devonshire. Population 1700.

BUDRUCK, a town of Hindostan, province of Orissa. Long. 68. 44. E. Lat. 21. 8. N.

BUDWEIS, a mining town of Bohemia, the capital of a circle of the same name, situated on the Moldau. Manufactures of cloth and saltpetre are established here. Population 4000. 68 miles S. Prague.

BUXNAIRE, one of the Leeward islands, in the West Indies, 82 miles E. Curaçoa. Long. 67. 56. W. Lat. 12. 26. N.

BUXNAVENTURA, a Spanish settlement and mission on the coast of New California. Long. 241. 2. E. Lat. 34. 16. N.

BUXNAVENTURA, a seaport of South America, 200 miles W. Santa Fe de Bogota. Long. 76. 42. E. Lat. 3. 56. N.

BUXNAVENTURA, a province and government in the Spanish dominions of South America, erected into a viceroyalty in 1778. It is bounded N. by extensive tracts of desert country inhabited by savages, E. by Brazil and the Atlantic ocean, S. by Patagonia, and W. by Peru and Chili. Its length may be estimated at upwards of 1600 miles, and its breadth nearly 1000 miles. The provinces of Charcas and Chiquitos, formerly belonging to Peru, were united to it in the year 1776, and by the union of this additional territory it forms a compact body of land nearly square, stretching through 26 degrees of south latitude. It is divided into five governments or provinces, namely, 1. Buenos Ayres, or Rio de la Plata. 2. Paraguay. 3. Tucuman. 4. Los Charcas, or Potosi. 5. Chiquitos, or Cuzco.

The Rio de la Plata is the chief river in this immense tract of country. The Paraguay, by which name it is distinguished in the upper part of its course, runs nearly in the centre of the American continent, from north to south; and it receives from the mountains of Brazil the two great streams of the Parana and the Uruguay, while from the west it receives the Pilcomayo, the Vermejo, and the Salado, which flow down the eastern declivity of the Andes. At Buenos Ayres, which lies about 200 miles from its mouth, the Rio de la Plata is 30 miles broad, and the shore being little elevated, the eye ten seldom reach from one side to the other. This vast estuary of fresh water is not, however, useful in proportion to its extent, being deformed by rocks and sand-banks, and rendered of dangerous navigation, not only by its shoals and shallows, but likewise by the impetuous torrents of wind which sweep at intervals over the vast plains of the Pampas, to the S. W. of Buenos Ayres, whence they are called Pamperos, and rush down the wide opening with unequalled fury. The only part in which ships of any burden are perfectly secure in them, is that of Monte Video, although the ports of Maldonado, Barrigon, Buenos Ayres, and Colonia, afford anchorage more or less secure. In a country so extensive, the climate is various. In the plains the heat is extreme; in ordinary summer weather, the thermometer rising to 85 degrees; and in the hottest weather to 100. In winter it was generally reckoned cold weather when the thermometer fell to 45; but in some seasons it has been known to fall to 30. At Buenos Ayres, and generally on the coast, the winds are frequently violent. The westerly wind sweeping over the boundless plains of the interior, rushes down upon the coast in the most tremendous hurricanes. The climate is moist; and during summer, rains are common, and are frequently accompanied by the most dreadful thunder and lightning. The viceroyalty, with the exception of the western provinces of Los Charcas, Potosi, &c. which were annexed to it in 1778, constitutes in general one vast and uniform plain. Such is the extreme flatness of the country, that it has been calculated by barometrical observations, that the river Paraguay, in its course from north to south, does not fall above one perpendicular foot within the space of 400 miles. This flat country is covered with lakes. Of these, the celebrated lake of Los Narayes is 330 miles in length, and in breadth 120 miles, but so shallow, that it is not navigable in any part, except for canoes and small craft. There are various other lakes in Paraguay, of the same description as that of Narayes. In the western and more elevated parts of this viceroyalty, which formerly belonged to Peru, the lake Titicaca is included. It is about 240 miles in circumference, from 70 to 80 fathoms in depth, and is navigable for the largest vessels. The principal characteristic of the other numerous lakes which appear on the plains of Tucuman, to the south of Buenos Ayres, and of the rivers which communicate with them, is, that they are more or less impregnated with salt. There is in these regions an immense track of land, the soil of which is saturated with fossil salt. This territory is about 600 or 700 miles in length, and about 150 in breadth, in which there is neither rivulet, lake, nor well, which is not brackish. The vast plains into which this viceroyalty is spread out, present a vast expanse of varying grass, extending for 500 miles, with few interruptions, either from wood or from any obstructions, over which innumerable herds of cattle rove uncolled and unowned, and whose hides and tallow are occasionally sought after by the Spanish hunters, and form a principal article of the trade of Buenos Ayres. These regions afford, besides, a haunt to numerous herds of deer, as well as to a great abundance of ostriches, armadillos, partridges, wild geese, ducks, and other game; and towards the frontiers of Chili, guanacos and vicuñas are seen in considerable numbers. In these trackless deserts there are no land-marks or traces by which the road can be discovered, for many hundred miles, and the route is therefore pursued by the compass. Covered carts or caravans are used, which are made almost as commodious as a house, with doors to shut, and windows on each side. From Buenos Ayres to Potosi and Lima, a road has been established, which is much more frequented than the route from Buenos Ayres to Chili, and which is much more commodious. As there are no tribes of wild and unsubdued Indians in that track, it is free from the danger of their incursions; and in 1748, regular stages were fixed all the way, post-houses were erected, and relays of horses and carriages were provided. These carriages are covered waggons, drawn by oxen; but all kinds of merchandise, and the treasure that is conveyed from the mines of Peru to the banks of the Plata, are principally transported on the backs of mules. This route from Buenos Ayres to Potosi, which is 1017 geographical miles, and from Potosi to Lima, which is 1215 miles more, passes over the highest ridges of the Andes, and presents fatigues and sufferings to the inexperienced traveller, of which he is little aware. In a few hours he suddenly passes from the scorching heat of the unsheltered plains, to the perpetual winter which reigns amid the snowy summits of the Andes; and the health of the most robust European is undermined by the effect of this violent transition. As some compensation, he is free, however, from the incredible swarms of locusts, crickets, mosquitoes, ants, singing-toads, frogs, serpents, and crocodiles, which are called into life and vigour by the warmer climate of the lower regions. The abrupt and frightful precipices into which the principal ridges of the Cordillera rise, are another source of difficulty to the traveller, who the passage of the rivers, which are dangerous, both from the docility of the ground, which renders them extremely rapid, and from the sudden melting of the mountain snows, which causes them unexpectedly to swell and to overflow the adjacent grounds. In these mountainous regions, many brooks and torrents are, as it were, imprisoned between high and perpendicular banks of rock and foam, in unapproachable and dark gorges, till they break out and extend over the plains, and by the quick accumulation of these mountain torrents, many an unhappy traveller has been swept away with his mule, to meet certain destruction amid the glens and precipices through which the stream takes its rapid course. To facilitate the progress of the traveller in these difficult roads, rope bridges have been generally constructed across the rivers, over which the traveller passes on foot, and the mule being fastened to the bridge by thongs round his body, is easily transported over the impetuous torrent. The valleys which are interspersed among the mountains of secondary elevation, though of a greater height many of them than the Pyrenees, enjoy, from their sheltered situation, a temperate and favourable climate, which adapts them to the production both of European fruit and grain. Wheat is cultivated with success, and apples, peaches, cherries, plums, &c. grow to great perfection. There are extensive natural pastures also for cattle or sheep, large flocks of which are reared by the inhabitants. In the lower valleys, maize, cocon, olives, sugar-canes, grapes, oranges, citrons, and figs, grow to great perfection; also the herb of Paraguay called Paraguay tea, which being infused with water, makes the favourite beverage of all the inhabitants. The western provinces of this viceroyalty are generally mountainous and barren, rising frequently so high, that the climate is adverse to all vegetation. But these regions are rich in mineral treasures; they abound in silver, and frequently in gold, which is sometimes procured by mining, and in other parts gathered from the sands, or collected from the streams. Of the wild animals common to this country, the most remarkable are the jaguar or American tiger, the cougar, and the puma or American lion; the anta or danta, an animal between the elk and the buffalo, of the size of an ass, without horns, and having its head long and tapering; also tatoes or armadillos, foxes, rabbits, deer, goats, raccons, various sorts of wild cats, the tiger cat, several quadrupeds resembling the martin, the polecat, and the ferret, but much stronger; wild horses and tamed cattle; wild hogs and wild dogs. Among the domestic animals, the lama, about four feet high, and in shape resembling a camel, and the paco or vicuña, which bears the same relation to the former animal as the ass to the horse, are the most remarkable. Birds are very numerous in this viceroyalty. The emu or ostrich is bred in the plains; the condor in the higher regions; and carrion vultures are common, as well as a great variety of smaller birds, many of them possessing beautiful plumage, and melodious notes. The rivers abound with great variety of fish. Of amphibious animals, turtles are sometimes, but not often, met with; seals and sea-lions abound at the isle de Lobos, off Monte Vidio; and alligators or caymans are numerous, of a large size, voracious, and destructive, in all the rivers.

The trade of Buenos Ayres, as of all the other Spanish colonies, was long restricted by the narrowest maxims of monopoly. From this restriction it was gradually emancipated; and since 1808, when an independent government was established, it is perfectly free, subject only to such port duties as the government may think it expedient to impose. Great Britain and the United States seem to have the principal share of this trade.

The river Plata was first entered by Sebastian Cabot in 1536, and after various contests with the natives, and many intestine divisions among the oldest themselves, a settlement was effected in the country. The city of Buenos Ayres was founded in 1580; and though engaged in perpetual hostility with the native powers, the Spaniards gradually spread over and subdued the country.

In 1806, Buenos Ayres was attacked and taken by a squadron under Sir Home Popham. This small force was afterwards overpowered by the Spaniards, who retook the city. Sir Home Popham retired to the mouth of the Plata, and took possession of the fort of Maldonado; having received reinforcements, Buenos Ayres was again attacked on the 5th July 1807, when the invaders were finally repulsed with great loss. Since this period an independent government has been established at Buenos Ayres, which appears to act with great vigour and success. It has not been yet formally recognised by the mother country; which, however, appears to have no chance of ever re-establishing her lost authority over her South American colonies.

BUENOS AYRES, the capital of the above viceroyalty and province. It is situated in a plain about 200 miles from the mouth of the river Plata, on its southern shore, where the river is 30 miles broad. It was originally founded by Don Pedro de Mendoza in 1535; and it contained, in the year 1700, about 16,000 inhabitants. In 1776 it was made the capital of the viceroyalty of Buenos Ayres. Since this period it has greatly increased in wealth and in population. Its streets are large; they are laid out according to a regular plan; and they are paved on each side, though not in the middle. Almost every house has a garden, both before and behind; and many have balconies with lattice work for the reception of odoriferous shrubs and flowers. The cathedral is spacious and elegant; it has a cupola of excellent workmanship, and a portico, the design and execution of which are much extolled. The churches of St Francis, and that of the convent of Mercy, are next in estimation, and have cupolas and steeples nearly in the same style as the cathedral. The church of St John, which is on the skirts of the town, is appropriated to the Christian Indians. The town-hall, which stands on one side of the great square or parade, is a large and handsome building, likewise erected on a plan of the Jesuits. There are several convents and nunneries; also a hospital for men, and one for women, a founding hospital, and an hospital for orphans. All these edifices are built of a beautifully white stone, which is found in a small plain not far from the town. The castle of Art is very insignificant in point of military importance; it contains a house for the military governor, and a royal chapel.

Buenos Ayres is well supplied with provisions, particularly with fish, in great abundance and variety, from the river. Notwithstanding the great breadth of the river Plata, the navigation to Buenos Ayres is extremely dangerous, owing to rocks, sand-banks, and shallows, and also to impetuous winds. The port of Buenos Ayres is a great outlet for the produce, not only of the extensive country which lies to the east of the Andes, but also for that of Peru and Chili. The most valuable commodities are sent here to be exchanged for European goods, such as vicuña-wool from Peru, copper from the mines of Coquimbo, gold from Chili, and silver from Potosi. The finest tobacco, sugars, cotton, thread, yellow wax, and cotton cloth, are imported; also Paraguay tea. The commerce carried on between Peru and Buenos Ayres is chiefly for cattle and mules to an immense value. Population, according to Azara, 40,000; according to those who have lately visited the place, 60,000. Buenos Ayres was taken possession of by the British in 1806. It was retaken six weeks after by the inhabitants; and a new attempt to take it by the British, after they had received reinforcements, failed with great loss. Long. 57. 24. W. Lat. 34. 35. S.

BUFFALO, a post township and port of entry of the United States, and capital of Niagara county, New York, at the outlet of Lake Erie. It was burnt by the British during the late war, but has been since rebuilt. Population 1504. 14 miles S. Niagara falls, 80 N. E. by E. Erie, 240 E. Sandusky, 302 E. Detroit, 222 N. N. E. Pittsburg, and 291 W. Albany.—3d, A township in Cumberland county, Pennsylvania. Population 570.—3d, In Washington county, Pennsylvania. Population 1416.—4th, In Armstrong county, Pennsylvania. Population 1150.—5th, In Butler county, Pennsylvania. Population 375.—6th, In Guernsey county, Ohio, on Wills Creek, 6 miles S. Cambridge.—7th, In Pike county, Missouri.—8th, A post village in Mason county, Virginia.

BUFFALO, a river of the United States, in Niagara county, New York, runs into Lake Erie, at Buffalo.—3d, A river in Pennsylvania, runs into the west branch of the Susquehanna, above Lewisburg.—3d, In Mississippi, which runs into the Mississippi, 2 miles above Fort Adams.—The name of several other rivers in the United States.

BUFFALO LAKE, in North America, near Copper-mine river.

BUG, or Bug, a considerable river of Poland, which falls into the Vistula.

BUGA, a city of South America, 15 leagues N. E. Popayan. Lat. 2. 58. N.

BURDEN, a town and parish of England, county of Huntingdon. Pop. 373.

BURSA, a village of Asiatic Turkey, 3 miles S. S. Bursa, inhabited by Turks and Greeks.

BURGES, LE, a town of France, department of the Dordogne. Population 2500.

BURTON, a town, the capital of a district of the same name in Hindostan, on the E. bank of the Hyphasis, in Lat. 30. 40. N. Long. 71. 45. E. 70 miles from the city of Moultan.

BUTH, a well built market town of Germany, 6 miles S. W. Baden. Pop. 1600.

BUTALANCE, a town of Spain, in Andalusia. Population 4560.

BUJANA, a large and populous town of Hindostan. Long. 71. 28. E. Lat. 22. 55. N.

BUILTH, an ancient and well built town and parish of South Wales, in the county of Brecknock, on the Wye. 171 miles W. N. W. London.

BUINAAH, POINT, a cape on the west coast of Ireland, in the county of Mayo.

BUKHARIA, BUKHARA, or BOKHARA, a country of Asia, whose extent and limits have never been exactly defined by modern geographers. It is commonly called Great Bukharia, in contradistinction to a neighbouring territory, designed by Europeans Little Bukharia, which bounds it on the E. On the N. and W. it seems to be bounded by Karsm and Turkestan, whose geography is equally obscure; also by a desert country, and by the river Sirr or Sihoon, and S. by Persia and the states of Northern Hindostan. It extends, according to the most accurate estimate, about 700 miles from N. to S., and 350 from E. to W. The country is watered by the Sihoon N.; the Amu or Oxus S.; and by the river Sogd. Bukharia is inhabited by two distinct races of mankind, one called Tanjiks, Tajiks, or Tadjets, a name said to signify citizens, and to have been imposed on them by their conquerors; and the other, the Usbecks, a principal tribe of Tartars.

BUKHARIA, BOKHARA, or BOGAR, a city of Asia, the capital of Great Bukharia, situated on a river, flowing into the Oxus, from which latter it is distant about 50 miles. The houses are low, and for the most part built of mud; but its numerous mosques and caravanseries are constructed of stone. It has always been celebrated for the study of theology and of Mahometan law; and has several colleges. It has manufactures of cotton yarn; calicoes, and soap, which are chiefly exported to Persia. From that country velvet, silk, shawls, shalcoons, indigo, cochineal, and coral, are received in return. Rhubarb, musk, and castor, are obtained from Tashkend and from the Kathoud Tartars; and precious stones, together with lapis lazuli, from Badakshan. Merchants of all kinds now meet with great advantage, and all religions are tolerated. The population is supposed to exceed 100,000. Long. supposed 62. 45. E. Lat. 36. 37. N.

BUKHARIA, LITTLE, a country of Asia, which is no better known to Europeans than the former country of Great Bukharia. It appears to lie amidst deserts, and is bounded N. by the country of the Kalmycks and Eygur, which latter is sometimes considered an integral part of it; E. by the Desert of Kobi; S. by the mountains of Thibet; and W. by Great Bukharia. It is computed to extend about 700 miles in length from E. to W., and to occupy a space, stretching 200 miles from N. to S., of such a peculiar form, however, that it is nowhere above 140 miles broad. The climate is temperate, though warm.

Bukovina, a province in the Austrian empire, bounded N. by the Danube, E. and S. by Moldavia, W. by Transylvania, Galicia proper, and Lodomeria. Pop. 190,400.

Bulama, an island on the western coast of Africa, one of the archipelago of the Bisagos. Long. 18. W. Lat. 11. N.

Bulgaria, Little, a province of Turkey in Europe, which extends from the Black sea to Servia, from which it is separated by high mountains. The Danube, which discharges itself into the Black sea, on the N. extremity of this province, divides it from Bessarabia, Moldavia, and Walachia; while the Sardinian mountains and the river Kamtchi separate it on the S. from Macedonia and Rometia proper. Population supposed 1,500,000.

Bulkeh, or Balk, a country of Asia, formerly a province of Persia, but now a dependency of the kingdom of Cabul. Neither its extent nor boundaries can be accurately defined; it has the river Oxus N.; Badakshan E., the mountains of Hindoo Koh and Paropamisian S., and a desert country W. Bulkeh is supposed to stretch about 250 miles from E. to W., and 100 or 120 from N. to S. Population 1,000,000.

Bulkeh, the capital of the province of that name, situated on the river Dehast. This city is of great extent, and is surrounded by a wall: but from having been the constant subject of contention between the neighbouring states, it has suffered in proportion, and the whole inhabitants are now confined to a single corner. Population 5000 or 7000. Long. 65. 16. E. Lat. 36. 24. N.

Bull, a small island in the Atlantic, near the S. W. coast of Ireland.

Bull's Bay, or Baboul Bay, a noted bay in Newfoundland island. Lat. 47. 21. N.

Bullet, a county of the United States, in Kentucky, on the Ohio. Population 4311. Slaves 978.

Bullock, a county of the United States, in Georgia, between Ogeechee and Canoochee rivers. Chief town Statesborough. Population 3305. Slaves 428.

Bullskin, a township of the United States, in Fayette county, Pennsylvania, on the Touchingeny. Population 1439.

Bumeh, a fortified city of Persia, now the capital of the province of Kerman, and formerly its front town. It has formerly been infinitely larger, as is testified by the surrounding ruins; and its fountains are celebrated as the finest of all Persia. Long. 58. E. Lat. 30. 17. N.

Burgh, a seaport village of Scotland, in Argyshire, 114 miles N. W. Edinburgh.

Burges, a county of the United States, in North Carolina, the west corner of the state. Population 9277. Slaves 905. Chief town, Morristown. In this county are Bald, and Smoky mountains, lofty peaks of the Blue ridge. Here are the head waters of Santee river.

Burgeschun, an extensive district of Hindostan, province of Allahabad, lying between the 24th and 30th degrees of northern latitude. Its capital is Callagan.

Burca, a town of Bengal, in the district of Silhet. Long. 92. 18. E. Lat. 24. 24. N.

Burcay, a neat town of England, county of Suffolk, on the Waveney. It has two parish churches. The ruins of a Benedictine monastery stand between the churches. There is also a free grammar school. A weekly market is held, and two fairs annually. Population 3290. 38 miles N. N. E. Ipswich.

Burula, a town of Spain, in the island of Majorca. Population 2600.

Burroon, a small fortified town of Persia, province of Mekran.

Burtingford, a small town of England, county of Hertford.

Buntelau, a town of Bohemia, on the Iser, and chief place in the circle of the same name. Houses 400. 28 miles N. N. E. Prague.

Bunzelau, Silesian, a town of Silesia, on the river Bober. Population 3300. 42 miles W. Schweidnitz.

Bunwoot, an island in the Eastern sea, off the west coast of Mindanan, about 18 miles in circuit. Long. 124. 30. E. Lat. 7. 12. N.

Burampour, a town of Hindostan, in the circle of Cicacole, 17 miles S. W. Ganjam.

Burden, a town of Hindostan, province of Allahabad. Long. 82. 27. E. Lat. 24. 37. N.

Burdwan, the capital of a district of the same name in Bengal, on the N. bank of the Dumnoodah. Long. 87. 57. E. Lat. 23. 15. N.

Buren, a town of the Netherlands, on the Muhlengraben. Population 3500. 6 miles S. E. Utrecht.

Buren, the name of several places in Switzerland, the principal in the canton of Bern. 19 miles N. Bern.

Burge, a parish of England, county of Suffolk. Population 1292.

Burgdon, a town and parish of England, county of Oxford, situated on the river Windrush. The church is spacious, with a good spire. A market well supplied with corn and cattle is held weekly, and there are two annual fairs. Pop. 1686. 17 miles N. N. W. Oxford.

Burg, a town of the Prussian states, on the river Rhine, 4 miles N. E. Siegburg. Population 7000.

Burg, a market town of the Prussian states, duchy of Berg. Population 1600. The same name of several other smaller towns.

Burdas, a trading town of European Turkey, on the Black sea 68 miles N. N. E. Adrianople.

Burgan, an open town of Sardinia. Population 2400. 20 miles E. N. E. Ula.

Burton, a town of England, county of Lincoln. Pop. 803. 127 miles N. London.

Burghausen, a town in Upper Bavaria, on the Salza. Population 4300. 30 miles N. N. W. Salzburg.

BURTON-ON-SANDS, a village of England, county of Cumberland, once a Roman station. 4 miles N. W. Carlisle.

BURTON, a city of Spain, the capital of Old Castile, a place of great antiquity, on the right bank of the river Arlanzon, formerly defended by a strong castle, now in ruins. It is built in the form of a crescent, surrounded with old walls, and the streets are for the most part narrow, winding, and gloomy. Of the squares, there is one of considerable elegance, with a fine piazza. The public fountains are numerous. There is here a college, a school for the fine arts, and a surgical institution. Among the public buildings are the town-hall, the palace of Velasco, and several churches. That of St. Paul, which belongs to the Dominicans, is a Gothic structure of great beauty. The cathedral is of such extent, that divine service can be performed in eight chapels at a time, without causing confusion. These and other churches contain splendid mausoleums. Its manufactures are mostly of woollen stuffs. Population 9000. Burgos was besieged unsuccessfully by the British in 1812, but surrendered to them the following year without resistance. 142 miles N. Toledo.

BURGHARDT, a town of Saxony, county of Schonburg, with 2000 inhabitants.

BURGUETTA, EL, a town of Spain, in Navarre, 24 miles E. N. E. Pampeluna.

BURGUNDY, DUCHY of, a province in the east of France, now divided into the departments of the Saone and Loire, the Cote d'Or, and the Yonne: part of it also lies in those of the Nièvre, the Aube, the Upper Marne, and the Aisne.

BURHAMPOUR, a large city of Hindostan, situated on the Tates. Considerable trade is carried on in cotton goods. 100 miles N. Aungmyebad.

BURIAS, one of the Philippine islands.

BURKE, a county of the United States, in North Carolina, on Catawba river, among the mountains of the Blue ridge. Pop. 11,007. Slaves 1433. Chief town, Morgantown.—2d, A county in Georgia, on Savannah river. Population 19,858. Slaves 4091. Chieftown, Waynesborough.—3d, A post township in Caledonia county, Vermont, 45 miles N. E. Montpelier. Population 459.

BURLEY, a township of England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1900.

BURLINGTON, or BARDLINGTON, a seaport town of England, in the East Riding of Yorkshire, situated on a bay called Burlington bay, formed by Hamborough head, which is about 5 miles distant nearly N. E. Considerable trade is carried on here, and that part of it called Burlington Quay, which is built on the coast, is much resorted to for sea-bathing. The remains of Burlington church, founded in the reign of Henry I. prove that there have been a very fine structure. A market is held here, and two annual fairs. Population 3034. 20 miles from Scarborough.

BURLINGTON, a county of the United States, in New Jersey, on the Atlantic, and extending N. W. to Delaware river. Population 24,979. Chief towns, Mount Holly and Burlington.—2d, A city, port of entry, and capital of Burlington county, New Jersey, on Delaware river, opposite Bristol, 11 miles below Trenton, and 17 above Philadelphia. Population 2413. The most populous part is on an island in the Delaware, to which there are four entrances by bridges. It was settled in 1677. It contains a court-house and jail, 4 churches, an academy, a public library, and has some manufactures. Its harbour is safe and commodious.—3d, A town in Lycoming county, Pennsylvania. Population 661.—4th, A town in Belmont county, Ohio, on Ohio river, 4 miles above Wheeling, Kentucky, 16 N. E. St. Clairsville.—5th, Another in Licking county.—Another post township and capital of Lawrence county, Ohio, on Ohio river, 75 miles S. E. Chillicothe, 120 from Columbus.

BURLINGTON, a post township and port of entry of the United States, and capital of Chittenden county, Vermont, delightfully situated on a bay of the same name, in Lake Champlain. The village is one of the handsomest in the state. It occupies the side of a hill, ascending nearly a mile from the bay. Here are two handsome Congregational meeting-houses, a court-house, jail, academy, and a spacious college edifice. Within the limits of the township, a mile north-east of the village, are the falls of Onion river, around which are several valuable mills and manufacturing establishments. About 20 vessels navigate Lake Champlain, most of which are owned in this place. The university of Vermont is located in this town. It was incorporated in 1791, and has been liberally patronized by the state. It has a president, 6 professors, 2 tutors, a library of about 1000 volumes, and a philosophical apparatus, which is tolerably complete. The college edifice is a beautiful brick building, 160 feet long, and 4 stories high. Population 1690. 34 miles W. N. W. Montpelier.

BURLINGTON, a post township of the United States, in Otsego county, New York, 12 miles W. Cooperstown. Population 1393.

BURHAM, a town and parish of England, county of Essex. Pop. 1371.—2d, In Norfolk county. It carries on a considerable trade in corn. Pop. 937. 34 miles N. W. Norwich.

BURHAM, a town of England, county of Lancaster. It has manufactures of woollen, cotton, and other commodities, and a weekly market on Saturday, and an annual fair. Population 3374. 25 miles N. Manchester.

BURROMARCA, a royal burgh and parish of Scotland, county of Fife, on the north shore of the Firth of Forth. It has a good harbour, and is shut in towards the north by steep hills. The town unites with Kinghorn, Dysart, and Kirkcaldy, in sending a repre-representative to parliament. Population 2188. 6 miles N. N. W. Leith.

BURMANOTTE, a large town of Hindostan, province of Bejpour, on the Kurush. 44 miles S. E. Poohah.

BURRAT, one of the Orkney Islands, about four miles in length. Population 490. Situated one of the Shetland Islands; 10 miles in length, but narrow.

BERRILLVILLE, a township of the United States, in Providence county, Rhode Island, 24 miles from Providence. Population 1834. It has a bank, and several cotton factories.

BURSA, a fortified city of Asiatic Turkey, in the province of Natolia, situated in a spacious plain at the foot of Mount Olympus. Including the suburbs, it is about six miles in circuit. The castle, about a mile in circumference, is of great antiquity. The city contains several baths, both hot and cold, which are effectual in various disorders. Bursa is said to contain 300 mosques and churches. The population consists of Turks, Greeks, Armenians, and Jews, in various proportions, the two latter inhabiting different suburbs. Various manufactures and a considerable trade is carried on in Bursa. Great variety of satins, chiefly striped, are made here, for the short under garments of the Turkish habit; there are, besides, manufactures of silk stuffs and gauze; and quantities of raw silk are exported to Smyrna and Constantinople. The caravans passing from Smyrna and Aleppo to the capital, promote its commerce. Population 60,000. 73 miles S. S. W. Constantinople.

BUNSCHEID, a town of the Prussian states, near Aix-la-Chapelle, with 4200 inhabitants.

BRASCOUGH, a township of England, county of Lancaster. Population 1765.

BURALEM, a town and parish of England, county of Stafford. Very extensive potteries, which occupy a large proportion of the population, have been carried on here for a long time. There are two markets weekly, and three annual fairs. Population 10,176. 3 miles from Newcastle-under-Line.

BARTON-UPON-TRENT, an ancient town of England, county of Stafford, on the Trent, which is here crossed by a fine bridge, of ancient date, of 36 arches. It consists principally of one spacious street, parallel to the river, which is crossed by another at right angles to it. It has a neat town-hall, a free grammar school, two almshouses for poor women, and three extensive cotton-mills. There is a considerable manufacture of hats, and also of iron articles. But Barton is chiefly noted for its ale. Population 4114. 11 miles S. W. Derby.

BURWASH, a township and parish of England, county of Sussex. Population 1787.

BURY, a town of England, in Lancashire, situated on the Irwell. Besides the parish church, there are several places of worship for persons of different persuasions. Very extensive manufactures, particularly of cotton, are carried on in all their different branches; and there are also woollen manufactures. A weekly market is held, and three annual fairs. Population 10,358. 6 miles N. Manchester.

BURY ST EDMUND'S, a town of England, county of Suffolk, on the East, which is navigable from Lynn to Fortham. The town extends about a mile and a half in length, and a mile and a quarter in breadth. It is divided into five wards, and contains two parish churches, St Mary's and St James's, both which contain numerous monuments. There are other places of worship for dissenters of various denominations; Baptists, Independents, Unitarians, and Quakers. It has few public buildings which require any particular notice. Great quantities of wool are brought yearly, and exposed to sale in wool halls. A handsome small theatre was erected in 1780; and, more recently, spacious assembly-rooms have been built for assemblies and amusements. Two markets are held weekly, and three fairs annually. It is one of the greatest corn markets in the kingdom. It returns two representatives to parliament. Here are the remains of an abbey, anciently one of the most wealthy and magnificent in Britain. Population 9990. 43 miles S. S. W. Norwich.

BUZZAR, a small town of France, in Languedoc, 16 miles W. Privas. Pop. 2700.

BRACA, a small town of Piedmont, district of Coni. Population 2500.

BUSS, a river of the United States, in Maryland, is formed by the confluence of several creeks at Harford, and runs into the Chesapeake 10 miles below.

BUSH CREEK, a river of the United States, in Pennsylvania, which runs into the Delaware, in Wayne county.

BUSHEAN, an island in the Persian gulf, 16 miles long, by 6 or 6 in breadth. Long. 58. 4. E. Lat. 27. 2. N.

BUSHIRE, or ABUSCHIR, a town of Persia, province of Fars, on the Persian gulf, and the principal seaport of the kingdom. The streets are very narrow, and although presenting a handsome appearance from a distance, it is but a mean place in reality. A considerable trade is carried on here. The English East India company have a factory at this place, and the resident possesses considerable influence in the town. Population 5000. 10 miles W. S. W. Shiraz.

BUMPLEWOOD, a village of Verona, on the Adige, with 2400 inhabitants.

BURR, an island of Scotland, lying at the mouth of the frith of Ayley, and separated by a narrow channel from the coast of Angleshire. It is 15 miles in length, nowhere above 5 in breadth, and containing a superficial area of about 22,000 acres. The herring fishery has been prosecuted so successfully, that 50,000 barrels of herrings have been sometimes exported from Borthay in a year. White and small fish are abundant on the coast, but the inhabitants are chiefly devoted to agriculture. The manufacture of cotton is carried on in the island. It contains only one town, Rothesay, and several villages. Population 6699. 18 miles W. Greenock, 83 W. Edinburgh.

BUTY, a county of Scotland, consisting of the islands Arran, Buta, Larga, and Little Cumbay, and Inchmarnock. This county returns a member to parliament alternately with the county of Caithness. Pop. 13,797.

BURGENSACH, a town of the Netherlands, principality of Liege. Population 2450.

BUTLER, a county of the United States, in Pennsylvania, on the west side of Alleghany river, bounded N. by Venango, E. by Armstrong, S. by Alleghany, W. by Beaver, N. W. by Mercer. Population 7346. Chief town Butler.—2d, A post township and capital of Butler county, Pennsylvania, 40 miles N. Pittsburg. Population 468.—3d, A county in Alabama.—4th, A county in Kentucky. Population 2181. Slaves 274.—5th, A county in the south-west part of Ohio, on Great Miami river. Population in 1815, 11,800. County town Hamilton.

BUTRINTO, a small seaport town of Albania, situated in a gulf of the same name, opposite the island of Corfu. Long. 20. 15. E. Lat. 39. 44. N.

BUTTERNUTS, a post township of the United States, in Otsego county, New York, 21 miles S. W. Cooperstown. Pop. 3181.

BUTTERWORTH, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 5554.

BUTTEVAULT, a town of Ireland, county of Cork, 21 miles N. Cork.

BUTTON-NESS, a cape of Scotland, on the N. coast of the entrance into the frith of Tay.

BUTZBACH, a well built town of Germany, 8 miles S. S. E. Wetzlar. Population 3100.

BUTZOW, a town of Germany, 34 miles N. E. Schwerin. Population 3000.

BUZAR, a town and fortress of Hindostan, province of Bahar. Long. 83. 68. E. Lat. 25. 36. N.

BUXTENBURG, a town of Hanover, 16 miles W. S. W. Hamburg. Population 1900.

BUXTON, a market town of England, county of Derby, situated in a valley surrounded by hills, celebrated for its mineral waters. The great ornament and pride of Buxton is the crescent, a magnificent edifice, erected by the late duke of Devonshire, and divided into three hotels, the whole having cost L. 120,000. There is a very handsome church, dedicated to St John. Pop. 1636. 33 miles N. N. W. Derby, 169 N. N. W. London.

BUXTON, a post township of the United States, in York county, Maine, on Saco river, 8 miles N. W. Saco, 40 N. York. Population 2324.

BUZANÇOS, a town of France, department of the Indre. Population 3200.

BYFIELD, a parish of England, in Northamptonshire. Population 963.

BYFLEET, a parish of England, county of Surrey, near the Wye. Population 427.

BYGONABERY, a town of Bengal, on the Brahmapootra river. Long. 90. E. Lat. 24. 46. N.

BYKER, a township of England, in Northumberland. Population 3852.

BYRAM, a river of North America, which runs into Long Island sound, between Connecticut and New York.

BYRON'S ISLAND, an island in the Pacific ocean, about 12 miles in length. Long. 173. 16. E. Lat. 1. 18. S.

C.

C A B

CAB, EL, a village of Upper Egypt, nearly opposite Edfu.

CABARRAS, a county of the United States, in the west part of North Carolina. Population 6158. Slaves 1234. Chief town Concord.

CABELLO, or CAVELLO, PORTO, a seaport of Venezuela, in South America, with an excellent harbour and bay. It is situated a league to the west of the harbour of Borburata, and has become the centre of the commerce and navigation of the province of Venezuela. The original city of Porto Cabello is surrounded on all sides by the sea, except about 100 toises on the west, where a canal has been contrived, which affords a communication between the sea from north to south, and which consequently makes the city an island. This island is connected with the mainland by means of a bridge, at the end of which is placed a guard and a gate, which is shut every evening. The town has, however, gradually extended beyond its insular boundary; and though at first the houses in this quarter were built without any regard to regularity, the new streets have been laid out in a line, the public squares, places for markets, &c. have been better regulated, and this part of the town has now become the residence of merchants and traders. This place is very unhealthy, especially to Europeans, which is occasioned by the exhalations from an argillaceous flat on the south part of the town. Population 7800.

C A B

CABENDA, a great emporium on the western coast of Africa, situated a little N. of the river Zaire. Long. 12. 30. E. Lat. 5. 48. S.

CABES, or GABES, a town of Tunis, in Africa. Long. 10. 20. E. Lat. 34. N.

CABO ROJO, a cape on the west coast of Africa, about 99 miles S. of the Gambia.

CABUL, or CABOUL, a province of Afghanistan, situated between the 33d and 35th degrees of northern latitude.

CABUL, a very ancient and fortified city, and at present the capital of Afghanistan. The houses are built of rough stones and clay, and make but a mean appearance. There are, however, four good bazars or markets. The citadel, called Bala-Hissar, or Upper Fort, contains the palace and other public buildings. It is the resort of great traffic, and persons of every country of the east are here to be met with.

CANYNA, an island in the Eastern sea, south of the eastern extremity of Celebes, 21 miles long. Long. 121. 53. E. Lat. 5. 18. S.

CACERAS, a town of Spanish Extremadura, 35 miles S. W. Placentia. It has 4 churches, 7 religious houses, and 8000 inhabitants.

CACHAO, or KACHO, a city of Tonquin, and the capital of that kingdom, on the Songkol, about 80 miles from the sea. It is of great extent, but is an open and defenceless place. Many of the houses are built of brick, though the larger proportion are constructed of mud and timber, and thatched with leaves, straw, or reeds, whereby they are much exposed to conflagrations. The public edifices are very spacious, but particularly the royal palace, which is several miles in circuit, and is surrounded by high walls. Cachao is a place of great commercial resort. Gold is obtained here in abundance: many beautiful silks are manufactured; and the lackered ware, which, together with these, is exported, is deemed superior to any in the east. The imports are long cloths, chintz, arms, pepper, and other articles. Population 40,000. Long. 105. 15. E. Lat. 22. 36. N.

CACHIMALO, a large river of Peru, which falls into the Pilcomayo.—Another which enters the Orinoco.

CACONGOO, a kingdom of Western Africa, bounded S. by the Zaire, which separates it from Congo, and N. by Loango. The country is mountainous, but very fertile.

CADENET, a town of France, department of the Vaucluse. Population 2100.

CADNAT IDRI, a mountain of Wales, in the county of Merioneth, 3560 feet high.

CADIZ, a well known city of Spain, in Andalusia, and the principal trading port in the south of Spain, situated at the extremity of a long tongue of land projecting from the island of León. The town is surrounded by the sea on the north-east and west. Cadiz is walled, and has trenches and bastions on the land side; the highest part of it is about 200 feet above the level of the sea. Its form is nearly a square of 1½ English miles. The houses are high, the streets in some parts narrow, which, with the smallness of the windows, gives them a gloomy appearance. The principal square is that of St Antonio. The chief buildings are the great hospital, the custom-house, the churches, and the cloisters. The private houses are in general white washed and painted yellow. The bay of Cadiz is a vast basin, inclosed by the mainland on one side, and by the projecting tongue of land on the other; it is one of the finest bays in the world, being from 10 to 12 leagues in circumference, with excellent anchoring ground, and considerable protection from the neighbouring mountains. It is defended by four forts. The trade of Cadiz has fluctuated greatly, in consequence of the wars of the French revolution, and particularly of the hostilities with England, and the disorders in Spanish America. There are, however, few great seaports in Europe that are not occasionally connected with it. In the adjoining country, linen is manufactured in considerable quantity; and there are productive salt-pits. Population between 60,000 and 70,000. One of the greatest inconveniences in Cadiz is the want of good water. This city was taken and pillaged in 1596, by the English; in 1626, an unsuccessful attempt was made on it by Lord Wimbledon; and in 1702 by the duke of Ormond and Sir George Rooke. In 1808, the French fleet here surrendered to the Spaniards; and it was afterwards blockaded by the French, who did not leave it till after the battle of Salamanca in 1812. 45 miles N. W. Gibraltar. Long. 6. 17. 22. W. Lat. 36. 32. N.

CADIZ, STRAITS OF, is that part of the Atlantic which has the coasts of Algarve and Andalusia N., those of Fex and Morocco S., and the straits of Gibraltar E.

CADOLZBURG, a town of Bavaria, with 1120 houses. 18 miles N. E. Anspach.

CANSAED, an insulated tract in Flanders, formed by the sea, the Wester Scheldt, and other rivers and canals.

CAEN, a large, well built, and populous town of France, department of Calvados, situated at the influx of the small river Odou into the larger stream of the Orne. Its streets, which are 40 in number, exclusive of the suburbs, are less narrow and crooked than in most towns of France; and the houses are, for the most part, built of a white stone, which, though not durable, has a fine appearance. The town was formerly surrounded by a high wall, of which there are now scarcely any remains. Caen contains in all 13 parishes churches, with several hospitals. Of the churches, the most remarkable is the Abbaye aux Hommes, built by William the Conqueror, which is a large and lofty, but plain pile of building; and the church of Notre Dame, where there is a fine altar-piece. The Palais de Justice is a handsome modern structure. Caen has long been noted for its university, which fell into neglect at the revolution, but was revived in 1803, with the title of an academy. There is besides a great central school. The inhabitants manufacture quantities of linen, serges, lace, stockings, and caps. In these commodities, as well as in cyder, dyestuffs, skins, and in the cattle and horses reared in the surrounding country, an active trade is still carried on. Population 36,000. 62 miles W. by S. Rouen.

CARLTON, a town of England, in the county of Monmouth, on the Usk, which is crossed by a handsome modern built stone bridge. Population 1092.

CARMAITHEN, a county of South Wales, bounded N. by the county of Cardigan, E. by Brecknock and Glamorgan shires, S. by the Bristol channel, W. by the county of Pembroke. It is about 45 miles in length, by 20 in breadth, and contains a superficial area of 928 square miles, or 590,640 square acres, 228,000 of which are in pasture, 114,000 in tillage, and the remainder unfit for cultivation. The principal rivers are the Towy, Cothy, Dulais, Gwili, Annidan, Ioughwr, and others. The surface of the country is in general unequal, consisting of alternate hills and valleys; and the former are commonly of black and dreary aspect. Lead mines are worked here, and there is abundance of coal and limestone. Quantities of oats and barley are raised; but wheat, except partially, is not successfully cultivated. Numbers of black cattle and horses are bred on the hills. These, together with grain, oak bark, and coals, are exported, as also tinned iron plates and lead. The principal manufacture of the inhabitants consists of woollen stockings. There are many antiquaries dispersed throughout the county. It returns two representatives to parliament, one for the county, and another for the town of Carmarthen. Population 90,239.

CARMARTHEN, a town of South Wales, the chief town of the county of that name, situated on the river Towy, which is crossed by a fine stone bridge. The town is of considerable extent, the streets steep and irregular, and the houses are generally esteemed the best built of any in South Wales. The church is spacious, and the town-hall is a neat edifice; and there is a county jail, built on the site of an ancient castle. Population 8906. 45 miles W. Brecon, 212 W. London.

CARMAERON, a county of North Wales, bounded N. by the sea, E. by Denbighshire, S. by the county of Merioneth and the sea, and W. by the Irish sea and the strait Menai. It is about 45 miles in length, 13 in breadth, and 150 in circuit. Its superficial area is equal to 776 square miles, of which 160,000 acres are in pasture or cultivation, and 100,000 unfit for culture. The chief rivers are the Conway and Seiont. This is esteemed the most mountainous county of Wales, the mountains rising in three different ranges. Snowdon is elevated 3568 feet, and Penmaen-maur, a tremendous promontory, nearly 1550 feet, surmounted by the remains of an ancient castle. Many lakes and pools are seen among their recesses. The climate, owing to the elevation of the ground, is cold and piercing. Not fewer than 3000 cattle are exported annually. Lead and copper mines are wrought in this county; there are also extensive slate quarries. Yellow ochre, strelitzite, and other minerals, are found in the county. Agriculture is not far advanced here. The exports of Carmarvon consist chiefly of oats, barley, butter, cheese, and cattle. Herrings, lobsters, and oysters, are plentiful on the coasts. Population 67,958.

CAERNARVON, the chief town of the county of Caernarvon, in North Wales, situated on the shore of the strait of Menai, near the mouth of the river Seiont, with a tolerable harbour. The town is well built, and the streets, which are narrow, are at right angles, corresponding with the position of the gates. The church stands half a mile distant; and there is a chapel in the N. W. corner of the town. There are hot and cold baths. Considerable trade is carried on by this town with London, Bristol, Liverpool and Ireland. Copper ore and slate are exported. The imports are for the most part Irish cloth, fine wool, hides, tallow, and groceries. This town has a weekly market, and along with Cruaeth, Pwllheli, Nefin, and Conway, return a representative to parliament. The remains of the castle constructed by Edward I., extend over an oblong space of between two and three acres; all the towers are angular, and two of them much more lofty than the rest. Population 5788. 9 miles S. S. W. Bangor. Long. 4. 30. W. Lat. 53. 6. N.

CALRHUITY, a small market town of South Wales, in the county of Glamorgan. The only manufactures carried on are some woollen ones, for blankets and Welsh shawls. The chief object of curiosity is an ancient castle of prodigious extent, whereof some magnificent remains yet exist. Population 699. 30 miles S. W. Monmouth.

CAERNAIS, or CAER AR WYS (the Fort over the Waters), a town of North Wales, in the county of Flint. It stands on a rising ground, and consists of four spacious streets, intersecting each other at right angles. Population 902. 212 miles N. W. London.

CESAREA, a city of Palestine, formerly of great celebrity, but now in ruins. 36 miles from Acre.

CAFFA, KAFFA, or KJEFFE, a town of European Russia, in the Crimea, at the end of a large bay on the northern shore of the Black sea, defended by two forts. In 1770, the Russians took it by assault; and in 1774, it was ceded, with the rest of the Crimea, to the Khan of Tartary, who made it his residence; the consequence was, the emigration of the Turkish part of the population, which proved a death-blow to the prosperity of the place. With a view to revive its fallen commerce, it was declared, in 1783, a free port for 30 years. 160 miles S. E. Moscow.

CARINIGAR, or KERRIGAR, the great part of the range of mountains called Hindoo Koh, lying between the 36th and 37th degrees of N. lat. and 68th and 73d of E. long.

CASABAN SOOLOO, an island in the Eastern sea, about 20 miles in circuit. Long. 118. 36. E. Lat. 7. N.

CAULANT, the capital of the island of Sardinia, is situated in the gulf of Cagliari, near the mouth of the river Mulargia. Its streets are miserably paved, and only 20 feet wide. Here are 20 monasteries and nunneries, 38 churches, a handsome theatre, and a spacious and secure harbour, with a road. The inhabitants, who are about 30,000 in number, carry on a considerable traffic in oil, wine, and, above all, in the salt prepared in the neighbourhood.

CAGNANO, a town of Naples, province of Capitanata: Population 3500.

CAHAWBA, KAHAWBA, or CAHO, a river of the United States, in Alabama, which, after a southerly course, joins the Alabama; 160 miles below its forks, the Coosa and Tallapoosa; and 210 above its junction with the Tombigbee.—2d, A county in the centre of Alabama, on the west side of Coosa river, and intersected by the Cahawba.—3d, A township and capital of Dallas county, Alabama, and seat of government of the state, at the junction of Cahawba river with the Alabama, 77 miles N. E. St Stephens. It was laid out in 1812.

CAIRN, a small town of Ireland, county of Tipperary, on the Suir. Also the name of a small island on the west coast of Ireland.

CAHOON FALLS, in the United States, in Mohawk river, three miles above its mouth. The river is here about 1000 feet wide; and the rock over which it pours, extends across the river in a direct line from south-west to north-east, and is 70 feet high. From the bridge, three-quarters of a mile below, the falls are in full view.

CAHORS, a town of France, department of the Lot, on the river Lot. It had, in 1815, 10,136 inhabitants, and contains several manufactures, partly rattens and other woolen stuffs, and partly fine linen: brandy and oil are also prepared here. 63 miles N. Toulouse.

CAJAZZO, an ancient town of Naples, near the Volturno, 8 miles N. E. Capua.

CAICOS, a large cluster of islands in the Atlantic, between the island of St Domingo and the Bahamas. Long. 72. W. Lat. 21. N.

CAIFA, CAIPHA, or HAIFA, a seaport town of Palestine, situated on the S. side of the bay of Acre. It is irregularly built, and is defended by walls on the land side. 13 miles S. W. Acre. Long. 35. 16. E. Lat. 32. 44. N.

CALFONG, or KALFONG, a city of China, capital of the province of Honan, 2 leagues from the Yellow river, 315 miles S. W. Peking. Long. 114. 28. E. Lat. 34. 53. N.

CALLOMA, a town of Peru, 46 miles N. N. E. Arequipa.

CAIMAN, three small islands, 55 leagues N. N. W. of the island of Jamaica.

CAIRNEY HILL, a village of Scotland, in Fifeshire, with some manufactures of linen.

CAIRNGORM, a mountain of Scotland. Height 4060 feet. 30 miles E. Fort Augustus.

CAIRO, or KAHIRAH, an extensive city, the metropolis of modern Egypt, said to have been founded in 872. The new city, which is properly called Cairo, is about seven miles in circuit; it is situated about a mile from the river, and extends two miles from east to west. Within the walls the streets are winding and narrow; and, as they are not paved, the crowds of men, animals, asses, and dogs, which press against each other, raise a very disagreeable dust; individuals often water their doors; and in this dust succeeds mud and pestiferous exhalations. The widest street in Cairo is one which goes the whole length of the city, but would be looked upon only as a lane in Europe. The others are so narrow, that a slight covering is frequently thrown across them, to exclude the rays of the sun. Most of the streets, at least every district, has a gate which is shut as soon as it is dark. There are several small streets, or squares, consisting wholly of shops. A canal, called the Kalisch, derived from the Nile, traverses the whole city of Cairo. When the waters of the river begin to increase, the mouth of this canal is closed by a mound of earth, which is not removed till they have risen to a certain height. The opening then takes place, and forms a magnificent festival, attended by all the great men of the city. The interior of the houses in Cairo is generally elegant and commodious. They have a large hall, rising the whole height of the house, and covered with a small dome. Here every thing is arranged with a view to coolness; the floor is inlaid with marble and coloured earthenware, and fountains spring up into marble basins. The floor and walls are also fitted up with suitable decorations. Of the public edifices, the mosques are the chief objects of architectural decoration. In the minarets, of which several are attached to every mosque, the Arabian architecture is preserved almost pure; these edifices are always neat, and generally elegant. The tombs of the Mamelukes are also beautiful. They are of white marble, and for the most part have carved, painted, or gilded domes. The castle of Cairo is built on a hill to the south of the city. It is of no value as a fortification, though it is called all round. It is about a mile in circumference, but the greater part of it is ruinous. The grand saloon, now partly unroofed, is called Joseph's Hall; it is adorned with large and beautiful pillars of red granite. Above it is a terrace, commanding a most delightful prospect of Cairo, the Pyramids, and all the surrounding country. One of the objects which has most attracted the attention of travellers, is the well in the castle, commonly called Joseph's Well. It is about 270 feet deep in the solid rock. The passage down is by steps carried round the wall, which have about two feet thickness of rock interposed between them and the well. The water never fails, and is raised by a wheel turned by oxen, which lifts up 72 vials, holding each 72 quarts. While the power of the Mamelukes remained in vigour, Cairo was entirely under the controul of that warlike militia. Since the massacre of the Mamelukes, the Porte has regained the full sovereignty, and Cairo enjoys now a greater share of tranquillity.

lity. On the whole, no city presents a greater variety of population than Cairo. It exhibits, as it were, an epitome of both the continents at whose limit it is placed. From the one are seen Turks, Arabians, Persians, Jews, and Armenians; from the other Moors, Arabs, Berberies, Abyssinians, and negroes of every description. The commerce of Cairo is very extensive. Through it the various productions of Asia and the East Indies, and partly also those of Europe, are transmitted into the vast regions of interior Africa. The communication of Cairo with the interior of Africa is chiefly maintained by three caravans, which go to Sennar, to Darfur, and to Mourzouk; from which places, and particularly the last, it is extended to Nigritia and the other regions in the interior. The returns are made in gold, ivory, gums, hides, and above all, in slaves. Specimens of almost all the native tribes of the continent are to be seen in the slave market of Cairo. The tower of the Janisseries in Cairo is situated, according to M. Nouet, in Long. 31. 19. 43. E. Lat. 30. 2. 8. N.

CAIRO, OLD, a city of Egypt, called anciently Forat, situated on the Nile, about two miles to the south of New or Great Cairo. It is in a great measure inhabited by Copts, who have 12 churches, and among others one of peculiar sanctity. The Jews have also a synagogue in Old Cairo, said to have been built about 1600 years ago. To the north-east of the city there is also a very ancient mosque, called Amrah, said to have been originally a church. In Old Cairo are the granaries, which, like many other ancient buildings, are dignified by the name of Joseph. They are merely square courts, surrounded with walls, 16 or 20 feet high, and without any roof; and are used for depositing the grain collected as tribute in Upper Egypt. The aqueduct by which the water is conveyed to the castle of New Cairo is a much nobler work, being a hexagon building, each side 30 or 40 feet in length, and about as many in height. The edifice is supported by arches from 10 to 15 feet wide, of which Sonnin reckons 256.

CAIRO, a town of Piedmont, duchy of Montserrat, on the river Bormida. Population 4000. 18 miles S. Aquil.

CAIRO, formerly Cawroy, a post township of the United States, in Green county, New York, 10 miles N. W. Catskill. Pop. 2066.

CAIRO, a town of England, in the county of Lincoln. There is a weekly market in this town, and three annual fairs. Population 1382. 11 miles N. N. E. Lincoln.

CAITHNESS, a county of Scotland, and the most northern part of the mainland of Great Britain, bounded N. by the Pentland Firth, E. by the Murray Firth and the German ocean; on the S. it terminates in a hill called the Ord of Caithness, and its boundary on the side is the sea and the county of Sutherland; the latter county is also its boundary on the S. W. and W. It is of a triangular figure, extending about 36 miles by 22, and its superficial area is computed at 6164 square miles, or 209,680 English acres. There are many bays and promontories on the coast; and in some parts the shore is penetrated by deep coves, which afford shelter to numerous seals. The surface is in general unequal, and some places are hilly, or even mountainous. The Fells of Caithness rise 1929 feet. It contains 30 small lakes. Its rivers are the Thurso, the water of Wick, water of Forss, and water of Wester, none of which are navigable. Both limestone and shell-marl are abundant. Great quantities of fish frequent the coast, and the fishery gives employment to a considerable number of the industrious inhabitants. Good salmon fisheries are also carried on in the rivers, and great quantities of seals are caught. Until of late years the agriculture of this county was in a backward state; but by the exertions of several patriotic proprietors, a great spirit of amelioration has been excited; new roads have been begun, and other important agricultural improvements have been attempted. The stock of black cattle is estimated at about 15,000, and the sheep at 13,000. The manufactures are inconsiderable; about 140 tons of kelp are made along the shores. The exports of the county are black cattle, fish, salted beef, tallow, raw hides, feathers, kelp, and plaited straw. Caithness is divided into 10 parishes, containing only two towns, Thurso and Wick. It returns a member to every alternate parliament, the county of Bute having the other election. Population 30,238.

CAITHNESS, ORD OF, a cape on the E. coast of Scotland, at the S. extremity of Caithness-shire. Long. 3. 13. W. Lat. 58. 12. N.

CALABAR, OLD, a territory of Western Africa, situated on a river of the same name, which is of considerable magnitude, and forms, at its mouth, a species of estuary; but Europeans have not ascended it above 20 or 30 miles. The principal place on the river is called Duke Town, which contains about 2000 inhabitants, and is situated about Long. 8. E. Lat. 6. 40. N.

CALABAR, NEW, a river and town, situated about 80 miles to the west of Old Calabar. The town of New Calabar is the centre of Dutch commerce in this country. It is situated on an island formed by two branches of the river, and contains upwards of 300 houses. Long. 6. 30. E. Lat. 4. 20. N.

CALABOZO, a town of South America, province of Venezuela, situated between the two rivers Guacico and Orinoco. Population 4800. 166 miles S. of the Guacico.

CALABRIA, a large province in the south of the kingdom of Naples, which forms a peninsula, separated from the island of Sicily by the strait of Messina, and bounded N. by the interior of the kingdom of Naples, N. E. by the gulf of Tarento, E. and S. by the Mediterranean. Its greatest length is about 164 miles; its breadth varies from 18 to 70. It is traversed in its whole length by the last ridge of the Apennines. A branch of the chain crosses the province in the direction of east and west, dividing it into Calabria Citra or Inferiore to the north; and Calabria Ultra or Alta to the south. Both divisions are extremely fertile, and produce great quantities of fruit, oil, wine, grain, rice, hemp, cotton, flax, wood, saffron, and manna; the other productions are honey, silk, salt, sulphur, alabaster, talc, and rock crystal, with a few mines of lead, iron, and even of gold and silver. Population 750,000, of which number Calabria Citra contains 345,000, and Calabria Ultra 405,000; the former comprises 3560 square miles, and the latter 3500.

CALAHORRA, a town of Spain, in Old Castile, with 3 parish churches, 3 convents, and 4300 inhabitants. 62 miles N. W. Saragossa.

CALAIS, a well known seaport of France, situated in the department of the Pas de Calais, opposite to Dover. It is surrounded by a moat and wall, and defended by a very large citadel. The streets are wide and regular. Its form is that of an oblong square, with the longer side parallel to the sea; and it has two gates, one towards the sea, the other towards the land. Most of the houses are built of brick. The harbour, which is not large, is defended by several small forts, and consists of a large quay, terminated by two long wooden piers which stretch into the sea. Calais carries on a considerable traffic in Dutch spirits. Its inhabitants are also much engaged in the herring and cod fishery. Calais surrendered to Edward III. of England, in 1346; it was retaken in 1538. 20 miles N. E. Boulogne, 17½ S. E. Dover.

CALAIS, a post township of the United States, in Washington county, Vermont, 9 miles N. E. Montpelier. Population 811.

CALAIS, St., a town of France, department of the Sarthe. Population 3200.

CALAMIANES, a group of twelve islands in the Eastern seas, situated N. and N. E. of Paragon, the most westerly of the Philippines. Long. 120. 20. E. Lat. 12. N.

CALASCIBETTA, a town of Sicily, in the Val di Noto. Houses 1000. 40 miles W. Catania.

CALATAGIRONE, or CALATA GERONA, a large town of Sicily, in the Val di Noto. Pop. 15,000, partly employed in manufacturing earthen-ware. 37 miles N. W. Syracuse.

CALATAYUD, a considerable town of Spain, in the province of Aragon, on the Xalon. It contains several squares and streets, some handsome edifices; and there are several agreeable promenades in the skirts of the town. It has several manufactories of soap. Pop. 9000. 37 miles S. W. Saragossa.

CALAUZ ISLANDS, in the Eastern seas. Long. 121. E. Lat. 6. 50. S.

CALAYAN, an island in the Pacific ocean. Long. 121. 30. E. Lat. 19. 23. N.

CALBE, a town of the Prussian states, 20 miles S. Magdeburg. Population 3500.—The name of another small town.

CALBERGA, a town of Hindostan, 105 miles W. Hyderabad.

CALCASIU, a river of the United States, in Louisiana, which enters the gulf of Mexico.

CALCAYLARES, or CALCA and LARES, a province of Peru. Population 10,000.

CALCHAOUA, a province of Chili, between the rivers Cachapoul and Teno.

CALCINATO, a town of Lombardy, on the Chiese, with 3000 inhabitants.

CALCUTTA, a city of Bengal, and the capital of all the British possessions in Hindostan. It stands on the east bank of Bhagarutty or Hogly river, about 100 miles from the sea. This town takes its name from Caly, the Hindoo Goddess of Time, and Cutta, a house or temple which stood in the village of Caly Cutta, and in the vicinity of the villages of Chuttanitty and Gobindpore, between which, in the year 1690, the English founded a factory, in virtue of a firman granted by Aurangzebe; and in the year 1696, in consequence of a rebellion in Bengal, they were allowed to fortify it. This place is now called the Old Fort, and is situated on the bank of the river. It is 210 yards in length, and about 115 in breadth. In the year 1691, the Prince Azeen Oshan, grandson of the Emperor Aurangzebe, granted the company a perpetual lease of the three villages before mentioned; and in the subsequent year the factory was dignified, in compliment to King William, with the title of Fort William. In the years 1753-9, the foundations of the new fort were laid, about a mile lower down the river, and the name of the former transferred to it. This fortress is an irregular octagon. It contains handsome barracks for four regiments. Opposite the fort, at the distance of three-fourths of a mile, stands the government-house or palace, built by Lord Wellesley; in a line with which runs a row of superb houses, inhabited by the principal civil servants. At a right angle from this, and eastward of the government-house, there has been erected a number of handsome houses, with colonnaded fronts and flat roofs, each house being surrounded by a garden or grass plot, and commanding a view of the fort, esplanade, and race-grounds. On the right hand of the government-house stand the treasury and the court of justice. The town, which is inhabited by merchants of all the countries of the world, and 500,000 natives, stands to the north and east of the old fort, extending about 3 miles to the north, and 1½ to the east. Opposite to the old fort there is an extensive square, having in its centre a large reservoir or pond of fresh water, called the Lall Diggy. One side of this square is occupied by the writers' buildings, where all the junior civil servants of the company have apartments; and on the other side stands the college, a building originally erected for a hall and supper rooms, &c. Adjoining the college, and on the third side of the square, there are some handsome shops and houses, occupied by merchants, and other persons in business. In the north-west corner of the square stands the obelisk, commemorating the capture of the fort, and the fatal consequence of the black hole; and the apartment itself, which forms part of the rampart, is now used as a store-room. Calcutta contains a handsome shire-house, a cathedral, one English, one Portuguese, and one Arminian church, a Mahometan college, several mosques, and a number of Hindoo temples; and in the year 1790 it contained 78,760 houses, exclusive of the old and new forts. Opposite to the town there is good anchorage for ships of 500 tons burden, but the larger vessels are obliged to stop at Diamond harbour, about 50 miles down the river. There are several docks for building ships, and its trade amounts to nearly ten millions per annum. It is the seat of the metropolitan, who has the title of bishop of Calcutta. There is also a clergyman of the church of Scotland; and a church has been recently erected for persons of that communion. Long. 88. 28. E. Lat. 22. 34. N.

CALDAS, several small towns of Portugal, celebrated for baths and medicinal springs.

CALDECOT, a village and parish of England, in Monmouthshire. Population 498.

CALDER, two rivers of England: one runs into the Aire, 2 miles N. Pontefract; the other into the Ribble, in Lancashire.

CALDEN, a village and parish of Scotland, county of Nairn. Population 1120.

CALDEN, MID, a village and parish of Scotland, county of Edinburgh. Pop. 1410.

CALDERONE, three small islands in the Mediterranean, 15 miles S. Candia island.

CALDWELL, a post township of the United States, and capital of Warren county, New York, 62 miles N. Albany. Population 560. —2d, In Essex county, New Jersey. Population 2235.

CALEDON, a large village of Ireland, county of Tyrone, 70 miles from Dublin.

CALEDONIA, a county of the United States, in Vermont, bounded N. by Essex county, E. by Connecticut river, S. by Orange county, W. by Washington and Orleans counties. Chief towns, Danville and Peacham. Population 18,730.

CALEDONIA, a post township of the United States, in Genesee county, New York, on Genesee river, 17 miles N.E. Batavia, chiefly settled by emigrants from Scotland. Population 2355. The Big Springs here, are a curiosity. They discharge water enough, at all seasons, to supply numerous mills.

CALEDONIA, NEW, an island of the South Pacific ocean, supposed to be called Balade by the inhabitants; about 240 miles long from N. W. to S. E. by about 30 broad. It is inhabited by savages. Long. 103. 37. to 167. 14. E. Lat. 19. 37. to 22. 30. S.

CALF OF MAN, a small island in the Irish sea, near the Isle of Man.

CALHUCO, a town of South America, in Chile. Long. 73. 39. W. Lat. 42. 46. S.

CALI, or SANTIAGO DE CALI, a city of Popayan, in Quito, founded in 1537. Long. 76. 22. W. Lat. 3. 24. S.

CALICUT, a district of Hindostan, province of Malabar. It extends 60 or 70 miles along the coast, but its breadth is inconsiderable.

CALICUT, a town of Hindostan, formerly a magnificent and extensive city, which has long been submerged by the sea. The present town stands on the sea shore. It consists of 5000 houses, for the most part mean edifices, chiefly inhabited by Moplays. The port is frequented by vessels from Arabia and the Red sea, for wood, which is the chief commodity. Long. 75. 56. E. Lat. 11. 15. N.

CALIFORNIA, OLD, a province of Mexico, or New Spain, and first recognised to be a peninsula in the year 1541, although the merit of this discovery was ascribed to father Rina, who visited the country about 160 years later. It is united on the north to the continent of North America, from which it is separated on the east by a narrow sea, called the gulf of California, and it is bounded on the W. by the Pacific ocean, being nearly 900 miles in length, and in different places 30, 60, 90, and 120 miles in breadth. A chain of mountains runs through the centre of this peninsula, of which the greatest elevation is from 4500 to 4900 feet above the level of the sea. Wherever the soil is watered by springs, it is of singular fertility. But in general the ground is uneven, rough, and barren, full of mountainous ridges, and stony and sandy places, lacking moisture, but abounding in mules, horses, cattle, and in swine, goats, and sheep. The population was estimated, according to an enumeration in 1803, at 9000; the extent of surface at 7295 square leagues, with 1 inhabitant to each.

CALIFORNIA, NEW, a province of Mexico, or New Spain, which extends from the isthmus of Old California, or the bay of Todos Santos, to Cape Mendocino, in N. lat. 40. 19. It is a long and narrow tract of country, being 600 miles long, and only 30 broad. The soil is as well watered, and fertile as that of Old California is arid and stony. It is one of the most picturesque countries which can well be imagined. The climate is milder than in the same latitude on the E. coast. The sky is foggy; but these frequent fogs, though they are disagreeable, and often render it dangerous to land on the coast, give vigour to vegetation, and refresh the soil, which is covered with a black spongy earth, and exceedingly fertile. There are altogether 18 missionary settlements, formed by the Spaniards, on the coast of New California; and of all their colonial establishments, these have made the most rapid and remarkable progress in civilisation. According to several statistical tables procured by Humboldt while he was in Mexico, the population, including the Indians, who have settled and begun to cultivate the fields, was, in 1802, 15,562.

CALLAN, EL, a town in the interior of Algiers, 40 miles E. Oran. It contains a most extensive manufactory of carpets.

CALLAN, a town of Ireland, county of Kilkenny, on the banks of King's river. Kil-church, once a stately fabric, is now nearly in ruins. Population 2329.

CALLANDER, a village and parish of Scotland, county of Perth, on the river Teth. Population 2031. 16 miles W. Stirling.

CALLAO, the port of Lima, in Peru, situated on a river of the same name. It carries on a great commerce with the other provinces of South America, and with Europe. The houses are generally built of slight materials: the singular circumstance of its never raining in this country, renders stone houses unnecessary. Earthquakes are frequent here. The most remarkable happened in 1746, when three-fourths of Lima was laid in ruins, and Callao was entirely demolished. Two hundred persons only escaped the general destruction. Callao has been since rebuilt upon the same plan as before, but a little farther from the sea. It is two leagues distant from Lima. Long. 77. 4. W. Lat. 12. 2. S.

CALLAO, a small island in the Indian sea.

CALLAS, a town of France, in Provence. Population 2100.

CALLÉ, I.A., a fort on the coast of Algiers, 75 miles W. Tunis.

CALLANEE, a town of Hindostan, province of Beeder, 85 miles E. Bejapour.

CALLIANO, a village of the Tyrolese, near the Adige, 6 miles from Trent.

CALLINGER, a strong and celebrated fortress of Hindostan, and capital of a district of the same name. It is built on the top of a lofty mountain, and is constructed of stone; is 5 miles in circuit, and contains several good ponds of water, and a number of Hindoo temples. Long. 80. 25. E. Lat. 24. 50. N.

CALLINGTON, a town of England, county of Cornwall, with a spacious and lofty church. Population 1321. 10 miles S. Launceston.

CALMAR, a fortified town of Sweden, the capital of the province of Smaland, on the sound or strait of the same name, in the Baltic. It has upwards of 4000 inhabitants. Outside the town, on the Sound, stands the castle of Calmar, which is deemed one of the strongest places in Sweden. The harbour is small, but secure. Its commerce consists in the export of timber, alum, tar, and hemp. Calmar is the see of a bishop, has a fine cathedral church, an academy, and a dock-yard. In the year 1800, it suffered severely by fire.

CALMINA, a large town of Dahomy, in Africa, containing 15,000 inhabitants.

CALN, EAST, a town of the United States, in Chester county, Pennsylvania. Pop. 974. —2d, (West), adjoining to it. Pop. 1003.

CALNE, a town of England, in the county of Wilts, on a small river. The church is a large structure, with a handsome square tower at the north-east end; and there are places of worship for Presbyterians, Anabaptists, and Quakers. There is a free school, founded in 1660, for 30 boys. Calne sends two members to parliament. It is an ancient place, and has a weekly market and two annual fairs. Pop. 4612. 19 miles E. Bath.

CALOUDE, a town of Hindostan, in Dewlatabad, 240 miles N. W. Hyderabad.

CALPY, a town of Hindostan, province of Agra, on the Jumna. It is a place of considerable trade. Long. 79. 48. E. Lat. 26. 10. N.

CALVADOS, a department of France, which forms an important part of Lower Normandy, and takes its name from a dangerous ridge of rocks on the coast. It has that of the Eure to the east, that of the Orne to the south, that of La Manche to the west, and the English channel to the north. It contains, on an extent of 286 square leagues (about 2200 English square miles), 505,500 inhabitants.

CALVERT, a county of the United States, in Maryland, on the west shore of the Chesapeake, bounded N. by Anne-Arundell county, S. W. by St Mary's county, and W. by Prince George county. Population 8006. Slaves 3937. Chief town, Prince Frederick.

CALVI, a fortified town in Corsica, in the gulf of Calvi. It was taken by the English in 1794. Pop. 1200. 33 miles W. S. W. Bastia.

CALVINANO, a town of Italy, in Lombardy. Population 3000.

CALVATSON, a town of France, department of the Gard, with 2400 inhabitants.

CALUSO, a neat town of Piedmont, with 2860 inhabitants.

CALW, a town of Wirtemberg, 16 miles W. S. W. Stuttgart. Population 3440.

CAM, or GRANTA, a river of England, county of Cambridge, which falls into the Ouse among the Fens.

CAM, a village and parish of England, in Gloucestershire. Population 1805, chiefly employed in the cloth manufacture.

CAM, a river of England, which rises in Gloucestershire, and runs into the Severn.

CAMANA, the capital of a province of the same name in Peru, situated on the river Mayes, about two leagues from the sea. Population 1500. Lat. 16. 17. S.

CAMARAN, an island in the Red sea, off Cape Israel, on the coast of Arabia.

CAMARÉ, a small seaport of France, with 100 houses. 8 miles S. Brest.

CAMBAHER, a river of South Carolina, which runs into the sea near St Helena's sound. Long. 80. 32. W. Lat. 32. 38. N.

CAMBAJA, a town of Hindostan, province of Gujerat, and the port of Ahmedabad. It was confirmed to the British at the peace in 1803. Long. 72. 45. E. Lat. 22. 23. N.

CAMBERG, a well built and thriving town of Germany, 30 miles E. Coblenz.

CAMBERWELL, a parish of England, county of Surrey. Population 17,870.

CAMBODIA, CAMBOGE, or CAMBODJA, a country of Asia, occupying the eastern shore of the gulf of Siam, bounded N. by Laos, E. by Cochinchina and Tsampa, W. by Siam, and S. by the sea. It extends about 400 miles in length from north to south, and above 150 in breadth from east to west. The soil is exceedingly fertile, producing abundance of rice, legumes, and fruits, as well as many medicinal plants. This country is said to have been inhabited by a mixture of Cochinese, Malays, Japanese, and Portuguese. The exports are betel-nut, various kinds of wood, mother of pearl shells, peltry, silk, and coarse cloths. Lat. 9° to 14° N.

CAMBODIA, the capital of the above country, on the river Cambodia, 150 miles from the sea. Long. $104^{\circ} 35'$ E. Lat. 13° N.

CAMBODIA, or DONNAI, a river of Asia, which rises among the mountains of independent Tartary, and passing the province of Yunnan, in China, the countries of Laos and Cambodia, falls into the Chinese sea by several mouths. Long. $104^{\circ} 10'$ E. Lat. 10° N.

CAMBODIA, CAPE, the southern extremity of Cambodia. Long. 106° E. Lat. 10° N.

CAMBOURNE, a town of England, in Cornwall. Pop. 6219. 268 miles W. London.

CAMBRAY, a well fortified and neatly, though somewhat irregularly built, town of French Flanders, department of the North, situated on the Scheldt, which divides it into two parts. The entrance to the town is through four gates, and the citadel is one of the strongest in Europe. It is noted for the manufacture of cambric; also for thread, soap, and leather. 17 miles W. Valenciennes. Long. $3^{\circ} 13'$ E. Lat. $50^{\circ} 10'$ N.

CAMBRIA, a post township of the United States, in Niagara county, New York, on Niagara river. Population 1465. It contains the post villages of Manchester, Lewiston, and Fort Niagara.—2d, A county of Pennsylvania, bounded N. by Clearfield county, E. by Huntingdon and Bedford counties, S. by Somerset county, and W. by Westmoreland and Indiana counties. Population 2117. Chief town Ebensburg.—3d, A township of Cambria county, Pennsylvania. Pop. 868.

CAMBRIDGE, an inland county of England, bounded N. by Lincolnshire, N. W. by Northamptonshire, N. E. by Norfolk, E. by Suffolk, S. by Essex and Hertfordshire, S. W. by Bedfordshire, and W. by Huntingdonshire. Its greatest length is about 50 miles, its breadth at its southern extremity, where it is widest, 25 miles, and its circumference 130. Its area contains 686 square miles, or 437,040 square acres, about one-third of which is arable, and the remainder is almost equally divided between pasture and waste land. The northern part of the county is occupied by the Isle of Ely, which produces luxuriant crops of wheat, oats, and clover-seed. On the dairy farms, butter of the finest quality is made; and the vicinity of Cottenham is noted for new cheese of delicious flavour. By far the most agreeable districts of this county are the south and south-western, consisting chiefly of elevated land. The south-eastern division, reaching from the Gogmagog hills to Newmarket, is bleak and heathy. The rivers of Cambridgeshire are the great Ouse, the Cam or Granta, and the Rene. Cambridgeshire is divided into 16 hundreds, and contains 100 parishes, 1 city (Ely), and 9 market towns. It sends 2 members to parliament. Population 121,909.

CAMBRIDGE, a town of England, the capital of the county of Cambridge, is situated on the river Cam, by which it is intersected unequally. The river is crossed by nine bridges, five of which consist of stone, and the remainder of wood. The town is about a mile in length, and half a mile in breadth, decreasing towards each extremity; and most of the streets, as well as the buildings, are irregular. It is divided into 14 parishes, and has 14 churches, besides 4 meeting-houses for dissenters from the established church. Jews have also had occasional synagogues here. Of the churches, that of St Sepulchre is supposed to belong to the era of Henry I., being a very singular specimen of Saxon architecture. Cambridge is chiefly celebrated for its university; the first public instrument relating to which, does not ascend higher than the 13th of Henry III. A. D. 1229, though it must have subsisted a considerable time before. The university consists of 13 different colleges, 4 halls, the schools, the public library, and the senate-house. The schools, which occupy three sides of a small court, were commenced, on their present site, in 1442, but were not completed till 1470. Here is the public library, calculated to contain nearly 100,000 volumes; and the senate-house, where degrees are conferred. There is likewise a botanic garden. A green-house was afterwards built by subscription. The colleges have been founded at different periods during the six preceding centuries, and are very unequal in extent and decoration. 1. St Peter's, of Peter House, founded in 1284, and consisting of two small courts. 2. Clare Hall, erected originally in 1326. 3. Pembroke Hall, founded in 1343. 4. Corpus Christi, Benet, or Benedict College, founded by two religious societies at Cambridge in 1356. 5. Trinity Hall, founded in 1350. 6. Gonville and Caius College, originally founded in the year 1348. 7. King's College, the chapel of which is said to be the most magnificent structure of the kind in Europe, founded by King Henry VI., but not completed before the reign of Henry VIII.; it consists of several detached piles of building, of which the chapel is the most admired. The whole of the interior is adorned with a profusion of the richest architectural ornament. Its roof is a superb piece of work. The chapel is lighted by 26 large windows of Gothic architecture, all except the west finely painted with various subjects of scripture history. 8. Queen's College, founded in 1448. 9. Catherine Hall, founded in 1475. 10. Jesus College, originally a monastic edifice, in 1496 converted into a college. 11. Christ College, founded in 1506, by Margaret, countess of Derby. 12. St John's College was also founded by the same Margaret. 13. Mary Magdalen College, founded by Thomas, Baron Audley, in 1542. 14. Trinity College, founded by King Henry VIII. In 1540: here there is a library, which ranks among the first in Great Britain, for its collection of printed books, manuscripts, Roman antiquities, and natural curiosities. The structure containing it was erected by Sir Christopher Wren; it extends 300 feet in length, by 40 in width, and 38 in height; and its entrance is by a staircase of black marble. 15. Emanuel College, founded by Sir Walter Mildway in 1584. 16. Sidney Sussex College, founded in 1593. 17. Downing College, founded in the year 1807, in pursuance of the will of Sir George Downing, made 1717. Its charter of incorporation had the great seal annexed to it September 22d 1800. The whole number of fellows belonging to the university, previous to the foundation of Downing College, was 406, and of scholars 606, besides 236 inferior officers and servants, who are maintained on the various endowments. The number of individuals belonging to the university is above 800. Besides all the edifices hitherto described, there is a shire-hall, built in 1747, and the town-hall, built in 1782. There were several religious houses here of old, and at present there are some charitable institutions for the relief of the poor and infirm. A new county jail has been erected within the precincts of the ancient castle. No manufacture of consequence is carried on in Cambridge; its chief trade consists in oil, corn, and iron. The town returns two members to parliament. Cambridge is an ancient place, and was a Roman station. Population 14,142. 17 miles S. Ely, and 51 N. London.

CAMBRIDGE, a post town of the United States, in Middlesex county, Massachusetts, on Charles river, 3 miles W. N. W. Boston. It contains the colleges, a court-house, county jail, state arsenal, and 4 churches for different sects. The courts for the county are held alternately here and at Concord. In this town is Harvard College, or the University of Cambridge, the oldest and most wealthy literary institution in the United States. It was founded in 1638, in less than 20 years after the first settlement of New England. It possesses a library containing 20,000 volumes, a good philosophical apparatus, and an excellent museum. An astronomical observatory was about to be erected in 1821. The number of students, in 1818, was 383. Pop. 2323.

CAMBRIDGE, a post township of the United States, in Washington county, New York; 12 miles S. Salem, 35 N. E. Albany. Population 6730.—The name of several other townships.

CAMBRIDGE, WEST, a post township of the United States, in Middlesex county, Massachusetts, 6 miles N. Boston. Pop. 971.

CAMBUSLANG, a parish of Scotland, in Lanarkshire, on the Clyde. Pop. 2301.

CAMBUSNETHAM, a village and parish of Scotland, county of Lanark, on the Clyde. Population 3086.

CANDEN, a county of the United States, on the coast of Georgia, separated from Florida by St Mary's river. Population 3911.

Slaves 2687. Chief towns, Jefferson and St Mary's.

CAUDEN, a post town of the United States, and capital of Kershaw county, South Carolina, on the east side of the Wateree, 35 miles N. E. Columbia. It is regularly laid out, and contains about 200 houses.

CADEN, a small growing village of the United States, in Lincoln county, Maine, on Penobscot bay.—The name of several other townships.

CAMELFORD, a town of England, county of Cornwall, on the river Camel. The streets are broad and well paved, but the houses are indifferent. Camelford sends two representatives to parliament. Population 1256. 17 miles W. Launceston.

CAMELON, a village of Scotland, county of Stirling, 26 miles W. Edinburgh.

CAMEN, a town of the Prussian states, in the county of Mark, 20 miles S. E. Munster. Population 1060.

CAMERINO, an ancient town of Italy, in the States of the Church. It has a trade in silk, and a manufacture of taffeta and other silk stuffs. The cathedral is large, and contains some valuable paintings. 75 miles N. N. E. Rome.

CAMILLUS, a post township of the United States, in Onondaga county, New York. Population 2378.

CAMIN, a town of the Prussian states, 24 miles N. Old Stettin. Population 1900.

CAMINHIA, a strong town of Portugal, province of Entre Douro e Minho. Pop. 1300.

CAMISANO, a thriving town of the Venetian territory, 7 miles S. E. Vicenza.

CAMOLIN, a town of Ireland, county of Wexford, 10 miles N. N. E. Enniscorthy.

CAMORTA, one of the Nicobar islands, in the bay of Bengal.

CAMOTRASKA, ISLANDS or, several bare rocky islands in the St Lawrence.

CAMPAGNA DI ROMA, or TERRITORY OF ROME, one of the States of the Church, is bounded N. by Il Patrimonio di St Pietro and Sabina, N. E. and E. by the kingdom of Naples, S. and W. by the Tuscan sea. It comprehends the greater part of ancient Latium, and is from 50 to 70 miles in length, and from 40 to 60 in breadth.

CAMPAGNAC, a town of France, department of the Aveyron. Population 1000. 26 miles N. Millaud.

CAMPAN, a town of France, department of the Upper Pyrenees. Population 4200.

CAMPBELL, a county of the United States, in Virginia, bounded N. by James river and Buckingham county, E. by Charlotte county, S. by Appomattox river, and W. by Bedford county. Population 11,001. Slaves 5368.

24, A county of Tennessee. Population 2668. Slaves 163. Chief town Jacksonborough.

3d, A county in Kentucky, on the Ohio. Pop. 3473. Slaves 472. Chief town Newport.

CAMPBELLTOWN, a post village of the United States, in Steuben county, New York. 2d, In Edgefield district, South Carolina.

CAMPBELTOWN, a town of Scotland, county of Argyll, situated on the coast, with an excellent harbour. The inhabitants are principally employed in distilling, in the manufacture of cotton, in the tanning of mussels, and in the herring fishery. Campbelltown unites with Ayr, Irvine, Inverary, and Rothesay, in sending a representative to parliament. Population 6445. 30 miles W. Ayr.—Also a village in Inverness-shire.

CAMPDEN, or CAMDEN, a town and parish of England, county of Gloucester. Pop. 1798.

CAMPEACHY, a town of Mexico, in the intendancy of Merida or Yucatan, on the St Francis, in the bay of Campeachy. Its houses are well built of stone. There is a good dock and fort, with a governor and garrison, which commands both the town and harbour. Pop. 6000. Long. 91. 34. W. Lat. 19. 30. N.

CAMPEEN, a fortified town of the Netherlands, on the left bank of the Yssel. The most remarkable public edifices are the town-house, the two churches, and the wooden bridges across the Yssel, which is 720 feet long, and 20 broad. Population 6200. 45 miles N. E. Amsterdam.

CAMPIONE, a thriving town of Switzerland, canton of the Ticino.

CAMPO, a town on the island of Elba. Population 1700.

CAMPO BARRO, a town of Naples, in the province of Sannio. Population 6000.

CAMPO FORMIO, an elegant castle in the Venetian territory, remarkable as the place where a treaty of peace was signed between Austria and France, on 17th October 1797. Near it is a village of the same name.

CAMPO MAYOR, a town and barrier fortress of Portugal, province of Alentejo. Population 5300. 100 miles E. Lisbon.

CAMPO DI S. PIETRO, a town of the Venetian territory. Population 3100. 12 miles N. Padua.

CAMPOLORO, a town of Corsica, which contains 2100 inhabitants. 34 miles S. Bastia.

CAMPÓS, a town of the island of Majorca. Population 5000.

CAMPREDÓN, a fortified town of Catalonia. Population 1500. 27 miles N. N. W. Gerona.

CAMPRIE, a village and parish of Scotland, county of Stirling. Population 4927.

CAMTOOK, a considerable river of Southern Africa, in the E. part of the Cape colony.

CANAAN, a township of the United States, in Somerset county, Maine.—3d, In Grafton county, New Hampshire.—3d, In Essex county, Vermont.—4th, In Litchfield county, Connecticut, &c.

CANADA, an extensive country in North America, formerly called the province of Quebec; but since 1791, it has been divided into two provinces, called Upper and Lower Canada.

CANADA, LOWER, lies between 45. and 52. N. Lat. and 63. and 81. W. Long. It is bounded N. by the territory of the Hudson's Bay company, or East Maine; E. by the gulf of St Lawrence, and part of the Labrador coast; S. by New Brunswick, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, and New York; and W. by Upper Canada, from which it is separated principally by the Ottawa river, and a line drawn from the head of the river in Lake Temiscamingue, due N. to Hudson's bay. It is divided into the districts of Montreal, Three Rivers, Quebec, and Gaspe, which were subdivided by a proclamation of the government, in 1793, into the following 21 counties, namely, Bedford, Buckingham, Cornwallis, Devon, Dorchester, Eppingham, Gaspe, Hampshire, Hertford, Huntingdon, Kent, Leinster, Montreal, St. Maurice, Northumberland, Orleans, Quebec, Richelieu, Surrey, Warrick, and York. The minor divisions are, 1st, The seigniories, or the original grants of the French government under the feudal system, which were again partitioned out into parishes by the French government. 2d, The townships or grants of land made by the English government since the year 1793, in free and common socage. The climate of Canada partakes of the general predominance of cold, which is peculiar to the continent of North America. Although it lies nearly in the same latitude as France, its surface is covered with accumulated snows for nearly one-half the year, and vegetation is suspended for the same period by continued frost. During the winter, the thermometer sometimes sinks 31 degrees below 0. This, however, is its greatest depression, which only happens once or twice in a season, and which never continues above 48 hours. The medium of cold in winter is from 20 to 25 degrees below 0. The climate, however, is congenial to health in an eminent degree. The cloudless sky and pure dry air of winter, makes the cold both pleasant and healthy. In summer, the climate of Canada is liable to the opposite extreme of heat, the thermometer rising to 96, and even 100 degrees. This excessive heat seldom lasts longer than two or three days, and the medium summer heat is from 75 to 80 degrees. No general description will convey an adequate idea of the soil of Lower Canada. In the part of the province south of the St Lawrence, a triangular district, included between the northern boundaries of Vermont and New Hampshire, the St Lawrence and the Chaudiere, consists of excellent land, laid out in townships, and in many parts settled and cultivated, and bids fair to become the most flourishing part of the province; from the Chaudiere to the sources of the St John, the land is much broken, and of an indifferent quality; from the sources of the St John to the gulf of St Lawrence, the country has been but partially explored, but has every appearance of sterility. On the north side of the St Lawrence, a ridge of heights commences at the eastern extremity of the province, and runs along the margin of the river, from 64. to 71. W. Long; it then leaves the river, and taking a S. W. direction, strikes the Ottawa river, about 36 leagues above its confluence with the St. Lawrence, inclosing within it and the two rivers, a beautiful country, well watered and level. On the north side of the ridge just described, lies the remaining part of Lower Canada, which has been so little explored, that it is only known to be covered with immense forests. The population of Lower Canada has rapidly increased within a few years. In 1759, when it was conquered from the French, it was estimated at 70,000; in 1775, it had only increased to 90,000; but in 1814, a capitation shewed no less than 335,000, of whom 275,000 were descendants of the original French settlers, and the remainder English, Scotch, Irish, Americans, &c. The government is administered by a governor, lieutenant-governor, executive council, and a legislative council, who are appointed by the king; and a house of assembly, who are representatives of the people. The prevailing religion is Roman Catholic; of this persuasion there is a bishop of Quebec, a coadjutor, with the title of bishop of Salde, nine vicars general, and about 200 curates and missionaries, spread over the different districts of the province. The revenues of the Catholic clergy are derived in part from grants made of land to them under the ancient regime. The spiritual concerns of the Protestants are under the guidance of the lord bishop of Quebec, 9 rectors, and a competent number of other clergymen, who are supported in part by annual stipends from the government, and the appropriation of one-seventh of all granted lands.

CANADA, UPPER, is bounded N. by the territory of the Hudson's bay company; N. E. and E. by Lower Canada; S. E. and S. by the United States; on the W. and N. W. no limits have been assigned to it. It is divided into 8 districts, viz. the Eastern, Johnstown, Midland, Newcastle, Home, Niagara, London, and Western. These are again subdivided into 23 counties, and 159 townships. The townships contain in all 9,694,400 acres, of which 3,000,000 are granted in free and common soccage, 2,769,828 are reserved for the crown and clergy, and 3,924,572 still remain to be granted. These townships are laid out along the banks of the St. Lawrence, Lake Ontario, Lake Erie, and Lake St. Clair, and extend back for a distance varying from 40 to 50 miles. The soil throughout is scarcely excelled by any portion of North America. In the rear of the townships are large tracks of land, stretching far to the north, covered with immense forests, and little known except to the Indians; but it has been ascertained that there are many large tracks of rich soil. The climate is salubrious. The winters are shorter and milder than in Lower Canada. The spring opens usually from 6 weeks to 2 months earlier than at Quebec. The population of Upper Canada has increased with great rapidity. In 1783, it did not exceed 10,000 inhabitants, and in 1814 it was 58,000. It is made up principally of emigrants from the United States, and a few British, Irish, and Scotch. Of the 3,000,000 acres granted to settlers, the quantity under tillage in 1815, was estimated at 290,000, dispersed over the different districts. The most populous and improved part of the colony is along the banks of the St. Lawrence, and the eastern part of Lake Ontario. The government of Upper Canada is administered by a lieutenant-governor (who is almost always a military officer), a legislative council, an executive council, and a house of assembly. The legislative council consists of not less than 7 members, of which the chief justice of the province is president, and wherein the bishop of Quebec has a seat; the members are appointed by mandamus from the king, and hold their seats, under certain restrictions, for life. The executive council is composed of 6 members; the chief justice is president, and the bishop of Quebec likewise has a seat in it. The house of assembly is composed of 25 members, who are returned from the 23 counties; the duration of the assembly is limited to 4 years. The civil and criminal law is administered by a chief justice and 2 puisne judges. There is a court of king's bench, common pleas, and a court of appeal. The expence of the civil list is defrayed by Great Britain.

For the defence of the two Canadas, a regular military establishment is maintained by the British government, which was estimated in 1815, at from 27,000 to 30,000 men. The river St. Lawrence is the only channel by which the commodities of these two provinces have hitherto found their way to the ocean. The principal exports consist of oak and pine timber, deals, masts, and bowsprits, spars of all denominations, staves, pot and pearl ashes, peltry, wheat, flour, biscuit, Indian corn, pulse, salt, provisions, fish, and other miscellaneous articles, which employ generally about 150,000 tons of shipping. In return for these are imported wines, rum, sugar, molasses, coffee, tobacco, salt, coals, and manufactured produce from Great Britain. The commerce of Canada has been progressively increasing since it became a British province. In 1783, the annual value of its exports amounted to L. 163,105, and it employed 70 vessels. In 1797, the exports amounted in value to L. 491,419, and the imports to L. 338,214. In 1808, the exports were L. 1,156,000, and the imports L. 610,000.

CANADA CREEKS. There are three small rivers which bear this name: the two first are upper branches of the Mohawk river; the other is a branch of Wood creek.

CANAJOHARE, a village of the United States, on the Mohawk river. Pop. 4010.

CANANDAIGUA, a post township and village of the United States, 208 miles W. Albany. Population of the village 1788.

CANANDAIGUA, a lake of the United States, county of Ontario, state of New York. It discharges its waters into a river of the same name, which enters the Seneca river.

CANANORE, a seaport town of Hindostan, on the coast of Malabar. 100 miles W.S.W. Seringapatam.

CANARA, a province on the western coast of Hindostan, extending about 180 miles in length, by from 30 to 70 in breadth. It is bounded N. by the province of Bejapore, E. by the Mysore and Balaghaut district, S. by Malabar, and W. by the sea. It was ceded to the British government in 1799.

CANARIES, a group of 13 islands in the Atlantic, near the W. coast of Africa, the largest of which are Teneriffe, Grand Canary, Puertaventura, Palma, Ferro, Gomera, and Lancerota. They were celebrated in antiquity, under the appellation of the Fortunate islands. They lie between 27. 39. and 29. 26. N. lat. and between 13. 20. and 18. 10. W. long. The aspect of all these islands is elevated and full of mountains, some of which, particularly the Peak of Teneriffe, rank among the loftiest on the globe. The sides of the mountains which incline towards the west and north, make a profuse display of vegetation, and exhibit, rising above each other, the plants of the torrid, the temperate, and even the frigid zone. The most verdant and fertile islands are Grand Canary and Teneriffe; Lancerota and Puertaventura are dry and sandy. The present inhabitants of the Canaries are entirely European. They are of a roving and enterprising disposition, which impels them to emigrate; and they have established themselves in all the Spanish settlements in the new world, from New Mexico to Chili; and they have even penetrated to the Philippine and Marian islands in the East Indies. In all these regions, agricultural industry is mainly supported by the exertions of the Canarians. Humboldt states the present population of the Canaries to fall short of 160,000. The most valuable production of the Canaries is wine, of which Teneriffe yields from 20,000 to 24,000 pipes, 8000 or 9000 of which are exported. They produce wheat sufficient for their own consumption; also maize, potatoes, and French beans. The other chief objects of trade are brandy, archil, and soda.

CANARY, GRAND, the largest and most fertile of the group of the Canaries. It is about 30 miles long by 28 broad. The whole island consists in a manner of one mountain, which rises to a great height, and the summit of which is covered with perpetual snow. The lofty central parts of the island contain copious springs of pure water, which flow down in rivulets through the valleys, and preserve almost uninterrupted verdure and fertility. There are two, sometimes even three, harvests in the year, of wheat and maize. The population is stated by St Vincent at 41,082; by Humboldt, after Ledy, at 50,000. Palmas is the only large city. Long. 15. 23. to 16. 51. W. Lat. 27. 45. to 28. 13. 30. N.

CANAT, a town of France, department of the Mouths of the Rhone. Pop. 2300.

CANCALE, a seaport town of France, 8 miles S. E. St. Malo. Population 3000.

CANDEISH, or KHANDESA, a province of Hindostan, situated S. of the Nerbuddah.

CANDEL, a village of Germany, 38 miles N. E. Strasburg. Population 2370.

CANDIA, one of the largest islands in the Mediterranean, is situated to the south of the Grecian archipelago, and is nearly 180 miles in length, and from 20 to 30 in breadth. It is for the most part covered with rocky mountains. It has a healthy climate, and in general a fruitful soil; but the insecurity of property under the Turks represses all attempts at extensive cultivation, so that little corn is raised. It yields, however, abundance of fruit, oil, wine, raisins, saffron, honey, wax, and St John's, or carob bread. Population above 230,000, of whom 130,000 are Greeks, nearly 150,000 Turks, and not more than 200 Jews. The island has been under various rulers. It was finally taken by the Turks in the 17th century, after a war of 20 years.

CANDIA, the capital of the foregoing island, situated in an elevated plain on the N. coast, and strongly fortified. The houses are mean and ill built. The harbour, once capacious, is now filled with sand. The soap works here are the largest in the island. Pop. from 12,000 to 15,000. Long. 25. 4. E. Lat. 35. 16. N.

CANDIA, a post township of the United States, in Rockingham county, New Hampshire. Population 1290.

CANDY, a kingdom in Ceylon, possessed by Europeans. It occupies the central parts of that island, and extends outward, so as to leave a narrow ring around the whole coast. The country is partitioned into provinces, which are subdivided into smaller districts. Their inhabitants are the native Cingalese, of whom the higher ranks have attained a certain degree of civilisation; but we are little acquainted with their progress in the arts. The standing army consists of only a few thousand men, but when it is joined by all the royal vassals with their levies, it is increased to 20,000. But in contending with Europeans, they generally trust to the deleterious effects of their climate, which seldom fails to destroy the troops sent against them. The Dutch were formerly masters of Ceylon; but being expelled by the English, the latter entered into a war with the Candians, and obtained possession of their capital, in which a detachment only was left. This detachment now suffered so much by the climate, that it was attacked by the Candians, and compelled to retreat. It was afterwards, though it surrendered on terms, put to the sword, with the exception of Major Davie, the commander, who was detained prisoner by the Candians, among whom he died. Candy, the capital, was again taken possession of by the British, and abandoned. In 1815 it was again invaded with 3000 men. The sovereign was formally deposed in March 1816, and the kingdom of Candy annexed to the British dominions.

CANDY, a town of Ceylon, the capital of the kingdom of Candy, is situated in a plain, amidst mountains covered with wood, and near the banks of the river Mahavilla-Gongga. It consists of one principal street, 3 miles long. This city is now in the possession of the British. 142 miles from Trincomalee. Long. 80. 47. E. Lat. 7. 23. N.

CANEA, a strongly fortified seaport of the island of Candia, on the north coast of the island. It is a neat town, the buildings being almost all Venetian. Population about 7000, Turks, Greeks, Jews, and Armenian merchants. 60 miles W. Candia.

CANELLI, a town of Piedmont, with 3200 inhabitants.

CANEM, the most northerly province of Bornou, in Africa.

CANES AND CANCHES, a province of Peru, with 18,000 inhabitants.

CANETE, a province of Peru, with a capital of the same name.

CANGHEJOR, an island of South America, at the entrance of the Orinoco.

CANJE, a river of Dutch Guiana, which enters the Berbice, Long: 57. 50. W. Lat. 6. 15. N.

CANIERS, a town of France, department of the Lower Charante, with 540 houses.

CANISCHA, a market town of Hungary, palatinate of Szalud, 96 miles S. Vienna.

CANISTER, the name of three small islands in the bay of Bengal.

CANNA, or CANNAY, one of the smaller Hebrides, 12 miles W. Skye.

CANNE, or CANNE, a small place of Naples, near the Ofanto (formerly Aufidus). Near this was fought the battle so famous for the defeat of the Romans by Hannibal, in the year B. C. 217.

CANNER, or CANES, a small seaport of France, in Provence, on the Mediterranean. Bonaparte landed here on 1st March 1815, on his return from Elba. Population 2700. 5 miles S. W. Antibes.

CANNINGTON, a village and parish of England, county of Somerset. Pop. 1223.

CANNOCK, a parish of England, county of Stafford. Population 2700.

CANOWAR, the capital of a district in Hindostan; formerly a large and populous city, but now reduced to a village. Long. 79. 52. E. Lat. 27. 5. N.

CANOUQUE, LA, a town of France, in Lower Languedoc. Population 2450.

CANSO, an island, cape, and small fishing bank, on the S. E. coast of Nova Scotia, in Lat. 45. 20. N.

CANSTADT, a well built town of Wirtemberg, on the Neckar, with 2760 inhabitants.

CANTA, a province and government of Peru, 24 leagues long, and 35 wide. Its capital, of the same name, is in Lat. 11. 10. S.

CANTAL, a department of France, which comprises the greater part of Upper or South Auvergne. Population 252,000.

CANTELEUX, a town of France, in Normandy, on the Seine, with 300 houses.

CANTERBURY, a city of England, county of Kent, on the Stour, by various channels of which it is intersected. It consists of four principal streets, disposed in the form of a cross. It was formerly environed by walls, of which nothing now remains. Canterbury is the metropolitan archiepiscopal see of all England, and has a spacious and magnificent cathedral, composed of the architecture of different periods, the most ancient belonging to the twelfth century. It is built in the form of a double cross. Its dimensions are 514 feet in length, the choir extends 180 feet by 33, the east transept is 154 feet long, the height of the vaulted roof 60 feet, and that of the great tower 235. Many of the windows have been superbly adorned with painted glass. Besides the cathedral, there are 32 parish churches within the walls of the city, and three in the suburbs. There are likewise places of worship for Presbyterians, Methodists, Anabaptists, Quakers, and a Jewish synagogue. The number of Jews in the city is computed at 100. There are several charitable institutions; also a handsome and commodious court-hall or guild, and a theatre. Spacious barracks, both for cavalry and infantry, have been erected. There are two mineral springs, which are much resorted to. The principal manufactures of Canterbury are silk and cotton. Two markets are held here weekly, and a fair on the 10th of October. This city returns two members to parliament. It is a very ancient place, called Durovernum by the Romans, and evidently a town or station of that people, from the numerous antiquities discovered in excavations. Population 12,745. 56 miles S. E. London.

CANTERBURY, a village and township of the United States, in New Hampshire, on the Merrimack.—There is another village of the same name in Connecticut.

CANTON, a city of China, in the province of Quang-tong, of which it is the capital, situated on the river of the same name. It is surrounded by walls about five miles in circuit, mounted with several cannon. The suburbs of Canton are very extensive: strangers may frequent them, but they are not permitted to enter the city without the order or invitation of a mandarin. The streets are long, straight, and narrow, some of the principal not exceeding 15 or 20 feet in width. They are causewayed, and for the most part kept exceedingly clean. The houses are built of brick, one story high, with two or three courts behind, for warehouses or apartments for the families of the family. All the streets are well furnished with shops. The factories of the different European powers permitted to trade here, extend along the banks of the river, having their respective flags displayed. They usually consist of four or five houses; and the factory belonging to the British surpasses the others in size and elegance. A broad parade extends along the river in front of the factories, whither the Europeans resort to enjoy the cool of the evening. The streets of Canton are continually crowded by its numerous population. It is a place of very great trade, and the only port of the whole Chinese dominions which is open to Europeans in virtue of special permission. The principal exports are tea, to the extent of from 25 to 30 millions of pounds yearly, nankeen, silks, mother of pearl, tortoise-shell, tutenague, China-ware, and many other articles; while the imports from Great Britain, and her eastern settlements, are woollen cloths, cotton, opium, betel-nut, furs, and watches. No correct estimate can be formed of the population. Long. 113. 14. E. Lat. 23. 7. N.

CANYON, a post township of the United States, in Norfolk county, Massachusetts. Population 1353.—2d, Of Hartford county, Connecticut. Population 1374.—3d, Of St Lawrence county, New York. Population 699.—4th, Of Washington county, Pennsylvania. Pop. 1345.—5th, Capital of Starke county, Ohio, 58 miles N.W. Steubenville. Population in 1819, 1360.—The name of several other obscure townships.

CANVEY, an island of England, in the mouth of the river Thames, near the coast of Essex, about 5 miles long, and 2 wide.

CAORLE, a small island in the Lagoon of Venice, off the coast of Friuli.

CAP, a small island lying in the straits of Sunda. Long. 105. 43. E. Lat. 5. 53. S.

CAPALUAN, one of the smaller Philippine islands. Long. 121. 43. E. Lat. 13. 50. N.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE, a track of country in Southern Africa, which takes its name from the cape which forms its southern extremity. This cape long formed an insuperable barrier to the progress of the European navigators eastward. It was doubled, however, in 1497, by the Portuguese navigator Vasco de Gama, and European ships were seen, for the first time, in the Indian seas. The Dutch, in 1600, in the infancy of their Indian trade, fixed upon it as a station for their vessels to take in water and provisions, and at last began to colonise it. The Hottentots were either reduced to slavery, or driven beyond the mountains; and the Cape settlement was gradually extended to its present dimensions. It was, in 1795, reduced by the British naval force, but restored to Holland by the peace of Amiens. It was again reduced in January 1806, and was permanently confirmed to Britain at the congress of Vienna. The colony of the Cape is bounded on the W. and S. by the Atlantic and Southern oceans; on the E. by the Great Fish river, the Rio d'Infante of the Portuguese, which separates it from Kaffraria; on the N. by a vast chain of mountains, called the Nieuwveld and Roggeweld, which separates it from the Bushuans and other independent tribes that stretch into the interior. In length it extends about 688 miles, and in breadth 315. It contains 120,000 square miles. This wide area is occupied by about 60,000 inhabitants, of whom 22,000 are whites, and the rest negroes or Hottentots.

The Cape territory consists of three successive ranges of mountains running parallel to each other, and to the southern coast of Africa; and each rising above another, and being proportionably barren. The last range rises to the height of 10,000 feet. The belt or plain interposed between the two last chains is considerably more elevated than either of the two others; so that Southern Africa forms as it were a succession of terraces, rising above each other. The plain next the sea is covered with a deep and fertile soil, watered by numerous rivulets, well clothed with grass, and with a beautiful variety of trees and shrubs. The second terrace contains a considerable proportion of well watered and fertile lands. The third belt is composed of a vast plain, 300 miles in length, and nearly 100 in breadth, the soil of which is of a hard and impenetrable texture, destitute almost of any trace of vegetation. The climate of the Cape is subject to serious disadvantages. By a peculiar fatality it is deluged with rain during the cold season; while in the hot months scarcely a shower falls to refresh the earth. A British officer observed, that those who lived in it were either in an oven, or at the funnel of a pair of bellows, or under a water spout. Notwithstanding these disadvantages, the grain raised here is said to be equal in quality to any in the world. It is almost all produced at the distance of more than one day, and less than three days journey from Cape Town. The nearer grounds are employed almost entirely in raising wine and fruits. Wine and brandy are, in this view, more important articles, and indeed the staple products of the colony. Owing to the encouragement of the reduced duty on Cape wines, of L.17. 10s. per tun, they have been imported into this country. The other productions of the Cape are not interesting; they consist of soap and candles, which are manufactured by almost every farmer in the country; and of salt evaporated by the mere heat of the sun, from the numerous lakes to the west of Cape Town. Salt water is plentiful, but generally bad. Hides and skins, dried, or salted raw, are annually exported to a certain extent. A large extent of ground, particularly in the district of Zinellendam, is covered with natural plantations of aloes. Fruits are produced on the west coast of the colony, in as great perfection as in any part of the world. Tobacco thrives perfectly, and might be cultivated to a great extent. The wild animals, such as wolves, hyenas, elephants, hippopotami, tigers, antelopes, &c. have almost disappeared from every part of the settlement. In place of these, cattle and sheep have multiplied. No part of the world, perhaps, produces plants and flowers distinguished more by the elegance of their forms and colours, than Southern Africa. The rural occupants of this colony may be divided into the wine growers, the corn farmers, and the graziers. The first, called commonly the wine boers, residing in the immediate vicinity of the Cape, are the most civilised and comfortably situated of the peasantry. The corn-boers live generally at the distance of two or three days' journey from the Cape. Their agriculture is miserable. The grazier is a much more uncultivated being than either of the two other classes. Many are perfect Nomades, wandering from place to place, and living in straw huts like the Hottentots. The colony is divided into four districts, over each of which is placed a landroet, or chief magistrate, with six heerwaarden, or burghers, for the administration of justice. These four divisions are, 1st, The Cape District, or that in the immediate vicinity of Cape Town: 2d, Stellenbosch, including Drakenstein, and comprehending all the western coast, exclusive of the Cape District: 3d, Zwellendam, extending along the southern coast: 4th, Graaf Meynet, composed of the greater part of the mountainous and grazing districts at the foot of the Sneeuwberg.

The Cape District consists chiefly of a peninsula formed by the ocean on the west, by Table bay on the north, and Fulse bay on the south. It is connected with the continent by an isthmus of considerable breadth, but low, flat, and sandy; while the peninsula itself is entirely composed of mountains. Of these the most conspicuous is the Table mountain, forming the northern extremity of the peninsula, immediately above Cape Town, and rising to the height of 3582 feet. On the E. it has the Devil's hill, and on the W. the Lion's head, which form in fact only lower wings of the same mountain. The former is 3315 feet high, and the latter 2160.

Cape Town, the only place in the colony deserving the name, is agreeably situated at the head of Table bay, on a plain sloping downwards from the Table mountain. It consists of 1145 houses, inhabited by about 5500 whites and people of colour, and 10,000 blacks. The streets are built with great regularity, being all laid out with a line, parallel to, and intersecting each other at right angles. Many of them are open and airy, watered by canals, which are walled in, and planted with oaks on each side. A few, however, are narrow and dirty. There are three or four large squares; one serving as a public market; another as a resort for the peasantry coming in from the country with their waggons; a third as a parade for the troops. This last forms an open and level plain; and on one of its sides are built the barracks, the largest building in the town, and capable of containing 2000 troops. Other public edifices are a Catholic and Lutheran church, a town-house, and a large building, in which the government slaves, to the number of 400, are kept. Cape Town is defended by a castle of considerable strength, to which numerous batteries were added by Sir

James Craig. The exports to the Cape consist of a small portion of almost every thing made in this country. A considerable quantity of clintz, cottons, piece goods, and teak timber, is also imported from Hindostan. Cape Town lies in Long. 18. 23. 15. E. Lat. 33. 5. 42. S.

CAPELLE OP DEN BOSCH, a village of the Netherlands, with 2000 inhabitants.

CAPIBARIBE, a river of Brazil, which falls into the sea near Pernambuco.

CAPITANATA, a province of the kingdom of Naples, which extends from the gulf of Venice, to the Neapolitan province of Principato Citra. Population 270,000.

CAPO BIANCO, a town of Corsica, 28 miles N. Bastia. Population 4200.

CAPO D'ISTRIA, the capital of the Austrian province of Istria, on a small island in the gulf of Trieste, and communicating with the main land by a drawbridge, nearly half a mile long. Pop. 5000. 8 miles S. Trieste.

CAPONYAN, a market town of Hungary, 12 miles W. Altenburg.

CAPRAIA, a small island of the Sardinian states, in that part of the Mediterranean called the Tuscan sea. Population 2000.

CAPRI, a small island in the Mediterranean, at the entrance of the gulf of Naples. Population 3000.

CAPRYCKE, a town of Dutch Flanders, 14 miles S. E. Sluys. Population 3300.

CAPUA, a town of Naples, in the Terra di Lavoro, on the Volturno, renowned in ancient history. It contains, besides the cathedral, 1 collegiate church, several parish churches, and 12 convents. Capua has a strong citadel, and is accounted the key of Naples on the N. 15 miles N. Naples.

CAQUETA, a large river of Quito, which enters the Amazons, between Lat. 4. and 5. N.

CAR, or CHAN, a river of England, which runs into the sea at Charmouth.

CARA, one of the smaller Hebrides.

CARABAYA, a province of Peru.

CARACCA, CAPTAIN-GENERALSHIP OF, a province of South America, belonging to Spain, bounded N. by the Caribbean sea, from the Cape de la Vela W. to the point of Paria; E. by the sea, from the 12th to the 8th degree of N. latitude; S. by Dutch Guiana and Peru; and W. by the kingdom of Santa Fe. It comprehends the province of Venezuela in the centre, the government of Maracaibo W., Guiana S., the government of Cumana E., and the island of Margarita N. E. The tropical heats of this country, which on the plains are felt in all their force, are mitigated in other parts by a chain of the Andes of moderate height, and in breadth generally from about 10 to 20 leagues, which traverses this country in its whole extent, and finally loses itself in the island of Trinidad. The soil of the Caraccas is extremely fertile, and yields in great abundance cocoa, indigo, cotton, coffee, sugar, tobacco, vanilla, wild cochineal, gums, resins, balsam, medicinal oils, and a great variety of barks and dyeing plants; the immense forests also abound with the finest woods. The whole coast N. of the province of Venezuela furnishes salt of a beautiful whiteness; and there was formerly a pearl fishery, which is now given up. The aspect of the country is agreeably diversified by lakes and rivers. Of the lakes, those of Maracaibo and Valencia are the largest; the breadth of the former is 50 leagues, and its length 30; that of the latter is 14 leagues, and its length 6. Every part of the country abounds in rivers. All those rivers which have their source on the northern ridge of the mountains, in the interior, run from south to north, and fall into the Caribbean sea; while those which rise on the southern declivity of the same mountains, hold a northerly course through the whole extent of the intermediate plain, till they fall into the majestic stream of the Orinoco. Having their courses through vast plains, they are not so rapid as the mountain streams; and mingling their waters during a great part of the year, they resemble rather one vast sea, than rivers which have overflowed their banks. The principal rivers which fall into the Caribbean sea, are the Guigues, Tocuyo, Aroa, Yacaré, Tuy, Urama, Neveri, and Manzanares. The most considerable rivers which fall into the Orinoco are, the Mano, the Parajon and Pao, the Chivata and Zoa, the Cachimamo, the Aracay, the Manapira and Espino, and, lastly, the great river Apure, which enters the Orinoco by a variety of channels. The trade of the Caracas was long confined, by the jealous policy of the mother country, within the rigid bounds of a strict monopoly. But these restrictions are at length greatly relaxed, and the consequences have been extremely beneficial to the colonies, as they have since applied with great success to the cultivation of almost every sort of colonial produce. Cocoa was at one time the only article generally cultivated; but the industry of the colonists is now equally occupied with sugar, cotton, tobacco, indigo, &c. The inhabitants of the Caracas devote a great part of their attention to the rearing of cattle; and the arid plains of the Orinoco are accordingly covered with their numerous flocks. Population estimated at 728,000. In this estimate the whites are computed at two-tenths, the slaves at three, the descendants of freemen at four, and the Indians compose the remainder. The articles chiefly in demand in the Caracas are linens, jaces, black stuffs, such as serges, prugellas, satins, and taffeties. This country was first discovered by Columbus. It was reduced by force of arms, and assigned in property to the W. by a German mercantile house, by Charles V.; but in consequence of maladministration, they were dispossessed in the year 1550, and a supreme governor was appointed by the crown. This country has been the scene of a long and sanguinary contest between the inhabitants, who declared themselves independent of the mother country, and the Spanish armies sent to reduce them under their old domination. It may now, however, be said to have terminated in the complete success of the independent cause, which is everywhere triumphant.

CARACAS, the capital of the above country, situated on the Guayra, in a valley formed by that vast chain of mountains which coasts the sea from Coro to Cumana. The Guayra bounds it on the S., and is everywhere fordable near the town, except after heavy rains, when it runs with great rapidity, but subsides almost as suddenly as it rises. There are three other streams which pass close to the town; namely, the Anauco, over which a handsome bridge is erected: the Carota, which separates one part of the city from the rest, and over which is also erected a stone bridge; and the Cacucho. The streets are in general about 100 yards apart; and they intersect each other at right angles. There are several squares in Caracas, but none of them worthy of notice, except the Plaza Mayor, or great square, where the market for fruits, vegetables, fish, and other smaller articles, is held. The E. side is principally occupied by the cathedral, which is heavily built, and badly planned, particularly in the interior; the S. by the college, and the W. by the public prison. Within these is, as it were, another square, formed principally by ranges of low shops, which, however convenient in a commercial view, entirely disfigure the whole. The public buildings of the city of Caracas are chiefly the churches. The parochial church of Alta Gracia is by far the most splendid church in Caracas, and does some honour to the zeal of the contributors, if not to the taste of the architects, or of those who had the direction of its ornamenting. The church of La Candelaria gives name to the quarter of the town in which it stands. Besides these, there are two other parish churches, St Rosalia and St Paul, three monasteries for friars, two nunneries, and three hospitals. The college is the only public institution for education; and hither all the youth of Caracas of the better classes are sent for that purpose. The barracks, which stand above the town, to the N. W., are large and commodious. Population, according to the parish certificates of 1802, 31,234. The city of Caracas being situated about 3000 feet above the level of the sea, is freed from the excessive heats of the tropical regions. Long. 67. W. Lat. 10. 31. N.

CARAGOLA, a town of Bengal, on the Ganges. Long. 87. 42. E. Lat. 25. 25. N.

CARAMAN, a town of France, department of the Upper Garonne. Population 2360.

CARAMAN, a town of Asiatic Turkey, in Caramania, with 1100 houses.—Also a town of Syria, in the pachalic of Aleppo.

CARAMANIA, an extensive province of Asiatic Turkey, bounded N. and W. by Natolia, and S. by the Mediterranean. Its eastern boundary is not exactly ascertained.

CARANGAS, a province of Peru, E. of Arica.

CARBONNE, a town of France, department of the Upper Garonne. Population 1900.

CARGENTE, a town of Spain, in Valencia, near the Xucar. Population 4600.

CARCASOU, a river of Louisiana, which falls into the gulf of Mexico.

CARCASSONNE, an ancient city of France, in Lower Languedoc, situated on the river Aude, which divides it into Upper and Lower. The former contains the cathedral church, but the lower town is better built, being comparatively modern. It has a manufacture of cloth. Pop. 15,200. 43 miles S. E. Toulouse.

CARDIFF, a town of South Wales, in Glamorganshire, on the Taff, which is crossed by a good bridge of five arches. It is irregularly built, and forms two parishes, but has only one church, which has a fine high tower. The county assizes and quarter sessions are held here; and Cardiff unites with some other towns in sending a representative to parliament. Three miles lower down the river there is a harbour called Penarth. A navigable canal, 25 miles long, constructed among the mountains, communicates with the Merthyr Tydvil works, whence a great quantity of cast and wrought iron is brought. Cardiff is an ancient place, and is surrounded with walls, in which were four gates. Its castle, once large and strongly fortified, was erected about the year 1079. Population 3521. 92 miles E. Haverford West.

CARDIGAN, a maritime county of Wales, bounded N. by the counties of Merioneth and Montgomery, E. by those of Radnor and Brecknock, S. by Caernarthenshire, and W. by the Irish sea. It extends 48 miles in length, and 22 in breadth; it is about 100 miles in circuit, and its superficial area is 726 square miles. The chief rivers are the Tivey, Aeron, Arth, Cledon, Wirrai, Ystwith, Rheidol, Towy. The surface of the country is in general mountainous, interspersed with plains and mosses. There are many valuable mines in Cardiganshire, which afford silver, lead, and copper. Cattle, sheep, and wool, are the staple commodities of the county; and a large proportion of the last is manufactured for home use. It contains 65 parishes, and six market towns: Cardigan, Newcastle, Emlyn, Lampeter, Tregaron, and Aberystwith. Population 57,704.

CARDIGAN, the capital of the above county, about two miles from the mouth of the river Tivey, which is crossed by a bridge of seven arches, was formerly surrounded by a wall, which was defended by a castle, now in ruins. The church is a venerable and spacious structure, ornamented with light Gothic pinnacles. A town-hall was built in 1764, a poor's house in 1773, and the county jail in 1793. A good deal of trade is carried on here. Cardigan joins with Aberystwith, Llanbedar, and Ardrar, in sending a representative to parliament. Population 2397. 37 miles from Aberystwith.

CARDINGTON, a village and parish of England, county of Bedford. Population 1194.

CARDONA, a town of Spain, in Catalonia, on the river Cardenera. Population 2000.

CARDROSS, a village and parish of Scotland, county of Dumbarton. Pop. 3165.

CARENTAN, a small town of France, in Lower Normandy. Population 2000.

CARENTOIR, a town of France, department of the Morbihan. Population 5300.

CARHAIX, a town of France, department of Finisterre. Population 1800.

CARRHAM, a parish of England, county of Northumberland. Population 1370.

CARIACO, a city of South America, in Cumana, on the above river. Population 6500. Long. 63. 39. W. Lat. 10. 30. N.

CARIACO, a large gulf on the coast of South America, province of Cumana. It extends 35 miles from W. to E., and is 68 miles broad.

CARIACO, a river of South America, province of Cumana, which enters Cariaco gulf.

CARIGNANO, a very old town of Piedmont, on the Po. Population 7230.

CARIMON JAVA, a cluster of 10 or 12 small islands in the Indian sea, north of Samurang.

CASINI, a town of Sicily. Population 4000. 17 miles S. W. Palermo.

CARINTHIA, a province of the Austrian empire, with the title of duchy, lying between 46. 20. 50. and 47. 6. N. lat. and between 12. 35. and 15. E. long.; bounded N. and E. by Salzburg and Styria, S. by Carniola and Friuli, and W. by Tyrol. This province is 120 miles in length, about 40 in breadth, and contains 4400 English square miles. The population amounted, in 1812, to 282,454. This country is covered with mountains over its whole surface. It contains also a great number of lakes, of which the only ones that deserve notice are those of Worth or Clagenfurt, Leopoldstein, and Ossiach. The soil of this province is by no means fertile, except in the valley of Lavant, and other favoured spots, which abound in the fruits of the south. Of 1,400,000 acres, only 204,000 are in a state of tillage; the rest consist in pasturages and waste lands. Wheat, oats, millet, and buck-wheat, are cultivated with success in the plains, while only rye and barley thrive on the mountains. Although the vallies of the Alps furnish excellent pasture, the breeding of cattle is very little understood. The chief wealth of Carinthia lies in metallic mines, to which we are to add its beautiful white marble, and in certain situations its precious stones.

CARISBROOK, a village of the Isle of Wight, formerly of larger extent, and still remarkable for its church and castle, both of which are of great antiquity.

CARITENA, a neat town of European Turkey, in the Morea. Population 2500.

CARLENY, New and Old, two small towns of Finland, circle of Wasa.

CARLENTINI, a small town of Sicily, in the valley of Noto. Population 2000.

CARLINGFORD, an inconsiderable seaport of Ireland, county of Louth, in a bay to which it gives name, 51 miles N. Dublin.

CARLISLE, a city of England, in the county of Cumberland, near the confluence of the rivers Eden and Caldén. Until lately, this city was surrounded by a wall with three gates. Of old it was a military post of the first importance, and was of great strength, having a citadel and a castle, the latter situated so as to command the passage of the river Eden. It is still kept in repair, and contains, among other buildings, a new magazine for gunpowder, and an excellent modern armoury, capable of receiving 10,000 stand of arms. Mary queen of Scotland was imprisoned here in 1566. The place of her century by Egfrid, king of Northumberland; the walls are ascribed to William Rufus. The principal streets diverge from the market place as a centre, which is disfigured and obstructed by a guard-house, built when the city was under the dominion of Cromwell. English, Scotch, Castle, and Fisher streets, are spacious; and the city contains some good houses, chiefly, however, of late erection. The cathedral is a venerable structure, partly of Saxon, and partly of Gothic architecture. There is another parish church, St Cuthbert's, which was rebuilt in 1778; besides places of divine worship for Presbyterians, Methodists, Anabaptists, Quakers, and Roman Catholics. An abbey, attached to the cathedral, was completed by Henry I. The city has two work-houses for the indigent poor, supported by public subscription; and a dispensary. There is a very large and handsome bridge over the Eden, nearly a quarter of a mile in length. Considerable trade and manufactures are carried on here, consisting of cotton in all its branches, woollens, linen, leather, hats, hardware, and various other commodities. There are several foundries; and also breweries, which produce a large quantity of malt liquor. There are two markets weekly. Carlisle returns two members to parliament. It has four annual fairs for general commerce; there are also three annual cattle fairs. Having been an important Roman station, the castle is supposed to have been a Roman fortress; but all its original configuration is lost in subsequent alterations. Population 15,476. 96 miles from Edinburgh, 301 N. London. Long. 3. 5. N. Lat. 54. 50. N.

CARLISLE, a post township of the United States, in Schoharie county, New York, 8 miles N. W. Schoharie. Population 1231.

CARLISLE, a borough and post township of the United States, in Cumberland county, Pennsylvania, containing houses of public worship for Episcopalians, Roman Catholics, Methodists, Lutherans, and several denominations of Presbyterians. Dickinson college was founded in this town in 1783, and was, for a number of years, a flourishing institution, having a president, three professors, a complete philosophical apparatus, and a library of about 3000 volumes. Its operations are now suspended. 16 miles W. Harrisburg. Pop. 2491. Long. 77. 16. W. Lat. 40. 12. N.

CARLISLE BAY, on the western coast of Barbadoes.—2d, Of the island of Antigua.—3d, On the south coast of Jamaica.

CARLOPAGO, a seaport of Dalmatia, in Morlachia. Population 12,000.

CARLOS, SAN, a new town of Spain, in Andalusia, with spacious marine barracks, &c.

CARLOS, SAN, a handsome city of South America, province of Venezuela, on the Aguirre. The wealth of the inhabitants consists chiefly in cattle. Pop. 9500. 180 miles S. W. Caracas.—The name of various other inconsiderable settlements in South America.

CARLOS DE MONTEREY, SAN, the capital of New California. Population 700.

CARLOW, or CATHERLOGH, a county of Ireland, bounded N. and N. W. by Kildare and Queen's county, E. by the counties of Wicklow and Wexford, and S. W. by Kilkenny. It is about 26 miles in length, and 23 in breadth, and contains a superficial area of 214 square miles. It is watered by the Barrow. Population 78,000.

CARLOW, the assize town of the above county, situated on the Barrow. It consists of a main street, intersected by two others at right angles. Its public buildings are a market-house, court-house, gaol, a horse barrack, and a venerable old church. A Roman Catholic seminary was lately formed, with a splendid chapel. Here are the ruins of a very fine abbey, supposed to have been founded about the year 634. On an eminence commanding the river, stands a strong castle, supposed to have been erected by King John, which is now in ruins. Its manufactures are coarse woollen cloths; and it supplies the adjacent country with stone-coal. Carlow sends one member to the imperial parliament. Pop. 6575. 39 miles S. Dublin.

CARLOWITZ, an open town of the Austrian empire, in Sirmia, on the Danube, below Peterwardein. Pop. 5600. 32 miles N. W. Belgrade. Long. 20. 3. E. Lat. 47. 25. N.

CARLSBAD, an open town of Bohemia, 56 miles W. Prague. Population 8000.

CARLSBURG, a fortified town of Hanover, 30 miles N. by W. Bremen.

CARLSBERG, or CARLSBERG, a strongly fortified seaport of Sweden, on the Baltic, and the principal depot of the Swedish navy. The docks are separated from the town by a high wall. One of them was constructed in 1714, out of the solid rock; its length is 190 feet, its breadth 46, and its depth 33. The new dock is much larger. The exports consist of timber, tar, potash, tallow, and marble. Pop. 13,800. 220 miles S. S. W. Stockholm.

CARLSRUHE, a handsome town in the grand duchy of Baden, the residence of the grand duke and his court. The buildings in the town are almost all of stone. In the middle of the ducal palace is a spire, which is accounted the central point of the town; in the left wing stands the chapel, and in the right the valuable library of the grand duke, containing more than 40,000 volumes, with a cabinet of minerals and medals, and a philosophical apparatus; the whole is surrounded with a botanic garden. Among the other public edifices of Carlsruhe, are the Lutheran, Calvinist, and Catholic churches, the Jewish synagogue, the chancery, the town-house, the work-house, the barracks, &c. Population 10,304. 11 miles S. Philipsburgh.

CARLSTADT, the capital of Croatia, seated near the conflux of the Dobra and Kulpa, 42 miles S. S. E. Laybach.

CARLSTADT, a town of Sweden, 160 miles W. Stockholm. Population 1500.

CARLSTADT, a town of Bavaria, 13 miles N. W. Wurtzburg. Population 2203.

CARLTON, a village and parish of England, in Bedfordshire. Pop. 429.—The name of several townships of England, and a hamlet.

CARMAGNOLA, a populous trading town of Piedmont, on the Po. Population 12,000. 12 miles S. S. E. Turin.

CARMEL, a post township of the United States, in Putnam county, New York, 26 miles S. E. Poughkeepsie. Population 2020.

CARMEL, MOUNT, a celebrated mountain of Palestine, on the north side of the bay of Acre. Height 2000 feet.

CARMI, a post township of the United States, capital of White county, Illinois, on the Little Wabash, 20 miles above its mouth.

CARMONA, a small town of Spain, 20 miles N. E. Seville.—Another of Toledo, with 2400 inhabitants. 15 miles from Toledo.

CARNATIC, a province extending along the eastern coast of Hindostan, about 560 miles in length, by from 50 to 100 in breadth.

CARNAUL, a celebrated town of Hindostan, in Long. 76. 47. E. Lat. 29. 42. N.

CARNESVILLE, a post township of the United States, and capital of Franklin county, Georgia, 110 miles from Augusta.

CAR NICOBAR, a small island in the Indian sea, the most northern of the Nicobar islands.

CARNIOLA, a province of the Austrian empire, with the title of duchy, bounded N. by Carinthia, N. E. by Styria, E. and S. E. by Croatia, S. by Dalmatia and the Adriatic, and W. by Istria, Friuli, and the county of Goritz. Carniola is about 120 miles in length, 100 in breadth, and contains above 4700 square miles, with a population, in the year 1807, of 409,504. It is divided either into Upper, Middle, Lower, and Inner Carniola (to which some add Austrian Istria), or into the circles of Laybach, Neustadt, and Adelsberg. The south of Carniola contains many valleys and fertile tracts, which produce oil and excellent wine; but the north and north-west parts, where the province is separated from Carinthia by lofty mountains, are cold, bleak, and barren. The main river is the Save, after which come the Laybach, the Gurk, and the Kulpa. This province contains a number of iron mines, the most ancient and noted of which is that in the mountain of Eisenberg, or Naseleiro. Quick-silver is found near Ostraga; and the famous mines of that metal at Idria may likewise be considered as belonging to this province. The principal branches of industry are the manufactures of woollens, linens, and lace. The iron forges are also of considerable importance.

CARNWATH, a village of Scotland, county of Lanark, 25 miles S. W. Edinburgh.

CAROLINA, LA, a town of Spain, in Andalusia. Population 3000.

CAROLINA, NORTH, one of the United States, bounded N. by Virginia; E. by the Atlantic; S. by South Carolina; and W. by Tennessee. It extends from Lat. 33. 50. to 36. 30. N. and from Long. 75. 45. to 84. W. and contains 48,000 square miles. Population in 1796, 303,751; in 1800, 478,103; and in 1810, 555,500, of whom 376,410 were whites, 168,324 slaves, and 10,266 free blacks. Along the whole coast of North Carolina is a ridge of sand, separated from the main land, in some places by narrow sounds, in others by broad bays. The passages or inlets through it are shallow and dangerous, and Ocracoke inlet is the only one, north of Cape Fear, through which vessels pass. In the counties on the sea coast the land is low, and covered with extensive swamps and marshes; and for 60 or 80 miles from the shore is a dead level. Beyond this the country swells into hills, and in the most western part rises into mountains. In the low country the soil is generally sandy, and covered with immense forests of pitch pine; in the swamps, rice of a fine quality is raised; and in the upper country, wheat, rye, barley, oats, hemp, and Indian corn.

The chief rivers are the Chowan, Roanoke, Tar, Neuse, Cape Fear, Catawba, and Broad river. These are generally navigable for small vessels from 60 to 100 miles; and still farther for boats. Westward of the Allegany mountains, the Tennessee flows through part of this state in its progress to the Ohio, and there are various smaller streams which it receives in its course. The coast of Carolina is indented by various inlets, the most remarkable of which are Pamlico, which is an inland sea, from 10 to 20 miles broad, and nearly 100 miles in length; Albemarle sound, which is north of Pamlico sound, and communicates with it, and is 60 miles in length, and from 8 to 12 in breadth; and Coreasound, which communicates with Pamlico sound on the south.

The climate of North Carolina is far from being healthy. In the flat country near the sea coast, the inhabitants, during summer and autumn, are subject to intermitting fevers. In the higher regions the climate is more temperate and healthy.

Hitherto, the productions of the northern parts of the state, lying on the Roanoke and its branches, and also on the upper parts of the Tar and Neuse, have been sent to the markets of Virginia; and the trade of Broad river, the Catawba, and the Yadkin, has gone to South Carolina. Since the year 1815, the state has been zealously engaged in the business of internal improvements. It is intended to improve the navigation of the inlets and sounds, so as to open a direct and easy communication with the ocean; to remove the obstructions in the navigation of the principal rivers; to connect the rivers by navigable canals; to improve the roads; and to drain the marshes and swamps of the eastern and southern counties. In prosecution of these plans, skillful engineers have been employed, for several years, in making the necessary surveys, and several private companies have been formed, under the patronage of the state.

Within a few years, there has been much zeal displayed in the establishment of academies and schools. Previous to 1804, there were but two academies in the state. The number at present is 60, and is rapidly increasing. The most numerous denominations of Christians are the Methodists and Baptists, especially in the low country. The western part of the state was settled by Presbyterians from Pennsylvania. The government consists of a senate and house of commons, chosen annually, and a governor chosen by joint ballot of both houses. The principal exports are pitch, tar, turpentine, lumber, Indian corn, and tobacco. Raleigh is the seat of government.

CAROLINA, SOUTH, one of the United States, bounded N. and N. E. by North Carolina; S. E. by the Atlantic; and S. W. by Georgia, from which it is separated by Savannah river.

N. N.

taining:

1790,

1810,

190,365 slaves, and 4554 free blacks. The sea coast is bordered with a fine chain of islands, between which and the shore there is a very convenient navigation. The mainland is naturally divided into the Lower and Upper country. The low country extends 80 or 100 miles from the coast, and is covered with extensive forests of pitch pine, called pine barrens, interspersed with swamps and marshes of a rich soil. After leaving the low country, in proceeding into the interior, you first pass through a region of little sand hills, resembling the waves of the ocean in a high sea. This curious country, sometimes called the middle country, continues for 50 or 60 miles, till you arrive at the Ridge, which is a remarkable track of high ground as you approach it from the sea, but level as you advance from the north-west. Beyond this

Ridge has a sandy barren soil, not worth cultivation. The soil of the upper country is generally strong and productive. Cotton and rice are the staple productions of the state. The climate and soil are well adapted to tobacco, grain, and indigo, and these were formerly cultivated to a great extent; but since the invention of the machine to cleanse upland cotton from its seeds, the cultivation of cotton has become so profitable, that almost every thing else is neglected.

The climate of the upper country is healthy at all seasons of the year. In the low country, the summer months are sickly, particularly August and September; and at this season the climate frequently proves fatal to strangers. The principal rivers beginning in the north-east, are the Pedee, Santee, Cooper, Ashley, Edisto, Combahee, and Savannah. There is a canal, 22 miles long, connecting Santee and Cooper rivers, by which the produce of a large section of this state, and of the western part of North Carolina, is brought to the city of Charleston.

South Carolina college, at Columbia, has been liberally patronized by the state. Colleges have also been incorporated in Abbeville district, in Beaufort and in Winnsborough, but they have not taken a higher rank than academies. Free schools are established throughout the state, and the sum of 30,000 dollars annually, has been appropriated by the legislature for their support. The most nume-years, and the representatives every two years, by districts. The governor is chosen every two years by a joint ballot of both houses.

In 1817 South Carolina was the third state in the Union, in the value of her exports. The amount was 10,372,613 dollars, and consisted almost wholly of domestic produce. The staple of the state is cotton. The other articles are rice, lumber, pitch, tar, turpentine, &c. A large part of this produce is exported in ships belonging to the merchants of the northern states. Charleston is the largest town in the state, and the centre of its commerce, but Columbia is the seat of government.

CAROLINE, a post township of the United States, in Tioga county, New York; 19 miles N. E. Spencer.—2d, A county in Maryland, on the eastern shore, bounded N. W. by ity of the state, in lofty mountains. The banks of the large rivers, and the creeks in the low country, are bordered with a belt of excellent land, producing cotton and maize in abundance; the marshes and swamps in this district make fine rice plantations; and some of the low grounds between the sand hills in the middle district, are suitable for agriculture and pasturage; but with these exceptions the whole country below the Denton.—3d, In Virginia, on the south side of the Rappahannock. Population 17,844. Slaves 10,764. Chief town, Bowling-Green.

CAROLINE ISLANDS, or NEW PHILIPPINES, a chain of islands in the Pacific ocean. Long. 136. to 150. E. Lat. 6. to 10. N.

CARONNA, a town of France, department of Vaucluse. Population 2260.

CARONI, a large and abundant river of South America, which falls into the Orinoco, 72 leagues from its mouth.

CARON, BIKET EL, a considerable lake in Egypt, 60 miles long and 10 broad.

CARON, a town of Hindostan, in Coimbatour, 42 miles W. Trichinopoly. Houses 1000.

CARORA, a city of South America, in the province of Venezuela, on the river Morera. The inhabitants, amounting to 6200, rear oxen, mules, horses, sheep, goats, &c.; and they contrive, by their industry, to live in great comfort, although the surrounding country is parched and barren. 270 miles W. of the Caracas. Lat. 9. 50. N.

CAROVIGNO, a town of Naples. Population 2900. 3 miles E. Ostuni.

CARPATHIAN MOUNTAINS, an extensive chain of mountains, which reaches from the Black sea to the borders of Saxony.

CARPENEDOLO, a town of Lombardy. Population 4000. 15 miles S. S. E. Brescia.

CARPENTARIA, GULF or, on the north coast of New Holland, stretching in breadth to 5. 30. of longitude, from Endeavour Strait to Cape Wilberforce, and 7. of latitude deep.

CARPENTRAS, a town of France, in Provence, on the river Anson. The principal trade is in wine, brandy, and fruit. Population 9000. 38 miles N. W. Aix.

CARPI, a town of Italy, 24 miles S. Mantua.

CARPINO, a town of Naples, province of Capitanata. Population 4900.

CARRARA, a town of Italy, 25 miles N. W. Pisa. Population 3500.

CARRIBEAN SEA, a part of the Atlantic, bounded N. by Jamaica, St Domingo, Porto-Rico, and the Virgin islands, S. and W. by the continent, E. by the Carribean islands.

CARRIBEE, or CARIBEE ISLANDS, a part of the West India islands, extending in the form of a crescent from the island of Porto-Rico to the coast of South America. They lie between 58. and 65. W. long. and between 9. and 19. N. lat. The chief are Santa Cruz, St Martin, St Christopher, Nevis, Antigua, Montserrat, Guadeloupe, Dominica, Martinique, St Lucia, St Vincent, Barbadoes, Grenada, Tobago, and Trinidad.

CARRICK ON SHANNON, a town of Ireland, county of Leitrim, capital of that county, 77 miles N. W. Dublin.

CARRICK ON SUIR, a market town of Ireland, county of Tipperary, 12 miles N. W. Waterford.

CARRICKFERGUS, once a principal seaport of Ireland, county of Antrim, on a bay called Belfast lough, or Carrickfergus bay. Its trade is now mostly transferred to Belfast. It has an ancient church, and a castle boldly situated on a rock. Pop. 2400. 8 miles from Belfast.

CARRICKMACROSS, a village of Ireland, county of Monaghan, 40 miles N. N. W. Dublin.

CARRON, a village of Scotland, county of Stirling, on a stream of the same name, falling into the river Forth at the distance of three miles, noted for its iron-works, the most extensive in Great Britain. There are about 20 furnaces, and the whole works employ more than 3000 persons. All kinds of iron goods are manufactured at Carron; heavy ordnance, cylinders, steam engines, pumps, boilers, flies, wheels, and pinions, together with other ponderous apparatus used in war or the arts. 2 miles N. W. Falkirk, 26 N. W. Edinburgh.

CARRON, a river of Scotland, which falls into the sea in the county of Kincardine.

CARROUX, a town of Savoy, on the Arve, about 8 miles from Geneva. Pop. 3200.

CARRU, a town of Piedmont, province of Mondovi. Population 4000.

CARTAGO, the chief town of Costa-Rica, in South America. Long. 83. 30. W. Lat. 9. 42. S.—2d, A river of South America, in Costa-Rica, which runs into the Pacific ocean.—3d, A city of South America, province of Popayan, on the river Vieja, a branch of the Cauca. Pop. 5000 or 6000. Lat. 4. 46. N.

CARTER, a county of the United States, in Tennessee. Population 4190. Slaves 262. Chief town, Elizabethtown.

CARTERET, a maritime county of the United States, in North Carolina, on Gore and Pamlico Sounds. Population 4823. Slaves 1172. Chief town, Beaufort.

CARTERSVILLE, a post village of the United States, in Cumberland county, Virginia, 48 miles from Richmond.

CARTHAGENA, or CARTAGENA, an old and well known seaport of Spain, on the coast of Murcia. The town lies on a peninsula in a natural basin, which constitutes an excellent harbour. A manufactory of sail-cloth is carried on by the inhabitants. There is here an extensive alum-work. Population 25,000. 25 miles S. S. E. Murcia.

CARTHAGENA, a province and government of South America, in the new kingdom of Grenada, bounded N. by the Carribean sea, S. by Antioquia, E. by Santa Martha, from which it is divided by the river Magdalena, W. by Darien. It contains about 60,000 whites, 13,000 Indians, and 7000 negro slaves.

CARTHAGENA, a city of South America, and capital of the above province, situated on a sandy island, in a commodious bay. The island communicates with the continent by a neck of land. Eastward the city communicates, by means of a wooden bridge, with a large suburb called Xeximani, built on an island, which has a communication with the continent by means of a wooden bridge. The city and suburbs are well laid out, the streets being straight, broad, uniform, and well paved. The houses are built chiefly of stone, except a few of brick. There are various churches and convents in Carthagena, some of which are magnificent. The bay extends 2½ leagues from north to south, has a sufficient depth of water, and good anchorage, and is so smooth that the ships are no more agitated in it than in a river. In 1644 Carthagena was invaded by the French under a Corsican pilot; also by Sir Francis Drake, who, after pillaging it, set it on fire, and its complete destruction was only prevented by a ransom of 120,000 ducats, paid him by the neighbouring colonies. It was invaded and pillaged a third time by the French under Monsieur de Pointis, in 1697. In 1741 it was besieged by the English, but the enterprize miscarried. In the late contest with the mother country, Carthage was besieged, first by Bolivar, and afterwards by Morillo, to whom it surrendered. It has since been reduced by the independent troops. Pop. 24,000. Long. 77. 50. W. Lat. 10. 30. N.

CARVIN, a town of France, department of the Pas de Calais. Population 5000.

CARWAR, a seaport town of Hindostan, province of Canara. Long. 74. 16. E. Lat. 14. 47. N.

CASA GRANDE, a town of Mexico, province of Sonora, so called from an ancient edifice near it, supposed to have been the work of the ancient Mexicans. Long. 113. 23. E. Lat. 33. 40. N.

CASALE, or CASAL, a town of Piedmont, in the duchy of Montserrat, on the Po. It carries on a considerable traffic, particularly in cattle. Pop. 15,000. 85 miles S. W. Milan.

CASALE BORGOENE, a town of Piedmont, with 2500 inhabitants. 12 miles N. E. Turin.

CASALE MAGGIORE, a town of Milan, on the Po. Pop. 4830. 20 miles E. S. E. Cremona.

CASALE NUOVO, a town of Naples, in the Terra d'Otranto. Population 4340.—Also a large village. Population 3510.—The name also of several other small towns in Italy.

CARANARA, a large river of South America, in Venezuela, which falls into the Meta, at about 75 leagues from the junction of the latter stream with the Orinoco.

CARANOVA, a town of Naples, south of Capua, with 3000 inhabitants.

CASAPULLA, a town of Naples, north of Capri, with 2300 inhabitants.

CASHIN, a city of Persia, in the province of Irak. It is of a square form, each side about a mile long, and surrounded by a wall. Carpets made here of pieces of cloth of different colours, are much valued, and bear a high price; and sword blades are also manufactured. Pop. 60,000. 340 miles N. N. W. Ispahan. Long. 49. 33. E. Lat. 36. 12. N.

CASCAES, a seaport of Portugal, in Torres Vedras. Pop. 2500. 15 miles W. Lisbon.

CASCHAU, or CASSOVIA, the capital of Upper Hungary, county of Aba-Ujvar, on the river Kunnert. Population 7900.

CASERTA, a town of Naples, in the Terra di Lavoro, noted for its magnificent palace. Population 16,996. 15 miles E. Capua.

CASEY, a county of the United States, in Kentucky. Population 3385. Slaves 942. Chief town Elizabethtown.

CASIMY, a city of Persia, province of Irak, extending about 3 miles in length, and 1½ mile in breadth. There is a royal palace here, and many fine mosques, bazars, and caravanserais. All kinds of copper utensils are made, and artists work skilfully in gold and silver. The country is much infested by scorpions. Population 30,000. 186 miles N. Ispahan. Long. 51. 17. E. Lat. 33. 55. N.

CASHMEL, a city of Ireland, in the county of Tipperary, an archiepiscopal see, 3 miles from the Suir. The new cathedral is a fine structure of Grecian architecture; the archbishop's dwelling is a large plain building, adorned by pleasant gardens; and the library is esteemed valuable from containing many curious manuscripts. Here there is a handsome market-house, a sessions-house, a county infirmary, a charter school liberally endowed, and barracks for two companies of foot. There are fine ruins of the old cathedral, situated on the edge of a remarkable perpendicular rock. Adjoining to it are the remains of buildings called the chapel and hall of audience of Cormac Mc-Culenan, said to have been erected in the year 901. The city sends one member to the imperial parliament. Houses about 600. 31 miles N. W. Waterford.

CASHMERE, the ancient Captra, a province of India, for a long period belonging to Hindostan, but now an appendage of Afghanistan. It is about 90 miles in length, and nearly of an oval form, situated chiefly between the 34th and 35th degrees of northern latitude, and between the 73d and 76th degrees of eastern longitude. It is a fertile valley, surrounded on all sides by mountains, from whence descend numerous rivulets, which form several beautiful lakes. It is also well watered by the Little Sind and Kishongunga rivers; while the magnificent stream of the Vidusta, or Jhelum, forms a navigable communication from its eastern to its western boundary. The valley of Cashmere yields rice, and, where the land is higher, wheat, barley, and various other grains; but its most valuable vegetable production is saffron, of which great quantities are exported to Hindostan and other countries. The principal source, however, of the wealth of Cashmere, is its delicate and unrivalled manufacture of shawls. The wool or hair of which the shawl is made, is produced by a goat, only found in Thibet, from whence the Cashmere merchants are supplied with the wool, and have a monopoly of the commodity. Their other exports are sugar, paper, lacquered ware, otto of roses, and some drugs.

CASHMERE, called also Spasradhor, the capital of the above province. It extends three miles on each side of the river Jhelum, over which there are five wooden bridges. Many of the houses are three stories high, and are principally built of wood, with partition walls of brick and mortar. The streets are narrow, and choked with the filth of the inhabitants, who are proverbially a dirty

In the environs are the remains of hindoo palaces, built by the emperors of Hindostan. Long. 73. 43. E. Lat. 34. 30. N.

CASHY, a town in Northern Hindostan. Long. 62. 40. E. Lat. 26. 42. N.

CASHY, a river of Syria, which falls into the sea, 4 miles N. Sur.

CASORIA, a town of Italy, near Naples. Population 5700.

CASPIAN SEA, an inland sea of Asia, bounded N. by the government of Astracan, E. by Tartary, S. by Persia, and W. by the ridges of Caucasus, the principalities of Baku, Derbent, and Circassia, together with part of the government of Astracan. According to the most accurate estimate, it extends 646 miles in length from north to south, 365 in extreme breadth in the northern part, 235 in the southern, and the total circuit of the coast, including gulfs and bays, is 2350 miles. In certain places it is of great depth. The water is as salt as that of the ocean, and it has a bitter taste. The Caspian sea receives many large rivers; namely, the Ynik N., which is 100 fathoms wide, and 10 feet deep at the mouth; at the distance of 61 miles, the Yemba, or Jemba; also the Oxus; the Daria, by which gold is washed down from the mountains; and 40 miles S. of the Daria is the Oza, or Orzantes; the Naren and Asterahad on the S. E. extremity; and the Klitozein on the S. W.; on the W. coast the Thau; and at the higher extremity the Volga, which, after a very long course, contributes an immense volume of waters by about 32 different channels.

CASSANDRA NOVA, a town of European Turkey, 15 miles S. E. Salomki.

CASSANO, a small town of Milan, on the Adda, 16 miles N. E. Milan.

CASSAY, called also MECKRY, or MUGA-IOW, a province of the Birman empire, lying between the 23d and 26th degrees of northern latitude, and between the 93d and 98th degrees of eastern longitude.

CASSEL, a town of Germany, on the Fulda (across which there is here a fine stone bridge). The public buildings most worthy of notice are the government offices, the arsenal, the soldiers, the new house of correction, the parade square, the large barracks, the church of St Martin, and the public library. The other objects of attention are the pleasure gardens, with the orangery, the public baths, the menagerie, and, above all, the fine castle of Weissenstein. The trade of this place is not of great importance, but there are some manufactures of china, earthen-ware, and woollen stuffs. Pop. 20,000. 64 miles N. E. Coblenz.

CASSEL, a town in French Flanders. Population 3000. 15 miles S. E. Dunkirk.

CASSEL, a small town and bailiwick of Germany, on the right bank of the Rhine, opposite to Mentz.

CASSELLÉ, a town of Piedmont. Population 9500. 6 miles N. Turin.

CASSENEUIL, a town of France, department of the Lot and Garonne. Pop. 2500.

CASINA, or CASHNA, an extensive kingdom of Central Africa, situated W. of Borno, and S. of the Niger. It is but little known.

CASSIARI, a large and copious branch of the Rio Negro, in South America, which is remarkable for communicating with the Orinoco and Amazonas.

CASSE, a seaport of France, in Provence, 8 miles S. E. Marseilles. Population 2300.

CASANHEIRA, three small towns of Portugal; two in Estremadura, and one in Beira. CASTANOWITZ, a town and fortress of Croatia. Houses 600.

CASTEL CALDO, a town of Italy, 30 miles S. S. W. Padua. Population 3000.

CASTEL FOLLIT, a town of Spain, in Catalonia, at the foot of the Pyrenees.

CASTEL JALOUX, a town of France, 12 miles S. S. W. Marmande. Population 1770.

CASTEL LEONE, a town of Lombardy, 15 miles W. N. W. Cremona. Pop. 6000.

CASTEL & MARE DI STABIA, a seaport of Naples, 15 miles S. E. Naples.

CASTEL NUOVO, a fortified town of Dalmatia. Population 3000.

CASTEL NUOVO, a town of Piedmont. Population 2500. 17 miles N. W. Asti.—The name of several other small towns in Italy.

CASTEL DEL RIO, a town of Spain, on the Guadajoz, 15 miles S. E. Cordova.

CASTEL RODRIGUE, a small fortified town of Portugal, in the province of Beira.

CASILL SARRAZIN, a town of France, on the Garonne, 30 miles W. N. W. Toulouse. Population 5000.

CASTELBRANCO, a fortified town of Portugal, in Beira, on the Leiria. Pop. 4000.

CASTELLAMONTE, a town of Piedmont, with 3500 inhabitants.

CASTELLANE, a town of France, in Provence, at the foot of the Alps. Pop. 2050.

CASTELLAZZO, a town of Piedmont, 7 miles S. Alessandria. Population 4750.

CASTELLITO, the name of three considerable villages in the Sardinian states.

CASTELLO, CITTA DI, a town in the States of the Church, 100 miles N. Rome.

CASIELLO DE VIDE, a town and strong frontier castle of Portugal, with 5700 inhabitants. 9 miles E. N. E. Portalegre.

CASIELION DE LA PLANA, a large town of Spain, in the province of Valencia. It still preserves part of its old Moorish walls and square towers, and has eight gates, with two suburbs. The chief objects of interest are the principal church, three of the chapels, the town-house, and a vast tower, or belfry, 260 feet in height, and 116 in circumference. Population 11,000. 20 miles S. Valencia.

CASTELMORON, a town of France, in Gascony. Population 2040.

CASTELMORON, or CASTEL MORON D'ALBERT, a town of France, in Gascony. Population 1800.

CASTELNAU DE MONTMIRANT, a town of France, in Languedoc, with 300 houses.

CASTELNAU DE MONTMIRANT, a town of France, department of the Lot. Pop. 4300.

CASTELNAU DE STREFOIN, a town of France, 11 miles N. W. Toulouse. Pop. 1500.

CASTELNAUDART, a town of France, department of the Aude, 38 miles S. E. Toulouse. Population 8100.—It has flourishing silk manufactures.

CASTELNUOVO TONTONENSE, or DI SCRIVIA, a town of Milan, on the Scrivia. Population 6950.

CASEREDULO, a town of Lombardy, to the east of Brescia, with 2000 inhabitants.

CASTIGLIONE, a town of Piedmont. Population 4500.

CASTIGLIONE DELLE STIVIERE, a fortified town of Lombardy, 30 miles N. W. Mantua. Population 4000.

CASTIGNOLA, or CASTIGLIONE, a town of Piedmont. Population 2600.

CASTILE, OLD, an extensive province of Spain, inclosed between Arragon, New Castile, Estremadura, Leon, Asturias, Biscay, and Navarre. Its form is that of an irregular triangle, whose extreme length is 60 leagues, and its breadth about 50. Burgos is the chief town; and other places of note are Valladolid, Segovia, Avila, Calahorra, Logrono, and Soria. The most conspicuous rivers are the Xalon, the Douro, the Ebro, the Carrion, and the Tormes.

CASTILE, NEW, one of the largest and most important provinces of Spain, is bounded N. W. and N. by Old Castile, N. E. by Arragon, E. by Valencia, S. E. by Murcia, S. by La Mancha (and beyond it by Jaen and Cordova), and W. by Estremadura. New Castile is fifty-six leagues in length, and forty-nine in breadth. It consists partly of extensive plains, partly of ridges of lofty mountains. New Castile is watered by three large rivers, susceptible of navigation, the Tagus, the Xucar, and the Guadiana, as well as by a multitude of smaller ones, such as the Xarama, Molina, the Alberche, &c. Population 949,642.

CASTILLON, a town of France, 25 miles E. Bourdeaux. Population 2600.

CASTINE, a seaport of the United States, and capital of Hancock county, Maine. It is situated on a promontory, nearly at the head of the east side of Penobscot bay, and has an excellent harbour for any number of ships of the largest size. This place was taken by the British during the late war, but was restored at the conclusion of the peace. Population 1036. 322 miles E. N. E. Portland. Long. 68. 46. W. Lat. 44. 24. N.

CASTLE ACRE, a town and parish of England, county of Norfolk. Population 1100.

CASTLE CARY, a town and parish of England, county of Somerset. Population 1627.

CASTLE CONNELL, a village of Ireland, county of Limerick.

CASTLE DUNKERT, a town of Ireland, county of Kildare, 7 miles S. E. Athy.

CASTLE DOUGLAS, a village of Scotland, county of Kirkcubright.

CASTLE HEBBERMAN, a parish and town of England, county of Essex. Pop. 1103.

CASTLE LEEVAN, or LEWIS, a market town of Ireland, county of Cork, 13 miles N. E. Cork.

CASTLE MARTIN, a small town of Ireland, in the county of Cork.

CASTLE RING, a parish and parish of England, county of Norfolk. Population 344.

CASTLE RING, a town of Ireland, county of Mayo, situated on a river. Here is a spacious church with a fine steeple, a handsome court-house, a modern jail, a charter school, and barracks for cavalry. It is a populous place, and carries on considerable trade, particularly in linens. 35 miles N. Galway.

CATTLECONNA, a town of Ireland, county of Kilkenny, near extensive coal mines, with 200 houses. 10 miles N. Kilkenny.

CASTLEFORD, a town of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1022.

CASTLEHAYEN, a small town of Ireland, on a bay of the same name.

CASTLEMAINE, a village of Ireland, county of Kerry, on the river Mang.

CASTLETON, a township of England, in the county of Lancaster. Population 7894.

CASTLETON, a town and parish of England, county of Derby. Population 1428.

CASTLETON, a post township of the United States, in Rutland county, Vermont. Lake Bombazine is chiefly in this town, and discharges itself into Castleton river, which falls into Putney river, in Fairhaven. Population 1428. 38 miles W. Windsor.—2d. A post township of Richmond county, on Staten island, New York. Here is the Marine Hospital, which can accommodate 200 or 300 sick; and the Quarantine and Health Establishments of the city of New York. Population 1361. 9 miles S. W. New York.

CASTLETOWN, or CASTLE, BUSHIN, anciently Soda, the chief town of the Isle of Man, on the south coast. It is tolerably well built, and has a safe and commodious harbour. Houses about 500.

CASTLETOWN, a village and parish of Scotland, county of Roxburgh. Pop. 2038.

CASTRES, a town of France, in Upper Languedoc, at the conflux of the Agout and Thouret. It contains many public and private buildings of great beauty, particularly the palace of the ancient bishops of Castres, and the cathedral church. Population 12,400. 35 miles E. Toulouse, 400 S. Paris.

CASTRICUM, a village of the Netherlands, in Holland, 6 miles S. S. W. Alkmaar.

CASTRO, a town of Italy, in the States of the Church, 55 miles N. W. Rome.

CASTRO, anciently called Mythen, a seaport town of the island of Metelin, about a mile in circumference.

CASTRO, the chief town of the island of Lemnos. Population 300 families.

CASTRO GIOVANNI, a large town of Sicily, in the Val di Noto, 40 miles W. Catania.

CASTRO NUOVO, a town of Sicily, with 1000 houses. 30 miles S. E. Palermo.

CASTRO RELLAI, a town of Sicily, in the Val di Demone. Population 900.—There are various other insignificant towns of this name in Spain and Italy.

CASERO VIKENKA, the capital of a province of the same name in Peru, on a lofty mountain, where the cold is intense. It is 42 miles from Guancabamba. Long. 74. 44. W. Lat. 13. 49. S.

CASUA, a town of the Austrian empire, 30 miles S. E. Trieste.

CASWELL, a county of the United States, in the north part of North Carolina. Pop. 11,757. Slaves 4299. Chief town Louisa.

CAT ISLAND, one of the Bahama islands, 60 miles long and 17 broad. Long. 75. W. Lat. 24. 30. N.

CATAMARCA, a province of Peru, with a capital of the same name. Population 16,000.

CATABOOLA, a post township of the United States, in Rapide county, Louisiana. Population 1164. 2d. A river of Louisiana, which falls into the Washita.

CATALINA, SANTA, the name of several small islands in the Caribbean sea and Pacific ocean.

CATALONIA, a well known province of Spain, situated in the N. E. part of the kingdom, and occupying a surface of 44 leagues long and 40 broad. It is bounded N. by the Pyrenees, which separate it from France, E. by the Mediterranean, S. by Valencia, and W. by Arragon. It is a mountainous province, and is less fertile than either of the Castiles; but its inhabitants are far more industrious, and more advanced in manufactures, commerce, and agriculture. Its capital is Barcelona; the other towns are Tarragona, Tortosa, Lerida, Gerona, Figueras, Manresa. Population 800,000.

CATAMANDOO, a city of Hindostan, the capital of Nepaul, and residence of the Goorkhali rajah; 40 miles S. of the lofty Himmlaya mountains, and about 2 degrees N. of the British possessions, in Long. 85. 30. E. Lat. 27. 23. N. on the banks of the Bishenmuttery. It is situated in one of the most romantic valleys in the world. The houses are built of brick, with pent roofs; they are of two, three, and four stories, but in general have but a mean appearance; nor is the palace of the rajah much better. The city is decorated with a great variety of temples of brick and stone: one of them, a very ancient edifice, consists of three lofty pyramids, and two square apartments. Pop. estimated at 60,000.

CATANDUAS, one of the Philippine isles, 36 miles in length, by 20 in breadth. Long. 124. 30. E. Lat. 15. N.

CATANIA, a large and famous city of Sicily, in the Val di Demons, on the borders of the Val di Noto, beautifully situated at the foot of Mount Etna, where the river Indicelle empties itself into the sea. Although destroyed three times, by the lava of the volcano, Catania appears to have always risen more splendidly from its ashes, and has a title to rank among the elegant cities of Europe. The town consists of two very long and spacious streets, which are intersected at right angles by several others: they are all regularly built, and well paved with the same material, lava. Here are, 19 convents for men, and 11 for women, a Monte de Piete, foundling hospital, poor-house, and asylum, 49 churches, and other places of public worship. The senate-house is a model of fine architecture; the cathedral, founded by Earl Riger (of Normandy), in the year 1084, is also very much admired for the simplicity and grandeur of its design. The great square is formed by the town hall, the cathedral, and the university. The town has suffered much from its vicinity to Mount Etna, which, though it produces an agreeable climate, is a source of perpetual alarm, in consequence of eruptions. The harbour of Catania, though one of the largest in the island, is not much frequented. 35 miles N. Syracuse. Long. 15. 6. E. Lat. 37. 30. N.

CATANZARO, a town of Naples, the capital of Calabria Ultra, laid in ruins by an earthquake in 1783.

CATARAUGUS, a county of the United States, in the south-west part of New York, bounded N. by Niagara and Genesee counties, E. by Alleghany county, S. by Pennsylvania, and W. by Chataqua. Pop. 451.

CATAS ALTAS, a village of Brazil, in Rio Grande, 200 miles N. E. Rio Janeiro. Population 2000.

CATAWESKE, a post township of the United States, in Northumberland county, Pennsylvania, on the east branch of the Susquehanna, 20 miles N. E. Sunbury. Pop. 1934.

CATEAU CAMBRESIS, a fortified town of French Flanders, on the Selle. Pop. 4000.

CATHARINENBERG, or BUCHHOLZ, a mining town of Saxony, with 1400 inhabitants.

CATHARINENSTADT, the principal of the German colonies on the Wolga.

CATHARINES, a post township of the United States, in Tioga county, New York, 18 miles W. Spencer. Population 836.

CATHEN, a seaport town of Arabia, Long. 48. 10. E. Lat. 29. 13. N.

CATHERINE, St, an island in the Atlantic, near the coast of Georgia.

CATHERINE'S, St, a small island in the South Atlantic ocean, near the coast of Brazil, 2 leagues broad and 3 long.

CATHERINE'S, St, the principal town of the above island, on its eastern shore. It consists of several streets. Pop. 5000 to 6000.

CATO, a post township of the United States, in Cayuga county, New York, on Seneca river, 24 miles N. Auburn. Population 1076.

CATON, a township of England, county of Lancaster. Population 1107.

CATRICK, a village of Scotland, county of Ayr, 34 miles N. W. Ayr.

CATSKILL, a post township of the United States, and capital of Greene county, New York, on the Hudson, 53 miles below Albany, 5 below Hudson. Population 4246. Catskill village is on Catskill creek, and contains about 200 houses, the county buildings, two churches, an academy, and a bank.

CATTARO, a fortified town of the Austrian empire, at the bottom of the gulf of Cattaro, on the east side of the Adriatic. Pop. 1400.

CATTGAT, a large gulf of the German ocean, between the E. coast of Jutland, the islands of Funen and Zealand, the W. coast of Sweden, and the Scaer-rock. It is 120 miles long and between 63 and 70 broad.

CATTERAL, a hamlet of England, county of Lancaster. Population 704.

CASTRON, a township of England, North Riding of Yorkshire. Population 561.

CATTWYCK, the name of two large villages of the Netherlands. Population 5470—1266.

CAVALIA, a beautiful village of Piedmont, near Savile, with 3600 inhabitants.

CAVAILLON, a town of France, in Provence, on the Durance. Population 7000.

CAVALA, a seaport of European Turkey, in Rumania. Population 3000.

CAVALIER MAGGIORE, a village of Piedmont, 19 miles S. Turin. Population 5500.

CAVAN, an inland county of Ireland, bounded N. by Fermanagh, E. by Monaghan, S. by the counties of Longford, Meath, and Westmeath, and W. by Leitrim. It is 40 miles in length, and 26 in breadth; 120 in circuit, and contains a superficial area of 470 miles. It consists entirely of hill and dale, and is mountainous towards the south-west. About five-sixths of the whole are arable, pasture, and meadow lands, and about one-twelfth is mountainous, bog, and waste. The principal rivers are the Erne, the Croghan, Annalee, and other streams; and there are several lakes, as Lough Erne, Lough Oughter, Lough Ramor, and Sheelan. Silver, lead, and iron, are found in this county. Manganese is obtained; also pure sulphur, coal, and very small quantities of limestone. The principal manufacture of the county is of yarn and linen. This county is divided into 33 parishes, having 28 parish churches; and it contains 9 market towns; Cavan, Cootehill, Killeshandra, Ballyconnel, Belturbet, King's Court, Shercock, Bailieborough, and Ballyhayes, besides three towns which have no market. Population 90,000.

CAVAN, the principal town of the above county, situated on a small river of the same name. It is of a very moderate size, but has a court-house, and a jail, a strong structure, though small; a county infirmary, and barracks where a military force is always stationed. 41 miles E. S. E. Sligo.

CAVARERE, a town of the Venetian territory, on the Adige. Population 3000.

CAUBE, a small town of Germany, on the Rhine, 20 miles S. Coblenz.

CAUCA, a decayed town of Spain, in Old Castile, 18 miles N. Segovia.

CAUCA, a large and copious river of South America, which has its rise in the province of Popayan, between the great western and middle ridges of the Andes; and after a course of about 600 miles, falls into the Rio Magdalena, in Lat. 4. 30. S.

CAUCASUS, a vast chain of mountains in Asia, stretching to the south of the fortress of Abo, at the mouth of the river Kuban, which falls into the Black sea; and, after running south, traverses Mingrelia in an eastern direction, to the town of Georgievsk, and the source of the river Kuma. Here taking a southern course, the Caucasian chain enters Georgia, near the source of the river Kur, and afterwards turning east, runs along the western shore of the Caspian sea, and through the Persian provinces Daghestan and Shirvan. Thence it seems to penetrate Ghilan, and perhaps with little interruption is connected with an immense range, known by the name of Hindoo Coosh.

CAUCASUS, GOVERNMENT-OF, a province of Russia, embracing, as its name expresses, a large portion of Mount Caucasus; bounded N. by the governments of Saratov, Ekaterinoslav, and the habitations of the Don Cossacs; E. by the Caspian sea, government of Goufa, and the river Ural; S. by the Persian and Turkish dominions, and the territories of independent tribes; and W. by the sea of Azoph and province of Taurida.

CAUNESSE, two towns of France, in Normandy, on the Seine. Pop. 3600—2300.

CAUDETE, a town of Spain, province of Valencia. Population 6000.

CAVENDISH, a post township of the United States, in Windsor county, Vermont, 10 miles S. W. Windsor. Population 1295.

CAVERY, a celebrated river of the south of India, which, after a winding course of nearly 400 miles, falls into the sea through various mouths, in the district of Tanjore.

CAVERYPANA, a large town of Hindostan. Long. 70. 32. E. Lat. 12. 59. N.

CAVITY, a town of the island of Luron, 9 miles S. W. Manilla. Population 4000.

CAULABACH, a town of Afghanistan, on the Indus. Long. 70. 46. E. Lat. 32. 11. N.

CAUMONT, a town of France, in Normandy, with 2150 inhabitants. 20 miles S. W. Caen.—Another 8 miles E. by S. Avignon.

CAUNE, J.A., a town of France, in Langue-doc. Population 2500.

CAVON, a town of Piedmont, 8 miles S. by E. Pignerol. Population 7000.

CAUSSAUD, a town of France, 35 miles N. Toulouse. Population 4150.

CAUTEN, a large river of Chili, which falls into the Pacific ocean, Lat. 39. 20. S.

CAUVERY, or CAVERY, a river of Hindostan, province of Tanjore, which passing through the Mysore and the Carnatic, below the Ghauts, falls into the sea, after a course of nearly 400 miles.

CAWNPUR, a town of Hindostan, province of Allahabad, on the Ganges. Long. 80. 21. E. Lat. 26. 30. N.

CAWOOD, a town and parish of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1127.

CAWTHORNE, a township, and parish of England, in Yorkshire. Population 1518.

CAXAMARCA, the capital of a province of the same name, in Peru. The houses are of clay, and the streets are wide and straight. The parish church, which was erected in 1602, is of finely worked stone. Population 3000. Lat. 6. 54. S.

CAXAMARQUILLA, called also PATAY or RITA, the capital of a province of the same name, in Peru. Population 5000. Lat. 7. 35. S.

CAXATAMBO, the capital of a province of the same name, in Peru. Lat. 10. 27. S.

CAXTON, a town and parish of England, county of Cambridge. Population 400.

CAYMAN ISLANDS, a cluster of islands lying off the N. E. coast of Boreas.

CAYENNE, an island of South America, in French Guiana, about 18 miles in length from N. to S. and 10 broad. It was taken by the British in 1808, but was given back to France at the peace of Paris in 1813. Lat. of the north point S. W. N. long. 53. 15. W.

CAYENNE, the capital of the above island, at the mouth of the river Cayenne. It has a large and convenient port, and contains about 200 wooden houses.

CAYENNE, a river of French Guiana, which, after a course of 300 miles, falls into the Atlantic.

CAYO, a town and parish of South Wales, county of Caermarthen. Population 1880.

CAYOR, a kingdom of Western Africa, situated on the coast of the Atlantic, between the mouths of the Senegal and Gambia. It is about 150 miles long by 120 broad, and contains 188,000 inhabitants.

CAYSTER, a river of Asiatic Turkey, in Nalolia, which flows into the sea, near Ephesus.

CAYUGA, or CAYAHOGA, a river of North America, which falls into Lake Erie.

CAYUGA, a county of the United States, in New York, E. of Cayuga lake, bounded N. by Lake Ontario and Oswego county; E. by Oswego, Onondaga, and Cortland counties; S. by Tompkins county, and W. by Cayuga lake, and Seneca and Ontario counties. Pop. 29,840. Chief town Auburn.

CAYUGA, a post village of the United States, in Augulus, Cayuga county, New York. The village of East Cayuga stands on the east side of Cayuga lake. A bridge crosses the lake at this place, and a steamboat plies the lake to Ithaca.

CAYUGA CREEK, a small stream of the United States, in Niagara county, New York, the most northern ford of Buffalo creek.

CAYUGA LAKE, a lake of the United States, between Cayuga and Seneca counties, New York, 40 miles long, and from 1 to 4 broad. Its outlet is Seneca river.

CAYUTA, a township of the United States, in Tioga county, New York, 10 miles N. Spencer.

CAZANBOY, a town of France, department of the Gers, with 2300 inhabitants.

CAZENOVIA, a post township of the United States, and capital of Madison county, New York, 40 miles W. Utica, and 130 W. Albany. Population 3151. It is a pleasant and flourishing town, and contains a courthouse, a jail, a church, and a bank.

CAZIERE, a town of France, on the Garonne, 33 miles S. W. Toulouse. Pop. 2020.

CAZORIA, a town of Spain, province of Andalusia, on the Guadalquivir. Pop. 1200.

CAUX, a town of France, department of the Upper Loire, with 1300 inhabitants.

CECIL, a county of the United States, in Maryland, on the eastern shore of the Chesapeake, bounded N. by Pennsylvania, E. by Delaware, S. by Kent county, and W. by the Chesapeake. Population 13,066. Slaves 2467.

Chief town Ellicott. A township of Washington county, Pennsylvania. Pop. 1887.

CECLAVON, a town of Spanish Extramadura, 11 miles from Alcantara. Pop. 3000.

CECUM CREEK, two small rivers of the United States, one of which runs into the Atlantic, the other into Delaware bay; also two in Canada, which run into lakes Michigan and Erie.

CEDAR ISLAND, two small islands, one on the coast of Virginia, the other on that of North Carolina.

CEDAR LAKE, a lake of North America, about 60 miles E. Lake Winnipeg.

CEDARS, a small village in Upper Canada, on the St. Lawrence.

CEFALU, a town of Sicily, in the Val Demona. Population 5400.

CELANO, a small town of Naples, in Abruzzo Ultra, near Lake Celano.

CELBRIDGE, a town of Ireland, in the county of Kildare, 10 miles from Dublin.

CELEBES, a large island in the East Indian sea, of a very irregular figure. It consists of three large peninsulas, between which immense bays are formed, affording secure harbours for shipping. Gold is found in Celebes; also iron, copper, and tin. Vegetables grow in vast profusion and variety. The island is well stocked with poultry, and numbers of beautiful birds. There are wild hogs in the woods, goats, large sheep, cows, buffaloes, horses, monkeys, and other quadrupeds. The population of this island has been computed at three millions, though on very uncertain data. The Portuguese established themselves in Celebes in the year 1512, and were expelled by the Dutch in 1667. They were dispersed during the late wars by the British; but by the treaty of Paris, the Dutch settlements have been recently restored. Long. 116. 40. to 121. 40. E. Lat. 3. 0. N. to 5. 10. S.

CELINDRO, a small seaport town and bay of Asia Minor, on the coast of Caramania.

CELLYS, a town of the Netherlands, 11 miles N. E. Tournay. Population 2000. The name also of several other small towns, chiefly in France.

CEZONICO, a small town of Portugal, province of Beira. Population 1100.

CEZEDA, a town of the Venetian territory, 10 miles S. Belluno.

CEZIS MOUNT, a mountain of the Alps, in Savoy, above 9000 feet high.

CEZTALL, a populous village of Piedmont, between Cobi and Fossano.

CEZTO, a town of the States of the Church, 15 miles N. N. W. Bologna.

CEZUANI, a small town of Sicily, in the Val Demona, 39 miles W. N. W. Catania.

CEZTER, a county of the United States, in Pennsylvania, bounded N. by Lycoming county, E. by Northumberland county, S. by Mifflin and Huntington counties, and W. by Clearfield county. Pop. 6000. Chief town Bellefonte. A township in Northumberland county, Pennsylvania. Pop. 1500.

CENTREVILLE, a port township of the United States, and capital of Queen Anne county, Maryland, at the head of Carica creek, which flows into Chester river. The public buildings are a court-house and jail, a house of public worship for Methodists, and an academy. 13 miles S. Chestertown.

CEPHALONIA, the first in size, though the second in rank, of the islands forming the Ionian republic, is situated in the Mediterranean, opposite the entrance of the gulf of Lepanto, between Santa Maura, Zante, and the coasts of Morea and Livadia. Its length is about 40 miles, its breadth from 10 to 20, and its circumference nearly 150. The principal capes are Fiscardo in the north, and Capra in the south. It contains three small towns, 130 villages, and 60,000 inhabitants, who are mostly Greeks. In 1809 it was taken by the British, under whose protection it still continues. It sends eight deputies to the legislative assembly. Long. 20. 40. to 21. 18. E. Lat. 38. to 39. 28. N.

CEPHALONIA, a town on the foregoing island. Long. 20. 50. E. Lat. 38. 20. N.

CERAM, an island in the Eastern seas, between 100 and 180 miles in length, and about 40 in breadth. Long. 129. to 131. E. Lat. 3. 48. to 3. 38. S.

CERCADO, a province of Peru, with its capital of the same name.

CERE, St., a town of France, department of the Lot. Population 3798.

CERENCE, a town of France, department of La Manche, with 2200 inhabitants.

CERET, a town of France, in Roussillon, 15 miles S. W. Perpignan.

CERIGNOLA, a town of Naples, 20 miles S. E. Manfredonia. Population 12,000.

CERIGO, one of the seven islands in the Mediterranean, which compose the Ionian republic, situated at the entrance of the Archipelago, in the gulf of Maratonisi or Kolokythis, and to the south of the Morea, from which it is separated by a narrow strait. It is 17 miles long, 10 broad, and about 45 in circumference. The French were expelled from these islands by the English in 1809. Long. 23. 51. 38. E. Lat. 36. 6. N.

CERIBAO (the ancient Cythera), the chief town of the above island. It has a convenient harbour. Population 1200. Long. 22. 57. E. Lat. 38. 10. N.

CERIVO, a seaport on the north coast of Cyprus. Long. 35. 35. E. Lat. 35. 20. N.

CERISY, two towns of France, in Normandy. Population 2600—2150.

CERNE, a town of England, in Dorsetshire, on the Cerne. Population 1090.

CERVEN, St., a town of France, department of the Cantal. Population 4300.

CERZANO (the ancient Ceridam), a pleasant town of Milan, on Lake Como.

CESSE, a town of France, department of the Seine and Oise, with 270 houses.

CESTANO, a town of Naples, in the Terra di Lavoro. Population 2500.

CESTRA, a town of Spain, in Catalonia.

20 miles N. Tarragona. Population 800.—The name of various small towns in Spain.

CAVIA, a small town of Italy, 18 miles S. E. Ravenna.

CEVEX, MONT, a mountain of Switzerland. Height 12,545 feet.

CERVINI ISLES, a small group of islands in the Adriatic, belonging to Austria.

CESENA, a small town of Italy, 16 miles S. Ravenna.

CESENATICO, a seaport of Italy, 16 miles S. E. Ravenna.

CETON, a town of France, in the department of the Orne. Population 2670.

CETTE, or SETTE, a seaport of France, in Languedoc. It has a commodious harbour. Here is an extensive sugar refinery, a soap work, and a tobacco manufactory; and a salt lake in the neighbourhood. Population 8000. 18 miles S. W. Montpellier.

CEVA, an ancient town of Piedmont, district of Mondovi, on the Tanaro. Population about 5500. 40 miles W. Genoa.

CEUTA, a fortified seaport of Morocco, immediately opposite to Gibraltar. It is the only one which Spain still retains of her numerous possessions in Morocco. It has a good harbour for small vessels. Long. 6. 11. W. Lat. 35. 38. N.

CEYLON, a large island in the Indian sea, separated from the coast of Coromandel by a channel called the Straits of Manar. Its general outline resembles the shape of a pear; its extreme length is about 300 miles, and its breadth 140. The climate is exceedingly diversified according to situation; in some parts it is hot and oppressive, and liable to frightful storms of thunder and lightning; in others it is more temperate and salubrious. But the woody parts prove particularly destructive to strangers. Ceylon is a mountainous island, and is amply watered by rivers and lakes. Great variety of minerals may be found here, as tin, lead, iron in abundance, and formerly quicksilver; also precious stones in great variety. Gold is said to exist in the interior; but the working of the mines was prohibited by the native government. The most extensive pearl fishery in the globe is carried on in the straits of Manar. In the year 1804, the rent amounted to L. 120,000 for the right of fishing 80 days, with 150 boats. An infinite diversity of vegetables, and the finest fruits, grow on the island; but the most valuable of all the Ceylonese plants is the cinnamon tree, of which the natives estimate ten species, five of which only are esteemed fit for use. Ceylon contains a considerable proportion of the animals indigenous to the east. The great snake or boa constrictor is said to attain the length of 60 feet, and is free of poison; but there are some of the most venomous species, as the cobra di capella, and a number of others which are quite innocent. Alligators, and all the lizard tribe, are numerous; fish are various and abundant; and the birds form a large class of themselves. The elephants of Ceylon are highly celebrated.

d for strength and sagacity. Buffaloes, wild ogs, deer, and hares, are numerous. The hunts, or hunting slogs, two species of wild cats, the bear, and jackal, inhabit the forests.
Flocks of various species swarm all over the country, and, together with the apes found here, sometimes do a great deal of mischief. The settlements of the Dutch, who were the only Europeans in the island, were captured by the British in 1796, and the island ceded to them by the peace of Amiens in 1801. It is now constituted into one of the British governments of India. From the time that this island became known to Europeans, it was divided into petty principalities, until the whole was subdued and united into one monarchy by the king of Candy.
He was taken prisoner, and deposed, in the year 1814, and his territories annexed to the British dominions. Population 1,500,000.
Long. 79. 32. E. Lat. 6. 10. N.

CHABRUIL, a town of France, department of the Drome. Population 4100.

CHABLIS, a town of France, in Champagne.
Population 2300.

CHACEWATER, a town of England, county of Cornwall, near valuable copper mines.

CHACO, an extensive country, mostly included within the boundaries of Peru, and frequently called Gran Chaco. It is bounded E. by the river Paraguay, and extends as far S. as the viceroyalty of Buenos Ayres.
Towards the N. its breadth is 450 miles from
E. to W., and 750 miles long from N. to S.

CHADDERASH, a township of England, county of Lancaster. Population 5124.

CHAFADIA, an outlet on the W. bank of the Mississippi, 240 miles above New Orleans.

CHAGAING, a city of the Birman empire, situated on the north bank of the Irrawaddy river, opposite the ancient capital of Ava. It stands very high, being built on the slope of several hills, the tops of which are covered with innumerable temples, most of which are ornamented with spires and gilded roofs, forming one of the handsomest landscapes in the world. The houses are built of timber, with tiled roofs. Long. 96. E. Lat. 21. 54. N.

CHAGNY, a town of France, department of the Saone and Loire. Population 2300.

CHAGRE, a large and navigable river of Panama, which falls into the ocean, 30 miles
W. S. W. Portobello, in Lat. 9. 18. N. Long.
80. 18. W.

CHABAIGNES, a town of France, department of the Sarthe, with 220 houses.

CHAILLAIN, a town of France, province of Maine. Population 2000.

CHAILLOT, a neat village of France, in the department of the Seine, with 220 houses.

CHALARS, a town of France, department of the Aude. Population 2000.

CHALCO, a small town of Mexico, 18 miles
S. E. Mexico.

CHAMPAGNE BAY, a large bay of the Atlantic ocean, in the gulf of St Lawrence.

CHAMPAIGN, a village and parish of England, in Bedfordshire. Population 710.

CHARENT, a town of France, department of the Maine and Loire, with 630 houses.

CHARENTAIS, a town of France, in Anjou, on the Loire. Population 5000.

CHARENTAIS SUR MARNE, a large town of France, in Champagne, on the Marne, which divides it into three parts, and is crossed by several bridges, one of which, erected in 1787, is admired for its boldness and elegance.
Here is a handsome town-house, a Gothic cathedral, built in the 13th century, 11 parish churches, three secularised abbays, several convents, and a fine public walk. Population about 11,000. 25 miles S. E. Rheims.

CHARENTAIS SUR SAONE, a town of France, in Burgundy, on the Saone. It has a wide circuit, and well built streets and houses.
Population 9000. 170 miles N. Lyons.

CHALUS, a town of France, in the Limou-sin, 17 miles S. W. Limoges. Pop. 1300.

CHAM, a town of Bavaria, 24 miles N. E.
Ratisbon. Population 1800.

CHAMAS, ST., a town of France, department of the Mouths of the Rhone. Population 2500.

CHAMBAH, the capital of a district of the same name, in Hindostan, 110 miles N. E.
Lahore. Long. 74. 33. E. Lat. 32. 28. N.

CHAMBEREL, the capital of the duchy of Savoy, in a fruitful valley at the conflux of the rivers L'Alisse and D'Albana. It is protected by a large castle and several old fortifications. Population 11,703. 32 miles N.
by E. Grenoble.

CHAMBERBURG, a post township of the United States, and capital of Franklin county, Pennsylvania, on Conococheague creek.
The situation is healthy, and the surrounding country rich and highly cultivated. It contains a court-house and jail, a bank, an academy, and seven houses of public worship.
The town is built principally on two large streets, intersecting each other at right angles, and having a public square in the centre. On the creek there are several mills and manufacturing establishments. Population in 1810, 2304. 46 miles S. W. Harrisburg, 143 W. Philadelphia, 30 S. W. Carlisle, 76 N. W. Baltimore. Long. 77. 32.
W. Lat. 39. 37. N.

CHAMBLEE FORT, a fort in Lower Canada, on the Chamblé.—Near it, on the Rich-lieu, stands the village of Chamblé, containing 90 houses.

CHAMBLEE RIVER. See Richlieu.

CHAMBOIS, a town of France, department of La Creuse. Population 1500.—Another in the department of the Loire. Pop. 1300.

CHAMBOREAU, a village of France, department of the Loire and Cher, 10 miles E. Blois.

CHAMBOURIN, CHAMONIX, or CHAMOIX, a village of Savoy, 42 miles S. E. Geneva. Population 1500.

CHAMPAIGNAC, a town of France, department of the Upper Vienne. Pop. 1440.

CHAMPAGNE, a province of France, in the eastern part of the kingdom, adjacent to Franche Comte and Lorraine. It now forms the whole of the departments of the Ardennes, the Maine, the Upper Marne, and the Aube; and the greater part of those of the Yonne, and the Seine and Marne.—The name also of several small towns in France.

CHAMPAGNY, a town of France, department of the Upper Saone. Population 2000.

CHAMPIGNOLE, a town of France, department of the Jura. Population 1600.

CHAMPAIGN, a county of the United States, in Ohio, on Mad river, a branch of the Miami. Population in 1815, 10,485. Chief town, Urbana.

CHAMPANEE, the capital of a district of Hindostan, of the same name.

CHAMPEIX, UPPER and LOWER, two small towns of France, department of the Puy de Dome.

CHAMPINIÈRES, a town of France, department of the Charente, with 620 houses.

CHAMPION, a post township of the United States, in Jefferson county, New York, on Black river, at the head of the Long falls. Population 1471. 52 miles N. Rome, 161 N. W. Albany.

CHAMPLAIN, a large lake of the United States, forming the boundary between New York and Vermont, about 160 miles long, and varying in breadth from 1 to 18 miles.

CHAMPLAIN, a post township and port of entry of the United States, in Clinton county, New York, on Lake Champlain. It is watered by the Chazy, and contains many mills. Pop. 1210. 15 miles N. Plattsburg.

CHAMPLITTE, a town of France, department of the Upper Saone. Population 2700.

CHAMPTOCEAUX, a town of France, department of the Maine and Loire. Pop. 1200.

CHAMUSCA, a town of Portuguese Estremadura, on the Tagus. Popul. on 1800.

CHANAC, a town of France, department of the Lozere. Population 1900.

CHANCA, a river of Portugal, which falls into the Guadiana.

CHANCAY, the capital of a province of the same name, in Peru, 45 miles N. W. Lima.

CHANDANEE, the capital of a district of the same name in Hindostan. Long. 74. 41. E. Lat. 33. 24. N.

CHANDERCOONA, a town of Hindostan, in Bengal, with silk and cotton manufactures.

CHANDERUNEE, a town of Hindostan. Long. 91. 20. E. Lat. 22. 55. N.

CHANDERNAGORE, the principal settlement of the French in Bengal. It is situated in a healthy position on the western bank of the Hoogly or Bhaguratty river; 21 miles above Calcutta, in Lat. 23. 49. N. Long. 88. 26. E. It is a very neat town, about three quarters of a mile long. The houses are two stories high, with colonades in front, and green Venetian windows: they are built of brick and mortar, and are entered with fine white chunam both inside and out, and have flat roofs, upon which the proprietors sit, and frequently receive company in an evening.

CHANDERDAR, a town and district of Hindostan, once a Hindoo kingdom. Long.

79. 26. E. Lat. 13. 22. N.—Also a town in the Mysore, 108 miles N. N. W. Seringapatam.

CHANDRA, a town of Hindostan, 80 miles N. W. Aurangabad. Long. 74. 22. E. Lat. 20. 8. N.

CHANDOU, a town of Persia, in the province of Azerbijan, 160 miles N. E. Tabriz.

CHANDRA-GRFTT, a town and fort of Hindostan, with 100 houses. Long. 75. B. E. Lat. 14. 23. N.

CHANDREE, the name of a district and town of Hindostan, in the province of Malwa. The town is the residence of a rajah, and is on the Betwah, in Long. 76. 43. E. Lat. 24. 42. N. Houses 14,000.

CHANDUI, a seaport of South America, in Guayaquil. Long. 80. 35. W. Lat. 2. 23. S.

CHANG-TONG, a province of China. Population 24,000,000. Lat. 34. 30. to 38. N.

CHAN-SI, a province of China.

CHANTEILLE LE CHATEAU, a town of France, department of the Allier. Pop. 1350.

CHANTILLY, a town of France, department of the Oise. Population 2930.

CHANCENAY, a town of France, department of La Vendee. Population 1600.

CHAO-THEOU-FOU, a city of China, province of Canton. Families 10,000.

CHAOUVECE, a town of France, department of the Aube. Population 1700.

CHAPEL-THORPE, a town and parish of England, county of Derby. It has a cotton manufacture on a small scale. Pop. 3234.

CHAPEL-HILL, a post township of the United States, in Orange county, North Carolina, on New Hope creek, which runs into the Haw, a branch of Cape Fear river, 27 miles W. Raleigh. The situation is very healthy, in a high broken country. It contains about 30 houses, besides the public buildings. Chapel Hill is the seat of the university of North Carolina, which was incorporated in 1703, and has been liberally patronised by the state. The donations of the state consist of all escheated property, all real property which accrued to the state by confiscation during the revolutionary war, and all debts due to the state prior to December 31st 1800. The trustees hold likewise, by the donation of individuals, 40,000 or 50,000 acres of the best arable land in Tennessee. This valuable land is also held within the state of North Carolina. The income of the stock in different banks is sufficient to pay the salaries of the president and faculty. The college buildings consist of a chapel and two spacious edifices for the accommodation of students, all of brick, and dwelling houses for the president and faculty. The officers of the college in 1819, were a president, a professor, viz. 1 of mathematics, 1 of chemistry, 1 of languages, and 1 of rhetoric, and 2 tutors. Number of students 114. Attached to the college is an academy, in which the preparatory studies are pursued.

CHERRILSON, a large and populous village of Ireland, on the Liffey; 3 miles W. Dublin.

CHARENTAIS, a town of France, department of the Maine and Loire. Population 2400.—Chapelle is the name of a great number of small towns in France.

CHARENTAIS, a town of France, department of Lower Charente. Population 2000.

CHAZ, a river of England, in Dorsetshire, which flows into the sea at Charmouth.

CHACAS, an extensive province, formerly of Peru, now in the viceroyalty of Buenos Ayres. Population 100,000.

CHARD, a parish and town of England, county of Somerset. Population 3100.

CHARENTE, a large river of France, which falls into the sea, near Rochefort.

CHARENTE, L.A., a department of France, bordered by the departments of the Lower Charente, the Deux Sevres, the Vienne, the Upper Vienne, and the Dordogne. It is above 56 miles in length, and on an average 30 in breadth, containing 327,000 inhabitants.

CHARENTE, THE LOWER, or LA CHARENTE INFÉRIEURE, a department of France, which is inclosed by the Atlantic ocean and the departments of the Gironde, the Dordogne, the Charente, the Deux Sevres, and La Vendée. It is above 80 miles in length, and varies from 20 to 40 in breadth; the number of square miles is 2800. Population 393,000.

CHARING, a town and parish of England, county of Kent. Population 1103.

CHARIT, L.A., a town of France, department of the Nievre, on the Loire. Pop. 4000.

CHARKOV, or KHARKOV, a town of European Russia, the capital of the government of the same name, situated on the small rivers Charkov and Lapan, and containing ten churches, two convents, 1500 houses (mostly of wood), and 11,000 inhabitants. Four great yearly markets are held here. 640 miles S. S. E. St Petersburg. Long. 30. 20. 32. E. Lat. 49. 59. 43. N.

CHARLBURY, a town and parish of England, in Oxfordshire. Population 2877.

CHARLEMONT, a town of Ireland, county of Armagh, on the Blackwater, 8 miles N. Armagh.

CHARLEMONT, a strong town of French Hainault, near the Ardennes. Pop. 4100. 24 miles S. W. Namur.

CHARLROUX, a town and fortress of the Netherlands, in the county of Namur, on the Sambre. Population about 4500. Here are a few manufactures of nails and other hardware; glass, and woollen stuffs; and in the neighbourhood are extensive pits of turf and coal. 20 miles N. E. Maastricht.

CHARLES, a county of the United States, on the west shore of Maryland, between Potomac and Patuxent rivers. Population 20,265. Slaves 12,435. Chief town, Port Tobacco.—2d. A cape of Virginia, on the north side of Chesapeake bay. Lat. 37. 15. N.

CHARLES CITY, a county of the United States, in Virginia, between James River and the Chickahominy. The court-house, where is a post-office, is 35 miles S. E. Richmond. Population 5185. Slaves 5023.

CHARLES RIVER, a river of the United States, in Massachusetts, which falls into Mystic river, in the harbour of Boston.

CHARLES, ST., one of the six districts or counties into which Louisiana has been divided by the American government. Population in 1814, 3605.—2d. The chief town of the above district, on the left bank of the Missouri, 24 miles from its confluence with the Mississippi. Population 450.

CHARLESTON, a city and seaport of the United States, in Charleston district, South Carolina. It is built on the tongue of land between the rivers Ashley and Cooper, which unite immediately below the city, and forms a spacious and convenient harbour, communicating with the ocean at Sullivan's island, 7 miles S. E. of the city. The harbour has a bar at its mouth, through which are two channels for sea vessels; the deepest has 18 feet of water at low tide. The harbour is defended by fort Moultrie, on Sullivan's island, and forts Pinkney and Johnson. Among the public buildings are a state-house, city-hall, a custom-house, theatre, orphan-house, hospital, almshouse, 6 banks, and 18 houses of public worship; viz. 3 Episcopalian, 3 Presbyterian, 2 Methodist, 2 Independent or Congregational, 1 Lutheran, 1 Baptist, 1 French Protestant, 1 Hindu, 1 Roman Catholic, a Jews' synagogue, and an Orphan-house church. The orphan asylum has grown up from small beginnings, to be the most respectable establishment of the kind on the continent. A large and handsome building has been erected, sufficiently spacious to accommodate 150 children. Among the other charitable societies, are 2 for the relief of the widows and orphans of clergymen; one of which is formed by members of the Episcopal church, and the other by those of the Independent church; each of them has large funds. The city is regularly laid out in parallel streets, from 35 to 70 feet in width, running from river to river, and intersected by others at right angles. The new houses are of brick, and many of them are elegant. The commerce of Charleston is extensive and flourishing. It imports the foreign goods consumed in South Carolina, a considerable part of North Carolina, and a part of Georgia. It is connected by a canal 22 miles long, with Santee river. In 1816 it was the fifth town in the United States, in amount of shipping, the number of tons being 34,473. The city is regarded as more healthy than any part of the low country in the southern states. Population in 1790, 10,359; in 1800, 10,712; in 1810, 24,711, of whom 11,668 were whites, and 13,043 blacks. 113 miles N. E. Savannah, and 544 S. W. Washington. Long. 79. 54. W. Lat. 32. 47. N.

CHARLESTOWN, a village and township of the United States, in Cheshire county, New Hampshire. Population of the township 1501.

—2d. A post township in Middlesex county, Massachusetts, one mile from Boston.

The principal part of the town is beautifully situated on a peninsula, formed by Mystic and Charles rivers, which unite immediately below in Boston harbour. A bridge across Charles river connects the town with Boston, and two others across Mystic river connect it with Malden and with Chelsea. There is also a bridge across a bay of Charles river, on the west side of the town, connecting it with Cambridge. The public buildings are, the state prison, the Massachusetts Insane hospital, an alms-house, town-house, and five houses for public worship; two for Congregationalists, one for Baptists, one for Universalists, and one for Methodists. A navy-yard of the United States occupies the south-east part of the town: Population 4959.—3d, Of Washington county, Rhode Island. Population 1174.—4th, Of Chester county, Pennsylvania, on the Schuylkill. Population 1580.—The name also of several other townships, most of them insignificant.

CHARLESTOWN, the principal town of the island of Nevis in the West Indies. It is situated on the west coast, and has many good houses and shops, well provided with every necessary. Long. 62. 40. W. Lat. 17. 8. N.

CHARLESTOWN, a town of Barbadoes, with a good port defended by two castles.

CHARLESTOWN, a village of Scotland, in Fifeshire, on the north shore of the Frith of Forth, 3 miles S. Dunfermline.

CHARLESTOWN OF AROVNE, a village of Scotland, 29 miles W. Aberdeen.

CHARLEVILLE, a neat town of France, on the Maase, department of the Ardennes. Pop. 7700. Here is a great manufactory of arms.

CHARLEVILLE, a town of Ireland, county of Cork, 22 miles S. Limerick.

CHARLIEU, a town of France, department of the Loire. Population 2900.

CHARLOIS, a large village of the Netherlands, with 1900 inhabitants.

CHARLOTTE, a county of the United States, in New Brunswick, bounded S. by the bay of Fundy, and W. by the St Croix and Passamaquoddy bay, which separate it from Maine. Chief town, St Andrew's.—2d, A post township in Chittenden county, Vermont, on Lake Champlain, 12 miles S. Burlington. Population 1679.—3d, A post village in Gates, Genesee county, New York, at the mouth of the Genesee.—4th, A county in Virginia, on the head waters of the Staunton river, south-west of Richmond. Pop. 13,161. Slaves 7597. Chief town, Marysville.

CHARLOTTE-HALL, a post township of the United States, in St Mary's county, Maryland, 55 miles S. S. E. Washington.

CHARLOTTEVILLYE, a town of Prussia, on the Spree, with 3350 inhabitants.

CHARLOTTE'S TOWN, a town of the island of Dominica, on the west coast.

CHARLOTTE'S TOWN, a town of the island of St John, on the gulf of St Lawrence.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, a post township of the United States, capital of Albemarle county, Virginia, 60 miles W. N. W. Richmond.

CHARLTON, a parish of England, county of Wilts. Population 503.

CHARLTON, a post township of the United States, in Saratoga county, New York, 8 miles W. Ballston, 26 N. W. Albany. Population 1946.—2d, In Worcester county, Massachusetts, 15 miles S. W. Worcester, 60 S. S. W. Boston. Population 2180.

CHARMES, a town of France, 15 miles S. Nancy. Population 2700.

CHARMOUTH, a village and parish of England, county of Dorset. Population 607.

CHARNET, a river of England, which joins the Dove, 5 miles N. Uttoxeter.

CHARNOCK HEATH, a township of England, county of Lancaster. Population 823.

CHARNOCK RICHARD, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 794.

CHAROLLES, a town of France, in Burgundy. Population 2400.

CHARTRE, LA, a town of France, department of the Sarthe, on the Loire. Pop. 1600.

CHARTRES, an ancient and considerable town of France, department of the Eure and Loire, on the Eure, which divides it into two parts, and across which there is a bridge planned by the celebrated Vauban. Most of the streets are narrow and crowded, but some of the buildings, comparatively of modern erection, are uncommonly neat. The cathedral is accounted one of the finest edifices of the kind in France. Population 13,000. 38 miles N. W. Orleans.

CHASSENEUIL, a town of France, department of the Charente. Population 1850.

CHATA-HATCHI, a large river of West Florida, which falls into the gulf of Mexico.

CHATAHOOCHEE, a river of North America, which unites with the Flint, in Lat. 31. N. to form the Appalachicola.

CHATAUQUE, a county of the United States, in New York, bounded N. W. by Lake Erie, E. by Cataraugus county, S. by Pennsylvania, and W. by Ohio. Population 2581. Chief town Chatauque.

CHATEAUBRIAND, a town of France, department of the Lower Loire. Pop. 3000.

CHATEAU-CAMBRESIS, a fortified town of French Flanders, on the Sella. Pop. 4000. 15 miles S. E. Cambray.

CHATEAU-CHALON, a town of France, department of the Jura. Population 3350.

CHATEAU-CHIVON, a town of France, 30 miles E. Nievres. Population 2600.

CHATEAU-DATHIN, a strong castle of Piedmont, 30 miles S. S. W. Turin.

CHATEAUDUN, an ancient town of France, near the Loire. This place was entirely burnt down in 1723; but was speedily rebuilt. Population 2000. 27 miles N. W. Orleans.

CHATEAU-GIRON, a town of France, department of the Ille and Vilaine. Pop. 1500.

CHATEAU-GORTIZA, a well built town of France, in Angou. There are here some manufactures of linen and woollen, and a considerable traffic is carried on in wax. Population 2600.

CHATEAUGAY, a river of North America, which rises in the state of New York, and falls into the St. Lawrence, at Lake St. Louis.

CHATEAU LACHON, a town of France, department of the Seine and Marne. Pop. 3000.

CHATEAU-LIN, a town of France, department of Finistère. Population 2500.

CHATEAU DU LOIRE, a town of France, 135 miles S. W. Paris. Population 2650.

CHATEAU MESTLAY, a town of France, 31 miles S. Bourges. Population 2240.

CHATEAU NEUF, a town of France, on the Charente, with 2200 inhabitants.

CHATEAU NEUF SUR CHER, a town of France, department of the Cher. Pop. 1720.

CHATEAU NEUF DU FAON, a town of France, in Brittany, with 2100 inhabitants.

CHATEAU NEUF SUR LOIRE, a town of France, on the Loire, with 3130 inhabitants. 12 miles E. Orleans.

CHATEAU POINAC, a town of France, department of the Upper Vienne. Pop. 3000.

CHATEAU REWARD, a town of France, in Provence, with 3140 inhabitants.

CHATEAUXOUX, a town of France, on the Indre. Here is a large woollen manufactory. Near this is found some of the best iron in France. Pop. 8420. 150 miles S. W. Paris.

CHATEAU-SALINS, a town of France, with 2110 inhabitants. 13 miles N. E. Nancy.

CHATEAU THIERRY, a town of France, on the Marne, department of the Aisne. Population 4080.

CHATEAU VILLAIN, a town of France, 10 miles S. W. Châumont. Population 2000.

CHATELET, a town of the Netherlands, on the Sambré. Population 2000. 24 miles E. by N. Mons.

CHATELLERAULT, a town of France, in Poitou, on the Vienne, across which there is here one of the finest bridges in France. It is noted for its manufactures of cloth, and for cutlery. Population 8200.

CHATENOY, a town of France, department of the Lower Rhine. Pop. 2900.

CHATHAM, a town of England, county of Kent, adjoining to the city of Rochester, of which it is considered a suburb, situated on the river Medway. Here is a fine naval arsenal, disposed in vast magazines and warehouses, which contain every kind of stores, and where all the operations necessary for the most extensive naval architecture, are carried on. There is a hospital here, founded by Sir John Hawkins in 1592, for decayed seamen and their widows. In the year 1588, a fund was instituted by Queen Elizabeth, called the Chatham Chest, for the relief of the sufferers in the Spanish armada. It was removed to Greenwich in 1802. Chatham is defended by the castles of Upnor and Gillingham, the former built by Queen Elizabeth, nearly opposite to the dock; on the west side of the river; the latter is a strong fortress, by which the river is completely surrounded. The church contains some ancient marble monuments; and there is a chapel of ease, supposed to have been part of an hospital for lepers, which is of Norman architecture. The Dock chapel is a neat, elegant, and extremely light building, completed in 1814, for the accommodation of the officers, artificers, and their families. Fort Pitt, a strong fortress, contiguous to the New Road, was erected in 1663, and originally intended for a military hospital. Here are also very extensive fortifications, called the Lines, which are defended by ramparts, palisades, and a broad deep ditch, and, with the exception of Portsmouth, Chatham may now be considered as the most complete and regular fortress in the British islands. There are spacious barracks, namely, the lower, or marine barracks; the upper barracks; and the artillery barracks, built in 1804. 30 miles E. London.

CHATHAM ISLANDS, two islands in the South Pacific ocean. Long. of the one, 168° 2. E. Lat. 43. 43. S.; Long. of the other, 172. 12. W. Lat. 13. 32. S.

CHATHAM, a central county of the United States, in North Carolina. Population 12,977. Slaves 3635. Chief town Pittsburg.—2d, In the eastern district of Georgia, on the sea coast, between Savannah and Ogeechee rivers. Population 13,540. Slaves 9748. Chief town Savannah.—3d, A township in Northumberland county, New Brunswick, on Miramichi river.—4th, A post township of Barnstable county, Massachusetts, on the south point of the elbow of Cape Cod, 20 miles E. Barnstable. Population 1384. Long. 69. 50. W. Lat. 41. 42. N.—5th, A township of Middlesex county, Connecticut, on the east side of Connecticut river, opposite Middletown. Population 3265. Ship-building has long been an important business in this town, and several vessels of war for the United States' service have been built here.—6th, A post township of Chesterfield district, South Carolina, on the west side of Great Pedee river, 101 miles from Columbia. It is well situated for trade, the river being navigable to this place.—7th, A post township of Columbia county, New York, 18 miles N. E. Hudson, and 31 S. E. Albany. Population 3361.—8th, A post township of Morris county, New Jersey, on the Passaic, 13 miles N. W. Elizabethtown. Population 2019.

CHATELON, a town of Piedmont, 10 miles S. E. Aosta. Population 1800.

CHATELON LEZ DOMRES, a town of France, department of the Ain. Pop. 3100.

—3d, CHATELON, a town of France, on the Indre. Population 2600.—4d, CHATELON, a town of France, department of the Loiret. Population 2000.—5th, CHATELON, a town of France. Pop. 2000.—6th, CHATELON, a town of France, department of the Vosges. Population 2000.—7th, CHATELON, a town of France, in Burgundy, divided by the Saône into two parts. Population 8700.—The name also of various other small towns of France.

CHATEL, a hamlet of England, county of Essex. Population 485.

CHATEL, a town of France, department of Indre. Population 4000.

CHATTERS, a parish and village of England, county of Cambridge. Pop. 3283.

CHATTERBOX, a city of Hindostan, province of Allahabad. Long. 79. 53. E. Lat. 24. 57. N.

CHAUDS AIGUES, a town of France, in Upper Auvergne. Population 2050.

CHAUDIERE, a river of Canada. It has its source in Lake Megantic, and after a northerly course of 102 miles, it falls into the St Lawrence, 6 miles above Quebec.

CHAVES, a town of Portugal, province of Trás los Montes. Population 2000.

CHAUFFAILLES, a town of France, in Burgundy. Population 2200.

CHAUMONT, a town of France, department of the Loire. Population 5000.

CHAUMONT EN BASSIONNY, a town of France, in Champagne, near the Marne. Population 6000. The chief manufactures are of coarse woollens, caps, gloves, and cottons. 147 miles S. E. Paris.—The name of several other small towns in France.

CHAENY, a town of France, department of the Aisne, on the Oise. Population 4400.

CHAVIGNY, a town of France, 12 miles E. Poitiers. Population 1600.

CHAUX DE FONDS, &c., a beautiful village of Switzerland, canton of Neuchâtel. It has a manufacture of clocks and watches. Population 3000.

CHAZELLES, a town of France, 21 miles W. S. W. Lyons. Population 2400.

CHAZY, a post township of the United States, in Clinton county, New York, on Lake Champlain, adjoining Plattsburg, 160 miles N. Albany. Population 1406.

CHAZY RIVER, a river of the United States, in New York, which falls into Lake Champlain. It has a township and village of the same name on its banks.

CHIDDLE, a town of England, county of Stafford, surrounded by coal pits; and near it are extensive manufactories in brass, copper, and tin. Population 3862. 15 miles N. E. Stafford.

CHIDDLE BUTKLEY, and CHIDDLE MOSTLEY, two townships of England, county of Chester. Population 3229—1534.

CHIDHAM, a village and parish of England, county of Surrey. Population 792.

CHIEF RIVER, a river of the United States, in Virginia, which joins the Monongahela river.

CHIEBUCTO, a bay on the coast of Nova Scotia. Long. 63. 31. W. Lat. 44. 40. N.

CHIEBUCTO, or MILFORD HAVEN, a large and deep bay of Nova Scotia. Long. 61. 10. W. Lat. 45. 28. N.

CHILTON, a village and parish of England, county of Somerset. Population 1797.

CHILSTON, a township and parish of England, county of Stafford. Pop. 1626.

CHENUBA, an island in the bay of Bengal, 20 miles long and 10 broad. Long. 85. 40. E. Lat. 18. 50. N.

CHER BRUTONNE, a town of France, department of the Two Seines. Pop. 1500.

CHESBORN, a town and parish of England, county of Devon. Population 1503.

CHERICUT, a town of Tigre, in Abyssinia. Long. 10. 37. 17. E. Lat. 13. 21. 34. N.

CHERIDONI, CAPE, a cape of Naxos. Long. 30. 27. E. Lat. 36. 10. N.

CHELM, a town of Poland, 108 miles E. S. E. Warsaw. Population 3000.

CHELMSFORD, a town of England, the principal town of the county of Essex, at the confluence of the Chelmer and Cann, which are crossed by a fine bridge of one arch. It consists of four main streets. At the west end of the church there is a square tower of flint, with a neat spire. It has a good shire-hall, a neat theatre, and two charity schools; also a spacious jail. Population 4994. 22 miles W. Colchester.

CHELMSFORD, a post township of the United States, in Middlesex county, Massachusetts, on the south side of the Merrimack, 26 miles N. W. Boston. Population 1590. Middlesex canal opens into the Merrimack at this place, through several locks. Here is a glass-house, and extensive quarries of fine granite, much used in building. Many houses in Boston, the University hall at Cambridge, and the elegant Presbyterian church at Savannah, are built of this stone.

CHELSEA, a parish and village of England, in the county of Middlesex, on the Thames, near London, where stands that great national asylum for decayed and maimed soldiers, Chelsea hospital, being the noblest building, and one of the best foundations of the kind in Europe. The building, designed by Sir Christopher Wren, was founded by Charles II. in 1682, carried on by James II., by William and Mary in 1690, and completed at the expense of £. 150,000. The principal building is a large quadrangle, open on the south side, having in the centre a bronze statue of the founder, Charles II., in Roman attire. The east and west wings, each 365 feet in length, are chiefly occupied with wards for the pensioners. Its whole length from east to west is 790 feet. The infirmaries are kept remarkably neat, and are supplied with hot, cold, and vapour baths. There is an inclosure of about 13 acres, besides extensive gardens. The whole extent of the premises is about 60 acres. The number of ordinary pensioners is 330. The allowance of private out-pensioners is fivepence a day, and they are always paid half-a-year's pension in advance. Besides these, there are 400 serjeants, out-pensioners, who receive a shilling a day. Connected with the hospital, is a royal military asylum, founded in 1801, for the education and maintenance of soldiers' children. The physic garden here, belonging to the company of apothecaries, is enriched with a great variety of plants. It was a present to the company in 1721, by Sir Hans Sloane. Population of the parish 20,860. 4½ mile W. London.

CHELSEA, a township of the United States, in Suffolk county, Massachusetts. There is a ferry from Boston across the harbour to this place, and it is connected with Charlestown by a bridge. Pop. 804. 3 miles N. E. Boston.—24. A post township of Orange county, Vermont. Pop. 1337. 37 miles N. Windsor.

CHELTEHAM, a town and parish of England, county of Gloucester, on the Chelt, noted for its medicinal waters. The church is a venerable structure. Here are two charity schools, and an hospital; also a commodious theatre, erected in 1804. Population 13,306. 10 miles E. N. E. Gloucester.

CHELVA, a town of Spain, province of Valencia. Population 8000.

CHEMILLE, a town of France, in Anjou. Population 3200.

CHEMNITZ, or KEMNITZ, an old but well built town of Saxony, on the river of the same name. It contains three churches, an hospital, and an academy. It has manufactures of canvas; and near it are extensive bleachfields. Population 9900. 30 miles W. S. W. Dresden.

CHEMNITZ, a town of Bohemia. It has manufactures of glass and stockings. 30 miles S. E. Dresden.

CHENANGO, a county of the United States, in New York, bounded N. by Madison county, E. by Otsego and Delaware counties, S. by Broome county, and W. by Broome and Cortlandt counties. Population 21,704. Chief town Norwich.

CHENANGO, a post township of the United States, and capital of Broome county, New York, on the east branch of the Susquehanna. It contains the village of Binghamton, in which are the county buildings. Population 1420. 148 miles W. S. W. Albany.

CHENANGO, a river of the United States, in New York, which runs into the Susquehanna from the N., 18 miles E. Owego, after a course of about 90 miles.

CHENDI, a large village of Nubia, on the Nile, with 250 houses.

CHENDOUL, a river of Cabul, which runs into the Kameh, 26 miles E. Peshawur.

CHENE, a neat village of Savoy Proper, not far from Geneva. Population 1800.

CHENE, RIVIERE DU, a river of Lower Canada, which falls into the St. Lawrence.

CHEN, a province of China. Population supposed 30,000,000.

CHEPIDE, a town of Greece, on the east coast of the island of Paros.

CHICO, SAN CHRISTOBAL DE, a small town of Panama, 42 miles N. E. Panama. Long. 78. 52. E. Lat. 9. 8. N.

CHESTOW, a well built market town and seaport of England, county of Monmouth, on the Wye. The castle, built soon after the Norman conquest, is at the N. extremity of the town, on the summit of a high cliff: a considerable part of it yet remains, and evinces its former extent, strength, and magnificence. It is still inhabited in the most entire portion. Chestow exports a considerable quantity of timber, bark, iron, and cyder; wine is brought from Oporto; and planks, hemp, flax, pitch, and tar, from the Baltic. Population 3000. 15 miles N. N. W. Bristol.

CHER, a river of France, which falls into the Loire, a little below Tours.

CHER, a department of France, which comprises the eastern part of Berry, and portions of the Bourbonnais and Nivernois. The number of square miles is about 2900, and the population about 320,000.

CHERAC, a town of France, department of the Lower Charente. Population 1800.

CHERASCO, a fortified town of Piedmont, on the borders of the county of Asti, at the conflux of the Tanaro and Stura. It is well built, and is accounted one of the strongholds of Piedmont. It contains seven churches, within the walls, and three without. Population 11,200. 20 miles S. S. E. Turin.

CHERBOURG, or CHERBURG, an ancient and important seaport of France, in Lower Normandy, situated on the north coast, at the bottom of a large bay, between Capes La Hague and Barfleur, in the department of La Manche. The public establishments here are a navigation school, a theatre, a garden called Tivoli, the public baths, and the promenade de l'Abbaye. Some woollen and cotton stuffs are manufactured, and small coasting vessels are built here. Cherburg has long been considered one of the principal stations of the French marine, and its improvement has, from time to time, occupied the attention of government for no less than a century and a half. Various plans have been adopted for this purpose; but the violence of the winter tempests has thrown down all the great works which have been constructed; and the ruins now only serve the purpose of a breakwater. The last attempt was made under Bonaparte in 1803, to build on what had formerly been thrown down, as a foundation; but it encountered great difficulties, the mass of small stones proving an insecure foundation for the superincumbent blocks, and the winter storms (particularly on the 11th February 1808), overturning vast pieces of the masonry. After this, it was determined to excavate from the solid ground a harbour capable of containing 60 or 60 sail of the line. The spot fixed on was situated on the west shore of the roadstead, a short distance from the town of Cherburg; the work was prosecuted with great vigour, and by 1813 there was dug a basin extending about 1000 feet in length, 770 in width, and occupying a surface of about 18 acres. This basin has a depth of 56 feet, and is capable of containing fully 60 sail of the line. The next project was a wet dock of equal dimensions; it was begun in 1813, and is now approaching towards completion, after having cost, along with the basin (and exclusive of the breakwater), a sum of nearly five millions sterling. 190 miles W. N. W. Paris. Long. 1. 37. 3. W. Lat. 49. 34. 31. N.

CHEERILL, a hamlet and parish of England, in Wiltshire. Population 340.

CHEERIBON, a town on the south coast of the island of Java, capital of a principality of the same name, situated at the bottom of a deep bay, now nearly deserted. 178 miles E. Batavia. Long. 108. 35. E. Lat. 6. 43. S.

CHEROKKE RIVER. See Tennessee River.

CHEROKEES, an Indian tribe in the northern parts of Georgia, formerly of great note, but now on the decline.

CHESEY VALLEY, a post township of the United States, in Otsego county, New York. The three western turnpikes through the state of New York meet in this place. The village is large, and contains a meeting-house and an academy, and many handsome houses. Population 2775. It is 13 miles S. W. Palatine bridge on Mohawk river, 14 N. E. Cooperstown, 53 N. Albany.

CHERSO, a large island, subject to Austria, and situated in that part of the Adriatic which intervenes between the coasts of Dalmatia and Istria. It is separated from the island of Oserso only by a narrow channel, over which there is a bridge. Both together are about sixty miles in length, but of very unequal breadth.

CHERSO, an old seaport, the capital of the foregoing island, on the west coast. It has a good harbour, capable of sheltering a numerous fleet. Population 4000.

CHERSON, KHERSON, or KOSLOV, a town of European Russia, the capital of the government of the same name, on the Dnieper, about 60 miles from its mouth. It was founded in 1778, and was intended to be a great seaport on the Black sea; but from the difficulty of navigating the Dnieper, and the unhealthiness of the climate, it gradually fell into decline, and is now completely eclipsed as a commercial station, by the neighbouring port of Odessa. The naval office has been removed to Nikoliev, but extensive works are still carried on in the dock-yards and arsenal of Cherson. Here the philanthropic Howard terminated his career of humanity on 20th January 1790. The population in 1788 is said to have been nearly 50,000; in 1803 (after the ruin of its trade), 11,000, and since that time the number has still further decreased: 812 miles S. St Petersburg. Long. 32. 56. 30. E. Lat. 46. 38. 30. N.

CHESTREY, a town and parish of England, county of Surrey, near the Thames, which is crossed by a bridge of seven arches. The abbey is said to have been founded in the year 604. Population 4279.

CHEWELL, a river of England, in Warwickshire. It joins the Thames at Oxford.

CHESEPEAKE, a bay of the United States, and one of the largest and safest in the known world. Its entrance is nearly E. N. E. and S. S. W. between Cape Charles, Lat. 37. 12. and Cape Henry. Lat. 37. in Virginia, 12 miles wide, and it extends 270 miles to the northward, dividing Virginia and Maryland. It is from 7 to 18 miles broad. The Susquehanna, Patuxent, Potomac, Appahannock, and York, all large and navigable streams, fall into it.

CHESTER, a town and parish of England, in Buckinghamshire. Population 9632.

CHESHIRE, a county palatine of England, bounded N. by Lancashire, N. W. and W. by the counties of Flint and Denbigh, S. E. and E. by the counties of Derby, Stafford, Salop, and part of Flintshire. It extends 88 miles in extreme length, by 30 in breadth, and is supposed to contain a superficial area of 1648 square miles. The surface is in general flat, with some considerable hills towards the east end; also a high ridge of sandstone, crossing it from north to south. The arable, meadow, and pasture land, has been computed at 620,000 acres; 28,000 waste land; 28,000 peat-bogs and sea-sands. It is chiefly watered by the rivers Mersey, Tame, Dee, Weaver, and Bollin. It is intersected by several navigable canals. It produces, copper, lead, and cobalt; also coal. But the principal mineral consists of inexhaustible strata of rock salt. About 156,000 tons of this article are obtained yearly from pits, besides what is procured from the water of several brine springs, which are usually at the depth of from 20 to 40 yards under the surface. Cheshire is celebrated for the quantity and excellence of its cheese, which forms one of its principal exports. Manufactures are carried on extensively in silk, cotton, and linen; in ribbons, thread, buttons, and tanning leather, in various parts of the county. Cheshire is divided into seven hundreds, consisting of 80 parishes, containing one city, Chester, and 12 market towns, Alfrincham, Congleton, Frodsham, Halton, Knutsford, Macclesfield, Malpas, Middlewich, Nantwich, Northwich, Sandbach, and Stockport. Roman antiquities are frequently found in this county. Population 270,098.

CHESHIRE, a county of the United States, in the south-west part of New Hampshire, bounded N. by Grafton county, E. by Hillsborough county, S. by Massachusetts, and W. by Connecticut river, which separates it from Vermont. Population 40,988. Chief towns Keene and Charlestown.

CHESHIRE, a post township of the United States, in Berkshire county, Massachusetts, 17 miles N. N. E. Lenox, and 140 W. N. W. Boston. Population 1315.—2d, A post township of New Haven county, Connecticut. The Episcopal academy of Connecticut is established here. It has a fund of 25,000 dollars, and a library of 200 volumes. The institution is under the direction of a principal, and a professor of languages. The academical building is a brick edifice, 56 feet by 34. Pop. 2248. 13 miles N. New Haven.

CHESTER, a town and parish of England, in Hertfordshire. Population 4976.

CHESTER, a city of England, capital of Cheshire, 18 miles from the sea, on the Dee, which is navigable here, and is crossed by a fine bridge of 7 arches. It is surrounded by walls, which are frequented as a favourite promenade by the citizens. Four principal streets lead from the four gates, all terminating, as it were, in a centre at the cross. Chester contains a cathedral and eight parish churches within the walls, and one, St John's, without them. The cathedral was founded by Henry VIII. Its tower, springing from four beautiful pillars, is 127 feet high, and the construction of the whole building exhibits many subjects interesting to the architect and antiquary. The Unitarians, Quakers, Baptists, and several sects of Methodists, have meeting-houses; and there are several almshouses, and endowments for charitable purposes. There is a blue-coat hospital for maintaining 35 boys; also a similar institution for girls; a poor-house, or house of industry; and several schools, where the pupils are taught after Mr Bell's system. There is a general infirmary, supported by private subscriptions. Adjoining the infirmary is the city jail, which is constructed of brick, but which is considered insecure; it is divided into a jail and house of correction. The old castle has been taken down, and a new jail has been erected. Opposite to this is the shire-hall, a fine edifice. Here also is the county jail, built on an improved plan, with apartments for classing the criminals. At the north-east end of the castle-yard are barracks; and on the south-west side is an arsenal for 27,000 stand of arms. This castle is a royal fortress. The other public buildings are the exchange; the union hall, appropriated for Manchester and Yorkshire goods; the linen hall; and the theatre. Ship-building is carried on to a considerable extent; and it is not uncommon to see 10 or 12 vessels on the stocks at a time. There are two inland canals. There are annually two fairs for Manchester goods, Yorkshire cloths, Irish linens, and Birmingham wares. The city returns two members to parliament, elected by the resident freemen, amounting to 1200. Chester is a very ancient place, and its walls appear to have been erected by the Romans. Population 19,949. 145 miles N. Bristol, and 181 N. W. London.

CHESTER, a county of the United States, in Pennsylvania, bounded N. E. by Montgomery county, S. E. by Delaware and Philadelphia counties, S. by Maryland, W. by Lancaster county, and N. W. by Berks county. Population 39,598. Chief town West Chester.—2d, A post township of Rockingham county, New Hampshire, on the east side of the Merrimack, 14 miles N. W. Haverhill, 14 W. Exeter, 25 S. E. Concord, 31 W. Portsmouth. Population 2630. Massachussetts pond lies mostly in the west part of this town.—3d, A post township of Windsor county, Vermont, 16 miles S. W. Windsor, 11 W. Charlestown, New Hampshire. Population 2370.—4th, A post township of Hampshire county, Massachusetts, 20 miles N. W. Springfield. Population 1534.—5th, A post township of Warren county, New York, on the Hudson, 25 miles W. Ticonderoga, 10 N. Albany. Population 637. Secord lake lies on the east side of this town.—6th, A post township of Morris county,

New Jersey. Population 1175.—7th, A township of Burlington county, New Jersey. Population 1839.—8th, A borough and capital of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, on Delaware river, near Marcus Hook, 13 miles N. E. Wilmington, 15 from Philadelphia. Its situation is pleasant, and it is the resort of much company from Philadelphia in the summer months.—9th, A township of Shenandoah county, Virginia, on the point of land between Allen's or North, and South rivers, the two branches of the Shenandoah, 16 miles S. by W. Winchester.—10th, A township of Cumberland county, Virginia, on the south-west side of James river, 6 miles S. Richmond, 15 N. Blandford.—11th, A district of South Carolina, on Wateree river. Population 11,470. Slaves 2743. Chief town Chester.—12th, A post town and capital of Chester district, South Carolina, 22 miles S. Pinckney court-house, 58 N. W. Columbia.—13th, A navigable water of Maryland, on the eastern shore. It is formed by the union of Cyprus and Andover creeks, at Bridgetown. It passes by Chestertown, receives South East creek 3 miles below, and empties into the Chesapeake, at Love Point, 10 miles below Chester.

CHESTER LE STREET, a town and parish of England, county of Durham. Pop. 1892.

CHESTERFIELD, a town of England, county of Derby, on the Rother. The church is a spacious and handsome edifice, and appears to be of considerable antiquity. Here is a grammar school, and several almshouses. The town-hall is a neat structure. There are manufactures of cast-iron, pottery, silk and cotton, shoes, stockings, and carpets, in the town and neighbourhood. Population 5077. 26 miles N. Derby.

CHESTERFIELD, a county of the United States, in Virginia, between James and Appomattox rivers. Population 9379. Slaves 6015. At the court-house is a post-office.—2d, A post township of Cheshire county, New Hampshire, on Connecticut river, opposite Brattleborough, 11 miles S. W. Keene, 25 S. by W. Charlestown. Population 1839.—3d, A post township of Hampshire county, Massachusetts, 15 miles W. Northampton. Population 1408.—4th, A district of South Carolina, bordering on North Carolina. Population 5564. Slaves 1639.

CHESTERFIELD INLET, a bay of the United States, on the west side of Hudson's bay, about 200 miles long and 15 wide. Long. of the mouth 90. 40. W. Lat. 63. 30. N.

CHESTERFIELD KEY, an islet of the United States, near the north coast of Cuba. Long. 77. 20. W. Lat. 22. 15. N.

CHESTERKING, a town and parish of England, county of Essex. Population 755.

CHESTERTOWN, a post township of the United States, and capital of Kent county, Maryland. It is pleasantly situated on Chester river, about 18 miles from its mouth, in Chesapeake bay. It contains 140 houses, a court-house and jail, a spacious college edisee, and 2 houses of public worship, 1 for Methodists, and 1 for Episcopalians. An elegant bridge was lately erected over Chester river. The town had formerly considerable trade, but is now on the decline. The amount of shipping in 1805 was 3421 tons; in 1815 it was 1813. Washington college in this town, was incorporated in 1782, and had a fund of £.1250 a year, settled upon it by the legislature, which has since been withdrawn; and the building is now appropriated to the accommodation of a Latin and English school, which is one of the most respectable in the state. 38 miles S. S. E. Baltimore. Long. 77.57. W. Lat. 39. 12. N.

CHETHAM, a township of England, county of Lancaster. Population 2027.

CHUVIOT HILLS, a ridge of hills in England, dividing Northumberland from Roxburghshire, in Scotland. Height 2680 feet.

CHEVRES, a town of France, department of the Seine and Oise. Population 1730.

CHÉZY L'ABAYE, a town of France, department of Aisne. Population 1300.

CHIAPA, or CIVIDAD REAL, the capital of a province of the same name, in South America, about 200 miles from the Pacific ocean, in a northerly direction. Families 500. 300 miles N. W. Guatemala. Long. 93. 23. W. Lat. 17. 0. N.

CHIAPA DOS INDIOS, a city of Chiapa province, on the river Tabasco. It contains about 4000 Indian families. 358 miles S. E. Mexico. Long. 93. 53. W. Lat. 17. 5. N.

CHIARENZA, a decayed seaport of European Turkey, on the W. coast of the Morea, 80 miles W. Corinth.

CHIARI, a town of Lombardy, in the Brescian, near the Oglio. Population 7000. 12 miles W. Brescia.

CHIASCIO, a river of the Ecclesiastical states, which falls into the Tiber.

CHIAVARI, a town of Genoa, with thriving manufactures, and yearly fairs. Population 8000. 20 miles S. E. Genoa.

CHIAVENNA, a town of Lombardy, capital of a district of the same name, on the Maira. Population 3000. 38 miles N. Como.

CHIAVERAN, a thriving town of Piedmont, near Ivrea, with 2000 inhabitants.

CHICA NAYAKANA HULLY, a town of Hindostan, in Mysore. Houses 600.

CHIGAMOCUA, SOGAMOSO, GALLINAZOS, a large river of South America; in Santa Fe de Bogoto, which falls into the Magdalena, in Lat. 7. 10. N.

CHICAPÉ, a river of the United States, which joins the Connecticut at Springfield.

CHICHCOTTA, a town of Northern Hindostan, province of Bootan. Long. 89. 25. E. Lat. 26. 42. N.

CHICHESTER, a city of England, and the capital of the county of Sussex, on the Levant. It is surrounded by walls, and formerly had four gates. It consists of four wide and well paved streets, built in the form of a cross, which are kept remarkably neat and clean. This is a bishop's see; and besides the cathedral, there are six parish churches and a chapel of ease within the walls, as also several places of worship for those who do not profess the established religion. The cathedral is an elegant Gothic structure, 410 feet long, with a central tower, and a steeple 297 feet high. The other public buildings are the bishop's palace, guild-hall, custom-house, work-house, free schools, theatre, market-house, and market-cross. The theatre is small, though neat. On one of the remnants of the wall is an extensive terrace. Two weekly markets are kept, one for cattle every alternate Wednesday, and five annual fairs. This city sends two members to parliament. Population 7362. 36 miles S. E. Winchester, and 61 S. S. E. London. Long. 0. 47. W. Lat. 50. 50. N.

CHICHESTER, a township of the United States, in Rockingham county, New Hampshire, 10 miles E. Concord. Population 951.

CHICKAHOMINY, a river of the United States, in Virginia, which runs into the north side of James river, 37 miles above Point Comfort.

CHICKANA, a neat village of Spain, in Andalusia, 52 miles S. S. W. Seville.

CHIDECK, SOUTH, a parish of England, county of Dorset. Population 715.

CHIERI, an ancient town of Piedmont. It is well built, surrounded with walls, and has 6 gates, 4 squares, several churches and convents, and 10,000 inhabitants. 6 miles E. Turin.

CHIESE, a river of Italy, which falls into the Oglio.

CHIETI, a large town of Naples, on the Pescara. It has four churches, 9 convents, and 12,400 inhabitants. 78 miles N. E. Rome.

CHIEVRES, a town of the Netherlands, in Hainault, 4 miles S. E. Ath. Pop. 2080.

CHIGNAN, ST. a town of France, department of the Herault. Population 2550.

CHIGNECTO BAY, the north-west arm of the bay of Fundy, in Nova Scotia.

CHIHUAHUA, a considerable town of Mexico, in the intendancy of Durango. It has a small but elegant church. In the public square stands the church, the royal treasury, the town-house, and the richest shops. The principal church is a most superb building, its whole front being covered with statues, and the windows and doors being also ornamented with sculpture. Chihuahua is surrounded with mines of silver on every side. Population 11,000. 180 miles N. W. Mexico. Long. 109. 16. W. Lat. 28. 50. N.

CHILCA, a convenient seaport of Peru, province of Canete. Lat. 12. 32. S.

CHILI, a country of South America, is situated upon the Pacific ocean, between the 24th and 45th degrees of south latitude, bounded W. by the Pacific ocean, N. by Peru, E. by Tucuman and Buenos Ayres, S. by the land of Magellan. Its length is estimated at 1200 geographical miles, but it varies in breadth from 210 to 300 miles, as the great range of mountains called the Cordilleras of the Andes, approach or recede from the sea.

Chili is naturally divided into three parts; the first comprehending the islands; the second Chili, properly so called; and the third the Andes, or the country occupied by that range of mountains. The islands are the three Coquimbones, Muggilan, Totoral, and Pajaro, the two islands of Masafutero and Juan Fernandez, Mocha; and the archipelago of Chiloe, which comprehends 82 islands, inhabited by Spaniards and Indians. The Spanish part of Chili is divided into the following 13 provinces, Copiapo, Coquimbo, Quillota, Aconcagua, Melipilla, Santiago, Rancagua, Colchagua, Maule, Itata, Chillan, Puchacay, Huilquilemu. Chili, properly so called, or that part which is situated between the Andes and the sea, is at least 120 miles in breadth. It is commonly divided into two equal parts, that is, the maritime country and the inland country. The beauty of its sky, the constant mildness of its climate, and its abundant fertility, render it, as a place of residence, extremely agreeable. As the country rises towards the Andes, the cold of course increases; and in the Andes the climate is extremely rigorous, the roads from April to November being continually choked up with snow. The soil is remarkably fertile; and the fertility increases in proportion to the distance from the sea. The soil and climate are extremely favourable to all sorts of European fruits and grain, which are produced in great perfection and abundance. Owing to the great quantity of nitrous and sulphureous substances, the country is subject to volcanic eruptions; and there are said to be 14 volcanoes in a state of constant eruption, and a still greater number that discharge smoke only at intervals. Earthquakes are common, but they are very slight, and little attention is paid to them. The great earthquakes happen but rarely, five having only occurred from the arrival of the Spaniards to the year 1782, comprising a period of 244 years. Chili is remarkable for the equable temperature of its climate, and the inhabitants are generally healthy. Neither tigers, wolves, nor many other ferocious beasts that infest the neighbouring countries, are known. From the situation of Chili, which is a plain, perceptibly inclined from the Andes towards the sea, it naturally receives the waters produced by the melting of that immense body of snow which falls annually on those mountains, and the country is accordingly watered by abundance of rivers, streams, and springs, which are occasionally to be found on the tops of some of the maritime mountains. The rivers of Chili which have their sources in the Andes amount to 123, 69 of which communicate directly with the sea. Of this number are, the Maule, in the province of the same name; the Biobio, which is two miles in breadth; the Cauten; the Toltén; the Valdivia, in the country of Amuzo; the Chaivin; the Rio-bueno, in the country of the Cunches; and the Sinfondo, which discharges itself into the archipelago of Chiloe. Lakes of salt and fresh water are common; and there is a great variety of mineral and hot springs. Chili produces a great variety of barths, clays, stones, bituminous substances, salts, and metals of all kinds. There are abundant quarries of different sorts of stones, such as freestone, flint, rock crystal, and marble. The Chilian marbles are generally of an excellent quality, and take a fine polish. Of spars the species are infinite. The mountains also contain precious stones, such as the agate and the jasper; and the rivers wash down with their sands various kinds of precious stones, particularly rubies and sapphires. All the known kinds of semi-metals are met with in Chili, and are found either in mines by themselves, or combined with metallic ores, and generally in a state of mineralisation. But the working of them, under the despotism of the mother country, was rigorously prohibited. Quicksilver was held as a royal monopoly, and the digging it was in consequence interdicted. The country being now freed from this odious bondage, will have free scope for its industry. There are mines of all the different metals in Chili. Lead is found mixed with gold or silver. There are also mines of tin, which are, however, neglected. The provinces of Coquimbo, Copiapo, Aconcagua, and Huilquilemu, are very rich in mines of iron, which is of the very best quality; but the working of it was formerly prohibited, in order to favour the trade of Spain, from whence all the iron used in the country was brought. There are also gold, silver, and copper mines. The richest mines of the latter are found betwixt the 24th and 36th degrees of latitude. Almost all the copper in Chili contains a greater or less proportion of gold; and veins of pure gold are frequently met with in the deepest copper mines. Only the richest copper mines, of which the ore yields one half its weight in copper, are worked. Between the cities of Coquimbo and Copiapo, there are now in work more than a thousand mines, besides those in the province of Aconcagua. The silver mines of Chili are found only in the highest and coldest parts of the Andes. The richest are in the provinces of St Jago, Aconcagua, Coquimbo, and Copiapo. Gold is of all the metals most abundant in Chili, being found in almost every mountain and hill. It is found also in the sands of the plains; but more especially in those washed down by the brooks and rivers.

Chili is not quite so abundant in animals as the other countries of America. There are but few reptiles, and the indigenous quadrupeds do not exceed 30 species. The classes of worms, of fishes, and of birds, are those that are the most numerous. On the coasts are caught various kinds of excellent fish, of which the different species are calculated to amount to about 76, the most of which differ from those in the southern hemisphere, and appear to be peculiar to that sea. Chili also abounds in a great variety of birds, those that inhabit the coast amounting to 135 species, while it is impossible to enumerate all those that belong to the sea; and that vast chain of mountains, the Andes, may be considered as the nursery of birds of all kinds. Almost all the European quadrupeds, such as horses, asses, cattle, sheep, goats, many kinds of dogs, cats, and even mice, have been brought hither by the Spaniards, and have multiplied exceedingly. Of the indigenous animals, the most remarkable are the American camel, of which there are different species; the wild goat, the dog, the fox, and the puma, or lion, which it resembles in its shape and its roaring, but has no mane.

Chili was invaded, but unsuccessfully, in 1535, by Almagro. The Spaniards again invaded it in 1541, Baldivia, their leader, entering it without the least opposition. The inhabitants, however, taking up arms in defence of their independence, fought with such resolution, that the Spaniards were unable to subdue them. Chili has, after a severe struggle, and after being conquered by the royal arms subsequent to its first emancipation, at length succeeded in establishing its independence of the mother country, of which the formal recognition is all that is wanting.

CHILLAMBARAM, a town of Hindostan, on the coast of the Carnatic, 120 miles S. S. W. Madras.

CHILLAN, the capital of a province of the same name, in Chili, on the Chillan. Houses 360. Lat. 35. 56. S.

CHILLICOTHE, a post township of the United States, and capital of Ross county, Ohio, and the second town in size in the state, on the west bank of the Scioto, 45 miles in a direct line, and 70 by water, from its mouth, 45 S. Columbus, 76 S. W. Zanesville, and 93 E. by N. Cincinnati. It is laid out on an elevated plain, between Paint creek and the Scioto. The streets are spacious, and cross each other at right angles. It contains a court-house and jail, a market-house, 3 banks, including the branch bank of the United States, 3 houses of public worship, 1 for Presbyterians, 1 for Seceders, and 1 for Methodists, and an academy. In the town and vicinity are many valuable mills and manufactories. Population in 1819, 2600. Long. 82. 55. W. Lat. 39. 14. N.

CHILLIS, KHILLIS, or KLES, a town of Syria, pachalic of Aleppo, 15 miles N. Aleppo.

CHILLISQUAKE, a township of the United States, in Northumberland county, Pennsylvania, on the Susquehanna, 6 miles above Northumberland. Population 1595.

CHILLMART, a large town of Bengal, on the Brahmapootra. It trades in rice and cotton.

CHILOE, ARCHIPELAGO, or a cluster of islands situated in a large gulf or bay at the southern extremity of Chili. They amount to 47 in number, of which 32 have been peopled by the Spaniards or Indians, and the remaining ones are uninhabited. Among the former there is one that is very large, some that are of a moderate size, being from 12 to 15 leagues in length, while the others are small. They are all adjacent to the main island of Chiloe, from which the archipelago, which was formerly known by the archipelago of Ancud, now has its name. This island is situated between Lat. 42. 13. and 43. 47. S. and is about 120 miles in length, and 60 in its broadest part. The few valleys among the hills, and the flat ground on the sea-shore, present the only spots in these islands that are cultivated. On this belt of cultivated ground all the settlements in Chiloe, amounting to 41 in number, are formed.

CHILPANZINGO, a town of Mexico, on the great road from Mexico to Acapulco, 2327 feet above the level of the sea.

CHILQUES Y MASQUES, a province of Peru, containing 10,000 inhabitants.

CHILTERN HILLS, a ridge of chalky hills in England.

CHILVERS COTON, a town and parish of England, county of Warwick. Pop. 2169.

CHILWELL, a hamlet of England, county of Nottingham. Population 523.

CHIMAY, a town of the Netherlands, in Hainault. Population 1900.

CHIMBORAZO, the most elevated summit of the Andes, in Quito. Height 21,440 feet.

CHINA, an extensive empire in the S. E. of Asia, which, excluding the territories subject or tributary to the emperor of China, which are of vast extent, including Mandshuria and Mongolia proper, Thibet, and the whole of central Asia, between Hindostan on the south, and Asiatic Russia on the north, may be generally stated to be situated between the 20th and the 41st degrees of north latitude, and the 101st and 122d degrees of east longitude. This will give about 1260 geographical miles in length from N. to S., and 1050 in breadth from E. to W. The superficial extent of the empire has been vaguely computed at 1,300,000 square miles. On the E. and S. it is bounded by the ocean, and by those great branches of it called the Yellow sea and the sea of China; on the W. by the imperfectly known tracks of Great Thibet, Sifan, and Kokonor; on the N. by Mongolia proper and Mandshuria. The general aspect of China is that of a level, fertile, and highly cultivated region. Its surface is varied, however, by mountain chains of considerable magnitude, though they seem to be only lower stages of those enormous masses which stretch across central Asia. China is remarkably distinguished by the magnitude and extent of her rivers. The Hoangho or Yellow river, and the Yang-ke-kiang or Blue river, two mighty parallel streams, water the whole extent of its central regions. These primary streams have numerous tributaries, several of which equal the greatest rivers of Europe. The climate of China varies between the extreme heat and cold. The former prevails in the southern provinces, which experience a higher temperature than Bengal; while the climate of Peking is colder than countries under the same latitude in Europe. China is said to produce gold and silver, but this is considered doubtful; also copper, rock crystal, lapis lazuli, a small but fine species of ruby, and abundance of salt.

The political institutions and manners in China, are very peculiar. Government, literature, manners, the pursuits of industry, and moral habitudes of every description, appear in this singular country, to form parts of one great system. The despotism here established, is perhaps the most complete and deeply rooted that exists any where on the globe. There is no mobility, no priesthood, no privileged body of any description, which can diminish by sharing the respect and influence claimed by the sovereign. In no class, or rather in no individual, does there exist any sentiment of honour or pride which can deter him from laying himself in the dust beneath his imperial master. The cane, as the main instrument of government, is applied without distinction, to the highest and the lowest Chinese. Yet this government, amidst the excess of its despotism, presents in many respects a mild and moderate aspect, quite unknown to the other absolute monarchies of Asia; and this is accounted for by the principle which runs through all its transactions, and which is expressed in all its public acts, that the emperor is the father of his people.

The early history of China is involved in obscurity. It is certain, however, that at an early period they attained to a great degree of civilization, though their country was occasionally a prey to the irruptions of the shepherd tribes, who cover the table land of central Asia. The most memorable modern conquest was that of Genghis Khan, who, in the 11th century, spread his desolating hordes from the shores of the Baltic to those of the Eastern ocean. He appears to have entered China in all the array and terror of a barbarous conqueror. But his successors sought to improve by policy what they had acquired by arms, and diligently applied themselves to repair the ravages made by their first irruption. Their dynasty gradually lost its energy, and was supplanted by one of native Chinese princes, called the dynasty of Ming. These, in the beginning of the 17th century, were checked by an irruption of the Manchoo Tartars, who have ever since continued to hold the sovereignty of this empire. Literature is in China the great passport to political promotion, from the highest offices to the lowest. An annual examination is held, when every candidate, according to the measure of learning which he has displayed, is promoted to a corresponding place in the government. In the case of princes of the blood, or of some Tartar chieftains, interest and favour may operate; but for all the rest, the scrutiny is said to be conducted with very great impartiality. There is nothing more singular than the language of China, which is a modification of hieroglyphical writing, and which, having lost its original and simple character of picture writing, now consists of a mere collection of arbitrary symbols. It is estimated that they have 40,000 of those marks; and indeed it seems doubtful whether any traveller sufficiently understood their language, to give any proper account of it. The art of printing from blocks, has been long known in China. An official gazette is published every day at Peking, and circulated through every part of the empire. It forms, however, the only vehicle by which the people are allowed to acquire political information. A number of light publications are daily issuing from the press; thousands of novels and tales; books of proverbs and maxims of morality, medical receipts, astrological predictions, almanacks and court calendars. The press is in the first instance free as in Britain; but if any thing appear which gives offence to the government, the proceedings are alike severe and arbitrary; so that no writer ventures to canvass the measures of administration. The mandarins are divided into nine orders, the lowest of whom are entrusted with the collection of the revenue; others are governors of cities, on the magnitude of which their consequence depends; others are overseers, visitors, or inspectors; and the highest class are governors of provinces, or viceroys. Each mandarin exercises over those placed under him an authority equally absolute with that of the monarch. Besides ruling the people, he also preaches to them; and strict instructions are transmitted from the imperial court, as to the matter of his sermons. The penal code of China is severe, and many offences are punished with death. For every inferior transgression, the instrument of correction is the bamboo; so that all China has been compared to a school governed by the rod. China is remarkable for great public works. No nation can produce a parallel to the Great Canal, which extends in a continuous line for 500 miles from Peking to the Yang-tse-kiang. Like the other Chinese canals, it is not constructed on the same artificial and scientific principles as those of Europe, nor composed, like them, of standing water, fed by reservoirs, elevated and lowered by locks. The want of locks obliges the Chinese to conduct the canal by a winding line, round the different elevations which are encountered in its course. Smaller canals, connecting the rivers and larger canals with each other, are said to be almost innumerable. In different parts of the empire, also, there occur bridges highly remarkable for their magnitude, and for the difficulties overcome in their construction. The great roads are likewise very magnificent. But the most stupendous of all these monuments is that known by the name of the Great Wall of China. This mighty rampart has been drawn along the whole northern, and part of the western, frontier, over a vast chain of mountains, the sinuities of which it follows throughout a course of about 1000 miles. On the plain it is 30 feet high; but when carried over rocks, 20, or even 15 feet, are found sufficient. The population is variously estimated, at from 150 to 200 millions.

The Chinese, in their physiognomy and general appearance, exhibit unequivocal proofs of their Mongol origin, along with some features peculiar to themselves. The square flat face, the nose small, but broad at the root, the colour of a pale yellow, like the root of rhubarb, or a faded leaf, is joined with the oblique and elongated eye, which is peculiar to China and her colonies. Their long black hair is plaited into a long tail, reaching from the crown of the head to the waist, and sometimes to the calf of the leg, the rest of the scalp being closely shaven. The nation in general is substantially clothed, the higher ranks in silks and satins, the lower in cotton. Some of the boatmen, however, who ply on the shores of the Yellow sea, were observed to be destitute even of such clothing as decency required. They are extremely dirty in their persons, and seem to have a rooted aversion for cold water, either for drinking or ablution. Their clothes are worn till covered with filth and vermin; and the assemblage of a number into one place produces a very unpleasant effect on the olfactory nerves. The feet of the females are compressed from the earliest age, in order to render them small, which is considered as the chief ornament of a Chinese beauty.

The national character seems to be such as is naturally formed by the constant operation of watchful and jealous, though not violent and ferocious despotism. Every thing that would indicate energy, or that might lead to efficient action, is studiously discouraged; and the whole system of life brought under subjection to an endless routine of parade and ceremony, which the law regulates in its minutest points, a non-compliance with any of which, is punished with a due number of strokes from the bamboo. To speak but seldom, and only on great occasions, is considered highly becoming; while that quiet and hilarity which enliven an European company, would be viewed with utter contempt. Dancing they have not the remotest idea of. There are no fairs or meetings for the lower ranks; no balls, routes, or concerts, for the higher. They cannot conceive how any one should find delight in the exercise of wrestling, boxing, or fencing, or in active games, such as cricket, golf, or tennis. The Tartars, indeed, delight in hunting; but this taste has never been communicated to the Chinese. The only amusements, therefore, are their feasts, which are conducted in the same cold and ceremonious manner as all their other intercourse. Public intoxication is of very rare occurrence, though they are accused of privately indulging in strong liquors. Other good qualities are, steady and unremitting industry. To balance these, however, they exhibit all the vices of mean and degraded minds. From the throne to the meanest subject, the most entire disregard of truth prevails. Falshoods of the most glaring description have been asserted to the members of our embassies, by the principal lords at court, and by the emperor himself. Dishonesty in traffic is a kindred vice equally universal; and their unparalleled skill in every branch of the art of cheating, has been remarked with astonishment by all their mercantile visitors. That active and enlightened humanity which is such a distinguishing feature in the European manners, is here entirely unknown. If a Chinese drop from a boat or vessel into the sea, he is suffered to sink, without the smallest attempt being made to save him. The barbarous custom of exposing children affords another proof of the insensibility of the Chinese. The female sex are quite excluded from general society, and seem generally to be held in very low estimation. There is no established religion. The multitude universally believe in a species of spirits, some good and some bad, who preside over the seasons, over mountains, rivers, and other natural objects; over their doors and hearths; and over every thing in which mortals are concerned. China has no congregational worship, no public sacrifices, nothing by which men can be assembled together; an object studiously avoided by this jealous government. In science the Chinese have made little progress; and when they wish to calculate eclipses, which are considered affairs of state, they resort to the aid of foreigners. The fine arts also cannot be considered as in a flourishing state. The public buildings throughout the empire display no sort of taste; and the porcelain tower at Nankin, varnished over like china-ware, and with bells at every corner, which jingle with the wind, can scarcely be considered otherwise than as a huge toy. In gardening they have attained to greater eminence; but as to painting, they are totally ignorant of its first principles, and can only make a close and servile copy of any natural object; and they can make a similar copy of an European landscape, when it is laid before them. Their music is extremely simple, and destitute both of science and system. The drama is a most favourite amusement. Peking is supposed to contain no less than a hundred companies of players, each comprehending about fifty individuals. These, however, do not perform on theatres, like those of Europe: such a crowded assemblage would be altogether foreign to the genius of the government. They are hired by individuals, to enliven the scene of domestic festivity; and they ply continually on the canals, waiting for this employment. Their exhibitions are in the grossest stile of low and disgusting buffoonery.

In China, agriculture takes the lead of every other pursuit; yet their husbandry is rude and unskilful. The great object is to bring every spot under cultivation. The chief instrument in such a climate is moisture, which is conveyed to every district, and almost to every field, by innumerable canals. The sides of lofty mountains are formed into terraces, to which the water is conveyed up by buckets; or the rain is collected in reservoirs at the top, and conveyed down by conduits. The expedients for collecting manure are of the most unprecedented nature. A number of children and old people, unfit for any other labour, are employed in this service. The chief object of Chinese agriculture; and the general food of the empire, is rice. This fortunately requires little manure, and an annual crop can be raised by mere irrigation. In the more northerly provinces, where the severity of the climate is adverse to the cultivation of rice, its place is supplied by wheat, barley, and other European grains. The next staple is the tea plant, of which vast plantations are found in the provinces to the south of the Yang-tse-kiang. In the southern provinces, vast tracks are covered with the white mulberry, for the production of silk, which has long been one of the staples of the empire. For the use of the lower ranks, large quantities of cotton are raised in the middle provinces, which do not, however, supersede an extensive importation from India. Tobacco, camphor, ginseng, and a variety of leguminous plants, may be added to the list of Chinese agricultural products.

In manufactures, also, this nation displays no common degree of ingenuity. Their porcelain, in the whiteness, hardness, and transparency of the substance, and in the beauty of the colours laid upon it, surpasses any imitation that has been made of it. They possess the art of extracting dyeing materials from a vast variety of animal, vegetable, and mineral substances, to a degree scarcely equalled by any other nation. Silks and satins are another staple manufacture, and executed in the most superior style. Cottons are also manufactured to a great extent, though that peculiar species which we call nankeen does not seem properly Chinese; their prevailing colours being blue, black, and brown. There are a variety of little ornamental arts, in which we cannot rival them; such as, the cutting of ivory into fans, baskets, &c.; cutting of tortoise-shell and mother of pearl; their silver filigree and lacquered cabinets and the mode of ornamenting their cabinet wares, tea-chests, &c. Their paper, printing, and ink, may challenge comparison with ours.

Foreign commerce is viewed with a very jealous eye. The most ancient and necessary trade of China is that with the Indian islands. From them, in exchange for her manufactures, she receives the singular and favourite luxuries of birds' nests, beech de mer, and shark's fins, together with tin, and a variety of spices. Japan and Cochin-China are allowed, by ancient usage, to send a few annual vessels. But Europeans have only two points at which they are allowed to trade; one at Kiachén, the emporium for the overland trade of Russia; the other at Canton, which is appropriated to the maritime states. The value of exports from Britain to China is about £1,000,000; the imports, chiefly consisting of tea, may be estimated at £4,000,000.

CHINABAKKER, a town in the Birman empire, province of Pogyo. The town is situated in Lat. 16. 20. N. Long. about 95. 45. E.; but no accurate survey has been made of the interior of this part of the country, which is said to resemble the Delta of the Ganges, abounding in woods, containing deer, tigers, and other wild animals.

CHINARALABARAM, a town of Hindostan. Houses 500. Long. 77. 55. E. Lat. 13. 26. N.

CHINAPATAM, a large and handsome town of Hindostan, district of Mysore. Long. 77. 44. E. Lat. 12. 30. N.

CHINCHILLA, a town of Spain, province of Murcia. Population 4500.

CHINCHOO, a town of Hindostan, province of Aurangabad. Population 6000.

CHINCIEPUT, a town and fortress of Hindostan, and capital of a district of the same name, on the Palar river. Long. 73. 53. E. Lat. 12. 56. N.

CHINEY, a town of the Netherlands, on the Boch. Population 1000.

CHINNACHIN, a town of Northern Hindostan. Long. 81. 33. E. Lat. 30. 22. N.

CHINON, a town of France, on the Vienne. It has manufactures of woollen stuffs. Population 5500. 107 miles S. W. Paris.

CHINOOR, two towns of Hindostan, provinces of Bejapore and Berr. Long. of the former, 76. 34. E. Lat. 15. 46. N. Long. of the latter, 80. 8. E. Lat. 19. 8. N.

CHINROYPUTTUN, a fortress of Hindostan. Houses 900. Long. 76. 40. E. Lat. 12. 53. N.

CHINSURA, the principal Dutch settlement in Bengal, on the western bank of the Hooghly river, 24 miles above Calcutta. Long. 88. 28. E. Lat. 23. 52. N.

CHIOZZA, an old and well built town of the Venetian states, on an island of the same name in the Adriatic. Pop. including the rest of the island, 20,000. 14 miles S. Venice.

CHIPPENHAM, a town of England, in Wiltshire, on the Avon, over which is an elegant freestone bridge. The church is a large, ancient, and interesting structure; and contains some very old and curious monumental devices and inscriptions. It sends two members to parliament, and has a manufacture of the finest broad cloth. Population 3506. 13 miles E. N. E. Bath.

CHIFFEWAY, a small village of Upper Canada, on the river Welland.

CHIFFEWAY RIVER, a river of North America, which runs into the Mississippi, and has a communication with the Montreal river by a short passage.

CHIPPING-NORTON, a town and parish of England, county of Oxford. The church is much admired for its windows. Pop. 2640.

CHIPPING-ONGBAR, an ancient town and parish of England, in Essex. Pop. 768.

CHIPPING-SODBURY, a town and parish of England, in Gloucestershire, 11 miles N. E. Bristol. Population 1059.

CHIRAC, a town of France, in Languedoc, department of the Lozere. Population 2100.

CHIRK, a parish and village of Wales, in Denbighshire. Population 1453.

CHIRNSIDE, a village and parish of Scotland, county of Berwick. Population 1139.

CHISAMO, a town on the north coast of the island of Candia.

CHISME, or CISME, a seaport town of Anatolia, 40 miles N. Smyrna.

CHITWICK, a parish and village of England, in Middlesex, on the Thames. Population 4336.

CHITLONG, a town of Hindostan, in Little Nepal. Long. 85. 52. E. Lat. 27. 29. N.

CHITRON, or CHITRON, a celebrated fortress of Hindostan, the capital of a district of the same name, which lies about the 25th degree of N. Lat. and between the 74th and 75th degrees of E. Long.

CHITTORE, a large and flourishing town of Gujerat, on the Saurashtra river, celebrated for its manufacture of chintzes. Long. 73. 3. E. Lat. 23. 45. N.

CHITTAGONG, an extensive district on the south-east extremity of Bengal, lying between the 21st and 25d degrees of N. Lat. and in the vicinity of the 92d degree of E. Long. This district contains 3000 square miles of unproductive mountainous or arable land. Its principal productions are rice, salt, timber, ivory, indigo, cotton, hemp, pepper, some coffee, and a small quantity of spices.

CHITTAPET, a town and fortress in the Carnatic, 75 miles S. W. Madras.

CHITTENDEN, a county of the United States, in Vermont, on Lake Champlain, intersected by Union river. Population 13,120. Chief town Burlington.

CHITTENINGO CREEK, a small stream in the state of New York, joins Oneida lake.

CHITTEDMOO, a celebrated fortress and town of Hindostan. Long. 76. 29. E. Lat. 14. 10. N.

CHITTOR, a town and fortress of the south of India, 80 miles E. Madras.

CHITTRA, a town of Hindostan, province of Bahar, 100 miles S. by W. Patna.

CHITWAX, a town of Hindostan, province of Malabar. Long. 76. 12. E. Lat. 10. 23. N.

CHIVASCO, a town of Piedmont, situated on the Po, where it receives the waters of the Orco. It contains several churches and cloisters. Population 5450.

CHIVSA, LA, a town of Piedmont, south-east of Coni. Population 6000.

CHOCZIM, a town and fortress of European Russia, government of Podolia, on the Dniester. It is built very irregularly, and was first defended only by a castle; but in 1718, it was erected into a regular fortress of great strength. It now belongs to the Russians. Long. 26. 35. E. Lat. 48. 31. N.

CHOLAT, a town of France, on the Mayenne, department of the Maine and Loire, 11 miles S. Beaupreau. Population 4700.

CHOLMOGOBY, a town of European Russia, situated on an island of the Dwina, below Archangel, 30 miles S. Archangel.

CHOLULA, a city of Mexico, formerly the capital of an independent district of the same name. It was famed as the seat of piety and religion during the Mexican empire; and had a magnificent temple, which still remains, and to which the Mexicans still resort in crowds, at the festival of the Virgin. The perpendicular height of this edifice is 164 feet, and at the base it measures at each side 1450 feet. This temple, which is to the east of the city, on the road leading to Puebla, is the most ancient and the most celebrated of all the Mexican religious monuments. Population 16,000. 80 miles E. Mexico. Long. 98. 7. 45. W. Lat. 19. 2. 6. N.

CHONAD, a town of Hungary, on the Marosch, 25 miles N. Temesvar.

CHONBHUT, a town of Hindostan, in Allahabad. Long. 81. 48. E. Lat. 24. 29. N.

CHOPERSK, a fortified town of European Russia, 140 miles W. Saratov.

CHOPTANK, a navigable river of North America, which falls into the Chesapeake.

CHORLEY, a tolerably well built town and parish of England, in Lancashire. The cotton manufacture is here carried on; and near it is abundance of coal, lead, alum, flint and mill stones. Population 7316.

CHORTISK, a town of European Russia, 590 miles S. S. E. St Petersburg. Pop. 1700.

CHOUL, LOWER and UPPER, two seaport towns and forts in Aurangabad. Long. of the one, 72. 46. E. Lat. 13. 36. N.; Long. of the other, 72. 48. E. Lat. 13. 33. N.

CHOUZE, a neat town of France, in Angou, on the Loire. Population 3350.

CHOWAN, a county of the United States, in Edenton district, North Carolina, on the N. side of Albemarle sound. Population 5297. Slaves 2700. Chief town Edenton.

CHOWAN, a river of the United States, in North Carolina, which is formed by the union of the Nottaway, Meherrin, and Blackwater rivers, and falls into the N. W. corner of Albemarle sound. It is 3 miles wide at its mouth.

CHOWSAR, a village of Hindostan, province of Bahar, 7 miles S. Buxar.

CHRISTCHURCH, a town of England, in Hampshire, between the Avon and the Stour. Its church is very ancient. The Avon is famous for its salmon fishery. It has a considerable trade in knit silk stockings and watch chains, and sends two members to parliament. Pop. 4044. 12 miles E. Poole.

CHRISTIAN, a county of the United States, in Kentucky, on Cumberland river. Population 11,080. Slaves 1766. Chief town Hopkinsville.

CHRISTIANA, a post township of the United States, in Newcastle county, Delaware, on Christiana creek, 37 miles S. W. Philadelphia.

CHRISTIANA CREEK, a river of the United States, in Delaware, which unites with the Brandy-wine below Wilmington, and flows into the Delaware.

CHRISTIANIA, the capital or seat of government of Norway, is situated at the bottom of a gulf, in the province of Aggerhusus. The town, though not large, is the best built and most thriving place in the kingdom, having regular streets, neat stone houses (about 1500 in number), and about 9000 inhabitants. The public buildings are the great military hospital, erected in 1806, of wood; the house of correction, the academy, the military school, and the two theatres. This town has an excellent harbour, and carries on a considerable trade. The principal manufactures are of coarse cloth and cordage. The chief exports are fish, tar, soap, vitriol, alum, iron, copper, and timber, chiefly to Britain, but also to France and Denmark: 250 miles W. Stockholm, 300 N. by W. Copenhagen. Long. 10. 43. 45. E. Lat. 59. 55. 20. N.

CHRISTIANOPOL, a fortified seaport of Sweden, in Bekingen, 36 miles S. W. Calmar.

CHRISTIANSTAD, a seaport of Norway, and capital of a government of the same name, containing 133,000 inhabitants. It is situated on the south coast. This place was founded by Christian IV. of Denmark, in 1641, with the view of making it the principal station of his navy. The houses are generally neat and well built, and the streets broad and straight. The most remarkable building is the cathedral. The town has one of the best sheltered harbours in Norway. The inhabitants, amounting to 5000, are principally employed in ship-building, and particularly in the repair of vessels forced, by the storms of the Cattegat, to take refuge here to refit. 220 miles N. W. Copenhagen. Long. 9. 3. 13. E. Lat. 59. 3. 5. N.

CHRISTIANSBURG, a township of the United States, and capital of Montgomery county, Virginia, 200 miles W. S. W. Richmond.

CHRISTIANS-ØE, a group of islands in the Baltic. Long. of the principal one, 14. 47. E. Lat. 55. 13. N.

CHRISTIANSTADT, a town of Sweden, 57 miles W. by S. Carlscrona. Population 2260. The province of this name contains 120,547 inhabitants.

CHRISTIANSTED, the principal town of Santa Cruz. Long. 63. 23. W. Lat. 17. 46. N.

CHRISTIANSTUND, a town on the east coast of Norway, 36 miles N. W. Drontheim. Population 1650.

CHRISTIANHAM, a thriving town of Sweden, province of Carlstadt, 16 miles E. Carlstadt. Population 2020.

CHRISTIANSTADT, a small seaport of Russian Finland. Long. 21. 9. E. Lat. 62. 16. N.

CHRISTMAS HARBOUR, a good and safe bay on the north coast of Kerguelen's Land.

CHRISTMAS ISLAND, an island in the Pacific ocean, 30 leagues in circumference. Long. 218. 33. E. Lat. 59. 57. N.

CHRISTMAS SOUND, a bay on the south coast of Terra del Fuogo. Long. of the entrance, 70. 10. W. Lat. 55. 27. S.

CHRISTOPHE, St., a town of France, 15 miles N. N. W. Tours. Population 2000.—The name of several other small towns.

CHRISTOPHER'S ST., an island in the West Indies, discovered in 1493 by Columbus. It is about 15 miles in length, and in general about 4 in breadth. About half of it only is fit for cultivation. It is, however, remarkably fertile, and produces the most abundant crops of sugar. In the year 1702 it was taken by a French armament, and restored to Great Britain at the peace of 1703, to whom it still belongs. It is separated from the small island of Nevis by a narrow channel. Population in 1794, 4000 whites, and 21,000 negroes; in 1805, the whites and people of colour amounted to 1998.

CHRISTOVAL, St., one of the five lakes at the bottom of the valley of Mexico, in the vicinity of that city.

CHRISTOVAL, St., a town of Brazil, province of Bahia, with a fine and well defended port. Population 500 housekeepers. Long. 37. 30. W. Lat. 12. 40. S.

CHUDIN, a well built town of Bohemia, on the Chudinka, capital of a circle of the same name. Houses 700. 50 miles E. Prague.

CHIVATYNSK, a town of European Russia, on the Volga, 350 miles S. E. St Petersburg. Population 700.

CHUCKWAN, a town of Hindostan, province of Bahar, 13 miles S. E. Bahar.

CHUCUITO, a province of Peru, bounded E. by the great lake of the same name, which is situated between the two Cordilleras of Peru, in the north-western part of the province of Los Charcos. Lat. from 13. 35. to 17. 20. S.

CHUDLEYCH, a parish and town of England, in Devonshire. Population 2053.

CHUDLEYCH, a parish and town of England, in Devonshire. Population 1806.

CHUMBIVILCAS, a province of Peru. Population 16,000.

CHUMBUL, a large river of Hindostan, which enters the Jumna, 26 miles below Etawah.

CHUNARGUN, a town and celebrated fortress of Hindostan, province of Allahabad, and district of Chunar, on the Gaages, in Lat. 25. 9. N. Long. 62. 54. E.

CHUPPARAH, a town of Hindostan, in Allahabad. Long. 60. 2. E. Lat. 22. 22. N.

CHUPRAH, a large town of Hindostan, province of Bahar, on the Ganges.

CHUQUISACA, a city of South America, and capital of the province of Los Charcas. The houses in the great square, and those adjoining to it, are of two stories, but in the remainder of the town only of one. They are covered with tiles, very roomy and convenient, with pleasant gardens planted with European fruits. The cathedral is large, and of good architecture, much ornamented with painting and gilding. There is another church, and five convents, all spacious buildings with splendid churches. Population, Spaniards and Indians, 14,000. Long. 66. 46. W. Lat. 19. 30. S.

CHURCH CREEK, a township of the United States, in Dorchester county, Maryland, at the head of Church creek, a branch of Hudson river, 7 miles S. W. Cambridge.

CHURCH HILL, a post village of the United States, in Queen Anne's county, Maryland, 8 miles N. E. Centreville.

CHURCH ISLAND, a small island in Currituck sound, near the coast of North Carolina. Long. 76. 8. W. Lat. 36. 22. N.

CHURCH STREETON, a parish and town of England, in Shropshire. Population 1220.

CHURCH TOWN, a post township of the United States, in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, 20 miles E. N. E. Lancaster, 50 W. N. W. Philadelphia.

CHURN, a river of England, in Gloucestershire, one of the four streams which unite to form the Thames.

CICACOLE, the capital of a district of the same name, in Bengal. Long. 83. 57. E. Lat. 18. 21. N.

CICARICA, a province of Peru. Population 50,000. The capital is of the same name.

CIERS LA LANDE, St. a town of France, in Guienne. Population 2300.

CIGLIANO, a thriving town of Piedmont, with 3100 inhabitants.

CILLEY, or ZILLI, a town of Austria, with 250 houses. 130 miles S. S. W. Vienna.

CINALOA, sometimes called CINOLLO, a province of Mexico, now forming part of the intendancy of Sonora.

CINALOA, a town of Mexico, in the above province, on a river of the same name, which falls into the gulf of California. Population 9500. Long. 100. 8. W. Lat. 25. 50. N.

CINCINNATI, a post township of the United States, and capital of Hamilton county, Ohio, near the south-west corner of the state, on the north bank of Ohio river, 20 miles above the mouth of the Great Miami. It is regularly laid out, in a pleasant and healthy situation, and is one of the most flourishing towns west of the Alleghany mountains. The growth of Cincinnati has been rapid, almost without a parallel. In 1800, the population was 500; in 1810, 2540; in 1815, it was estimated at 6500; and in 1820, it was 9732. In 1819, it contained a court-house, 3 brick market-houses, 4 printing-offices, a steam flour-mill, built of stone, 9 stories high, a steam saw-mill, 1 woollen, and 4 cotton-factories, 2 glass-houses, and several other manufacturing establishments; 4 banks, and a Lancasterian school, and 9 or 10 houses of public worship for different denominations. Cincinnati is the most flourishing commercial town between Pittsburg and New Orleans. 93 miles W. by S. Chillicothe.

CRISTIAN POULS, seaports of England, on the coast of Kent and Sussex, viz. Dover, Sandwich, Hith, and Romney, in Kent; and in Sussex, Rye, Winchelsea, Hastings, and Seaford. Their number, as the name imports, was originally five. These ports were anciently bound to furnish to the sovereign a certain number of ships of war in any emergency, in return for which their freemen were styled barons, and ranked among the nobility. Each of the ports sent two members to parliament, and enjoyed several other privileges and immunities.

CINTEGABELLE, a thriving town of France, 17 miles S. Toulouse. Population 3000.

CINTRA, or SINTRA, a large village of Portugal, in the province of Estremadura. Here was concluded (after the battle of Vimaira) the well known convention between Sir Hew Dalrymple and the French general Junot. Pop. 1900. 15 miles N. W. Lisbon.

CIOTAT, a trading town of France, in Provence, on the Mediterranean, with a good harbour. Pop. 5770. 12 miles S. E. Marseilles.

CIRCARS, NORTHERN, an extensive province of Hindostan, lying on the western side of the bay of Bengal, between the 15th and 20th degrees of N. Lat., but little more than one degree in breadth. The superficial contents of this country have been calculated at 17,000 geographical miles, nearly one-half of which is supposed to be capable of culture or pasture, and the remainder woods, water, barren hills, or a sandy waste, 3 miles broad, bordering the whole of the sea coast.

CIRCASSIA, a country of Asia, occupying a great part of the territory between the Black and the Caspian seas. It is situated on the northern declivity of that vast chain of mountains known under the appellation of Caucasus, and is bounded N. by the rivers Terak and Cuban. The limits, and even the name of this country, are very ill defined. This territory is filled with a multitude of small, independent, and hostile tribes, which it were difficult and tedious to enumerate. They have maintained their independence with surprising perseverance against that gigantic extension of the Russian power to which all the neighbouring states have yielded. They acknowledge, indeed, a species of vassalage; but they neither pay tribute nor perform military service; and they even indulge in regular plundering excursions into the Russian territories. Circassia is governed by a feudal aristocracy, almost precisely similar to that which existed in Europe during the 12th century. The ruler of each state is called a prince, who has under him a number of uzdens or nobles, who attend him in all expeditions for war and plunder, but in peace are nearly independent. The Circassians are distinguished in a remarkable degree by the elegance of their external appearance: the men are tall, and of an athletic, though slender form; their features are expressive, their air haughty and martial. The beauty of the females has been long celebrated throughout Europe; and Circassian captives are considered as the brightest ornaments of an eastern seraglio. The favourite employment of the Circassians consists in expeditions for war against the neighbouring tribes, or for plunder, into the Russian territory. At home their time is mostly employed in hunting and feasting. Their chief pride is placed in their arms and their horses.

CINCINNATI, a post township of the United States, capital of Pickaway county, Ohio, 19 miles N. Chillicothe.

CIRENCESTER, a market and borough town of England, in Gloucestershire, on the Churn. Of the three churches which once decorated this town, one only remains; but that is scarcely surpassed in magnificence by any structure of the same kind in the kingdom. Of the abbey, no ruins now remain, except an ancient gateway. The town contains meeting-houses of Independents, Baptists, Methodists, and Quakers. It has some manufactures of wool. It sends two members to parliament. Population 4987. 17 miles S. E. Gloucester.

CRIE, a town of Piedmont, on the Doria. Population 3470. 8 miles N. N. W. Turin.

CISTERNINO, a town of Naples, in the province of Bari. Population 3600.

CITADELLA, a town of the Venetian territory. Pop. 6000. 19 miles N. N. W. Padua.

CITTA NUOVA, a maritime town of Istria, 60 miles E. Venice.

CITTA VECCHIA, or MEDINA, of MALTA, a strong town of Malta, situated on a hill in the centre of the island. It was formerly the capital of the island.

CITTA VITTIMIOSA, a fortified town of Malta, situated on a narrow neck of land, to the left of La Valetta. It has a strong citadel. On each side a broad natural canal runs up into the land, and forms near the town an excellent harbour. The principal edifice is the arsenal. It is sometimes considered a suburb of La Valetta. Population 3000.

CIUDA DELLA, or JAMNA, a town of Minorca, on the north-west coast, about 30 miles from Port Mahon, with which it disputes the pre-eminence. The cathedral is a spacious and imposing edifice. Long. 3. 40. E. Lat. 39. 50. N.

CIUDAD, or CIUDAD RODRIGO, a fortified town of Spain, in Leon, on the Agueda. The streets are tolerably regular, and the public buildings numerous. On the Plaza Mayor, or principal square, are three Roman columns, with inscriptions. It was taken by the French in 1810, from whom it was taken by storm by the British in 1812. Population 10,000. 30 miles E. by N. Coimbra.

CIUDAD REAL, a town of Spain, in New Castile, the capital of the province of La Mancha. The streets are broad, straight, and well paved. The principal square is 150 paces long by 75 broad. It has been long noted for its manufacture of glove leather. Population 9000. 57 miles S. Toledo.

CIUDAD DEL FRIULI, a town in the Venetian territory. Population 4000.

CIVITA CASTELLANA, a small town of Italy, 24 miles N. Rome.

CIVITA VECCHIA, a seaport of the States of the Church, in a bay of the Mediterranean, with a good harbour, population 9000. 38 miles N. W. Rome.

CLACKMANNAN, a county of Scotland, is bounded S. E. by Fife, S. and S. W. by the river Forth, W. by Alva, an isolated district of Stirlingshire, and on every other quarter by the county of Perth. Its greatest length is 8 miles, its mean breadth 6, and its superficial area contains 48 square miles, or 30,720 English acres. The northern district is traversed by the Ochil hills from south-west to north-east. The principal rivers are the North and South Devon. The soil is fertile, many acres of rich carse-land having been recovered from the Forth by means of embankments. Coal is found in great abundance; also iron-stone. Clackmannan returns a member to parliament alternately with the county of Kinross. The principal towns are Alloa and Clackmannan. Population 13,263.

CLACKMANNAN, a town and parish of Scotland, county of the same name. Pop. 4056.

CLAUFENFURT, or KLAGENFURT, a town of the Austrian empire, the capital of the duchy of Carinthia, on the Glan. It is well built, and its streets are broad. It has several squares, two parish churches, besides three convents and an hospital. The other public establishments are the meeting-place of the states, the lyceum, the university founded in 1801, and the military orphan-house erected in 1707. Here are a few manufactures of fine cloth, silk, ribbons, and muslin. The French entered it in 1809, and demolished the fortifications. Population 10,000. 32 miles S. W. Vienna.

CLAIN, St., a county of the United States, in Illinois, on the Mississippi. Population in 1818, 4519. Chief town Cahokia.—2d, A township of Alleghany county, Pennsylvania. Population 3080.—3d, A township of Bedford county, Pennsylvania. Population 1847.

CLAIR, St., a river and lake of North America. The river is the channel of communication between Lakes Huron and Erie. The lake is of sufficient depth for ships of the largest burden.

CLAIRAC, a town of France, department of the Lot and Garonne, on the Lot. Population 6900.

CLAIRBORNE, a county of the United States, in Mississippi, on the Mississippi. Pop. in 1816, 3506. Slaves 1790. Chief town Port Gibson.—2d, In East Tennessee, on Clinch river. Population 4798. Slaves 327. Chief town Tazewell.

CLANIC, a town of France, department of the Nièvre. Population 6250. 18 miles S. Auxerre.

CLARE, a parish and town of England, county of Suffolk. The appearance of the town is extremely mean. The church, however, is handsome. Population 1487.

CLARE, a county of Ireland, in the province of Munster, about 47 miles long, and 32 broad. It is almost insulated, being separated by the river Shannon from the county of Limerick on the south-east, the Atlantic ocean encompasses it on the west, the bay of Galway bounds it on the north, and a portion of the counties of Galway and Tipperary joins it on the east. The surface of the country is mountainous, and the soil light, but extremely fertile in the vallies. Lead and iron ores have been discovered; and it abounds in inexhaustible stores of coal mines. Ennis is the capital. The principal river is the Shannon. It returns two members to the imperial parliament. Pop. 100,000.

CLARE, a decayed village of Ireland, in the county of Clare, 17 miles N. W. Limerick.

CLARE, a river of Ireland, which runs into the Corrib, 4 miles N. Galway.

CLAREMONT, a county of the United States, in Sumpter district, South Carolina. Chief town Statesburg.—2d, A post township of Cheshire county, New Hampshire, on Connecticut river, opposite Windsor, Vermont, 11 miles N. Charlestown. Pop. 2094.

CLARENDON, a post township of the United States, in Rutland county, Vermont, 28 miles W. Windsor. Population 1798.

CLARK'S CREEK, a tributary of the Susquehanna, in the United States.—(RIVER), A tributary of the Ohio.

CLARK, a county of the United States, in Alabama, on the west side of the Tombigbee. Chief town Woodstown.—2d, In Kentucky. Population 11,519. Slaves 2934. Chief town Winchester.—3d, In Georgia, in the Western district, bounded N. W. by Jackson, S. W. by Apalachie river, and N. E. by the Oconee. Chief towns Athens and Watkinsville. Population 7628. Slaves 2594.—4th, In Ohio, formed in 1818, from Champaign and Green counties. Chief town Springfield. Population in 1818, 8065.—5th, In Indiana, on the Ohio. Population in 1815, 7000. Chief town Charleston.—6th, In Illinois, bordering on Indiana.

CLARKE'S FORK, a river of North America, so called by captain Clarke. It falls into the Yellow Stone river, in Lat. 45. 35. N.

CLARKESBURG, a post township of the United States, and capital of Harrison county, Virginia, on the east side of the Monongahela, 40 miles W. Morgantown.

CLARKSTOWN, a post township of the United States, and capital of Rockland county, New York, on the Hudson, 38 miles above New York. Population 1996.

CLARKSVILLE, a post township of the United States, and capital of Montgomery county, Tennessee, on the north side of Cumberland river, 30 miles below Nashville. Long. 88. 37. W. Lat. 36. 25. N.

CLARTHY, a small river of Wales, in Carmarthenshire, which joins the Clarwen.

CLATSOP, a nation of Indians, who reside near the shores of the Pacific ocean, on the Columbia river.

CLATT, a village and parish of Scotland, in the county of Aberdeen. Population 551.

CLAUDE, ST., a town of France, department of the Jura. Population 3000.

CLAUDE, ST., a town of France, department of the Charente. Population 2000.

CLAVELACK, a township of the United States, in Columbia county, New York, 3 miles E. Hudson. Population 3593.

CLAUSENBURG, the capital of Transylvania, and of the county of the same name, on the Little Szamos. It contains a handsome public square, and several elegant streets, churches, and private houses. The gardens and public walks are also elegant. It is divided into Old and New, and is inclosed by a wall and ditch. Population 14,522. 145 miles N. N. E. Belgrade.

CLAUSTHAL, a large open town of Hanover, in the Upper Hartz, close by Zellerfeld. The public buildings are a mine-office, two churches, a public school, and an orphan house. Population 8000.

CLAY, a parish and town of England, in Norfolk. Population 742.

CLAY, a county of the United States, in Kentucky. Population 2393. Slaves 141. Chief town Manchester.

CLAYTON, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 3609.

CLAYTON-LE-MOOR, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 1863.

CLARE, CAPT, a cape of Ireland, at the most southern extremity of the island of Clare or Clear. Long. 9. 24. W. Lat. 51. 10. N.

CLAREFIELD, a county of the United States, in the central part of Pennsylvania, on a creek which runs into the west branch of the Susquehanna. Population 675.

CLECY, a town of Normandy, department of Calvados. Population 2290.

CLEDAGH, the name of several small streams in Wales.

CLECYMONT, a town of France, department of the Morbihan. Population 4060.

CLEOSURY, a parish and town of England, in Shropshire, on the Teme. Population 1002.

CLERKE'S ISLAND, an island in the North Pacific ocean. Long. 190. 30. E. Lat. 63. 15. N.

CLERKE'S RIVER, a large river of North America, which falls into the Columbia in about the 40th deg. of N. lat.

CLEMONT, a town of France, in the department of the Puy de Dome, situated between two small rivers. It has rather a gloomy appearance. The cathedral, which stands in the centre of the town, is one of the finest in France, though in an imperfect state. The college is a beautiful edifice, and contains a small public library. There is also a cabinet of natural history, a botanical garden, a neat theatre, and several hospitals. There are four public squares, the largest of which serves as a market-place. In one of them is an elegant obelisk, erected by the town to the memory of General Demix, who was born in the neighbourhood. Its trade is considerable, and it has manufactures of paper, hats, leather, pottery, linen, serge, matreans, druggets, and other woollen stuffs. 76 miles W. Lyons.—The name of several other small towns in France.

CLERMONT, a county of the United States, in the south-west part of Ohio, on Ohio river. Population in 1815, 12,340. Chief town Williamsburg.

CLERMONT, a township of the United States, in Columbia county, New York, on the Hudson, 15 miles below Hudson, 45 below Albany. Population 1690.

CLERMONT EN ANGOISSE, a town of France, in Champagne. Population 1600.

CLERMONT EN BEAUVAISIS, a town of France, department of the Oise. Pop. 2100.

CLEVELAND, a post township of the United States, and capital of Cuyahoga county, Ohio, at the mouth of Cuyahoga river, on Lake Erie, 54 miles N. W. Warren.

CLERMONT LODÈVE, a town of France, 12 miles W. Montpellier. Population 5430.

CLEVES, a duchy of Westphalia, on the frontier of Holland, belonging to the king of Prussia, and forming part of the grand duchy of the Lower Rhine. It is about 40 miles in length, and from 10 to 12 in breadth. It contains 880 square miles, with 123,000 inhabitants.

CLEVES, the capital of the foregoing duchy, about 2½ miles from the Rhine. It is neatly built in the Dutch style, and surrounded with walls, but not strongly fortified. Population 5000. 12 miles S. E. Nimwegen.

CLIFTON, a small village of Scotland, in the county of Perth, near Tyndrum.

CLIFTON, a parish and village of England, in Gloucestershire. Population 6311.

CLIFTON, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 603.

CLIFTON, a hamlet of England, in Westmoreland, 2½ miles S. Penrith.

CLIFTON, a village of England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire.

CLINCH, a branch of the Tennessee river, in the United States, which joins the Tennessee, 35 miles below Knoxville.

CLINTON, a county of the United States, in the north-east part of New York, bounded N. by Canada, E. by Lake Champlain, S. by Essex county, and W. by Franklin county. Population 8032. Chief town Plattsburg.—2d, A post township in Dutchess county, New York, on Hudson river, below Hudson. Population 5494. It contains 3 post villages, Staatsberg, Pleasant Valley, and Hyde-park, and 8 houses of public worship, 3 for Quakers, 2 for Presbyterians, 1 for Dutch Reformed, 1 for Baptists, 1 for Episcopalians; and has many manufactures.—3d, A post village of Oneida county, New York, in the north part of the township of Paris, pleasantly situated on Oriskany creek, 9 miles W. S. W. Utica, 109 W. N. W. Albany. Hamilton college, near this village, was incorporated in 1812, and has been liberally patronized by the legislature and by individuals. It has a president, and 3 professors, viz. 1 of languages, 1 of mathematics and natural philosophy, and 1 of chemistry; 3 tutors, and a library of about 2000 volumes. The number of students is fast increasing, and in 1820 the trustees petitioned the legislature for a grant to enable them to erect a new building for their accommodation, and for assistance in completing the chemical and philosophical apparatus.—4th, Of Kennebeck county, Maine, 26 miles N. Augusta. Population 1050.—5th, A county of Ohio, between Warren and Fayette counties. Population in 1815, 4600. Chief town Wilmington.

CLITHERO, a town of England, in Lancashire, on the Ribble. It sends two members to parliament. Population 3213. 217 miles N. W. London.

CLIVEGIR, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 1314.

CLOCHER, an ancient city of Ireland, now a straggling village. It is a bishop's see. 70 miles N. N. W. Dublin.

CLONAKILTY, a town of Ireland, county of Cork, situated in a bay of the Atlantic, called Clonakilty bay. It has a good market for yarn. 20 miles S. W. Cork.

CLONAR, a village of Ireland, county of Meath, 11 miles S. S. W. Trim.

CLONES, a town of Ireland, county of Monaghan, 19 miles S. W. Monaghan.

CLONFERT, a city or village of Ireland, county of Galway, 36 miles E. Galway.

CLONMELL, a town of Ireland, county of Tipperary, pleasantly situated on the river Suir, which is navigable to Waterford, with which county it is also connected by a bridge consisting of 20 arches. It consists of four cross streets, regularly built, and carries on a considerable trade, particularly in the woollen manufactures. Its public buildings are of stone, and are well built. The town is ancient, and was formerly defended by a very strong wall, which was destroyed by Oliver Cromwell. It sends one member to the imperial parliament. 22 miles W. N. W. Waterford.

CLONNIGES, a town of Ireland, 15 miles S. W. Wexford.

CLONTARF, a village of Ireland, about 2½ miles N. E. from the castle of Dublin.

CLOSTER-SEVEN, or ZEVEN, a small town of the duchy of Bremen, on the Aue, 24 miles N. N. E. Bremen.

CLOREN, a large village of Switzerland, 6 miles N. N. E. Zurich.

CLOUD, St. a town of France, in the province of the Isle of France, situated on the Seine. It has 1500 inhabitants, with a palace, one of the most beautiful in Paris or its neighbourhood.

CLOYNE, a small town of Ireland, county of Cork, 12 miles E. Cork.

CLUDEN, or CAIRN, a river of Scotland, in Dumfriesshire, which joins the Nith.

CLUNY, a river of Scotland, county of Aberdeen, which falls into the Dee.

CLUNY, a town of France, department of the Saône and Loire, 46 miles N. N. W. Lyons. Population 4200.

CLUSE, LA, a town of Savoy, 23 miles S. E. Geneva.

CLUSONE, a town of Lombardy, 18 miles N. E. Bergamo. Population 3000.

CLYDD, a river of North Wales, in Denbighshire, which falls into the Irish sea, about 6 miles below St Asaph.

CLYDE, one of the largest rivers of Scotland, which has its rise in the southern part of Lanarkshire, and forms an arm of the sea, called the frith of Clyde, near the castle of Dumbarton. It becomes navigable at the city of Glasgow; and its whole course, in a direct line, is less than 60 miles, but following its windings, it is upwards of 70. This river is celebrated for several romantic falls.

COA, a river of Portugal, province of Tras los Montes, which falls into the Duero.

COALEY, a parish and town of England, in Gloucestershire. Population 1117.

COAXOO, a great river of Western Africa, and one of the chief tributaries to the Congo.

COANZA, a large river of Congo, in Western Africa.

COAST CASTLE CAPE, or CABO CORSO, the capital of the British settlements on the Gold coast of Africa. The fort has 10 pieces of cannon. The town is irregular and dirty; the houses are built of clay, mostly in a square form. Population 8000. Long. 22. W. Lat. 5. 18. N.

COBUR, the principal town of the country of Darfur, in Central Africa. Long. 28. E. Lat. 14. 11. N.

COCHESSECONTE, a river of the United States, in Kennebec county, Maine, is formed of two branches, which unite in Gardiner, and fall into the Kennebec.

COBELSKILL, a post township of the United States, in Schoharie county, New York, on Cobus creek, 7 miles W. Schoharie, 35 from Albany. Population 2494.

COBER, a small river of England, in Cornwall, which falls into the English Channel.

COBHAM, a township of the United States, in Surrey county, Virginia, on the south bank of James river, opposite Jamestown, 8 or 9 miles S. W. Williamsburg.

COBLENTZ, a town of the Prussian states, the capital of the grand duchy of the Lower Rhine, at the conflux of the Rhine and Moselle, opposite the fortress of Ehrenbreitstein. The bridge across the latter river is of freestone, but that over the Rhine is of boats. The town is well built, the streets being regular, the houses of stone, and the public buildings handsome. The chief of these is the magnificent palace erected in 1779, for the residence of the elector of Treves. The two handsome quays on the Rhine and the Moselle are used as public promenades. Population 19,500, including the suburbs. 36 miles N. W. Mentz.

COBURG, the capital of a principality of the same name, in Germany, on the river Itz, or Elz. It has a castle. The market-place is in the square, and contains the government offices and town-house. Here is a celebrated academy, founded in 1597. The inhabitants carry on some traffic in wool. Population 7000. 100 miles E. N. E. Frankfurt on the Maine.

COCHABAMBA, a province of Peru. Population 70,000.

COCHIN, or KOCHIN, a town of the Prussian states, on the Moselle. Pop. 1600.

COCHIN, a seaport, and principal town of the province of Cochin, which is on the western side of the peninsula intersected by the 10th degree of N. lat. The town, which is fortified, stands on an island at the mouth of the Cali Coylang river. The form of the city is nearly semicircular, and is about a mile and a half in circumference. The streets are wide and commodious. The principal buildings are the church, the governor's house, the barracks, and a public hotel. The trade carried on at this place is still extensive; and ships are built here, as well as in any part of Europe. It was taken by the English in 1795. Long. 76. 8. E. Lat. 9. 53. N.

COCHIN-CHINA, a country situated in the south-east of Asia, forming part of the peninsula between China and Hindostan. It extends upwards of 400 miles along the sea of China, and has for its inland boundaries Tunquin, Siam, Cambodia, and Taloumpa. It consists of a long plain or stripe, included between the sea coast and a chain of mountains running parallel to, and often approaching within a short distance of it. This plain is of most exuberant fertility, producing copiously all the tropical productions, but more peculiarly rice and sugar. The forests are also very fine, and produce a variety of aromatic woods. The coast abounds with gelatinous animal substances, as sharks' fins, beech de mer, and a peculiar species of birds' nests, which are eagerly sought for in China. A species of cinnamon is also produced, which, though much coarser than that of Ceylon, is preferred to it by the Chinese. A considerable quantity of gold is brought down from the mountains, or collected in the sands of the rivers; and silver also of late has become plentiful. The wet season occurs in the months of September, October, and November. At this time the rivers overflow, and a great part of the plain is inundated. In the three following months a cold north wind blows, accompanied with more moderate rains. The trade of this country is principally with China.

COCKBURN-PATH, a village and parish of Scotland, in Berwickshire. Population 360.

COCKE, a county of the United States, in East Tennessee, on the south side of French Broad river. Population 544. Slaves 436. Chief town Newport.

COCKENZIE, a maritime village of Haddingtonshire, Scotland, 14 mile N. E. Prestonpans.

COCKE, a river of England, in Cumberland, which joins the Derwent at Cockermouth.

COCKERMOUTH, a town of England, in Cumberland, at the confluence of the Cocke and Derwent. It is divided into two parts.

by the Cocker, over which there is a bridge of one arch. The streets, though spacious, are irregular; yet many of the houses are neatly built. The castle, of which the ruins are still to be seen, seems to have been a place of great strength. It sends two members to parliament. There are several excellent schools, and a dispensary for indigent patients. The principal articles of manufacture here are hats, coarse woollen cloths, shalloons, checks, coarse linens, and leather. Pop. 3799. 306 miles N. N. W. London.

COCOS ISLANDS, two small islands near the west coast of Sumatra. Long. 95. 50. E. Lat. 2. 58. N.—The name of several small islands in the Pacific and Indian oceans.

COE, CAE, a cape of North America, on the north side of Boston bay. Long. 70. 10. W. Lat. 42. 4. N.

CODBECK, a small river of England, in the North Riding of Yorkshire.

CODOGNO, a neat town of Lombardy, near the conflux of the Adda and Po. Pop. 8000.

CODORUS, a township of the United States, in York county, Pennsylvania, on the Codorus. Population 1975.

CODORUS CREEK, a tributary of the Susquehanna, in Pennsylvania.

CODRORIO, a town of Italy, in Friuli, on the Stella, 10 miles S. S. W. Udina.

COE, a river of Scotland, in Argyllshire, which falls into Loch Leven.

COEVEDER, a fortified town of the Netherlands, on the Aa. Population 1530.

COEYMANE, a post township of the United States, in Albany county, New York, on the Hudson, 11 miles below Albany. Pop. 3574.

COGGESHALL, a parish and town of England, in Essex, on the Blackwater. Pop. 2896.

COGNAC, a town of France, department of the Charente, on the Charente. Pop. 2850.

COHANZY, or CANAREA CREEK, a river of the United States, in New Jersey, which joins Delaware river, opposite Bombay Hook.

COHASSET, a seaport and post township of the United States, in Norfolk county, Massachusetts, 25 miles E. Dedham, 25 S. E. Boston. Population 994.—Cohasset rocks, which have been fatal to many vessels, lie off this place, three miles from the shore.

COMBERTON, the capital of a district of the same name in the south of India, situated between the 10th and 12th degrees of N. lat. It is defended by a citadel or small fort, and contains a handsome mosque, built by Tippoo Sultan, and about 2000 houses, with barracks for a regiment of cavalry. Along with the district it came into possession of the British in the year 1799. Long. 77. 6. E. Lat. 14. 5. N.

COMBRA, an ancient city of Portugal, the capital of the province of Beira, on the Mondego, which is here crossed by an elegant stone bridge, with a double row of arches. In the interior it is narrow, ill-paved, dirty, and very steep. It is the see of a bishop; and has, exclusive of the cathedral, eight parish churches, a like number of convents, and a famous university, founded originally at Lisbon in 1390, but transferred hither in 1300, and now the only establishment of the kind in Portugal. The ancient walls and towers still remain, and form its only defence. It suffered considerable damage from the earthquake which destroyed Lisbon in 1755. 60 miles S. S. E. Oporto.

COIRE, a well built town of Switzerland, the capital of the canton of the Grisons, on the Plessur, a tributary of the Rhine, 55 miles S. Coustance. Population 2500.

COKALAHISKIT, a river of North America, which enters Clark's river, a branch of the Columbia, in Long. 113. W. Lat. about 47. N.

COL DI TENNA, a well known passage of the Alps, between Piedmont and Nice, 5800 feet above the level of the sea.

COLAPOOR, a small independent Mahratta state, on the western coast of India, between the 15th and 17th degrees of N. lat. Its capital, of the same name, is in Long. 74. 40. E. Lat. 15. 40. N.

COLAR, a town and fortress of India, in Mysore. Long. 78. 19. E. Lat. 13. 8. N.

COLBERG, a seaport of the Prussian states, in Farther Pomerania, with a harbour in the Baltic. The chief edifices are the town-house and the large cathedral. The aqueduct which supplies the town with water is an ingenious structure. Population 3000. 98 miles N. N. E. Custring.

COLCHAGUA, a province of Chili. Population 15,000.

COLCHESTER, a town of England, in Essex, on the Colne, which is crossed by three bridges. It has been encircled by walls, still partly standing, though greatly decayed; and contains a castle, which was a place of great strength, now converted into a house of correction. Colchester contains 12 parish churches. St Peter's is considered the chief, and it has lately been enlarged and beautified. It existed previous to the Norman conquest, and in the reign of Edward the Confessor, was held by two priests for a small quit rent. Excepting St Peter's, St James's, and St Mary's, which are spacious and handsome within, the churches are of indifferent architecture. There are various charitable foundations, for benevolent purposes and for education. Here is a town jail, a custom-house, and barracks; also a commodious theatre. The principal manufacture consists of woollen cloths, particularly baize. Oysters, dredged from the Colne, are carried as an article of traffic to London, where they are highly esteemed. Several large vessels have been built here. There is a fine quay on the river, which has been rendered navigable. Vessels of 100 tons or more can come up to it; and Colchester is considered a port, though 8 or 9 miles from the nearest sea. There are two weekly markets, and three annual fairs; and also an annual fair for wool. Colchester returns two members to parliament. The number of the electors is 1500. Colchester is a place of antiquity; and ancient remains are frequently dug out from it. Population 14,016. 18 miles S. S. W. Ipswich, 51 N. E. London.

COLCHESTER, a township of the United States, in Chittenden county, Vermont, on Lake Champlain, at the mouth of Onion river, 5 miles N. Burlington. Population 657.—2d, A post township of New London county, Connecticut, 15 miles W. Norwich, 25 S. E. Hartford. Population 2697. Bacon academy, in this town, was founded in 1801.—3d, A post township of Delaware county, New York, 21 miles S. Delhi. Population 865.—4th, A township of Fairfax county, Virginia, on Occoquan creek, 4 miles above its confluence with the Potomac, 16 S. W. Alexandria, 106 N. Richmond. The creek is navigable to this place for boats.

COLDING, or KOLDINGEN, a small trading town of the Danish states, in Jutland, 65 miles N. N. W. Sleswick. Long. 9. 29. E. Lat. 55. 30. N.

COLDINGHAM, a town and parish of Scotland, in Berwickshire. Population 2675.

COLBITZ, a town of Saxony, 36 miles W. Dresden. Population 1600.

COLDESTREE, a town and parish of Scotland, county of Berwick. Population 2501.

COLERNOOK DALE, a village of England, in Shropshire, on the Severn, noted for its iron works, and for the magnificent cast iron bridge which was thrown over the Severn here, in 1790. 143 miles N. W. London.

COLERNOOK, a township of the United States, in Litchfield county, Connecticut. Population 1243.

COLERAINE, a town of Ireland, county of Londonderry, agreeably situated on both sides of the river Lann, about four miles from the sea. Here is one of the most extensive salmon fisheries in the island. The town is of tolerable size, is neatly built, and has barracks to accommodate three companies of foot. It sends one member to the Imperial parliament. 25 miles E. N. E. Londonderry.

COLERAINE, a post township of the United States, in Franklin county, Massachusetts, 5 miles N. W. Greenfield. Population 2016.—2d, A township in Hamilton county, Ohio, on Miami river, 15 miles above its junction with the Ohio. Population 1053.

COLESHILL, a parish and town of England, in Warwickshire, situated near the river Cole. The houses are in general respectable in appearance; and some of the modern buildings are large and elegant. The church is a beautiful specimen of the decorated Gothic style. Pop. 1700. 104 miles E. Birmingham.

COLFORD, a town of England, in Gloucestershire. Population 1804.

COLGONG, a town of Hindostan, province of Bahar. Long. 87. 10. E. Lat. 26. 18. N.

COLIGNY, a town of France, department of the Ain. Population 1700.

COLIMA, a small town of Mexico, intendancy of Guadalajara, 450 miles W. Mexico.

COLMAN, a town of Bohemia, on the Elbe, with 490 houses and a castle.

COLINDA, a town of Bengal, district of Tipperah. Long. 91. 4. E. Lat. 22. 58. N.

COLINABURGH, a village of Scotland, county of Fife, 2 miles N. of the Ely.

COLL, or COLLA, one of the Hebrides of Scotland, annexed to the county of Argyll, about 14 miles long, and from 34 to half a mile in breadth. Population 1364.

COLLACE, a village and parish of Scotland, county of Perth. Population 691.

COLLAHUAS, a province of Peru, 53 leagues long, and 16 wide.

COLLARUS, a town of Hindostan, province of Agra. Long. 77. 42. E. Lat. 25. 18. N.

COLLEBA, a town of Saxony, on the Unstrut, with 400 houses.

COLLEGAL PETTAN, a town of the south of India, province of Coimbatore. Houses 600.

COLLESSIE, a village and parish of Scotland, county of Fife. Population 1630.

COLLETON, a district of the United States, in South Carolina. Population 26,359. Slaves 21,558. Chief town Dorchester, or Parker's Ferry.

COLLIOURE, a strong town of France, on the Mediterranean, 15 miles S. E. Perpignan. Population 3000.

COLLUMPTON, a town of England, in Devonshire, on the Cubne. It consists chiefly of one long street. The church is a respectable Gothic structure. Population 3410. 11 miles N. Exeter.

COLMA, a town of France, formerly the capital of Upper Alsace, and now of the department of the Upper Rhine, on the Pecht and Laucht. It contains a great public school, an hospital, an arsenal, and very agreeable public walks. Here are some manufactures of cotton, as well as of linen and woollen. 34 miles S. S. W. Strasburg.

COLMENAR DE OREJO, a large town of Spain, in Toledo, 21 miles N. W. Talavera de la Reyna.

COLMENAR VIEJO, a town of Spain, in New Castile, 28 miles N. Madrid. Pop. 4000.

COLMOWELL, a village and parish of Scotland, county of Ayr. Pop. of the parish 1980.

COLN, a river of England, in Hertfordshire, which falls into the Thames at Staines.—Also of Essex, which, passing Colchester, expands into an estuary near that town.

COLNA, a town of Bengal, district of Jessore, on the Muddumuty. Long. 89. 38. E. Lat. 23. 11. N.

COLNBROOK, a town of England, in Buckinghamshire, 17 miles W. London.

COLNE, one of the head streams which unite to form the Thames in England.

COLNE, a town of England, in Lancashire. It has manufactures of cotton goods, chiefly calicoes and dimities. Population 7374. 518 miles N. N. W. London.

COLOENA, a thriving town of the Venetian territory, 20 miles S. S. E. Vicenza. Population 6200.

COLOREZ, an ancient and celebrated town, capital of the electorate of this name, situated on the Rhine. It is built in the form of a crescent, close to the river. The walls have a number of towers, and form a circuit of nearly 7 English miles; but a part of the included space is laid out in promenades, gardens, and vineyards. The streets are in general narrow, winding, and gloomy, and the houses ill built. The only public edifices deserving attention are the churches. The cathedral or minister of St Peter is a vast and imposing edifice, but is not completed; it is of Gothic architecture, and was begun about the year 1248. The church of St Mary is remarkable for its antiquity, and that of St Gestian for a subterranean church under its choir. The town-house is a handsome building; and in the arsenal are shewn many curious specimens of ancient armour. A modern bridge of boats connects Cologne with the opposite town of Deutz. There are 9 collegiate churches, 2 abbeyes, 2 establishments for noble ladies, an archiepiscopal seminary, 19 parish churches, 17 monasteries, 39 nunneries, commanderies of the Teutonic and Maltese orders, and 49 chapels. The university was established so far back as 1388: the French suppressed it, and erected in its place a central school or lyceum. Cologne has long been noted for its commerce. The principal objects of export are wine, timber, earthenware, slates, and other minerals, hard-ware, fire-arms, and various kitchen utensils. The principal articles manufactured in Cologne are linen, woollen, and silk stuffs, with lace, thread, and the famous eau de Cologne. Pop. 39,000. 20 miles S. E. of Dusseldorf. Long. 6. 56. 15. E. Lat. 50. 55. 21. N.

COLOMBE, St, the name of several inconsiderable towns in France.

COLOMBIE, a township of the United States, in Albany county, New York, on the west side of the Hudson, 1 mile above Albany. Population 1400.

COLONNA CAPE, on the east coast of Calabria. Long. 17. 29. E. Lat. 39. 6. N.

COLONNA CAPE, the south-east point of the province of Iivadia, in Greece.

COLONSAY and ORONSAY, two of the smaller Hebrides of Scotland. Population 904.

COLORADO, a river of Mexico, about 1000 miles long. It enters the gulf of California at its head, in the 33d degree of N. lat.

COLOSOS, an island of Greece, near Athens, in the gulf of Egeia. Population 1000. Long. 23. 36. E. Lat. 38. N.

COLUMB, St MAJOR, a parish and town of England, in Cornwall. Population 2493.

COLUMBIA, a county of the United States, in New York, on the E. side of the Hudson; bounded N. by Rensselaer county, E. by Massachusetts, S. by Dutchess county, W. by the Hudson. Population 33,370. Chief town Hudson.

COLUMBIA, a county of the United States, in Georgia, on Savannah river. Population 11,412. Slaves 5980. Chief town Applington.

COMARCA, DISTRICT OF, a tract of country, 10 miles square, on both sides of Potamac river, 130 miles from its mouth. It was ceded to the United States, by Maryland and Virginia, in 1790, and in 1800 became the seat of the general government. It is under the immediate government of Congress. Pop. 24,028. Slaves 5395. The principal towns are Washington city, Alexandria, and Georgetown.

COLUMBIA, a post township of the United States, in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania.

COLUMBIA, a post town of the United States, in Fluvanna county, Virginia.

COLUMBIA, a post town of the United States, in Richland district, South Carolina, and capital of the state, at the confluence of Broad and Saluda rivers, which unite to form the Congaree, 113 miles N. N. W. of Charleston. It is regularly laid out on an elevated plain, and contains a state-house, court-house and jail, and 4 houses for public worship. It has a well conducted college.

COLUMBIA RIVER, a large river of North America, which, we are informed by Mackenzie, rises in the Rocky mountains, in about 54. 23. N. lat. and 121. W. long. from Greenwich, and falls into the Pacific ocean, in 46. 10. N. lat. and 122. 45. W. long.

COLUMBIANA, a county of the United States, in Ohio, on the Ohio river, which separates it from Pennsylvania. Population in 1815, 13,625. Chief town New Lisbon.

COLUMBO, the capital of a district of the same name, and of the island of Ceylon; also the seat of the British government in that island. The houses are regularly built, though few of them are above one story high. Population above 50,000. For six months of the year, this side of the island is subject to extremely heavy rains, which render it very unhealthy. Long. 70. 50. E. Lat. 7. 4. N.

COLUMBUS, a county of the United States, in North Carolina. Population 3022. Slaves 703. Chief town Whitesville. At the court-house, a post-office is kept.—2d, A post township in Franklin county, Ohio, and capital of the state, 45 miles N. Chillicothe. Pop. 1500.

COLUMBLAAT, a Dutch village in the province of Zealand, with 1300 inhabitants.

COLWTON, a parish and market town of England, in Devonshire. Population 1845.

COMAYAGUA, or VALLADOLIN, the capital city of the province of Honduras. Long. 87. 51. W. Lat. 14. 10. N.

COMB MARTIN, a town of England, in Devonshire. Population 1023.

COMBERMERE, a lake in Cheshire, England.

COMBOURS, a town of Brittany, department of the Ille and Vilaine. Pop. 1800.

COMINES, a town in French Flanders, on the river Lys. Pop. 2200. 8 miles N. Lille.

COMMECEY, a neat town of France, in Lorraine, on the Maese. Population 3700.

COMMEWENA, a river of Guiana, which falls into the Surinam, 10 miles from its mouth.

COMORRO ISLANDS, a group in the Indian sea, between Madagascar and Africa.

COMO, an old town of Upper Italy, at the extremity of the lake of the same name. The houses are neatly built of stone, and the public buildings magnificent. There are 12 churches, exclusive of the cathedral, which is entirely of white marble. In Compo are manufactured velvet, taffetas, gloves, stockings, and other silk stuffs; here are also metal foundries and statuary. Pop. 14,700. 20 miles N. Mban. Long. 9. 4. 45. E. Lat. 45. 43. 10. N.

COMO, LASOBI, a lake of Italy, in Lombardy. Length 36 miles, breadth from 1 to 4.

COMORIN, Cape, the S. extremity of the Indian continent. Long. 77. 35. E. Lat. 7. 57. N.

COMORN, a town and celebrated fortress of Lower Hungary, in the county of the same name. The citadel is accounted the strongest in Europe. The inhabitants carry on a considerable traffic in corn, flax, wine, fish, and honey. Pop. 9000. 38 miles S. E. Presburg. Long. 16. 7. 50. E. Lat. 47. 45. 34. N.

COMPIEGNE, a town of France, department of the Oise, on the Oise. Population 1290.

COMPOSTELLA, or ST JAGO DE COMPOSTELLA, a town of Spain, capital of Galicia, on the Soria. The principal church is the cathedral. It has a university, founded in 1532. Pop. 12,000. 98 miles W. Astorga.

COMPOSTELLA, a rich town in Mexico, intendancy of Guadalupe, 400 miles N. W. Mexico. Long. 104. 40. W. Lat. 21. 10. N.

COMPTON, a township of Lower Canada. Population 700.

COMRIK, a village and parish of Scotland, in Perthshire. Population 2614.

CONAN, a river of Scotland, county of Ross, which falls into Cromarty frith.

CONCAN, an extensive district of Southern India, province of Bejapore, between the 16th and 19th degrees of N. Lat.; bounded E. by the Western Ghauts, and W. by the sea. Length 200 miles; breadth about 40.

CONCARNEAU, a small seaport of France, department of Finisterre. Pop. 2200.

CONCEPCAO, a village of Brazil, province of Rio Grande. Population 2000.

CONCEPTION, LA, a town of Chili, in the province of Puchacay. It is the second in the kingdom. At its commencement it flourished greatly, from the vast quantities of gold that were dug in its vicinity; but was afterwards taken and burned by the Araucanians, from whose hostility, though it was afterwards rebuilt, it suffered much. In 1730 it was destroyed by an earthquake; and in 1791, this devoted city was again destroyed by an earthquake and an influx of the sea, which entirely covered it. A new city was then founded at the distance of a league from the old, in a beautiful plain called Mocha, upon the northern shore of the Biobio. Population 15,000. Long. 73. 8. W. Lat. 36. 48. 15. S.

CONCEPTION, LA, a town of Chili, in the province of Puchacay. It is the second in the kingdom. At its commencement it flourished greatly, from the vast quantities of gold that were dug in its vicinity; but was afterwards taken and burned by the Araucanians, from whose hostility, though it was afterwards rebuilt, it suffered much. In 1730 it was destroyed by an earthquake; and in 1791, this devoted city was again destroyed by an earthquake and an influx of the sea, which entirely covered it. A new city was then founded at the distance of a league from the old, in a beautiful plain called Mocha, upon the northern shore of the Biobio. Population 15,000. Long. 73. 8. W. Lat. 36. 48. 15. S.

CONCEPTION, LA, a town of Chili, in the province of Puchacay. It is the second in the kingdom. At its commencement it flourished greatly, from the vast quantities of gold that were dug in its vicinity; but was afterwards taken and burned by the Araucanians, from whose hostility, though it was afterwards rebuilt, it suffered much. In 1730 it was destroyed by an earthquake; and in 1791, this devoted city was again destroyed by an earthquake and an influx of the sea, which entirely covered it. A new city was then founded at the distance of a league from the old, in a beautiful plain called Mocha, upon the northern shore of the Biobio. Population 15,000. Long. 73. 8. W. Lat. 36. 48. 15. S.

CONCEPTION, LA, a town of Chili, in the province of Puchacay. It is the second in the kingdom. At its commencement it flourished greatly, from the vast quantities of gold that were dug in its vicinity; but was afterwards taken and burned by the Araucanians, from whose hostility, though it was afterwards rebuilt, it suffered much. In 1730 it was destroyed by an earthquake; and in 1791, this devoted city was again destroyed by an earthquake and an influx of the sea, which entirely covered it. A new city was then founded at the distance of a league from the old, in a beautiful plain called Mocha, upon the northern shore of the Biobio. Population 15,000. Long. 73. 8. W. Lat. 36. 48. 15. S.

CONCEPTION, LA, a town of Chili, in the province of Puchacay. It is the second in the kingdom. At its commencement it flourished greatly, from the vast quantities of gold that were dug in its vicinity; but was afterwards taken and burned by the Araucanians, from whose hostility, though it was afterwards rebuilt, it suffered much. In 1730 it was destroyed by an earthquake; and in 1791, this devoted city was again destroyed by an earthquake and an influx of the sea, which entirely covered it. A new city was then founded at the distance of a league from the old, in a beautiful plain called Mocha, upon the northern shore of the Biobio. Population 15,000. Long. 73. 8. W. Lat. 36. 48. 15. S.

CONCEPTION, LA, a town of Chili, in the province of Puchacay. It is the second in the kingdom. At its commencement it flourished greatly, from the vast quantities of gold that were dug in its vicinity; but was afterwards taken and burned by the Araucanians, from whose hostility, though it was afterwards rebuilt, it suffered much. In 1730 it was destroyed by an earthquake; and in 1791, this devoted city was again destroyed by an earthquake and an influx of the sea, which entirely covered it. A new city was then founded at the distance of a league from the old, in a beautiful plain called Mocha, upon the northern shore of the Biobio. Population 15,000. Long. 73. 8. W. Lat. 36. 48. 15. S.

CONCEPTION, LA, a town of Chili, in the province of Puchacay. It is the second in the kingdom. At its commencement it flourished greatly, from the vast quantities of gold that were dug in its vicinity; but was afterwards taken and burned by the Araucanians, from whose hostility, though it was afterwards rebuilt, it suffered much. In 1730 it was destroyed by an earthquake; and in 1791, this devoted city was again destroyed by an earthquake and an influx of the sea, which entirely covered it. A new city was then founded at the distance of a league from the old, in a beautiful plain called Mocha, upon the northern shore of the Biobio. Population 15,000. Long. 73. 8. W. Lat. 36. 48. 15. S.

CONCEPTION, LA, a town of Chili, in the province of Puchacay. It is the second in the kingdom. At its commencement it flourished greatly, from the vast quantities of gold that were dug in its vicinity; but was afterwards taken and burned by the Araucanians, from whose hostility, though it was afterwards rebuilt, it suffered much. In 1730 it was destroyed by an earthquake; and in 1791, this devoted city was again destroyed by an earthquake and an influx of the sea, which entirely covered it. A new city was then founded at the distance of a league from the old, in a beautiful plain called Mocha, upon the northern shore of the Biobio. Population 15,000. Long. 73. 8. W. Lat. 36. 48. 15. S.

CONCEPTION, LA, a town of Chili, in the province of Puchacay. It is the second in the kingdom. At its commencement it flourished greatly, from the vast quantities of gold that were dug in its vicinity; but was afterwards taken and burned by the Araucanians, from whose hostility, though it was afterwards rebuilt, it suffered much. In 1730 it was destroyed by an earthquake; and in 1791, this devoted city was again destroyed by an earthquake and an influx of the sea, which entirely covered it. A new city was then founded at the distance of a league from the old, in a beautiful plain called Mocha, upon the northern shore of the Biobio. Population 15,000. Long. 73. 8. W. Lat. 36. 48. 15. S.

CONCEPTION, LA, a town of Chili, in the province of Puchacay. It is the second in the kingdom. At its commencement it flourished greatly, from the vast quantities of gold that were dug in its vicinity; but was afterwards taken and burned by the Araucanians, from whose hostility, though it was afterwards rebuilt, it suffered much. In 1730 it was destroyed by an earthquake; and in 1791, this devoted city was again destroyed by an earthquake and an influx of the sea, which entirely covered it. A new city was then founded at the distance of a league from the old, in a beautiful plain called Mocha, upon the northern shore of the Biobio. Population 15,000. Long. 73. 8. W. Lat. 36. 48. 15. S.

CONCEPTION, LA, a town of Chili, in the province of Puchacay. It is the second in the kingdom. At its commencement it flourished greatly, from the vast quantities of gold that were dug in its vicinity; but was afterwards taken and burned by the Araucanians, from whose hostility, though it was afterwards rebuilt, it suffered much. In 1730 it was destroyed by an earthquake; and in 1791, this devoted city was again destroyed by an earthquake and an influx of the sea, which entirely covered it. A new city was then founded at the distance of a league from the old, in a beautiful plain called Mocha, upon the northern shore of the Biobio. Population 15,000. Long. 73. 8. W. Lat. 36. 48. 15. S.

CONCEPTION, LA, a town of Chili, in the province of Puchacay. It is the second in the kingdom. At its commencement it flourished greatly, from the vast quantities of gold that were dug in its vicinity; but was afterwards taken and burned by the Araucanians, from whose hostility, though it was afterwards rebuilt, it suffered much. In 1730 it was destroyed by an earthquake; and in 1791, this devoted city was again destroyed by an earthquake and an influx of the sea, which entirely covered it. A new city was then founded at the distance of a league from the old, in a beautiful plain called Mocha, upon the northern shore of the Biobio. Population 15,000. Long. 73. 8. W. Lat. 36. 48. 15. S.

CONCEPTION, LA, a town of Chili, in the province of Puchacay. It is the second in the kingdom. At its commencement it flourished greatly, from the vast quantities of gold that were dug in its vicinity; but was afterwards taken and burned by the Araucanians, from whose hostility, though it was afterwards rebuilt, it suffered much. In 1730 it was destroyed by an earthquake; and in 1791, this devoted city was again destroyed by an earthquake and an influx of the sea, which entirely covered it. A new city was then founded at the distance of a league from the old, in a beautiful plain called Mocha, upon the northern shore of the Biobio. Population 15,000. Long. 73. 8. W. Lat. 36. 48. 15. S.

CONCEPTION, LA, a town of Chili, in the province of Puchacay. It is the second in the kingdom. At its commencement it flourished greatly, from the vast quantities of gold that were dug in its vicinity; but was afterwards taken and burned by the Araucanians, from whose hostility, though it was afterwards rebuilt, it suffered much. In 1730 it was destroyed by an earthquake; and in 1791, this devoted city was again destroyed by an earthquake and an influx of the sea, which entirely covered it. A new city was then founded at the distance of a league from the old, in a beautiful plain called Mocha, upon the northern shore of the Biobio. Population 15,000. Long. 73. 8. W. Lat. 36. 48. 15. S.

CONCEPTION, LA, a town of Chili, in the province of Puchacay. It is the second in the kingdom. At its commencement it flourished greatly, from the vast quantities of gold that were dug in its vicinity; but was afterwards taken and burned by the Araucanians, from whose hostility, though it was afterwards rebuilt, it suffered much. In 1730 it was destroyed by an earthquake; and in 1791, this devoted city was again destroyed by an earthquake and an influx of the sea, which entirely covered it. A new city was then founded at the distance of a league from the old, in a beautiful plain called Mocha, upon the northern shore of the Biobio. Population 15,000. Long. 73. 8. W. Lat. 36. 48. 15. S.

CONCEPTION, LA, a town of Chili, in the province of Puchacay. It is the second in the kingdom. At its commencement it flourished greatly, from the vast quantities of gold that were dug in its vicinity; but was afterwards taken and burned by the Araucanians, from whose hostility, though it was afterwards rebuilt, it suffered much. In 1730 it was destroyed by an earthquake; and in 1791, this devoted city was again destroyed by an earthquake and an influx of the sea, which entirely covered it. A new city was then founded at the distance of a league from the old, in a beautiful plain called Mocha, upon the northern shore of the Biobio. Population 15,000. Long. 73. 8. W. Lat. 36. 48. 15. S.

CONCEPTION, LA, a town of Chili, in the province of Puchacay. It is the second in the kingdom. At its commencement it flourished greatly, from the vast quantities of gold that were dug in its vicinity; but was afterwards taken and burned by the Araucanians, from whose hostility, though it was afterwards rebuilt, it suffered much. In 1730 it was destroyed by an earthquake; and in 1791, this devoted city was again destroyed by an earthquake and an influx of the sea, which entirely covered it. A new city was then founded at the distance of a league from the old, in a beautiful plain called Mocha, upon the northern shore of the Biobio. Population 15,000. Long. 73. 8. W. Lat. 36. 48. 15. S.

CONCEPTION, LA, a town of Chili, in the province of Puchacay. It is the second in the kingdom. At its commencement it flourished greatly, from the vast quantities of gold that were dug in its vicinity; but was afterwards taken and burned by the Araucanians, from whose hostility, though it was afterwards rebuilt, it suffered much. In 1730 it was destroyed by an earthquake; and in 1791, this devoted city was again destroyed by an earthquake and an influx of the sea, which entirely covered it. A new city was then founded at the distance of a league from the old, in a beautiful plain called Mocha, upon the northern shore of the Biobio. Population 15,000. Long. 73. 8. W. Lat. 36. 48. 15. S.

riches consist entirely in animals, which they export. 185 miles S. S. W. Barcelona, 84 S. E. Caracas. Long. 65. 10. W. Lat. 8. 42. N. The name also of various other insignificant settlements in South America.

CONCHAS, or CONCHOS, a river of Mexico, in Durango, which rises in Lat. 28. N. and joins the Rio del Norte in Lat. 31. N.

CONCHES, a town of Normandy, department of the Eure. Population 2300.

CONCHUCOS, a province of Peru. Also a river in that province, which enters the Amazonas.

CONCIZE, a town of Switzerland, on the lake of Neuchâtel. Population 2350.

CONCORD, a post township of the United States, Rockingham county, New Hampshire. Pop. 2393. Long. 71. 30. W. Lat. 43. 12. N.

CONCORD, a post township of the United States, in Middlesex county, Massachusetts. Pop. 1633.—2d, In Delaware county, Pennsylvania. Pop. 1061.—3d, In Ross county, Ohio, 12 miles W. Chillicothe. Pop. 1810.

CONCORD, a river of the United States, in Massachusetts, which joins the Merrimack in Tewksbury.

CONDAPILLY, the capital of a district of that name in India. Long. 80. 23. E. Lat. 16. 39. N.

CONDATCHY, a town of Ceylon, which gives name to the bay, in which is a pearl fishery. Long. 80. E. Lat. 8. 45. N.

CONDE, a very strong town of France, department of the North, at the junction of the Haine and Scheldt, with 5900 inhabitants. 6 miles N. N. E. Valenciennes.

CONDE LA FERTE, a town of France, department of the Seine and Marne. Houses 600.

CONDE SUR NOIREAU, a town of France, in Normandy. Population 3900.

CONDE SUR VIRE, a town of Normandy, on the Vire. Population 2400.

CONDESUROS DE ABEQUIPA, a province of Peru. Capital, Chuquibamba.

CONDOM, a town of France, in Gascony, department of the Gers, 28 miles S. E. Bourdeaux.

CONDON, PULO, a small island in the Indian sea, near the coast of Cochinchina. Long. 106. 42. E. Lat. 6. 40. N.

CONDRËT, a thriving town of France, on the Rhone. Pop. 4050. 18 miles S. Lyons.

CONEGLIANO, a town of the Venetian territory, 10 miles N. N. E. Treviso. Pop. 3650.

CONEMAUGH CREEK, in the United States, Pennsylvania, runs into the Alleghany 29 miles N. E. Pittsburg.

CONESTAGO, a river of the United States, in Pennsylvania, joins the Susquehanna.

CONEWAGO, a river of the United States, joins the Alleghany at Warren, Pennsylvania.

CONFLANS, a small town in Savoy proper. Pop. 1800. 18 miles E. Chambéry.

CONFLANS ST HONORINE, a town of France, at the conflux of the Oise and Seine. Population 1900.—The name of various small towns in France.

CONFOLENS, or CONFOLENT, a town of France, department of the Charante. Population 2500. 27 miles N. W. La Rochelle.

CONFOLENS, or CONFOLENT, a town of France, department of the Charante. Population 2500. 27 miles N. W. La Rochelle.

CONFOLENS, or CONFOLENT, a town of France, department of the Charante. Population 2500. 27 miles N. W. La Rochelle.

CONFOLENS, or CONFOLENT, a town of France, department of the Charante. Population 2500. 27 miles N. W. La Rochelle.

CONFOLENS, or CONFOLENT, a town of France, department of the Charante. Population 2500. 27 miles N. W. La Rochelle.

CONFOLENS, or CONFOLENT, a town of France, department of the Charante. Population 2500. 27 miles N. W. La Rochelle.

CONFOLENS, or CONFOLENT, a town of France, department of the Charante. Population 2500. 27 miles N. W. La Rochelle.

CONFOLENS, or CONFOLENT, a town of France, department of the Charante. Population 2500. 27 miles N. W. La Rochelle.

CONFOLENS, or CONFOLENT, a town of France, department of the Charante. Population 2500. 27 miles N. W. La Rochelle.

CONGO, a village of Ireland, in the county of Mayo, 46 miles W. Tuam.

CONQUAKEE, a river of the United States, in South Carolina, which joins the Wateree.

CONSLINGTON, a town of England, in Cheshire, of the Dane. The staple articles of manufacture are silk and ribbons. Population 6495. 16½ miles N. W. London.

CONGOO, an extensive country in the southwest of Africa, bounded on the N. by the river Zaïre, or Congo, which separates it from Loango, and on the W. by the Atlantic. It was discovered in 1482, by a Portuguese squadron, and the most exaggerated accounts were published of its wealth and population. Captain Tuckey, however, who was sent by the British government to explore this country, and who accordingly sailed up the river Zaïre, or Congo, found on its banks only very small villages, and the country far from being highly improved.

CONGOO RIVER. See Zaïre.

CONGOOX, a town of Lamiestan, in Persia, on the Persian gulf. Pop. 6000 or 7000. 110 miles S. Shiraz. Long. 52. 5. 1. Lat. 27. 50. N.

CONNOTON CHURCH, in the United States, in New York, runs into the Tiooga.

CONI, a considerable town of Piedmont, and the see of a bishop, at the conflux of the Stura and Gerzo. The principal street is tolerably wide, and not devoid of elegance. The other streets are short and narrow, and there is no public building of interest. It was a place of great strength till it was dismantled by the French after the battle of Marengo. The ramparts now serve for promenades. Population 10,000.

CONJEVERAM, a considerable town of India, in the Carnatic, where is a famous Hindoo temple. Long. 79. 15. E. Lat. 12. 13. N.

CONIL, a walled town of Spain, in Andalusia. Pop. 3000. 18 miles S. S. E. Cadix.

CONISBROUGH, a village of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1142. 6 miles S. W. Doncaster.

CONISTON, a village of England, in Lancashire, near a lake of the same name.

CONITZ, or CHOINIZ, a town of West Prussia. Pop. 2500. 60 miles S. W. Dantzic.

CONNAUGHT, one of the four provinces into which Ireland is divided, containing the counties of Galway, Mayo, Sligo, Leitrim, and Roscommon. It is bounded E. by Leinster, W. by the Atlantic ocean, N. and N. W. by the ocean and Ulster, and S. by Munster, being about 130 miles long, and 84 broad.

CONNECTICUT, one of the United States, bounded N. by Massachusetts, E. by Rhode Island, S. by Long Island Sound, and W. by New York. It lies between Long. 71. 30. and 73. 43. W. and between Lat. 41. and 42. N. It is 96 miles long, 70 broad, and contains 4764 square miles. The face of the country is greatly diversified by mountains, hills, and valleys. There are but few level tracts, nor any considerable mountains. The hills are generally of moderate size, and occur in quick succession, presenting to the traveller an ever varying prospect. The soil is generally rich and fertile, though intermixed with portions that are comparatively thin and barren; and the whole is well watered. The principal productions are Indian corn, rye, wheat in many parts, oats, barley, buck wheat, flax in large quantities, some hemp, potatoes, pumpkins, turnips, pease, beans, &c. Orchards are very numerous, and cider is made for exportation. The state is, however, generally better adapted to grazing than to tillage. The quantity of butter and cheese made annually is great, and of well known excellence. Beef and pork of superior quality, are also abundant. The state is generally laid out in small farms, from 50 to 300 and 400 acres. The climate is healthy, though exposed to the extremes of heat and cold. The foreign trade of this state is principally with the West Indies; but its coasting trade is the most considerable. Its exports consist of beef, pork, cattle, horses, mules, butter, cheese, maize, rye, flax-seed, fish, candles, and soap. The whole amount in 1816, was 593,406 dollars. Almost all the produce of the western part of the state is carried to New York. Connecticut has considerable manufactures of various descriptions, consisting of wool, cotton, paper, iron in different forms, glass, snuff, powder, buttons, hats, clocks, &c. Tin ware is extensively manufactured, and sent to all parts of the United States. The climate of Connecticut is upon the whole healthy, though it is subject to the extremes of heat and cold. Ores of iron, copper, silver, lead, and antimony, are found in the state; also fire-stone in many places, serpentine, marble, limestone, and coal, and a variety of other minerals. The principal rivers are the Connecticut, Housatonic, the Thames, with their tributary streams. The whole of the sea coast is indented with harbours, many of which are safe and commodious. Of these the most important are New London and New Haven. A great number of pleasant towns, both maritime and inland, are to be found within the precincts of this state. Population in 1790, 237,946; in 1800, 251,002; in 1810, 261,942, of whom 6453 were free blacks, and 340 slaves.

CONNECTICUT RIVER, a river of the United States, the largest in New England, rises near the borders of Lower Canada, and running south, divides New Hampshire from Vermont, and passing through Massachusetts and Connecticut, flows into Long Island Sound, between Saybrook and Lyme. Its whole length is 410 miles.

CONNOX, a village of Ireland, county of Antrim, 17 miles N. Belfast.

CONNOTOWAY CREEK, a river of the United States, in Pennsylvania, which joins the Delaware, near Hancock's town, Maryland.

CONNETT, a considerable town of the Venetian territory. Population 5700.

CONSTANZ, a town of the grand duchy of Baden, the capital of the Circle of the Lake; situated on the lake of Constance. It is the see of a bishop, and contains an old Episcopal castle, with a cathedral church, in which are several fine specimens of Gothic sculpture. Constance is memorable for the meeting of the famous council (between 1414 and 1418), which condemned John Huss and Jerome of Prague to the flames. The house where Huss was arrested, and where is his bust, is still shewn. 30 miles N. E. Zurich.

CONSTANCE, LAKE OF, a lake, 35 miles long and about 12 broad, between Suabia and Switzerland. The greatest depth is 350 fathoms, the medium 100.

CONSTANTINA, a large province, comprising the eastern part of the territory of Algiers, bounded E. by Tunis, W. by Titterie or Algiers proper, S. by the desert, and N. by the Mediterranean. It is upwards of 250 miles in length, and 100 in breadth.

CONSTANTINA, a large city, capital of the province above described, on the site of Cirta, celebrated as the ancient bulwark of Numidia. It is built upon a high rock, formed into a species of peninsula by the Rummel. Here are found many beautiful remains of antiquity. Besides its situation, Constantina is defended by excellent walls, built of a kind of black stone, and by a strong garrison. The interior exhibits nothing remarkable; the streets are straight, but dirty; the houses low, and without windows.

CONSTANTINOPLE, called by the ancients Byzantium, was built anew by the Emperor Constantine the Great, in the year 330, and named after him. It continued the seat of the eastern empire above 1000 years, until, in 1453, it was taken by the Turks, and rendered the metropolis of their dominions. It is beautifully situated on the west side of the Bosphorus, or straits of Constantinople, between the Black sea and the sea of Marmora. It stands chiefly on a slope, on seven eminences, which rise above each other in beautiful succession, presenting a fine view to the approaching spectator. The harbour is not on the side of the sea, but in a long, capacious inlet, running along the north side of the town. It is of sufficient depth for the largest vessels, and can contain 1200 sail, and has an open navigation to the Euxine on the north, and the Mediterranean on the south. The form of the city is triangular, with one side on the harbour, another on the sea of Marmora, and the third and longest towards the land. On the side fronting the sea of Marmora is a wall from 14 to 20 feet in height, flanked at intervals with towers; this wall has six gates. On the land side, that is, on the side of the triangle fronting the west, stands a much more remarkable structure, the ancient wall of Theodosius, five miles in length, still bearing the marks of the breach effected by the Turks in 1521. The strength of the current of the Bosphorus is of considerable inconvenience to the harbour; the stream from the northward being cut in two by the projecting point of the seraglio, and a part forced to the westward up the harbour, making a considerable current all along its south side. On preparing to put to sea, precautions are necessary, to avoid being taken by the current of the Bosphorus, and driven on the seraglio point, where there is a perfect torrent. The imports are tin, cotton goods, groceries, glass, furniture, and other manufactures; while the exports, gold, money, or diamonds, discover the indolence of the population. Nearly 10,000 looms are driven by Armenians, for the fabrication of a sort of silk stuff interwoven with cotton. Whatever may be the exterior beauty of Constantinople, the interior is very different, the streets being in general narrow, gloomy, and slanting; badly paved, and incumbered with dust or mud; the houses in general low, and built of wood and earth. Conflagrations are of very frequent occurrence. Of the streets, the one leading from the seraglio to the Atmeidan (the ancient Hippodrome) is by far the most regular and elegant. The other erections deserving attention are the bazars or market places, the khans for the bankers, the fountains and baths. The Cisterna Maxima is situated near St. Sophia; the pillars and arches supporting the roof still remain; and the area beneath them is very extensive, though now used as a rope-walk. The aqueduct by which the city cisterns were principally supplied, was first erected by Adrian, and subsequently repaired by one of the Constantines, and even by Solymán the Magnificent. It consists of a double tier of arches, built with alternate layers of stone and brick, like the walls of the city. The seraglio does not include merely the apartments of the women, but signifies palace, and is applied by way of eminence to the vast range of buildings inhabited by the sultan, his court, and the offices of government. In the first court are the mint, the principal mosque, an hospital, and offices connected with the palace. In the second court, where none but the sultan enters on horseback, are the divan, and the principal offices of government. In the third court are the apartments of the women, the terraces and flower gardens. Other apartments of the seraglio are ornamented with mirrors, or with resplendent armour, such as pistols, swords, and poignards; and in what is properly the armoury, are to be seen numerous weapons, shields, and military engines of the Greek emperors. There are in Constantinople about 300 mosques. The principal are to be met with in the squares and public places, and are generally surrounded with cyprus trees, and provided with fountains. The oldest and most interesting of all is that of St. Sophia, which was originally built by Constantine the Great; but being destroyed in a popular sedition, was rebuilt with greater sumptuousness and elegance by the Emperor Justinian. The form is quadrangular; the length from east to west 370 feet, the breadth from north to south 240. The cupola rests on pillars of marble. The four minarets were added by the Turkish Emperor Selim II. The interior of the church, though many ornaments have been defaced by the Turks, still retains much of its ancient grandeur. The pavement is entirely of marble, worked in different ornamental compartments; the building appears to the greatest advantage when illuminated for a Turkish festival; at other times it is gloomy from want of light. All the interior of the dome is lined with Mosaic, disposed into figures and ornamental work; but there is a degree of bad taste in several of its interior decorations, and a want of order in the piers and buttresses around it. Of the Turkish mosques, the best is that of Sultan Soliman, and that of Sultan Ahmed, near the Hippodrome. The number of Christian churches in Constantinople and its neighbourhood is 22. They have externally the appearance of private houses, no spires or bells being permitted but in the mosques. This want is compensated in some by the elegance of their interior. One of the finest is the patriarchal church of the Greeks, in which are the remains of St Euthymia, and of the Empress Theodora. Of the Armenian churches, the principal is that of St George. The Catholics have an archbishop and several cloisters in the suburbs of Pera and Galata. Three Protestant envoys have chaplains attached to their suites, viz. the English, Swedish, and Dutch. The population of Constantinople is computed, according to the most accurate estimate, at 300,000. It is of a very mixed description, consisting, above all of Greek Christians, with a large proportion of Jews and Armenian Christians. The filth in Constantinople is very disgusting to a European. Among other annoyances are the swarms of rats which infest at night, not only the buildings, but the streets. The rooms in the houses are always small; the windows disfigured by coloured glass; the panelling of the windows of diminutive, as in our old fashioned houses. The menagerie, which they are in the habit of pointing out to the admiration of strangers, is a filthy neglected place. The prevalence of the plague in Constantinople is owing to the obstinate carelessness of the Turks; still the climate of this city is not healthy, being subject to very frequent transpositions, and particularly to cold winds from the north-east. The suburb of Galata stands opposite to the seraglio on the north side of the harbour. To the westward is the suburb Topkapi (capita turcorum). On the heights above this suburb stands Pera, built of wood and burned bricks, and principally occupied by individuals in the suites of ambassadors to the Porte, from the different European powers. On an adjacent hill stands the suburb of Demetri, chiefly inhabited by Greeks. Scutari, though standing in Asiatic ground, and separated from Constantinople by the Bosphorus is still accounted a suburb of the great city. It is a town of considerable extent; built on the site of the ancient Chrysopolis. The castle of the seven towers is a state prison near the sea, of Marmora, 1800 miles E. by S. Paris. Long. 26. 50. E. Lat. 41. N.

CONSTANTINOW, Newa, a town of European Russia, government of Podolia.—Also another town in the government of Volhynia.

CONTAL, a town of Bengal, district of Belasore. Long. 87. 54. E. Lat. 21. 48. N.

CONTRES, a town of France, department of the Loir and Cher. Population 1400.

CONWAY, a river of Wales, which falls into the Irish sea at Aberconway.

CONWAY, a post township of the United States, in Strafford county, New Hampshire, on Saco river, 56 miles N. N. E. Concord. Population 1080.—2d, A post township of Franklin county, Massachusetts, 6 miles W. S. W. Greenfield, and 13 N. W. Northampton. Population 1784.

COOLNECHER, a very extensive district of Hindostan, province of Bengal, lying between the 26th and 27th degrees of N. Lat.

COOK'S INLET, or RIVER, a large inlet on the W. coast of North America, between Cape Elizabeth and Cape Douglas, or between Long. 207. 9. and 207. 45. E. Lat. 59. 42. and 59. 10. N. It was found to terminate, by Vancouver, in Long. 211. 17. E. Lat. 61. 29. N.

COOLIN, a river of Ireland, which runs into Ardninglass bay, 5 miles S. W. Sligo.

COOLGREN, a town of Ireland, county of Wexford, 3 miles S. S. W. Arklow.

COOLON, a town of Hindostan, on the Bayah. Long. 75. 48. E. Lat. 33. 20. N.—Also two other towns of Hindostan, province of Orissa.

COORN, a navigable river of the United States, which mingles its waters with Ashley river, below Charleston city, in South Carolina.

COOS, a county of the United States, in New Hampshire, bounded N. by Lower Canada, E. by Maine, S. by Grafton and Strafford counties, and W. by Connecticut river, which separates it from Vermont. Population 3991. Chief town Lancaster.

COOSA, the north branch of Alabama river, in the United States, in Georgia.

COOSAW, or COOSAWATCHIE, a river of the United States, in South Carolina, which runs S. S. E. into Broad river and Whale branch.

COOSAWATCHIE, a post town of the United States, in Beaufort district, South Carolina.

COOSFRAN, a town of Hindostan, province of Bahar. Long. 85. 47. E. Lat. 25. 0. N.

COOTEHILL, a seat and well built town of Ireland, 11 miles N. E. Cavan.

COPENAME, or CUPANAMA RIVER, a river of Guiana, which enters the Atlantic ocean.

COPENHAGEN, the metropolis of the Danish monarchy, and one of the best built cities in Europe, stands on the east coast of the island of Zealand, in the channel of the Baltic called the Sound, about 20 miles from the narrow passage of that name. Its position is on a low track, surrounded with small lakes, and partly intersected by inlets of the sea. The form of the town is oblong, the walls extending nearly five English miles. They are surrounded with a chain of bastions and a broad ditch; but these defences proved inadequate against the British attack of 1807. Some of the streets are narrow and inconvenient, others broad and well paved. It is forbidden to build with wood; the customary material is brick or white calcareous stone: the finer edifices are of freestone or Norwegian marble.

Copenhagen is made up of three distinct parts, viz. the Old Town, (which having been in a great measure destroyed by the fires of 1728 and 1794, is the last erected of the whole); the New Town, or Fredericks-town; and Christianshavn. Of these, the old town is the largest and most populous, forming what is properly called the city.

That part of the new town called Amalienburg was built entirely anew by Frederick V. between 1740 and 1765; it is extremely beautiful, and consists chiefly of an octagon, known by the name of Frederick's-square, and opening into four broad rectangular streets. In the centre is a fine bronze statue of Frederick V. on horseback. One of the streets proceeding from the octagon leads to the harbour, another to Frederick's church, an elegant edifice, though unfinished. Not far from this is the king's new market, a spacious but irregular area, containing in one of its sides the castle of Charlottenburg, formerly the residence of the queen, but now appropriated to the royal academy of fine arts. Here also is the theatre, the artillery house, the great hotel, and other stately buildings; and in the centre is an equestrian statue of Christian V. erected in 1688. The harbour of Copenhagen is formed by a narrow arm of the sea, or rather channel, running between the city and the opposite island of Amack or Amager: it is capable of containing 500 merchantmen; and though the entrance is so narrow that one ship only can enter at a time, the depth is sufficient to admit vessels of the largest size. The part of the town called Christianshavn was built by Christian IV. on the adjacent part of the island of Amack; it is separated from Copenhagen by the inlet that forms the harbour, but which becoming afterwards narrower, is crossed by two bridges. The island is several leagues in circuit, and forms a succession of kitchen gardens and meadows, which furnish Copenhagen with vegetables, milk, butter, and cheese. Copenhagen draws from Norway cannon shot, and anchors, and hardware; from Russia, flax, hemp, masts, sailcloth; and cordage; from Sweden, pitch and tar; and from Germany, oak. The principal manufacturing establishments are those of coarse and glazed linen, sailcloth, flannel, cotton stuffs, woollen stuffs, leather, various liquors, and a manufactory of porcelain belonging to the government.

Here are also anchor foundations, roperies, and extensive dock-yards.

Exclusive of the cathedral, which was destroyed during the last siege, there are in Copenhagen 20 churches, and several Jewish synagogues. Of the 22 hospitals, the most splendid is that of Frederick V.; but the most interesting, from its regulations and extensive usefulness, is the lying-in hospital, to which is attached a school of midwifery, and a foundling hospital. Other public offices are the arsenal, the exchange (a large Gothic building), the barracks, the residence of the Bernstorffs, and of other families, chiefly in the new town. The citadel, which stands at the north-east extremity of the town, is small. The small Gothic castle of Rosenburg is on the north-west side of the town, within the walls. The spire of Trinity church is accounted a masterpiece of art. The university was established in 1479, and has considerable funds. Divinity, law, medicine, and philosophy, are taught here. Here is also a large botanic garden; and societies in considerable numbers, as well for art and science, as for the less familiar subjects of Scandinavian literature, Icelandic literature, genealogy and heraldry, &c. The royal library is a superb collection of more than 250,000 volumes.

Copenhagen has, in the course of its history, been often exposed to the calamities of war. In October 1728, a dreadful fire broke out, which consumed two-thirds of the town; in February 1794, another fire destroyed nearly 1000 houses; this was followed by a third conflagration in June 1795. In the attack by the British in 1807, above 300 houses, including the cathedral and part of the university, were destroyed, while double that number was damaged. The population of Copenhagen, in 1769, was 71,000; in 1801, 90,000; and at present it is computed at 103,000. 170 miles N. E. Hamburg, and 315 S. W. Stockholm. Long. 12 35 E. Lat. 55. 41. 4. N.

COPENICK, a town of Prussia, 9 miles S. E. Berlin. Population 1400.

COPET, or COPPET, a neat town of Switzerland, canton of Vaud, on the lake of Geneva. Pop. 1000. 8 miles N. N. E. Geneva.

CORMO, the capital of a province of the same name in Chili, on a river also of the same name, which enters the Pacific ocean, and serves as its port. Long. 32. 54. W. Lat. 28. 50. S.

COPINSHAY and CORNWALL, two of the Orkney islands, 2 miles in length.

CORLAND ISLANDS, a small cluster of islands off the coast of Ireland, nearly opposite Donaghadee.

CORRA-MI-ZE RIVER, a river of North America, which runs into the sea. Long. 111. 5. W. Lat. 60. N.—Also a river of Upper Canada.

CORNET, a small river of England, which falls into the ocean, opposite Conquet island, off the coast of Northumberland.

CORONADO, the capital of a province of the same name in Chili, at nearly a mile's distance from the Pacific ocean. The city has 500 families of Spaniards and people of colour, with some Indians. Its port is convenient, and much frequented. 174 miles N. W. Santiago. Long. 71. 18. W. Lat. 30. S.

CORACIN, or KURACIN, a seaport town of Afghanistan, province of Sinde, district of Tattah, supposed to be the Sangada of Arrian, or the port of Alexander. Houses 3000. Long. 67. 17. E. Lat. 24. 52. N.

CORAN, the capital of a district of Hindostan, between the Jumna and the Ganges, and lying between the 26th and 27th degrees of N. lat. It is situated nearly half way between the two rivers, in Long. 80. 40. E. Lat. 26. 6. N.—The name also of another town, in Long. 69. 5. E. Lat. 23. 38. N.

CORNACH, the capital of the principality of Waldeck, on the Ilse, 70 miles L. Cologne.

CORNEAU, RIVER DE, a tributary of the Mississippi, in North America. Lat. 45. 40. N.

CORNEIL, a town of France, 18 miles S. Paris. Population 3600.

CORRIE, a town of France, in Picardy, 10 miles E. Amiens. Population 1900.

CORBIGNY ST LEONARD, a town of France. Pop. 2300. Long. 3. 45. E. Lat. 47. 16. N.

CORNBURGE, a parish and town of England, in Northumberland. Population 1254.

CORDOVA, a small province of Spain, forming the middle part of Andalus, with a population of about 260,000.

CORDOVA, the capital of the foregoing province, on the Guadalquivir. It forms an oblong square, built like an amphitheatre, and is surrounded with walls flanked with large towers. The streets are generally narrow, winding, and dirty; but the Plaza Mayor, or principal square, is remarkable for its size, regularity, and neat piazzas. The bishop's palace is a massy structure; and there are the remains of a palace of the Moorish kings; but the most interesting edifice in Cordova is the cathedral, which is a magnificent monument, unique in its kind. It is an ancient mosque, built by Abderame, king of the Moors, about the year 692. Several of the other churches are remarkable either for their architecture or their paintings. The bridge across the Guadalquivir was built by the Moors, and consists of 16 arches. Cordova is remarkable for the kind of leather called, from this town, Cordovan, or Cordwain, the manner of preparing which was invented here by the Moors. Population 30,000. 120 miles N. E. Cadiz. Long. 4. 45. W. Lat. 37. 32. N.

CORNOVA, a city of South America, in the viceroyalty of Buenos Ayres, and province of Tucuman, of which it is now considered to be the capital, situated on the Rio Primero. The Spanish inhabitants, amounting to about 1500, with about 4000 negroes, are chiefly employed in tilling the ground, and manufacturing cloth, both of cotton and wool, which they send to Peru. Mules also form a considerable branch of the island traffic of Cordova. The cathedral is reckoned a handsome edifice. 468 miles N. N. W. Buenos Ayres. Long. 63. 30. W. Lat. 31. 30. S.

CORDOVA, or CORDONA, a considerable town of Mexico, intendency of Vera Cruz. It has numerous domes, towers, and steeples, and a large square in the centre, with Gothic arcades on three sides, the cathedral filling the fourth, and a fountain of delicious water being in the middle. It contains 800 families of Spaniards, Mestizos, Mulattoes, and Indians. 150 miles E. N. E. Mexico. Long. 96. 46. E. Lat. 18. 50. N.

CORNOVA, a province of South America, in the viceroyalty of Buenos Ayres, about 300 miles in length and 200 in breadth.

CORRA, a large country of Asia, situated immediately E. of China, and consisting of a peninsula formed on one side by the Yellow sea, and on the other by the sea of Japan.

CORREIA, a town of Spain, 8 miles W. Tindela. Population 4000.

CORLENTIN, a river of Guiana, which falls into the Atlantic ocean, in Lat. 5. 50. N.

CORRE-CASLER, a town of England, in Dorsetshire, situated in the peninsula, or the Isle of Purbeck. It is chiefly noted for its castle. Population 823.

CORU, an island in the Ionian sea, situated at the entrance of the gulf of Venice, on the coast of South Albania, from which it is separated by a channel, varying from 2 to 8 miles in width. Its medium length is 45 miles; its breadth 25; and its circumference 112. It was placed in 1816, under the dominion of Britain. Population 60,000.

CORU, (the Coronin of the ancients) the capital of the foregoing island, situated on the east coast, and built in the form of an amphitheatre. It is neither large nor well built, but is extremely strong, and has two citadels. The harbour is rather small; but the road is spacious and secure. In front of Corfu, at the distance of about a mile, is the island of Vido, where the Lazarillo is kept; it is protected by a triple range of batteries, and forms a strong outwork to the fortifications of the harbour. In November 1718, the explosion of a powder magazine during a thunder storm, destroyed the old castle, the arsenal, and a number of private buildings, killing above 1500 people. Pop. 15,000. Long. 20. 17. E. Lat. 38. 40. N.

CORIA, a town in Spanish Extremadura, 110 miles W. S. W. Madrid. Pop. 1600.

CORINGA, a seaport of Hindostan, and the best port on the coast of Coromandel. Long. 82. 28. E. Lat. 16. 49. N.

CORINTH, a post township of the United States, in Orange county, Vermont, 41 miles N. Windsor. Population 1674.

CORINTH, a town of Greece, in the Morea, situated near the isthmus of Corinth. At the present day, Corinth presents more the appearance of a village than a town, the houses being scattered in groups, and separated by gardens and corn fields. The traces of the ancient walls are still discernible; but the principal and only interesting monument of antiquity is the citadel, or Acro-Corinthos. It is situated above the town; but being guarded by the Turks with the greatest jealousy, its interior is little known. Population 1400. 342 miles S. W. Constantinople. Long. 23. 28. 29. E. Lat. 37. 68. 23. N.

CORINTH, ISTHMUS OF, the narrow neck of land which separates the gulf of Lepanto from that of Egina, and connects the peninsula of the Morea with the rest of Greece. In its narrowest part it is only five or six miles across.

CORK, a county of Ireland, which greatly exceeds all the others, both in population and in extent. It stretches along the south coast of the island, from Youghal bay to the westernmost point of Beerhaven, a distance considerably exceeding 100 English miles. Its breadth is not great at the extremities; but in the centre, from the Seven Heads to Charleville, it may be estimated at about 50 miles of the same measure. It contains 19 baronies, 269 parishes, 76,739 houses, and 416,000 inhabitants. It is divided into 137 parishes, under the Ecclesiastical jurisdiction of three bishoprics, Cork, Ross, (which now form one see) and Cloyne, comprising 1,038,799 acres, Irish plantation measure, of which 231,959 acres are bogs, mountain, or waste. The surface of the country is varied; in many places it is extremely beautiful, and the valleys are fertile. The south coast abounds with excellent harbours. The principal rivers are the Lee, the Bandon, the Blackwater, the Ilen, the Funcheon, the Bride, and the Awbeg. The county sends two members to the imperial parliament, and its boroughs send four.

CORK, a city of Ireland, capital of the above county, situated on the river Lee, over which are several elegant stone bridges. The town has of late years been improved both in elegance and size, and its commerce has increased in proportion. The public buildings of Cork are generally of a plain exterior. It has a stately cathedral, a handsome exchange and commercial buildings; and a spacious market-house: the new custom-house is a splendid pile of hewn stone. It has also several handsome parish churches, a town hall, several fine hospitals, two theatres, with various other public structures. Its barracks are on a very large scale, and are fine buildings. Great quantities of salt provisions are exported from Cork; and during the slaughtering season, 100,000 head of black cattle are prepared. The other exports consist of butter, candles, soap, whisky, hides raw and prepared, pork, rabbit skins, linen, collens, yarn, &c. Its manufactures are full cloth, sheeting, paper, leather, glue, glass, coarse cloth, with other articles of less consequence. Cork stands about 15 miles from the sea; and its harbour, or the Cove, is about 9 miles below the town, has long been celebrated for its safety and capaciousness. Population, some years ago 75,000.

now computed at 80,000. Long. 8. 38. 16. W. Lat. 51. 53. 54. N.

CORLEONE, a well built town of Sicily. It contains several churches, convents, and public buildings. Population 12,000. 34 miles S. S. W. Palermo.

CORMANLINE, a town on the Gold coast of Africa, where there is a Dutch fort called Amsterdam. The Ashantees, in 1807, destroyed the town, and plundered the fort. 3 miles F. Anamaboe.

CORRE, a town of France, in Anjou, situated on the river Authion. Population 1900.

CORRIAM, a post township of the United States, in Cheshire county, New Hampshire, on Connecticut river, 16 miles S. Dartmouth college, and 34 N. W. Concord. Pop. 1606.

CORNWALL, a maritime county of England, forming the south-western extremity of Great Britain, is surrounded by the sea, except on the eastern side, where it is separated from Devonshire by the river Tamar, and by an artificial boundary of a few miles in length at its northern extremity. Its extreme length, from the Land's End to its north-eastern angle, is about 90 miles, and from the above named promontory to the Ram Head, 70 miles; its greatest breadth, from N. to S., is a little more than 43 miles; while, in its narrowest part, it is not more than 4 miles across: its superficial area has been found, by actual survey, to contain 758,484 statute acres, or 1407 square miles. It is divided into 9 hundreds and 206 parishes. The climate of Cornwall is broken and uncertain, and subject to tempests and heavy rains. It is, however, mild; so that myrtles and other tender shrubs thrive well in the open air. Fruit trees everywhere abound, and attain considerable perfection; even the mulberry tree flourishes, and its fruit ripens in the western parts of the county. The general aspect of Cornwall is abundantly dreary, a ridge of bleak and rugged hills stretching through its whole length. Amidst this dismal waste the eye is occasionally relieved by valleys of great fertility and beauty, watered by streams, which, if not large, are sometimes interesting, from the romantic scenery that they enliven. Of these rivers the principal are the Tamar, the Lynner, the Looe, the Fawy, the Fal, the Hel or Heyl in Kirriar, a river of the same name in Penwith, and the Alan or Camel. By far the most interesting scenery of Cornwall; however, occurs along the coasts, where huge masses of granite, bidding defiance on one side to the violence of the waves, and forming on the other a stupendous barrier to the fertile plains beneath, exhibit a new vision of the sublime and beautiful. Comparatively little attention is paid to agriculture in Cornwall, and most of its operations are still conducted in a very rude manner. Its principal wealth is derived from its mines; of which, according to an accurate map made in 1800, it appears that there were then 49 of copper, 28 of tin, 18 of copper and tin, 2 of lead, 1 of Lead and silver, 1 of copper and silver, 1 of silver, 1 of copper and cobalt, 1 of tin and cobalt; and 1 of antimony; some mines of manganese have been opened since that time. Of the minerals of this county, which are numerous, one of the most interesting is the step rock, particularly used in the manufacture of porcelain. The whole rock is rented by the proprietors of the porcelain manufactory at Worcester. The china stone, which is raised in great quantities near St Austell, forms a principal ingredient in the Staffordshire potteries. A great variety of fish frequent the coasts of this county; by far the most important of these are the pilchards, in the fishing of which a great capital is employed. Cornwall can boast of but few manufactures, except the preparation of its metals. The principal trading ports are, Padstow, Boscawen, Portrieth, the river Hayle, St Ives, Penzance, Falmouth, Truro, Fowey, and Looe. Antiquities, generally supposed to be Druidical, abound in Cornwall. This county sends 44 members to parliament. Population 257,447. The Scilly islands lie about 9 leagues W. by S. of the Land's End, and are supposed to have been formerly connected with Cornwall. The intermediate and surrounding rocks are innumerable.

CORNWALL, CAPE, on the W. coast of Cornwall, England. Long. 5. 53. W. Lat. 50. 10. N.

CORNWALL, a township in St Ormond county, Upper Canada, on the St Lawrence, 60 miles below Prescott.—2d, Of the United States, in Addison county, Vermont, on Otter creek, 36 miles S. Burlington. Population 1279.—3d, A post township in Litchfield county, Connecticut, on the east side of Housatonic river, 10 miles N. W. Litchfield. There is a Foreign Mission school in this place, under the direction of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, established in 1817, for the purpose of educating heathen youth from various parts of the world. Population 1902.—4th, Of Orange county, New York, on the Hudson, 52 miles N. New York. Population 1769.

CORNWALLIS, a county comprehending that part of Lower Canada which lies on the S. side of the St Lawrence, between Devonshire and the district of Gaspé.

COROA, a seaport town of South America, in the province of Venezuela. The inhabitants amount to 10,000, and carry on some trade in mules, goats, hides, sheepskins, cheese, &c. 240 miles W. Caracas. Long. 69. 49. W. Lat. 11. 24. N.

COROMANDEL, a long line of sea coast on the W. side of the bay of Bengal, extending from the Kistnah river to Point Calymere, being nearly 850 miles in length. It does not possess a good harbour in its whole extent.

CORON, an old and strong seaport of the Morea, 80 miles S. E. W. Corinth.

CORRIENNE, a town of France, department of the Ille and Vilaine. Population 2100.

CORRAL DE ALMAQUER, a ruinous town of Spain, 21 miles from Ocaña. Population 4000.

CORRIGIO, a small neat town of Italy, 10 miles N. W. Modena.

CORRAZE, a department of France, which comprises the southern or lower division of the former province of Languedoc. It contains 265,000 inhabitants, on 2400 square miles.

CORREZE, a town of France, in the above department, with 1400 inhabitants.

CORRIENTES, CAPE, on the east coast of Africa. Long. 37. 3. E. Lat. 23. 48. S.

CORRIENTES, a town of South America, in the viceroyalty of Buenos Ayres, at the junction of the Parana and Paraguay. Population 4500. 400 miles N. Buenos Ayres. Long. 58. 23. W. Lat. 27. 47. S.

CORRIENTES, St. JUAN DE, a river of Buenos Ayres, which falls into the Plata.

CORRIGOR, a town of Ireland, county of Wexford, 7 miles S. W. Newborough.

CORRIGOR, a town of Ireland, county of Clare, 7 miles N. N. W. Ennis.

CORSHAM, a town of England, county of Wilts. Population 2737.

CORSICA, one of the largest islands in the Mediterranean, between the coast of Genoa and the island of Sardinia. Its length is about 110 miles; its breadth very unequal; the superficial extent is estimated at 4300 square miles; and the population, which amounted in 1740 to only 120,380, was, in 1815, 174,702. Corsica is covered with mountains, which rise to a great height, and have their tops covered with snow. It is watered by a number of streams and rivulets. It lies under the 42d degree of latitude, but the heats of summer are moderated by the sea breezes; the cold of winter, on the other hand, is very intense. The soil, though stony, and but little cultivated, is productive in corn, excellent wine, oranges, lemons, figs, and other fruits, but the wealth of the island lies in its oil, chestnuts, and timber. Among the metallic treasures are reckoned silver, copper, lead, and iron; here also are mines of saltpetre and alum. The silk raised here is used by the Genoese for the manufacture of their damasks and velvets, as also by the French at Lyons. The fisheries on the coast are productive. This island has been successively occupied by the Carthaginians, the Romans, the Goths, the Saracens, the Franks, the Pope, the Pisans, and the Genoese; and lastly by the French, in whose possession it now remains.

COUSSEN, a small town of Denmark, 82 miles N. W. Copenhagen, with a strong castle and a good harbour.

COWTORPHINE, a village and parish of Scotland, 3 miles W. Edinburgh. Pop. 1321.

CORTZ, a small neat town of Corsica, 27 miles S. W. Bastia. Population 2100.

CORTLAND, a town of Piedmont, 13 miles S. E. Alba. Population 1900.

CORTLANDT, a county of the United States, in New York, bounded N. by Oneida county, E. by Chenango county, S. by Broome county, W. by Tompkins and Cayuga counties. Population 6800. Chief town Homer.

CORTLANDT, a post township of the United States, in West Chester county, New York. Pop. in 1810, 3051. 40 miles N. New York.

CORTONA, a fortified town of Tuscany. It contains 7 churches (including the cathedral) and 12 convents. It is a place of great antiquity. Pop. 4000. 45 miles S. E. Florence.

COSUÑA, a seaport of Spain, in the province of Galicia, on the north-west coast, on a peninsula at the entrance of the bay of Bie-tanza. The streets of the upper town are narrow and ill-paved. The lower town stands on a small tongue of land, and has tolerably broad and clean streets. The chief objects of interest are the royal arsenal, and an ancient tower, admired for its elevation and solidity. The harbour is spacious and secure, and is protected by two castles. About 3 miles from the harbour is a light-house. In 1809 the British were attacked at this place previous to embarking, when Sir J. Moore was killed. Pop. 4000. 30 miles N. W. Lugo. Long. 8. 20. 23. W. Lat. 43. 23. 32. N.

CORWEN, a parish and town of Wales, in Merionethshire, on the Dee. Pop. 1809.

CORVON, a post township of the United States, in Harrison county, and capital of Indiana. Population 1000.

COSTENZA, a city of Naples, the capital of Calabria Ultra, situated on seven small hills, at the foot of the Appennines. The streets are, for the most part, narrow, slanting, and ill built. The castle is a large edifice, situated near the confluence of two rivers. The trade of Costenza consists in silk, chiefly with Naples. The only manufactures are those of earthen-ware and cutlery. Population 16,000. 150 miles S. N. E. Naples.

COSTLIN, or KORSFELD, a town of the Prussian states, 18 miles W. Munster.

COSHOCOTON, a county of the United States, in Ohio, on Muskingum river. Population 3000. Chief town Coshocoton.—2d. A post township and capital of Coshocoton county, Ohio, 24 miles N. Zanesville.

COSLIN, a thriving and well built town of the Prussian states, on the Nesebach, above 4 miles from the Baltic. Population 3500. 23 miles E. Colberg.

COSNE, a town of France, on the Loire, 110 miles S. Paris. Population 1700.

COSPORE, the capital of the district of Cachar, in Bengal. Long. 93. 10. E. Lat. 25. N.

COSSACKS, the name of a warlike people, who inhabit the Ukraine, or the countries bordering on Russia, Poland, Little Tartary, and the north of Turkey.

COSSE LE VIVRE, a town of France, department of the Mayenne. Population 3400.

COSSE, a seaport of Egypt, on the coast of the Red Sea, by which the communication between that country and Arabia is chiefly maintained. Caravans from Keds and Kene, travelling through a mountainous and desolate country, bring hither the corn and other provisions of Egypt, to be exchanged chiefly for the coffee of Mocha. The port and road are formed by reefs. The country in its immediate vicinity is frightfully desolate. Long. 34. 8. E. Lat. 26. 8. N.

COSIMBÁVAR, a large manufacturing town in the province of Bengal, situated on the Bhagurutti river, and comprising the English, Dutch, and French factories. It has been long celebrated for its silk manufactures, and at present derives a considerable profit from cotton stockings, which are knit by all the women and children of the vicinity. Long. 88. 13. E. Lat. 24. 10. N.

COSSONEV, a neat little town of Switzerland, 12 miles S. Yverdon. Population 2230.

COSSOVA, a town of European Turkey, in Servia, the scene of a great victory obtained by the sultan Amurath I. over the Hungarians, in 1386.

COSTA RICA, a province of Spanish America, to the south of Nicaragua.

COSTIGUOLA, a town of Piedmont, near Asti, with 4500 inhabitants.

COSTIGUOLA, a town of Piedmont, 11 miles S. W. Savigliano. Population 2600.

COTABAMBA, a province of Peru. Population 10,000.

COTACO, a county of the United States, in Alabama, on the south side of Tennessee river. Chief town Somerville.

COT D'OR, a department of France, which comprehends the N. part of Burgundy. Its form is irregularly oval; length 65 miles, breadth from 25 to 50; superficial extent 3130 square miles. Population 365,500.

COT ST ANDRÉ, a town of France, department of the Isere. Population 3700.

COTIS DU NORD, a department of France, so called from its geographical position, as it comprehends the northern maritime part of the ancient province of Brittany. The superficial extent is about 2300 square miles, and the population 620,000; its length is 65 miles, and its breadth from 27 to 45.

COTIGNAC, a town of France, department of the Var. Population 3300.

COTOPAXI, an enormous conical mountain and volcano of the Andes of Quito, 12 leagues to the south-east of the city of Quito. It is 18,398 feet above the level of the sea.

COTRONE, or CROTONA, a seaport of Naples, in Calabria Ultra, 10 miles S. E. St Severina. Population 4640.

COTSWOLD HILLS, hills of England, in the county of Gloucester, extending 30 miles in length, and about 20 in breadth.

COTTBUS, a town of the Prussian states, on the Spree, 30 miles S. E. Berlin. Pop. 6000.

COTWICK RIVER, in Guinea, falls into the Commewina river.

COTTON PORT, a post town of the United States, capital of Limestone county, Alabama.

COVE, a town of Ireland, in the county of Cork. From the great resort of fleets during the late war, it has become a large handsome town, with magnificent quays, and all conveniences for ships. It is also the resort of bathing parties. 9 miles N. Cork.

CORVENTRY, a city of England, usually depicted as in the county of Warwick. In conjunction, however, with certain adjacent villages, it constitutes a separate county. It is watered by two streams, the Redford and the Sherbourn, and many of the houses have an antique appearance. There have been lately, however, several recent improvements. The religious and other public edifices are highly worthy of attention. St Michael's church is a beautiful specimen of the English, or pointed style of architecture; and its fine tower and spire rank among the principal ornaments of this ancient city. Trinity church is a respectable structure, having also a lofty spire, but inferior in beauty to St Michael's. There are places of worship for Independents, Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists, and Quakers. There are various charitable institutions, two hospitals, almshouses, and charity schools. A free school was founded in the reign of Henry VIII. The most important of the buildings connected with civic business, or ceremonies, is St Mary's hall. The principal manufactures are those of ribbons and watches. Two representatives to parliament are now elected by the freemen, amounting to nearly 4000. A weekly market is held here; and there are several fairs, one of which is called the great or shew fair, and continues eight days. Coventry is a place of great antiquity. Frequent parliaments were convened within its walls by the ancient monarchs of England, some of whom occasionally resided in it. In the civil war of the 17th century, it was conspicuous for its activity in the parliamentary interest. The walls which surrounded the city were, for this offence, levelled with the ground, by order of Charles II. Pop. 24,242. 49 miles N. W. Oxford.

COVENTRY, a township of the United States, in Kent county, Rhode Island, 15 miles S. W. Providence. Population 2928.—2d, A post township in Tolland county, Connecticut, 18 miles E. Hartford. Population 1936.—3d, A township in Chester county, Pennsylvania, on the south side of the Schuylkill, opposite Pottsgrove. Population 1008.—4th, In Portage county, Ohio, 15 miles S. W. Ravenna. The portage between the Cuyahoga and the Tuscarawas, is at this place.—The name of several other townships.

COUMON, a town of France, 7 miles W. Nantes. Population 2500.

COVILHAS, an open town of Portugal, province of Beira. Population 3300.

COULAM, a town, of the south of India, on the coast of Travancore, with a considerable traffic. Long. 70. 48. E. Lat. 8. 51. N.

COULOMMIERS, a town of France, 33 miles E. Paris. Population 3600.

COUCHEVERRY, a town of France, department of the Loire and Cher. Houses 340.

COUCITZ, a town of France, department of the Mayenne. Houses 350.

COURLAND, formerly a duchy dependent on Poland, now a government of European Russia, separated on the N. E. from Livonia by the Dyina, and bounded in other directions by the Baltic, and the governments of Wilna and Witewsk. It contains, on 11,300 square miles, a population of 450,000. Courland was incorporated with the Russian empire in 1795.

COURFIERRE, a town of France. Population 3200. 9 miles S. Thiers.

COURSAN, a town of France. Population 1500. 3 miles N. Narbonne.

COURTANVAUX, a town of France, department of the Sarthe. Houses 330.

COURTINAY, a town of France, department of the Loiret. Population 2500.

COURTENON, a town of France, department of Yveline. Population 1830.

COURTMASHERRY BAY, a bay of Ireland, county of Cork. Long. 8. 19. W. Lat. 51. 36. N.

COURTRAY, a considerable town of the Netherlands, on the Eys, which divides it into two parts. It is celebrated for linen and lace manufactures. Population 14,000. 13 miles N. W. Tournay. Long. 3. 16. E. Lat. 50. 40. N.

COULANCES, a town of France, in Lower Normandy. It contains several fine churches, particularly the Gothic cathedral. Its manufactures are chiefly of linen and lace. Pop. 11,000. 50 miles W. Caen.

COURTAY, a town of France, department of the Gironde, 24 miles N. E. Bourdeaux.

COUVIN, a town of the Netherlands. Population 3300. 14 miles S. W. Charlemont.

COWNING, a town of Wales. Pop. 650. 12 miles W. Cardiff.

COWLESKIP RIVER, a river of North America, which runs into the Columbia river, about 100 miles from its mouth.

COWEN, in Wales, a tributary of the Tanaf.

COWEN, WLES, a town of the Isle of Wight, on the Medina, with a safe and commodious harbour. Its streets towards the sea are narrow; but the buildings rising above one another on the brow of a hill, command delightful views, and have a picturesque effect. The trade of Cowen is considerable, chiefly in provisions and other articles for shipping. It is much frequented in summer as a bathing place. 12 miles W. S. W. Portsmouth.

COWEN, EAST, a hamlet of the Isle of Wight, directly opposite to West Cowen.

COWIE, a small river of Scotland, in Kincardineshire, which enters the sea at Stonehaven.

COXACKIE, a post township of the United States, Greene county, New York. Pop. 4007.

COYL, a small river of Scotland, in the county of Ayr, which falls into the Lugar.

COZIQUELACEL, SANTA ROSA DE, a town of Mexico; intendancy of Durango, surrounded with silver mines.

COZUMEL, an island of North America, near the east coast of Yucatan. 40 miles long, and from 3 to 10 wide. Long. 87. 58. W. Lat. 19. 50. N.

CHACATON, a small island in the straits of Sunda, between Sumatra and Java.

CHACOW, a free city of Poland, in West Galicia, at the confluence of the Vistula and Rudowa. This town has every appearance of decay and disrepair; the streets are crooked; the pavements wretched; and the houses, though massy and spacious, are very old, and in many cases going to decay. In the cathedral, which is dedicated to St Stanislaus, were formerly deposited the crown jewels and regalia. Population 25,000, 128 miles S. S. W. Warsaw. Long. 19. 57. 9. E. Lat. 50. 3. 38. N.

CRAIL, a royal burgh and pariah of Scotland, county of Fife, at the north entrance of the frith of Forth. It consists of two parallel streets, now falling into decay. It returns a member to parliament in conjunction with Kilsenny, the two Anstruthers, and Pittenweem. On the east of the harbour are the remains of a castle, at which King David I. frequently resided. The church is of great antiquity. Population 1861. 10 miles S. E. St Andrew's.

CRAILING, a village and parish of Scotland, county of Roxburgh. Population 748.

CRAMOND, a village and parish of Scotland, on the south side of the frith of Forth. Population 1804. 5½ miles W. Edinburgh.

CRANBORNE, a parish and ancient town of England, in Dorsetshire. Population 1823. 11½ miles S. W. Salisbury.

CRANBROOK, a town of England, in Kent. Population 3683. 49 miles S. S. E. London.

CRANGANORY, a seaport of India, on the Malabar coast. Long. 76. 6. E. Lat. 10. 15. N.

CRANSTON, a village and parish of Scotland, county of Edinburgh. Pop. 954.

CRANSTON, a township of the United States, in Providence county, Rhode Island. Population 2101.

CRACON, a town of France, department of the Mayenne. Population 1500.

CRAPONNE, a town of France, in Auvergne. Population 3300.

CRATI, a river of Naples, in Calabria Citra, which falls into the gulf of Tarento.

CRAYLN, a county of the United States, in Newbern district, North Carolina. Pop. 12,676. Slaves 5030. Chief town Newbern.

CRAWFORD, a village and parish of Scotland, in Lanarkshire. Population 1914.

CRAWFORD, a county of the United States, in Pennsylvania, bounded N. by Erie county, E. by Warren county, S. by Venango and Mercer counties, and W. by Ohio. Population 6178. Chief town Meadville.—2d, In Indiana.—3d, In Illinois, on the Wabash. Population in 1818, 2074.

CRAWICK, a river of Scotland, which falls into the Nith.

CRAY, a small river of England, in Kent, which falls into the Darent, near Dartford.

CRAY, St Mary, a township of England, in Kent. Population 874.

CRAYE, a small river of Wales, which falls into the Cak, in Glamorganshire.

CRAYFORD, a parish and town of England, county of Kent, on the Cray. It has a large and elegant church. Population 1806. 2 miles W. Dartford.

CRECA, a town of France, department of the Seine, on the Maye, celebrated for the great victory gained over the French on 20th. August 1346, by Edward III. Population 1320. 100 miles N. Paris.—The name also of two other small towns in France.

CREDITON, a town of England, in Devonshire, on the Creedy. It consists of two parts, called the East and West towns, the latter of which has suffered greatly by fire. Serges are manufactured here to a considerable extent. There is a weekly market on Saturday. Pop. 6618. 7 miles S. E. Exeter.

CREI, a river of Scotland, which runs into Wigton bay, at the burgh of Creetown.

CREEDY, a river of England, in Devonshire, which flows into the Ex, near Exeter.

CREETOWN, a village of Scotland, county of Kirkcubright, at the entrance of the river Cree into the bay of Wigton.

CREMA, a town of the Venetian territory, on the rivers Serio and Travacene. It is the see of a bishop, and has a splendid cathedral, besides other churches and religious houses. Pop. 8800. 20 miles N. W. Cremona.

CREMIEU, a town of France, department of the Isere. Population 2200.

CRYMILN, a town of the Prussian states, Population 1500. 22 miles N. N. W. Berlin.

CREMNITZ, or KREMNITZA, the oldest mining town in Hungary, in the county of Barsch, amidst lofty mountains. The castle, built on an eminence, is encompassed with a double wall and several bastions. This town is famous for its mines of gold and silver. The number of miners is 1800, the total population 10,200. 18 miles N. W. Schonnitz. Long. 18. 53. 45. E. Lat. 48. 42. 2. N.

CREMONA, a city of Lombardy, the capital of the Cremonese, in the duchy of Milan. It is about five miles in circumference, and has spacious and regular streets, with several squares, but the houses are in general ill built. Here are 44 churches and chapels, 43 convents, and an obscure university. It is the see of a bishop; the cathedral is a massy structure, with a façade of beautiful white and red marble, ornamented in the interior with various paintings and pictures in fresco. The tower of Cremona is a very curious edifice, consisting of two octagonal obelisks, surmounted by a cross, and is 378 feet in height. The silk manufactures of this place are considerable; and it has long been noted for its superior violins. This city is of great antiquity, having been created a Roman colony in B. C. 201. Population 30,000. 38 miles S. E. Milan. Long. 10. 2. 12. E. Lat. 45. 7. 43. N.

CREMA, a town of Lower Austria, at the influx of the river Crems into the Danube. Houses 440. 48 miles S. E. Vienna.

CRESCENTINO, a town of Piedmont, on the Po. Pop. 4000. 20 miles N. E. Turin.

CRESTY, a town of France. Population 2300. 28 miles N. E. Paris.

CREST, Le, a town of France, on the Drome. Pop. 4500. 45 miles S. W. Grenoble.

CREVACUORE, a town of Piedmont, on a river of the same name. Population 5500.

CREVELT, a well built town of the Prussian states. It has a trade in fine linen. Population 7430. 6 miles N. W. Dusseldorf.

CREVILLIENTE, a town of Spain, in Valencia. Population 9000.

CREUSE, a river of France, which falls into the Vienne.

CREUSE, a department of France, which takes its name from the foregoing river, and is composed of portions of the old provinces of the Limosin, Auvergne, and Berry. Population 227,000.

CREUTZ, a town of Upper Slavonia, 118 miles S. Vienna.

CREUTZBURG, a town of Silesia, principality of Brieg. Population 1780.—Also a town in East Prussia. Population 1453. 15 miles S. S. W. Königsberg.

CREUTZENACH, a town of the Prussian states. Pop. 3200. 18 miles S. W. Mentz.

CREWKERNE, a town of England, in Somersetshire. Its church is a very fine Gothic edifice. It has manufactures of sail-cloth, girt-web, dowlas, and stockings. Population 3021. 20 miles S. E. Taunton.

CRICHTON, a village and parish of Scotland, county of Edinburgh. Pop. 1195.

CRICKHOWELL, a town of Wales, in Brecknockshire. Population 1008. 6 miles N. W. Abergavenny.

CRICKKEITH, a town of Wales, in Caernarvonshire. Pop. 330. 21 miles S. Caernarvon.

CRICKLADE, a town of England, in Wiltshire, on the Thames. It sends two members to parliament. The Thames is navigable to this town. Pop. 1506. 8½ miles W. N. W. London.

CRIFEY, a town and parish of Scotland, in Perthshire, on the Earn. It has manufactures of linen, paper, and leather, and a bleachfield. Population of the town and parish 4216. 18 miles W. Perth.

CRIFTEL, a mountain of Scotland, in the county of Kirkcudbright, near the mouth of the river Nith. Height 1831 feet.

CRILLOX, a village of France, department of Vaucluse.

CRIMEA, or CRIM TARTARY, a peninsula of European Russia, in the south of the government of Taurida, lying between Lat. 44. 30. and 46. N., and formed by the Black sea on the west and south, the straits of Caffa and the sea of Azoph on the east, and on the north by the isthmus of Perekop, by which it is placed in connection with the eastern part of Noghli Tartary. The superficial extent of the Crimea is estimated at about 3,600,000 English statute acres, the length being 200 miles, and the breadth 124. The chief riches of this immense tract are its flocks of sheep, and salt-marshes. Population about 300,000.

CRIMMITSCHAU, a town of Saxony, on the Pleisse. Population 1400.

CRIMORN, a parish of Scotland, county of Aberdeen. Population 990.

CRICQUETOT, a town of France, in Normandy, with 1650 inhabitants.

CROATIA, a province of the Austrian empire, with the title of kingdom, extending from the river Drave to the gulf of Venice, between Lat. 44. 8. 48. and 46. 25. 50. N. It is bounded E. by Slavonia and Bosnia, W. by Carniola and Styria. Its length is 160 miles, and its breadth about 100. It consists of two great divisions, Upper Slavonia and Croatia proper; and contains 9421 square miles, and 800,000 inhabitants. It is an exceedingly mountainous country. The principal rivers are the Save, the Drave, the Culpa, and the Unna, all navigable. The upper division of Croatia has an exceedingly rigorous climate. The other part enjoys a climate of tolerable mildness, particularly the tract on the sea coast. The southern division, being mountainous and rocky, is nearly barren throughout. In the north, on the other hand, there are tracts of the greatest fertility, where the vine is cultivated, and where, with proper management, silk, and the fruits common in the south of Europe, might be raised with success. At the peace of Vienna, in 1809, the whole of this country lying to the south of the Save was ceded by Austria to France, and incorporated by Bonaparte with the Illyrian provinces; but at the congress of Vienna, in 1815, it was restored to its former possessor.

CROCK, St, the name of various towns in the Austrian empire, and in Italy, all trifling.

CROISIC, LE, a seaport of France, with 2300 inhabitants. 40 miles W. Nantes.

CROIX, St, a small town of France, department of the Upper Rhine.—The name also of several other small towns.

CROIX DE VELVENTRE, St, a town of France, department of the Arriège. Population 1500.

CROMARTY, a county of Scotland, formed of several detached portions within the county of Ross. The boundaries of these districts are not well defined, and it is therefore difficult to determine the extent of each; but the whole county is said to contain an area of 345 square miles, or 220,800 English acres. The climate is moist and cold. The eastern districts are in many places fertile and cultivated, but the interior and western are almost uniformly wild and mountainous. Agriculture is yet in its infancy. The herring fisheries were at one time very flourishing, though now on the decline. This county sends a member to parliament alternately with the county of Nairn. It contains only two towns, Cromarty and Ullapool.

CROMARTY, a seaport town and parish of Scotland, in the above county, situated in the peninsula between the friths of Cromarty and Murray. It has a safe and commodious harbour, though but little commerce. Population of the town and parish, 2049. 19½ miles N. E. Inverness.

CROMARTY FRITH, a bay of Scotland, extending nearly 20 miles between the county of Ross on the north and west, and Cromarty and Ross on the south and east.

CROME, a maritime town of England, on the north-east coast of Norfolk: From the encroachments of the sea on this coast, a considerable portion of it has been swept away by the waves. It is still a considerable resort for sea-bathing. Population 1923. 130 miles N. N. E. London.

CROMFORD, a town of England, in Derbyshire, on the Derwent. Here Sir Richard Arkwright erected his first cotton spinning mill. It has manufactures of stockings and lace. Pop. 1342. 142 miles N. W. London.

CROMPTON, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 6482.

CRONACH, a town of the Bavarian states, 30 miles N. E. Bamberg. Population 2360.

CRONBORG, or CRONENBORG, a strong fortress of Denmark, on the island of Zealand, a little N. of Elsinore, and opposite Helsingborg, in Sweden. 24 miles N. Copenhagen.

CRONSTADT, or KRONSCHTAT, a seaport and fortress of Russia, in the government of St Petersburg, situated at the south-eastern extremity of the island of Retusari, in the gulf of Finland, 2 miles from the coast of Ingria, and 8 from that of Carelia. Some of the streets are tolerably regular; but the houses are in general built of wood, and there is scarcely any pavement. The principal public buildings are the imperial hospital for sailors, the civil hospital, the barracks, the English and German churches, &c. The population amounts to about 40,000, of whom at least 10,000 are sailors. The harbour is very spacious, and consists of the three divisions of the Merchants' Harbour, the War Harbour, and the Man of War's Mole. The War Harbour is the principal station of the Russian fleet. Adjoining it are the docks, for building and careening ships of war: they can hold ten men of war, and are faced with stone, and paved with granite: they are 40 feet deep and 105 broad. The Man of War's Mole is an interesting structure, inclosed by a strong rampart of granite, built in the sea, under the direction of the late Admiral Greig. Here is a foundry for casting cannon, and a rope-work for manufacturing cables of all sizes, with great magazines of naval stores. Cronstadt is defended towards the sea by fortifications projecting into the water, and towards the land by ramparts and bastions. The principal exports from this harbour are iron, flax, hemp, lintseed, oil, and tar. 22 miles W. St Petersburg. Long. 29. 49. 30. E. Lat. 59. 59. 26. N.

CRONSTADT, a large trading town of Transylvania, on the river Pareus. Here are three Lutheran and three Catholic churches, a Waldensian church, and a bishop of the same nation; a Lutheran and a Catholic academy, and a good public library. Population 23,000. 50 miles E. N. E. Hermannstadt.

CROOKED ISLAND, one of the Bismarck islands, or rather a cluster of islands, of which North Crooked island, about 20 miles long and 2 broad, South Crooked island, commonly called Acklin's island, and Long Key, or Fortune island, are the principal.

Long. of the middle of Crooked island, 74. W. Lat. 22. 30. N.

CROOKED LAKE, a lake of the United States, in New York, 18 miles in length. 40 miles S. Lake Ontario.

CROSS RIVER, in Western Africa, falls into the sea, at the head of Old Calabar bay.

CROSS CREEK, in the United States, Virginia, a tributary of the Ohio.

CROSS ROADS, a village of the United States, in Chester county, Pennsylvania, 27 miles S. E. Lancaster.

CROSS SOUND, a large opening, discovered by Cook, on the W. coast of North America. Long. of the entrance, 223. 40. E. Lat. 53. 3. N.

CROSSEN, a town of the Prussian states, 60 miles E. S. E. Berlin. Population 3500.

CROSSYOND, a village of Scotland, in the county of Fife, 2 miles W. Dunfermline.

CROSSGATES, a village of Scotland, county of Fife, between Edinburgh and Perth.

CROTENBORN, a large village of Saxony, circle of the Erzgebirge. Population 1700.

CROTEN, a head branch of the Hudson river, in Connecticut.

CROTON, i. e. a small seaport of France, with a good harbour. Houses 160. 12 miles N. W. Abbeville.

CROUCH, a river of England, in Essex, noted for its oyster beds.

CROWLAND, a town of England, in Lincolnshire. It had once a fine abbey, now in ruins. Crowland has now sunk to a large village. Population 2113. 88 miles N. London.

CROWLE, a parish and town of England, in Lincolnshire, 36 miles N. Lincoln. Population 1961.

CROWN POINT, a post township of the United States, in Essex county, New York, on Lake Champlain, 15 miles N. Ticonderoga. 184 from Montreal. Population 1022.

CROYDON, a town and parish of England, in the county of Surrey. It consists chiefly of one well built street, nearly a mile in length. The church contains some elegant monuments of the archbishops of Canterbury, to whom the manor once belonged. The summer assizes are held alternately here and at Guildford; and an elegant and commodious town-hall has recently been erected, for the accommodation of the judges. Population 9254. 10 miles S. London.

CROZON, a trading town of France, department of Finisterre. Population 6000.

CRUMLIN WATER, in Ireland, county of Antrim, falls into Lough Neagh.

CUZ, SANTA, one of the Carribee islands, in the West Indies, about 21 miles in length, and 9 in breadth; belonging to the Danes, to whom it was given back at the peace of 1814. It is in a high state of cultivation, and has about 3000 white inhabitants, and 30,000 slaves.

CUZ, SANTA, an island in the North Pacific ocean, 50 miles in circumference. Long. 244. 43. E. Lat. 34. 7. N.

CUZ, SANTA, DE LA SIERRA, a province of Peru. Population 16,000.

CRUZ, SANTA, a town of Honduras, 76 miles N. E. Valladolid.

CRUZ, SANTA, a town of Mexico, in New Biscay, 150 miles N. Durango.

CSATH, a market town of Hungary, 24 miles S. by W. Tokay.

CSEPREG, a market town of Hungary, county of Oedenburg. Long. 16. 39. E. Lat. 47. 23. N.

CSORNA, a town of Hungary, county of Oedenburg, 22 miles W. S. W. Raab.

CUBA, a large island in the West Indies, at the entrance into the gulf of Mexico. From E. to W. it is 764 miles in length; its greatest breadth is 134 miles; and where it is narrowest it is only 74 miles. It lies between 19. 48. and 23. 15. N. lat. and from 74. 2. to 84. 55. W. long. A chain of mountains extends from E. to W. along the whole length of the island, and divides it into two parts. From these mountains about 158 rivers pour down into the plains, washing down in their impetuous streams a very fine species of gold. The plains afford pasture to numerous herds of cattle, both wild and tame, which are hunted by the inhabitants chiefly for their skins. The soil is of great fertility, so that the fields are always covered with flowers and odoriferous plants, and the trees with foliage; and it produces in abundance ginger, long pepper, and other spices; aloes, mastic, cassia, fistula, manioc, maize, cocon, &c. Tobacco grows to great perfection; also sugar, coffee, &c. Iron is also found, and gold in small quantities. Cuba was discovered by Columbus in the year 1492; but it did not submit to the jurisdiction of Spain till 1511. Havana and Cuba are the two principal towns. Population in 1774, 171,623, including 44,328 slaves, and from 5000 to 6000 free negroes; in 1804, 432,000, including 108,000 slaves.

CUBA, a city of Cuba, with a good port, defended by a castle. It has now fallen into decay. Long. 76. 3. W. Lat. 20. 1. N.

CUBAGUA, a small island near the coast of Cumana. Long. 63. 30. W. Lat. 10. 42. N.

CUCKFIELD, a town of England, in Sussex, 46 miles S. London. Population 2335.

CUCKMERE, a small river of England, in Sussex, which falls into the English channel.

CUCKOLD'S POINT, on the east coast of Barbadoes. Long. 58. 28. W. Lat. 13. 32. N.

CUDALOWE, a town of the south of India, province of the Carnatic, on the W. shore of Bengal bay. Long. 79. 50. E. Lat. 11. 40. N.

CUDAPAH, a town and fortress of Hindostan, and the capital of a district of the same name. Long. 79. E. Lat. 14. 28. N.

CUDIBEN, a town of Hindostan, province of Simle. Long. 69. 4. E. Lat. 24. 46. N.

CUDWA, a town of Hindostan, province of Allahabad. Long. 80. 48. E. Lat. 26. 6. N.

CUDREFIN, a small town of Switzerland, 5 miles S. E. Neuschâtel.

CUELLAR, a small town of Spain, in Old Castile, 36 miles from Segovia. Pop. 3000.

CUENÇA, a city of Spain, in New Castile, the capital of the province of La Sierra de Cuenca. Cuenca is the see of a bishop, and contains a cathedral, an Episcopal palace, 13 parishes, 6 monasteries, and a like number of nunneries. The other public establishments are a seminary, three colleges, and an hospital. The cathedral is in the Gothic style, more than 300 feet long and 180 broad, and was founded in the 12th century by Alphonso IX.; it contains a beautiful chapel. The bridge across the Huecar is a noble structure of five arches. Population 6000. 75 miles E. Madrid.

CUENÇA, a province of Spain, which forms the eastern part of New Castile.

CUENÇA, SANTA ANA DE, the capital of a province of the same name, in Quito. The streets run in parallel lines, and the city has a beautiful appearance. Pop. 14,000. 180 miles S. Quito. Long. 70. 50. W. Lat. 2. 55. S.

CUERNAVACCA, a town of Mexico, 40 miles S. S. W. Mexico, 5400 feet above the level of the sea.

CUERS, a town of France, in Provence, 11 miles N. N. E. Toulon. Population 4900.

CUIABA, a river of Brazil, which falls into the Paraguary, Lat. 17. 50. S.

CUIANA, a town of Brazil, province of Matto Grosso, near which are rich gold mines. 280 miles E. Villa Bella. Long. 56. 2. W. Lat. 15. 33. S.

CUINZAC, the name of various bays in the West Indies.

CULEMBURG, a town of the Netherlands, on the Leek, 27 miles S. S. E. Amsterdam.

CULHAC, a town of France, in Auvergne, with 2900 inhabitants. 10 miles E. Riom.

CULIACAN, a town of Mexico, on the river Culiacan, in a district of the same name, and now included in the intendency of Sonora. The river enters the gulf of California, in Lat. 25. N.

CULLEN, a small and ill-built seaport of Scotland, in the county of Banff, at the conflux of the small stream of Cullen with the Murray frith. It has manufactures of linen yarn, and linen and damask cloths. Cullen sends a member to parliament in conjunction with Elgin, Banff, Kintore, and Inverury. Population 1452. 58½ miles N. W. Aberdeen.

CULLERA, a town of Spain, 21 miles S. Valencia. Population 4000.

CULLY, a neat little town of Switzerland, on the lake of Geneva. Population 2110.

CULM, a town of West Prussia, 18 miles N. N. W. Thorn.

CULM, or CHULM, a market town of Bohemia, circle of Sautz, 8 miles N. E. Egra.

CULMACH, a town of the Bavarian states, 15 miles N. N. W. Bayreuth. Pop. 3700.

CULNA, a town of Bengal, district of Burdwan, on the Bhagarutty river.

CULNA, a town of Bengal, district of Jessore. Long. 89. 32. E. Lat. 22. 50. N.

CULPÉE, a town of Bengal, district of Hooghly, on the Bhagarutty river. Long. 88. 25. E. Lat. 22. 6. N.

CULROSS, a county of the United States, in Virginia, between the Blue Ridge and the tide waters. Population 18,967. Slaves 8312. Chief town Fairfax.

CULROSS, a parish and ancient town of Scotland, in Perthshire, on the north shore of the frith of Forth. At the east end are the ruins of St Mungo's chapel; and near these the remains of a monastery, built in 1217 by Malcolm, earl of Fife. Farther west are the ruins of the old church. A small distance to the eastward stands the abbey house, an ancient building. Culross joins with Stirling, Dunfermline, Inverkeithing, and Queensferry, in sending a member to parliament. Population 1434. 5 miles W. Dunfermline.

CULTER, two small rivers of Scotland, which fall, the one into the Clyde, the other into the Dee.

CUMANA, a province and government of the Caraccas, in South America, bounded N. and E. by the Caribbean sea, W. by the river Unara, which divides it from Venezuela, and S. by the river Orinoco, except on those parts where the north bank of this river is inhabited. From the river Unara to the city of Cumana, the land is tolerably fertile. The soil on the sea coast is dry and barren, but contains an inexhaustible mine of marine and mineral salt. The country which borders on the Orinoco is only fit for pasturage, to which purpose it is applied, consisting chiefly of extensive commons, on which numerous herds of cattle are allowed to range. The soil in the remainder of the province is of wonderful fertility. The interior is mountainous, and from these high grounds numerous streams descend to water the plains. Pop. 24,000.

CUMANA, a city of South America, and capital of a province of the same name, in the government of the Caraccas, situated near the mouth of the gulf of Cariaco, about a mile from the sea, on an arid and sandy plain. The castle of St Antonio forms the only defence of the place. The town has no remarkable edifice, and the frequency of earthquakes forbids all embellishments. The houses are, for the same reason, low and lightly built. The suburbs are nearly as populous as the ancient city. Population, estimated by Depons at 24,000, and by M. Humboldt at 18,000 or 19,000. The city has been frequently destroyed by earthquakes; the last of which happened in 1797, when four-fifths of the city were thrown down. Long. 64. 13. W. Lat. 10. 37. N.

CUMANACOA, a town of the Caraccas, 14 leagues S. E. Cumana. Population 4200.

CUMMAGE, a town of Ireland, county of Down, 8 miles S. E. Belfast.

CUMBERLAND, a county of England, bounded N. by the Solway frith, Adrian's wall, and the river Liddal, which separate it from Scotland, for 30 miles; W. by the Irish sea 67 miles; S. by Westmoreland 48, and Lancashire 21 miles; and E. by Northumberland 51, and Durham 7 miles. It is situated between 2. 13. and 3. 30. W. long.

and 54. 6. and 55. 7. N. lat. Its extreme length is 72 miles, its greatest breadth 38, its circumference 224, inclosing an area of 1516 square miles, or 370,240 acres. According to a survey, published in 1793, there were 470,000 acres of old inclosures, 180,000 acres of improveable common, 342,000 occupied by the mountainous district, and 9900 by the lakes and waters; nearly 300,000 acres have since been inclosed. This county is divided into 5 wards, and 104 parishes. It contains 1 city, Carlisle, and 18 market-towns. Its only boroughs are Carlisle and Cocker-mouth. The county is mountainous, with fine vallies interspersed; and it abounds in numerous lakes. Of its numerous rivers and rivulets, the principal are the Eden, Eamont, Duddon, Derwent, Greata, Cocker, Caldew, Esk, Liddal, and Irthing. Cumberland abounds in mineral productions, the most important of which are lead, plumbago, coals, and limestone. The blue slate of Cumberland is of the finest quality, but little or none of it is sent out of the county. Owing to its great extent of coast, and numerous mountains, the climate of Cumberland is extremely variable, being on the low grounds mild and temperate, while on the mountains snow may be seen for 6 or 8 months. Everywhere it is subject to great rains. Varieties of excellent fish are procured from the coasts, lakes, and rivers; the only kinds exported are cured cod for the Liverpool market, salmon, and potted char, for London. The manufactures of this county, neither numerous nor extensive, consist chiefly of gingham, calicoes, corduroys, and other cotton goods; sail-cloth, carpets, paper, pottery, and glass bottles. The chief ports are Whitehaven, Workington, Maryport, and Harrington. Cumberland cannot boast of many monuments of antiquity. This county sends two members to parliament. Population 156,124.

CUMBERLAND, a county of the United States, in New Brunswick, at the head of the bay of Fundy.—2d, A county in the south-west part of Maine, bounded N. by Oxford, E. by Lincoln, S. by the Atlantic, and W. by York. Population 42,631. Chief town Portland.—3d, A county of New Jersey, on Delaware bay, bounded N. by Gloucester county, E. by Cape May county, S. by Delaware bay, and W. by Salem county. Population 12,670. Chief town Bridgetown.—4th, A county of Pennsylvania, bounded N. by Mifflin, E. by the Susquehanna, which separates it from Deuphin, S. by York and Adams, and S. W. and W. by Franklin. Population 26,757. Chief town Carlisle.—5th, A county of Virginia, on the N. side of Appomatox river, which divides it from Prince Edward. Pop. 9892. Slaves 6102. Chief town Cartersville.—6th, A county of Fayette district, North Carolina. Pop. 3302. Slaves 2796. Chief town Fayetteville.—7th, A county of Kentucky. Pop. 6101. Slaves 922. Chief town Berksville.—8th, A township of Providence county, Rhode Island, 8 miles N. Providence. Pop. 2110.—8th, A township of Greene county, Pennsylvania. Population 1521.—10th, A post town and capital of Allegheny county, Maryland, on the Potomac, 10½ miles N. W. Washington.

CUMBERLAND ISLAND, an island near the coast of Georgia, in North America, about 20 miles in circumference. Long. 81. 40. W. Lat. 31. N.

CUMBERLAND ISLANDS, near the northern coast of New Holland. Long. 211. 28. W. Lat. 20. 36. S.

CUMBERLAND MOUNTAINS, a ridge of the Allegheny mountains, in Virginia.

CUMBERLAND RIVER, a river of the United States, which rises in Virginia, and after a course of 450 miles, falls into the Ohio, 10 miles above the mouth of the Tennessee.

CUMBERNAULD, a village and parish of Scotland, in Dumbartonshire. Pop. 2864.

CUMBRAY, GREAT AND LITTLE, two small islands of Scotland, in the frith of Clyde. Population 637.

CUMIANA, a town of Piedmont, 12 miles S.W. Turin. Population 4600.

CUMMINGTON, a post township of the United States, in Hampshire county, Massachusetts, 20 miles N. W. Northampton. Population 1009.

CUMROCK, OLD, a village and parish of Scotland, county of Ayr. Population 2343. 15 miles E. Ayr.—2d, NEW, a parish in Ayrshire. Population 1666.

CUNDAPOUR, a seaport of India, province of Malabar. Long. 74. 50. E. Lat. 13. 40. N.

CUNEHAT, a town of France, department of the Puy de Dome. Population 2000.

CUNERSDORF, a village of Prussia, 3 miles E. N. E. Frankfort on the Oder.

CUNNOON, a town of the south of India, province of Mysore, 25 miles from Mysore.

CUORONE, a neat town of Piedmont, on the Orco, with 9250 inhabitants.

CUPAR, a town and parish of Scotland, in the county of Fife. The town is situated at the junction of the river Eden with the stream St Mary, and consists of three streets, with a number of lanes and detached houses. A convent and chapel formerly stood at the Castle hill, of which only a part of the latter is now seen. A new street, formed on a regular plan, contains the county-hall, and other public buildings. A new prison has now been erected on the south bank of the Eden. The church is a plain modern edifice; but its steeple is of some antiquity, and is admired for its graceful architecture. The principal manufacture is linen. Cupar is a royal burgh, and joins with Perth, Dundee, Forfar, and St Andrew's, in sending a member to parliament. Population 6892. 22 miles E. E. Perth.

CUPAR-ANGUS, a parish, and an irregularly built town of Scotland, in the counties of Perth and Forfar, on a small rivulet which falls into the Isla. It has manufactures of linen and leather. Population 2622. 19½ miles N. N. E. Perth.

CURE, ST LEWIS DE, a town of South America, in the Curacao. Population 4000. 68 miles S. W. Curacao. Lat. 9. 45. N.

CURACOA, an island in the Caribbean sea, about 75 miles from the coast of the Curacao, with several good ports; 30 miles long and 10 broad. Long. 68. 2. W. Lat. 12. 6. N.

CURACOA, a city of the above island, which is large and well built, with a good port.

CURICO, a town of Chili, province of Maule. Lat. 34. 14. S.

CURISCHE HAFEN, i. e. the Gulf or Bay of Courland, an arm of the sea in East Prussia, which communicates with the Baltic, about 70 miles long, but of unequal breadth.

CURRAH, a town of Hindostan, on the Ganges. Long. 81. 24. E. Lat. 25. 44. N.

CURRIE, a village and parish of Scotland, in the county of Edinburgh. Pop. 1715.

CURRITUCK, a county of the United States, on the coast of Edenton district, North Carolina, bounded N. by Virginia, E. by Currituck sound, S. by Albemarle sound, and W. by Camden county. Population 6985. Slaves 1631.—Dismal swamp is in this county. Currituck sound communicates with Albemarle sound, and also by several inlets with the Atlantic.

CURRUANASS, a town of Hindostan, province of Delhi. Long. 78. 14. E. Lat. 28. 20. N.

CURZOLA, an island in the Adriatic, 24 miles long, separated by a narrow strait from the peninsula of Sabioncello, in Dalmatia. Population 6500.—Its capital is of the same name, and has a good harbour.

CURZOLARI, five small islands in the Mediterranean, near the coast of Greece. Long. 21. 18. E. Lat. 38. 36. N.

CUSSET, a town of France, in Auvergne, on the river Allier, with 3959 inhabitants.

CUSI, a village of Dalmatia, near Montenegro. Population 1500.

CUSTEE, a flourishing town of Bengal, district of Ranjashy, situated on a branch of the Ganges. Long. 80. 3. E. Lat. 23. 57. N.

CUSTUM, a fortified town of the Prussian states, capital of the New Mark of Brandenburg, at the union of the Wartha with the Oder. It is small, but has three spacious suburbs. Pop. 4500. 48 miles E. Berlin.

CUSO-LUYU, a large river of South America, in Patagonia, which falls into the Atlantic, in Lat. 41. S.

CUTCEN, an extensive district of Hindostan, lying principally between Long. 69. and 71. E. Lat. 23. and 24. N.

CUTTACK, the capital of an extensive district of Hindostan, province of Orissa, lying chiefly between the 20th and 22d degrees of N. Lat. It was formerly fortified, and contained a number of good houses and good bazars; but has now fallen to decay. It stands in an island formed by the Mahanuddy river. Long. 86. 10. E. Lat. 20. 31. N.

CUTWA, a town of Bengal, district of Burdwan, on the Bhagarutty river.

CUXHAVEN, a village and seaport of Germany, in the duchy of Bremen, situated on the left bank of the Elbe, at its mouth. The harbour is large and commodious. During the French revolutionary war, Cuxhaven was (after 1795) a place of the utmost importance, for the maintenance of intercourse between England and the continent. 60 miles N. W. Hamburg.

CUYAHOGA, a county of the United States, in Ohio, on Lake Erie, at the mouth of Cuyahoga river. Pop. in 1815, 2500. Chief town Cleveland.—ZIL, A river of Ohio, which enters Lake Erie, after a course of 60 miles.

CUYO, or CUJO, a large province of South America, on the eastern side of the Andes.

CUZCO, a city of Peru, and the ancient capital of the Peruvian empire, in South America, founded, according to the common tradition, in 1043, by Manca Capac, the first Inca of Peru. The grandeur and magnificence of the edifices, of the fortresses, and of the temple of the sun, struck the Spaniards with astonishment in 1534, when the city was taken possession of by Francis Pizarro. On a hill towards the north are yet seen the ruins of a fortress built by the Incas, which had a communication by means of subterraneous passages, with three forts built in the walls of Cuzco. All the descendants of the Incas resided in a particular quarter. Cuzco is at present a large city, containing about 20,000 inhabitants. The houses are almost all built of stone, and are of fine proportions. The cathedral is large, beautiful, and rich, and of elegant architecture. There are, besides, nine other parish churches; likewise convents and hospitals, some of which have very ample revenues. The city preserves many monuments of its ancient grandeur. 550 miles E. S. E. Lima. Long. 71. 4. W. Lat. 13. 42. S.

CYCLADES, the name given by the ancients to a group of islands in the Archipelago. Their names are Andros, Santorin, Naxos, Amorgo, Paros, Peripho, Milo, Zea, Tino, and Stampalia.

CYPRUS, a large island of Asiatic Turkey, near the coast of Asia Minor, about 140 miles in length and 75 in breadth. It was much celebrated in the ancient world. In 1480, it fell into the hands of the Venetians, from whom it was wrested in 1570 by the Turks, who have ever since continued masters of the island. It has now declined greatly from its ancient wealth and importance, and is not supposed to contain above 60,000 inhabitants. Cyprus is nearly traversed from east to west by two chains of mountains, which are lofty, and covered with snow during winter. To the south of these mountains, the plains, during the summer, are hot and sultry, and are exposed, without shelter, to the burning blasts which blow from the deserts of Africa and Arabia. On the other hand, the cold of winter is very severe. The corn of Cyprus is of excellent quality; but wine is the staple product of the island. The wines are sweet, and require to be kept forty years before they are used. All the valuable kinds are white, the red being merely used ad vinum. The apricots of Cyprus are delicious, and may be purchased at three shillings a bushel; many varieties of the gourd and pumpkin are also produced. Other products are cheese, wool, cotton, silk, and salt. Cyprus is noted for the common Turkey manufactures of leather, carpets, and printed cottons. The first is remarkable for its brilliant and lively colour. The carpets are also of excellent workmanship. The printed cottons have this valuable quality, that the colours, instead of fading, become more splendid by washing. Two-thirds of the inhabitants of Cyprus are Christian, but are cruelly oppressed by their Turkish masters, under whom, from being one of the most fertile and beautiful spots in the world, it has been converted almost into a desert. The principal towns of Cyprus are Nicosia, Famagusta, and Larnica.

CYR, SR, the name of a number of small towns and villages in France.

CYRUS, ST, a village and parish of Scotland, in Kincardineshire. Population 1641.

CZARNIOW, a town of Prussian Poland, on the Netz, with 1700 inhabitants.

CZARTORYSK, a small town of Russia; 42 miles E. S. W. Prague.

CZASLAW, a town of Bohemia, the capital of the circle of the same name. Pop. 2000.

CZASNIKI, a small town of Russian Lithuania, 45 miles S. E. Polotzk.

CZATALDZA, a town of Greece, in Thessaly proper. Population 3000.

CZENSTOCHOWA, NEW, a town of Russian Poland, with 170 houses. Old Czenstochowa is in the vicinity, and contains 280 houses. 50 miles N. N. W. Cracow.

CZERNIGOV, or TCHERNIGOV, a government of European Russia, erected in 1781, between those of Mohilev, Smolensko, Orel, Kursk, Pultava, Kiev, and Minsk.

CZERNIGOV, or TCHERNIGOW, the capital of the foregoing government, on the Dniester. Population 5000. 344 miles S. W. Moscow. Long. 32. 13. E. Lat. 51. 20. N.

CZERNITZ, a town of Walachia, on the Danube, 44 miles E. Belgrade.

CZERNOVITZ, or TCHERNOWITZ, a town of the Austrian empire, on the Pruth, 140 miles S. E. Jassy. Population 5400. Long. 28. 33. E. Lat. 48. 25. 40' N.

CZESZCZ, a town of Poland, on the Vistula, 25 miles S. E. Warsaw.

CZKOCYN, a town of Prussian Poland, in Podlachia. Population 2500.

CZONGRAD, a market town of Hungary, county of the same name. Long. 20. 9. E. Lat. 46. 43. 12. N.

D.

DABUL, a town of Hindostan, on the coast of Concan, 80 miles S. Bombay.

DACCA DELTAPORE, an extensive and rich district of Bengal, situated principally between the 23d and 24th degrees of N. lat. It is intersected by the Ganges and Brahmapootra, two of the largest rivers in the world, which, with their various branches, form a complete inland navigation, extending to every part of the country, so that every town having its river or canal, the general mode of travelling or conveying goods is by water.

Dacca, a large city, capital of the above named district, and for 80 years the capital of Bengal. It is situated on the northern bank of a deep and broad river called the Boor Gunga (Old Ganges), at the distance of 100 miles from the sea. The houses of the wealthy are built of brick, but the bazars are only tiled or thatched; but as every vacant spot is filled with trees, from a distance it looks like a grove. The English factory established here being surrounded with walls, and having small bastions, has the appearance of a fort. The ancient etadel is now in ruins, but the palace is still in good repair. It is in this city or its vicinity that are manufactured those beautiful muslins, which are exported to every part of the civilised world. It has also an extensive manufacture of shell bracelets, much worn by the Hindoo women. The neighbourhood of the city abounds with game of all sorts, from the tiger to the quail, and is on this account a great resort of Europeans during the three cold months. 180 miles from Calcutta by land. Long. 90. 17. E. Lat. 23. 42. N.

DACRE, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 777.

DADI, a town of Greece, near Parnassus, 75 miles S. Larissa. Population 9000.

DADIZELLE, a town of the Netherlands, 13 miles E. by S. Ypres. Population 1550.

DAFF, a village of Scotland, in Renfrewshire, 8 miles W. Greenock.

DAGENHAM, a village and parish of England, in Essex, 9 miles E. London. Pop. 1864.

DAGHESTAN, a mountainous country of Asia, on the west coast of the Caspian sea, between the efflux of the rivers Koisin and Rubas, 184 miles in length, by between 30 and 45 in breadth.

DAGOX, DAGON, or DAGW, an island situated in the Baltic, at the entrance of the gulf of Finland, about 40 miles long, and from 26 to 36 broad.

DAGON, or DAGOON, the ancient town of the city of Rangoon, the present capital of Pegue, but properly only applied to the celebrated temple in the vicinity of that place.

• DAGOUZ, a town of Egypt, on the Damietta branch of the Nile, a resort of pirates. 12 miles N. Cairo.

DAOSBOROUGH, a post township and hundred of the United States, in Sussex county, Delaware, on Pepera creek, 19 miles from Broadkill, 127 from Philadelphia.

DANALAC, or DAHLAK, an island in the Red sea, nearly opposite to Massuah, about 25 miles in length, and 12 in breadth.

• DAHRI, a large village of Arabia, in the country of Yemen, 46 miles S. E. Loheia.

DAHME, a town of the Prussian states, 40 miles S. Berlin. Population 2900.

DAHOMEY, a kingdom in the interior of Western Africa, behind the Slave coast. The country is very little known to Europeans. The parts which have been visited are very beautiful and fertile, and rise for about 150 miles with a gradual slope, but without any great elevation. The soil is a deep rich clay, yielding maize, millet, and Guinea corn in abundance. The inhabitants are a warlike and ferocious race. Their institutions and political system are of a very extraordinary character. Their women are trained to arms. All the females of the nation are considered as belonging to the king, and a distribution of wives takes place once a year, at a grand festival. The government is the most absolute despotism, yet founded not on force and terror, but on a blind and idolatrous veneration for the person of the sovereign. The ferocity which prevails among this nation almost surpasses belief. Human skulls form the favourite ornament in the construction of the palaces and temples. The king's sleeping chamber has the floor paved with the skulls, and the roof ornamented with the jawbones, of chiefs whom he has overcome in battle. Every year a grand festival is held, which lasts for several weeks, and during which, the king waters the graves of his ancestors with hosts of human victims.

DAILT, a parish of Scotland, in Ayrshire. Population 2101.

DAINA, a village of Syria, in the pachalic of Aleppo, 23 miles from Antioch.

DAIR EL KAMAR, a town of Syria, extensive and ill built. Population 1600 or 1800 Greek Catholics, Maronites, and Druses.

DAIRIEZ, a parish of Scotland, in the county of Fife. Population 589.

DAL, the third river in Sweden in size, rises amid the mountains on the Norwegian frontiers, and falls into the gulf of Bothnia.

• DALABERG, a small town of Sweden, in West Gothland, 30 miles N. E. Uddevalla.

DALRYMPH, a village of Scotland, in Kirkcudbright, recently built.

DALZ, a river of Ireland, county of Donegal, which runs into the Foyle.

DALY, or DALL, a village of the island of Cyprus, situated on an eminence.

DALY-ABNEY, a hamlet of England, in Derbyshire. Population 418.

DALCARLIA, an extensive province of Sweden, bounded W. by the mountains of Norway, N. by Herjedal, E. by Helsingland, S. by Westmannland. It contains nearly 1300 English square miles, and (in 1811) 124,000 inhabitants. Its aspect is in general mountainous, but the mountains are of little elevation, except in the neighbourhood of Norway. It is chequered with lakes of different sizes, and contains two large rivers, the Dal and the Ljusne. The chief wealth of Dalecarlia lies in its mines, particularly thence of copper, the chief of which are at Fahlun and Afcestad. It is productive also in iron. Sulphur is likewise found. The chief towns in this province are Fahlun, Hedemora, and Soter.

DALEN, a town of the Prussian states, 12 miles S. E. Ruremond. Population 3650.

DALEN, a town of Saxony, 27 miles E. Leipsic. Population 1300.

DALGETT, a parish of Scotland, in Fifeshire. Population 912.

DALKEITH, a town and parish of Scotland, in the county of Edinburgh. It is tolerably well built, and the principal street is spacious: in it stands the church; also the jail. Adjoining to the church is a fine old building, now the burying place of the Buccleuch family of Scotland. In this town is held the largest market for grain in Scotland, on the Thursdays; also a meal market on the Mondays, and one for fat cattle and sheep on the Tuesdays: there is also an annual fair for horses in May. The duke of Buccleuch has a fine seat in the vicinity of the town. There are two charity schools. Population 5169. 6 miles S. E. Edinburgh.

DALKEY, a village and islet of Ireland, on the south side of Dublin bay.

DALLA, the principal town of a district of the same name, in the Delta of the Irrawaddy river. It has a manufacture of salt.

DALMALLY, a village of Scotland, in Argyllshire, 16 miles N. Inverary.

DALMATIA, a country in the south of Europe, extending along the east side of the Adriatic, between 42. 25. and 45. 35. N. lat. and 12. 10. and 16. 40. E. long. It is partly continental, and partly insular. The continental portion is now distributed into the circles of Zara, Spalatro, and Macarsca. The islands are very numerous; the principal are Brazza, Lesina, Corzola, and Melada. The other towns of note are Spalatro, Sebenico, Knin, Trau, Narenta, and Almissa. The whole, reckoning the territories of Cattaro and Ragusa, contains about 6700 square miles, with 343,000 inhabitants. The surface of great part of Dalmatia is, hilly and unproductive, but it contains many beautiful and fertile vallies. The pasturages are considerable. Dalmatia is rich also in metallic products, particularly in marble and gypsum; mines of iron are abundant, but those of gold and silver have disappeared. The chief products of Dalmatia are maize, wheat, grapes, olives, and a small quantity of silk.

DALMELLINGTON, a village and parish of Scotland, in Ayrshire. Population 476.

DALMENY, a village and parish of Scotland, in Linlithgowshire. Population 1406.

DALRY, a village and parish of Scotland, in Ayrshire, with manufactures of cotton. Population of the parish 3318.

DALSERF, a parish and village of Scotland, in Lanarkshire. Population 2054.

DALSLAND, THALLAND, or DALLA, a province of Sweden, in West Gothland, bounded on the east by the lake of Wener, and on the west by Norway, 85 miles in length, and 40 in breadth. Population 44,000.

DALTON, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 2280.

DALTON IN FURNESS, a parish of England, in Lancashire. Population 2440.

DAMAR, an open town of Arabia, in Yemen, with a large castle. Houses 5000.

DAMASCUS, a city of Syria, the capital of the pachalik of the same name, situated in a fertile plain amidst extensive gardens, forming a circuit of between 25 and 30 miles. It is surrounded with walls, defended by towers, which have now fallen into a ruinous state. The streets are in general narrow, of regular width, though not in straight lines; they are well paved, and have elevated footpaths on each side. Damascus contains above 500 large and magnificent houses, which are entitled to the name of palace; each house has a canal or fountain. The number of mosques and chapels is also very great; and the grand mosque is of great extent and magnificence. An hospital for the indigent sick is attached to the edifice. This mosque is said to have been originally a Christian church, and the cathedral of Damascus. The mosques are mostly fronted by a court. One mosque is beautifully adorned with all kinds of fine marble, like mosaic pavement; and the tower or minaret of another is entirely cased with pantiles. There are several hospitals here, of which the finest is that constructed by the Sultan Selim, consisting of a spacious quadrangle, lined by an interior colonade, which is entirely roofed by 40 small domes covered with lead. On the south side of the court is a mosque, with a magnificent portico and two fine minarets, which is surmounted by a spacious cupola. There is a Greek, Maronite, Syrian, and Armenian church. There are eight synagogues of the Jews. The castle, situated towards the south-west part of the city, and about three quarters of a mile in circuit, is a fine rustic edifice, with three square towers in front, and five on each side. This city is the seat of a considerable trade. It was celebrated for the manufacture of sabres, of such peculiar quality as to be perfectly elastic. Extensive manufactures are carried on in silk and cotton stuffs. Leather is likewise an article of manufacture here.

but no linen is made. A great quantity of soap is fabricated, and exported to Egypt. Dried fruits and sweetmeats are sent to Turkey. Cotton cloth, handkerchiefs, slippers, copper kettles, horse-shoes, nails, tobacco pipes, and spices, shawls, and the rich fabrics of Surat, are brought through Bagdad; iron, lead, tin, cochineal, broad cloth, sugar, and such other European articles as are required in the city, come through Saidia, Bairout, and Tripoli. Commerce is carried on chiefly by caravans, of which the principal is that which takes place annually with the pilgrims to Mecca. Three caravans besides, each accompanied by above 2500 armed men, go thrice a-year to Bagdad, the journey occupying 30 days; those to Aleppo travel twice or thrice a-month; besides which, there are many to different parts of Syria. Damascus is a place of great antiquity, and is alluded to in the days of Abraham. The population amounts to about 200,000; of whom it is computed there are 20,000 Catholic Christians, 5000 Schismatics, and 1000 families of Jews. The remaining inhabitants are Mahometans. 136 miles N. Jerusalem, 195 S. Antioch. Long. 36. 30. E. Lat. 33. 30. N.

DAMAUN, a seaport on the western coast of India. Long. 73. 1. E. Lat. 20. 22. N.

DAMBACH, a town of France, department of the Lower Rhine. Population 2300.

DAMERY, a town of France, in Champagne. Population 1850.

DAMGAN, a town of Persia, province of Khorassan. Long. 53. 36. E. Lat. 35. 50. N.

DAMIANO, ST, a town of Piedmont, on the Borbo. Pop. 6110. 9 miles S. W. Asti.

DAMICOTTA, a town of Hindostan, district of Coimbeoor, 60 miles W. Seringapatam.

DAMIETTA, a large city of Lower Egypt, on the eastern branch of the Nile, about six miles above its junction with the sea. It is situated on the narrow neck of land, from two to six miles in breadth, interposed between the Nile and the lake Menzaleh. The houses are white, built in a crescent along the right bank of the river; and near the river they are very high; most of them have pleasant saloons on their terraced roofs, commanding a delightful view of the Nile, the lake, and the rich country intervening. The walls are now in ruins, and the two modern forts are not in a defensible state. The chief disadvantage of Damietta consists in the want of a harbour. It trades notwithstanding with Syria, Cyprus, and other parts of the Turkish empire. It exports thither hides, tallow, rice, and occasionally corn; while it receives in return tobacco, wood, soap, cotton, oil, and raw silk. The country round Damietta is perhaps the most fertile in Egypt, being carefully improved by irrigation, and producing rice of an extremely fine quality. The population of Damietta is stated by Savary at 80,000; but more sober estimates reduce it to 30,000 or 40,000. Long. 31. 49. 45. E. Lat. 31. 25. N.

DAMN, AET OR OLD, a fortified town of Farther Pomerania. Population 1900.

DAMMARTIN, a town of France, department of the Seine and Marne. Pop. 3000.

DAMME, a small fortified town of the Netherlands, 3 miles N. N. E. Bruges.

DAMPIER'S BAY, or SMITH'S BAY, a spacious bay on the west coast of New Holland, penetrating 150 miles into the land.

DAN, a river of the United States, which unites with Staunton river, to form the Roanoke.

DANBURY, a post township of the United States, in Fairfield county, Connecticut. Population 3606. 33 miles W. N. W. New Haven.—2d, A township in Huron county, Ohio, about 20 miles long and 2 or 3 wide.

DANNY, a village and parish of England, North Riding of Yorkshire. Pop. 1373.

DANNY, a post township of the United States, in Rutland county, Vermont, 32 miles W. Windsor. Population 1730.

DANCALI, an extensive territory of Eastern Africa, situated between Abyssinia and the Red sea.

DANCE POINT, in Virginia, in James' river. Long. 76. 57. W. Lat. 37. 12. N.

DANE, a river of England, which joins the Wever, in the county of Chester.

DANGER, ISLANDS OF, in the Pacific ocean, seen by Commodore Byron in June 1765.

DANICHA, a town of Asiatic Russia, in the government of Tobolsk.

DANIELE, ST, a thriving town of the Venetian territory, in Friuli. Population 1700.

DANIELSVILLE, a post town of the United States, and capital of Madison county, Georgia, 90 miles from Milledgeville.

DANILOV, a town of Russia, in the government of Jaroslavl. Population 1250.

DANNEMORA, or DANNMORA, the most celebrated iron mine in Sweden, lying in the province of Upsal. In the neighbourhood of the mine are the establishments for smelting, hammering, and casting the iron. They form several villages of considerable size, each with three or four regular streets, a church, a school, and an hospital. The mine alone employs about 1200 individuals. 60 miles N. N. W. Stockholm.

DANNENBERG, a town of Hanover, on the Jetzel. Population 1430.

DANSHALT, a small village of Scotland, parish of Auchtermuchty, Fifehire.

DANTZIC, an opulent commercial city of West Prussia, on the Vistula, about five miles from its mouth. The town is traversed by two small rivers, which soon after unite and fall into the Vistula. Dantzic is of very ancient date. It is surrounded with ramparts, lined with brass cannon, and kept in good repair; but a more effectual defence consists in the power of laying the country on one side under water, and of resisting assailants on the other from fortified heights. The harbour is formed by the mouth of the Vistula, and is also defended by forts. The road, or what is properly called the gulf of Dantzic, consists of an arm of the sea, sheltered from the north winds by the tongue of land on which stands the small town of Hels. The chief branch of trade at Dantzie consists in the exportation of corn from Prussia and Poland. Potash, hemp, flax, linen, timber, all enter into the farther list of exports. In return, the inland country receives from Dantzie merchandises imported from almost every part of Europe; groceries, wine, oil, woollens, silk, iron, copper, lead, skins, furs, &c. Amber is found in the neighbourhood of Dantzie, and exported to the south of Europe. Of the shipping that frequent the port, comparatively few belong to it; the British are the most numerous, and after them the Dutch, Danish, and Swedish. Dantzie contains four dock-yards for building merchantmen. The principal public buildings are the cathedral, the town-house, the arsenal, the building formerly occupied by the Jesuits, the court of the nobles, the church of St Catharine. Of the 21 churches in this town, 12 belong to the Lutherans, 7 to the Catholics, and 2 to the Calvinists. All sects enjoy equal liberty. The charitable establishments are numerous. There is here an academy, a number of schools, and several learned institutions. Dantzie was probably founded by a Danish colony in the 12th century, the original name being Dans-vick. In 1454 it came under the sovereignty of Poland; in 1734 it was besieged, and forced to surrender to the Russians and Saxons. In 1793 it was occupied by the Prussians. It was taken by the French in May 1807, after a long siege; and after Bonaparte's disastrous campaign in Russia, it was blockaded and obliged to surrender, after a long and able defence by General Rapp. At the peace of Paris, in 1814, it reverted to Prussia. Pop. 44,500. 68 miles W. S. W. Konigsberg, 235 N. E. Berlin.

DANUBE, the greatest river in Europe, in length of course as in volume of water, rises in the grand duchy of Baden, at Donau Eschingen, from three springs. After receiving in Suabia a number of small streams, it takes a north-east course, becomes navigable at Ulm, and receives copious supplies from the east and north sides of the Alps, by the successive junction of the Iller, Lech, Isar, and Inn. It passes Vienna, and near Presburg receives the large river Morava from the north, and holds a course, at one time eastward, at another southward. From Belgrade to Orsava it forms the boundary between the Turkish and Austrian dominions, and after running long in an easterly direction, turns to the northward, receives the tributary waters of Moldavia and Bessarabia, and discharges itself finally into the Black sea by five mouths, in 10. of E. long. and between 44. 30. and 45. 30. of N. lat. The length of its course is about 1800 miles; its breadth is very various, but for a great way above its mouth, not less than from two to three miles.

DANUBE, CIRCLE OF THE UPPER, one of the chief divisions of the kingdom of Bavaria.

It has on its different frontiers the circles of the Rezat, the Regen, and the Isar; Tyrol, the lake of Constance, and Wirtemberg. It contains 4360 square miles, with 470,000 inhabitants, mostly Catholics.

DANUBE, CIRCLE OF THE LOWER, another of the circles of Bavaria, which is made up of the greater part of Lower Bavaria proper, and the principality of Passau. It borders on Bohemia, Upper Austria, and the circles of the Isar and Regen. Its area is 4335 square miles, and its inhabitants amount to 396,150, who are, with few exceptions, Catholics.

DANUBE, CIRCLE OF THE, in the grand duchy of Baden. Population 72,785.

DANVERS, a post township of the United States, in Essex county, Massachusetts, 15 miles N. E. Boston. Population 3127.

DANVILLE, a post town of the United States, and capital of Mercer county, Kentucky, on the south-west side of Dick's river. 40 miles S. by W. Frankfort.—2d, A post township and capital of Caledonia county, Vermont, 25 miles N. E. Montpelier. Population 2340.—3d, A post township and capital of Columbia county, Pennsylvania, on the Susquehanna, at the mouth of Muddy creek, 12 miles above Northumberland.—4th, A post town of Pittsylvania county, Virginia, on Dan river, near the southern boundary of the state, 160 miles S. W. Richmond.

DAOUP, a town of Hindostan, province of Malwah. Long. 74. 26. E. Lat. 23. 7. N.

DAOUDCANDY, a town of Bengal, on the river Goomty. Long. 93. 36. E. Lat. 23. 30. N.

DAOUDNAGUR, a town of Hindostan, in Behar. Long. 84. 27. E. Lat. 25. 6. N.

DARABJIRE, a town of Persia, in the province of Kerman. A considerable portion of it is in ruins. Population 10,000 or 15,000, 160 miles N. E. Schiras. Long. 54. 15. E. Lat. 29. N.

DARAB, or DRAB, a river of Northern Africa, absorbed in the sands of the desert.

DARANAGUR, a town of Hindostan, province of Delhi. Long. 78. 4. E. Lat. 29. 16. N.

DARAPORAM, a large mud fort town of Hindostan, where they are now building a new town. Long. 77. 40. E. Lat. 10. 45. N.

DARBY, LOWER, a post township of the United States, in Delaware county, Pennsylvania, on Darby creek, which runs into the Delaware, 7 miles S. W. by W. Philadelphia. Population 1085.—2d, UPPER, A township of Delaware county, Pennsylvania, adjoining Lower Darby. Population 966.

DARDANELLES, two old and strong castles on the straits of Gallipoli, or the Hellespont (sometimes called from them the strait of the Dardanelles), between the sea of Marmora and the Grecian archipelago. Long. 26. 18. 30. E. Lat. 40. 9. N.

DARENFOORT, a town of Hindostan, 103 miles S. E. Seringatpata.

DARENT, a river of England, which runs into the Thames, 8 miles N. Dartford.

DARFUR, or DARFOUR, a considerable kingdom of Central Africa, filling up a large portion of the wide interval between Abyssinia and Bornou. It is difficult to fix its limits, being known to us almost solely by the journey of Mr. Browne, one of the most enterprising of modern travellers. On the east it has Kordofan, and the country of the Shilluks, which separate it from Senaar and Abyssinia; on the west, Bergeos, which divides it from Bagharnie and Bornou; while the regions to the south are occupied by barbarous nations extending to and inhabiting the Mountains of the Moon, and the early course of the Bahr-el-Abiad. With respect to its climate, productions, the animals it contains, and also the manners of its inhabitants, and its government, it entirely resembles other countries in Africa. The people, as in other parts of the country, are semi-barbarous; their government is a despotism, and their occupation chiefly agriculture. The mechanical arts are at a low ebb, and their houses accordingly are rudely constructed of clay, with a coating of plaster, and with proportionably scanty accommodations. Its commerce is extensive. The grand intercourse is with Egypt, and is carried on entirely by the African system of caravans. There is no regular caravan, as between Fezzan and Cairo; the motions of that from Fur are extremely uncertain, and two or even three years sometimes elapse without one. The caravan going to Egypt consists often of 2000 camels and 1000 men. Among the exports, the most important are slaves, male and female, taken in the negro countries to the south; camels, ivory, the horns, teeth, and hide of the rhinoceros and hippopotamus; ostrich feathers, gum, pimento, parrots in abundance, and a small quantity of white copper. The imports are extremely various, comprising beads of all sorts, toys, glass, arms, light cloths of different kinds, chiefly made in Egypt, with some of French manufacture, red Barbary caps, small carpets, silks wrought and unwrought, shoes, and a considerable quantity of writing paper.

DARIEN, a post town and seaport of the United States, in Mackintosh county, Georgia, on the north and principal channel of the Altamaha, 12 miles from the bar. Population in 1819, between 1000 and 2000. 62 miles S. S. W. Savannah.

DARIEN, a province of South America, in the viceroyalty of New Grenada, bounded N. W. by Panama, N. E. by the gulf of Darien, E. by the province of Carthageua, S. by Choco, and W. by the Pacific ocean.

DARIEN, a great gulf on the coast of the province of Darien. Its extent is 26 leagues from S. to N., and it is 9 wide from E. to W.

DARIEN, Isthmus of, that narrow neck of land composed of the provinces of Darien and Panama, to which may be added Veraguas, by which North and South America are joined together. Its breadth has generally been reckoned 60 miles from north to south; but it is only 37 miles broad from Porto Bollo to Panama, the chief towns of the province.

DARE, a county of the United States, in Ohio, bordering on Indiana. Chief town Greenville.

DARKENEN, or DARKEN, a town of East Prussia, on the Angerap. Population 1740. 63 miles S. E. Konigsberg.

DARLASTON, a town and parish of England, county of Stafford. Nine-tenths of the inhabitants are occupied in trade and manufactures. Population 5585.

DARLEY, a parish of England, county of Derby. Population 1830.

DARLINGTON, a town of England, county of Durham, on the Skern, which is crossed by a bridge of three arches, and flows into the Tees. The town consists of several streets, diverging from a spacious square, where the markets are held, and at one side of which stands the church. It has an ancient edifice, in figure of a cross, with a spire 180 feet high, rising from the centre, built in 1140 by Hugh Pudsey, bishop of Durham. A handsome town-hall, and commodious shambles, have been lately erected. Considerable manufactures are carried on in linen, wool, and cotton, particularly the first two. There are also two large mills for spinning wool, and two iron foundries. Population 6351. 18 miles S. Durham.

DARLINGTON, a district of the United States, in South Carolina, on Lynch's creek. Population 9017. Slaves 2731. At the court-house a post-office is kept.—21, A township and capital of Warwick county, Indiana, on the Ohio.

DARMSTADT, a neat town of Germany, on the Darm. The principal objects of curiosity are the palace of the landgrave Louis VII. and the modern residence of the grand duke, with its beautiful gardens; the town church, with the tombs of the landgraves; the meeting-house of the states; the academy; the town school; the public library; the library of the grand duke; the cabinet of natural history (containing a number of curious fossils); the opera; the riding school; the military school. Population 13,000. 18 miles S. E. Mentz.

DARNEVAL, a town of Normandy, department of the Lower Seine. Population 5100. It has manufactures of cloth and paper.

DARNELEY ISLAND, in the Eastern seas, in Torres Strait. Long. 142. 59. 16. E. Lat. 9. 30. 30. S.

DAROCA, a town of Spain, in Arragon, on the Xiloca. Population 2000. 45 miles S. S. W. Saragossa.

DART, a river of England, which rises in Dartmoor, and falls into the English channel.

DARTFORD, a town of England, county of Kent, on the Darent. It consists of a principal street, with some smaller avenues. The church is a large edifice. Here are the remains of a monastery erected by Edward III. The principal manufactures of Dartford are gunpowder and paper. There is a weekly market, well supplied with provisions, and an annual fair. Population 3593. 16 miles E. London.

DART MOOR, an extensive track of land in England, which occupies the greatest portion of the western district of Devonshire.

DARTMOUTH, a seaport town of England, county of Devon, situated near the confluence of the river Dart with the British channel. There is a good harbour, with deep water, defended by a castle, and two platforms of cannon. The town occupies the declivity of a craggy hill, and extends about a mile along the water's edge. There are three churches, one of which stands on a hill, about a quarter of a mile from the town, and has a lofty tower, which forms a good sea-mark. There are three charity schools for the education of the children of the poor. Ship-building is carried on to some extent in Dartmouth; but the chief occupation of the inhabitants consists in the Newfoundland and other fisheries, wherein about 350 vessels are engaged. Dartmouth is a borough, sending two members to parliament. The entrance to the harbour is defended by a castle. Population 4435. 30 miles S. Exeter.

DARTMOUTH, a post township and seaport of the United States, in Bristol county, Massachusetts, on Buzzard's bay, 27 miles S. Taunton, 62 S. Boston. Population 3219.

DARWAR, a town and fortress of Hindostan. Long. 75. E. Lat. 15. 36. N.

DARWEN, a river of England, county of Lancaster, which flows into the Ribbles.

DARWEN, UPPER and LOWER, two townships of England, in Lancashire. Population 6949.

DASSEI, an old town of Hanover. Population 1400. 15 miles N. N. W. Gottingen.

DATSCHEITZ, a town of Moravia, 25 miles N. W. Znaim. Population 1600.

DAVANAGIRI, a town of the south of India, province of Mysore, with 500 houses, and a small fort in the centre.

DAVENTRY, a town and parish of England, county of Northampton. Population 3326. 19 miles from Coventry.

DAVID, ST., a village of Scotland, on the north coast of the frith of Forth.

DAVID'S, ST., a city, or rather village, of Wales, county of Pembroke, about two miles from the sea. It is an episcopal see. The cathedral and bishop's palace stand a little to the south of the town. Population 1816.

DAVIDSON, a county of the United States, in West Tennessee, on Cumberland river. Population 15,602. Slaves 6395. Chief town Nashville.—24, A post township and capital of Lawrence district, Arkansas Territory.

DAVIS'S STRAITS, a narrow sea, which divides Greenland on the west from North America, extending north-west from Cape Farewell, in Lat. 60. N. to Baffin's bay, in Lat. 80. N.

DAWLA, a large and navigable river of the province of Guayaquil.

DEAL, a small island in the gulf of Mexico, near the coast of West Florida. Long. 88. 12. W. Lat. 30. 18. N.

DAUPHIN, a county of the United States, in Pennsylvania, on the east side of the Susquehannah, bounded N. by Northumberland, E. by Schuylkill and Lebanon, S. by Lancaster, and W. by the Susquehannah, which separates it from Cumberland. Population 31,883. Chief town Harrisburg.

DAUPHINE, an extensive province in the south-east of France, containing the three departments of Isere, Drome, and Upper Alps.

DAWLEY, GREAT and LITTLE, two townships of England, county of Salop. Pop. 5147.

DAWLISH, a town and parish of England, county of Devon. Population 2700.

DAU, a well built town of France, on the Adour. It has an old wall, flanked with towers, and is protected by a castle. This place has long been celebrated for its mineral waters, and baths. Population 4400. 25 miles N. E. Bayonne.

DAVON, a post township of the United States, and capital of Montgomery county, Ohio, on the Miami, just below the junction of Mad river, 52 miles N. Cincinnati.

DEAD SEA, or ASPHALTITES, that is, the Lake of Bitumen, a Lake of Palestine, extending about 60 or 70 miles in length, by 10 or 15 in breadth. Five cities, including Sodom and Gomorrah, situated on this spot, were all swallowed up, according to scripture, to satisfy divine vengeance for their unparalleled iniquity. The neighbourhood of the lake abounds with volcanic products.

DEADMAN'S HEAD, on the coast of Cornwall, in the English channel. Long. 4. 43. W. Lat. 50. 30. N.

DEAL, a market town of England, on the coast of Kent, situated between the North and South Forelands. This is the common rendezvous for shipping, both merchantmen and men of war, where they stop, either when homeward or outward bound, to send letters or passengers ashore, or take in provisions, or to wait for orders. It stands on the sea-shore, which forms a bold beach, and is defended from the violence of the waves by a long rampart of pebbles which are thrown up by the sea. In the upper part the streets are broad and capacious; but in Lower Deal they are narrow and dirty. The houses are irregularly built, principally of brick; but in those which have been more recently erected, greater attention has been paid to uniformity. To the south of the town is a castle, surrounded by a ditch with a draw-bridge. Besides the parish church, there is a chapel of ease. Here is also a public library and reading room, a regular custom-house, and naval store-house. At a little distance is an extensive naval hospital, and at the back of the town a commodious house of industry. The pilots of Deal are intrepid and excellent seamen, and particularly active in affording assistance to vessels in distress. Pop. 6811. 18 miles S. E. Canterbury.

DEAL, a village of the United States, in Monmouth county, New Jersey, 7 miles S. Shrewsbury.

DEAN, a river of Scotland, county of Angus, which falls into the Isla.

DEAN, a river of England, county of Nottingham, which runs into the Trent.

DEANE, LITTLE, a parish of England, county of Gloucester. Pop. 807.

DEARBORN, a county of the United States, in Indiana, on Ohio river. Population in 1815, 4428. Chief town Lawrenceburg.—2d, A county in Illinois. Chief town Rising-sun.—3d, A river in Missouri Territory, runs into the Missouri, above the falls, near the Rocky mountains.

DEBALFORE, a town of Hindostan, on the Sutteeleg. Long. 73.—41. E. Lat. 30. 43. N.

DEBENHAM, a town and parish of England, county of Suffolk, on the Deben. Population 1535.

DEBRETZIN, a large town of Hungary. It contains various manufactures, with a considerable trade in cattle, corn, wool, tobacco, and other products of the surrounding country. Here are several Catholic churches and monasteries, two Calvinist churches, three hospitals, an orphan-house, and a celebrated academy. Population 38,962. 163 miles E. S. E. Vienna.

DECCAN, or THE COUNTRY OF THE SOUTH, an extensive region of India, bounded N. by the Narbuddah, and S. by the Krishna, or Kistnah river, extending across the peninsula from sea to sea.

DECEIZE, a town of France, department of the Nievre. Population 2300.

DECKENDORF, a town of Bavaria, on the Danube, 38 miles E. S. E. Ratisbon. Population 2600.

DEDDINGTON, a town and parish of England, county of Oxford. Population 1847.

DEDHAM, a town and parish of England, county of Essex, situated on the river Stow, which is crossed by a bridge. Pop. 1631.

DEDEHAM, a post township of the United States, and capital of Norfolk county, Massachusetts, 10 miles S. W. Boston. Pop. 2172.

DEE, a river of Wales, which flows into the Irish sea, about 15 miles below Chester.

DEE, a river of Scotland, county of Aberdeen, which rises on the north side of the mountain Cairntoul, and runs into the German ocean, at the town of Aberdeen, after a direct course of 90 miles.

DEE, a river of Scotland, county of Kirkcudbright, which flows into the Solway frith.

DEE, a river of Ireland, which traverses the county of Louth, and runs into the sea.

DEE, a town and fortress of Hindostan, province of Agra. Long. 77. 17. E. Lat. 27. 30. N.

DEEFING, or MARKET DEEFING, a town and parish of England, county of Lincoln. Population 1016.

DEER, a village and parish of Scotland, counties of Aberdeen and Banff. Pop. 4841.

DEER, a small river of Scotland, in Aberdeen, which joins the water of Strichen.

DEER ISLAND, on the coast of North America, in Penobscot bay. Population 1807.

DEERFIELD, a post township of the United States, in Hampshire county, New Hampshire, 17 miles S. W. Concord. Population 1831.—2d, A post township of Franklin county, Massachusetts, on the west side of Connecticut river, 4 miles S. Greenfield. Population 1870.—3d, A township of Oneida county, New York, on the Mohawk, opposite Utica. Population 1232.—4th, A post township of Cumberland county, New Jersey. Population 1889.—5th, A township of Ross county, Ohio, 12 miles N. W. Chillicothe. Population in 1819, 970.

DEERING, a post township of the United States, in Hillsborough county, New Hampshire, 18 miles S. W. Concord. Pop. 1363.

DEGO, a town of Piedmont, on the Bormida, with 1700 inhabitants.

DELAGOA BAY, called also the BAY OF LORENZO MARQUEZ, is situated on the eastern coast of Africa, about midway between Mozambique and the Cape. There is a settlement supposed to be inhabited by about 10,000 natives. The bay is a good deal frequented by the South sea whalers, who find there safe and commodious stations, and abounding in whales. The most northern point of its entrance is in 25. 58. S. lat. and 33. 15. E. long.

DELAWARE, one of the United States of North America, is situated between 38. 29. 30. and 39. 51. N. lat. and between 75. and 76. 18. W. long.; being in length 90 miles, and in breadth 25—containing 1700 square miles, or 1,088,000 acres. It is bounded N. by Pennsylvania, S. and W. by Maryland, and E. by Delaware bay and the Atlantic ocean. It is divided into three counties, Newcastle, Kent, and Sussex; of which the chief towns are Wilmington, Dover, and Georgetown. The state of the Delaware is in general low and level; and at particular seasons of the year is overspread by large quantities of stagnant water. It is chiefly an agricultural state, and includes a very fertile track of country. The soil along the Delaware river, and from 8 to 10 miles into the interior country, is generally a rich clay, producing large timber, and well adapted to the various purposes of agriculture. From thence to the swamps above mentioned, the soil is light, sandy, and of an inferior quality.

DELAWARE, a county of the United States, in New York, on Delaware river, bounded N. by Otsego, E. by Schoharie and Greene, S. by Ulster and Sullivan, and W. by Broome and Chenango, and Delaware river, which separates it from Pennsylvania. Population 20,313. Chief town Delhi.—2d, A county in the south-east part of Pennsylvania, on Delaware river. Population 14,734. Chief town Chester.—3d, A county in Ohio, on Scioto river, north of Franklin county. Population in 1815, 5090. Chief town Delaware.—4th, A post township and capital of Delaware county, Ohio, on the west bank of Whetstone river, 26 miles N. Columbus.—

eth, A town in King William county, Virginia, at the confluence of the Pamunky and Mattaponi, the forks of York river, 28 miles above Yorktown, 20 N. by W. Williamsburg.

DELAWARE, a river of the United States, which rises in the state of New York, and loses itself in Delaware bay.

DELAWARE BAY, a large bay or arm of the sea, between the states of Delaware and New Jersey, formed by the mouth of the Delaware river and several other small ones. The bay is about 60 miles long; in the centre it is about 30 miles across.

DELFT, a considerable town of South Holland, between Rotterdam and Leyden, traversed by a canal which communicates with the Maase. Delft is tolerably well built; most of the streets are divided by narrow stagnant canals, except in the centre of the town, where there are two spacious streets, with broad canals bordered with trees. The front of the stadthouse is extensive and curious, and the interior contains some valuable paintings. There are in all nine churches, containing various monuments. Here is manufactured, the earthen-ware or counterfeited porcelain called Delft ware. Here likewise are made several kinds of fine cloth, and carpets. Butter, and next to it beer, are the principal objects of the wholesale trade; tobacco pipes also are made here in quantities. 9 miles N. W. Rotterdam.

DELFTSVEN, a small fortified town of Holland, on the Maase. Population 2700. 2 miles S. W. Rotterdam.

DELLAAL, a fortified town of the Netherlands, province of Groningen. Pop. 800.

DELIH, an extensive province of Hindostan, situated principally between the 20th and 31st degrees of N. lat. It is bounded E. by the Ganges, N. by a range of mountains, W. by the deserts of Moultan, S. by Ajmeer.

DELHI, a celebrated city, and for many years the capital of Hindostan, situated on the banks of the river Jumna. During the era of its splendour, it is said to have covered a space of 20 miles in length. The modern city of Delhi contains many good houses, built of brick or stone, with flat roofs. The streets, with the exception of two, are narrow: these two, leading from the citadel or palace to the principal gates, are spacious, and formerly had aqueducts running parallel with them. Many of the bazars have fallen to ruin; but the Chandany Choke, or Silver Square, is still in good order, and contains a number of well furnished shops. Since the city has been placed under the British police, the population is fast increasing, and every species of durable property rising yearly in value. The emperor (who was placed on the throne in December 1806, and is entirely supported by the British) and the royal family, occupy the whole of the citadel. Long. 77° 41' E. Lat. 28° 43' N.

DELHI, a post township of the United States, capital of Delaware county, New York, 70 miles S. W. Albany. Population 2398.

DELTAIE, a small river of Upper Canada, which falls into the St Lawrence.

DELITZSCH, a town of Saxony, on the Leberbeck. Pop. 2850. 12 miles N. Leipzig.

DELIVERANCE ISLANDS or, near the east coast of New Georgia. Long. 162° 59' E. Lat. 11° 1' S.

DELMEHORST, a town of Westphalia. Pop. 1400. 7 miles S. W. Bremen.

DELMONT, a town of Switzerland, canton of Bern. Population 1100.

DELTING, a village and parish in Shetland, on the N. coast of the mainland of Scotland. Population 1818.

DELVINO, one of the principal towns in Lower Albania. Population 8000. 50 miles E. N. E. Larissa.

DEMBEA, a very extensive lake in the heart of Abyssinia, and supposed about 450 miles in circumference.

DEMBEA, a province of Abyssinia, including all the territory surrounding the great lake which bears its name.

DEMEU, a river of the Netherlands, which falls into the Scheldt.

DEMERARA, a river of Guiana, which, after a course of 200 miles, falls into the Atlantic, Long. 68° W. Lat. 6° 50' N.

DEMERARA, a province of Dutch Guiana, which derives its name from the above river. Its extent of sea coast is nearly 100 miles, running west and by north and west. It is bounded on the east by the province of Berbice, and to the westward by that of Essequibo. The soil of this colony produces the most abundant crops of sugar.

DEMETRIO, St., a village of Naples, in Calabria Citra. Population 1500.

DEMIANSKOI, a town of Siberia, 100 miles N. N. E. Tobolsk.

DEMING, a river of the Illinois territory, in the United States.

DEMING, a town of Hither Pomerania. Pop. 3300. 27 miles S. Stralsund.

DEMONA VAL, one of the provinces of Sicily, which occupies the north-east portion of the island. Its greatest width is 65 miles, the length 112. Population 521,000.

DEMONTÉ, a town of Piedmont, near the Stura, with a citadel on a high rock. It contains three churches, an hospital, and 6000 inhabitants.

DEMOTICA, a town of European Turkey, in Rometia, on the Marizza. It is tolerably well built, and has a citadel and 2000 inhabitants. 12 miles S. S. W. Adrianople.

DENAIN, a village of French Hainault, on the Scheldt, 6 miles S. W. Valenciennes. Population 930.

DENBIGH, a county of North Wales, bounded E. by Flintshire, Cheshire, and Shropshire, W. by Caernarvonshire, N. by the Irish sea, and S. by Merionethshire and Montgomeryshire. It is about 39 miles long, and 23 where broadest. It contains about 410,000 acres, a considerable proportion of which is rugged and mountainous: there are, however, rich valleys interspersed. The prin-dial rivers are the Clwyd, the Conway, the Dee, and the Ewyr. The products of the county are chiefly cattle, corn, and cheese. The borders afford some lead mines, and in the north-western parts coal pits are worked. Wool is the principal article manufactured. Near the village of Chirk is a foundry of cannon, and there are also some iron forges. The principal towns are Denbigh, Wrexham, Ruthin, and Llanrwst. Population 76,511. Denbighshire returns two members to parliament, one for the county, and one for the county town.

DENBIGH, the county town of Denbighshire, in North Wales. It is situated on the side of a craggy hill, on a branch of the Clwyd. It has manufactures of shoes, gloves, and other articles of leather. The town was formerly surrounded with a strong wall, and it was also defended by a castle of very ancient date, which was destroyed after the restoration. Its ruins are still to be seen on the summit of the rock on which it was built. This is a borough town, and joins with Ruthin and Holt in sending a member to parliament. Pop. 3195. 210 miles N.W. London.

DENBY, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1412.

DENDER, a small river of the Netherlands, which joins the Scheldt.

DENDERA, a town of Upper Egypt, of little consequence in its modern state, but eminently remarkable for the fine antiquities which it contains. In particular, the great temple of Venus is the admiration of every traveller; and it still remains almost in an entire state. Long. 32. E. Lat. 26. 15. N.

DENDERMONDE, a fortified town of the Netherlands, at the conflux of the Dender and the Scheldt. Population 5200. 19 miles S. W. Antwerp.

DENHAM, a village of Scotland, county of Roxburgh, 5 miles from Jedburgh.

DENIA, a seaport of Spain, in the Mediterranean, 40 miles N. N. E. Alicante. Pop. 2000.

DENIS, or DENYS, St., an ancient town of France, which owes its celebrity to its Benedictine abbey. The principal building is of beautiful freestone. The church is built in the Gothic style, and is remarkable for the delicacy of its structure, and the richness of its ornaments. Pop. 6000. 5 miles N. Paris.

DENIZLEY, a town of Asia Minor. It was destroyed in 1715 by an earthquake. 103 miles E. S. E. Smyrna.

DENMARK, a kingdom in the north of Europe, the continental part of which consists of Jutland, Sleswick, Holstein, and Lauenburg, and the insular part of Zealand, Funen, Langeland, Falster, Laaland, Bornholm, Moen, and a number of smaller islands in the Baltic. Its superficial extent is about 22,000 square miles. There are various appendages to the crown of Denmark, viz. Iceland, and the Faroe Isles in Europe; a part of Greenland; Christiansburg, and other small places on the coast of Guinea; Tranquebar on the coast of Coromandel; with factories in the Nicobar islands, and in the West Indies the more important settlements of Santa Cruz, St. Thomas, and St. John. The principal towns are Copenhagen and Elsinore in Zealand; Odensee in Funen; Aalborg and Colding in Jutland; Flensborg and Tonnington in Sleswick; Altona and Kiel in Holstein. The population is estimated at 1,700,000. Continental Denmark forms a long continued plain, interrupted by few hills, or even gently rising grounds. It is watered by no rivers of magnitude, but the lakes are numerous; and along the coast are several winding creeks and bays, which are of essential benefit to navigation. The channels which separate the principal islands from the mainland, and from one another, are the two Belts and the Sound. The climate of Denmark is uniformly temperate. The soil produces oats, barley, beans, pease, and above all, potatoes; wheat is but partially cultivated; madder is good in quality, and considerable in quantity; tobacco plantations have been tried in Jutland, and with success. The manufactures of Denmark are not considerable. In regard to navigation, favourably as the Danes were situated for it, the Hanse towns in the middle ages, and after them the Dutch, absorbed this branch of industry: it was not till the close of the 17th century that the Danes traded with distant countries in vessels of their own. But since the peace of Stockholm in 1720, the policy of Denmark has been decidedly pacific, and its commerce has greatly increased. A return made in the year 1800, showed that there then belonged to this small state above 2000 merchantmen, 250,000 tons of shipping, and 20,000 seamen. These were in a state of rapid increase during our second war with France; when unfortunately the seizure of the Danish navy in 1807, deprived both Denmark and Britain of the advantages of a neutrality. The navigation and trade of Denmark has increased greatly during the last century. It is directed partly to the adjacent coasts of the Baltic, partly to England, Holland, France, and the Mediterranean; to the latter they take quantities of dried fish, and are occasionally employed in the carrying trade. The whale fishery employs likewise a portion of their seamen, as well as the more distant voyages to India and China; in the West India trade they have about 70 sail of merchantmen. The revenue of Denmark is between L.1,500,000 and L.2,000,000; the national debt nominally L.45,000,000, but in reality less, on account of its depreciation. The military force is somewhat above 20,000 men; the naval only 4000 in actual service. The established religion is the Lutheran; it was introduced so early as 1534. The penal statutes against dissenters were formerly severe; but at present there exists complete toleration.

DENMARK, a post township of the United States, in Lewis county, New York, on Black river, 150 miles from Albany. Pop. 1242.

DENNIS, a post township of the United States, in Barnstable county, Massachusetts, 9 miles N. E. Barnstable. Population 1739.

DENNY, a village and parish of Scotland, county of Stirling, 5 miles W. Falkirk. Population 3364.

DENT, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1782.

DENTON, a township of England, county of Lancaster. Population 2012.

DENTON, a post town of the United States, and capital of Caroline county, Maryland, 20 miles S. E. Centerville. The public buildings are a court-house and jail, a Methodist church, and an academy.

DENTRECAUTEUX's CHANNEL, a strait on the S. E. coast of Van Diemen's Land.

DEODHUR, a town of Hindostan, 175 miles from Moorshedabad. Houses 1000.

DEOGIR, an ancient city of Hindostan. Long. 79. 12. E. Lat. 21. 55. N.

DEPPEN, a village of West Prussia, 15 miles S. W. Guttstadt.

DEPTFORD, a town of England, county of Kent, at the confluence of the Ravensbourne with the Thames. It is very irregularly built, and contains two churches, besides several places of worship for dissenters from the established religion. There is a royal dock-yard here, with fine wet docks, and numerous buildings for the manufacture and preservation of naval stores. There are also several private docks in the neighbourhood, for building and repairing merchantmen. There are two hospitals belonging to the corporation or society of the Trinity-house; one built in 1685, and devoted to the support of decayed masters of ships, and pilots, together with the widows of such persons. The society of the Trinity-house was founded in the reign of Henry VIII, by Sir Thomas Spert, for the increase and encouragement of navigation, and for the good government of the seamen, and the better security of merchant ships on our coasts. Population, including Greenwich, 40,874. 4 miles E. London.

DEPTFORD, a township of the United States, in Gloucester county, New Jersey. Population 2978.

DERBEND, a town of Persia, the capital of the khandship of Derbend, in the province of Schirvan, situated on the west coast of the Caspian sea. It is surrounded by strong walls rising out of the sea, from which it is divided by one running across, and strengthened by round and square towers. It is divided into three quarters, of which the citadel, about half a mile square, constitutes the upper part. It is incomparably the strongest, and commands the whole place. The harbour of Derbend is the worst on the Caspian sea. This town is inhabited by Mahometans, Georgians, Armenians, and Jews, who probably do not in whole amount to 4000. Derbend is a place of great antiquity. Long. 48. 58. E. Lat. 41. 52. N.

DERBY, a county of England, bounded N. by Leicestershire, E. by the counties of Nottingham and Leicester, S. by the counties of Leicestershire and Stafford, and W. by those of Stafford and Chester. It extends 56 miles in length, by 33 in breadth. It is about 204 miles in circuit, and contains a superficial area of 972 square miles, or 622,080 square acres. Of these, about 566,000 are cultivated, arable, or pasture lands. The chief rivers are the Trent, Derwent, Wye, Scher, Amber, Dove, and Errewash. Mineral springs are numerous, among which those of Buxton, Matlock, and Keddlestone, are particularly celebrated. Towards the north-west the county is mountainous; and this district has received the appellation of the High Peak; while the eastern and southern parts are called the Low Peak. They are rich and well cultivated, and the surface is more level. Derbyshire is noted for its mineral productions, lead, iron, coal, lime, and what is so well known by the name of Derbyshire spar; and there are extensive quarries of grit, which afford excellent mill-stones. A singular kind of lead ore is found in a vertical position, which, on being probed by a sharp pointed instrument, emits a crackling noise, and explodes violently in a few minutes. A remarkable substance, called elastic bitumen, is exclusively the product of Derbyshire. Many chasms and spacious caverns are seen in this county. The agriculture of Derbyshire is in a progressive state of improvement. Great attention has been lately paid to improve the breed of cattle. About 2000 tons of cheese are annually sent to the London market. In the north-east of the county are manufactories of iron; and many persons are employed in cutting and polishing marble and Derbyshire spar, either for useful or ornamental purposes. Manufactures of woollen, linen, and cotton, as also of silk, to a considerable extent, are all conducted here. Derbyshire is divided into six hundreds, consisting of 131 parishes, and containing 14 market towns. Population 213,333.

DERBY, a town of England, the capital of Derbyshire, on the Derwent, which is crossed by a stone bridge. The town consists of five parishes, each of which has a church, the principal being dedicated to All Saints. Its tower rises 180 feet, in rich Gothic: its architecture is greatly and justly admired. Besides the parish churches, there are places of divine worship for Presbyterians, Independents, Baptists, Methodists, Roman Catholics, Quakers, Swedenborgians, and Revivalists or Primitive Methodists. The charitable institutions are two almshouses, and a county infirmary, on a large scale, with many convalesces, erected in 1810. A depot for ordnance was erected by the board superintending that department, in 1803. The town-house is a handsome structure. Manufactures to a large extent are carried on in this town, particularly in silk and cotton, porcelain and glass. There are, besides, manufactures of iron, lead pipes, lead shot, white and red lead, tin plate, and other commodities. It returns two members to parliament. Population 17,433. 120 miles N. W. by N. London. Long. 1. 25. W. Lat. 52. 52. N.

DERBY, a post township of the United States, in New-Haven county, Connecticut, on the Housatonic, 10 miles W. New Haven. Population 2051.

DERES, a town of Persia, in the province of Fars. Houses 1000. 4 miles N. Thazeroon.

DERHAM, or MARKET DERHAM, a town and parish of England, county of Norfolk. The church is a very ancient structure; besides which, there are three places of worship for dissenters. Population 3273. 1½ miles W. Norwich. Long. 0. 56. E. Lat. 52. 50. N.

DERENBURG, a town of the Prussian states. Pop. 2000. 6 miles W. S. W. Halberstadt.

DERIA KHAN, a town of Hindostan, on the Indus. Long. 71. 2. E. Lat. 31. 36. N.

DERIAPORE, a town of Hindostan, on the Ganges. Long. 85. 30. E. Lat. 25. 19. N.

DERRY, a township of the United States, in Mifflin county, Pennsylvania. Population 1341.—2d, A township in Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania. Population 2380.—3d, A township of Northumberland county, Pennsylvania. Population 2283.

DERUYTER, a post township of the United States, in Madison county, New York, 34 miles S. W. Utica. Population 1503.

DERWENT, a river of England, in Cumberland, which falls into the Irish sea at Workington.—2d, Another which runs into the Ouse.—3d, Another which flows into the Tyne.—4th, Another which joins the Trent.

DES, a small town of Transylvania, noted for salt mines. Long. 23. 23. E. Lat. 47. 1. 50. N.

DESAGUERO, a large river of South America, which falls into the Atlantic.

DESAERT, a village of Ireland, in the county of Kilkenny.

DESERT ISLAND, MOUNT, an island on the coast of Massachusetts. Pop. 200.

DESFORD, a parish of England, in the county of Leicester. Population 872.

DESSAU, the chief place of a district in the principality of Anhalt, on the Mulda. The chief buildings are the prince's castle and the government house. The Calvinists have two churches, the Lutherans one, the Catholics a meeting-house, and the Jews a synagogue. Population 9400. 28 miles S. E. Magdeburg. Long. 12. 17. E. Lat. 51. 50. 6. N.

DESUNNEY, a river of Wales, county of Merioneth, which runs into the Irish sea.

DEVRES, a town of France, department of the Pas-de-Calais. Population 3100.

DETMOLD, a well built town of Germany, 25 miles S. S. W. Minden. Pop. 2370.

DETROIT RIVER, or STRAIT OF ST. CLAIR, the strait which flows from Lake St. Clair into Lake Erie, and separates the United States from Upper Canada.

DETROIT, a city and port of entry of the United States, in Wayne county, and capital of Michigan Territory, on the Detroit. Population 1110.

DETTELBACK, a town of the Bavarian states, on the Maine, with 2200 inhabitants. 9 miles E. Wurtzburg.

DETTINGEN, a village of the Bavarian states, on the Maine, noted for a victory gained over the French by the English in 1743. Population 410. 9 miles S. Hanau.—The name also of three other towns in Wirttemberg.

DEVA, the name of two rivers in Spain, on one of which is the town of Deva, a fishing town and seaport in Guipuscoa, 15 miles W. St. Sebastian.

DEVA, a large and populous town of Transylvania, county of Hunyad. Long. 22. 45. E. Lat. 47. 19. 4. N.

DEVAPRAYAGA, a town of Northern Hindostan, province of Seringur. It has a noted Hindoo temple, to which pilgrims resort in great numbers. Long. 78. 31. E. Lat. 30. 9. N.

DEVELTO, a town of European Turkey, in Bulgaria, 106 miles N. W. Constantinople.

DEVENTER, a walled town of the Netherlands, on the Yssel. The cathedral is a venerable and noble structure; besides it, there are three parish churches, and several suppressed convents. Linen is manufactured here; and the traffic in cattle, butter, and cheese, is considerable. Population 10,100. 40 miles E. Amsterdam.

DEVENIT, a river of England, which runs into the Willy, county of Wilts.

DEVERON, a river of Scotland, which rises in Aberdeenshire, and falls into the German ocean at the town of Banff.

DEVICOTTA, a fort and seaport of India. Long. 79. 55. E. Lat. 11. 20. N.

DEVILLE, a town of France, department of the Lower Seine. Population 1700.

DEVIZES, a town of England, county of Wilts, on the Kennet and Avon canal. It has two parochial churches; also a chapel of ease, and a meeting-house for dissenters. The town-hall is a handsome edifice, of modern erection; and the new jail is a substantial and appropriate building. There is also a free grammar school. The castle, which was very ancient, is now in ruins. It sends two members to parliament. It has a manufacture of woollens. Population 4208. 66½ miles W. by S. London.

DEVON, a county of England, bounded N. by the Bristol channel, E. by the counties of Dorset and Somerset, S. by the English channel, and W. by the county of Cornwall. It extends nearly 70 miles from north to south, and 65 from east to west; it is about 200 miles in circuit, and contains a superficial area of 2493 square miles, or 1,605,300 square acres. The sea is its boundary for at least 150 miles. A large portion of the county is open and uncultivated. Dartmoor, a wild, and in many parts a barren track, occupies 53,644 acres. A considerable portion of the surface, however, consists of fine vales. The climate is particularly mild, and Devonshire is on that account the resort of valetudinarians from all the northern counties of Britain. This county is watered by the Exe, Tamar, Torridge, Teign, Taw, Dart, and other streams. There are mineral waters possessed of various medicinal qualities at Tavistock, Cleave, Lamerton, Barnpton, and Liffon. Small quantities of gold and silver are found within the precincts of the county, as also antimony, bismuth, cobalt, copper, lead, tin, iron, and manganese. This county likewise produces gypsum, and a beautiful kind of veined marble, called Devonshire marble, susceptible of a high polish. The southern part of the county is esteemed the most fertile, and the system of agriculture is in general far advanced. Considerable attention is paid to the produce of the dairy. It has manufactures of woollen. An iron foundry, and works for cutlery, are established on a large scale at Tavistock. Ship-building is carried on at the various ports. This county is divided into 31 hundreds, consisting of 464 parishes. It contains 40 market towns, in which are included 1 city, Exeter, and 40 boroughs. It returns two members to parliament. Population 439,040.

DEVON, or DOVAN, a river of Scotland, in Clackmannanshire, which falls into the Forth. — There is another smaller river, which falls into the Forth at Clackmannan harbour.

DEVON, a county in Lower Canada, on the south side of the St Lawrence, between Hertford and Cornwallis counties.

DEUREN, a town of the Prussian states, 14 miles E. Aix-la-Chapelle. Pop. 3500.

DEURNE, a village of North Brabant, 6 miles E. S. E. Helmont. Population 1700.

DEUTEROM, a town of the Netherlands, in Gelderland. Population 1400.

DEUTSCHKRON, a town of West Prussia. Population 2300.

DEUTZ, a town of the Prussian states, on the Rhine. Population 2000.

DEUX FONTS, LES, a town of the Bavarian states, capital of a duchy of the same name, on the Little Erlbach, with a splendid castle. The town church has a beautiful organ. The other public buildings are the new Lutheran church, the Lutheran academy, and the orphan-house. Population 5000. 58 miles E. Mentz.

DEWANGUNGE, a town of Bengal, on the Brahmapootra river. Long. 89. 42. E. Lat. 25. 7. N.

DEWARCOTE, the capital of a district of the same name, in Northern Hindostan. Long. 74. 2. E. Lat. 30. 59. N.

DEWABURON, a town and parish of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 6300.

DERNE, a town of Flanders, on the Lys, with 3000 inhabitants. 9 miles S. W. Ghent.

DERBAN, a town of Northern Hindostan, province of Serinagut. Long. 77. 45. E. Lat. 30. 19. N.

DERATONE, a town of France, department of the Ardèche, with 3440 inhabitants.

DEZEMANO, a neat town of Lombardy, on the Garda, with 2400 inhabitants.

DEZFUL, or DEZKHOUL, a town of Persia, province of Kustistan. Population 15,000.

DHOOOTPOUR, a city of Hindostan, province of Agra, on the Chumbul. Long. 77. 55. E. Lat. 20. 43. N.

DHYRMA, a town of Hindostan, province of Gujerat. Long. 79. 55. E. Lat. 23. 20. N.

DIADIX, a town of Turkish Armenia, on the Euphrates, which is here a shallow stream, 20 miles broad. Houses 600. 73 miles S. S. W. Erivan.

DIAKOVAR, a town of Sclavonia, 14 miles S. W. Essek. Population 3000.

DIANO, a town of the duchy of Genoa, with 2000 inhabitants.

DIANO, a well built town of Naples, among the Appennines. Population 4150.

DIARBEKIR, a city of Asiatic Turkey, and capital of the pachalic of Diarbekir, on the Tigris, which encircles it on the east, and is crossed by a bridge of 12 arches, half a mile lower down. The city is encompassed by a lofty thick wall of black stone, the admiration of all who behold it. On the north side of the town is a strong castle. The streets are paved, but narrow and dirty. The houses are built of hewn stone, and present a handsome appearance, and many of them are elegant. There are several fine bazars well stored with rich merchandise, and a large and magnificent mosque, formerly a Christian church. The Armenian cathedral is a handsome structure. Extensive manufactures are carried on here in iron, copper, silk, wool, cotton, and Turkey or Morocco leather. The inhabitants consist of Turks, Armenians, Kurds, Catholics, and Jacobites. 173 miles from Malatia, and 287 from Orfa. Long. 39. 52. E. Lat. 37. 55. 30. N.

DICKINSON, a township of the United States, in Cumberland county, Pennsylvania. Population 1749.

DICKSON, a county of the United States, in West Tennessee. Population 4516. Slaves 980. Chief town Charlotte.

DIDAM, a village and parish of the Netherlands, in Gelderland. Population 2100.

DIDIER, St., a town of France, department of the Upper Loire. Population 3200.

DIE, a town of France, on the Drome, in Lower Dauphiny, 30 miles S. W. Grenoble. Population 2400.

DJEBAIL, a town of Syria, situated on an eminence near the sea, 2 miles N. of the river Ibrahim. Population 6000.

DIEBURG, a town of the grand duchy of Hesse, 24 miles E. S. E. Mentz. Pop. 2250.

DIEGO RUIZ, or RODRIGUEZ, an island in the Indian ocean, 100 leagues E. Mauritius, about 26 miles long and 13 broad.

DIEKIRCH, a town of the Netherlands, 20 miles N. Luxemburg. Population 2000.

DIEKEN'S LAND, VAN. See Van Diemen's Land.

DIEKLISH, a river of England, which runs into the Stour, near Stourminster.

DIEPHOLZ, a town of Hanover, on the Hunte. Population 1650.

DIEPPE, a seaport town of France, in Upper Normandy, at the mouth of the river Arques or Bethune. Its streets are tolerably regular. The principal public buildings are the parish church of St James, and the old castle on the west side of the town. There are here several small squares; and the ramparts form a pleasant promenade. The harbour, though tolerably commodious, is narrow. The only seminary of note here is a navigation school. 34 miles N. Rouen.

DIESDORF, a town of Germany, 8 miles N. N. E. Coblenz. Population 1170.

DIERSTEIN, a small town of Lower Austria, on the Danube, 36 miles W. Vienna.

DISENDOERF, a town of Switzerland, 5 miles S. Schaffhausen. Population 2400.

DIESSEY, a town of Upper Bavaria, with 1000 inhabitants.

DIEST, a town of the Netherlands, in South Brabant, on the river Demer. Here are three parish churches, four chapels, and 5800 inhabitants. 23 miles W. Maastricht.

DIENTENDORF, New and Old, two villages in the duchy of Saxe-Gotha, on the river Apfelstädt.

DIETENHEIM, a town of Suabia, on the Iller. Population 2000. 9 miles S. E. Ulm.

DIEZ, a town of Germany, duchy of Nassau. Population 1800.

DIEZ LE FRY, a town of France, department of the Drome. Population 2900.

DIEUXE, a town of France, 27 miles S. E. Metz. Population 3400.

DIEZ, St, a town of France, department of the Vosges, on the Meuse. Pop. 5400.

DIXTON, a post township and port of entry of the United States, in Bristol county, Massachusetts, on the W. side of Taunton river, 7 miles S. Taunton. Pop. 1659.

DIGNANO, a well built town of Istria, 44 miles S. Trieste.

DROZE, a town of France, in Provence, 50 miles N. E. Aix. Population 3300.

DROUIN, a town of France, department of the Saône and Loire. Population 2300.

DUXON, an ancient and well built city of France, chief town in the department of the Cote d'Or, situated between the rivers Ouche and Suzon. The streets are regular and well paved, and the houses in general neat and commodious. The principal square, or Place Royale, is in the form of a horse shoe, and contains the provincial palace, the house of assembly of the ancient parliament of Burgundy, and other buildings. It has four churches, remarkable for the richness of their architectural decorations. It has also a celebrated university. It has manufactures of woollen, cotton, and silk. Population, including the suburbs, 21,600. 100 miles N. Lyons, 175 S. E. Paris. Long. 5. 2. 5. E. Lat. 47. 12. 35. N.

DILLINGHUS, a town of Westphalia, 45 miles N. N. W. Frankfort on the Maine. Population 3200.

DILLINGEN, a town of the Bavarian states, 24 miles N. E. Ulm. Population 3120.

DILTON, a parish of England, county of Wilts. Population 2006.

DREWORTH, a township of England, county of Lancaster. Population 669.

DRETHURSTON, a village of England, in the county of Kent, 4 miles N. N. E. New Romney.

DIMITZANA, a town of the Mores, on the Erymanthus, 24 miles N. W. Tripolizza.

DINAPORE, capital of a district of Bengal, situated chiefly between the 25th and 26th degrees of northern latitude. It is situated on an island formed by the Perabubah river, and is a place of considerable trade. Long. 88. 40. E. Lat. 25. 37. N.

DINANT, a town of France, 13 miles S. St. Malo. Population 4170. Here are manufactures of linen, cotton, and flannel.

DINANT, a town of the Netherlands, on the Maese, 14 miles S. Namur. Pop. 3630.

DINASMOUTHRY, a town and parish of North Wales, county of Glamorgan, on the river Dym, 202 miles W. N. W. London.

DINDIGUL, capital of a district in the south of India, between Lat. 10. and 11. N.

DINGELFINGEN, a town of Lower Bavaria, on the Isar, 48 miles N. E. Munich. Population 2080.

DINGLE, a town of Ireland, in the county of Kerry, 21 miles S. W. Tralee.

DINGWALL, a town and parish of Scotland, county of Ross. The town is pleasantly situated on the frith of Cromarty; navigable here by small vessels. It unites with Dornoch, Tain, Wick, and Kirkwall, in returning a member to parliament. Population 2031. 19 miles N. Inverness.

DINKELSBUHL, a town of the Bavarian states, surrounded with a high wall, towers, and ditches. Population 6400. It has manufactures of woollen, fustian, stockings, and leather. 36 miles S. W. Nuremberg.

DINSLACKEN, a town of the Prussian states, 5 miles S. E. Wesel. Pop. 1030.

DINTELOORD, a large village of South Holland, with 1300 inhabitants.

DINTER, a village of the Netherlands, in North Brabant, with 1100 inhabitants.

DIXWINDIE, a county of the United States, in Virginia, bounded N. by Appomattox river, which separates it from Chesterfield county, and inclosed on the other sides by Prince George, Sussex, Brunswick, Lunenburg, Notaway, and Amelia counties. Population 12,524. Slaves 7442. Chief town Petersburg. At the court-house is a post-office.

DIXPERLO, a village of the Netherlands, in Gelderland, with 1500 inhabitants.

DROJOCARTA, a large and populous town of the island of Java, on a river where there is also a European port and settlement. The palace was taken by the British in 1812.

DIOS, NOMRE DE, a town of Mexico, on the road from the mines of Sombrecete to Durango. Population 6800.

DIPFOLDISWALDA, a town of Saxony, 13 miles S. S. W. Dresden. Population 1360.

DIRESLAND, a village of Holland, 6 miles S. by E. Helvoetsluys. Population 1200.

DIRETON, a village and parish of Scotland, in Haddingtonshire, 2 miles W. North Berwick. Population 1315.

DIRSCHAU, a town of West Prussia, on the Vistula. Population 1700.

DISAPPOINTMENT ISLANDS, or, a cluster of islands in the South Pacific ocean, so named by Commodore Byron. Long. of the middle 145. J. W. Lat. 14. S. S. The name also of several other islands and capes.

DINIVIS, a small town of the Swiss canton of the Grisons. Population 1050.

DISLEY, a township of England, in Cheshire. Population 1533.

DIBMAL SWAMP, a very large bog, extending near 30 miles in length by about 10 broad, partly in Virginia, partly in North Carolina.

DISON, a small town of the Netherlands, province of Liège, with 2000 inhabitants.

DISS, a town and parish of England, in Norfolk, on the Waveney. Its manufactures are hempen cloth, hose, and stays. Population 2764. 13 miles S. W. Norwich.

DITTEBACH, a populous and well built town and fortress of Hindostan, province of Bundelcund. Long. 78. 32. E. Lat. 25. 43. N.

DITTFORTH, a town of the Prussian states, on the Rude. Population 1800.

DIVE, a river of Normandy, which enters the English channel, near the town of Dive.

DIXAN, a considerable town of Tigre, in Abyssinia. Long. 39. 38. E. Lat. 14. 59. N.

DIXMIDT, a small town of the Netherlands, in West Flanders, on the river Yperlee, 11 miles S. Ouden.

DIJON, a town of France, on the Marne, 157 miles S. Paris. Pop. 6900.

DOBRZYNYA, a town of Russia, on the Swapa, 433 miles S. E. Petersburg. Pop. 800.

DOBRZYNYA, a town of Russia, government of Orel, 126 miles S. E. Smolensko. Long. 39. 5. E. Lat. 52. 24. N.

DOBRZYNYA, a town of European Russia, government of Moscow, 39 miles N. Moscow. Long. 39. 5. E. Lat. 52. 21. N.

DOUBA, (frequently the Borythcher), a large river of European Russia, which rises in a forest in the forest of Walchonski, near Dneprow, in the government of Smolensko, not far from the frontier of the government of Tver. After many windings it enters the government of Jaroslavl, and, after forming the boundary between the governments of Cambray, Polotsk, and Taurida, on the one side, and of Minsk, Kiev, and Cherson, on the other, falls into the Black sea between Kikori and Kikori, after a course of 1000 miles.

DOUBA, the current theory, a large river of Europe, which rises in a forest in a lake and flows through mountains in Russian, German, and Polish, and falls into the Black sea between Kikori and Kikori.

DOBRZYNYA, a town of Germany, 8 miles N. W. Moscow. Population 1000.

DOBRZYNYA, a town of Bohemia, 10 miles S. E. Prague, with 1000 inhabitants.

DOBRZYNYA, a town of the Prussian states, on the Dober, 36 miles S. Berlin. Population 1000.

DOBRAUSKA, a town of Prussia, 24 miles N. E. Königsberg. Population 1800.

DOBRAUSKA, a town of Prussia, 66 miles N. N. W. Warsaw. Population 1800.

DOBRYN, a town of Prussia, on the Drowitz, 22 miles E. N. Berlin. Pop. 1110.

DOCA, a river of Prussia, which rises near the town of Villa Rica and falls, after a course of about 500 miles into the Atlantic, in Lat. 19. 20. S.

DOCHART, a river of Scotland, in Perthshire, which joins the Loch of Killie.

DOCHTCHIZA, a town of Russian Lithuania, at the source of the Beresina. Pop. 1000.

DOCKUM, a fortified town of the Netherlands, in Friesland, 33 miles W. Delft. Population 3100.

DOBRBOOK, a town and parish of England, county of Devon. Population 885.

DOERFLN, a town of Saxony. It has manufactures of cotton, woollen, and hats. 27 miles S. E. Leipzig. Population 4100.

DOESBURG, a town of the Netherlands, in Gelderland. Population 2350.

DOFAR, a seaport of Arabia, province of Hadramaut, 120 miles N. Cape Farah.

DOCKEN BANK, an extensive sand-bank in the North sea, between the north of Germany and England, the west end extending nearly to Scarborough in Yorkshire, and the eastern within 20 leagues of the coast of Jutland.

DOGLIANI, a town of Piedmont, 30 miles N. N. E. Mondovi. Population 4000.

DOGS ISLE, or, a portion of the county of Middlesex, in England, formed by the winding of the Thames, opposite Greenwich.

DOIRA, a river of Piedmont, which falls into the Po.—Another which falls into the Po near Turin.

DOL, a town of France, department of the Ille and Vilaine. Population 3300.

DOLZ, a well built town of France, department of the Jura, on the Doubs. The principal buildings are the court of justice, the church of Notre Dame, and an hospital. Population 2200. 28 miles S. E. Dijon.

DOLEWICK, a parish and irregularly built town of North Wales, county of Merioneth, on the Avon, with manufactures of some woollens. Pop. 553. 40 miles S. Carnarvon.

DOLGAN, a parish and village of Scotland, county of Glencairn. Population 1000.

DOLGAN BAR, a The Dolgan bar is a bar of the North sea, between the coast of Scotland and the coast of Norway.

DOLGAN, a town of Prussia, 24 miles N. E. Königsberg. Population 1800.

DOLGAN, a town of Prussia, 66 miles N. N. W. Warsaw. Population 1800.

DOLGAN, a town of Prussia, 22 miles E. N. Berlin. Pop. 1110.

DOLGAN, a town of Prussia, 22 miles E. N. Berlin. Pop. 1110.

Domaróvich, a town of Poland, 10 miles W. Grójec. Population 1200.

Domarao, a village in the island of Walcheren. Population 500.

Domatry, a town of France, department of the Isère. Population 1200.

Domatry, a town of France, in Roumardy, 35 miles W. N. W. Amiens. Pop. 3500.

Domitosa, Sr., or Hirayona, and in the language of the natives Hiari, one of the largest and most fertile of the West India islands, extending in length from east to west about 300 miles, and in breadth from 60 to 150 miles. It is situated between the islands of Jamaica and Cuba on the west, and Porto Rico on the east, and extends from 17. 37. to 20. N. lat.; and from 67. 34. to 74. 15. W. long. This island was formerly divided between the French and Spaniards; and now that the French have been expelled by the black inhabitants, that part of the island which they occupied has received the appellation of Hayti. In general the soil is fertile, consisting of a rich clay, in some places mixed with light gravel lying on a substratum of rock. It is well watered, and affords almost every variety of vegetable produce which can promote the luxury or comfort of man. Such is the unrivalled fertility of the plains, that, according to Edwards, they are alone capable of producing more sugar and other valuable commodities than all the British West Indies, put together; while the mountains themselves, extending in two great chains from east to west, with numerous diverging ridges, contribute to the fertility of the soil, by pouring down their accumulated moisture into the plains, by repelling the violence of the winds, and by varying the temperature of the air. They abound also in excellent timbers, and in mines of iron, lead, copper, silver, gold, some precious stones, and mercury. The climate is moist and hot, the thermometer in the plains rising as high as 88.; in the higher parts to 72. and 77.; while on some of the highest mountains, which rise to the height of 6000 feet above the level of the sea, the heat is nowise oppressive, and a fire is even at times found necessary. The principal rivers are the Ozama, the Yuma, the Nigua, the Yane or Yuma, &c. The population of the French part of St Domingo, before it fell into the possession of the blacks, was composed, 1st, of white inhabitants; 2dly, of people of colour and blacks in a free condition; and 3dly, of negroes and people of colour in a state of slavery. In 1789, according to the best authorities, the total population amounted, according to the estimate of Edwards, to 750,000 souls, 34,000 free people of colour, and 500,000 negroes and slaves. In 1790 the Spanish part of the island contained 120,000 inhabitants. This island was discovered by Columbus in 1492, and the Spaniards retained undisputed possession of it until about the middle of the 18th century. It was in a most flourishing state in the year 1789, when the French revolution commenced. But from that period commenced the war between the white and the black population, which, after a series of unparalleled cruelties, terminated in favour of the latter. It is now in possession of the blacks, who are intent on domestic improvement, and have everywhere established schools; so that there is reason to anticipate that this nation of blacks will in time comprise as great a proportion of well educated people as any other of the European states.

Domitosa, Sr., the capital of the Spanish part of the above island, and the first or oldest city in the western world, on the Ozama. The plan of the city is a quadrilateral figure. The streets are straight, and broad, crossing one another at right angles; and the whole city is surrounded by a rampart. The houses are well proportioned, with flat roofs, and a yard in the middle, with surrounding galleries inside, and balconies to the street. The cathedral, which was finished in the year 1540; is a massy pile of building, more remarkable for strength than beauty. The barracks form a good regular range of square buildings, encircling two large courts in the centre, and are adapted to contain 2000 men. On the side that faces the sea, and within the barrack walls, stands the arsenal, also a regular fine building. The palace is a good plain building. Besides the main square, there are three others. In the other parts of the town are several convents and nunneries, whose inmates devoted them when the flag changed. About the year 1588 the city was sacked by Sir Francis Drake. Population reduced from 20,000 to 12,000. Long. 69. 50. W. Lat. 18. 28. N.—The name of several other settlements, villages, and rivers, in South America.

Downica, an island in the West Indies, discovered by Columbus. It lies between Lat. 13. 10. and 16. 36. N. and between Long. 61. 17. and 61. 32. W.; being about 20 miles in length from north to south, and 16 miles broad from east to west. It contains 166,436 acres of land, and is divided into 10 parishes. It was ceded to Britain in 1763. Population in 1805, 1694 whites, 2232 people of colour, and 22,083 slaves.

Domitica, one of the Marquesas islands, called O-heeva-on by the natives, about 18 miles in length, and of an equal breadth. Long. 159. 2. W. Lat. 9. 39. S.

Domitz, a town of the grand duchy of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, 34 miles S. Schwerin. Population 1000.

Domiz, a town of France, in the department of the Dordogne. Population 1900.

Donau, a river of the Netherlands, in Brabant, which falls into the Meuse.

Don, a river of Scotland, which falls into the sea north of Old Aberdeen.

Don (the Tauis of the ancients), one of the largest rivers of European Russia, rises in the government of Tula, and after winding 1160 miles, falls into the sea of Azoph.

DONAGHADER, a town of Ireland, county of Down, on the coast of the Irish channel. It consists of two principal streets, intersected by narrow lanes. There is a church here, and other two places of worship. Packets are established here for the conveyance of the mails to and from Port Patrick, in Scotland, a distance of 20 miles. 15 miles E. Belfast.

DONAT, ST., a town of France, department of the Drome. Population 1600.

DONAUESCHINGEN, a town of Baden, circle of the Danube. Population 2080.

DONAUWERTH, a well built town of Bavaria, on the Danube. Population 2460. 25 miles N. Augsburg.

DONCASTER, a town of England, in Yorkshire, on the river Dun, or Don. It is well built, kept remarkably clean, and consists of one principal street, besides others of smaller extent. The parish church is spacious and elegant, and has a fine square tower, 141 feet high. Besides the church, there is a chapel for the Presbyterians; an elegant one for dissenters from the established religion, erected in 1804; a place of worship for Methodists, and a Quaker meeting-house. There are various charitable institutions. An elegant mansion-house was built in 1744; and there is a town-hall and a handsome theatre. Doncaster is not a manufacturing town. Population 8544. 18 miles N. E. Sheffield.

DONCHERY, a town of France, department of the Ardennes, on the Meuse. Pop. 1440.

DONEGAL, a county of Ireland, bounded N. and W. by the Atlantic ocean, E. by the counties of Londonderry and Tyrone, S. by the county of Fermanagh and the bay of Ballyshannon. It extends about 70 miles in length, by from 12 to 35 in breadth, and contains a superficial area of 1725 miles. The principal rivers are the Lin, the Dale, the Erne, the Guibarra, and the Swilly. Great part of the surface of this county is waste; and it is computed that not less than 70,000 acres are occupied by bogs and mountains. The chief town is Lifford. Population above 200,600.

DONEGAL, a decayed town of Ireland, county of Donegal, at the mouth of the Esk, 9 miles N. N. E. Ballyshannon.

DONEGAL, a township of the United States, in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, on the N. E. side of the Susquehanna, 18 miles W. N. W. Lancaster. Pop. 3516. There is another town of this name in Washington county. Population 1327.—Another in Butler county. Population 671; and another in Westmoreland county. Population 2147.

DONERAILE, a town of Ireland, county of Cork, on the Awebeg, 19 miles N. W. Cork.

DONGEN, a village of the Netherlands, 6 miles E. N. E. Breda. Population 2100.

DONGES, a town of France, in Brittany, on the Loire. Population 2100.

DONGOLA, a town on the Nile, and capital of Nubia. It is inhabited by about 600 Mamelukes, with 3000 or 4000 negro slaves. Long. 32. E. Lat. 19. 20. N.

DONKOV, a town of Russia, on the Don, 560 miles S. S. E. Petersburg. Pop. 2100.

DONNINGTON, a town and parish of England, in Lincolnshire, with a good port for barges. Population 1635. 11 miles W. S. W. Boston.—Also another village in Berks.

DONNINGTON, a town of England, in Leicestershire. Population 2560.

DONZDORF, a market town of Wirtemberg, near Goppingen. Population 1700.

DONZMAC, a town of France, department of the Correze. Population 2100.

DONZY, a town of France, department of the Nievre. Population 3100.

DOPAN, a track of land in India, between the rivers Ganges and Jumna, comprised in the provinces of Delhi, Agra, and Allahabad.

DOON, a lake and river of Scotland, in Ayrshire, which enters the sea 2 miles S. Ayr.

DOONSPYCK, a village of the Netherlands, near the Zuyder Zee, with 1900 inhabitants.

DOOSHAK, or JULALLAHAD, a town of Persia, the capital of the province of Seistan. Houses 2000. Long. 61. 13. E. Lat. 31. 26. N.

DORAK, or FERAHD, a town of Persia, province of Kustistan. Population 3600.

DORAT, a town of France, department of the Upper Vienne. Population 3100.

DORCHESTER, a town and parish of England, 9 miles E. Oxford. Population 654.

DORCHESTER, a town of England, capital of the county of Dorset, situated on an ascent from the river Frome. It is of an irregular square figure, and consists principally of three spacious streets. There are three churches, three almshouses, and a county jail, after the plan of Mr Howard. Its manufactures of broad cloth are gone to decay; that of serge is still continued. It returns two members to parliament. Population 2743. 15 miles from Bournemouth.

DORCHESTER, a township of the United States, 3 miles S. S. E. Boston. Pop. 2950.

DORCHESTER, a county of the United States, in Maryland, on the eastern shore of the Chesapeake. Population 18,108. Slaves 5032. Chief town Cambridge.—2d, Capital of Colleton district, South Carolina, on Ashley river, 18 miles N. W. Charleston.

DORDOGNE, a large river of France, which joins the Garonne, 15 miles below Bourdeaux.

DORDOGNE, a department of France, consisting of the whole of the old Perigord, with a few communes of the Limousin. It adjoins the departments of the Gironde, Charente, and Correze. Its superficial extent is about 3600 square miles, and the population 425,000.

DONÉ, a hamlet of England, in the county of Derby. Population 476.

DORKING, a town of England, in Surrey, near the river Mole. Population 3812. 23 miles S. S. W. London.

DORMAUS, a town of France, in Upper Champagne, on the Marne. Pop. 9200.

DORNACH, a small town of Switzerland, 6 miles S. Bale.

DORNHIAN, a town of Wirtemberg, in Suabia, 40 miles S. W. Stutgard.

DORNBURG, a town of Germany, 5 miles W. Darmstadt. Population 1900.

DORSCH, Firth of, in Scotland, an arm of the sea, which divides the southern parts of Sutherland from the county of Ross. Its entrance is nearly 15 miles wide.

DORSCH, a town and parish of Scotland, county of Sutherland, on the N. coast of the firth of Dornoch. Population of the town and parish 3100. 211 miles N. Edinburgh.

DORNSTETTER, a town of Württemberg, 32 miles E. Strasburg. Population 1100.

DONOGOUSSKI, a town of European Russia, on the Dnieper, 46 miles E. N. E. Smolensko.

DONPAT, a town of European Russia, in Latoria, on the Embach. A university was established here in 1802. Population 4500. 65 miles S. W. Narva.

DORSET, a county of England, bounded N. by the counties of Somerset and Wilts, E. by Hampshire, S. by the British channel, and W. by the counties of Devon and Somerset. It extends about 50 miles in length by 30 in breadth, besides a small detached portion on the W. extremity, surrounded by Devonshire. Its superficial area is computed at 1123 square miles, or 711,270 acres, of which 153,506 are arable, and 309,000 pasture meadow, common, and downs. Woods are calculated to occupy 13,151, and orchards 10,000 acres. The climate of this county is salubrious. The country is watered by about 40 rivers and brooks, of which the principal are the Stour, the Frome, the Ye of Ivel, the Piddle, Char, and Wey. There are several mineral waters. A bituminous slaty coal is produced, which burns with a bright lively flame. The principal minerals of the county are two kinds of freestone, greatly used in building and paving, which are quarried in the Isle of Portland, and in Purbeck. Great attention is paid to the breeding of sheep. Considerable quantities of hemp are grown in this county, which is manufactured into twine, cordage, netting, racking, and sailcloth. The haddock fishery is carried on between Lyme and Portland, from April to June. Abundance of other fish frequent the coast in great variety. Dorsetshire consists of 270 parishes, containing 22 market towns, of which the first 9 are boroughs. It returns two members to parliament. Population 141,499.

DORSET, a post township of the United States, in Bennington county, Vermont, 27 miles N. Bennington. Population 1231.

DORSTEN, a town of Germany, 40 miles S. W. Münster. Population 2290.

DORT, one of the most ancient towns of the Netherlands, in South Holland, on an island formed by the Maese and the Blesbosch. Among the public buildings is the great church, with its lofty tower and chimneys; an elegant town-house, the exchange, the church of St. Nicholas, and the different hospitals. The situation of Dort is highly favourable for trade, and the harbour sufficiently commodious. Great quantities of timber are floated down here from Germany by the Rhine. Here are several docks for ship-building; a brisk traffic is carried on in yarn and linen, as well as in salt. The salmon fishing is productive. Population 19,400. 11 miles S. E. Rotterdam.

DORTMUND, a town of the Prussian states, on the Rhine. Population 4000. 40 miles N. N. E. Cologne.

DORVENEZ, a seaport of France, with a good harbour, 20 miles S. Brest. Pop. 1800.

DORAY, a strong town of French Flanders, on the small river Scarpe. It has manufactures of cotton, linen, lace, and thread; also a cannon foundry, an arsenal, and an artillery school. It has been long noted for its university; also for its English schools. It is fortified with walls and ditches. Population above 18,000. 15 miles N. W. Cambrai. Long. 3. 5. 2. E. Lat. 50. 22. 12. N.

DORNE, a river of France, in Franche Compté, which falls into the Saône at Verdun.

DORNE, a department of France, which comprises the eastern part of Franche Compté, and is bounded by the departments of the Jura, the Upper Saône, the Upper Rhine, and the canton of Bern. Population 227,000.

DORNEVILLE, a town of Normandy, 25 miles N. N. W. Rouen. Population 3000.

DORÉ, a town of France, 9 miles S. W. Saumur. Population 1800.

DORF, a river of England, which falls into the Trent below Burton.

DOVER, a seaport of England, in the county of Kent, situated on a small stream which falls into the harbour. It consists chiefly of three long streets converging to one point; the upper part called the Town, and the lower the Pier. It has two parish churches; and churches also for Methodists, Baptists, and Quakers. It has also a free school, a charity school, and an hospital. A town-hall stands in Market-place. Dover is defended by a strong and spacious castle, and all the neighbouring heights are fortified. The castle occupies a lofty eminence, steep and rugged towards the town and harbour, and presents a precipitous cliff, 320 feet higher than the sea. Subterraneous works and casemates have been added since the alarms of French invasion, capable of accommodating 2000 men. Dover is one of the Cinque Ports; and a borough, returning two members to parliament, who are elected by about 1600 voters. The harbour can receive vessels of 400 or 500 tons, and is defended by strong batteries. It is the principal place of embarkation to France, and employs 27 packets for that purpose. Pop. 10,327. 8 miles from Deal, 73 E. S. E. London. Long. 1. 19. E. Lat. 51. 6. N.

DOVERA, a post township of the United States, in Strafford county, New Hampshire. Population 2228.—2d, In York county, Pennsylvania, on Fox run. Population 1882.—3d, In Kent county, Delaware.

DOUGLAS, a village and parish of Scotland, county of Lanark. Population 2195.—Also a small river which joins the Clyde.

DOUGLAS, a seaport and principal town of the isle of Man, on the S. E. shore. It has a handsome chapel and a free school. The harbour is spacious and safe. Pop. 6054.

DOUGLASS, a post township of the United States, in Worcester county, Massachusetts, 17 miles S. Worcester. Population 1142.

DOULLENS, a town of France, 15 miles N. Amiens. Population 3000.

DOUMX, a town of Scotland, county of Perth, on the Teith. Its principal manufacture is cotton. 8 miles N. W. Stirling.

DOUN, a small town of the Netherlands, in Hainault, 9 miles S. W. Mons.

DOURDAN, a town of France, 13 miles S. S. W. Versailles. Population 2870.

DOURONE, a town of France, department of the Tarn. Population 1700.

DOURO, a large river of Spain, which rises on the borders of Arragon, and flowing west, traverses more than half the width of Spain, and the whole of Portugal. It falls into the Atlantic, a little below Oporto.

DOUVRES, a town of Normandy, 9 miles W. Calv. Population 2240.

DOVR, or DYFFI, a river of Wales, which falls into Cardigan bay.

DOUZE, La, a river of France, in Gascony, which joins the Adour below Tartas.

DOUZY, a town of France, in the department of the Nievre. Population 3600.

DOWLATABAD, a celebrated city and fortress of Hindostan, in the province of Auringabad. The fort stands on the summit of a mountain, which commands the town; and is still considered as the key of the Deccan. Long. 76. 2. E. Lat. 19. 52. N.

DOWN, a maritime county of Ireland, bounded N. by the county of Antrim and an arm of the sea, 'E. and S. by the Irish sea, and W. by the county of Armagh. It extends 51 miles in extreme length by 39 in breadth, and contains a superficial area of 936 square miles, or 559,996 acres. The chief rivers are Bann, Lagan, and Newry; and there are numerous small lakes in different places. Copper and lead are found; also black marble susceptible of a high polish, slate, coal, freestone, and crystals. Agriculture, though advancing, requires many improvements. Little wheat is cultivated; oats are abundant; and potatoes universal. The breed of cattle is indifferent. Kelp is made along the coast; but the chief manufactures are linen and muslin, in great quantities, and various in quality. The county is divided into 60 parishes, and sends 4 members to parliament. Pop. 261,498, the half Roman Catholics.

DOWN, or DOWN-PATRICK, the chief town of the county of Down. It consists principally of four main streets, intersected by several lanes. There are four churches for Presbyterians, Methodists, and Roman Catholics. It has a small hospital; a jail, court-house, and market-house. Down-Patrick has a good linen market. It returns one member to the imperial parliament. Population 3000. 20 miles S. E. Belfast.

DOWNE, a township of the United States, in Cumberland county, New Jersey. Population 1501.

DOWNHAM, a town and parish of England, in Norfolk, on the Ouse. Population 2044.

DOWNTON, a town and parish of England, in the county of Wilts. The principal manufactures are lace making, tick weaving, paper making, tanning, and malting. Downton returns two members to parliament. Population 3114. 6 miles S. Salisbury.

DOYLSTON, a post township of the United States, in Bucks county, Pennsylvania.

DEACUT, a post township of the United States, in Middlesex county, Massachusetts, on the N. side of the Merrimack, at Patucket falls, 28 miles N. N. W. Boston. Population 1301.

DRAIGNAN, a town of France, in Provence, on the Rhé, 35 miles N. E. Toulon.

DRAMMEN, a town of Norway, in the government of Christiania, consisting of two distinct places, on the Drammen. United population 6000. 20 miles S. W. Christiania.

DRANKIRCHEN, a town of Lower Austria, 14 mile S. Vienna. Population 1550.

DRATBURG, UPPER and LOWER, two small towns of Carinthia; the one 42 miles E. N. E. Brixen; the other 112 S. S. W. Vienna.

DRAVE, a large river which rises in Tyrol, and falls into the Danube below Essek.

DRAYTON, a town and parish of England, in Salop, on the Tern. Population 4436.

DREGHORN, a parish and village of Scotland, in Ayrshire. Population 856.

DRESDEN, a city of Germany, the capital of the kingdom of Saxony, and one of the best built towns in Europe, is beautifully situated on both sides of the Elbe, which is here crossed by a magnificent bridge, at the influx of the Weisseritz. This city has long been noted for the fine arts. It contains 11 Lutheran churches, 2 Catholic, and one Calvinist. The more recent of the Catholic churches is one of the finest edifices of the kind in Germany. The electoral palace is a spacious but irregular structure, evidently the work of different ages. It has a tower 355 feet in height, and a number of remarkable apartments, particularly the well known green vault, divided into eight rooms, all paved with marble, and containing statues, ivory work, silver plate, vases, and precious stones. Near the palace is the chancery-house, and the large building appropriated since 1748 to a valuable collection of paintings. The house of assembly for the Saxon diet is a tasteful building. The Zwinger gardens, situated in the suburbs, form a kind of public promenade, and contain a valuable cabinet of natural history. The arsenal has a curious collection of arms, among others the first invented fire-arms. The castle is the great depot of the porcelain manufactures. The royal library, consisting of 150,000 volumes, also a valuable collection of porcelain, and some beautiful statues, is contained in the Dutch and Japanese palace; a large square building, elevating its stately domes amid groves and thickets. There is in Dresden a number of schools, an academy for cadets of noble family, and a military school. The charitable institutions are well regulated. The principal manufactures are those of mirrors, tapestry, lace, jewellery, porcelain, earthenware, and, in particular, of plaited straw. 55 miles S. E. Leipzig. Long. 13. 43. 1. E. Lat. 51. 2. 50. N.

DRESDEN, a post township of the United States, in Lincoln county, Maine, on both sides of the Kennebec, 8 miles N. W. Wiscasset. Population 1096.

DREUX, an old town of France, department of the Eure and Loire, on the Blaise. Population 3450. 45 miles W. by S. Paris.

DRIBURG, a town of Westphalia, 10 miles N. E. Paderborn. Population 1500.

DRIEL, a large village of the Netherlands, in Gelderland, with 2100 inhabitants.

DRIESEN, a town of the Prussian states, on the Netze. Population 2150.

DRIFFIELD; GREAT, a township of England, East Riding of Yorkshire. Pop. 2303.

DRIFHLINGTON, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1710.

DRINO, a large river of European Turkey, in Albania, which falls into the Adriatic.

DRINO, another large river of European Turkey, which separates Bosnia from Servia.

DRISSA, a town of European Russia, government of Witepsk, on the Dwina.

DROGHEDA, a seaport of Ireland, county of Louth, with a tolerable harbour. It sends one member to the imperial parliament. Population 15,000. 23 miles N. Dublin.

DROITWICH, a town of England, in the county of Worcester, on the Salwarpe. It contains three churches. Its principal manufacture is of fine white salt. It returns two members to parliament. Population 2176. 8 miles N. N. E. Worcester.

DROMCLIFF, a village of Ireland, in the county of Sligo, 3 miles N. Sligo.

DROME, a department of France, so called from a river of its name. It comprehends the south-west part of Lower Dauphiny, and is bounded by the departments of the Isere, Upper Alps, Lower Alps, and Vaucluse: the Rhone bounds it on the west. Pop. 253,500.

DROMORE, a town of Ireland, county of Down, on the Lagan, 15 miles S. W. Belfast.

DROMORE, a post township of the United States, in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, on the E. side of the Susquehanna, 17 miles S. Lancaster. Population 1295.

DRONFELD, a town and parish of England, county of Derby, 153 miles N. W. London.

DROTHTEIM, the most northern of the four grand bailiages or dioceses of Norway, and situated on the west coast, between Bergen, Aggerhuus, the Swedish frontier, and Norland. Population in 1801, 230,215.

DROTHTEIM, a town of Norway, the capital of the foregoing province, on the Nid, on an arm of the sea, by which the town is nearly surrounded. The houses are generally of wood. The chief exports are copper, iron, timber, and fish. The imports consist chiefly of groceries, cloths, wine, and corn. Population 8832. 235 miles N. E. Bergen. Long. 10. 23. 25. E. Lat. 63. 25. 50. N.

DRYLSDEN, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 2855.

DRUMLANRIO, a small village of Scotland, in Dumfriesshire, on the Nith.

DRUMLITHIE, a manufacturing village of Scotland, in the county of Kincardine.

DRUMMOCHY, a small village of Scotland, in the county of Fife.

DRUMMOND, a flourishing village of Scotland, in the county of Ross.

DRYBURN, a small village of Scotland, on the Tweed, in Berwickshire.

DRYDEN, a post township of the United States, in Tompkins county, New York, on Seneca lake, 35 miles S. Auburn, 170 W. Albany. Population 1690.

DRYFE, a river of Scotland, in Dumfriesshire, which empties itself into the Annan.

DSJAR, a seaport of Arabia, on the coast of the Red sea, 67 miles W. Medina.

DSJEL, a town and district of Arabia, in the country of Yemen, 50 miles E. Hodeida. Long. 43. 40. E. Lat. 14. 44. N.

DSJOLLA, a town of Arabia, in Yemen. Houses 600. 60 miles N. E. Mocha.

DSJOF, an extensive province of Arabia, in the country of Yemen, consisting chiefly of sandy plains and deserts.

DUANESBURG, a post township of the United States, in Schenectady county, New York, 23 miles W. Albany. Pop. 3052.

DUBEN, a town of Saxony, on the Mulda, 18 miles N. E. Leipzig. Population 2200.

DUNITZA, a town and fortress of European Turkey, in Bosnia, on the Unia. Pop. 6000.

DUBLIN, a county of Ireland, bounded E. by the Irish sea, N. by the county of Meath, W. by the counties of Meath and Kildare, S. by the county of Wicklow. It is in length, from north to south, between Meath and the sea, 30½ English miles; and in breadth, from east to west, about 10 miles. The superficial extent of the county contains 228,211 English acres, or about 355 square miles, of which the mountains and wastes occupy one-eighth. In the vicinity of Dublin the lands are fertile and luxuriant, but in more remote parts agriculture is not in so flourishing a state. The principal river is the Liffey. The Dodder is a small stream, and falls into the bay of Dublin. There are two canals, the Grand and the Royal canals, by which a navigable communication has been opened between Dublin and the Shannon. Pop. 210,000.

DUBLIN, the metropolis of Ireland, in the province of Leinster, and county of Dublin, within a mile of the bay of that name, which is of a circular form, and about six miles in diameter, and into which the river Liffey runs, after dividing the city, through which its course is nearly west to east, into equal parts. Though spacious, this bay is neither commodious nor safe, particularly in winter

These defects, which are owing to two sand banks, called the North and South Bulls, and to its great exposure from the east and south-east, are in part remedied by a magnificent wall of stone, which runs out into the bay the distance of 6564 yards, and is terminated by a light-house. On the opposite side of the harbour is another light-house, together with a pier and harbour; and lately a pier has been begun at Dunleary, a village on the south side of the bay, and 2½ miles within its mouth. From the point of Ringsend, where the Liffey enters the bay, it is embanked on either side with a noble wall of freestone, forming a range of beautiful and spacious quays through the whole city. The river is crossed in its course through the city by 7 stone bridges. Dublin is, besides, nearly insulated by two canals, which give great advantages for inland communication. The city is built rather in the form of a rectangular parallelogram, round which a road is carried, called the Circular. The houses and streets have now in some places grown up beyond its limits. The houses, with the exception of the principal public structures, are generally brick, and three to five stories high. In the old part of the city, the streets are irregular, although these which range parallel to and at right angles with the Liffey, are uniform and capacious. There are five squares, two on the north, and three on the south side of the river. Stephen's-green is nearly a mile in circuit. To the west end of the city adjoins the Phoenix-park, a royal demesne, about three miles in length, and two in breadth: it is adorned with a Corinthian fluted pillar 50 feet high, surmounted by a Phoenix erected by the earl of Chesterfield, when viceroy in 1747. It contains lakes, regatta and appropriate mansions for the viceroy, the secretaries, and rangers; also a military hospital; a large military school for the maintenance and education of soldiers' children, with a beautiful church, a salute battery, and a magazine strongly fortified. On an eminence in it has been erected, in honour of the duke of Wellington, a splendid obelisk, 210 feet in height. Perhaps no city can boast of a greater number of magnificent and useful buildings. The castle, which was completed and darked with towers in 1213, is situated about the centre of the city, and is the seat of government. It consists principally of two squares, which contain apartments for the lord lieutenant and officers of his suite, and also residences for his secretaries, with suitable offices for transacting the business of the civil and war departments. In the lower court are the treasury and other offices, besides the civil establishment of the ordnance department, and an extensive armoury. The Castle chapel, in this lower square, and recently rebuilt, is an exquisite specimen of Gothic architecture. The other public buildings are the royal exchange, the commercial buildings, the corn exchange or barge-quay, the linen-hall, the custom-house, in front 375 by 209 feet; the stamp-office and post-office, the parliament house, now converted into the national bank. Opposite to the east front of the custom-house are the government wet docks; and adjacent to the post-office is Nelson's pillar, raised to the height of 130 feet. In the centre of College-green, to which the principal front of the bank looks, is an equestrian statue of William III. erected in 1701. On the east side of College-green is the grand front of Trinity college, which is of Portland stone, of the Corinthian order. This building extends in depth 600 feet, and consists within those dimensions of two spacious squares; and a third received in 1617 its completion. The park is in the rear of the college, and contains 25½ acres, adorned with fine trees. Dublin university (viz. its provost, fellows, and scholars arrived at 21 years of age) returned two members to the parliament of Ireland, and still return one to that of the united kingdom. The courts of justice, and their necessary public offices, situate on the quay, extend 430 feet in front: the offices form the wings, occupying 90 feet in length, by 50 in depth: the hall of public justice is in the centre. Dublin contains 19 parishes; 2 cathedrals, 19 parish churches, besides several chapels of the established religion; 2 meeting-houses of the church of Scotland, 7 of other dissenters, 4 of Methodists, 2 of Quakers, 1 Lutheran Danish, 1 French Calvinist, and about 26 Roman Catholic chapels; some of which, lately built, are massy structures of stone, and built in a respectable style of architecture. St Patrick's cathedral is an antique building, in a low and ruinous part of the town, erected in 1190, decorated with a steeple in 1370, and a very lofty spire in 1750. Christ church, built in 1638, the ancient cathedral of Dublin, is another venerable pile, containing some curious monuments. St George's church is a superb edifice, lately built, with a magnificent front, and lofty spire. No city for its size abounds more in charitable institutions. These are in general well endowed, and some of them are splendid buildings. The royal barracks are in the west end of the town, near the river. At the west of the city, opposite to the Phoenix-park, is the royal hospital of Kilmainham, for the reception of disabled and superannuated soldiers, on the plan of Chelsea. Dublin is a corporate body, with a chief magistrate, who has the title of lord mayor, elected annually from the aldermen, 25 in number, elected for life from citizens who have served as sheriffs; two sheriffs are chosen annually from the common council, who are 26 in number, and are triennially elected from their respective guilds by the freemen, a very numerous body, amounting to perhaps 2000. The freemen of Dublin, in conjunction with its freemen, also return two members to the united parliament. Population 187,939. 60 miles W. of Holyhead in Wales, and 330 N.W. London, Long. 6. 15. W. Lat. 53. 21. N.

DUBLIN, a township of the United States, in Huntingdon county, Pennsylvania. Population 970.—2d, A post township of Cheshire county, New Hampshire, 34 miles S.W. Concord. Population 1184.

DUBLIN, LOWER, a township of the United States, in Philadelphia county, Pennsylvania. Population 2194.—UPPER, a township in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, 10 miles N. E. Philadelphia. Pop. 1050.

DUBNO, a town of European Russia, in Volhynia, on the Irwa. Population 6600.

DUCKFIELD, a township of England, in Cheshire. Population 5096.

DUDDINGSTON, a parish and village of Scotland, in the county of Edinburgh. Pop. 3086.

DEDERSTADT, a town of Hanover, 14 miles E. N. E. Göttingen. Population 1169.

DUDLEY, a market town and parish of England, in Worcestershire. There are two churches; the parish church, dedicated to St. Thomas, and the other a chapel of ease belonging to it, dedicated to St. Edmund. In 1311, the parish church of St. Thomas was taken down, and a new church, capable of containing upwards of 1500 persons, has been built according to an elegant Gothic model. The castle is a grand and spacious ruin. At a little distance from it are the interesting remains of a priory. In the town is a well endowed free grammar school, and two charity schools. The manufactures are iron, nails, glass, and fire-irons. Population 13,211. 8½ miles W. Birmingham.

DUNLEY, a post township of the United States, in Worcester county, Massachusetts, 20 miles S. Worcester. Population 1226.

DUFFEL, a town of the Netherlands, province of Antwerp. Population 2350.

DUISBURG, a strong town of the Prussian states, on the Rhine, 13 miles N. Düsseldorf. Population 4000.

DURR'S, a county of the United States, in Massachusetts, which comprises Martha's Vineyard island, Chappaquiddick island, Noman's island, and the Elizabeth islands. Population 3290. Chief town Edgartown.

DURKE OF YORK'S ISLAND.—Several islands go by this name in the South Pacific ocean, and off the west coast of North America.

DUKE'S TOWN, a small town of Calabar, in Africa, near the mouth of Old Calabar river.

DULAS, the name of six small rivers of Wales.—Also a river in the isle of Anglesey, with a village at its mouth.

DULASHE, a river of South Wales, in Carmarthenshire, which falls into the Towy.

DULCINO, a seaport of European Turkey, with a strong castle. Population 8000. 17 miles S. W. Scutari.

DULLEK, a village of Ireland, county of Meath, 6 miles S. S. W. Drogheda.

DULZEN, a town of the Prussian states, 20 miles N. N. W. Julius. Population 4000.

DURLZ, a parish of Scotland, in Perthshire. Population 4508.

DURMEN, a town of Westphalia, 16 miles S. W. Munster. Population 1700.

DELVERTON, a town and parish of England, in Somersetshire. Population 1127.

DELWICH, a village of England, county of Surrey, 5 miles S. E. London.

DEMARRY, a parish of Scotland, in Perthshire. Population 1164.

DUMBERTON, a county of Scotland, bounded N. by Perthshire, E. by the counties of Stirling and Lanark, S. by the river Clyde and Renfrewshire, W. by Lochlong, an arm of the sea, and by Argyleshire. It consists of two detached portions of territory, computed to contain a superficial area of 230 square miles, or about 147,000 English acres, exclusive of lakes, which are numerous. The country is mountainous. Benvorlich rises 3262 feet above the level of the sea. It produces iron, coal, freestone, and limestone, in abundance. 12,000 acres are covered with copse-wood, and the soil is in many places good, yielding abundant crops, though agriculture has not kept pace with the progress of manufactures. There are numerous and extensive printfields on the Leven; and cotton manufactures, tanning, weaving, and paper making, are also carried on. This shire contains one royal burgh, Dumbarton, the towns of Kirkintilloch, Cumbernauld, and Hecleburgh, and several villages, of which the chief are Old Kirkpatrick, Renton, and Alexandria. Dumbartonshire sends one member to parliament. Population 27,317.

DUMBERTON, a town of Scotland, the chief town of the county of Dumbarton, near the confluence of the Leven with the Clyde. It consists principally of one well paved street, and has a capacious modern church, with a handsome spire. The principal manufacture is crown-glass. Some tanning and weaving is also carried on. Dumbarton unites with Glasgow, Renfrew, and Rutherglen, in sending a representative to parliament. The ancient castle of Dumbarton crowns a lofty and precipitous rock, which rises abruptly from a level plain at the confluence of the Clyde and Leven, by which its base is washed on two sides. Population of the town and parish, 3481. 15 miles W. Glasgow.

DUMFRIES, a county of Scotland, bounded N. by the county of Lanark, E. by those of Peebles, Selkirk, and Roxburgh, S. by the Solway frith and the English border, and W. by the counties of Kirkcudbright and Ayr. It extends 50 miles in length by 32 in breadth; its circuit is about 174 miles, of which 21 are sea coast; and its superficial area amounts to 1023 square miles, or 644,305 square acres. Independent of the Solway frith, this county is watered by the Nith, the Annan, the Esk, and many tributary streams. There are also several small lakes; and sulphurous and chalybeate springs at Moffat. The surface of this county is exceedingly irregular; a large portion of it is mountainous, and much of the land barren and covered with heath. Lead is found in great abundance at Wanlockhead. Coal and lime are also abundant. The principal manufactures are linen, for home consumpt; also cotton and carpeting, &c. Dumfries-shire is divided into 42 parishes; contains four royal burghs, Dumfries, Annan, Lochmaben, and Sanquhar; and several considerable villages, as Moffat, Langholm, and Thornhill. Population 70,878.

DUMFRIES, a royal burgh in the south of Scotland, the capital of the county, on the Nith, over which is a handsome bridge; and within a few hundred yards is another bridge, said to be very ancient. The town consists of several streets, the principal of which runs parallel to the river. There are two churches, besides Burgher and Antiburgher meeting-houses, a Relief chapel, a place of worship for Methodists and Missionaries, a chapel for those of the Episcopal persuasion, and one for Roman Catholics. There is an hospital here for aged persons and orphans; also an infirmary and lunatic asylum. The other public edifices are a town-house, built in 1706; a county jail and court-house, lately completed; and an academy. In the centre of the town there is an obelisk erected in honour of the duke of Queensberry. Dumfries unites with Annan, Lochmaben, Sanquhar, and Kirkcudbright, in returning a representative to parliament. It was exposed to repeated calamities, from the invasions of the English during the border wars. Pop. 11,052. 71 miles S. S. W. Edinburgh.

DUMRIES, the capital of Prince William county, Virginia, in the United States, on the north side of Quantico creek, 33 miles S. Washington. The public buildings are a court-house and jail, and a church.

DUNMERSTON, a post township of the United States, in Windham county, Vermont, on Connecticut river, 5 miles N. Brattleborough, 30 S. Windsor. Pop. 1704.

DUN LE ROI, a town of France, department of the Cêr. Population 2760.

DUNNAN, a seaport of Scotland, in the county of Haddington, at the mouth of the frith of Forth. The principal street is broad and spacious. The harbour, which is defended by a battery, is of difficult access, but is of great safety for shipping. Ship-building is carried on; there is also a soap manufactory, two iron foundries, &c. and spinning mills, upon a small scale. The herring fishery is prosecuted here to a considerable extent. The church was founded in 1392: it has now fallen so much into decay, that a modern fabric is about to be erected. West from the harbour stands the venerable ruins of the castle, which project into the sea. Population of the town and parish 5272. 27 miles E. Edinburgh.

DUNBARTON, a township of the United States, in Hillsborough county, New Hampshire, on the Merrimack, 9 miles S. W. Concord, 18 N. Amherst. Population 1256.

DUNBEATH, a river of Scotland, runs into the sea, 8 miles N. E. Ord of Caithness.

DUNBLANE, a town and parish of Scotland, in Perthshire, on the Allan. It consists principally of one street, intersected by lanes.

Its cathedral is now in ruins, except what serves for the parish church. Population 3135. 6 miles N. Stirling.

DUNBOYNE, a village of Ireland, county of Meath, 30 miles N. W. Dublin.

DUNCANNON, a small town and fort of Ireland, in Wexford. Population 405.

DUNCANSBY HEAD, the N. E. extremity of Great Britain. Long 2. 53. W. Lat. 53. 33. N.

DUNDALK, a seaport of Ireland, county of Louth, on a river of the same name, at the mouth of a bay in the Irish channel. It consists principally of one wide street, intersected by many lanes. It has a good harbour; and among the public buildings are a market-house, court-house, jail, barracks, and a charter school. It has cambric and muslin manufactures. It returns one member to the imperial parliament. Pop. 15,000. 40 miles N. Dublin.

DUNDEE, a seaport town of Scotland, in Forfarshire, on the Tay, 12 miles from its mouth. It is large and well built, but is far from being elegant. It consists of four principal streets, diverging from the market-place or High-street, which is a spacious square, 360 feet long, by 100 broad. There are, besides, various smaller streets, which are generally narrow. A little to the west of the High-street stands the Old church, said to have been built by David, earl of Huntingdon, in 1189, which contains four places of worship. On the south side of the High-street the town-house is built, upon the site of an old church. At the east end of the square is a handsome trades-hall, about 130 feet from which stood the Castle-hill, so called from a castle which once stood on it. It consisted of hard white-stone, and is now quarried away with great labour and expence, to make way for a spacious street, called Castle-street, which opens to the harbour. In this street an elegant Episcopal chapel has been built, and a theatre. On an eminence near the street called the Cowgate, St Andrew's church has been built, which is an elegant structure, and has a spire 139 feet high. There are many friendly and religious societies in the place; and an infirmary for the reception of the destitute sick, a dispensary for out-patients, an elegant lunatic asylum, and an orphan institution. There is also an academy. The harbour is commodious, easily admitting trading vessels of large burden; and it has lately been enlarged so as to render it of more safe and easy access; and a wet dock has also been constructed. The trade of Dundee is chiefly to the Baltic and to London. It has also several large vessels employed in the Greenland fishery. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in the linen manufacture; and there are several spinning mills in the town and neighbourhood. Cambrics and other coarse linens are manufactured for the foreign market; and in time of war, canvas or sail-cloth is an important article. Considerable quantities of sack cloth and cotton bagging are also made for exportation. Coloured threads are manufactured of good quality, and are in high repute. Dundee was erected into a royal burgh by King William, who began his reign in 1166. Its ancient rights were re-established by a charter of King Robert Bruce, and finally confirmed by the great charter from Charles I. The town is governed by a provost, 4 bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and 18 councillors, and joins with Forfar, St Andrew's, Cupar, and Perth, in sending a member to parliament. It has frequently suffered from the calamities of war. It was last taken and given up to pillage and massacre by Monk, during the protectorship of Cromwell. Pop. 30,575. 40 miles N. Edinburgh.

DUNDONALD, a parish and village of Scotland, in Ayrshire. Population 2442.

DUNFERMLINE, a town of Scotland, in the county of Fife, about 2½ miles N. of the frith of Forth. It is irregularly built, having been the work of many different periods; and some of the streets are narrow and inconvenient. The parish church at present in use is a portion of the ancient abbey, extending 90 feet in length, 55 in breadth, and 53 in height. The spire is 155 feet high. Immediately contiguous to the east gable of this church a new one has been erected. There is a chapel of ease, and several meeting-houses of Burghers, Antiburghers, Baptists, Methodists, &c. There are also several charitable endowments here. A town-house was founded in 1709; and a handsome guild-hall, with a steeple 132 feet high, was erected in 1803. Dunfermline has been long noted for manufactures of table-linen. Quantities of cotton goods are likewise wove for Glasgow and Paisley. It is a royal burgh, and unites with Inverkeithing, Culross, Queensferry, and Stirling, in returning a representative to parliament. In February 1818, a tomb was discovered here, supposed to have contained the body of Robert Bruce. Only an inconsiderable portion of the abbey is standing. Adjacent to it there was a royal palace, wherein the unfortunate sovereign Charles I. was born, in 1600. Population of the town and parish 13,681. 16 miles N. W. Edinburgh.

DUNGOANNOX, a town of Ireland, county of Tyrone. It returns one member to the imperial parliament. Population 4000. 11 miles N. Armagh.

DUNGARVAN, a town of Ireland, county of Waterford, on a bay of the same name. Its chief exports are potatoes. It returns one member to the imperial parliament. 21 miles W. S. W. Waterford.

DUNGENESS, a cape on the coast of Kent, England. Long. 0. 57. E. Lat. 50. 55. N.

DUNGIVEN, a village of Ireland, in the county of Londonderry. Population 900.

DUNHAM, a township of Bedford county, Lower Canada, on the Yamaska. It is a fertile tract of country. Population 1600.

DUNKARD, a township of the United States, in Green county, Pennsylvania. Population 1055.

DUNKELD, a town and parish of Scotland, in Perthshire, on the Tay. It is of great antiquity, and was formerly the capital of ancient Caledonia. The town is not well built. A fine bridge, however, of seven arches, has been lately thrown over the Tay; and a new street, consisting of good houses, has been opened on a line with the bridge. The scenery around the town has been long the object of admiration to all strangers. Here are the ruins of an ancient cathedral; not far from which is the duke of Athol's seat, with delightful grounds adjoining. The principal manufactures are of linen and yarn. Population 1364. 15 miles N. Perth.

DUNKIRK, i. e. "the Church on the Downs" (so called from sand-banks on the coast), a seaport of French Flanders. It is in general well built; the houses are of white brick, but seldom exceed two stories in height. It is a place of considerable trade, in corn, fish, and home manufactures; also in colonial produce. One of its chief inconveniences is a scarcity of fresh water. The barracks are extensive and elegant; the churches are less remarkable for architecture than for the paintings they contain. Large sums were expended by the French government on its harbour and docks; these it was agreed to demolish at the peace of Utrecht; but their dilapidation was never complied with; and at the peace of 1763 they were abandoned. Dunkirk has since been the unmolested resort of armed ships during war, and of smuggling vessels at all times. Population above 26,000. 25 miles N. E. Calais.

DUNLAVIN, a town of Ireland, county of Wicklow, 32 miles from Dublin.

DUNLEAP, a seaport of Ireland, on the south side of Dublin bay.

DUNLEEN, a town of Ireland, in the county of Louth, 7 miles N. Drogheda.

DUNLOR, a parish and village of Scotland, in Ayrshire, noted for its cheese. Pop. 1097.

DUNMANAWAY, a town of Ireland, in the county of Cork, 23 miles S. W. Cork.

DUNMANNUS BAY, a spacious bay on the south-west coast of Ireland.

DUNMORE BAY, a bay on the west coast of Ireland. Long. 9. 35. W. Lat. 52. 44. N.

DUNMORE HEAD, a cape on the west coast of Ireland. Long. 9. 35. W. Lat. 52. 6. N.

DUNMOW, GREAT, an ancient town of England, county of Essex, 37 miles N. N. E. London. Population 2499.

DUNMOW, LITTLE, a village and parish of England, county of Essex. Pop. 342.

DUNKET, a parish of Scotland, county of Caithness. Population 1036.

DUNKET, a bay and promontory of Scotland, in Caithness-shire.

DUNKING, a parish and village of Scotland, in Perthshire. The village is pleasantly situated on Dunning water. Population 1676. 9 miles W. S. W. Perth.

DUNNOTTAR, a parish of Scotland, in Kincardineshire. It contains the castle of Dunnottar, now in ruins. Population 1797.

DUNOON, a parish and village of Scotland, in Argyleshire. Population 2177.

DUNSTON, a town and parish of Scotland, in Berwickshire. It is well built, and has an elegant town-house, newly erected; a parish church, and three churches for dissenters. Pop. 3773. 15 miles W. Berwick-upon-Tweed.

DUNSTON, a town and parish of England, in Bedfordshire. The plaiting of straw is carried to a great extent. Population 1531. 20 miles S. Bedford.

DUNSTABLE, a post township of the United States, in Hillsborough county, New Hampshire. Population 1049.

DUNSTON, a town and parish of England, in Somersetshire. Population 195.

DUNSWICH, a town of England, in Suffolk, which returns two members to parliament. Population 200. 30 miles N. E. Ipswich.

DURHAM, a county of the United States, in North Carolina. Pop. 7865. Slaves 2416.

DURHAM, a village of Scotland, in Perthshire, 5 miles from Perth.

DURUELLA, a province of Morocco, about 75 miles in length, and 69 in breadth.

DURANCE, a river of France, which joins the Rhone between Avignon and Tarascon.

DURANGO, a town of Spain, province of Biscay. Population 2800.

DURANGO, chief town of an intendancy of the same name, in Mexico. It is the residence of the intendant and of a bishop. Its height is 6315 feet above the level of the sea. Pop. 12,000. 170 leagues N. W. Mexico.

DURAS, a town of France, department of the Lot and Garonne. Population 1600.

DURAZZO, a seaport of European Turkey, on the coast of Albania, 66 miles S. S. E. Ragusa. Population 5000.

DUREN, a town of the Prussian states, on the Roer, 15 miles E. Aix-la-Chapelle. Population 4750.

DURETAL, a town of France, in Anjou, 8 miles S. W. La Flèche. Population 3700.

DURHAM, a county of England, bounded N. by Northumberland, E. by the German ocean, S. by Yorkshire, from which it is separated by the river Tees, W. by the counties of Cumberland and Westmoreland. It is of a triangular figure, extending about 45 miles in extreme length, by 36 in breadth; and contains a superficial area of 1840 square miles, or 635,000 acres. The county is watered by the rivers Derwent, Skerne, Wear, Tees, and Tyne. A large portion of its surface is bleak and barren, not less than 144,000 square acres consisting of heath; much of it is also hilly; and Crossfell, the highest part, is elevated 3400 feet above the level of the sea. It produces in abundance both lead and iron. But the most important mineral is coal, which occupies a subterraneous area, 22 miles in length by half as much in breadth. Marble is also found; and there are quarries of mill-stones and grind-stones. A great proportion of the surface of this county is unfavourable to agriculture. There is an excellent salt spring, from which salt is made. There are iron foundries and forges. Ship-building is carried on to a considerable extent, together with the manufacture of cordage. Glass, pottery, and other goods, are made both for home consumption and exportation. This county is divided into 73 parishes: it contains one city, Durham, and nine market towns. It returns two members to parliament. Population 207,673.

DURHAM, a city of England, capital of the above county, on the Wear, by which it is almost surrounded. The river is crossed here by three bridges; and an ancient cathedral overhangs its banks, which are beautifully wooded. This venerable structure was commenced in the year 1093, a century after the foundation of the city; and its central tower, which is 214 feet high, was erected between 1233 and 1258. It contains several ancient monuments. Besides the cathedral, Durham contains six parish churches. There are places of worship for Presbyterians and Methodists; two Roman Catholic chapels, and a Quaker meeting-house. A county infirmary stands here, and a county jail; and a small theatre was erected in the year 1791. It returns two members to parliament. It suffered often during the wars between England and Scotland. Population 9822. 16 miles S. Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Long. 1. 33. W. Lat. 51. 51. N.

DURHAM, formerly FREEHOLD, a post township of the United States, in Green county, New York, on Catskill river. Population 2944. 29 miles N. W. Athens.—2d, Of Middlesex county, Connecticut, 7 miles S. Middletown. Population 1101.—3d, Of Cumberland county, Maine, on the Androscoggin, 26 miles N. E. Portland. Population 1772.—4th, Of Strafford county, New Hampshire, on Oyster river, 11 miles W. N. W. Portsmouth. Population 1149.

DURISDEER, a parish and village of Scotland, in Dumfries-shire. Population 1601.

DURLACH, a neat town of Germany, on the Enz. Here is the ducal castle of Karlsburg, an elegant church, and an academy. It has a manufactory of porcelain. Population 4000. 32 miles N. N. W. Stuttgart.

DURROW, a town of Ireland, 14 miles N. N. W. Kilkenny. Houses 218.

DURSLEY, a town and parish of England, in Gloucester. Population 3186. 15 miles S. Gloucester.

DURSWICK, a village of Ireland, 4 miles N. W. Dublin.

DUSSELDORF, a town of Germany, on the Rhine, where that river is joined by the Dussel. The streets are wide and regular; also the squares, particularly the market place and Charles-square. The castle, though greatly damaged by bombardment in 1794, has since been repaired, and contains the celebrated gallery of paintings. Here are several elegant churches, extensive barracks, and pleasant public walks. A traffic is carried on in corn, and in the local manufactures of cloth, paper-hangings, glass, and leather.

Population about 125,000. It was made over to Prussia in 1815, and is now the capital of a circle with 864,000 inhabitants. 20 miles N.N.W. Cologne. Long. 6. 46. E. Lat. 51. 13. N.

DUTCHESS, a county of the United States, in New York, on the E. side of the Hudson, bounded N. by Columbia county, E. by Connecticut, S. by Putnam county, and W. by the Hudson, which separates it from Orange and Ulster counties. Population 51,412. Chief town Poughkeepsie.

DETINGEN, a town of Wirtemberg, on the Danube, 25 miles N. W. Constance. It has manufactures of linen. Population 3760.

DUXNOUGH, a post township of the United States, in Plymouth county, Massachusetts, 10 miles N. Plymouth. Population 2201.

DUYVELAND, an island of the Netherlands, province of Zealand. The principal village is East Duyveland.

DWANACA, a town and celebrated temple of Hindostan, province of Gujerat. Houses 2560. Long. 69. 15. E. Lat. 22. 21. N.

DWINA, a large river of Russia, which falls into the gulf of Riga, a few miles below Riga.—2d, A river of Russia, which enters the White sea, a little N. W. Archangel.

DYLE, a small river of the Netherlands, which joins the Demer a little below Mechlin.

DYREL, a river of Westphalia, which falls into the Weser.

DYSART, a parish and burgh of Scotland, in Fifeshire. The burgh is situated on the northern shore of the frith of Forth. It has now fallen into decay. A great quantity of salt is still made here. It unites with Kirkaldy, Kinghorn, and Burntisland, in returning a representative to parliament. Population of the parish 6529. 1 mile N. E. Kirkaldy.

E.

EACHAIG, a river of Scotland, in Argyleshire, which runs into the frith of Clyde.

EAGLE ISLAND, near the western coast of Ireland. Long. 12. 51. W. Lat. 54. 17. N.

EAGLESLAN, a parish and village of Scotland, in Renfrewshire. Population 1927.

EALING, a village and parish of England, in Middlesex. Population 6998.

EARL, a post township of the United States, in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, on Conestago creek. Population 4218.

EARLSTOWN, a village and parish of Scotland, in Berwickshire. Population 1705.—Also a village in Cheshire.

EARNE, or ERNE, a river of Scotland, which falls into the Tay near Abernethy.

EASTINGTON, a village and parish of England, 7 miles N. Whitchy. Population 597.

EASTINGWOLD, a township of England, North Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1912.

EAST GREENWICH, a post town of the United States, in Rhode Island. Pop. 1539.

EAST HADDAM, a post township of the United States, in Middlesex county, Connecticut, 14 miles S. Middletown. Pop. 2537.

EAST HARTFORD, a post township of the United States, in Hartford county, Connecticut. Population 5240.

EAST HAVEN, a township of the United States, in New Haven county, Connecticut.

EAST ISLAND, the name of several small islands in the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

EASTBOURNE, a town of England, in Sussex, resorted to for sea-bathing. Pop. 7026.

EASTER ISLAND, or DAVIS'S LAND, in the South Pacific ocean, 12 miles in length. Long. 109. 29. 20. W. Lat. 27. 9. 32. S.

EASTERTON, a township of the United States, in Dauphin county, Pennsylvania.

EASTHAMPTON, a post township of the United States, 112 miles E. New York. Pop. 1434.

EASTINGTON, a parish of England, in Gloucestershire, with 1681 inhabitants.

EASTMEON, a parish of England, in Hants, with 1336 inhabitants.

EASTON, a parish of England, county of Somerset, with 2109 inhabitants.—The name of other inconsiderable parishes.

EASTON, a post township of the United States, in Northampton county, Pennsylvania.

EASTON, a post town of the United States, in Talbot county, Maryland. Pop. 1500.

EASTPORT, a post township and port of entry of the United States, in Washington county, Maine, on Passamaquoddy bay. Population in 1810, 1511.

EASTRY, a parish of England, in Kent, with 1062 inhabitants.

EAST-WINDSOR, a post township of the United States, in Hartford county, Connecticut, on the east side of Connecticut river, 8 miles N. Hartford. Population 3081.

EASTWOOD, a parish of Scotland, county of Renfrew. Population 5676.

EATON, a town of the United States, in North Carolina, on the Roanoke.—Also a small town in New Hampshire.

EATON, a post township of the United States, in Madison county, New York, 30 miles S. W. Utica, 120 W. Albany. Pop. 2263.

EATON BRAY, a village and parish of England, county of Bedford. Population 816.

EATON SOCON, a village and parish of England, county of Bedford.

EAUSE, a town of France, department of the Gers. Population 3300.

EANSFLEET, a hamlet of England, in the isle of Thanet, Kent.

EBENEZER, a town of the United States, in Effingham county, Georgia, on the Savannah.

EBENEZER CREEK, a river of the United States, in Georgia, which joins the Savannah.

ENERACH, a river of Germany, which runs into the Rhelnitz, 3 miles S. Bamberg.

ENERBACH, a town of Baden, with 2050 inhabitants. 18 miles E. Heidelberg.

ENERENDOUF, a town of Bavaria, principality of Sulzbach. Population 1300.

ENERBACH, UPPER and LOWER, a large village of Saxony, with 5000 inhabitants.

ENERBERG, a town of Upper Austria, on the Traun, 8 miles N. W. Ens.

ENERSDORF, a town of Lower Austria, on the Danube, 8 miles E. S. E. Vienna. Population 1163.—The name of several other small towns.

ENERSHEIM, a village of France, in Alsace. Population 1400.

ENRGEN, a town of Wittenberg, 36 miles S. Stutgard. Population 3750.

ENREUIL, a town of France, department of the Allier. Population 2200.

ENUS (the Iberus of the ancients), a large river of Spain, which has its source on the borders of Asturia, and falls into the Mediterranean below Tortosa, in Catalonia.

ECCLESALL BIERLOW, a township of England, 3 miles S. W. Sheffield. Pop. 9113.

ECCLESBORO'N, a river of England, which runs into the Derwent in Derbyshire.

ECCLESFECHAN, a small town of Scotland, in Dumfries-shire, 16 miles N. E. Dumfries.

ECCLESFIELD, a township of England, 5 miles N. Sheffield. Population 7163.

ECCLESBATH, a town of England, county of Stafford, on the Sow. Population 1254.

ECCLESWICK, a township of England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire. Pop. 2176.

ECCLESTON, a township of England, in the county of Lancaster. Population 727.

ECHAUFFONE, a town of Normandy. Population 2150. 9 miles W. Aigle.

ECHENIN, a river of Lower Canada, which joins the St. Lawrence, 2 miles above Quebec.

ECHT, a parish of Scotland, in Aberdeenshire. Population 1030.

ECHT, a village of the Netherlands, 9 miles S. by W. Buremond. Population 3000.

ECHTERNACH, a town of the Netherlands. Pop. 3068. 18 miles N. N. E. Luxemburg.

ECIZA, a large town of Spain, province of Seville, on the Xenil. It has tanning works, and manufactures of leather. The town is reputed to have been formerly of great importance; at present it contains 6 churches, 16 convents, and 15 hospitals; it has also a large square, with a piazza. Population 28,000. 63 miles E. N. E. Seville. Long. S. 4. 34. W. Lat. 37. 31. 51. N.

ECKEREN, a town of the Netherlands. Population 2800. 4 miles N. Antwerp.

ECKERFJORDHUS, a town of Denmark. The harbour is deep and secure. Population 2100. 10 miles S. Sleswick.

ECKINGTON, a village and parish of England, county of Derby. Population 3598.

ECKMühl, a small town of Bavaria, 16 miles W. Straubing.

EDAMMOY, a town of France, department of the Sarthe. Population 2700.

ECOTEX, a town of France, 12 miles N. Paris. Population 1200.

EDAM, a town of North Holland, near the Zuyder-Zee. Population 2760.

EDAY, one of the Orkney islands, 6 miles long and 2 broad. Population 873.

EDDYSTONE ROCKS, a reef of rocks in the English channel, on which is the well known light-house of that name.

EDEN, a river of Scotland, in Berwickshire, which falls into the Tweed.

EDEN, a river of Scotland, which rises in Kinross-shire, and falls into St. Andrew's bay.

EDEN, a river of England, in Westmoreland, which falls into the Solway frith.

EDENDERRY, a town of Ireland, in King's county, 29 miles W. Dublin.

EDENHAM, a village and parish of Scotland, 2½ miles N. E. Kelso.

EDENROSEN, a town of the Bavarian circle of the Rhine. Population 3300.

EDENTON, a port of entry of the United States, in Chowan county, North Carolina, 77 miles S. S. W. Norfolk.

EDER, a river of Germany, which falls into the Fulda, 6 miles above Cassel.

EDESSA, a town of European Turkey, in Romania, 44 miles W. N. W. Saloniki. Population 12,000.

EDFU, a village of Upper Egypt, famous for the remains of antiquity.

EDGARTON, a post township and port of entry of the United States, and capital of Duke's county, Massachusetts, on the east side of the island of Martha's Vineyard, 100 miles S. S. E. Boston. Population 1365.

EDGEBASTON, a parish of England, in the county of Warwick. Population 2117.

EDGECOMBE, a county of the United States, in North Carolina, on Tar river. Population 12,423. Slaves 5107. Chief town Tarborough.

EDGECOMBE, a post township of the United States, in Lincoln county, Maine, on Sheepscot river. Population 1288.

EDGECOTT, a small village of England, in Northamptonshire, 4 miles N. Banbury.

EDGEFIELD, a district of the United States, in South Carolina, between Saluda and Savannah rivers, and Abbeville district. Population 23,160. Slaves 8576.

EDGEWORTH, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 1729.

EDGWARE, a small town and parish of England, in Middlesex. Population 551.

EDIKOFEN, a town of the Bavarian circle of the Rhine, 4 miles N. Landau.

EDINBURGH, or MID-LOTHIAN, a county of Scotland, which is about 30 miles long, and varies in breadth from 16 to 20 miles. Its superficial extent is 360 square miles, or 230,400 English acres. It is bounded N. by the frith of Forth, and the river Almond, which separates it from West Lothian, or Linlithgowshire, E. by the county of Haddington, S. by the counties of Lanark, Peebles, and Berwick, and on the W. corner by part of the county of Linlithgow. The general aspect of the county is pleasant; about one-third of it consists of arable land, which is fertile and highly cultivated, and affords excellent crops. The Moorfoot and the Pentland hills pass through the county, the highest point of which rises 1700 feet above the level of the sea. This county abounds in most parts with valuable minerals, such as coal, lime-stone, freestone, and iron ore of different species. The principal rivers of the county are the North and South Esks, the Almond, and the water of Leith. All these formerly abounded in trout; but some of them have been exhausted from over-fishing. Besides Edinburgh, the metropolis of the county, and Leith, the county contains the towns and villages of Dalkeith, Musselburgh, Portobello, Lasswade, Pennycook, Mid-Calder, Gilmerton, and Newhaven, where a new pier has lately been erected for the ferry boats across the frith. By the Union canal, lately completed, a navigable communication is opened with the Forth and Clyde canal, and thence to Glasgow. The county of Edinburgh contains 31 parishes. Pop. 191,514.

EDINBURGH, the metropolis of Scotland, about a mile and half from the frith of Forth, situated in the northern part of the county of Edinburgh. The town stands on high and uneven ground, being built on three eminences, which run in a direction from east to west. The central ridge, on which the city was originally built, is terminated abruptly on the west by a precipitous rock on which the castle is placed, while to the east it gradually inclines to the plain, from which rise the lofty elevations of Arthur's-seat, Salisbury-crags, and the Calton-hill. The valley to the north of this ridge, which was formerly filled with water, has been since drained, and is now a marsh, nearly dry in summer. On the rising ground to the north of this valley stands the New town of Edinburgh. Both sides of the central ridge, occupied by the principal street of the Old town, extending 5370 feet from the castle to Holyrood house, are covered with buildings crowded together in the closest array, and descending from the main street, chiefly in narrow lanes, with little regard either to health or cleanliness. In the bottom of the valley on the south side of the High-street, and parallel with it, runs a narrow street called the Cowgate. This street communicates by streets and narrow lanes, with that part of the town built on the southern eminence, which is much more spacious and pleasant in its appearance than the centre of the city, and contains several elegant squares. Of these, the principal is George's-square. Here are also the Meadows, a track of level ground, intersected by walks, which are shaded on each side by rows of trees. The two ridges on which the Old town is built are also connected by an elegant bridge, which crosses the low street called the Cowgate, in the ravine between them, at right angles; on each side of which bridge houses are ranged; and an elegant, spacious, and nearly level street is formed, notwithstanding the inequalities of the ground. The New town is built on the lower and northernmost of the ridges, parallel with the Old town, with which it is connected by a bridge, and by a mound of earth called the Earthen-mound. The ground on which the New town is built was added to the royalty in 1767; and since that period, a succession of streets and squares have been constructed on it, in elegance and regularity equal to those of any other city in the world. St Andrew's and Charlotte-squares are remarkable for their elegance. In the former, an elegant column has been raised in honour of Lord Melville. In even a superior style of architecture, an extension of the city is now making on the inclined plain on the north. Edinburgh is connected with Leith by a very fine road, which has been paved at an immense expence; and owing to the great increase of buildings, there is almost a continued street between the two places. A magnificent entrance into Edinburgh from the east has also been formed over the Calton-hill; and on each side of this road an elegant street has been already begun, and is in progress towards completion. To connect the Calton-hill with Prince's-street, an elegant bridge, of one large arch, called Waterloo bridge, has been thrown across the declivity by which they are separated. The scenery around Edinburgh, owing to the abrupt and craggy heights of the Calton-hill and Arthur's-seat, which suddenly rises 800 feet high from the surrounding plain, and presents the rocky heights of Salisbury crags towards the city, is uncommonly striking; and every thing has been done to display these natural advantages. Around the Calton-hill, several walks have lately been made out at different elevations, from which the surrounding town and country is seen to great advantage; a walk has also been made out on the still higher elevation of Salisbury crags, from which the view is grand and imposing.

Of the public works and buildings in Edinburgh, the Castle is the most remarkable. It is situated at the western extremity of the Old town, on a rugged rock, which rises on three sides from a level plain, to the height of 150 to 200 feet. The castle, with its works, occupies an area of seven English acres, and is separated from the town by an open space nearly 300 feet square. In one of the apartments called the crown-room, the regalia of Scotland were deposited at the union. They were found in February 1818, when the chest in which they had been placed was broken open by a royal warrant. At the opposite or eastern extremity of the Old town stands the palace and abbey of Holyrood, for several centuries the residence of the monarchs of Scotland. The abbey, of which only the walls remain, was founded in the year 1128, by David I.; and in the burying place within are interred several of his successors. The palace is a large quadrangular edifice of hewn stone, with a court within, surrounded by piazzas. At each angle of the west front are two double circular towers; and in the centre is a portico, decorated by four Doric columns, which support a cupola in the form of a crown. The palace contains a gallery 150 feet long, 72½ wide, and 18 high, decorated with imaginary portraits of the kings of Scotland from the time of Fergus I. As it now stands, it is not of high antiquity. Its north-west towers were built by James V., but the remaining part of it was added during the reign of Charles II. In the centre of the city is a small square called the Parliament-square, in which is an elegant equestrian statue of Charles II. Here is also a great irregular pile of building, partly old and partly new, in which the supreme courts hold their sittings for the administration of justice. The original portion of this building was finished in the year 1640, and was intended for the reception of the Scottish parliament. It consists of an extensive hall, 122 feet in length by 49 in breadth, and not less than 40 feet high. The workmanship of the inner roof, which is of a polygonal figure, of mossy oak timber, ornamented with gilding, and supported by abutments projecting from the wall, has been generally admired. These buildings have lately received great improvements and additions. For the reception of the advocates' library, the richest and rarest collection in Scotland, consisting of more than 70,000 printed volumes, and a smaller one belonging to the writers to the signet, magnificent apartments attached to the north-west corner of the parliament-house, have lately been finished, and at the west end of this, forming a right angle with it, an elegant edifice is just completed, which contains a hall for the meetings of the county gentlemen, and a set of offices for the sheriff, and others officers connected with the public affairs of the county. Nearly opposite to the Parliament-square stands the Royal Exchange, which was founded in the year 1753, and was formerly employed as a custom-house. The Register-office, in which the public records of Scotland are deposited, is situated at the east end of Prince's-street, facing the North-bridge. It was founded in 1774, and has ever since been distinguished above all the other structures of this splendid city, for lightness, elegance, and classical simplicity of design. Of the churches in the town, the metropolitan church, dedicated to St Giles, is the most ancient. It is built in the figure of a cross, and forms one side of the Parliament-square. It was erected into a collegiate church in 1406, but is said to have been founded nearly 600 years before. From the centre of the structure arises a lofty square tower, surmounted by slender arches of exquisite workmanship, supporting a handsome spire 161 feet in height, the whole exhibiting the resemblance of an imperial crown. The steeple contains a set of musical bells, on which, according to an old custom, tunes are played for an hour every forenoon. The other churches are Trinity College church, founded by Mary of Gueldres in 1462; the Old and New Greyfriars, the Tron, the Canonsgate, St Cathbert's, Lady Yester's, St Andrew's, and St George's, with five chapels of ease. St Andrew's and St George's adorn the principal street of the New town. Besides these places of worship, there are four for the Burghers, three for the Antiburghers, four for the Relief, four for the Baptists, two for the Independents, a Gaelic chapel, and one each for the Methodists, Cameronians, Bevanians, Glasites, Unitarians, Quakers, and Roman Catholics, and six for the Episcopalians. A Roman Catholic chapel was finished in 1814, in the purest Gothic style. Three of the Episcopal chapels are also of Gothic architecture. Of these, St Paul's and St John's were consecrated in the beginning of 1818, and are perhaps two of the finest edifices in this country. The university of Edinburgh has long since attained to general celebrity. It was originally founded in the year 1582, when there was only one professor. All the different branches of literature, science, and philosophy, are now taught in this celebrated seminary. The total number of students is about 2000. The buildings of the university founded by James VI. were ill suited to its future celebrity. Part of them were taken down in 1789, and a magnificent structure, designed by William Adam, was begun, which was long suspended, but has now recommenced upon a reduced plan. To the university is attached a library, consisting of more than 50,000 volumes. The botanic garden, which was about a mile from the university, on the road leading from Edinburgh to Leith, has been removed to the north side of the town. The High-school, the principal grammar school of the city, was established in 1578. Owing to the increase of the town, another school is to be built in the New town, for the convenience of those who reside in this quarter. Besides these establishments, there are other English schools under the patronage of the town-council; an academy for design under the patronage of the Board of Trustees; a royal academy for the practice of horsemanship; and a number of private seminaries. Of literary associations, the principal is the Royal Society, constituted in 1782. The Royal Society of Antiquaries and the Wernerian Society; and the Astronomical Institution, lately established, for the purpose of promoting the science of astronomy: it had an observatory on the Calton-hill, which has been superseded by an elegant one of larger dimensions. The Highland Society was established for advancing the interests of agriculture, manufactures, and arts, in the Highlands of Scotland. It distributes annually about £700 in premiums for inventions and improvements. There are besides, the Faculty of Advocates, and the Royal Colleges of Physicians and Surgeons. The principal charitable institution is Heriot's hospital, which was endowed by George Heriot, jeweller to James VI. for educating and maintaining the sons of burghesses and freemen: it was erected in 1650, at the expence of £30,000, after a beautiful Gothic design of the celebrated Inigo Jones: it consists of a large quadrangle, with a court in the interior; and it is crowned with a profusion of columns, turrets, and spires. There is also Watson's hospital, for the sons and grandsons of poor citizens, —the Merchants' Maiden hospital, for the daughters of decayed merchants, —the Trades' Maiden hospital, for the daughters of tradesmen, —the Orphan hospital, —the Trinity hospital, for maintaining decayed burghesses, their wives, and unmarried daughters, —Gillespie's hospital, for educating poor children, and for maintaining persons of both sexes who are above 55 years of age. There are three charity workhouses, an asylum for the industrious blind, a Magdalene asylum, a house of industry, and a society for the suppression of begging; also the royal infirmary, a military hospital, a lying-in hospital, and four dispensaries, two for affording advice and medicines to the poor, and two for curing diseases in the eye and ear. The old prison of the city, which was erected in 1561, and which till 1640 accommodated the Scottish parliament and courts of justice, has lately been pulled down, and a handsome one on a large scale has been erected on the Calton-hill. On the east of this new building is Bridewell, founded in 1791. On the summit of the Calton-hill is Nelson's monument, a circular column, 108 feet in height. The principal establishments connected with the revenue are the custom-house and excise-office, both elegant mansions in the New town; and the general post-office, formerly situated on the south-west side of the North-bridge. A new and elegant edifice, with every suitable accommodation, has been since erected in Waterloo-place, a splendid street which ranges on each side of Waterloo-bridge. There are here 12 banking companies, of which the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank, and the British Linen Company, are incorporated by royal charter. The office of the Bank of Scotland is an elegant modern building, situated on the acclivity south of the North-loch.

The manufactures of Edinburgh are principally adapted for the consumption of its rich and luxurious inhabitants, consisting of household furniture; travelling carriages, which are executed in a style of superior elegance; of engraving in all its branches, the construction of musical instruments, &c.: there are also manufactures of glass and marble, in which equal taste and skill are displayed; and between 300 and 400 weavers are employed in the working of laces, silks, satins, and fine shawls. There are also brass and iron manufactures, and distilleries of spirits in the neighbourhood; and Edinburgh has been long noted for its excellent ale. The trade of book-selling and printing is also carried on to a great extent; and various periodical and other works are published here, which have deservedly attained extensive celebrity. Among these may be mentioned the Edinburgh Review, which circulates quarterly 14,000 copies. There are also two magazines published monthly, three newspapers published three times a week, three twice a week, and two once a week. The places of public amusement are the theatre, the pantheon, and the assembly-rooms. A gas-light company has lately been established. Edinburgh is a royal burgh, and its council sends one member to parliament.

The origin of Edinburgh is lost in the remote antiquity of barbarous times. About the year 1064, according to the accounts of the earlier historians, Edinburgh was a town of some note. In 1214, a parliament was assembled here for the first time. In 1437, the kings of Scotland usually resided in it, and held regular parliaments; and about the year 1456 it was considered the metropolis of Scotland. Population of the city and suburbs, including Leith, 156,255. 42 miles E. Glasgow, and 396 N. N. W. London. Long. 3. 12. W. Lat. 55. 58. N.

EDINBORO, a township of the United States, in Saratoga county, New York, 26 miles N. W. Ballston. Population 1319.

EDISTO ISLAND, on the coast of South Carolina, in the United States, 40 miles S. W. Charleston, with which it is connected by a good inland navigation. It is 12 miles long, and from 1 to 5 broad, and contained in 1808, 236 white inhabitants, and 2000 slaves.

EDISTO, or POKEO, a river of the United States, in South Carolina, formed of two branches, which unite below Orangeburg, and enter the ocean on each side of Edisto island.

EDGESTON, a post township of the United States, in Otsego county, New York, 13 miles W. Cooperstown. Population 1317.

EDMONTON, a village and parish of England, in Middlesex. Population 7990.

ENNOR, a parish of Scotland, in Berwickshire. Population 1516.

EDWARDS, a county of the United States, in Illinois, on the Wabash. Population in 1810, 1948. Chief town Palmyra.

EEGLAO, a town of the Netherlands, 11 miles N. W. Ghent. Population 6200.

EFFINGHAM, a county of the United States, in Georgia, between Savannah and Ogeechee rivers. Pop. 2506. Slaves 1010.

EPELN, a town of the Prussian states, 16 miles S. W. Magdeburg. Population 2100.

ERBN, a river which rises in Suthia, and runs into the Weretz. — Also a river of Franconia, which falls into the Elbe.

ERBN, a fortified town of Bohemia, on the above river. It contains some manufactures; and near it is a chalybeate spring. Pop. 8000.

EGENSEZ, a town of Hungary, on the Sala. Population 3030.

EGGHARBOUR, GREAT, an inlet and river of the United States, in New Jersey. The river runs into the inlet, in Lat. 39. 23. N. At its mouth is the seaport of the same name. 60 miles from Philadelphia. Population 1830.

EGGHARBOUR, LITTLE, an inlet of the United States, in New Jersey, which lies 17 miles N. Great Eggharbour inlet. It receives Mulicus creek.

EGGHARBOUR, LITTLE, a seaport and port of entry of the United States, in Burlington county, New Jersey. Population 913.

EGG ISLAND, a small island of the United States, in New Jersey, on Delaware bay.

EGHAM, a village and parish of England, in Surrey. Population of the parish 3616.

EGGISAU, a town of Switzerland, 10 miles S. W. Schaffhausen. Population 1400.

EGGISHAY, one of the Orkney islands. Population 226. Long. 2. 19. W. Lat. 59. N.

EGMONT, the name of three villages in North Holland, near Alkmaar.

EGMONT ISLAND, NEW GUERNSEY, or SANTA CRUZ, one of the Queen Charlotte's islands, in the South Pacific ocean. Long. 165. 59. E. Lat. 10. 46. S.

EGREMONT, a town and parish of England, in Cumberland. Population 1741.

EGUILLES, a town of France, 6 miles N. W. Aix. Population 3100.

EGYPT, an extensive and important kingdom of Northern Africa, extending about 500 miles along the Nile, from its mouth upward. It nominally comprehends also a breadth of 200 or 300 miles, from the Red sea to an ill defined boundary in the Lybian desert; but the only territory of any real value is that which extends immediately along the banks of the Nile or its branches. This cultivated region is divided by nature into two parts; Lower Egypt, composed of the Delta of the Nile, in which this celebrated stream, dividing itself into several channels, diffuses fertility over an alluvial track of from 50 to 100 miles in breadth; and Upper Egypt, which extends nearly 400 miles along the Nile above its separation, and consists merely of a narrow belt of land interposed between two parallel ranges of mountains that stretch along the opposite sides of the river. The early history of Egypt is involved in obscurity. It was subdued by the arms of Cambyzes, and became a province of the Persian monarchy. It was wrested without difficulty from the sway of Persia, by Alexander, who seems to have viewed it with peculiar favour, and founded Alexandria. The empire of Alexander having fallen to pieces, Egypt fell to the share of Ptolemy; and under his successors of the same name, she regained her ancient lustre, and rose to a height of science and commerce, which no other part of the world could then rival. Egypt was afterwards conquered by the Saracens, and towards the end of the 14th century the country was seized by a body of Circassian slaves, called Mamelukes, under whose yoke it remained until a late period, when the greater part of the Mamelukes were massacred, and the rest expelled from Egypt. Mahammed Ali, the perpetrator of this violent deed, now rules over Egypt in the name of the Porte. Egypt, under this succession of revolutions, suffered severely; and her lot, under the servile aristocracy of the Mamelukes, was worse than any before experienced, and brought her to a lower pitch of depression; yet the Delta, and the valley of the Upper Nile, continue to be highly cultivated, and crowded with villages; and notwithstanding their limited extent, support a population of two millions and a half. The inhabitants are variously aggregated from the bordering territories, both of the African and Asiatic continent. The basis, however, may be stated as consisting of Copts, Arabs, Turks, and, till very lately, Mamelukes. The Copts are the original race, and appear to be descendants of the most ancient inhabitants of Egypt, mingled in some degree with the Persians and Greeks, but kept entirely separate, by religious antipathy, from the Arabian and Turkish invaders. Being the only class that can read and write, or that possess any habits of business, they render themselves necessary in various departments; as keepers of the public registers, as the secretaries, intendants, and collectors of government, and in different branches of commerce. They thus frequently amass considerable fortunes, which they spend in a quiet and unostentatious manner. Their whole number has been estimated at 200,000. The Arabs, or the descendants of the Saracen conquerors, are now the most numerous inhabitants of Egypt; and the Turks have always been established to a considerable extent in the great cities. The Jews are also numerous in the commercial cities, and are oppressed and persecuted, but never extirpated. The Mamelukes consisted of Georgian and Circassian slaves, who, under the Fatimite Khalifs, were brought into the country, and being intrusted with arms, rose against their masters, whom they massacred or expelled, and thus assumed the dominion of Egypt, which they transmitted to new bands of slaves brought into the country. They were rather the plunderers than the rulers of Egypt; they filled it with scenes of violence, and extorted enormous sums, without affording any corresponding benefit or protection. They, however, composed the best cavalry in the Turkish empire. Their strength being broken by the defeats experienced during the invasion of the French, the pacha conceived a plan for their destruction; and having invited their chiefs to a feast, treacherously massacred the greater part of them. Those who escaped fled to Upper Egypt, and were finally driven to establish themselves at Dongola, where they still cherish the hope of regaining their ancient power, though the vigour of Mahammed Ali's government seems to preclude any immediate prospect of it. Egypt is distinguished for the vast remains of antiquity which it contains, great part of which bear no marks of decay, and display to us entire the arts and the power of the first generations of men. These remains are remarkable for their magnitude, the aim of their contrivers being apparently to astonish by their immensity. This enormous magnitude is particularly conspicuous in the Pyramids. The largest of these structures measures nearly 500 feet in perpendicular height, and has a square base of 700 feet. The greater part consists of a solid mass of masonry. The temples, though they cannot rival such stupendous magnitude, appear yet to exceed every other work of human art. The site of Thebes exhibits a space of three leagues, almost entirely covered with these sacred ruins. Even the statues with which they are adorned possess always gigantic dimensions.

The climate of Egypt is peculiarly characterised by the entire absence of rain. When a few drops fall, they are viewed by the inhabitants almost as a miracle. Thunder and lightning are nearly equally uninfrequent. The prevalent winds are from the north, and continue from May to September, and from November to February. In spring, for about fifty days, Egypt is liable to the terrible wind of the desert, the simoom, which, from its intense heat and dryness, threatens, when long continued, almost the extinction of animal life; fortunately, however, it seldom lasts above three days. The heat and filthy habits of the people is favourable to the ravages of the plague, which is here supposed to be indigenous. The ophthalmia is another severe disease peculiar to Egypt, the cause of which seems not yet ascertained.

The manufactures of Egypt are far from considerable. The potteries are extensive. Cotton cloth is manufactured to a considerable extent in Upper Egypt; that at Esne is the finest. Siout and its neighbourhood contains a considerable manufactory of linen. Egypt, though she has lost the commerce of the east, is still the centre of a most extensive inland commerce, reaching into the interior of Africa. Not to mention the numerous pilgrims to Mecca, three great caravans set out regularly for the interior of this vast continent, to bring back gold; ivory, sensa, various minor articles, but above all slaves. A great communication with Syria and Arabia is also carried on by caravans from Cairo.

ENEN, or BROAD RIVER, a river of England, which runs into the Irish sea.

ENNEBOM, UPPER and LOWER, two towns of France, one with 4400, the other with 1300 inhabitants.

ENINGES, a town of Wirtemberg, on the Danube, 40 miles S. W. Ulm. Pop. 3400.

ENNINGEN, a town of Wirtemberg, 13 miles S. S. E. Stuttgart. Population 4200.

ENHREBREITSTEIN, a once important, but now ruined, fortress of the Prussian states, on the top of a stupendous rock. At the bottom lies the town of Thal-Ehrenbreitstein. Population 3500.

ENHREBREITSDORF, a town of Saxony, with 2000 inhabitants.

ENHRE, a village of Saxony, in Upper Lusatia. Population 4300.

ENHRE, a town of Saxony, on the Mulda, 7 miles S. W. Schwartzberg. Population 3150.

EICHSTADT, a town of the Bavarian states. A convent in this town is much visited by zealous Catholics. Population 6000. 32 miles N. N. E. Augsburg.

EICHSTETTEN, a town of Baden, 9 miles N. N. W. Freyburg. Population 2100.

EILENBURG, a walled town of Saxony, 12 miles N. E. Leipsic. Population 2100.

EMBECK, a town of Hanover, 40 miles S. S. W. Brunswick. Population 5000.

EMEO, or MOVEA, one of the Society islands, 12 miles W. Otahete.

EINSIEDELEN, a populous village of Switzerland, 20 miles S. S. E. Zurich.

EISENACH, the capital of a principality of the same name in Germany, on the Nesse. The streets are neat, the houses in general well built. Eisenach has a few manufactures, chiefly of coarse woollen. Population nearly 8000, 40 miles E. Weimar.

EISENBERG, a town of Germany, 30 miles S. W. Leipsic. Population 3300.

EISENSTADT, a town of Hungary, on the Leytha, 27 miles S. Vienna. Pop. 2400.

EISFELD, a town of Germany, principality of Coburg. Population 2500.

EISELEHEN, a town of Germany, remarkable as the birth-place of Martin Luther. It has four churches, all Lutheran. Population 5400. 12 miles W. Halle.

EIVRAULT, a small town of France, department of the Two Sevrés. Pop. 2070.

EKATERINEBURG, or CATHERINENBURG, a town of Asiatic Russia, province of Iselt, on the Iselt. Here are five churches, consisting either of wood or stone. Great works are carried on in Ekaterineburg, for behoof of government, in iron foundries and forges, which manufacture cannon and anchors. An immense copper coinage produces 12,530 pieces daily. Provisions are cheap and plentiful. Houses 2000. Long. 60. 17. E. Lat. 56. 50. N.

EKATERINOSLAV, a town of European Russia, the capital since 1784 of the following government. 723 miles S. S. E. St Petersburg. Long. 35. 1. 43. E. Lat. 48. 37. 20. N.

EKATERINOSLAV, or CATHERINOSLAV, a government of European Russia. Though somewhat reduced from its original size, it is still very considerable, extending from 33. 40. to 39. 20. E. long. and from 47. to 49. N. lat. Population 500,000.

ELAND, or ELLAND, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Pop. 5000.

ELATHA, a town of European Russia, government of Tambov, 132 miles N. Tambov. Population 2100.

ELAY, a river of Wales, in Glamorgan-shire, which flows into the sea near Pen-narth Point.

ELBA, a small island on the coast of Italy, opposite to the grand duchy of Tuscany, containing nearly 14,000 inhabitants, and having a circuit of 60 miles. Its breadth varies greatly; its general aspect is mountainous, and its climate salubrious. It has acquired historical celebrity, as the residence of Bonaparte from May 1814 to 26th February 1815, when he sailed on his expedition to France. Long. of Porto Ferrajo, 10. 19. 35. E. Lat. 42. 49. 6. N.

ELBE, a large river of Germany, which rises amid the mountains called the Riesengebirge, between Silesia and Bohemia, and finally discharges itself into the German ocean, about 70 miles below Hamburg.

ELBERFELD, a thriving town in the province of Berg. It has manufactures of linen, ribbons, lace, siamois, and similar stuffs. Population 18,000. 18 miles E. Dusseldorf. Long. 7. 8. E. Lat. 51. 12. N.

ELBERSWEILEN, a town of Alsace, in the French department of the Lower Rhine.

ELBERT, a county of the United States, in the Western district of Georgia, between Savannah and Broad rivers. Population 12,156. Slaves 4574. Chief town Elberton.

ELBING, a river which issues from the lake of Drousen, and falls into the Frische Haff, a large inlet of the Baltic.

ELBING, a trading town of Prussia proper, on the river Elbing. The streets are narrow, and the houses lofty. The chief warehouses are in one of the suburbs. Vessels above 100 tons burden must unload at the mouth of the river; the smaller come up to the town. Population 16,800. 30 miles S. E. Dantzic.

ELBRINGERODA, a town in the district of Grubenhagen. Population 2350.

ELBOEUF, a thriving town of France, in Normandy, on the Seine. Population 6000. Here is a celebrated manufactory of woollen cloths. 10 miles S. Rouen.

ELBURG, a town of the Netherlands, on the east coast of the Zuyder Zee. Pop. 2000.

ELCHE, a considerable town of Spain, province of Valencia. It has several good streets and squares, but the general aspect of the place is melancholy. The great church is a beautiful building, with a majestic dome. Population 15,000. 8 miles S. W. Alicante.

ELCHINGEN, a small village of the Bavarian states, on the Danube, 5 miles below Ulm.

ELDA, a town of Spain, province of Valencia, on the Elda, 30 miles W. N. W. Alicante. Population 4000.

ELDE, a river of Germany, which falls into the Elbe near Domitz.

ELDENA, a small town of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, on the Stör. Population 1400.

ELK, a name, called by the natives Gracioso (full of caves), a small island situated between Bombay and the western coast of India, which owes its celebrity to its wonderful cave and mythological sculptures. Opposite to the landing place is a colossal statue of an elephant, from which the Portuguese named the island Elephanta. Long. 73. E. Lat. 18. 57. N.

ELEPHANTINA, a small island in the Nile, opposite to Syene, remarkable for the ruins with which it is covered.

ELETZ, a town of European Russia, government of Orel. Population 3500.

ELFURIS, a decayed village of Attica, with 40 houses.

ELEUTHERA, or ALABASTER ISLAND, one of the largest of the Bahama islands.

ELFDAL, a village of Sweden, in Dalecarlia, remarkable for its quarries of porphyry. Long. 13. 58. E. Lat. 61. 14. 30. N.

ELGIN, a town of Scotland, the chief town of the county of Elgin or Moray, on the Lossie, about 5 miles above its influx into the German ocean. The river is here crossed by five stone bridges. In the middle of the town, which consists of one street, intersected by several lanes, stands the parish church; and in its vicinity a town-house and court-house, adjoining to which is the county jail, a heavy square tower. It had formerly a magnificent cathedral, of which the great gateway still remains. There are also the ruins of an ancient castle. Elgin unites with Banff, Cullen, Inverury, and Kintore, in returning a member to parliament. 63½ miles N. W. Aberdeen. Population 5308.

ELHAM, or ELEHAM, a small town of England, in Kent. Population 1168.

ELICHPOOR, the capital of a district of the same name in Hindostan, on the Burda. Long. 78. 5. E. Lat. 21. 12. N.

ELISABETHGRAD, a town and fortress of European Russia, government of Cherson. Houses 800. 108 miles W. Ekaterinoslav.

ELIZABETH, CAPE, the north-east point of entrance into Cook's inlet. Long. 208. 53. E. Lat. 59. 9. N.

ELIZABETH, a township of the United States, in Alleghany county, Pennsylvania, on the east side of the Monongahela, 18 miles S. S. E. Pittsburg. Population 2368.

ELIZABETH, a river of the United States, in Virginia, which flows into Hampton Road.

ELIZABETH CITY, a county of the United States, in Virginia, between York and James rivers, having York and Warwick counties on the west. Population 3608. Slaves 1734. Chief town Hampton.—2d. A post town and capital of Pasquotank county, North Carolina, on Pasquotank river, 46 miles N. E. Edenton, 50 S. Norfolk, with which it has a water communication by the canal.

ELIZABETHTOWN, a post township of the United States, and capital of Essex county, New York, on Lake Champlain, 430 miles N. Albany. Population 1362.

ELIZABETHTOWN, a post township and borough of the United States, in Essex county, New Jersey, 15 miles W. S. W. New York. Population 2977.

ELK, a river of the United States, on the shore of Maryland, which flows into the Chespeak 13 miles below.—2d, A river which rises on the west side of Cumberland mountains, in Tennessee, and joins Tennessee river, 40 miles W. N. W. Creeks Crossing-place.

ELK CREEK, a river of the United States, in Pennsylvania, which unites with Penn's creek, and falls into the Susquehanna, 5 miles below Sunbury.—2d, In Ohio, which joins the Miami, in Madison, Butler county.

ELKHORN, a river of North America, which runs into the Kentucky.—Also a river of Louisiana, which enters the river Plate, a tributary of the Missouri.

ELKRICHT, a township of the United States, in Pennsylvania. Population 1113.

ELKRIDGE, a town of the United States, in Anne-Arundel county, Maryland, on the Patapsco, 8 miles S. W. Baltimore.

ELKTON, a post town of the United States, and capital of Cecil county, Maryland, at the forks of Elk river, 13 miles above its mouth, at Turkey point.

ELLENBOROUGH, a village of England, in Cumberland, 6 miles N. Cockermouth.

ELLESMEERE, a town and parish of England, county of Salop, 16 miles N. Shrewsbury. Population 6056.

ELLEZELLE, a town of the Netherlands, 23 miles N. E. Tournay. Population 5000.

ELLFELD, a town on the Rhine, with 1400 inhabitants. 14 miles N. W. Mentz.

ELLISHURST, a post township of the United States, in Jefferson county, New York, on Lake Ontario. Population 1723.

ELLON, a parish and village of Scotland, in Aberdeenshire. Population 2150.

ELLORE, the capital of a district in Bengal. Long. 81. 10. E. Lat. 16. 45. N.

ELLWANGEN, a town of Württemberg, 32 miles N. Ulm. Population 2100.

ELME, St., a small fortress of France, in the Pyrenees, near the Spanish frontier.

ELMESHORN, a town of Denmark, in Holstein, 18 miles N. W. Hamburg. Pop. 2500.

ELMHAM, NORTH, a village and parish of England, in Norfolk. Population 1046.

ELMINA, or St GEORGE DEL MINA, the capital of the Dutch settlements in Western Africa, and the most respectable fortress on the Gold coast. Long. 2. 30. W. Lat. 5. 10. N.

ELMIRA, or NEWTON, a post township of the United States, in Tioga county, New York, 20 miles W. Spencer. Pop. 2169.

ELMSTEAD, a parish of England, in Essex, 6 miles N. E. London. Population 693.

ELKHÖGEN, a strong town of Bohemia, on the Eger, 75 miles N. N. W. Prague. Population 3004.

ELNE, a town of France, 6 miles S. S. E. Perpignan. Population 1200.

ELNE, a river of England, which runs into the Irish sea, near Workington.

ELORA, a town of Hindostan, province of Dowlatabad. Long. 76. E. Lat. 19. 58. N.

ELPHIN, a village of Ireland, county of Roscommon, 116 miles N. Roscommon.

ELRICHT, a town of Westphalia, 6 miles N. W. Nordhausen. Population 2600.

ELSLETH, a town of Oldenburg, 17 miles E. N. E. Oldenburg. Population 1500.

ELSINORE, or ELSINEUR, a well known seaport of Denmark, in Zealand, the island in which Copenhagen is situated. It is well built, and stands on the west side of the Sound, where it is less than 4 English miles across. It has no harbour, but an excellent roadstead, generally crowded with vessels going up or down the Baltic, and anchoring here, either to pay toll or to take in stores of some kind or other, the supply of which forms the great traffic of the place. Population 7000. 20 miles N. Copenhagen. Long. 12. 37. 48. E. Lat. 56. 2. 15. N.

ELSTER, the name of two rivers of Germany, one of which, the White Elster, falls into the Saale; the other, the Black Elster, into the Elbe.

ELSTERBURG, a town of Saxony, on the White Elster, 7 miles N. Plauen. Pop. 1400.

ELSTERWINDA, a town on the Black Elster. Population 350. 26 miles N. N. W. Decaden. Long. 13. 23. E. Lat. 51. 25. N.

ELSTON, a village and parish of England, county of Bedford. Population 518.

ELTEN, HART and LOW, two villages of the Prussian states, 5 miles N. Cleves. Population 1200.

ETTHAY, a town and parish of England, in the county of Kent. Population 1833.

ETTON, a township of England, county of Leicester. Population 2897.

ELYAS, or YELVES, a strong frontier town of Portugal, province of Alentejo, situated on a rocky hill not far from the Guadiana, and three leagues W. Badajoz. It is one of the most important strongholds in the kingdom. Pop. 16,000. 112 miles E. Lisbon.

ELVES, a small town of France, department of the Morbihan. Population 3000.

ELVERDINGE, a town of the Netherlands, 6 miles N. W. Ypres. Population 1350.

ELY, a city of England, in the county of Cambridge, on the Ouse, in the Isle of Ely. It consists of one principal and some smaller streets, of an irregular character. It is noted for its fine and venerable cathedral. Here is a free school, and a charity school. Ely is the only city in England not represented in parliament. Population 5079. 14 miles N. Cambridge.

ELY, a town and parish of Scotland, county of Fife. The town is situated on the north shore of the frith of Forth. Population of the town and parish 906.

EMBAZE, a village of Egypt, opposite to Boulac, the port of Cairo.

EMBDEN, a considerable seaport, now belonging to Hanover, at the mouth of the river Embs or Ems, with a spacious and secure harbour. Considerable benefit accrued to Embden during the wars of the French revolution, from the neutrality of its flag. Ship-building is carried on here; also a considerable export of oats, barley, butter, and cheese. Population 11,000. Long. 7. 11. E. Lat. 53. 22. N.

EMBRAY, an ill built town of France, 53 miles S. W. Grenoble. Population 3150.

EMBS, a town subject to Austria, on the Upper Rhine, 10 miles S. Breger's. Population 1200.

EMBS, a small river of Holland, in Gelderland, which runs into the Zuyder Zee.

EMBSAY, a township of England. West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 861.

EMBY, a village of Ireland, in the county of Tipperary, 15 miles W. Cashel.

EMMEN, the name of two small rivers of Switzerland; the one joins the Aar; the other the Reuss.

EMMENDINGEN, a thriving town of Baden, 10 miles S. S. E. Strasburg. Pop. 1400.

EMMEN, two small rivers of Westphalia. The larger one joins the Weser; the other the Werse.

EMMERES, a village of the Netherlands, 7 miles N. W. Amersfort. Population 1200.

EMMENTICH, a town of the Prussian states, on the Rhine, 5 miles N. E. Cleves. Pop. 4000.

EMPOLI, a town of Tuscany, on the Arno, 18 miles S. W. Florence. Pop. 2000.

EMS, a river of Westphalia, which discharges itself into the bay of Dollart in the North sea, a little below Emden.

EMSWORTH, a hamlet of England, county of Southampton. Population 1450.

EMSHUSEN, a seaport of North Holland, situated on the Zuyder Zee. The chief employment of the inhabitants is in ship-building, in the herring fishery, and in the manufacture of salt. The houses are neat and the streets clean; the principal building is the town-house, remarkable for its lofty tower. Population 6300. 25 miles N. N. E. Amsterdam.

ENDEAVOUR STRAITS, a channel which separates the island of New Guinea from the north-west coast of New Holland.

ENDIAN, a town of Persia, province of Kurdistan. Population 4000. Lat. 30. 18. N.

ENDINEX, a town of Baden, near the Rhine, 7 miles N. W. Friburg. Pop. 2700.

ENDRICK, a river of Scotland, which falls into Loch Lomond, 14 miles from its source.

ENDRIE, a town of Asiatic Russia, in the district of Eastern Caucasus, about 20 miles from the Caspian sea, on the river Akatsch. Houses 3000. It contains several mosques, an Armenian church, and two synagogues.

ENESEI, a river of Siberia, which runs into the Frozen ocean, Long. 82. 14. E. Lat. 72. 30. N.

ENESEISK, or YENESEISK, a town of Siberia, on the river Enesei. It is of considerable size, and is fortified. Long. 91. 50. E. Lat. 58. 16. N.

ENFIELD, a town and parish of England, in Middlesex. Population 8227.

ENFIELD, a post township of the United States, in Grafton county, New Hampshire. Population 1291.—2d. Of Hartford county, Connecticut, 16 miles N. Hartford. Pop. 1846.

ENGADINE, a beautiful valley of Switzerland, in the Grison country, extending along both sides of the Inn.

ENGANG, or PUEBLATAN, an island in the Eastern seas, off the south-west coast of Sumatra, 21 miles in length. Long. 102. 20. E. Lat. 10. 20. S.

ENGELHOLM, a seaport of Sweden, on the east side of the Cattegat. Population 700.

ENGELSBURG, a small town of Austrian Silesia, 22 miles W. N. W. Troppau.

ENGEN, a town of Baden, 22 miles W. Constance. Population 1000.

ESSEN, a town of Westphalia, 20 miles S. W. Minden.

ESCHER, a town of the Netherlands, 15 miles S. W. Brussels. Population 3050. Here is a superb castle, with a park and gardens. This place gives a ducal title to a prince of the house of Bourbon Condé.

ESGIA, the ancient Ægina, an island of Greece, situated in a gulf of the same name, between the coasts of Asia and the Morea. It is about 12 miles long and 9 broad. 25 miles S. S. W. Athens.

ENGLAND, the southern and most considerable division of Great Britain, bounded N. by Scotland, S. by the English channel, which divides it from France, E. by the German ocean, and W. by Wales, the Atlantic ocean, and the Irish channel. It is of a triangular figure, and extends from 50. to 55. 40. N. lat., and from 1. 50. E. to 0. W. long. From N. to S. it is 400 miles in length, and is in some places 300 miles broad. The superficial extent of the country has been variously estimated from 28,000,000 to 46,000,000 of statute acres. The population of England and Wales appears to have been, from the most accurate computations, about 5½ millions in the year 1700; in 1750, about 6½ millions; in 1770, about 7½ millions; in 1790, 8,675,000; in 1801, 9,168,000; in 1811, 10,480,000; and in 1821 it amounted to 11,978,875. The country is divided into 40 counties, namely, Bedford, Berks, Bucks, Cambridge, Chester, Cornwall, Cumberland, Derby, Devon, Dorset, Durham, Essex, Gloucester, Hereford, Hertford, Huntingdon, Kent, Lancashire, Leicester, Lincoln, Middlesex, Monmouth, Norfolk, Northampton, Northumberland, Nottingham, Oxford, Rutland, Salop, Somerset, Southampton, Stafford, Suffolk, Surrey, Sussex, Warwick, Westmoreland, Wilts, Worcester, York, East, North, and West. The counties are subdivided into hundreds, wards, lathe, wapentake, tithings, &c.; the whole containing 172 boroughs, and about 12,000 parishes. The aspect of the country is various and delightful. In some parts (according to the description of an elegant writer) the mountains extend as far as the eye can reach, watered by copious streams, and covered by innumerable cattle. In others, the pleasing vicissitudes of gently rising hills and bending rivers, fertile in corn, waving with wood, and intersperseed with meadows, offer the most delightful landscapes of rural opulence and beauty. Some tracks abound with prospects of the more romantic kind; lofty mountains, craggy rocks, deep narrow dells, and tumbling torrents; nor are there wanting, as a contrast to so many agreeable scenes, the gloomy features of bleak barren moors, and wide uncultivated heaths. The native animals of England are the fallow deer, the dog, the fox, the wild cat, the martin, the fourmart, badger, mole, hedgehog, &c. The domestic animals are cattle, horses, goats, sheep, and hogs. The wild boar was formerly a native of the country, as also the wolf and the bear; but as the country advanced in improvement, they gradually became extinct. Of the birds, the most remarkable are the eagle, falcons of various species, owls, ravens, carrion-crows, rooks, swans, the cuckoo, the cormorant, the nightingale, the peacock, the swallow, the hawk, the curlew, the snipe, the plover, the pheasant, the black cock, the ptarmigan, sometimes but rarely met with on the lofty mountains of Wales and Cumberland; the grouse, the partridge, the pigeon, the lark, the stalling, the thrush, &c. The most considerable rivers are the Thames, Severn, Medway, Trent, Ouse, Tyne, Tees, Wear, Mersey, Dee, Avon, Eden, and Derwent. In aid of these, an extensive system of canal navigation has been established, by which an easy access is opened into the interior, and the produce of the country transported by an easy and expeditious process, from the most remote parts to the sea. Several beautiful lakes occur in different parts of the country. The most remarkable of these are in the north-west counties, and particularly in Westmoreland and Cumberland. The soil of England is various, consisting generally of clay, loam, sand, chalk, gravel, and peat. The principal productions of the country are wheat, barley, oats, rye, French wheat, beans, and peas. The climate of England, from its northern position, is rather rigorous and ungenial; and from its being an island, it is liable to sudden and frequent changes, and to great variations of dryness and moisture. It is at all times uncertain; and its atmosphere being inclined to cold and damp, is on this account not so favourable to the ripening as to the growth of vegetable productions; and in the northern counties, more especially, the harvest is liable to be seriously injured by rain. Owing to its insular situation, however, it is liable to no great extremes either of heat or cold. The general range of the thermometer is from 86 degrees in summer to 34 and 10 in winter. The indigenous fruits are few, and of little value; but others have been introduced, and brought to perfection, by the skill and careful cultivation of the English gardeners. These are chiefly apples, pears, plums, cherries, peaches, nectarines, apricots, figs, grapes, and other fruits. Hops are cultivated to a considerable extent in the southern counties. Timber grows abundantly in most parts of the country; and the trees are principally oak, elm, ash, beech, alder, and willow. The mines and quarries of England afford a constant supply of most valuable produce. Coal is found in great abundance in the northern, and in some of the midland and western counties. Iron abounds in Shropshire, Gloucestershire, Derbyshire, the north of Lancashire, and it is produced, though not in equal abundance, in other counties. Tin is confined to Cornwall and the adjoining parts of Devonshire, and black lead to a small district in Cumberland. Mines of copper are wrought in Cornwall, Devonshire, Derbyshire, and Anglesey, and partially in Yorkshire and Staffordshire. In many parts of the kingdom marbles and freestone, or calcareous sandstone, of various colours and textures, are abundant. There are also mines of rock salt, pits of fuller's earth, potter's clay, &c. The manufactures of England are of prodigious extent. That of wool is one of the most ancient in the country, and is supposed to have been introduced by the Romans among the barbarous inhabitants. The annual value of the woollen manufactures is estimated at about 20 millions. The cotton manufacture is of more recent establishment than the woollen, and has been carried to great perfection by the aid of every sort of powerful, complicated, and ingenious machinery. The cotton wool imported amounts to about 125 millions of pounds; and the value of cotton manufactures exported, to 20 millions of pounds sterling. The hardware manufactures, of iron and steel, copper and brass, have been also brought to unrivalled perfection in England; and in this line are manufactured the most ponderous productions of the casting furnace and rolling mill, as well as the most minute and trifling articles, such as pins and all sorts of children's toys. The annual value of the iron and steel articles manufactured may be estimated at £10,000,000 annually. The silk and linen manufactures are carried on in England, but not to any great extent. In Nottinghamshire is carried on the manufacture of stockings. English earthenware is finished with beauty and taste, and in great variety, particularly at the potteries of Staffordshire and glaze is manufactured in various parts, chiefly in Newcastle, Sunderland, Bristol, and on a smaller scale at some other places. China-ware of a very superior quality is made in Derby and Worcester. In London every sort of fine and elegant manufacture is carried on, such as cutlery, jewellery, articles of gold and silver, japan ware, crystal, cabinet and upholstery work, and gentlemen's carriages, clocks, watches, &c. From the countries in the north of Europe, namely, Denmark, Russia, Sweden, Poland, and Prussia, England imports iron, kelp, timber, flax, hemp, coarse linens, pitch, tar, tallow, corn, pearl and pot ashes, &c.; from Germany;

corn, flax, hemp, linens, rags, skins, timber, and wines; from Holland, geneva, cheese, butter, rags, flax, hemp, madder, clover and other seeds, corn, bacon, &c.; from France, wines, brandy, lace, cambric, lawns, silks, trinkets, &c.; and from Spain and Portugal, and Italy, barilla, brimstone, oil, cochineal, fruits, wool, cork, dye-woods, wines, brandy, silk, drugs, gums, &c. The imports from Turkey consist principally of carpets, drugs, dye-stuffs, fruits, silk, &c.; from North America are imported flour, provisions, masts, timber, cotton, wool, tobacco, rice, tar, pitch, pot and pearl ashes, indigo, furs, &c.; from South America, since the emigration of the Portuguese court to the Brazils, is imported cotton, wool, skins, cochineal, logwood, indigo, Brazil wood, sugar, drugs, &c. The articles principally imported from the West Indies are sugars, rum, coffee, pepper, ginger, indigo, drugs, and cotton; from the East Indies, China, and Persia, are imported, teas, spices, raw silk, muslins, nankeens, sugar, indigo, cloves, and other spices, opium, quicksilver, drugs, gums, rice, saltpetre, &c. The exports from Britain consist generally of all the various manufactures: they amount in official value to about 37 millions annually; the imports to about 25 millions. In addition to her commerce and manufactures, England has extensive fisheries both at home and abroad. Salmon are caught in most of her rivers, and the seas around her coasts yield herrings, mackerel, pilchards, white fish, oysters, and other shell-fish. The Newfoundland fishery at one time employed a considerable number of vessels; but it has since fallen off. The whale fishery both in the North and South seas, is prosecuted to a considerable extent.

The established religion of England is Episcopacy. The Episcopal establishment of England consists of the two archbishops of Canterbury and York, and of 24 bishops, who have the privilege of a seat in the house of peers. There is also the bishop of Sodor and Man, who is not possessed of this privilege. The constitution of England is a limited monarchy. The executive powers are vested in the king, who acts through the medium of responsible advisers. The legislative power resides in the king, lords, and commons.

ENGLEFIELD, a village of England, county of Berks, 5 miles W. Reading.

ENGLISH POINT, a cape in the river St Lawrence, on the coast of Canada.

ENGLISH TOWN, a post village of the United States, in Monmouth county, New Jersey, 21 miles W. Shrewsbury.

ENQUEIRA, a town of Spain, province of Valencia, with 5000 inhabitants.

ENKÖPING, a town of Sweden, on the lake Malar. Population 1455.

ENKICH, a town on the Moselle, 3 miles N. Trarbach. Population 1209.

ENNEZAT, a town of France, department the Puy de Dom. Population 2400.

ENNIS, the chief town of the county of Clare, in Ireland, on the river Fergus. It is of considerable size, but irregularly built; and sends one representative to parliament. 17 miles N. W. Limerick.

ENNISCORTHY, a town of Ireland, in the county of Wexford, on the river Slaney. Coarse woollen cloths are manufactured here. 10 miles E. Wexford.

ENNISKEAN, a small town of Ireland, in the county of Cork, on the river Bandon.

ENNISKERRY, a village of Ireland, county of Wicklow, 10 miles S. Dublin.

ENNISKERRY, the name of two islands of Ireland, on the coast of Clare.

ENNISKILLEN, the chief town of the county of Fermanagh, Ireland, on an island in Lough Erne. The linen manufacture is carried on in Enniskillen, and there is a considerable fishery of eels in the lake. Population 3200. 10 miles N. Wexford.

ENNISMURRY, a small island on the north-west coast of Ireland, bay of Donegal.

ENNISTYMON, a town of Ireland, county of Clare. Population 310.

ENNS, a town of Upper Austria, near the confluence of the Enns and Danube, 80 miles W. Vienna. Population 4000.

ENNS, a river of Austria, which falls into the Danube at the town of Enns.

ENOS, a maritime town of European Turkey, in Romania, 63 miles S. Adrianople. Pop. 7750. Long. 26. 1. E. Lat. 40. 40. N.

ENSCHEDE, a town of the Netherlands, province of Overysse. Population 1900.

ENSSHEIM, a neat town of Alsace, with 1800 inhabitants.

ENTER, a village of the Netherlands, 10 miles E. Deventer. Population 1600.

ENTLEUCH, a town of Switzerland, canton of Lucerne. Houses 250.

EXTRAIGUES, a town of France, department of the Aveyron. Population 1400.

EXTRAIGUES, a town of France, department of the Vaucluse. Population 1000.

EXTRE DUERO E MINHO, the most northern province of Portugal, bounded W. by the Atlantic, N. by the Spanish province of Galicia. It is 60 miles long, and 40 broad. Population 900,000.

ENTREVAUX, a town of France, in Provence, on the Var.

ENZ, a small river of Baden and Wirtemberg, which flows into the Neckar.

ENZERSDORF, a small but fortified town of Lower Austria, 9 miles W. Vienna. Population 750.

EOOA, EAOWE, or MIDDLEBURG, the most eastern of the Friendly islands, in the South Pacific ocean. Long. 174. 36. E. Lat. 21. 24. S.

ERE, a village of the Netherlands, 10 miles N. by W. Deventer. Population 2100.

ERERIES, a town of Hungary, in the lower county of Scharosch, on the Tartza. It is of an oblong shape, with regular fortifications. Pop. 7400. Long. 21. 15. E. Lat. 48. 38. N.

EPERNAY, a small town of Champagne, noted for its wine. 14 miles S. Rheims.

EFFRON, a town of France, department of the Eure and Loir. Population 1400.

EFFRICH, a small town of France, in Alsace, with 2200 inhabitants.

EPHESUS, anciently one of the most splendid cities of Asia Minor, and considered the metropolis of all Asia, but now a miserable Turkish village, the habitation of herdsmen and farmers, who live in low and mean huts, and are sheltered from the weather by large masses of ruinous walls. 50 miles S. Smyrna. Long. 27. 37. E. Lat. 37. 50. N.

EPHRAATA, or DUNKARD'S TOWN, a post township of the United States, in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, 12 miles N. Lancaster.

EPILLA, a town of Spain, 17 miles W. Saragossa. Population 3200.

EPINAL, a town of Lorraine, in France, divided into two unequal parts by the Moselle. Population 7500.

EPINGEN, a town of Germany, 18 miles S. S. E. Heidelberg. Population 2450.

EPPING, a town and parish of England, in Essex, 17 miles N. N. E. London. Pop. 1600.

EPPING, a post township of the United States, in Rockingham county, New Hampshire, 20 miles W. Portsmouth. Pop. 1102.

EPSOM, a town and parish of England, in Surrey. Pop. 2890. 15 miles S. London.

EPSOM, a post township of the United States, in Rockingham county, New Hampshire, 10 miles E. Concord. Pop. 1156.

EPWORTH, a town and parish of England, in Lincolnshire. Population 1763.

ERAKLEA, a town of Romania, on the sea of Marinora. Population 7000. 46 miles W. Constantinople.

ERBACH, a town of Germany, on the Mummiling, 20 miles N. E. Mannheim.

ERBRAY, a town of France, department of the Loire Inferieure. Population 1800.

ERDING, a town of Bavaria, 20 miles S. Landsbut. Population 1700.

EREKLEY, a town of Asiatic Turkey, in Caramania. Long. 34. 34. E. Lat. 37. 36. N.

EREKLI, a seaport of Turkey, on the Black sea, 100 miles E. Constantinople.

ERFURT, a town of Saxony, on the river Gera, branches of which traverse the town in the form of canals. It has a well built citadel, on an eminence called Petersberg. It is the capital of an extensive province, but is said to have been, in the 16th century, a place of much greater population. It has manufactures of woollens and silk. The town, though not well built, contains several good public edifices. Pop. 18,000. 110 miles W. Dresden. Long. 11. 2. 26. E. Lat. 50. 58. 45. N.

ERICHT, or EROCHT, a river of Scotland, in Perthshire, which joins the Isla near Cupar.

ERIE, a county of the United States, in the north-west corner of Pennsylvania, bounded N. by Lake Erie, E. by New York, S. by Crawford county, and W. by Ohio. Population 3758. Chief town Erie.

ERIE, a township of the United States, in Pennsylvania, on the south shore of the lake of the same name. Houses 200.

ERIE, FORT, a strong fortification in Upper Canada, on the north shore of Lake Erie. Long. 78. 20. 30. W. Lat. 42. 50. N.

ERIE, LAKE, an immense lake of North America, extending south-west and north-east 231 miles. Its greatest breadth is 63½ miles, and in circumference it is 658 miles. It abounds with great variety of fish. Long. 78. 50. to 83. W. Lat. 41. 50. to 43. N.

ERISKAY, one of the smaller Hebrides.

ERITH, a village and parish of England, on the Thames, 2 miles E. Woolwich. Pop. 1363.

ERITRIA, a town of Asia Minor, in Natiolia, 36 miles W. Smyrna.

ERIVAN, sometimes called PERSIAN ARMENIA, a province of Persia, bounded N. and W. by the Mossian hills, S. by Araxes river, E. by the districts Tharalang and Sharadang.

ERIVAN, IRVAN, or IRIVAN, the capital of the province of Erivan, on the Tergui. On one side the city surmounts a precipice 600 feet high, overhanging the river, and is encompassed by a double wall. It is commanded by a spacious castle built on a steep rock. The town has suffered severely from repeated sieges. The Russians blockaded it during six months in 1808, and were repulsed in an attempt to storm it, with great slaughter. Long. 44. 35. E. Lat. 40. 20. N.

ERKELENS, a town of the Prussian states, on the Lower Rhine. Population 2250.

ERKEHEIM, a village of the Bavarian states, near Memmingen. Population 1700.

ERLAN, a town of Hungary, in the county of Hewsesh. Here are churches for different religions; the dwelling-houses are in general mean, but there are several good edifices, particularly the cathedral and the archbishop's palace. The citadel is strong, and stands on a lofty rock. Here also is an academy, with teachers in theology, philosophy, and law. Population 15,000. 120 miles E. S. E. Vienna. Long. 20. 21. 45. E. Lat. 47. 53. 54. N.

ERLANGEN, a town of Franconia, subject to Bavaria, and situated on the high road from Leipsic to Bayreuth. Population 8500, partly employed in making hats, stockings, gloves, &c. 11 miles N. Nuremberg.

ERLENBACH, a small village of the Bavarian states.—The name of several other villages in France and Germany.

ERMENONVILLE, a village of France, department of the Oise, 5 miles S. E. Senlis.

ERNZ, a river of Ireland, which flows into the bay of Donegal.

EUNE, a river of England, in Devonshire, which runs into the English channel.

ERKE, a town of France, on the river of the same name. Population 4750.

ERNSTHAL, a town of Saxony, county of Schonburg. Population 1900.

EROUAD, a fortified town of India, province of Coimbatore. Houses 400. Long. 77. 50. E. Lat. 11. 19. N.

ERP, a village of the Netherlands, in North Brabant. Population 1700.

ERREEF, or RIF, a province of Morocco, along the Mediterranean. Pop. 200,000.

ERRINGTON, a parish of England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire. Pop. 1471.

ERROAD, a town of Hindostan, province of Coimbatour, now reduced to 400 houses. 104 miles S. E. Seringapatam.

ERROMANGO, one of the New Hebrides, about 90 miles in circumference. Long. 169. 20. E. Lat. 13. 50. S.

ERROO, a fortified town of India, province of Mysore. Long. 76. 39. E. Lat. 13. 48. N.

ERSTEN, a town of Alsace, on the Ill. Population 2350. 12 miles S. Strasburg.

ERT HOLMEN, a small group of rocky islands in the Baltic. Long. 14. 47. E. Lat. 55. 13. N.

ERTVELDE, a town of East Flanders, 3 miles S. Ghent. Population 2450.

ERVY, a town of France, with 2000 inhabitants. 7 miles S. Troyes.

ERWASH, a river of England, which falls into the Trent 4 miles S. W. Nottingham.

ERZERUM, the chief city of Armenia, and capital of a pachalic of the same name. The streets are in general paved, and the houses are built of stone, with rafters of wood, and terraces. Towards the south, Erzerum is protected by a citadel, which is surrounded by a double wall of stone, and has four gates covered with plates of iron. Mosques are numerous, amounting, according to some accounts, to nearly 40, but to many more according to others; besides which there are two Greek churches and one Armenian. There are 16 baths. The market places are spacious, and well supplied with provisions. Manufactures of considerable extent are established here; and an extensive trade is carried on in copper, and in articles from Persia, and from the countries to the north-west of Hindostan. The population amounts to 100,000 or 130,000. Turks, Greeks, Persians, and Armenians. • 250 miles N. N. E. Aleppo. Long. 40. 57. E. Lat. 33. 57. N.

ERZGEBIRGE, an extensive circle of the kingdom of Saxony, separated from Bohemia by a chain of mountains of the same name, and containing 460,000 inhabitants, on a computed surface of 2300 square miles.

ESCALONA, a considerable town of Spain, on the Alberche, 20 miles N. W. Toledo.

ESCAMULA, one of the largest rivers which fall into the bay of Pensacola, in West Florida.

ESCHACH, a river of Souabia, which falls into the Aitrach above Memmingen.

ESCHACH, two large villages of Wirtemberg, with 1600 and 1400 inhabitants.

ESCHISMATT, a village of Switzerland, canton of Lucerne. Population 2200.

ESCHWEGE, a town of Germany, on the Werra. Pop. 4400. 27 miles E. S. E. Cassel.

ESCHWEILER, a town of the Prussian states. Population 1715. 6 miles S. Juliers.

ESCUAL, a village of Spain, containing 2000 inhabitants, situated in a bare country, 20 miles N. W. of Madrid, and celebrated for its waters, accounted by the Spaniards the eighth wonder of the world.

ESSEN, a town of Hanover, 20 miles N. E. Emden. Population 1900.

ESQUEIRA, an ancient town of Portugal, province of Beira. Houses 600.

ESK, a river of Scotland, which rises in Dumfriesshire, and falls into the Solway frith.—2d, (NORTH), Of the county of Edinburgh, runs into the sea at Musselburgh.—3d, (NORTH), Of the county of Forfar, falls into the German ocean 3 miles N. Montrose.—4th, (SOUTH), Of the same county, falls into the sea at Montrose.—5th, (SOUTH), Of the county of Peebles, falls into the North Esk below Dalkeith.—6th, Of England, runs into the Irish sea near Ravenglass, Cumberland.

ESKILSTÄA, a town of Sweden, with 1600 inhabitants. 54 miles W. Stockholm.

ESKI-SAGRA, a large town of European Turkey, in Romania. Population 20,000, employed in manufactures of leather, carpets, and hardware.

ESMARKE, a village of the Netherlands, province of Overysseel. Population 1600.

ESMERALDAS, a port of the province of Esmeraldas, in Quito, on the coast of the South sea, on a long strip of land which forms the mouth of the river Esmeraldas. Long. 79. 25. W. Lat. 0. 53. N.

ESSE, or ASNA, a town of Upper Egypt, and the last place of any magnitude on the side of Nubia. Long. 32. 34. 41. E. Lat. 25. 17. 36. N.

ESOTRY, a township of the United States, in Ulster county, New York, on the Hudson, 4 miles below Kingston. Pop. 1026.

ESPAIN, ST. a town of France, 16 miles S. S. W. Tours. Population 2040.

ESPELETTE, a town of France, 9 miles S. Bayonne. Population 1200.

ESPERANCE BAY, on the south coast of New Holland. Long. 121. 47. E. Lat. 33. 55. S.

ESPIQUEL CAPE, on the west coast of Portugal. Long. 9. 14. W. Lat. 38. 23. N.

ESPIERS, a town of the Netherlands, in West Flanders.

ESPINARDO, a village of Spain, province of Murcia. Population 1500.

ESPINOSA DE LOS MONTEROS, a town of Spain. Pop. 2000. 30 miles W. Burgos.

ESPOSEDA, a town of Portugal, 22 miles N. Oporto. Population 1500.

ESPRIT, ST. a town of France, on the Adour, opposite Bayonne. Population 2100.

ESSARTS, LES, a town of France, department of La Vendée. Population 2100.

ESSEX, a town and fortress of the Austrian empire, in Slavonia, on the Drave. It contains an arsenal, barracks, and other military buildings. Population 9000. 80 miles N. W. Belgrade.

ESSEN, a town of the Prussian states, in the province of Berg. There are some cloth manufactures in the town. Population 4300. 16 miles N. N. E. Dusseldorf.

ESSEQUEBO, a river of Dutch Guiana, falls into the sea. It is 20 miles broad at its mouth.—A Dutch settlement of the same name extends along its banks.

ESSEX, a maritime county of England, bounded N. by the counties of Cambridge and Suffolk, E. by the German ocean, S. by the river Thames, which separates it from the county of Kent, and W. by the counties of Hertford and Middlesex. It extends about 60 miles in length from east to west, and about 60 in breadth from north to south. Its superficial area is computed at 1473 square miles, or 942,720 square acres, of which 50,000 are in woods and plantations, and 15,000 waste. The principal rivers are the Colne, the Blackwater, the Chelmer, the Crouch, the Ingerbourn, the Roding, and the Cam. Besides these, it is bounded by the Thames, the Stour, the Stort, and the Lea. The county is agreeably diversified with a gentle alternation of hill and dale. On the sea coast the land is broken, and indented by arms of the sea, which form a series of islets and peninsulas; extensive salt marshes also border the coast, most part of which is protected by embankments, from the inroads of the ocean. Almost every diversity of soil is to be found within the limits of this county; and it is in general well adapted to the production of wheat, for which it has been long famed, barley, oats, beans, peas, turnips, &c. Essex was formerly noted for woollen manufactures of various descriptions: but of late they have been rather on the decline. Baize, however, and sackings, are still manufactured in various parts; artificial slates are also made. Large calico printing manufactories are established near the metropolis; and on the Lea there are mills for making sheet lead. The plaiting of straw has been introduced with success. A considerable proportion of the inhabitants are employed in the oyster fishery. Essex is divided into 20 hundreds, composed of 404 parishes, which contain 21 market towns. Population 239,424.

Essex, a county in Upper Canada, comprises the country between Lake St. Clair and Lake Erie, bounded W. by Detroit river, E. by Suffolk county. Chief town Amherstburg.

Essex, a county of the United States, in the north-east part of Vermont, bounded N. by Canada, E. by Connecticut river, which separates it from New Hampshire, S. by Caledonia county, and W. by Orleans county. Pop. 3007. Chief town Guildhall.—2d, Of Massachusetts, in the N. E. part of the state. Pop. 71,988. The principal towns are Salem, Newburyport, Marblehead, Gloucester, and Ipswich.—3d, In New York, on Lake Champlain, bounded N. by Clinton and Franklin counties, E. by Lake Champlain, S. by Washington county, and W. by Montgomery and Franklin counties. Pop. 9477. Chief town Elizabethtown.—4th, In New Jersey, on Hudson river, opposite New York, bounded N. by Bergen county, E. by Bergen county and Newark bay, S. by Middlesex county, and W. by Somerset and Morris counties. Pop. 25,984. Chief towns Newark and Elizabethtown.—5th, In Virginia, bounded N. by Rappahannock, which separates it from Richmond county, and inclosed on the other sides by Middlesex, King William, and Caroline counties. Pop. 9376. Slaves 6679. Chief town Tappahannock.—6th, A township in Essex county, Massachusetts, on Chicabacco river, 2 miles above its mouth, and 12 N. E. Salem.—7th, A post township in Essex county, New York, on Lake Champlain, 136 miles from Albany. Population 1180.

Essling, a village of Lower Austria, on the left bank of the Danube, about two leagues below Vienna. Between this village and that of Aspern, was fought a sanguinary battle between Bonaparte and the Austrians, on the 21st and 22d May 1809.

Esslingen, a town of Wirtemberg, on the Neckar, 34 miles N. W. Ulm. Pop. 7200.

Essonne, a small town of France, 15 miles S. Paris. Population 1500.

Essoyes, a town of France, in the department of the Aube. Population 1600.

Estafort, a town of France, department of the Lot and Garonne. Population 2550.

Estagel, a town of France, 10 miles N. W. Perpignan. Population 1350.

Estain, a town of France, department of the Meuse. Population 2300.

Estaire, a town of Flanders, on the Lys, 14 miles W. Lille. Population 5700.

Estavayer, a well built town of Switzerland, 13 miles W. Fribourg.

Este, a walled town of the Venetian territory. It contains several good buildings. Population 6000. 13 miles S. W. Padua.

Estrella, a town of Spain, in Navarre, 18 miles S. W. Pampluna. Population 4000.

Estrea, a town of Spain, province of Seville. Population 4000.

Esterosa, a town of Spain, 25 miles E. N. E. Gibraltar. Population 2500.

Estero, Santiago del, a town of Tucuman, 226 miles S. Salta. Long. 63. 19. W. Lat. 27. 54. S.

Esthonia, a country of European Russia, adjacent to Livonia, and extending along the south side of the gulf of Finland. Area 10,000 square miles. Population 240,000.

Estissac, a town of France, department of the Aube. Population 1300.

Estle, or Estell, a county of the United States, in Kentucky. Population 2082. Slaves 133.

Estremadura, an extensive province of Spain, having the frontier of Portugal on the west, the province of Salamanca on the north, Toledo on the east; and Cordova with Seville on the south. Its length is about 140 miles, its breadth 120. Its principal rivers are the Tagus and Guadiana. Its population is about 450,000.

Estremadura, an important province of Portugal, which comprises Lisbon, and extends along the Atlantic to the north and south of the capital, being bounded N. by Beira, and E. by Alentejo. It is about 140 miles in length, and 70 in breadth. Population 830,000. The Tagus enters it on the east.

Estremos, a strong town of Portugal, in Alentejo, on the Tarrá. It consists of the upper and lower towns. Population 6509. 48 miles W. Badajoz.

ETALLE, a town of the Netherlands, 26 miles W. Luxemburg. Population 1100.

ETAMPES, a town of France, department of the Seine and Oise, on the Loet or Etampes, with manufactures of leather and woollen. Pop. 8000. 20 miles S. Versailles.

ETAPLES, a seaport of France, 11 miles S. E. Boulogne. Population 1450.

ETAHCH, a fortress and capital of a district of Hindostan, which lies on the Jumna, between the rivers Jumna and Ganges. Long. 78. 5th. E. Lat. 26. 4t. N.

ETIENNE, St, a town of France, 27 miles S. S. W. Lyons. It has coal and iron mines, and the greatest manufactures of fire-arms and hardware in France. Pop. 16,300.

ETIENNE, St, a town of the county of Nice, with 1700 inhabitants.

ETIENNE DE BAIGORRI, St, a town of France, department of the Lower Pyrenees. Population 6200.

ETIENNE DE ST GREGOIRE, a town of France, department of the Isere. Pop. 1450.

ETIENNE DE LA GARDE, St, a town of France, department of the Ardeche. Population 1600.

ETIENNE DE MONTLUC, St, a town of Brittany. Population 4120.

ETIENNE DE VALFRANQUE, St, a town of France, department of the Lozere. Population 1500.

ETIVE, Loch, an inlet of the sea, on the west coast of Scotland, 20 miles long.

ELLINGBY, a town of Germany, on the river Alb. Population 3000. Long. E. 27. E. Lat. 48. 55. N.

ETNA, a mountain of Sicily, celebrated from the most remote antiquity for its magnitude, and its volcanic eruptions. Its height is about 11,000 feet, and its circumference very large. The whole number of eruptions on record is 32, of which not more than 10 have issued from the highest crater. Those of 1609 and 1755 were particularly destructive. The last happened in 1822.

ETROLIA, a province of ancient Greece, bounded W. by the Archelous, S. by the gulf of Lepanto, extending in length about 28 miles, in breadth 20.

ETON, a town of England, county of Buckingham, on the Thames, opposite Windsor, with which it is connected by a bridge. It consists principally of one street, and is chiefly celebrated for containing a royal seminary of education, called Eton College, founded by King Henry VI. in 1440. Pop. 2475.

ETTERX, a village of the Netherlands, 8 miles W. S. W. Breda. Population 3900.

ETZENHEIM, a town of Baden, 19 miles S. S. E. Strasburg. Population 3000.

ETTRICK, a parish and river of Scotland, in Selkirkshire. Population of the parish 485. The river joins the Tweed near Melrose.

EU, a town of Normandy, which has manufactures of linen and woollen. Pop. 3400.

EU, a small river of Scotland, in Dumfriesshire, which falls into the Annan.

EUHAN, a town of the United States, and capital of Wythe county, Virginia, on the east side of Reedy creek, a branch of the Kenhawa, 40 miles W. Christiansburg.

EVATX, or EVAON, a town of France, department of La Creuse. Population 3100.

EVENCLEAS, a river of England, county of Oxford, which joins the Isis.

EVERMECH, a village and parish of England, in Somersetshire. Population 1255.

EVFROHEM, a considerable town of East Flanders. Population 7000. Ship-building is carried on here. 3 miles N. Ghent.

EVERSHOT, a town and parish of England, in Dorsetshire, which formerly held a market. Population 567. 9 miles from Dorchester.

EVESHAM, a borough and market town of England, in the county of Worcester, on the Avon, over which is a stone bridge of 7 arches. This town is of great antiquity. It had an ancient monastery, of which all that now remains is a large elliptical arch or gateway, 17 feet high, and decorated with rich but mutilated imagery. Evesham has three parish churches, a free grammar school, a charity school, and an almshouse; and there is a handsome old Gothic tower, 117 feet high, in which are hung the church bells. Evesham is a well built town, and its streets are wide and spacious. It is a borough by prescription, governed by a mayor, recorder, seven aldermen, 12 common council-men, and 24 assistants. There is a convenient harbour on the Avon for barges. Population 3467. 14 miles S. E. Worcester.

EVESHAM, a post township of the United States, in Burlington county, New Jersey, in the forks of Moore's creek, 16 miles E. Philadelphia. Population 3445.

EVYAN, a town of Savoy, on the lake of Geneva, with 1500 inhabitants.

EVORA, a fortified town of Portugal, in Alentejo. It is of considerable extent, but badly built. Pop. 10,000. 65 miles E. Lisbon.

EVAPATORIA, or KARLOV, a town of Russia, on the west coast of the Crimea. Population 4400. 68 miles S. W. Perekop. Long. 33. 14. E. Lat. 45. 40. N.

EUREN, a town of the Prussian states, in the duchy of the Lower Rhine, on the Weeze. It has important cloth manufactures. Here are likewise soap-works, paper-mills, and tanneries. 20 miles E. Liege.

EUPHRATES, one of the most considerable rivers of Asia, which has its rise in the mountains of Armenia, from two principal sources. At Korne, about 130 miles from its mouth, it is joined by the Tigris. These two united streams, forming what is the noblest river in the east, fall into the gulf of Persia, about 60 miles S. E. Basora. The course of the Euphrates before joining the Tigris is about 1400 miles, and adding 150 miles for the distance of the Tigris from the sea, its whole course will be upwards of 1500 miles.

EVYAN, a town of France, in Brittany, 20 miles N. W. Rennes. Population 3600.

EVYAN, a river of France, in Normandy, which falls into the Seine.

EURE, DEPARTMENT OF, in France, comprises the east part of Normandy. It is divided into five arrondissements. The produce consists in wheat, barley, oats, flax, and hemp. The pasturage, particularly for sheep, is very extensive. Population 422,000.

EURE AND LOIRE, a department of France, situated to the west of Paris. It consists of a part of the Orléannois and the Pays de Beauce. The surface, as in the adjacent department of the Eure, is in general level. Population 266,000.

EVREUX, the capital of the department of the Eure. The town is tolerably well built. Its cathedral is a Gothic edifice, in the form of a cross, with an octagonal cupola. Population 9300. 25 miles S. Rouen.

EUROPE, the least extensive, but by much the most improved, of the four quarters of the globe, is situated between the 36th and 71st degrees of N. lat.; having from south to north a breadth of about 2000 miles, and from east to west a length of nearly 3000. It contains, by calculation, about 2½ millions of square miles, and is bounded by the sea in all directions, except the east, where it adjoins Asia by a boundary line, formed by the river Don, and one of its tributary streams called Karposka. It has the Baltic on the north, the Mediterranean on the south, and a very large extent of coast bordered by the Atlantic. Europe lies almost wholly within the temperate zone. The principal islands of Europe are Britain and Ireland in the Atlantic; Sicily, Majorca, Minorca, Malta, Candia, Eubœa, in the Mediterranean; and Zealand, Lubeck, Læland, Falster, Bornholm, Åland, in the Baltic. To these are to be added the extensive but uncultivated Iceland, and the still more dreary regions of Spitzbergen and Nova Zembla. The great rivers of Europe are the Danube, Volga, Rhine, Dnieper, Vistula, Dniester, Don, Dwina, Elbe, Tagus, Douro, Loire, Rhone, Garonne. The principal lakes are Ladoga, Onega, and the Peipus in Russia; the Wenner, Wetter, and Mælar, in Sweden; along with the less extensive, but much better known lakes of Geneva and Constance. The chief ranges of mountains are the Alps, the Pyrenees, and the Carpathian ridge; to which are to be added the Scandinavian chain, separating Sweden from Norway; the ridge of the Hæmus to the south of Turkey, and the long line of the Apennines, extending from the north to the south of Italy. The following is a list of the principal states of Europe, in the form given to them by the treaties of 1814 and 1815, and of the population of each—

Sweden,	2,600,000
Norway,	900,000
Denmark,	1,000,000
Russia in Europe, including Finland and Russian Poland,	35,400,000
Netherlands, kingdom of,	5,200,000

Carry over,

45,930,000

Brought over,	45,930,000
Great Britain and Ireland, with Malta and Gibraltar,	17,800,000
France,	29,350,000
Saxony, Baden, Hesse-Cassel, Hesse-Darmstadt, and all lesser German states,	5,700,000
Prussian monarchy,	10,700,000
Bavaria,	3,900,000
Wurtemberg,	1,400,000
Hanover, Kingdom of,	1,300,000
The Austrian empire, including Lombardy and Austrian Poland,	28,000,000
Switzerland, 22 cantons,	1,720,000
Piedmont, and other Sardinian states,	4,000,000
Italy, exclusive of Piedmont and Lombardy, but including Sicily,	11,000,000
Spain,	10,400,000
Portugal,	3,700,000
Turkey in Europe,	7,600,000
Ionian republic,	230,000

Total, 182,130,000

The inhabitants of Europe, however divided into sects, are all Christians, with the exception of the Turks and scattered settlements of Jews. The Christians in Europe are composed of three great bodies, the Catholics computed at 100 millions, the Protestants at 45, and the Greek Christians at 32 millions.

EUSTATIUS, or EUSTATIA, St, one of the Læland and Canibœe islands, in the West Indies. This island rises out of the ocean in the form of a huge pyramidal rock, tapering to its summit. It is, however, in proportion to its size, one of the finest and best cultivated islands of all the Caribbees. No fewer than 5000 white people and 15,000 negroes subsist upon this island, and rear hogs, kids, rabbits, and all kinds of poultry. St Eustatia became a Dutch island by the right of possession or occupancy. It was first settled about the year 1600, and though taken from them subsequently, it was confirmed to them by the treaty of Br. 11. In the year 1781, it was taken by the English, but restored to the Dutch at the peace in 1783. It was again taken by the English in 1801, but was restored to the Dutch in 1814. 9 miles N. W. St Christopher's. Long. 63. 5. W. Lat. 17. 31. N.

ETZAU, a town of Germany, 20 miles N. Lubeck. Population 2350.

EUXINE SEA, called also the BLACK SEA, either from its black and rocky shores, or from its dangerous navigation, is a large inland sea, partly in Europe, and partly in Asia. It is bounded W. by European Turkey, E. by Mingrelia, Circassia, and Georgia, N. by Russian Tartary, S. by Natolia. It communicates with the Mediterranean by the straits of the Dardanelles, the ancient Hellespont, and with the sea of Asoph by the strait between the Crimea and the Isle of Taman, the ancient Cimmerian Bosphorus. It lies between Lat. 41. and 46½. N. and between Long. 28. and 41½. E.; and is in breadth, from Cape Baba in Anatolia, to Odessa, about 300 miles; and in length, from the east coast of Roumelia to the mouth of the Phasis, 932 miles. Its circumference is about 3000 miles. The principal rivers which fall into the Black sea, are the Danube, which collects the waters of a great part of Germany, Hungary, Bosnia, and Servia; the Bog, the Don, and the Dnieper, which discharge into it those of Russia and Poland; the Phasis, which flows into it from Mingrelia, and the Sangaris and Kisil Irmak from Anatolia.

EXETON, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 1760.

EXELL, a town and parish of England, in Surrey, 2 miles N. E. Epsom. Pop. 1550.

EXELLS, a stream of Scotland, in Dumfriesshire, flowing into the Esk at Langholm.

EXE, a river of England, which falls into the sea at Exmouth.

EXEA, a town of Spain, in Arragon, 24 miles E. Tudela. Population 2500.

EXETER, a city of England, and capital of Devonshire, pleasantly situated on the river Exe. The ground which it occupies is in the form of a parallelogram, and was formerly surrounded with walls, which have been taken away in many parts. The ground is intersected by four principal streets, which meet near the centre and diverging at right angles, connect the city with the suburbs. There are no fewer than 15 parish churches within the walls of this city, and 4 in the suburbs; besides several chapels, and a Jewish synagogue. The cathedral, which was begun in the reign of Athelstan, in the year 932, is a large and magnificent edifice. It consists of a nave with twinisles, a choir with aisles, a north and south transept, which are surmounted by handsome Anglo-Norman towers. To the east of the cathedral is the bishop's palace, which, with its gardens, is inclosed with a lofty wall. The sessions-house is an elegant new building, in which the assizes, quarter sessions, and county courts, are held. In the city and suburbs are also prisons for debtors and malefactors, a good workhouse, almshouses, and several well endowed charity schools. In the south-east part of the city, on the site of Old Bedford house, is erected an elegant circus, with a theatre adjoining. The guildhall is spacious, and was repaired and beautified in 1720. The general asylum for lunatics is a convenient structure, containing 48 rooms. The barracks are erected near the new jail for the county, and are capable of accommodating 200 cavalry. In the north-west corner of the city stood the castle. Nothing but the outer walls now remain. There is a stone bridge across the Exe. Exeter is situated about 10 miles from the English channel, and an arm of the sea formerly flowed near its walls, the stagnation of which was ruined by one of the kings of Devon, who constructed weirs and dykes in it. It has since been restored by a canal, so that vessels of 150 tons burden now approach the town. The woollen manufactures of Exeter have greatly decayed. The city is governed by a mayor, recorder, town-clerk, &c.; and was incorporated by king John, and erected into a county by Henry VIII. Exeter sends two members to parliament. Population 23,479.

EXETER, a post township of the United States, in Rockingham county, New Hampshire, 50 miles N. Boston. Pop. 1759. Phillips Exeter academy, founded in 1781, is the best endowed academy in New England.—2d, Of Washington county, Rhode Island, 24 miles S. W. Providence. Population 2256.—3d, Of Otsego county, New York, 73 miles W. Albany. Population 1418.—4th, Of Harrison county, Indiana. Population 1153.

EXILLES, a town of Piedmont, 38 miles W. Turin. Population 1400.

EXIN, a town of Prussian Poland, on the Netze. Population 1300.

EXMOUTH, a township of England, in the county of Devon, 8 miles S. Exeter.

EXUMA, one of the Bahamas, 25 miles long and 3 broad. Long. 75. W. Lat. 23. 20. N.—There is also a chain of islands called the Exuma Keys, which reach along one edge of the Great Bahama bank. Population in 1803, 1253, including 1113 blacks. Long. of the principal island, between 74. 28. and 74. 46. W. Lat. between 23. 21. and 23. 31. N.

EYBENSCHUTZ, a town of Moravia, 20 miles N. E. Znaym. Population 2400.

EYENSTOCK, a town of Saxony, 7 miles S. W. Schwartzberg. Population 3150.

EYENROEN, a village of Gelderland, 2 miles E. S. E. Nimeguen. Pop. 1450.

EYER, a river of Denmark, which falls into the North sea, in Lat. 54. 17. N.

EYE, a town and parish of England, county of Suffolk. It is an ancient borough, and sends two members to parliament. Pop. 1882.

EYE, a small stream of Scotland, in Ross-shire, which falls into the Moray frith.

EYEMOUTH, a town of Scotland, county of Berwick, at the mouth of the Eye. Population 1165. 5 miles N. W. Berwick.

EYGUIERES, a town of France, department of the Mouths of the Rhone. Population 3000. 17 miles E. by S. Tarascon.

EYLAR, a town of East Prussia. Population 1600. It is famous for a severe but indecisive battle fought in its neighbourhood on the 8th February 1807, between the French and Russians. 20 miles S. Königsberg.

EYLAR, DEUTSCH, a town of East Prussia, 84 miles S. S. W. Königsberg. Pop. 1500.

EYMOUIERS, a town of France, on the Vienne. Population 1500.

EYNADPOOR, a town of Hindostan, province of Dejjapoor. Long. 75. 10. E. Lat. 16. 50. N.

EYNDHOVEN, a town of North Brabant, 17 miles S. Bois le Duc. Population 2300.

EYNSHAM, a parish of England, in the county of Oxford. Population 1705.

EYRAGUES, a town of France, department of the Mouths of the Rhone. Pop. 2150.

FAKOR, a town of Turkish Armenia, 30 miles N. Erzerum.

FAV, a town of France, in the department of the Eure, 16 miles S. E. Evreux.

F.

FAABORG, a seaport of Denmark, in the island of Funen. Population 1100. 17 miles S. Oldense.

FABRIANO, a town of the Ecclesiastical state, 33 miles S. W. Ancona. Pop. 4000.

FAENZA, a city of the Papedom, in Romagna. Population 12,500. It was known anciently by the name of Falencia, and became noted in modern times for its pottery ware. It has several churches with fine paintings, and a cathedral which stands in a large square, and has near it a beautiful fountain. 20 miles S. W. Ravenna.

FAKOE, a small island of Denmark, in the Baltic. Long. 11. 20. E. Lat. 54. 52. N.

FAGNANO, a village of Italy, in the Veronese, 5 miles E. Mantua.

FAHLUN, a town of Sweden, capital of the province of Dalecarlia, celebrated for its copper mines. Population 4200. 110 miles N. N. W. Stockholm.

FAICCHIO, a town of Naples, in Terra di Lavoro. Population 2050.

FAILSWORTH, a township of England, county of Lancaster. Population 3253.

FAIRFAX, a county of the United States, in Virginia, bounded N. and E. by the Potomac, S. by Prince William county, and W. by Loudon county. Pop. 13,111. Slaves 5942. Chief town Centerville.

FAIRFIELD, a county of the United States, in Connecticut, bounded N. by Litchfield county, S. E. by Long Island Sound, and W. by New York. Pop. 40,950. Chief towns Fairfield and Danbury.—2d, Of Ohio. Pop. in 1815, 13,603. Chief town Lancaster.

FAIRFIELD, a district of the United States, in South Carolina, between Wateree and Broad rivers. Population 11,857. Slaves 4034. Chief town Monticello.

FAIRFIELD, a post township and port of entry of the United States, in Fairfield county, Connecticut, on Long Island Sound, 21 miles W. S. W. New Haven. Population 4135.—2d, A post township of Somerset county, Maine, on the Kennebec, 25 miles N. Augusta. Population 1348.—3d, Of Franklin county, Vermont, 36 miles N. N. E. Burlington. Population 1618.—4th, A township in Cumberland county, New Jersey, on Cobanzey creek, 25 miles E. Salem. Population 2279.—5th, Of Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania. Population 1973.—6th, Of Butler county, Ohio. Population 1414.

FAIRFORD, a town and parish of England, in Gloucestershire, on the Colne. Pop. 1547.

FAIRHEAD, a lofty promontory on the N. coast of Ireland, 631 feet above the level of the sea. Long. 6. 2. W. Lat. 55. 44. N.

FAIRLEY, a seaport village of Scotland, in Ayrshire, 18 miles S. W. Greenock.

FAIRWEATHER, CAPE, on the west coast of North America. Long. 222. 20. E. Lat. 52. 50½. N.

FAKENHAM TAMASTA, a town and parish of England, in Norfolk. Population 1636.

FALAISE, a town of Lower Normandy. It has manufactures of lace, linen, and coarse woollens. The castle, which stands on a precipice, is in ruins, with the exception of a tower. Population 14,000. 15 miles S. by E. Caen.

FALCON ISLANDS, near the coast of Connecticut, in Long Island sound.

FALCONARA, a town of Naples, in Calabria Citta. Population 1550.

FACR, a river of England, in Cornwall, flowing into the sea at Falmouth.

FALIME, a considerable river of Western Africa, falls into the Senegal.

FALKENAU, a town of Bohemia, in the Egra. Pop. 1550. 66 miles W. Prague.

FALKENBURG, a town of Pomerania, 124 miles N. E. Berlin. Population 1660.

FALKENSTEIN, a town and county in the circle of the Upper Rhine. Population 4200.

FALKENSTEIN, a town of Saxony, in the Vogtland. Population 1660.

FALKTÖPING, a town of Sweden, in West Gothland, 56 miles E. Uddevalla.

FALKIRK, a town and parish of Scotland, in Stirlingshire, near the great canal between the rivers Forth and Clyde. It has a spacious church, and 6 places of worship besides, for dissenters. In the middle of the town, a beautiful spire, 140 feet high, has been recently erected. No manufactures of importance are carried on here. In this town there is a good weekly market; and a considerable trade is also carried on in corn, cotton, leather, and other commodities. Three fairs, the greatest in Scotland, are held, under the name of the Trysts of Falkirk. These fairs are exclusively for cattle, sheep, and horses. The royal army was defeated near Falkirk, by the adherents of the house of Stuart, in January 1746. Population of the parish 11,636. 8 miles W. Linlithgow, and 24 W. Edinburgh.

FALKLAND, a small town and parish of Scotland, in the county of Fife. A palace was erected here; and James V. died in it in the year 1542. Except a very small portion, it is now totally ruinous. Population 2459. 10 miles W. Cupar.

FALKLAND ISLES, two large islands, with a number of smaller ones surrounding them, situated in the Southern Atlantic ocean, between Lat. 51. 5. and 52. 46. S. Long. 57. 49. and 61. 10. W.

FALLEN, a river of Ireland, which runs into the Shannon.

FALMOUTH, a seaport town of England, in the county of Cornwall, at the mouth of the river Fal. There is a good harbour here, and a fine and spacious roadstead. The town consists principally of one street, nearly a mile along the beach. There are two castles here, one of which, Pendennis, commands the entrance of the harbour. On the opposite side is St Maw's castle. A considerable fishery of pilchards is carried on here. But the town derives its chief importance from being the regular station of the packet boats which carry foreign mails to all parts of the world. Population 2543. 95 miles S. W. Exeter. Long. 5. 4. W. Lat. 50. 9. N.

FALMOUTH, a township of the United States, in Cumberland county, Maine, on Casco bay, 3 miles N. Portland. Pop. 4105. —2d, A seaport and post township in Barnstable county, Massachusetts, 19 miles S. W. Barnstable. Pop. 2237. —3d, A post town in Stafford county, Virginia, on the north side of the Rappahannock, opposite Fredericksburg.

FALMOUTH, a seaport of Antigua, called Falmouth harbour. Long. 61. 24. W. Lat. 17. 9. N.

FALMOUTH, a seaport of Jamaica, on the south side of Martha Brae harbour. Houses 220. Long. 77. 33. W. Lat. 18. 31. N.

FALSTEN, a pleasant island of the Baltic, lying between 11. 34. and 12. 10. E. long., and 54. 32. and 54. 58. N. lat.; and belonging to Denmark. Its extent in square miles is 185; and its population 16,500.

FAMAGUSTA, a seaport of Cyprus, on the east coast, built on a rock. It is about two miles in circumference, and is surrounded by strong walls, in good condition, and of great thickness; also by a deep ditch. The town has two gates, with two drawbridges. Ruin and desolation are seen in every street; and notwithstanding the extent of the walls, the number of citizens is said not to exceed 200. Here is an aga, a cadi, a governor of the castle, and a small guard of janissaries. It was taken by the Turks in 1571. Long. 33. 30. E. Lat. 35. 10. N.

FAMARS, a village of France, department of the North, 3 miles S. Valenciennes.

FANJEAUX, a town of France, department of the Aude. Population 1800.

FANNET, a post township of the United States, in Franklin county, Pennsylvania. Population 1392.

FANO, a well built town of the Papedom, legation of Ancona. It contains a large square, and several churches, with elegant paintings; also an academy, a library, and a large opera-house. The inhabitants manufacture silk. Population 7500. 32 miles N. W. Ancona.

FAROE, an island of Denmark, near North Jutland. Population 2300. Long. 9. 43. E. Lat. 55. 25. N.

FANTEES, once the most numerous and powerful people situated immediately on the Gold coast of Africa. Their power has since been almost entirely broken.

FAON, a town of France, on the bay of Brest. Population 850.

FAOUA, a town of Lower Egypt, on the western or Rosetta branch of the Nile.

FAOURET, a town of France, department of the Morbihan. Population 2600.

FAQUIER, a county of the United States, in Virginia, inclosed by Loudon, Prince William, Stafford, Culpeper, and Frederick counties. Population 22,689. Slaves 10,361. Chief town Warrentown.

FARENHAM, a seaport town of England, county of Southampton, at the north-west extremity of Portsmouth harbour. Population 3677. 12 miles S. E. Southampton.

FAREWELL CAPE, the south point of West Greenland. Long. 42. 42. W. Lat. 59. 37. N. —Also a cape on the south-west coast of East Greenland. Long. 42. 45. W. Lat. 59. 38. N.

FARGEAC, St., a town of France, department of the Yonne. Population 2100.

FARMINGTON, a post township of the United States, in Strafford county, New Hampshire, 26 miles N. W. Portsmouth. Population 1272. —2d, Of Hartford county, Connecticut, on Farmington river, 10 miles W. Hartford. Population 2748. —3d, Of Ontario county, New York, 9 miles N. E. Canandaigua. Population 1908. —Also a small river of Connecticut, which falls into Connecticut river.

FARNDALE, a township of England, North Riding of Yorkshire. Population 471.

FARNHAM, a town of England, in Surrey, on the Wye. It is noted for the hop plantations near it. It holds a large weekly market on Thursday, and three annual fairs. During the civil wars it was strongly defended by a moat and walls, which were dismantled by the forces of the parliament. Farnham sent members to parliament in the reign of Edward II. Population 3132. 27 miles N. E. Winchester.

FARNLEY, a township of England. Pop. 1532. 2½ miles from Leeds.

FARNLEY TYAS, a township of England, in Yorkshire. Population 900.

FARNWORTH, a township of England, in the county of Lancaster. Population 2044.

FARO, an island of Sweden, in the Baltic. Long. 19. 32. E. Lat. 57. 56. N.

FARO, a seaport of the south of Portugal, in Algarve, near Cape Santa Maria. The harbour is almost blocked up, but the roadstead affords convenient anchorage. Population 7000. 130 miles S. E. Lisbon.

FAROE, or FAROEER ISLANDS, a group of islands in the Northern ocean, lying between Iceland and Shetland, and between 61. 15. and 62. 20. N. lat. They belong to Denmark, and consist of 25 islands, of which 17 are inhabited. Population in 1812, 5209.

FAR-OUT-HEAD, a promontory of Scotland, in Sutherlandshire, in Lat. 58. 36. N.

FARRENBACH, a village of Franconia, district of Nuremberg. Population 2000.

FARRINGDON, an ancient town and parish of England, in Berkshire. The church is a spacious edifice, in the Gothic style. Population 2784. 17 miles N. E. Oxford.

FARS, a province of Persia, bounded N. by Irak, E. by the province of Kernan and Lar, W. by Kuzistan, and S. by the Persian gulf. The principal towns are Schiras the capital, containing 40,000 inhabitants; Bushirc, the chief port on the Persian gulf; Darabjerb, Bebahan, and some others.

FASANO, a considerable town of Naples, in the Terra di Bari. Population 7100.

FAVERGES, a town of Savoy, near the lake of Annecy, with 2200 inhabitants.

FAUQUEMBERGUES, a town of France, department of the Pas de Calais. Pop. 1300.

FAWN, a township of the United States, in York county, Pennsylvania. Pop. 1452.

FAY, a town of France, department of the Loire Inferieure. Population 3150.

FAY BILLOT, LE, a town of France, department of the Upper Marne. Pop. 2000.

FAYAL, one of the Azore islands, about 27 miles long, and 9 broad.

FAYENCE, a town of France, in Provence, 14 miles N. E. Draguignan.

FAYETTE, a county of the United States, in the south-west part of Pennsylvania. Population 24,714. Chief towns Union and Brownville.—2d. In the central part of Kentucky. Population 21,370. Slaves 7664. Chief town Lexington.—3d. In Ohio, west of Pickaway county. Population in 1815, 3705. Chief town Washington.—4th. A township in Seneca county, New York, between Seneca and Cayuga lakes, having Seneca river on the N. 18 miles N. Ovid. Population 1754.

FAYETTEVILLE, a post town of the United States, and capital of Cumberland county, North Carolina, 60 miles S. Raleigh. It is advantageously situated near the west bank of Cape Fear river, at the head of boat navigation, and is one of the most flourishing commercial towns in the state. It is regularly laid out, and contains a court-house, academy, 3 banks, 2 printing offices, and 3 houses of public worship.—2d. A post township and capital of Lincoln county, Tennessee, on Elk river, 30 miles N. Huntsville.

FAYOUM, a province of Egypt, stretching out into the desert, by which it is almost entirely surrounded. It consists of a valley nearly environed by a circuit of hills. This territory formed the ancient Arsinoe, described by Strabo as possessed of the highest fertility, and cultivated like a garden. The canals, however, by which formerly the waters of the Nile were dispersed over this tract, have been allowed to fall into disrepair; and it is, besides, exposed to the predatory irruptions of the Arabs. From all these causes Fayoum no longer displays its former blooming and fertile aspect, notwithstanding which it may still vie with most parts of Egypt. It produces grain called durra, rye, barley, flax, cotton, and sugar; roses are also cultivated in considerable quantities, to supply the manufactures of rose-water carried on in Fayoum the capital. Fayoum is distinguished above most other parts of Egypt by its manufactures of woollen, linen, and cotton. The communication with Cairo is carried on by caravans, which set out weekly from the village of Tameih. They carry shawls, sackcloth, mats, rose-water, figs, olives, dates, &c. and bring back raw cotton, coffee, soap, cloths, and several other European commodities.

FAYOUM, or MEDINA FAYOUM, the capital of the above province, though much declined from its ancient wealth. It is about a mile and a half in circumference; and the houses, consisting merely of bricks dried in the sun, compose an assemblage of gloomy huts. Long. 30. 39. E. Lat. 29. 27. N.

FE, SANTA, a city of Mexico, and capital of the intendancy of New Mexico. It is about a mile in length, and consists of three streets. It has two churches, the magnificence of whose spires forms a striking contrast to the venerable appearance of the other buildings. Population 3600. Long. 104. 54. W. Lat. 36. 13. N.

FE, SANTA, DE ANTIOQUIA, capital of the province of Antioquin, in South America, near the river Cauca, 270 miles N. by E. Popayan.

FE, SANTA, DE BOGOTA, a city of South America, and the capital of the New Kingdom of Grenada, on a tributary stream of the Magdalena. It is large and beautiful, and the streets are well paved. It has four public squares, and five bridges upon the small rivers which run past the city, and water the plain in which it is situated. Pop. 40,000. Long. 74. 7. W. Lat. 5. 24. N.

FE, SANTA, a town of Buenos Ayres, at the confluence of the rivers Salado and Paraguay. Long. 60. 5. W. Lat. 31. 40. S.

FEARLE, a river of Ireland, which taking the name of Cashin, falls into the mouth of the Shannon, 11 miles above Kerry Head.

FEAR, a cape on the coast of North Carolina. Long. 78. 11. W. Lat. 33. 50. N.

FEARS, a small village and parish of Scotland, in the county of Ross. Here are the ruins of an abbey, founded by the earl of Ross, in the end of the 12th century. Population of the parish 1654.

FECAUP, a seaport of Normandy, with 7000 inhabitants, who are partly employed in fishing, partly in the manufacture of woollens, lace, and linen. 9 miles S. W. Dieppe.

FEDALA, a seaport on the western coast of Morocco, 40 miles S. S. W. Salee.

FEESSE ISLANDS, a group of islands in the South Pacific ocean, the exact number of which is not yet ascertained. They are said to be situated from about 15. 33. to 19. 15. S. lat.; and to about 175. E. long.

FEHRABAD, or FAHRABAD, a town of Persia, province of Mazanderan, on the south coast of the Caspian sea, at the mouth of a river. Population 16,000. 270 miles N. Ispahan. Long. 53. 12. E. Lat. 35. 56. N.

FEIDENHEIM, a large village of Germany, 3 miles E. Mannheim. Population 1200.

FEIRA, a town of Portugal, province of Beira, 13 miles S. Oporto. Population 4000.

FELANICHE, a considerable town of Majorca, with 6800 inhabitants.

FELBACH, a village of Wirtemberg, department of the Rothenberg. Pop. 2400.

FELDKIRCHU, a town of Switzerland, in the Vorarlberg, on the Ill.

FELDKIRCHEN, a town of Carinthia, with iron and copper mines.

FELDBERG, a town of Lower Carinthia, 45 miles N. W. Clagenfurt.—Also one of Lower Austria.

FELIPE, St. or St PHILIP DE NATIVA, a town of Spain, province of Valencia. It has a castle built on a rock, containing remains of Roman and Moorish antiquities. Population 10,000. 29 miles S. S. W. Valencia. Long. 0. 46. W. Lat. 38. 58. N.

FELIPPE, St. a regularly built town of Venezuela, in South America, which, from a miserable village, has grown up to be a flourishing town. Population 6800. The inhabitants cultivate cocou, indigo, coffee, and a little cotton. 150 miles W. Caracas.—The name of other small towns in America.

FELIX DE CARMAIN, St. a town of France, 22 miles E. S. E. Toulouse. Pop. 3050.

FELLETTIN, a town of France, on the Creuse, with 2700 inhabitants.

FELSOE-BANYA, a town of Hungary, palatinate of Sathmar. Population 3800. Long. 23. 42. 10. E. Lat. 47. 38. N.

FELTRE, a town of the Venetian territory. Though old, it is well built, having a square, a cathedral, and a provincial academy. 63 miles N. W. Verona. Population 5200.

FEMERN, a small island of Denmark, in the Baltic, opposite the coast of Holstein. Population 7600.

FENESTRANQUE, a town of France, on the Sarre, 56 miles E. N. E. Nancy. Pop. 1350.

FENESTRELLE, a strong fortress of Piedmont, 7 miles S. S. E. Susa. Pop. 860.

FENWICK, a small village and parish of Scotland, in Ayrshire. Population 1852.

FERE, La, a town of France, 22 miles N. Soissons. Population 2600.

FERE CHAMPENOISE, La, a town of France, 20 miles S. Epernay. Population 1900.

FERE EN TARDENOIS, La, a town of France, department of the Aisne. Pop. 1900.

FERUS, a river of Ireland, which runs into the Shannon, 9 miles S. Ennis.

FERGUSON, a township of the United States, in Centre county, Pennsylvania. Population 1066.

FERMANAGH, a county of Ireland, bounded N. by the counties of Tyrone and Donegal, E. by the former and the county of Monaghan, and S. by the counties of Cavan and Leitrim. It extends 43 miles in length by 33 in breadth, and its superficial area is computed at 694 square miles. Of the principal rivers, the Erne falls into a lake of that name. By this lake, which properly consists of two lakes, the upper 9 miles long, and from 2 to 5 in breadth, the lower 10 miles long, and from 2 to 8 wide, the county is divided into two. A large portion of the surface of this county is mountainous, boggy, and bare of wood. Nevertheless, some parts exhibit very large forest trees. Rich iron ore and coal are found in different places; and there are marble quarries. Agriculture is far behind. The chief occupation of the inhabitants consists in rearing black cattle, and in the manufacturing of linen. Fermanagh is divided into 18 parishes. It contains Enniskillen, the county town, as also a few small market towns and villages. It sends two members to the imperial parliament. The population, of which two-thirds are Catholics, is 111,250.

FERMO, a seaport of the Ecclesiastical States, on the gulf of Venice, 93 miles N. N. E. Rome. Population 7200.

FERMOSERLA, a town of Spain, in Salamanca, 48 miles W. Salamanca. Pop. 3000.

FERMOY, a town of Ireland, county of Cork, on the Blackwater, which is crossed by a bridge of 13 arches. Fermoy was an insignificant village, when in 1791 a new town was projected, which has advanced rapidly. Here is a handsome church, a classical school, spacious barracks, a brewery, flour-mill, and paper-mill. Pop. 5088. 107 miles from Dublin.

FERNANDEZ, or JUAN FERNANDEZ, an island in the Southern Pacific ocean, about 110 leagues west from the coast of Chili. It is about four leagues long, hardly two wide, and is of an irregular shape. Lord Anson, who landed his diseased crew on this island, represents it as a terrestrial paradise. But according to Molina its soil is infested with worms, which destroy every thing. It is celebrated for having been the residence for several years of Alexander Selkirk, a Scottish sailor, from whose adventures upon it De Foe wrote the popular novel of Robinson Crusoe. Long. 78. 52. W. Lat. 33. 40. N.

FERNANDO, Po, an island near the coast of Benin, 60 miles in circumference. Long. 7. 40. E. Lat. 3. 53. S.

FERNANDO, SAN, OF APURA, a town of South America, in the Caracas, on the Apure. Population, according to Depons, 6000.

FERNEY, a village of France, on the frontier of Switzerland, 5 miles N. N. W. Geneva, noted as the residence of Voltaire.

FERNs, a village of Ireland, in the county of Wexford, 15 miles N. Wexford.

FERRARA, DUCHY OF, or the FERRARESE, a province of the Ecclesiastical States, having the Adriatic on the east, and the Po on the north, the portion of it beyond that river having been annexed to Lombardy in 1815. The Ferrarese, in its present extent, contains 171,000 inhabitants.

FERRARA, the capital of the foregoing province, situated in a marshy plain near a branch of the Po. The streets are long, wide, and straight; the principal square is the Piazza Nuova; and there are several good edifices in different parts of the town. The theatre is one of the best in Italy. Of private buildings, the principal are the houses of Esta, Villa, and Bevilacqua. The churches and convents are very numerous; the cathedral is an ancient fabric in the form of a Greek cross. Ferrara has a drawing academy, and a collection of minerals and antiquities, attached to its once famous university. There is here a strong citadel, and an Austrian garrison. 40 miles S. E. Mantua. Long. 11. 36. 23. Lat. 44. 49. 56. N.

FERRÊIRO DE AVES, a town of Portugal, province of Beira. Population 1600.

FERRIERE, LA, a town of France, department of the Loiret. Population 1600.

FERRINTOSH, a village of Scotland, in Ross-shire, formerly noted for its whisky.

FERRISBURG, a township of the United States, in Addison county, Vermont, on Lake Champlain, 22 miles S. Burlington. Pop. 1647.

FERRO, or HERO, the most westerly of the Canaries. It contains about 7 square leagues, and a population of 5000. Besides being the smallest of the Canaries, it is the most arid and barren. Long. 17. 46. W. Lat. 27. 45. N.

FERRROL, an important seaport of Spain, situated on the north coast of Galicia, at the influx of the river Juvia into the extensive inlet called the bay of Corunna. The town is of very recent erection. It was only in 1752 that it was determined to establish here dock-yards, arsenals, and manufactories. The harbour, for depth, capacity, and safety, is not equalled by many in Europe. The basin in which the ships are laid up is of great extent, and solid workmanship. The marine barracks are a vast and beautiful building, affording accommodation for 6000 men. The establishments here are all naval: there is an academy for the Guardias Marinas; a mathematical school for marine artists; a nautical, and even a pilot school. Pop. about 10,000 in peace, but in war much more. 21 miles N. E. Corunna. Long. 8. 11. 29. W. Lat. 43. 29. 39. N.

FERRY, a village of Scotland, in Forfar-shire, on the frith of Tay.

FERRYBRIDGE, a village of England, in the county of York, 15 miles N. Doncaster.

FERRYDEN, a village of Scotland, on the South Esk, 1 mile from Montrose.

FERRY PORT ON CRAIG, a village and parish of Scotland, at the mouth of the river Tay. Population 1461.

FORTE BERNARD, LA, a town of France, department of the Sarthe. Population 2350.

FORTE GAUCHER, LA, a town of France, in Champagne. Population 1950.

FORTE IMBAULT, LA, a town of France, 28 miles E. S. E. Blois. Population 1600.

FORTE MACES, LA, a town of Normandy, 23 miles W. Alençon. Population 3400.

FORTE MILON, LA, a town of France, 60 miles N. E. Paris. Population 2100.

FORTE, ST AUBEN, a town of France, 11 miles S. Orleans. Population 1600.

FORTE SUR AUBE, LA, a town of France, department of the Upper Marne. Pop. 1100.

FORTE SONS JOUARRE, a town of France, department of the Seine and Marne. Population 3700.

FERVAQUE, a town of Normandy, 35 miles S. E. Caen. Population 1450.

FETHORD, a town of Ireland, in Tipperary, 78 miles S. S. W. Dublin.

FETTLAR, one of the Shetland islands.

FETTERCAIRN, a village and parish of Scotland, in Kincardineshire. Pop. 1572.

FETTERESSE, a parish of Scotland, in Kincardineshire. Population 4483.

FRECHTWANG, a small town of Franconia, subject to Bavaria. Population 2000.

FEVERSHAM, a market town of England, in Kent, situated on a navigable river, which communicates with the Swale. The town is of great antiquity. It had an abbey, two ruined gate-houses of which are still to be seen, and part of the chapel and porter's lodge are converted into a dwelling-house. The parish church is supposed to have been built about the reign of Edward I.: it is spacious and handsome, and is built in the form of a cross. Here is a free grammar school founded by Queen Elizabeth, two charity schools, besides almshouses and other benefactions to the poor. The market-house, which is supported by pillars, and paved, was erected in 1574. The rooms over it are used as a guild-hall. The manufacture of gunpowder, which was begun here in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, is still carried on to a great extent, under the superintendence of a branch of the ordinance. In 1701 the works were blown up by the explosion of 7000 lbs. of gunpowder, and the noise was heard at 20 miles distance. The oyster fishery also is carried on here with great success. Pop. 3919. 9 miles W. Canterbury.

FERRAN, a rivulet of Scotland, in Kincardineshire, which falls into the Dee.

FEZ, an extensive country of Northern Africa, now annexed to Morocco, and forming the most valuable, and, if the barren tracks of Sus and Biledulgerid are included, the most extensive portion of that empire.

FEZ PROPER, a province of the above country, situated between the range of Atlas and the province of Beni-hassen.

FEZ, a large city of Morocco, in Africa. It was built in 793 by a prince of the name of Edris. It soon became a city of the first magnitude, and the capital of all the western Mahometan states, distinguished both as a school of learning and as a resort of religion. It is situated in the hollow part of a valley; and the gardens seen around it form a most delightful amphitheatre. On a height above the rest of the city stands New Fez, founded in the 13th century, and forming a well built town, surrounded by beautiful gardens, and by its situation commanding the old. It is chiefly inhabited by Jews. The finest edifice is the mosque of Carubin, built during the most flourishing period of Fez. The city contains two hundred caravansaries or inns, called Fondaques, which are tolerably convenient. They are two or three stories high, with galleries towards the court, which is always in the centre, and admits light into the apartments. The principal houses have cisterns under them: they have also flat and terraced roofs, elegantly constructed, and on which they spread carpets, to enjoy the coolness of evening. All the magnificence is in the interior. The hospitals, once numerous, have now in a great measure fallen to decay. The shops make no handsome appearance, and should rather be called stalls, there being just room for a sedentary Moor, who never stirs, but has his baskets heaped around him. The last traveller who visited Fez, being the person who designates himself Ali Bey, describes it as a singular mixture of splendour and ruin. The markets are much crowded, being the resort of all the wandering Arabs, who here purchase all foreign and manufactured articles of which they stand in need. Population estimated by Mr Jackson at 300,000; by Ali Bey, with more probability, at 100,000. Long. 5. 20. W. Lat. 33. 50. N.

FEZZAN, a considerable country of interior Africa, situated to the south of Barbary. It forms, as it were, a great island, in the midst of that immense desert of sand which reaches as far as the Niger. Fezzan consists of an extensive valley, bounded by an irregular circuit of mountains on all sides except the west, where it opens into the desert. The boundaries of Fezzan cannot be considered as very precise. The cultivated plain is about 300 miles in length and 200 in breadth; but a great part of the Haratch or mountainous region to the east, as well as of the desert to the west and south, are nominally included in its territory. Fezzan cannot be considered as fortunate in regard to climate. The heat of summer is intense, and the south wind, intensely dry and impregnated with fiery particles, is scarcely supportable even by the natives. The winter, on the other hand, is cold, which is painfully felt, even by the natives of a northern climate. Wheat is raised; but maize and barley are the grains on which the country chiefly depends for subsistence. Dates are abundantly produced. The domestic animals are goats, horned cattle, horses, and camels. The most common wild beasts are the ostrich, the antelope, and a beautiful species of deer, of a clear white colour, streaked with different hues of brownish red. The population has never been estimated on any precise data; but Mr Hornemann supposed that it might amount to 70,000 or 75,000. The government is tyrannical in the extreme. There are no manufactures; and shoemakers and smiths are their only artisans. The sovereign of Fezzan pays a fixed tribute to Tripoli; but is in other respects entirely independent, and rules his dominions with absolute sway. The throne is hereditary in the eldest prince of the royal family, whether he be son or nephew. The present bey happens to be son to the bashaw of Tripoli. The principal towns of Fezzan, besides Mourzouk the capital, are Sockna, Selba, Hun, Wadon, Gattion or Katron, Germa, and Zuila. None of these are surrounded with walls, except the capital. Fezzan derives its chief importance from that favourable situation which renders it a grand depot for the immense interior commerce which is carried on between Northern and Central Africa. The communication of Egypt and of Barbary with the vast countries situated to the east and south of the Niger, centers almost entirely in Mourzouk. Of the caravans to the south, the principal is that to Bornou, with which Fezzan maintains a regular and extensive communication. Another grand caravan goes directly southward into Cassina. The arrival of the great caravans forms a sort of jubilee in the cities of Fezzan. The goods sent from Fezzan to the southward, consist of various European articles, fire-arms, powder, sabres, knives, glass, paper, beads, imitations of coral, and toys of a great variety of kinds; also tobacco and snuff.

FIESOLE (the ancient Fesula), a town of Tuscany, 3 miles N. E. Florence.

FIFE, a maritime county of Scotland, bounded N. by the river Tay, E. by the German ocean, S. by the frith of Forth, and W. by the counties of Perth, Clackmannan, and Kinross. Its mean dimensions are computed at 36 miles in length, by 14 in breadth, and its superficial area at 504 square miles. The principal rivers of this county are the Eden and the Leven. Copper and iron ore have been found here, and the sulphurated ore of zinc. Coal is also extremely abundant, and lime, which is sometimes of sufficient hardness to admit of a fine polish. Cornelian, and agates, and other kinds of stones, have also been found. The soil is in general productive; four-fifths of it are supposed to be under cultivation; and the system of husbandry practised in some districts is of a most improved description. The fishery, both for herrings and white fish, occupies a great number of the inhabitants. The salmon fishery is also prosecuted with considerable success. The principal manufacture of the county consists of different kinds of linen in all its stages. The coal and lime works, and also salt pans, give employment to numerous individuals. Fife is divided into 61 parishes, and contains 13 royal burghs. Pop. 114,556. Chief town Cupar.

FIFEKNES, a cape of Scotland, on the east coast of the county of Fife. Long. 2. W. Lat. 56. 17. N.

FIGEAC, a town of France, department of the Lot, on the Seille. Population 6450.

FIGLINO, a town of Tuscany, 16 miles S. S. E. Florence. Population 2800.

FIGUEIRA, a thriving town of Portugal, province of Beira, on the Mondego.

FIGUEIROS DE VINHOS, a town of Portuguese Estremadura. Population 1500.

FIGUERAS, a town of Catalonia, 25 miles S. Perpignan. Population 4600. On an eminence in the vicinity is a strong and magnificent castle.

FIELENZ, a town of Prussian Poland, 26 miles N. W. Posen. Population 2500.

FILIZ, a town of Hungary, 40 miles S. E. Crennitz. Population 1800.

FILIPPO D'ARIGIONE, a town of Sicily, in the Val di Demona, on the Jaretta. Population 6000.

FILLAN, a river of Scotland, in Perthshire, which falls into Loch Dochart.

FINALE, a town of the Genoese territory, now subject to the king of Sardinia, on the Riviera di Ponente, defended by three forts. Population 7000. 33 miles S. W. Genoa.

FINCASTLE, or MONROE, a port town of the United States, and capital of Botetourt county, Virginia. 55 miles W. by N. Lynchburg.

FINCHELEY, a village and parish of England, in Middlesex, noted for its common. Population 2340.

FINDJORN, a village and seaport of Scotland, county of Elgin, 5 miles N. Forres. — Also a river which falls into the Moray frith.

FINHAM, a town of France, near the Garonne, 22 miles N. by W. Toulouse. Population 1400.

FINISTERRA, CAPE, the N. W. point of Spain. Long. 9. 13. 30. W. Lat. 42. 56. 30. N.

FINISTERRE, a department of France, consisting of the western extremity of the province of Brittany, which projects greatly into the Atlantic.

FINLAND, an extensive country in the north of Europe, situated to the east of Sweden, and belonging till lately to that kingdom, now to Russia. It is bounded W. and S. by the sea, N. by Lapland, E. by the northern territory of Russia. It extends from 60. to 66. N. lat. and in superficial extent is equal to England. In the south and west the winters are comparatively temperate; in the north and east the cold is intense, and of long continuance. The towns lie generally along the coast; the principal are Abo, the capital, Helsingfors, Nistadt, Wasa, and Uleaborg; in the interior is Tavasthus, and adjacent to the southern frontier is the town of Wyborg. Population 1,400,000.

FINLEY, a township of the United States, in Washington county, Pennsylvania. Population 1035.

FINMARK, an extensive province of the Swedish states, lying to the north of Norway. It was ceded to Sweden, with the rest of Norway, in 1814. Population 27,000.

FIEN, a river of Ireland, which runs into Loch Foyle near Strabane.

FINNES, a town of France, on the Vesle, 17 miles W. Rheims. Population 2200.

FINSTERWALDE, a town of the Prussian states, 36 miles N. Dresden. Pop. 1600.

FIXTRY, a parish and village of Scotland, 8 miles S. W. Stirling. Population 1102.

FIORRENZO, Str., a seaport of Corsica, 6 miles W. Bastia. Population 1500.

FIORENZUOLA, a town and fortress of Italy, 22 miles N. W. Parma. Population 3000.

FIROZABAD, a town of Hindostan, province of Agra, on the Jumna. Long. 78. 20. E. Lat. 27. 9. N.

FIROZASAR, an inconsiderable town of Persia, province of Fars. The ruins of a city of this name extend 17 miles along a plain, among which are the remains of a fine temple, and of a ditch 7 miles in circuit, and in some places 60 paces broad.

FISCHEN, a village of the Bavarian states, on the Iller. Population 1400.

FISH RIVER, GREAT, a river of Southern Africa, which falls into the Eastern sea, Long. 27. 20. E. Lat. 33. 30. S.

FISH RIVER, a river of the United States, in West Florida, which runs into Mobile bay, Long. 87. 50. W. Lat. 30. 30. N.

FISHBORN CREEK, a river of the Isle of Wight, which runs into the sea.

FISHER'S ISLAND, a small island in the Atlantic, near the coast of Connecticut.

FISHMOW, a town of Scotland, at the mouth of the Esk, 5 miles E. Edinburgh.

FISHGUARD, or FISGUN, a seaport and parish of South Wales, in Pembrokeshire, 257 miles W. London. Population 1037.

FISHKILL, a post township of the United States, in Dutchess county, New York, on the Hudson, 65 miles N. New York. Pop. 6930.

FISHKILL, a river of the United States, in New York, which joins Wood creek, 2 miles from its entrance into Oneida lake. — Another creek of this name is the outlet of Saratoga lake into Hudson river.

FISHERS, a town of France, on the Vesle, 14 miles W. Rheims. Population 2150.

FITCHBURGH, a post township of the United States, in Worcester county, Massachusetts, on Nashua river, 25 miles N. Worcester. Population 1566.

FITTEH, or FROHET, a large lake of Central Africa, supposed to communicate with the Niger.

FIVIZZANO, a town of Tuscany, 18 miles E. N. E. Siena. Population 3200.

FIVERR, a seaport of the Austrian empire, at the extremity of the gulf of Juarnero, on the Adriatic, with a commodious harbour. Here are several mercantile establishments, which export corn, tobacco, and wool, and import rice, sugar, spices, salt, &c. Population 12,000. 33 miles S. E. Trieste.

FLADSTED, a fortified seaport of Denmark, in Jutland, 30 miles N. N. E. Aalborg.

FLAMBOURGH, a township and parish of England, East Riding of Yorkshire, 3 miles from Bridlington. Population 917.

FLAMBOROUGH HEAD, a lofty promontory of England, on the Yorkshire coast. Long. 0. 19. E. Lat. 54. 9. N.

FLAESTED, a village and parish of England, in Hertfordshire. Population 1392.

FLANDERS, the name of a very interesting and early civilised portion of Europe, possessed partly by France, but now chiefly comprehended in the new kingdom of the Netherlands. It is divided into East and West Flanders. East Flanders is divided from West Flanders by a line running almost due south from Sluys, a small town nearly opposite Flushing. Its capital is Ghent; its computed extent 1080 square miles; its po-population fully 600,000. The surface is level in the northern part, while to the south it consists of undulating plains. The soil is in general a heavy loam, and very fertile. West Flanders, on the other hand, has a considerable track of coast, in the central part of which is Ostend. This side faces the north; but the western boundary of the province adjoins the French territory. Its extent is nearly 1500 square miles; its population 520,000; its surface in general level, except the sand hills on the coast. Here also the soil is fertile, and the agriculture good. The manufactures here are very considerable in lace and fine linen: cotton stuffs and leather are likewise fabricated; and there are extensive breweries and distilleries.

FLANNAN ISLANDS, several uninhabited islands of the Hebrides, 12 miles N. W. Sky. Long. 7. 25. W. Lat. 58. 26. N.

FLATBUSH, a post township of the United States, and capital of King's county, Long Island, New York, on New York bay. Population 1153. 5 miles S. by E. New York.

FLAT HEAD, a cape on the coast of Ireland, 7 miles E. Kinsale.—Flat is the name of several small islands and capes.

FLATHOW, a town of Prussian Poland, 25 miles W. N. W. Bromberg. Population 2200.

FLAVIGNY, a town of France, 25 miles N. W. Dijon. Population 1300.

FLAWEN, a well built village of the Swiss canton of St Gall, on the road to Zurich.

FLEURE, LA, a well built town of France, in Anjou, in a pleasant valley watered by the Loire. Here is an old castle in ruins. This town was chiefly noted for its public seminary, which was broken up at the revolution. Here is now a Prytaneum or military school, founded by Bonaparte, for the education of soldiers' children destined for the army. Pop. 3000. 22 miles N. E. Angers.

FLEET, a river of England, in Nottinghamshire, which runs into the Trent.

FLEET, a river of Scotland, which falls into Wigton bay.

FLENSBOGO, a seaport of Denmark, duchy of Sleswick, or a bay of the Baltic. It is a place of great activity, with good shops and well supplied markets. Population 15,000. 16 miles N. Sleswick. Long. 9. 27. 40. E. Lat. 54. 47. 18. N.

FLERS, a town of France, in Normandy. Population 1600.

FLEURANCE, a town of France, on the Gers. Population 3100.

FLEURIEN, a large village of the Swiss canton of Neuchâtel, in the Val de Travers.

FLEURUS, a town of the Netherlands, in Hainault, not far from the Sambre. It is noted for various battles; for one in 1794, in which the allies were defeated by the French. Population 2020. 7 miles N. E. Charleroi.

FLINT, a county of North Wales, bounded N. by the Irish sea, N. E. by the estuary of the Dee, E. by Cheshire, S. E. and S. W. by Denbighshire. This county extends about 33 miles in length by 10 in breadth; it is 115 miles in circuit, and contains a superficial area of 309 square miles, or 197,760 square acres. It is watered by the Dee, the only navigable river, the Clwyd, Wheler, Serriion, and Alun. The surface of this county is somewhat more level than that of the rest of Wales; it is finely diversified by hills declining into fertile vales, which are traversed by streams. It produces both lead and coal; limestone is also very abundant, accompanied by chert, which is employed in the manufacture of porcelain. Among the strata of limestone, petroleum often appears. Part of Flintshire affords excellent pastureage, together with excellent harvests of grain, especially wheat, which is exported to Liverpool. But it is principally a breeding county, and the cattle are of a small black species. It has manufactures of copper and brass; also of cotton and pottery. The county is divided into five hundreds, consisting of 16 parishes. It contains one city, St Asaph; the county town, Flint; and five market towns. One member of parliament is returned by the county. Population 53,784.

FLINT, a town of Wales, the county town of the shire of that name, situated on the estuary of the Dee. It is a small place, and irregularly built. It has the remains of an ancient castle. Population 1612.

FLINT, a river of the United States, in Georgia, which joins the Appalachicola.

FLATSCH, a town of the Austrian empire, county of Goritz, on the Isorzo. Pop. 2000.

FLINTON, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 1604.

FLODDEN, a village of England, in Northumberlandshire, near to which a bloody engagement was fought in 1513, between the English and Scotch. 5 miles N. Wooler.

FLOREAC, a town of France, department of the Lozere, on the Tarn. Population 1750.

FLORENCE, the capital of the grand duchy of Tuscany, and one of the finest cities of Italy, or even of Europe. It stands in a beautiful valley intersected by the Arno, and occupies both sides of the river; the latter is crossed by four bridges, one of which, Deffa Trinita, is much admired for its airy lightness. The handsomest square is the Piazza del Duca, which is lined with elegant buildings, and adorned with statues. The number of churches is great, and they contain many excellent paintings of statues. The cathedral is a building of great extent and magnificence, its walls being cased with marble, and its interior paved with the same material, disposed in part by Michael Angelo. The dome of this building is much admired; also the adjoining tower, 240 feet in height, which is light and graceful in its architecture, and adorned with statues. The church of St Lorenzo contains the magnificent mausoleum of the Medicis; and the adjoining convent holds the library of the same family, valuable chiefly for its MSS. The principal private edifices are those of Riccardi, Stroyzi, Corsini, and Capponi; the first has a gallery and library, open to the public. But the grand collection of works of art is in the Medicean gallery, known throughout Europe as the gallery of Florence; it is more than 500 feet in length, and replenished with busts, statues, and paintings. The university of Florence dates from 1438. Florence is surrounded by a wall, and has two citadels. It has two theatres, and beautiful promenades, as well in the Boboli gardens as along the banks of the Arno. It has manufactures of satin, taffetas, damask, straw hats, jewellery, and precious stones. Population 75,000. Leghorn, at the distance of about 45 miles, is the harbour of Florence. *130 miles N. N. W. Rome.

FLORENNE, a town of the Netherlands, 10 miles S. Charleroi. Population 1100.

FLORENSAC, a town of France, in Languedoc. Population 2600.

FLORENT LE VIEIL, St, a town of France, on the Loire. Population 1500.

FLORENTIN, St, a town of France, 24 miles S. S. W. Troyes. Population 3000.

FLORES, a small island, one of the Azores. Long. 31. W. Lat. 39. 31. N.

FLORES, an island in the Eastern seas, 200 miles long, and 50 in breadth. Long. 120. to 123. E. Lat. 8. to 9. S.

FLORIDA, a country of North America, situated between the 25th and 31st degrees of N. lat. and between the 80th and 91st degrees of W. long. It is bounded N. by the state of Georgia, E. by the Atlantic, S. by the gulf of Mexico, and W. by the Mississippi. The length of this country, following the sinuosities of the coast, may be estimated at about 800 miles. Its breadth is various. The broadest part of West Florida is about 130 miles, while the narrow peninsula of East Florida extends from south to north 400 miles. The shape of the country is very irregular, and nearly resembles the letter L. Florida was discovered in the year 1496. Its conquest was accomplished by the Spaniards in 1539. It is divided into East and West Florida. West Florida is situated between the Mississippi on the west, and the Appalachicola on the east, and is a strip of land running along the gulf of Mexico for 400 miles. East Florida consists of a large peninsula which runs southward, and a track of land extending from the mouth of St Mary, westward to the river Appalachicola. The country is intersected by a number of navigable streams, which in West Florida run from north to south into the gulf of Mexico; and in East Florida, either run into the gulf or into the Atlantic. The principal of these are Pearl river, the Pascagola, the Mobile, and its numerous branches; the Escambia and other streams, falling into the bay of Pensacola; and the Appalachicola, with its tributary waters, serving as the boundary line between East and West Florida. In this extensive country is to be found a variety of soils, some equal to any in the world, others indifferent; and immense tracks exist which are of no value whatever. Vegetable productions of all sorts are produced, and of the most luxuriant growth. It produces no less than eight different kinds of oak, plenty of white and black walnut, hickory, chestnuts, three kinds of mulberry, four kinds of the magnolia, orange and fig trees, persimmon and sycamore; as also a vast variety of plumbs, and other indigenous fruits, such as limes, prunes, peaches, figs, grapes, melons, &c. Olives are also cultivated with success; and St John's river, and some of the lakes, are bordered with orange groves. The amona, lime, and mahoe, are indigenous, as also many medicinal plants. West Florida exhibits the greatest fertility; and here wheat grows abundantly, as also barley, oats, corn, peas, buck wheat, rye, and rice. The climate is various: in the peninsula or southern part of Florida the thermometer stands habitually, in summer, between 84. and 86. of Fahrenheit, in the shade; and during the months of July and August, it frequently rises to 94. In winter it seldom freezes, nor is the cold ever so severe as to injure the China orange tree. In West Florida the mercury seldom falls below 30 degrees of Fahrenheit, and seldom rises above 94 in the shade. In the forests and deserts are found several species of wild beasts, as the panther, wild cat, buffalo, fox, hare, goat, rabbit, otter, racoon, flying squirrel, armadillo, opossum, guano, and several sorts of serpents. Birds are in great variety, and numerous. The rivers abound in fish, but are at the same time infested with voracious alligators. From the first of July to the middle of October, fevers are prevalent in both the Floridas. This country, which was ceded to Britain at the peace of 1763, was recovered by Spain in 1764, and confirmed to her by the peace of 1763. It has since come into the possession of the United States. The chief towns of West Florida are Baton Rouge; the town of Mobile, containing from 70 to 80 houses; Pensacola, of which the population does not exceed 400. St Augustine is the chief town of East Florida: it contained in 1772, 1000 inhabitants; but it has since declined. The whole population of the Floridas has been estimated at 40,000.

FLORIDA, CAPE, the east point of East Florida. Long. 80. 37. W. Lat. 25. 44. N.

FLORIDA, GULF OF, the channel between the peninsula of Florida and the Bahama islands, N. of Cuba island, and through which the gulf stream finds a passage, and runs N. E. along the American coast.

FLORIDA KEYS, or MARTYR'S ISLANDS, a number of rocks and land-banks, bounded W. by the gulf of Mexico, E. by that of Florida.

FLORIDA, STREAM, a channel which separates the island of Cuba from the coast of Florida, between the gulf of Florida and the gulf of Mexico.

FLOSS, a town in the Bavarian states, N. of the Danube. Population 1500.

FLOTA, one of the Orkney islands.

Flouu, St., a town of France, department of the Cantal, 50 miles S. Clermont. Population 5300.

FLUSHING, an important seaport of the Netherlands, in the island of Walcheren, on the north side of the Scheldt, at the embouchure of that river into the North sea. The approach to the harbour is between two jetties, which break the action of the sea. Inside of the town are two basins, one of such size and depth as to contain a fleet of men of war. It is a noted resort of English smugglers, both in peace and war. Pop. 5700.

FLUSHING, a township of the United States, in Queen's county, New York, on Long Island. Population 2730.

FLUYANNA, a county of the United States, in Virginia, inclosed by Albemarle, Louisa, and Goochland counties, and by James river, which separates it from Buckingham county. Pop. 4775. Slaves 2142. Chief town Columbia.

FOCHABERS, a town of Scotland, in Banffshire, on the Spey, 9 miles E. Elgin. Pop. 1000.

FO-CHAN, a town of China, near Canton.

FOCHEA, a seaport of Asia Minor, 25 miles N. W. Smyrna.

FOCZANI, a town of European Turkey, 54 miles W. N. W. Galatz.

FOELDWAR, a town of Hungary, on the Danube, opposite Colocza. Pop. 2500.

FOGARAS, a town of Transylvania, county of Zaraul, on the south bank of the Aiata, 28 miles W. Constant. Pop. 3669.

FOGGIA, a town of Naples, in the Capitanata. It is well built, most of the houses being reconstructed since the earthquake of 1732. It has large storehouses for keeping corn. Pop. 17,000. 42 miles N. E. Benevento.

FOGIZZO, a town of Piedmont, with 2400 inhabitants. 5 miles N. W. Chivasso.

FOHN, an island of Denmark, on the west coast of the duchy of Schleswig, about 12 miles in circumference. Population 5600. Long. 8. 31. E. Lat. 54. 44. N.

FOIX, a town of France, on the Arriege, 34 miles S. Toulouse. Population 3600.

FO-KIEN, a province of China. Population computed at 15,000,000.

FOLESHILL, a town and parish of England, county of Warwick. Pop. 4937.

FOLIGNO, a town of the Ecclesiastical states, duchy of Spoleto, on the Toppino. Here are manufactures of silk and paper. Pop. 7000. 10 miles N. N. W. Spoleto.

FOLKSTONE, or FOLKESTONE, a town of England, in Kent, with a spacious harbour. It consists of three narrow, irregular, ill paved streets. Besides the parish church, it contains places of worship for Baptists, Methodists, and Quakers. It has lately been much resorted to for sea-bathing; and it has hot and cold baths. Population 4541. 7 miles S. W. Dover.

FONDI, a small town of Naples, in the Terra di Lavoro, on the Garigliano. It consists of only one street, and is built on the Via Appia, which remains here in its original state; and consists of large flags, skillfully fitted together without cement. The wines of Fondi are still in repute. Population 5000. 40 miles W. Capua.

FONSVILLE, a town of France, in Provence, with 1800 inhabitants.

FONTAINEBLEAU, a town of France, 42 miles S. S. E. Paris. It consists of one principal street, with several smaller ones. Here is a celebrated royal palace, mentioned in history ever since the 12th century. It forms a vast but irregular pile of building; and having in its neighbourhood a forest of nearly 30,000 acres, has long been the resort of the sovereigns of France, for the purpose of hunting. Fontainebleau was also the scene of Bonaparte's first resignation of the imperial dignity. Population 9000. Long. 2. 41. 8. E. Lat. 48. 24. 4. N.

FONTAINE L'ÉVÊQUE, a town of the Netherlands, 6 miles W. Charleroi. Pop. 2500.

FONTANELLA, a town of Lombardy, with 2000 inhabitants.

FONTANARIA, anciently Ocaso, a strong town of Spain. It is one of the keys of the kingdom, and is situated on a small peninsula on the left bank of the Bidasoa. Population 1700. 15 miles S. S. E. Bayonne.

FONTENAY LE COMTE, a town of France, department of La Vendée, 28 miles N. E. La Rochelle. Population 6600.

FONTENAY, a village of the Netherlands, in Hainaut, 4 miles S. E. Tournay. Population 500. It is celebrated for a battle fought near it in 1745, in which the British were defeated by the French.

FONTEVAULT, a town of France, department of the Maine and Loire. Pop. 1500.

FOOTA JALLO, an extensive country of Western Africa, situated about the sources of the Gambia, the Rio Grande, and the Niger. It is about 350 miles from E. to W. and 200 from N. to S.

FORBACH, a town of France, department of the Moselle. Population 1750.

FORCALGUEIR, a town of France, on the Lave, 34 miles N. E. Aix. Pop. 2500.

FORCHEIM, a town of Franconia, 14 miles S. Bamberg. Population 2300.

FORDHAM, a parish of England, in Cambridgeshire. Population 1042.—Also in Essex. Population 696.

FORDICK, a parish of Scotland, in Banffshire. Population 3245.

FORDINGBRIDGE, a town and parish of England, in Southamptonshire, on the Avon, which is crossed by a bridge of seven arches. Population 2444. 12 miles S. Salisbury.

FORDON, a town of Prussian Poland, on the Vistula. Population 1500.

FORDOUN, a parish of Scotland, in Kincardineshire. Population 2375.

FORDWICH, a village and parish of England, in Kent, 4 miles N. E. Canterbury. Population 242.

FORELAND, NORTH, a promontory of England, forming the N. E. extremity of Kent. Here is a light-house above 100 feet high. Long. 1. 29. E. Lat. 51. 25. N.

FORELAND, SOUTH, a cape of England, on the east coast of Kent, between Dover and Deal. Long. 1. 25. E. Lat. 51. 12. N.

FORELANDS, WEST, NORTH, and EAST, three remarkable steep cliff points, the two first on the west, and the last on the east side of Cook's inlet, on the west coast of North America. Long. 209. E. Lat. 60. 42. N. Long. 209. 37. E. Lat. 61. 4. N. Long. 209. 19. E. Lat. 60. 43. N.

FOREST, BLACK. See Schwarzwald.

FORFAR, or ANGUS, a county of Scotland, bounded N. by the counties of Aberdeen and Kincardine, E. by the German ocean, S. by the frith of Tay, and W. by the county of Perth. It extends 28½ miles from N. to S., 29 from E. to W.; and its superficial area is 631 Scottish, or, according to some authorities, 977 square miles English, or 625,901 acres. The chief rivers are, the North Esk, the South Esk, the Isla, and the smaller streams of the Dean, Lunan, Dighty, and Noran. The surface of the county is extremely irregular and mountainous, being traversed by the Grampians, which rise to the height of 3000 feet, and also by the Sidlaw hills. Numerous valleys are interspersed throughout the mountains, the most noted of which is that of Strathmore, which extends far beyond the boundaries of the county, and which is equally distinguished by its fertility and romantic beauty. In this county are found inexhaustible beds of limestone, veins of porphyry, large quantities of jasper of different colours, from bright yellow to deep red, susceptible of the highest polish; and all varieties of pebbles: it is said that the real topaz is found here; coloured crystals, called cairngorms, commonly five sided prisms, and terminating in a pyramid of the same description, are a common object of search among the inhabitants, and are frequently found. Agricultural improvements are making rapid progress, about a fifth of the whole families of the county being engaged in rural occupations. Fisheries are conducted with considerable activity, both on the coast and in rivers: considerable quantities of salmon are exported to London, packed in large wooden boxes, with pounded ice to preserve them. The principal manufacture is linen. Bleaching and spinning are extensively prosecuted; also tanning, brewing, the leather manufacture, rope-making, and ship-building. Several vessels are engaged in the whale fishery. This county is divided into 56 parishes; and contains five royal burghs, Aberbrothock, Brechin, Dundee, Forfar, and Montrose. Several antiquities are to be found in different parts. Population 113,430.

FORFAR, the chief town of the above shire, situated in the valley of Strathmore. It is irregularly built: it has a spacious church, with a steeple 150 feet high; besides places of worship for Episcopalians and Antiburghers. A modern town-house fronts the market-place, and there are three public schools. The principal manufactures of this town are of brown linens, to a very considerable extent. Forfar is a royal burgh, and unites with Dundee, Perth, Cupar in Fife, and St Andrew's, in returning a representative to parliament. Population 5897. 14 miles N. Dundee.

FORIO, a town of Naples, in the island of Ischia. Population 7300. 4 miles E. Ischia.

FORLI, a walled town of Italy. It has several good edifices, public and private, and a very fine square. In the town the chief manufacture is of wax cloth. Population 13,000. 14 miles S. S. W. Ravenna.

FORLIMPOPOLI, a town of Italy, in the Papedom, between Forl and Cesena. Pop. 3800.

FORNEY, a township of England, county of Lancaster. Population 1257.

FORNEY, a town of France, department of the Oise. Population 1500.

FORMOSA, Rio, the principal of that succession of large estuaries which open into the gulf of Benin, 4 miles wide at the mouth. Long. 4. 20. E. Lat. 5. 40. N.

FORMOSA, one of the Biscegon islands, in W. Africa. Long. 16. 10. W. Lat. 11. 30. N.

FORNELLO, a small river which runs through Naples, and falls into the sea.

FORRES, a small town and parish of Scotland, in Morayshire. It extends about a mile in length. Pop. 3540. 12 miles W. Elgin.

FORST, a town of Lower Asia. Pop. 1500. 54 miles N. N. E. Dresden.

FORT ANSELA post township of the United States, in Washington county, New York, on Lake George, 10 miles N. Sandyhill, 60 N. Albany. Population 3100.

FORT AUGUSTUS, a fortress of Scotland, in the county of Inverness, ordered by government to be dismantled in 1818. 32 miles S. W. Inverness.

FORT GEORGE, a fortress of Scotland, in the county of Inverness, on the extremity of a low peninsula, projecting upwards of a mile into the Moray frith. It has barracks for about 3000 troops. Lat. 57. 32. N.

FORT ST DAVID, a town of Hindostan, on the sea coast of the Carnatic. Long. 79. 57. E. Lat. 11. 36. N.

FORT WILLIAM, a fortress of Scotland, in the county of Inverness, at the E. extremity of Loch Lannhe. It was ordered to be dismantled in 1818. 128 miles S. W. Edinburgh.

FORTEVENTURA, one of the Canary islands, about 50 miles long, and 24 in its greatest breadth. Pop. 9000. Long. 14. W. Lat. 28. S.

FORTH, a river of Scotland, rising on the north side of the mountain Ben Lomond, and gradually expanding in the lower part into an estuary called the frith of Forth, which extends for many miles. At its mouth it is 35 or 40 miles wide, from Fife Ness on the north, to St Abb's Head on the south shore, both washed by the German ocean. It contains several islands, of which the chief are Inchgarvie, Inchcolm, Inchkeith, the Bass, and the isle of May; the largest of these are but a few miles in circuit. Light-houses are erected on Inchkeith and on the isle of May; and the ruins of castles or religious houses appear on all the different islands.

FORTIFIED ISLAND, in the Eastern seas, off the coast of Canara, about a mile from the land. Long. 74. 27. E. Lat. 14. 16. N.

FORTHGOW, a town of Scotland, county of Ross, on the Moray frith, across which there is here a regular ferry to Fort George. Conjoined with Forbes, Nairn, and Inverness, this burgh sends a representative to parliament. 10 miles N. E. Inverness.

FOSSA NUOVA, a village of Italy, in the Popedom, 2 miles S. Piperno.

FOSSANO, a town of Piedmont, on the Stura. It has manufactures of silk. Pop. 14,000.

FOSSER, a town of the Netherlands, province of Namur. Population 2000.

FOSSOMBRONE, a town of Italy, 110 miles N. Rome. Population 3500.

FOSTER, a post township of the United States, in Providence county, Rhode Island, 15 miles W. Providence. Population 2613.

FOTHERINGAY, a village and parish of England, in Northamptonshire. Pop. 309.

FOURNAY, a town of France, department of the Upper Saône. Population 1300.

FOURNANT, a town of France, department of Finisterre. Population 1900.

FOUGERAY, a town of France, in Brittany. Population 4200.

FOUGERES, a town of France. It has manufactures of coarse linen and leather. Population 7300. 28 miles N. E. Rennes.

FOUGEROLLES, a town of France, department of the Mayenne. Population 1800.

FOUL BAY, a bay on the N. E. coast of Barbadoes.—Also on the S. coast of Jamaica.

FOULAHs, the name of a people, or rather race of negroes, who are very widely diffused throughout Western Africa. Their original seat seems to be that mountainous track near the sources of the Senegal, bearing the name of Fouladoo; but conquest and emigration have spread them wide through the neighbouring regions, and indeed more or less over most part of Africa. Their most populous and powerful kingdom is that of Fouta Jallo, situated to the south of Gambia; they possess also Brooks, situated on the higher parts of the Senegal, continuous with Fouladoo; Bondou and Fouta Torra, between the Senegal and Gambia; the kingdom of the Seratic, on the lower part of the Senegal; Masina on the Niger, between Bambarra and Tombuctoo; and Wassela, to the south of the upper part of the Niger. The Foulahs are clearly distinguished by form and features from the other negro tribes. They differ also from the Moors, in the mildness of their manners and character.

FOULS, WESTER, a parish and village of Scotland, in Perthshire. Population 1816.

FOULNESS, an island of England, on the coast of Essex. Population 565.

FOULSHAM, a village and parish of England, county of Norfolk. Population 835.

FOUR MILE FORD, a village of Ireland, county of Westmeath, 40 miles N. W. Dublin.

FOURCAT, a town of France, 27 miles S. W. Toulouse. Population 2100.

POWEY, a seaport town of England, in Cornwall, on the Powey, which forms a spacious and secure harbour. The church is a spacious and lofty structure, with a handsome tower. A considerable pilchard fishery is carried on here. Pop. 1455. 59 miles S. W. Exeter.

POWEY, a river of England, in Cornwall, which runs into the English channel.

FOX ISLAND, an island near the west coast of Ireland, 7 miles E. Slyshead.—2d, An island near the coast of Main. Long. 68. 40. W. Lat. 44. 2. N.—3d, A cluster of small islands on the south side of the gulf of St Lawrence.

FOX RIVER, a river of Canada, which enters the gulf of St Lawrence.—Also of North America, which enters Green bay in lake Michigan.

FOXFORD, a decayed town of Ireland, in the county of Mayo, 112 miles from Dublin.

FOY LA GRANDE, ST., a town of France. Population 2830. 36 miles E. Bourdeaux.

FOYLE, a river of Ireland, which, after passing Londonderry, expands into a bay called Lough Foyle, 12 miles long and 7 wide.

FRAGA, a town of Arragon, on the borders of Catalonia, 53 miles E. S. E. Saragossa.

FRAGNETO, a town of Naples, in the Principato Ultra. Population 2200.

FRAGNETO L'ARBATE, a town of Naples, in the Principato Ultra. Pop. 1890.

FRAGOLA, a populous town of Italy. It has a manufactory of hats. Pop. 12,700. 7 miles N. N. E. Naples.

FRAILS, rocks on the south coast of Ireland, lying off the county of Wexford.

FRANSE, a town of France, department of the Vosges, with 1700 inhabitants.

FRANFIELD, a parish of England, in Sussex, with 1437 inhabitants.

FRAMLINGHAM, a market town of England, county of Suffolk. The church, built of black flint, is a very stately edifice, and the steeple is 100 feet high. Population 2327. 18 miles N. E. Ipswich.

FRANMERSBACH, a village of Franconia, principality of Aschaffenburg. Pop. 2100.

FRAMPTON COTRELL, a parish of England, in Gloucester. Population 1610.

FRAMPTON A SEVERN, a parish of England, in Gloucester, with 996 inhabitants.

FRANSDEN, a parish of England, in Suffolk, with 702 inhabitants.

FRANCAISE, LA, a town of France. Population 3200. 11 miles N. by W. Montreuban.

FRANCIVILLA, a large and regularly built town of Naples, in the province of Otranto. The streets are wide and straight, and the houses showy, though in a heavy style of architecture. Pop. 11,000. 20 miles W. Brindisi.

FRANCE, a country of continental Europe, having the Netherlands, Switzerland, and Piedmont on the E., the Mediterranean with Spain on the S., and the sea on the W. and N. It lies between the 43d and 51st degrees of N. lat. and is particularly fortunate in its frontier, having strong natural barriers in the Pyrenees, the Alps, the ridge of Jura, and the Vosges; it is open only on the side of the Netherlands. Its length from E. to W. (from Alsace to Brittany) is 650 miles; its breadth from N. to S. about 560; its superficial extent is computed at 128 millions of English acres. Before the revolution, France was divided into 32 great provinces, which were again subdivided into elections, marchaues, and other local jurisdictions. It is now divided into arrondissements, each arrondissement into cantons, and each canton into communes. The numbers of each are respectively—Departments (including Corsica), 86; arrondissements, 368; cantons, 2,669; communes, 38,990.

The foreign possessions of France consist, in the West Indies, of Martinique, Guadeloupe, and Cayenne; in Africa, of Goree, and the factories at the mouth of the Senegal; in the Indian ocean, of the isle of Bourbon; on the mainland of India, of Pondicherry and some smaller factories. The great rivers of France are the Loire, the Rhone, the Garonne, and the Seine. Its internal navigation is still very imperfect; these rivers being but partially navigable, and there being few canals in actual use.

In point of climate, the north of France is similar to England, rain occurring frequently, and the country being consequently fit for pasture. The interior of France is different, having much more dry weather, and fewer changes. In the south the heat is intense, and the corn crops are often blighted, from the want of rain. In regard to soil, France, though on the whole a favoured country, labours under many inequalities. Vast tracts in Brittany, Anjou, and Gascony, come under the description of heaths, containing a gravelly, sandy, or stony surface, and being unfit for tillage in their present state. In regard to mountains, the surface lost to tillage is not considerable, until we arrive at the interior of France, particularly in Auvergne, the ranges of which are connected with those of Languedoc, Dauphiny, and Provence. The culture throughout the northern half of the kingdom consists of wheat, barley, oats, pulse, and of late, in a greater degree than before, of potatoes; in the southern half, corn, particularly maize, are cultivated; also vines, mulberries, and olives. Mines, particularly iron mines, form an important object of French industry; the annual produce of the iron mines is computed at 200,000 tons a year. Coal mines are not wanting, though as yet wrought only in a few places. Notwithstanding the wars and civil troubles of the revolution, the population has been in a state of progressive increase; in 1789 it amounted to 26,300,000 inhabitants; in 1805, to 27,700,000; and in 1817, above 29,000,000. The constitution of France since 1814 resembles in its forms that of Britain, the king being a limited monarch, and infallible in the eye of the law, the responsibility for public measures resting with his ministers. There are two houses of legislature, namely, the chamber of deputies and that of the peers. The chamber of peers comprises somewhat above 200 members, who possess privileges similar to those of the peerage in England. The chamber of deputies are elected by the people; the number returned may in some measure be altered at the will of the king. The national debt amounts to nearly 200 millions sterling; the interest of it is between 11 and 12 millions. The following are the chief taxes:—

The foncier , or tax on the real property, viz. the lands and houses of the kingdom at large	1,9,500,000
Mobilier , or tax on houses, with reference to the furniture and other effects of the tenant	1,500,000
Window tax	600,000
Patentes , or tax payable by persons exercising trades and professions	650,000
Enregistrement et domaines .—This corresponds to our stamps, being a heavy tax on all sales of lands and houses, also on legacies; it amounts to	7,000,000
Sale of wood from the public forests	800,000
Customs	1,000,000
Tax on salt	1,600,000
Droits rous , being a combination of a number of excise duties, on wine, spirits, &c.	4,500,000
Tobacco and snuff	1,500,000
Lottery	280,000
Post Office	550,000
Miscellaneous receipts and contingencies	300,000
Total	1,30,380,000

The total military force, legions, guards, and artillery, is about 90,000 men. In this incomplete state of the armed force, a part of the military duty is done by the national guards or local volunteers. The navy consists of about 40 ships of the line, of which, however, few are in commission; the number of frigates is also about 40.

The inhabitants of France are Catholics, with the exception of from two to three millions of Protestants, and about 60,000 Jews. The established church had formerly very extensive landed property; but in the early part of the revolution (in 1790) the property of these lands, computed at one hundred millions sterling, was assumed by the national assembly, and a fixed income in money allotted to the clergy. This arrangement is still in force; and the total fund thus annually payable is not short of £1,500,000, a sum which, though large, leaves but small incomes when divided among so many thousand claimants. The administration of justice has been entirely new modelled by the revolution. The administrators of justice in France are very numerous, there being a justice of peace for each canton, a court of the first instance for each arrondissement, a provincial court of appeal in 27 of the principal towns, and a tribunal of commerce in every place where mercantile differences are likely to occur. In addition to this, there are tribunals of police, or petty municipal courts, for the punishment of small delinquencies, and tribunals of commerce, composed of merchants who act without salary, and whose decision is final in all commercial disputes below L.40. Lastly comes the cour de cassation, or highest court in France, which is stationary at Paris, and takes cognisance of all appeals from the 27 provincial courts. Juries are employed in criminal cases only. The establishments for education consist, since the revolution, of primary schools, answering to our smaller parish schools. Next come the town schools, called secondary schools, or colleges. The lycees, now called royal colleges, are in number 36, and are large provincial schools, where the pupils meet in classes, and are taught Latin, Greek, mathematics, and even rhetoric. Lastly come the universities, or academies. These, including Paris, are 26 in number. The Protestants are allowed two seminaries for studying divinity, Strasburg and Montauban. The chief commercial harbours of France are Bourdeaux, Marseilles, Nantes, Havre de Grace, St Maloes, and L'Orient. Marseilles trades partly with the West Indies, more with the Levant; Bourdeaux with the East and West Indies, and with the north of Europe, to a great extent in wine. Nantes has likewise a share of the colonial and wine trade. Havre is the seaport of Paris, and the only considerable mercantile harbour from St Maloes to Dunkirk. The other ports are inconsiderable; and now that St Domingo is lost, French navigation is very limited, and not likely to receive much extension. In manufactures the French have long been noted for the durability and fineness; if not for the cheapness, of their woollens: linen is also a staple article, particularly in the north of France. In hardware they are greatly deficient; but in silk they support, particularly at Lyons, their former reputation. The cotton manufactures are of late introduction, and maintain with difficulty a competition with England. The revolution has had the effect of dividing landed property into a multitude of petty possessions, the estates forfeited by emigration, or withdrawn from the church, having been sold at low prices, and frequently to petty farmers. They, like the rest of their countrymen, are in general individually active, but greatly deficient both in capital and in a knowledge of improved husbandry. There are in France no poor's rates, but the taxes on land are heavy, the fouquier amounting to 25 per cent. of the valued rent. The circumstances which most strike the British on arriving in France, are the strange variety of dress, the narrowness of the streets, and the inequality of the houses, some being fine stone buildings, and others mean and old fashioned. The traveller is mortified at the general want of cleanliness and neatness, and at the number of things that appear neglected and out of place; on the other hand, the natives are seen proceeding with their various occupations with wonderful content and cheerfulness. A farther acquaintance with them discovers their loquacity, their credulity, and what may be considered the greatest difference in the condition of the two nations, the unusual activity of the women. While in Britain the fair sex are confined to domestic cares, in France they are in the habit of taking a part in almost every kind of business, and appear much more frequently than the men, in shops and warehouses. There is a general backwardness, when compared to Britain, in whatever relates to domestic comfort, or the finish of manufacture. This is apparent in the want of neatness and comfort in their houses; the rooms are dark, the passages wandering, the floors of stone, while the doors and windows seldom shut tight. Furnished lodgings are rarely to be met with, and when they are, the furniture is miserably deficient. The water for domestic use is drawn in most parts of France, not from pipes, or even from pumps, but from wells. Their farmers are strangers to the threshing machine; their ploughs are drawn by three or more horses, and still carry the old trumpery of wheels. Similar awkwardness, and of course similar delay, prevails in their public establishments. The post in some parts travels only 70 miles in 24 hours; and even in the capital, the hour for the departure of letters is in the midst of the business of the day. Travelling in France takes place either by stage coaches or by posting. A few coaches on the English plan have been very lately introduced on the principal roads; but the common conveyance is a heavy old fashioned coach, carrying six or more persons inside, and three in the front box, called the cabriolet of the coach. The expence of travelling is about a third less than in England. The views, from the want of hedges, are in general much less agreeable; the great public roads are wide, and commonly in good order, but nothing can be more wretched than the cross roads. A diligence proceeds at the rate of five miles an hour; a post chaise or cabriolet, though a very unseemly vehicle, goes quicker. There is not a toll on travellers in the whole kingdom.

FRANCE, ISLE OF. See Mauritius.

FRANCESSAN, a town of France, department of the Lot and Garonne. Pop. 1409.

FRANCESTOWN, a post township of the United States, in Hillsborough county, New Hampshire, 12 miles N. W. Amherst. Pop. 1451.

FRANCHE COMTE, or UPPER BURGUNDY, the name, before the revolution, of a province of France; adjacent to Switzerland and Lorraine.

FRANCIS, Sr, a river of the United States, which joins the Mississippi.

FRANCIS, Sr, a river of Lower Canada, which falls into lake St Peter.

FRANCISCO, Rio, a large and abundant river of Brazil, which falls into the Atlantic, lat. 6. 55. S.

FRANCISCO, St., a town and capacious harbour or bay on the coast of Brazil. The town is situated on a small island at the entrance of the bay, in lat. 26. 15. S.

FRANCOIS, CAPE, a town on the north coast of the island of Hispaniola, and one of the principal towns of the island. It is situated on a cape at the edge of a large plain. It has suffered severely from the intestine convulsions which raged in the island, having been burnt in 1793, by the people of colour. Previous to this calamity, it contained 8000 inhabitants. It surrendered to the blacks in 1803, being at the same time blockaded by a British force from the sea. It has been since called Cape Henry by the black emperor Christophe. Long. 72. 16. W. lat. 19. 46. N.

FRANCONIA, one of the ten circles into which the German empire was formerly divided. It adjoined Silesia and the electorate of Bavaria S.; Bohemia and the upper palatinate E.; Hesse-Cassel and Thuringia N.; and the lower palatinate, and circle of the Upper Rhine, W. The extent of Franconia is nearly 11,000 square miles; the population 1,500,000.

FRANCOURVILLE, a town of France, 10 miles N. Paris. Population 1700.

FRANKER, a town of the Netherlands, in Friesland, on a canal, 9 miles from the Zuider Zee. Population 3200.

FRANKENBERG, a town of Saxony, 9 miles W. Freyberg. It has manufactures of woolen stuffs, cotton, and leather. Pop. 3000.

FRANKENBERG, a town of Hesse-Cassel, on the Eder. Population 2730.

FRANKENBURG, a town and county of Upper Austria, quarter of the Hansrueck.

FRANKENHAUSEN, a town of Germany, 26 miles N. Erfurt. Population 3000.

FRANKENSTEIN, a town of Silesia, on the Beutza. Population 4150. It has manufactures of linen and leather. 12 miles S.S.W. Glatz.—The name of two other small towns.

FRANKENTHAL, a town in the Bavarian province of the Rhine, 12 miles N. W. Heidelberg. Population 3500.

FRANKFORD, a township of the United States, in Sussex county, New Jersey. Pop. 1637.—2d, Of Philadelphia county, Pennsylvania, 5 miles N. E. Philadelphia. Pop. 1233.

FRANKFORT ON THE MAINE, a large city of Germany, and now the permanent seat of the Germanic diet, situated on the Maine, about 20 miles above its influx into the Rhine. Population 41,000. It is divided by the river into two parts: the one on the north bank, called Frankfort proper, is by much the larger; the other is called Sachsenhausen; and the two communicate by a stone bridge. Frankfort was formerly fortified, but most of its outworks are now converted into gardens and promenades. The principal streets are wide; there are also three extensive squares. This town contains a number of large buildings. The Catholics have here 9 churches, the Lutherans 7, the Calvinists 2. The Jews are in number between 7000 and 8000. Frankfort is noted for its commercial activity. Two great fairs are held here annually in spring and autumn. The principal manufactures are silk, velvet, and cotton stuffs.

FRANKFORT ON THE ODER, a well built town of Prussia, the capital of the Middle Mark of Brandenburg. Population 12,000. It has a university, founded in 1606; and considerable trade, having three annual fairs. Here are manufactures of woollens, silks, leather, and earthenware. 48 miles E. Berlin.

FRANKFORT, a post township of the United States, in Hancock county, Maine, on Penobscot river. Population 1493.—2d, A township in Herkimer county, New York, on Mohawk river. Population 1304.—3d, A post town in Franklin county, Kentucky, and capital of the state, is regularly laid out on the east side of Kentucky river, 60 miles above its confluence with the Ohio, 22 miles W. N. W. Lexington. Pop. above 2000.

FRANKLIN, a county of the United States, in Vermont, on Lake Champlain, bounded N. by Canada, E. by Orleans county, S. by Chittenden county, and W. by Lake Champlain. Population 16,427. Chief town St Albans.—2d, Of Massachusetts, on both sides of Connecticut river, bounded N. by Vermont and New Hampshire, E. by Worcester county, S. by Hampshire county, and W. by Berkshire county. Population 27,201. Chief town Greenfield.—3d, Of New York, bounded N. by Canada, E. by Clinton and Essex counties, S. by Essex and Hamilton counties, W. by St Lawrence county. Population 2719. Chief town Malone.—4th, Of Pennsylvania, bounded N. by Cumberland county, E. by Adams county, S. by Maryland, and W. by Bedford and Millin counties. Population 23,003. Chief town Chambersburg.—5th, Of Virginia, inclosed by Bedford, Pittsylvania, Henry, Patrick, Montgomery, and Botetourt counties. Population 10,724. Slaves 2672. Chief town Rocky Mount.—6th, Of North Carolina, inclosed by Greenville, Johnston, Warren, Wake, and Orange counties. Population 10,166. Slaves 5330. Chief town Lewisburg.—7th, Of Georgia, in the Western district, bounded N. E. by Tuguloo river, N. W. by the Cherokee line, S. W. by Jackson county, and S. E. by Elbert county. Population 10,815. Slaves 1659. Chief town Carnesville.—8th, Of Alabama, on the south side of Tennessee river.—9th, Of Mississippi, on Homochitto river. Population in 1816, 2708. Slaves 1013.—10th, Of West Tennessee. Population 5730. Slaves 709. Chief town Winchester.—11th, Of Kentucky. Population 8013. Slaves 1201. Chief town Frankfort.—12th, Of Ohio, on the Scioto. Population in 1819, 9350. Chief town Columbus.—13th, Of Indiana, on White river, bordering on Ohio. Population in 1815, 7970. Chief town Brookville.—14th, Of Illinois, between Gallatin and Jackson counties. Population in 1818, 604.—15th, Of Missouri.

FRANKLIN, a township of the United States, in Norfolk county, Massachusetts, 26 miles S. W. Boston. Pop. 1390.—3d, Of New London county, Connecticut, on the Shetucket. Pop. 1161.—3d, Of Delaware county, New York, on the Susquehanna. Pop. 1700.—4th, Of Somerset county, New York. Pop. 2539.—5th, Of Bergen county, New Jersey. Pop. 2839.—6th, Of Franklin county, Pennsylvania. Pop. 1781.—7th, Capital of Venango county, Pennsylvania, 25 miles S. E. Meadville. Pop. 159.—8th, Of Fayette county, Pennsylvania. Pop. 1623.—9th, Of Green county, Pennsylvania. Pop. 1943.—10th, Of Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania. Population 1542.

FRANKS, a township of the United States, in Huntingdon county, Pennsylvania. Pop. 1114.

FRANKSTADT, a town of Moravia, 4 miles S. Freyberg. Population 2700.

FRASCATI, a town of the Ecclesiastical State, in the Campagna di Roma. It has a seminary, richly endowed by Cardinal York, who was once bishop here. Population 9000. 10 miles S. E. Rome.

FRASCINETO, a village of Naples, in Calabria Citra. Population 1600.

FRASERSBURGH, a seaport town and parish of Scotland, in Aberdeenshire. Population 2831. 17 miles N. Peterhead.

FRANES LE BUISSENAI, a town of the Netherlands, in Hainault. Population 3800.

FRASSO, a town of Naples, in the Terra di Lavoro. Population 3450.

FRATTA, LA, a town of the Venetian territory, 6 miles S. W. Rovigo. Pop. 6300.

FRATTA MAGGIORE, a town in the Neapolitan territory. Population 8500.

FRAUENBURG, a town of East Prussia, 16 miles N. E. Elbing. Population 1400.

FRAUENFELD, a town of Switzerland, 20 miles N. E. Zurich. Population 1500.

FRAUSTADT, a town of Poland, grand duchy of Posen. It is a place of considerable traffic. Pop. 5600. 70 miles N. N. W. Breslau.

FREDERICIA, a town of Denmark, in Jutland, on the Little Belt, with a custom-house, where all vessels passing the Belt pay a toll. Pop. 3500. Long. 9. 44. E. Lat. 55. 35. N.

FREDERICK, a county of the United States, in Maryland, bounded N. by Pennsylvania, E. by Baltimore and Montgomery counties, S. W. by the Potomac, and N. W. by Washington county. Pop. 34,437. Slaves 5171. Chief town Fredericktown.—2d, Of Virginia, included by Jefferson, Berkeley, Hampshire, Shenandoah counties, and Shenandoah river, which separates it from Fauquier county. Pop. 22,574. Slaves 6417. Chief town Winchester.

FREDERICK HENDRICK, a fort of the Netherlands, on the Scheldt, below Lillo.

FREDERICKSBURG, a post town of the United States, in Spotsylvania county, Virginia, on the north-west bank of Rappahannock river. Population 3255.

FREDERICKSHALL, a town of Norway, at the influx of the Distedalsel into the Ifsford. Charles XII. of Sweden was here killed in the trenches, on 11th December 1718. Pop. 3900. 52 miles S. S. E. Christiania.

FREDERICKSTADT, a well built town of Denmark, 18 miles W. S. W. Sleswick. Population 2200.

FREDERICKSTADT, a small town of Norway, 43 miles S. Christiania. Pop. 1000.

FREDERICKSTOWN, a post town of the United States, and capital of Frederick county, Maryland, 43 miles N. N. W. Washington. Population about 5000.

FREDERICKSUND, a seaport of Denmark, 19 miles N. W. Copenhagen.

FREELAND, or MONMOUTH, a post township of the United States, and capital of Monmouth county, New Jersey. Pop. 4784.—UPPER, Of Monmouth county, New Jersey, west of Freehold. Population 3843.

FREERONT, a post township of the United States, in Cumberland county, Maine, 20 miles N. E. Portland. Population 2184.

FREETOWN, a post township of the United States, in Bristol county, Massachusetts, on the Taunton, 9 miles S. E. Taunton. Pop. 1878.

FREEWILL ISLANDS, 3 small islands in the Eastern seas. Long. 137. 51. E. Lat. 0. 50. S.

FREINSHEIM, a town of the Bavarian province of the Rhine. Population 1500.

FREJUS, a town of France, on the coast of Provence. It was here that Bonaparte landed on his return from Egypt in the autumn of 1799, and also on his more celebrated return from Elba in 1815. Population 2200. 40 miles N. E. Toulon.

FRENAY, a town of France, department of the Sarthe. Population 1550.

FRENCH BROAD RIVER, a river of the United States, one of the sources of Tennessee river. It rises in South Carolina, and crossing the western part of North Carolina, enters Tennessee through a breach in the mountain, and joins the Holston, 11 miles above Knoxville. 25 miles from its mouth it receives the Nolachucky, and 6 miles above, Big Pigeon river.

FRENCH CREEK, a river of the United States, in Chester county, Pennsylvania, which flows into the Schuylkill.—Another which runs into the Alleghany, 80 miles N. by E. Pittsburg.

FRENCH RIVER, a river of Upper Canada, which enters Lake Huron; in Lat. 45. 53. N.

FRENCHMAN'S BAY, a bay of United America, in the district of Maine. Long. 68. 1. W. Lat. 44. 20. N.

FRENCHMAN'S BAY, a bay on the south coast of the island of Jamaica.

FRESHFORD, a town of Ireland, county of Kilkenny. Houses 207.

FRESHWATER, a river of Wales, county of Pembroke, which runs into the sea.

FRESNAY, a town of France, in Anjou. Population 1550.

FREUDENBERG, a town of the Prussian territories of the Lower Rhine. Pop. 1300.

FREUDENSTADT, a town of Württemberg, 24 miles E. S. E. Strasburg. Pop. 2400.

FREUDENTHAL, a town of Austrian Silesia, on the borders of Moravia.

FREYBERG, a celebrated mining town of Saxony, the capital of the Erzgebirg, 1300 feet above the level of the sea, on the Freybergische-Mulda. It is well built. A mining academy was founded in 1765. The neighbouring district is full of mines; those in a state of activity amount to 250, employing about 5000 workmen. Manufactures of hardware and cloth are also established here. Population 9000. 19 miles W. S. W. Dresden.

FREYBERG, a town of Moravia, 36 miles E. Olmutz. Population 2500.

FREYBURG, a town of Baden. It is the seat of a university founded in 1456, and is still flourishing. Population 10,000.

FREYBURG, a town of Silesia, 7 miles W. Schweidnitz. Population 1550.

FREYBURG, a town of the Prussian states, on the Unstrut. Population 1400.

FREYDENBERG, a town of Baden, on the Maine, 26 miles N. E. Heidelberg. Pop. 1300.

FREYENWALD, a town of Brandenburg, on the Oder. Population 2150.

FREYSINGEN, a well built town of Germany, 17 miles N. N. E. Munich.

FREYSTADT, a town of Silesia, principality of Glogau. Population 2900.

FREYSTADT, a town of Upper Austria, 82 miles W. Vienna. Population 4000.

FRIAS, a town of Spain, 138 miles N. Madrid. Long. 3. 2. W. Lat. 42. 41. N.

FRIENBURG, a canton of Switzerland, between the canton of Berne and the Pays de Vaud. Extent 2836 square miles. Pop. 68,000.

FRIENBURG, the capital of the foregoing canton, on the Saane, in a singularly wild and romantic position. The best buildings are the Jesuits' church, and the cathedral of St Nicholas. Pop. 6500. 16 miles S. W. Berne.

FRICK, Lower, a village of Switzerland, in the canton of Aargau, in the Frickthal, to which district it gives name. Pop. 750.—The district of Frickthal extends on the south side of the Rhine, from Augst to Bützberg. Pop. 20,000.

FRIEDBERG, a town of Bavaria, 23 miles W. N. W. Munich. Population 3200.

FRIEDBERG, a town of Hesse Darmstadt. Population 1700.—Also a town of Styria. Population 1500.—Two other small towns of this name in Germany.

FRIEDBERG, a town of Germany, 82 miles E. N. E. Berlin. Population 2350.

FRIEDEK, a town of Austrian Silesia, on the Ostrowicza. Population 2300.

FRIEDERSDOEF, a village of Lusatia, on the borders of Silesia. Population 1600.—Also the name of various other villages.

FRIEDLAND, a town of Bohemia, circle of Buntzlau, on the Willich. Pop. 2270.

FRIEDLAND, a town of East Prussia, circle of Königsberg, on the Alle, famous for the battle gained by Bonaparte over the Russians and Prussians, on 14th June 1807, which led to the peace of Tilsit. Population 2120.

FRIEDLAND (MARKISH), a town of the grand duchy of Posen. Population 1400.—Also a town of West Prussia. Pop. 1500.

FRIEDLAND, a town of Mecklenburg, 25 miles S. E. Demmin. Population 3400.—Several other small towns and villages in Silesia, Prussia, and Moravia.

FRIEDRICKSIAM, a town of Finland, on a peninsula in the gulf of Finland. Its trade is in wood, pitch, tar, and hemp. Its harbour is the station of part of the Russian fleet. Population 1350. 108 miles W. S. W. Petersburg. Long. 23. 18. E. Lat. 60. 36. N.

FRIEDRICKSBODE, a town of Upper Saxony, 9 miles S. Gotha. Population 1500.

FRIENDLY ISLANDS, a group of islands in the Southern Pacific ocean, forming an archipelago of very considerable extent, and consisting of more than 150 islands, the greater part of which are either mere rocks or shoals, or barren and desert spots. The following are the most important:—Tonga, Tongataboo, or Amsterdam as it was called by Tasman, who discovered it in 1642; Eoaa, called by Tasman Middleburgh; Annamooka, or Rotterdam according to Tasman; the Hapace islands, namely, Haanno, Foa, Ie-fouga, and Houawa; Mayorga, a group of islands about 100 miles N. Hapace, discovered in 1781 by the Spanish navigator Maurelle, and since visited by Captain Edwards in 1791, by whom the group was named Howe's Islands; Neootabooboo, and Kootahe, discovered by Schouten and Lemaire in 1616, and visited by captain Wallis in 1767, who called them Keppel's and Boscawen's islands; Toofon, or Annatofa; Hanoo, Vavaoo, and the Feejee islands. To this extensive archipelago Captain Cook gave the name of Friendly islands, from the firm alliance which seemed to subsist among the natives, and from their courteous behaviour to strangers.

The inhabitants have nothing to distinguish them from other savages, being of the most atrocious manners, and rude and ignorant. The weapons which they make are clubs of different sorts (in the ornamenting of which they spend much time), spears, and darts. They have also bows and arrows. Yams, plantains, and cocoa-nuts, compose the greatest part of their vegetable diet. Of their animal food, the chief articles are hogs, fowls, fish, and all sorts of shell-fish; but the lower people eat rats. In the descriptions of those navigators who first visited the Friendly islands, they were represented as possessing many social qualities, and a gentleness of character and disposition which distinguish them to their advantage over their savage brethren. But the accounts of subsequent visitors have dispelled this illusion, having shewn them capable of the most ferocious and brutal excesses of cruelty and revenge. Long. 184. 46. to 185. 46. E. Lat. 19. 40. to 21. 30. S.

FRIEBACH, a town of Lower Carinthia, on the Metnitz. Population 1550.

FRIELAND, a name which in former ages comprised all the country from the Scheldt northwards to the Weser, including not only the seven united provinces, but a part of Germany; so large was the territory occupied by the ancient Friesland. The Zuyder Zee was the principal line of demarcation, West Friesland being the name of the country on the one side of it, and East Friesland of that on the other. At present the name of Friesland is much more restricted, and is confined to two portions of this extensive tract, viz. the Dutch province, situated to the west of the province of Groningen, and the German principality, a maritime district lying to the eastward of Groningen. Friesland, the Dutch province, has the Zuyder Zee on the west, and the German ocean on the north, containing nearly 1200 square miles, and 176,500 inhabitants. Like the rest of the Netherlands, it is secured against the sea by large dykes. The land is much fitter for pasture than tillage: the chief exports accordingly are butter and cheese. The German principality is called East Friesland, and lies on the frontier of Westphalia, being separated from the Dutch province of Friesland by Groningen: on the south it has the principality of Munster. Its extent is computed at 1155 square miles; its population at 120,000. Towards the sea it is low and swampy, but secured from inundation by large dykes. The atmosphere is in general foggy, but not unhealthy; the soil is good, and adapted in part to the cultivation of corn, but more to the rearing of cattle.

FRINGY BAZAR, a town of Bengal, district of Dacca. Long. 90. 23. E. Lat. 23. 33. N.

FRIO, a cape on the coast of Rio Janeiro, in Brazil. Long. 41. 39. W. Lat. 23. 3. S.

FRIEZLAND, a town of Hesse-Cassel, on the Eder, 13 miles S. S. W. Cassel. Pop. 2600.

FRIULI, an extensive province of Italy, subject to Austria, bounded N. by Carinthia, and S. by the gulf of Venice. It was formerly divided into Austrian and Venetian, and these divisions are still preserved under different names. The former contains the eastern and smaller part of the province, and has Trieste for its chief town. Its extent is computed at 2500 square miles; the population about 130,000. Venetian Friuli lies to the westward, and is a much more fertile and populous country, containing 370,000 inhabitants, and producing silk in great abundance. The chief rivers are the Tagliamento, the Meduna, the Selina, and the Natisone.

FRISHER'S STRAIT, a narrow sea, to the north of Cape Farewell and West Greenland. Long. 42. W. Lat. 63. N.

FRODINGHAM, a village and parish of England, in Yorkshire. Pop. 573.

FRODSHAM, a township of England, in Cheshire, 10 miles N. E. Chester. Pop. 1556.

FROHNUNG, a town of Saxony, 15 miles S. S. E. Leipzig. Population 1810.

FROME, two rivers of England; one runs into the Lifford near Hereford; another in the county of Dorset, flows into the sea in Poole harbour; a third joins the Avon at Bristol; and a fourth enters the Severn near Berkley.

FROME, a town of England, county of Somerset. The river Frome passes through the lower part of the town, under a bridge of five arches. The principal church is a large fine structure, highly decorated within; besides which there are other two churches; also several handsome places of worship for dissenters, a grammar school of the foundation of Edward VI., a charity school for boys, an almshouse for old women, an asylum for girls, and an hospital for old men, together with various Sunday schools, which afford instruction to nearly 2000 children. Frome has long been celebrated for the manufacture of broad cloths and kerseymeres. Pop. of the parish 12,411. 13 miles S. Bath.

FRONTERA, a town of Portugal, province of Alentejo, 14 miles N. Estremoz.

FRONTERA, SAN JUAN DE LA, a town of South America, between Chili and the province of Chilo. Long. 68. 36. W. Lat. 31. 17. S.

FRONTIGNAN, a town of France, in Lower Languedoc, famous for Frontignac wines. Population 1450.

FRONTON, a town of France, 18 miles N. Toulouse. Population 2200.

FROSOLONE, a town of Naples, in the Molise, with 3600 inhabitants.

FROZEN OCEAN, or the ICEY SEA, a sea of Asia, extending towards the north into the unknown regions of the pole, and whose boundaries on the east and west are calculated to be Nova Zembla and Tchutski Nos.

FRUGES, a town of France, in Picardy, 14 miles S. W. Arras. Population 2700.

FRICA, STRAITS OF ST. JUAN DE, an inlet on the north-west coast of North America, about 15 miles wide, between Cape Flattery on the south side, in Lat. 48. 20. N. Long. 124. 23. W., and Quadra's isles on the north side, in Lat. 48. 40. N. These straits were for a long time supposed to lead to some inland sea connected with the Atlantic ocean. But they were explored to their termination, about 100 miles inland, by Vancouver.

FRUGO, FOGO, or ST. PHILIPS, one of the Cape de Verde islands, situated at the west of St. Jago, remarkable for a volcano issuing from a mountain, which may be said to compose the whole island. Long. 24. 20. W. Lat. 15. 0. N.

FUENTE GONCALDO, a town of Spain, province of Salamanca, 16 miles N. W. Coria.

FUENTE DE LA FIGUERA, a town of Spain, 56 miles S. E. Valencia. Pop. 2250.

FUENTES, a fortress of Lombardy, where the Adda falls into the lake of Como.

FUENTES D'ONORE, a small town of Spain, 13 miles W. Ciudad Rodrigo. It was the scene of some sharp fighting in May 1811, between the French and the British.

FUENTE RIO, a river of Mexico, which runs into the gulf of California.

FULDA, a province or district of Germany, to the northward of Franconia. Pop. 64,000.

FULDA, a town of Hesse-Cassel, capital of the foregoing province, on the Fulda. The chief building here is the episcopal palace. The university has been converted into a lyceum. It has manufactures of woollens, linen, and earthenware. Population 7500. 63 miles E. N. E. Mentz.

FULDA, a river of Germany, which joins the Werra near Münden.

FULGENT, St., a village of France, department of La Vendee. Population 1650.

FULHAM, a village and parish of England, in Middlesex, on the Thames. The bishop of London has a palace on the banks of the river. Pop. 6492. 4 miles from London.

FULBURN, a parish of England, county of Cambridge. Population 1023.

FULTA, a town of Bengal, on the Hoogly river. Long. 88. 20. E. Lat. 22. 19. N.

FUMAY, a town of France, department of the Ardennes. Population 1750.

FUMEL, a town of France, department of the Lot and Garonne. Population 2100.

FUMONE, a town of the Papedom, in the Campagna, 4 miles N. W. Alatri.

FUNCHAL, a seaport in the island of Madeira, of which it is the capital, situated in the centre of a large bay. The city is irregularly built. The streets are narrow, winding, ill paved, and dirty. Churches and convents are numerous; but there is nothing remarkable in their construction. The country behind Funchal rises rapidly, and consists of black rocks of lava, which, intermingled with plantations of the most brilliant verdure, and contrasting with the white houses of the town, compose a brilliant landscape. The trade of Funchal consists almost entirely in the exporting of wine, which is sent not only to Britain, but to the East and West Indies. Long. 17. 6. 15. W. Lat. 32. 37. 40. N.

FUNDY, BAY OF, a large bay in North America, which opens between the islands of Penobscot bay, in Lincoln county, Maine, and Cape Sable, the south-western point of Nova Scotia. It extends about 200 miles in a north-east direction.

FUNEN, a Danish island in the Baltic, separated from Jutland by the narrow passage called the Little Belt. It is 35 miles long and 30 broad. The capital is Odensee.

FUNKIRCHEN, a town of Hungary, palatinate of Baranya, between the Drave and the Danube. It is situated at the foot of a hill, in a district that is fertile, particularly in wine; contains 11,500 inhabitants, and is a bishop's see. 140 miles W. N. W. Belgrade. Long. 18. 45. 29. E. Lat. 46. 5. 13. N.

FURNEAUX ISLANDS, a cluster of islands in Bass strait, between New Holland and Van Dieman's Land.

FURNES, a town of the Netherlands, in West Flanders, near the sea, on a canal which goes from Bruges to Dunkirk. It is small, but neat, and has an elegant town-house. Population 3200. 15 miles S. W. Ostend.

FURRUCKAHAD, a fortified town, and capital of a district of the same name, in Hindostan, about a mile from the Ganges. It contains a small citadel, and the palace of the nabob. Here Lord Lake defeated Holkar in 1804. Long. 79. 33. E. Lat. 27. 33. N.

FURSTENBERG, a town of Lower Lusatia, on the Oder, 13 miles S. Frankfort on the Oder. Population 1350.

FURSTENBERG, a town of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, on the Havel, 40 miles N. Berlin. Population 1800.

FURSTENFELD, a town of Lower Styria, 30 miles E. Gratz, 60 S. Vienna. Pop. 1700.

FURSTENWALD, a town of the Middle Mark of Brandenburg, on the Spree, 20 miles E. Berlin. Population 2350.

FURTH, a town of Franconia, 4 miles W. Nuremberg, between the Rednitz and Pegnitz. It is a manufacturing place. Glass of all kinds, but in particular large mirrors, are made here; there is also a number of watch-makers, gold-beaters, joiners, saddlers, stocking-weavers, &c. Population 13,000.

FURTH, a town of Lower Bavaria, 86 miles N. N. E. Munich. Population 1000.

FURTEKHUR, a town of Hindostan, on the Ganges, 3 miles from Furruckabad.

FURTEPOON, a town of Hindostan, province of Agra. Long. 77. 34. E. Lat. 27. 5. N.

FURWA, a town of Hindostan, province of Bahar. Long. 85. 20. E. Lat. 25. 30. N.

FYERS, a small river of Scotland, in Inverness-shire, which falls into Lochness. It is chiefly noted for its stupendous falls, the upper one of 70, and the lower of 207 feet in perpendicular height.

FYLINGDALE, a township of England, North Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1702.

FYNE, LOCH, a lake of Scotland, or arm of the sea, in the county of Argyle, noted for its excellent herrings.

FYVIE, a town and parish of Scotland, county of Aberdeen. Population 3002.

FYZABAD, a city of Hindostan, province of Oude, on the Dewah or Gogra. It is somewhat decayed from its former importance, but is still a considerable city. It contains some handsome tombs belonging to the reigning family; and its gardens are celebrated for grapes and other fruits. Long. 82. 10. E. Lat. 26. 46. N.

G.

GABARET, a town of France, in Gascony. Population 1000.

GABBIANO, a town of Piedmont, 17 miles W. N. W. Casal. Population 2100.

GABEE, a town of Bohemia, circle of Bunzlau, 40 miles N. Prague. Pop. 1950.

GABON, Rio, a river of Western Africa, between Benin and Cape Lopez Gonsalvo.

GADIE, a river of England, in Hertfordshire, which falls into the Coln.

GADSBURGH, a town of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, on the Radegeest. Pop. 1500.

GADIAZ, a town of Russia, government of Pultava. Population 2300.

GADIE, a small river of Scotland, which falls into the Ury.

GAETA, a town of Naples, Terra di Lavoro, on a small promontory to which it gives name. It is one of the strongest places in the kingdom, and made a gallant resistance to the French in July 1806. It lies along the shore, from the centre of the bay to the point of the promontory. It is a bishop's see, contains a cathedral, 9 churches, and nearly 15,000 inhabitants. The harbour remains nearly as in the times of antiquity; the streets are neatly built, and well paved; the general appearance of the town is lively, and the environs extremely picturesque. 40 miles N.W. Naples. Long. 13. 33. E. Lat. 41. 14. 2. N.

GAFSA, a town in the southern part of the territory of Tunis, 140 miles S.S.W. Tunis.

GADIAN, a town of Hindostan, province of Sind. Long. 67. 56. E. Lat. 24. 46. N.

GAILDORE, a town of Württemberg, 31 miles E. N. E. Stuttgart. Population 1400.

GAILLAC, a town of France, department of the Upper Garonne. Population 1450.

GAINSBOROUGH, a considerable market town of England, county of Lincoln, on the Trent. It is a place of considerable trade. The town consists almost entirely of one long street, parallel with the river, and is clean, and well paved and lighted. The principal public building is the church, which was some years ago rebuilt by the inhabitants, and is a neat and commodious structure. Over the Trent, an elegant stone bridge, of three elliptical arches, was erected in 1791. The town-hall is of brick, with shops under it. It is situated in the market-place, and is occasionally used as an assembly-room. At the north-west end of the town stands an ancient and curious edifice, termed the old hall or palace, said by a vague tradition to have been the palace of John of Gaunt, but now inhabited by private families. The theatre is small, but a very neat modern building. There are in the town several meeting-houses, and some good charity schools. Population 5893. 18 miles N. W. Lincoln.

GAINRY, a small stream of Scotland, which falls into Lochleven, near Kinross.

GALA, a fortified town of Algiers, to the east of Constantina, towards the desert.

GALA WATER, a river of Scotland, which takes its rise in the county of Mid-Lothian, and falls into the Firth of Forth, near Galashiels.

GALASHIELS, a town and parish of Scotland, partly in Shetland, and partly in Selkirk, on the Gala Water. It is irregularly built. It has been long noted for the manufacture of a coarse woollen cloth. Population 1545. 5 miles S. W. Melrose.

GALATON, a village of Scotland, in Fife-shire. Population 929.

GALATZ, or GALACZ, a fortified town of European Turkey, in Moldavia, on a lake near the confluence of the Pruth and the Danube. It has a good harbour, but is an ill built place. Almost all the trade between Moldavia and Constantinople, in cattle, corn, &c. passes through it. Pop. 5000. 54 miles W. Ismail. Long. 28. 24. E. Lat. 45. 24. N.

GALATHA, a town of Hungary, county of Presburg. Population 2300.

GALICIA, an extensive province of the Austrian empire, which formerly constituted a part of Poland. It is bounded N. by the Kingdom of Poland, E. by Russia, S. by Moldavia, Transylvania, and Hungary, and W. by Austrian Silesia. It lies between 18. 35. and 26. 50. E. long. and 47. 50. and 50. 45. N. lat. Its territorial extent is 32,521 square miles, and its population, by recent survey, about 3,750,000, including the adjacent province of the Buckowine. Galicia consists of an immense plain, with hardly any elevation except in the south, where it is intersected by some branches of the Carpathian mountains. It is watered by the Vistula, the Dniester, Dunajec, the San, and the Wisloka, besides a considerable number of smaller streams; but it has no canals, and no extensive lakes, though ponds are numerous throughout the country.

GALICIA, an extensive province, forming the north-west angle of Spain, though belonging, from its position, more naturally to Portugal. It is bounded N. and W. by the Atlantic, S. by Portugal, and E. by the Spanish province of Asturias. It has a territorial extent of 16,746 square miles. Population 1,900,000. It lies between Long. 6. 37. and 9. 13. W. and Lat. 40. 56. and 43. 46. N. Galicia is one of the most mountainous provinces in Spain. The mountains contain copper, lead, and tin; also marcasite, vitriol, sulphur, and white marble: between Corunna and Betanzos is found jasper. Mineral springs abound, and many of them are warm. The few manufactures to be found here are woollens in the province of Lugo, ropes and canvas at Cerunna and Ferrol, and in some places linen; silk is also made in the territory of Montforte de Lemos.

GALITSCH, a town of Russia, government of Kostroma. Population 3200. Long. 42. 43. E. Lat. 59. 11. N.

GALL, ST., a canton of Switzerland, bounded by Upper Austria, and by the cantons of the Grisons, Glarus, Schwytz, and Zurich. Its superficial extent is about 1100 square miles, and its population 134,000, of whom three-fifths are Catholics, and the rest Protestants. The country is watered by the Rhine, the Tamin, the Saar, the Sitter, part of the lakes of Zurich and Constance, and the greater part of that of Wallenstadt.

GALL, ST., a town of Switzerland, the capital of the canton of the same name, on the rivulet of Steinach. It is well built, and surrounded with walls and ditches. The objects of curiosity are the old Benedictine abbey, the academy, the gymnasium (with nine classes), the cabinets of natural history and coins, and the public library. Of the public buildings, the principal church, the council-house, the arsenal, and the hospital, are worthy of notice. It has manufactures of cotton and linen. Population 9000. Long. 9. 21. 37. E. Lat. 47. 25. 41. N.

GALLA, a savage people of Africa, who have occupied all the territories to the south of Abyssinia, and seized on some of the finest provinces of that country.

GALLAM, a considerable town of Western Africa. Long. 10. 50. W. Lat. 14. 33. N.

GALLAPAGOS, or GALLIPAGOS, a number of islands in the Pacific ocean. They lie between Lat. 1. 45. N. and 1. 31. S. and between Long. 89. 2. and 92. W. about 200 miles west of the coast of Peru.

GALLARATO, a town of the Milanese, 31 miles N. W. Milan. Population 3350.

GALLATIN, a county of the United States, in Kentucky, on the Ohio. Population 3307. Slaves 688. Chief town Port William. —3d, Of Illinois, on the Wabash. Population in 1812, 3256. Chief town Shawneetown. —2d, A township in Columbia county, New York, 19 miles S. E. Hudson. Pop. 2471.

GALLATIN'S RIVER, one of the three forks of the Missouri, in North America. It joins the main stream in Long. 110. 5. W. Lat. 45. 16. N.

GALLIA, a county of the United States, in Ohio, on Ohio river, opposite the mouth of the Kenhawa. Population in 1815, 6000. Chief town Gallipolis.

GALLIPOLI, a city of Naples, in the Terra d'Otranto, on the east side of the gulf of Tarento, joined to the continent by a bridge. It is a bishop's see, is well built and fortified, and has a convenient harbour, with fully 9000 inhabitants. It has manufactures of muslin, cotton stockings, and other stuffs, and carries on a considerable trade in these commodities, but more in oil. 224 miles E. by S. Naples.

GALLIPOLI, a large commercial town of European Turkey, province of Romagnia, on the strait of Gallipoli. It has two good harbours. The bazars are very extensive, and furnished with merchandise of every kind. Gallipoli has very few ancient monuments in a good state of preservation. It was taken by the Turks in 1566, and was the first town in Europe that fell into their hands. Population 17,000, of whom 10,000 are Turks, the rest Greeks and Jews. 80 miles S. Adrianople. Long. 26. 37. 30. E. Lat. 40. 25. 33. N.

GALLOWAY, a district of Scotland, comprehending the two counties of Kirkcudbright and Wigton.

GALLOWAY, MOUNT, or, a cape of Scotland, on the south coast of Wigtonshire.

GALLOWAY, NEW, a royal burgh of Scotland, in Kirkcudbright. It joins with Wigton, Stranraer, and Whithorn, in sending a member to parliament. Pop. in 1811, 500: 19 miles N. by W. Kirkcudbright.

GALNIER, ST., a town of France, department of the Loire. Population 2300.

GALORE, or GULER, a village of the Netherlands, 11 miles S. E. Maastricht. Population 1660.

GALSTON, a village and parish of Scotland, in Ayrshire. Population 3449.

GALWAY, a county of Ireland, province of Connaught, bounded W. by the Atlantic ocean, N. by Mayo, N. E. by Roscommon, E. by the river Shannon, which separates it from King's county and Tipperary, and S. by Clare and Galway bay. This county is in length about 82 miles, and 42 broad. It is extremely diversified in its soil and appearance, some parts of it being in a state of nature, while in other parts it is fertile and well cultivated. Galway abounds both in rivers and lakes. Loughcorrib extends about 20 miles in length, and about 11 in its broadest part; Lough Reagh and Lough Coutra are said to be beautiful pieces of water. Its most considerable rivers, after the Shannon, are the Suck and the Blackwater. The Clare, the Galway, and Dunmore, are also of considerable magnitude, and impetuous in their course. The inhabitants of this county are mostly Catholic, the Catholics being to the Protestants in the proportion of 40 or 50 to 1. The county contains 2593 English square miles, 110 parishes, and sends two members to the imperial parliament. In 1798, the number of houses was 28,212, and the inhabitants 142,000.

GALWAY, a town of Ireland, and capital of the above county, situated on a broad and stony river, by which Loughcorrib flows into the sea. It was originally a walled town. It consists of four main streets, running parallel to each other, and intersected by cross streets and lanes, nearly at right angles. The collegiate church in Galway is very large, and is of the Gothic structure. The other public buildings are an exchange, three nunneries, three friaries, commodious barracks for two or three regiments of infantry, a charter school, which is a plain substantial building, two court-houses, and an infirmary, situated at the east entrance into the town. The jail is a massy pile at the west end of the town. A manufactory of coarse cloths is established here, but on a limited scale. The linen manufacture has also been lately introduced. The port is commodious and safe. In 1690 it declared for King James, but next year surrendered to General Ginkle. Population 15,000. 80 miles W. Dublin. Long. 8. 58. W. Lat. 53. 15. N.

GALWAY BAY, a bay of Ireland, on the W. coast, sheltered by the South Arran islands.

GALWAY, a post township of the United States, in Saratoga county, New York, 31 miles from Albany. Population 2705.

GAMBARA, a town of Austrian Italy, 5 miles W. Venice. Population 2030.

GAMBARA, a town of Austrian Italy, with 2000 inhabitants.

GAMBIA, a large river of Western Africa, which falls into the sea in about Long. 13. 30. W. Lat. 16. 30. N.

GAMBIE'S ISLANDS, a group of small islands in the South Pacific ocean. Long. 225. E. Lat. 23. 12. S.

GAMSHURT, a village of Germany, in Baden, 12 miles E. N. E. Strasburg. Pop. 1100.

GAS, a town of France, 4 miles S. Pau. Population 2600.

GASA, or GHANA, a city of Central Africa, on the Niger, 100 miles S. E. Cassina.

GARDENHEIM, a town of Brunswick, 33 miles S. W. Brunswick. Pop. 2000.

GARDIA, a town of Spain, in Valencia; at the mouth of the Alcoy. It has a trade in wine, silk, hemp, and flax. Population 6300. 20 miles S. Valencia.

GANDICOTTA, called also WANDICOTTA, a fortress of Hindostan. Long. 70. 29. E. Lat. 14. 45. N.

GANGES, called by the natives of India Ganga, signifying by pre-eminence the River. Its source is in a small stream from under a mass of perpetual snow, accumulated on the southern side of the lofty Himalaya mountains, which separate Tartary from India, between the 31st and 32d degrees of N. lat., and 76th and 79th of E. long. It is joined in Lat. 30. 9. by the Alenandra river. These united streams form the Ganges, which after their junction becomes from 80 to 100 yards wide. In its farther course it receives the addition of innumerable tributary rivers. At Sooty, in Lat. 24. 26. it divides, and the smaller branch, after passing Calcutta, disembogues at Nagor. The larger branch continues its tortuous course under the name of Puddah, till joined by the mighty Brahmapootra; shortly after which it pours its ample torrents into the ocean. Many islands are formed from the sediment deposited by this vast body of water; and the sand or mud banks extend nearly a degree into the sea, rendering the entrance to the river exceedingly difficult and dangerous. The Ganges is computed to be 1500 miles in length, and at 500 miles from its mouth is, during the rainy season, 4 miles broad and 60 feet deep. The Ganges, like the Nile, has a very wide Delta, extending from west to east 200 miles, intersected by innumerable branches, through which the overflowing waters of the river are conveyed, during the inundations, to the ocean.

GANGES, a town of France, in Lower Languedoc, 33 miles W. Nismes. Pop. 3600.

GANJAM, a town and seaport of Hindostan, and capital of a district of the same name. Long. 85. 19. E. Lat. 19. 23. N.

GANNAT, a town of France, department of the Allier, 22 miles N. Clermont. Pop. 4100.

GAP, a town of France, capital of the department of the Upper Alps. It is a mean ill built place, with narrow streets and low crowded houses. It has a few manufactures. Population 8000. 56 miles S. by E. Grenoble.

GARD, a department of France, containing part of Languedoc, and surrounded by the Mediterranean and the departments of the Lozere, the Ardèche, the Rhone, the Herault, and the Aveyron. Pop. 322,000.

GARD, or GARDON, a river of France, in Lower Languedoc, which enters the Rhone.

GARDA, a lake of Austrian Italy, lying between Tyrol and the governments of Venice and Milan. It is about 35 miles in length, and 14 in its greatest breadth; the depth varies from 16 to 40 feet where it is narrowest, and from 100 to 300 where widest.

GARDA, a small town of Austrian Italy, in the Veronese, on the lake to which it gives name. 30 miles N. Mantua.

GARDANE, a town of France, in Provence, 9 miles N. N. E. Marseilles. Pop. 2300.

GARDELEBEN, a town of the Old Mark of Brandenburg, on the Mulde, 30 miles N. Magdeburg. Population 3200.

GARDENSTON, a village of Scotland, in the county of Banff, 6 miles E. Banff.

GARDNER, a post township of the United States, in Kennebeck county, Maine, on Kennebeck river, opposite Pittstown, 6 miles S. Augusta. Population 1020.

GARDNER'S BAY, a large bay of the United States, at the east end of Long Island, New York. Long. 72. 15. W. Lat. 41. 3. N.

GARDNER'S ISLAND, or ISLE OF WIGHT, at the east end of Long Island, in the state of New York.

GARGNANO, a town of Austrian Italy, on the lake of Garda, 24 miles N. E. Brescia. Population 3400.

GARGRAVE, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 972.

GARGHNSOCK, a parish and village of Scotland, in Stirlingshire. Pop. 862.

GARLIFSTON, a village of Scotland, in Wigtownshire.

GARLIN, a town of France, department of the Lower Pyrenees. Population 1000.

GARMOUTH, a village of Scotland, county of Moray, at the mouth of the Spey.

GARNER and GARRAN, two rivers of England, in Herefordshire.

GARNOCK, a river of Scotland, in Ayrshire, which abounds in trout and salmon.

GARONNE, one of the largest rivers of France. It rises among the Pyrenees, and passing by Bourdeaux, falls into the Atlantic, 47 miles below, by two mouths.

GARONNE, UPPER, a department in the south-west of France, consisting of part of Languedoc and Gascony, and bounded S. by Spain, and W. by the department of the Upper Pyrenees. It has a territorial extent of 2840 square miles, with a population of 367,500. The southern part, lying among the Pyrenees, is mountainous; the rest consists of hills of less magnitude, with small plains and extensive vallies.

GARRARD, a county of the United States, in Kentucky, on the S. side of the Kentucky. Pop. 9160. Slaves 2063. Chief town Lancaster.

GARRY, a river of Scotland, county of Perth, which joins the Tummel.

GASDALE, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 679.

GARSTANG, a township of England, county of Lancaster, 223 miles N. W. London. Population 936.

GARSTON, a township of England, in Lancashire, on the Mersey. Population 874.

GARVALD, a pleasantly situated village of Scotland, in a parish of the same name, in Haddingtonshire, with 797 inhabitants.

GAUVIE, a river of Scotland, in Ross-shire, which joins the Croma.

GARVOCK, a parish of Scotland, county of Kincardine. Population 443.

GASCONADE, a river of North America, which joins the Missouri from the north, 100 miles from its confluence with the Mississippi.

GASCONY, an extensive country in the south-west of France, which, before the revolution, was one of the great provinces administered by an intendant; but since the revolution it forms the departments of the Upper Pyrenees, the Gers, the Landes, and part of those of the Lower Pyrenees, the Upper Garonne, and the Lot and Garonne.

GASPAR STRAIT, a passage in the Eastern seas, between the island of Banca and that of Billiton.—There is an island of the same name in the above strait.

GASPE, a bay of the district of Gaspé, in the gulf of St Lawrence, lying between Cape Gaspé and White Head.

GASPE, a district of Lower Canada, on the south side of the St Lawrence, which lies between 64. and 66. 36. W. long. and between 47. 20. and 49. 10. N. lat.

GASSINO, a town of Piedmont, with 2709 inhabitants. 9 miles E. Turin.

GASTEL, a village of the Netherlands, in North Brabant. Population 1600.

GATA CAPE, a promontory of Spain, on the coast of Granada. Long. 2. 22. W. Lat. 36. 43. N.

GATEHOUSE OF FLEET, a neat and flourishing village of Scotland, in Kirkcudbright, on the Aiket, 3 miles from its entrance into Wigtown bay, 14 miles W. by S. Castle Douglas.

GATES, a county of the United States, in North Carolina, bordering on Virginia. Population 5696. Slaves 2790. Chief town Hertford. At the court-house is a post-office.

GATESHEAD, a town of England, in the county of Durham, forming a suburb to Newcastle, with which it is connected by a bridge over the Tyne. The town consists chiefly of one long street, running along a steep descent towards the bridge, where it terminates. The church is a large, ancient, and handsome building, with a lofty tower; and there is a free school for grammar, arithmetic, and navigation. Pop. of the parish 11,767.

GATTINARA, a neat town of Piedmont, near the Sesia. Population 3650.

GATTON, a borough of England, in Surrey. It sends members to parliament. Population 135.

GATTONSIDE, a village of Scotland, in the county of Roxburgh, on the Tweed.

GAVERDO, a town of Austrian Italy, 10 miles N. E. Brescia. Pop. 2000.

GAUDENS, St., a town of France, 44 miles S. S. W. Toulouse. Population 4200.

GAVE is the general name of the rivers in the French province of Bearn, which have their source in the Pyrenees.

GAVRAY, a town of Normandy, department of La Manche. Population 1450.

GAVER, a town of the Netherlands, 9 miles S. Ghent.

GAURITZ, a very rapid river in the colony of the Cape of Good Hope, which falls into the ocean.

GAYAH, a town of Hindostan, province of Bahar, one of the most celebrated places of Hindoo pilgrimage. Long. 63. 5. E. Lat. 24. 49. N.

GALYRON, the capital of a district of the same name in Hindostan. Long. 63. 33. E. Lat. 25. 35. N.

GAUCOA, a county of the United States, in Ohio, on Lake Erie, at the mouth of Grand river. Population in 1815, 3000. Chief town Charlton.

GERESLE, a town of Saxony, 8 miles N. N. W. Erfurt. Population 1300.

GERWEILE, a town of France, in Upper Alsace, 14 miles S. by W. Colmar. Pop. 2550.

GERLING, a township and parish of England, county of Nottingham. Pop. 2017.

GERNEY, a township and parish of England, in Lincolnshire. Population 1700.

GESENHORN, a village of Saxony, in Upper Lusatia. Population 4000.

GERSH, a territory and very small village of Abyssinia.

GETLE, or GJAWLE, a town of Sweden, on the gulf of Bothnia. The river Gelle flows through the middle of the town, and forms a good harbour. Pop. 5000. 60 miles N. Upsal. Long. 17. 7. 27. E. Lat. 60. 39. 30. N.

GEFEBORG, a government of Sweden, between Dukerlia and West Norrland. Population 90,000.

GELL, a small river which rises in the Tyrol, and joins the Drave, in Carinthia.

GEILSKIRCHEN, a town of the Prussian states, 8 miles N. W. Juliers. Pop. 1800.

GEISENHAIN, a town of Nassau, 17 miles W. Mentz. Population 1200.

GEILINGEN, a town of Wirtemberg, 12 miles W. Ulm. Population 1650.

GEISPOUZENS, a village of France, 6 miles S. by W. Strasburg. Pop. 2100.

GEISAMAR, a walled town of Flesse-Cassel. Population 2400.

GETTHAY, a town of Saxony, 40 miles W. Dresden. Population 1700.

GEELDERLAND, a large province of the Netherlands, bounded on its respective frontier lines by Overysel, Westphalia, North Brabant, Holland, and Utrecht. Its extent is about 2020 square miles; its population 243,000. The surface is in general level, but not so flat as the maritime part of the Netherlands. The province is watered by the Rhine, the Waal, the Yssel, the Leck, and the Maese; it has also several large canals.

GELDEREN, a town of the Prussian states, 30 miles N. N. W. Dusseldorf. Pop. 1550.

GELDORP, a town of the Netherlands, in North Brabant. Population 1100.

GELMEYDEN, a town of the Netherlands, province of Overijssel. Population 900.

GELNHAUSEN, a small town of Hesse-Cassel, 12 miles E. Hanau. Pop. 2650.

GEMAPPE, a village of the Netherlands, in Hainault, near Juddt. Pop. 2300.

GEMARKE, a town of the Prussian states. It has manufactures of linen, cotton, silk, and woollen. Population 5000. 20 miles S. E. Dusseldorf.

GEMBLOURS, a town of the Netherlands, in South Brabant, 9 miles N. W. Namur. Population 1860.

GEMENOS, a town of France, department of the Mouth of the Rhone. Pop. 1560.

GEMENT, a village of North Brabant. It has manufactures of fine Dutch linen. Population 4000.

GEMIGNANO, ST., a town of Tuscany, 20 miles S. W. Florence. Population 2000.

GEMISHKHANA, a town of Asia Minor, on the borders of Armenia, 30 miles S. Trebizond. Population 7000.

GEATONA, a town of the Austrian states, 24 miles N. W. Friuli. Population 2000.

GEHMUND, a place of considerable antiquity, 24 miles E. Stuttgart. Population 5500.—The name also of a small town of Carinthia, with extensive iron works, 32 miles N. W. Clagenfurt; of another, 41 miles W. N. W. Coblenz; and a fourth, 60 miles N. W. Vienna.

GEHMUND, GEORGES, PETTES, and FREDERICKS, three villages of the Bavarian states, in the circle of the Upper Danube, district of Pleinfeld, on the Rednitz, 2 miles from Roth.

GEHMUNDEN, a town of Hesse-Cassel, on the Wohra. Population 1150.—Another of the grand duchy of the Lower Rhine. Population 1100.—A third, 37 miles E. Frankfurt. Population 1200.

GEHMUNDEN, a town of Upper Austria, on the lake and river Traun, 108 miles W. S. W. Vienna. Pop. 1800.

GENAP, a town of the Netherlands, on the Dyle. Population 1200.

GENDERLINGEN, a large village of the Netherlands, with 2800 inhabitants.

GENESSEE, a county of the United States, in New York, on the west side of Genesee river, bounded N. by Lake Ontario, E. by Genesee river, which separates it from Ontario county, S. by Allegany and Catawagus counties, and W. by Niagara county. Population 12,644. Chief town Batavia.

GENESSEE, a river of the United States, which rises in Pennsylvania, and flowing through New York, enters Lake Ontario.

There are several falls on it.

GENEST LE MALIN-AUT, ST., a town of France, in the Lyonnaise. Population 2000.

GENEVA, a city of Switzerland, and the capital of a small canton, at the western extremity of the lake of the same name, on the confines of France, Switzerland, and Savoy. The Rhone divides it into three parts, called the city, the little town or quarter of St Gervais, and the island, which is considered as a part of the latter. The streets, though clean, are irregular, the principal street being incumbered with a row of shops on each side, between the carriage way and the foot pavement. The latter is wide, and protected by a pent-house, supported by wooden pillars, with arcades as high as the houses. This is extremely convenient for foot passengers, but gives the street a gloomy appearance. The upper town is much more attractive, not only commanding magnificent views, but containing a number of elegant houses. The public buildings of Geneva are the town-hall, the arsenal, the college, the public library, containing 50,000 volumes, the hospital, the theatre, and the cathedral. The last stands in the upper town, contains several monuments of persons of note in history; and though an irregular, is an interesting edifice. Nothing can be more agreeable than the environs of Geneva, or more magnificent than the prospect which it enjoys. Around it are numbers of very fine and interesting walks in every direction. Within the city, the principal promenades are the Treille, a sort of terrace, the bastions, and the Place de St Anthoine, which commands an extensive view of the lake, including Nyon Morges and Copet, the seat of Neckar, and of Madame de Staël. The lake, though everywhere magnificent, is more particularly so in this quarter. Mont Blanc forms here a striking feature in every landscape. At a little distance to the west of Geneva is Ferney, the residence of Voltaire. The Genevese carry on some manufactures of woollen, muslin, chintz, silk, and porcelain; but their great occupation is watch-making, which employs nearly 7000 individuals. Education has always been conducted here with the greatest care; and for this purpose there is a public school and a university. Population 25,000. 70 miles N. E. Lyons. Long. 6. 9. 30. E. Lat. 46. 12. 7. N.

GENEVA, a post village of the United States, in Seneca, Ontario county, New York, on the west side of Seneca Lake, 16 miles E. Canandaigua. It enjoys an extensive trade.

GENEVA, LAKE OF, a celebrated lake of Switzerland, extending in the form of a crescent between that country and Savoy, and occupying a part of the great valley which separates the Alps from the Jura ridge. Its length along the north or Swiss shore is 50 miles; on the side of Savoy 42; its greatest breadth 10; its greatest depth about 1000 feet.

GENEVIEVE, a town of the United States, in a district of the Missouri of the same name, on the little river Gouberie, 1 mile from the Mississippi. Pop. 1400. Lat. 37. 51. N.

GENEVIEVE, St., a town of France, department of the Aveyron. Population 1250.

GENEVIEVE Bay, a bay on the west coast of Newfoundland, in the straits of Belleisle.

GENVOIS, a province belonging not to Geneva, but to Savoy. Pop. above 70,000.

GENGENACH, a town of Germany, 13 miles S. E. Strasburg. Population 1800.

GENGOV LE ROYAL, St., a town of France, in Burgundy. Population 1600.

GENIES DE RIVEDOLT, St., a town of France, department of the Aveyron. Population 3350.

GENIS-LAVAL, St., a town of France, 4 miles S. Lyons. Population 2400.

GENITS, a town of France, department of the Dordogne. Population 1400.

GENNES, a town of France, on the Loire, 9 miles W. N. W. Saumur. Pop. 1500.

GENOA, a maritime city in the north-west of Italy, once a celebrated republic, now the capital of a province of the Sardinian states. It is situated at the northern point of the part of the Mediterranean called the gulf of Genoa, and is inclosed by a double wall. The houses are well built; but the streets are so narrow and irregular, that in many places it is almost impossible to pass them in a carriage, and the common vehicle in use for visits is the sedan chair. Three streets, however, the Strada Balbi, the Strada Nuova, and the Strada Nuovissima, form striking exceptions; they are regular, spacious, and the more impressive to a stranger, from following each other in succession. It is in these streets that are to be found the residences, or, as they are termed, palaces of the great families; buildings which display the attractions, not only of architecture, but of painting and sculpture. Genoa contains a number of public edifices. The most remarkable are the Palazzo della Signora, the ancient residence of the doge, and the place of meeting of the public bodies. The arsenal in its neighbourhood contains a number of military relics and trophies. Before the French revolution, the number of churches was 32, and of religious houses 70. Several of the former are masterpieces of architecture; but they are too richly ornamented for places of worship. The church called Dell' Annunziata, and the cathedral, are the most conspicuous. The elegant church of Carignano was built at the expence of a citizen of the name of Sauli; his grandson erected a monument of equal magnificence, the bridge of the same name, which is of great height, connecting two hills, and forming one of the favourite walks of the Venetians. The theatres are three in number. The great hospital for the sick and infirm, and the Albergo del Poveri, or poor-house, are magnificent buildings. The harbour of Genoa is in the form of a semicircle, whose diameter is about 1000 fathoms. It is inclosed by two strong moles, the opening between which is 350 fathoms in width; but the entrance is difficult. Genoa exports the products of the adjacent country, such as rice and fruit; and in particular olive oil, to a great annual value; also her own manufactures, viz. silks, damasks, and velvets; for the last, Genoa has long been celebrated. Of imports, the chief articles are corn from Sicily, and occasionally from Barbary; raw silk from Sicily, iron and naval stores from the Baltic, linen and sail-cloth from Germany, tin, lead, hardware, and cottons from England. To these are to be added wool from Spain, wax and cotton from the Levant, and from the United States different articles of colonial produce. Fish from Newfoundland is here, as in other Catholic cities, an import of considerable amount. The Sardinian government has recently (in 1817) increased greatly the import duties; and woollens and cottons are now taxed, not by measure, but by weight; the duty on iron is also much increased. Genoa is the see of an archbishop. The city possesses an university, an academy, and a public library; it has also a navigation school, and a learned society of very old standing. It possesses a number of ingenious and skilful workmen, such as goldsmiths and coral workers; also manufacturers of vases and elegant cups. The population of Genoa, though not so numerous as formerly, is still considerable, being about 76,000. 77 miles S. E. Turin. Long. 8. 54. E. Lat. 44. 25. N.

GENOA, THE TERRITORY OF, now a province of the Sardinian states, is a long track extending along the shores of the gulf of Genoa, and covering a superficial extent of 6800 square miles. It corresponds nearly to the Upper Liguria of the Romans, and is traversed by the Appennines. Pop. 530,000.

GENOA, a post township of the United States, in Cayuga county, New York, on Cayuga Lake, 25 miles S. Auburn. Pop. 5425.

GENOLA, a town of Piedmont, between Coni and Savigliano.

GENOLHAC, a town of France, in Languedoc. Population 1400.

GENOUX, a town of France, department of the Cher. Population 1000.

GENSAU, a town of France, department of the Gironde. Population 2800.

GERTHIN, a town of the Prussian states, 30 miles N. E. Magdeburg. Pop. 1700.

GENTILLY, a town of France, 4 miles S. Paris. Population 4500.

GELOIRE, St., a town of France, 18 miles N. W. Grenoble. Population 3450.

GEORG, St., a town of Hungary, 7 miles N. N. E. Presburg. Population 2200.

GEORGE, a village of Scotland, in Perthshire, 30 miles N. W. Perth.

GEORGE, St., a town and parish of England, in Gloucester, 2 miles E. Bristol.

GEORGE, St., in THE EAST, a parish of England, in Middlesex. Population 32,520.

GEORGE, St., a town of the Great military frontiers. Population 1500.

GEORGE, St., the largest of the Bermuda lands, about 15 miles long. Its capital is of the same name. It has a handsome church, a library, and town-house. Long. 63. 30. W. Lat. 32. 45. N.

GEORGE, St., a small river of Lower Canada, which falls into the Assumption.

GEORGE, St., a cape and islands nearly opposite to the river Appalachicola, on the coast of East Florida. Lat. of the cape, 29. 38. N.

GEORGE'S, St., the capital of the island of Grenada, in the West Indies. It possesses one of the best harbours in the West Indies. It is built chiefly of brick; and is divided by a ridge, which running into the sea, forms on one side the carenage, on the other the bay; thus there is the Bay-town, which boasts a handsome square and market; and the Carenage-town, wherein the principal merchants reside. Long. 61. 31. W. Lat. 12. 4. N.

GEORGE'S, St., a post township of the United States, in New Castle county, Delaware. Pop. of St George's hundred, 2880.

GEORGE'S, St., a river of the United States, in St Mary's county, Maryland, which runs into the Potomac, between Pinev point and St Mary's river. Opposite its mouth is the island of St George.

GEORGE'S BANK, St., a fishing bank off the coast of Massachusetts, in the United States. It extends between Lat. 41. 15. and 42. 22. N. and between Long. 67. 50. and 68. 40. W.

GEORGE'S CHANNEL, St., that part of the Atlantic ocean which is situated between Ireland and Wales.

GEORGE'S KEY, St., a small island in the bay of Honduras.

GEORGE, LAKE, in the state of New York, and county of Washington, about 33 miles long, and nearly 2 broad, discharges itself into Lake Champlain, at Ticonderoga.

GEORGEN AM SEE, St., a town of the Bavarian states. Population 1800. 1/2 mile N. N. E. Bayreuth, of which it may be considered as a suburb.

GEORGENBURG, a town of Russia, government of Wilna, 35 miles E. Tilsit.

GEORGES, St., a town of France, 6 miles N. E. Poitiers. Population 1650.

GEORGES SUR LOIRE, St., a town of France, in Anjou. Population 2350.

GEORGES DU TRIEL, St., a town of France, in Normandy. Population 1530.

GEORGES DE SEPT VOTES, St., a town of France, on the Loire. Population 2320.

GEORGETOWN, the capital of Pooloo Pomang, or Prince of Wales island. The town is regularly laid out, and is yearly increasing in size. Long. 160. 19. E. Lat. 5. 25. N.

GEORGETOWN, a district of the United States, in South Carolina. Population 15,679. Slaves 12,007.—2d. A township in Lincoln county, Maine, on the east side of the Kennebec, 15 miles S. W. Wiscasset. Pop. 1998.—3d. A post township and port of entry in the district of Columbia, 3 miles W. of the capital in Washington. Population 4940. Long. 77. 1. W. Lat. 38. 52. N.—4th, Capital of Georgetown district, South Carolina. 60 miles N. N. E. Charleston. Pop. about 2000.

GEORGIA, a considerable country of Asia, situated between the Black sea and the Caspian, to the north of Armenia, and forming the frontier between Russia and Persia. It combines the mountainous character of the Caucasian region with that of the fertile plains of Persia. It thus unites the products both of tropical and temperate climates. Georgia originally included nearly the whole southern declivity of the Caucasus, extending from the Black sea to the Caspian sea. Recently the name was confined to that part of the region which was subjected to Persia; and Mingrelia, Imneretia, and Gurjel were detached from it. This country is now divided into four provinces, called Cartvel, Kaketi, or Kacheti, Kisk, called sometimes Sonchet, and Georgian Armenia. The beauty of the females, who in this respect rival those of Circassia, has only made them eagerly sought after to fill the seraglios of the east. The inhabitants consist chiefly of Christians of the Greek communion, to which are added Jews, Tartars, Armenians, and Russians. The principal rivers are the Kur and the Araxes, which pour their united streams into the Caspian. The only place deserving the name of a city is Tbilis, the capital. Georgia, lying between Russia and Persia, was long the field of battle between these two powers, and was ravaged by their contests. It has now fallen under the dominion of Russia.

GEORGIA, one of the United States of North America, situated between 30. 37. and 35. N. lat. and between 80. 0. and 91. 0. W. long.; being about 300 miles in length from N. to S., and on an average 250 in breadth. It is bounded N. by North Carolina and Tennessee, N. E. by South Carolina, S. by Florida, E. by the Atlantic ocean, and W. by West Florida and the Alabama territory. It is divided into the two districts of Upper and Lower Georgia, which are subdivided into 40 counties. The principal rivers are the Savannah, the Ogeechee, the Canche, and the Altamaha. The eastern part of the state of Georgia, between the mountains and the ocean, and the rivers Savannah and St Mary's, a track of country more than 120 miles from N. to S., and from 50 to 80 E. and W., is entirely level, without a hill or a stone. At the distance of about 40 or 50 miles from the coast, the ridges gradually rise one above another into hills, and the hills successively increase in height, until they finally terminate in mountains. The vast chain of the Allegany mountains terminates in Georgia, 60 miles south of its northern frontier. From the foot of this ridge spreads a wide extended plain of the richest soil, and in a latitude and climate favourably adapted for most of the productions of the south of Europe and of the East Indies. The soil of the country is various. The most of the rice lands lie on rivers, which, as far as the tide flows, are called tide lands, or on creeks and particular branches of water, flowing in some deeper or lower parts of the lands, which are called inland swamps, and extend back in the country from 1½ to 25 miles. The intermediate lands, between these creeks and rivers, are of an inferior quality. Here and there are interspersed oak and hickory ridges, which are of a better soil. The chief articles of export from this state are cotton, which has now become the great staple of the state; rice, tobacco, indigo, sago, lumber of various kinds, naval stores, leather, deer skins, shake rook, myrtle, bees' wax, corn, and live stock. The exports are West India goods, teas, wines, various articles of clothing, and dry goods of all kinds. From the southern states are imported cheese, fish, potatoes, apples, cyder, &c. The annual value of the exports is above 1,200,000. In 1763, they amounted only to 1,27,000. Georgia was settled in the year 1733, by 115 adventurers, under the conduct of General Oglethorpe; and after struggling for about 30 years with the usual obstacle of Indian hostility, began at last to flourish, and has ever since increased. Population in different years:—

1790, 82,518, of whom 29,264 are slaves.
1800, 162,680, of whom 59,699 are slaves.
1810, 252,433, of whom 105,218 are slaves.

GEORGIA, NEW, or SOUTH GEORGIA, an island in the South Atlantic ocean, about 90 miles in length, and 30 in breadth. Long. 37. W. Lat. 54. 30. S.

GEORGIO MAGGIORE, St, an island in the Adriatic, near Venice.

GEORGSWALD, OLD, a town of Bohemia, circle of Leutmeritz. Population 2500.

GER, a town of Normandy, department of La Manche. Population 2500.

GERA, a walled town of Saxony, on the White Elster. The streets are straight and regular. It has considerable manufactures, partly in woollen, partly in cotton cloths; and other articles, such as hats and leather. Population 7500. 30 miles S. S. W. Leipzig.

GERAN LE PUY, St, a small town of France, department of the Allier. Pop. 1600.

GERARDMER, a town of France, in Lorraine. Population 2300.

GERAU, a town of Hesse-Darmstadt, 8 miles W. N. W. Darmstadt. Pop. 1450.

GERBEVILLE, a town of France, in Lorraine, 9 miles S. Luneville. Pop. 2100.

GERBSTADT, a town of the Prussian states, 36 miles S. Magdeburg. Population 2400.

GERDAUX, a town of East Prussia, on the Omer, 30 miles S. E. Königsberg. Pop. 1700.

GERENNA, a town of Spain, 12 miles N. N. W. Seville.

GERONG, a city, and formerly the capital, of Assam, on the Dekhow river, a tributary of the Brahmapootra; now fallen to decay; Long. 94. 40. E. Lat. 25. 55. N.

GERGUREWZ, a town of Slavopia. Population 2000.

GERINA, a town of Cyprus, on the northern coast. The walls are lofty, and defended by four guns. The harbour is small, and has been nearly filled up by the falling of the wall. Population 1500 families. 16 miles N. N. W. Nicosia.

GERINGSWALDA, a town of Saxony, 25 miles S. S. E. Leipzig. Population 1500.

GERMAIN DE BELAIR, St, a town of France, department of the Lot. Pop. 1700.

GERMAIN DU BOIS, St, a town of France, in Burgundy. Population 1600.

GERMAIN DE BOURCEIL, St, a town of France, department of the Indre and Loire. Population 2800.

GERMAIN, St, a town of France, 16 miles S. S. E. Limoges. Population 2050.

GERMAIN DES FOSSES, St, a town of France, on the Allier. Population 1600.

GERMAIN L'HERMITE, St, a town of France, in Auvergne. Population 1750.

GERMAIN LAMBRON, St, a town of France, on the Allier. Population 1650.

GERMAIN LAVAL, St, a town of France, with 1600 inhabitants.

GERMAIN-EN-LAYE, St, a well built town of France, on the Seine, 12 miles N. W. Paris. The houses are in general good, the streets wide, regular, and well paved. Here are also several handsome squares; but the object of greatest interest to the traveller is the magnificent terrace on the side of the river, upwards of two miles long, and affording a delightful view, of nearly 15 miles in circuit. The ancient castle, built by Charles V. of France, is a spacious but heavy building, chiefly of brick. Population 9000.

GERMAIN'S, St, a borough and parish of England, county of Cornwall. The inhabitants are principally supported by fishing. The cathedral, now the parish church, is a fine ancient building. The town sends two members to parliament, chosen by 20 voters. Pop. of parish, 2404. 52 miles S. W. Exeter.

GERMAN, a township of the United States, in Chenango county, New York, 15 miles W. Norwich, 115 W. Albany. Pop. 1519.—2d, Of Fayette county, Pennsylvania. Population 2079.

GERMAN OCEAN, or NORTH SEA, an extensive sea on the north-west coast of Europe, bounded S. by the straits of Calais, N. by the Orkney and Shetland islands.

GERMANO, St, a town of Naples, in the Terra di Lavoro, 48 miles N. N. W. Naples. Population 5000.

GERMANO, St, a town of Piedmont. Population 2000. 4 miles E. Santhia.

GERMANTOWN, a township of the United States, in Columbia county, New York, on Hudson river, 12 miles below Hudson. It contains two churches, one for Lutherans, and one for Presbyterians. Population 650.—2d, In Philadelphia county, Pennsylvania, 6 miles N. Philadelphia. Population 4243.—The name of several other townships.

GERMANY, a great country of Europe, bounded N. by Denmark and the Baltic, E. by Poland, S. by Hungary and Italy, W. by Switzerland, France, and the Netherlands,

It is considerably greater in extent than France, or even Spain, being about 650 miles from N. to S. and 600 from E. to W.; its superficial extent about 220,000 square miles. Germany is divided by very marked outlines, into two great portions, the northern and southern. The line of separation is along the great line of mountains, beginning with the Westerwald in Westphalia, and traversing Hesse-Cassel, the south of Saxony and Silesia, until it ends in the Carpathians, on the frontiers of Poland and Hungary. This is called the Sudetic chain. Almost all the country to the north of this long range is flat, and the rivers all hold a northerly course, without meeting any formidable impediment, until they reach the level of the German ocean or Baltic. Southern Germany is much more diversified, consisting in part of extensive plains, but traversed also by vast ranges of mountains. It is computed that there are no less than 60 navigable rivers, while six, viz. the Danube, the Rhine, the Main, the Weser, the Elbe, and the Oder, rank among the noblest and largest in Europe. Lakes are not numerous in Germany. On the other hand, it contains upwards of 1000 mineral springs and baths. The latitude of the north of Germany being similar to that of Britain, there prevails a considerable resemblance of natural products. This applies to wheat, barley, oats, and other kinds of corn; to flax, madder, rapeseed, and hops. But agriculture is very backward, particularly in the south. Germany contains a number of extensive forests; and in these are found wolves, wildboars, lynxes, &c. Wine, though less generally made in Germany than in France, is very good in particular districts. Iron, copper, tin, lead, silver, cobalt, bismuth, and quicksilver, are all produced in abundance. Bavaria has not only mines of metal, but is, as well as the duchy of Salzburg, very rich in salt mines. The mines of Idria, in Carniola, yield annually 5000 cwt. of quicksilver. Fullers' earth and porcelain clay are also found. Marble is seen in various parts of Germany: coal also is wrought in Westphalia, Saxony, and other provinces. In manufactures no great progress has been made. Linen, however, is manufactured in Silesia, Saxony, and Westphalia, not only for home consumption, but for export to the south of Europe, and to America. Cotton manufactures are of recent introduction; and since the opening of the continent to the manufactures of Britain, they have not flourished. Great ingenuity is displayed in lesser departments, as in the articles of wood, ivory, and steel, made at Nuremberg; toys and trinkets at Berchtesgaden, &c. The great imports of Germany are colonial produce from America and the East Indies; wine from France and Spain; cotton and hardware from England. The chief trading cities are Vienna, Hamburg, Lubeck, Bremen, Frankfurt on the Main, Breslau, Leipzig, Augsburg, Nuremberg; to these are to be added, in the second class, Stralsund and Stettin on the Baltic, and in the interior, Magdeburg, Ulm, and Naumburg. The inhabitants of the whole empire somewhat exceed 30 millions. The forms of religion acknowledged by law are the Catholic, the Lutheran, and the Calvinist. The universities of Germany, formerly 20 in number, are at present 27, of which 13 are Protestant, and two partly Catholic and partly Protestant. The total number of students at these seminaries is between 8000 and 9000. Gottingen is the most numerous attended, having above a tenth of the whole. The Germans can boast a long list of useful writers in mathematics, astronomy, chemistry, and mechanics, and in literature and poetry. Political economy has of late been extensively studied among them. In the fine arts the Germans have made considerable progress. Engraving is carried in some cities to a considerable length; painting, particularly of late, has been successfully cultivated; but their greatest progress is in music. The empire of Germany is a federal state, on a very large scale; it consisted formerly of above 300 secular and ecclesiastical princes, each independent in the administration of his own territory, but subject to the emperor as head of the empire, and to certain laws enacted at different times for the common advantage. Besides these, there were a number of free towns, and a class of nobles chiefly in Franconia, Suabia, and the vicinity of the Rhine, who, without enjoying the title of princes, acknowledged no superior but the emperor. The constitution of this great body was extremely complicated; the emperor was at first chosen by the princes at large; in course of time the princes deputed their votes to certain representatives called electors; and the latter eventually took on themselves the nomination, without the interference of their constituents. This ancient constitution of the empire underwent great changes in the course of the revolutionary wars. The great successes of the French arms in Germany, gave them an ascendancy, which they used in breaking down the power of the emperor, and at last in rearing up, in the confederation of the Rhine, an independent federative power, in opposition to the emperor of Austria, who formally renounced his station and character of head of the Germanic empire. The great successes of the allied powers, in their later contests with France, gave them back the ascendancy which they had lost by the chances of war; and the constitution and territory of Germany was subjected, in consequence, to new alterations. The total number of votes in the Germanic diet is 69; but as it would be improper to give the smaller states an equal voice with the larger, a further repartition of votes has been agreed on, and the members of the empire are commonly reckoned 17, as follows:

1. Austria.
2. Prussia.

8. Bavaria.
4. Saxony, kingdom (not the duchies)
5. Hanover.
6. Württemberg.
7. Baden.
8. The electorate of Hesse.
9. The grand duchy of Hesse.
10. Denmark for Holstein and Lauenburg.
11. The Netherlands for Luxemburg.
12. The grand ducal and the ducal houses of Saxony.
13. Brunswick and Nassau.
14. Mecklenburg-Schwerin and Strelitz.
15. Oldenburg, Anhalt, and Schwartzburg.
16. Hohenzollern, Lichtenstein, Reuss, Schaumburg-Lippe, Lippe, and Waldeck.
17. The free towns of Lübeck, Frankfurt, Bremen, and Hamburg.

GERMERSHEIM, a town of the Bavarian circle of the Rhine, 8 miles S. Mannheim. Population 1600.

GERMRODA, a town of Germany, 35 miles W. Dessau. Population 1600.

GERNSHEIM, a town of Hesse-Darmstadt, 18 miles S. S. E. Mentz. Population 2250.

GERNSPACH, a town of Baden, 4 miles E. Baden. Population 1650.

GEROLSHOFEN, a town of Germany, in Franconia. Population 1800.

GERONA, a strong town of Spain, in Catalonia, at the confluence of the Onchar and the Ter, the latter of which flows through the town. It is built in the form of a triangle, on the slope and at the foot of a steep mountain. It is surrounded with good walls, flanked with fortifications, and covered by two forts erected on the mountain. Besides these, it has five fortified buildings. The streets are narrow and winding; the houses tolerably good. It has a seminary of education on a large scale. The cathedral is rich. It was taken by the French in 1809. Population 14,000. 40 miles S. Perpignan.

GERRE, a town of Sennaar, 150 miles N. N. E. Sednaar.

GERAS, a department in the south-west of France, in Gascony, lying between the departments of the Upper Garonne and the Landes. It is wholly inland, and has an extent of 2630 square miles. Population 280,500.

GERAS, a river of Gascony, which runs into the Garonne.

GERSAU, a town in the Swiss canton of Schwitz, on the lake of Lucerne. Pop. 1500.

GERSTETTEN, a village of Württemberg, department of the Kocken. Population 1300.

GERSTADT, a strongly fortified town of the Netherlands, in North Brabant. It has a harbour, and above 1300 inhabitants.

7 miles N. E. Breda.

GERVAIS, St., a town of France. Pop. 2200.

GERVAIS, St., a town of Savoy, on the Arve. Population 1900.

GERVAIS, St., a town of France, 45 miles W. Montpellier. Population 1000.

GERZAT, a town of France, 6 miles N. E. Clermont, with 500 houses.

GESKEKE, a town of the Prussian states, 11 miles W. by S. Paderborn. Pop. 3800.

GESSEL, a village of the Netherlands, in North Brabant. Population 1000.

GESLIN, a town of Prussian Poland, grand duchy of Posen. Population 1300.

GESTICIA, a province of Sweden, forming a part of the modern government of Gefleborg. Its territorial extent is about 1340 square miles, and its population 27,000.

GESTALDO, a town of Naples, in the Principato Ultra. Population 3150.

GETAFE, a town of Spain, about 6 miles from Madrid. Population 5000.

GETTYSBURG, a post township of the United States, and capital of Adams county, Pennsylvania, on Rock creek, 36 miles from Williamsport, Maryland.

GEY, a town of France, 10 miles N. W. Geneva. Population 2500.

GEYER, a town of Saxony, circle of the Erzgebirge. Population 1800.

GEYSER, a name given to some remarkable springs of hot water in Iceland.

GHAUT, a term signifying a pass through mountains, applied to the range of hills which run nearly north and south through the peninsula of India. They are computed to rise in their highest part to between 3000 and 4000 feet above the level of the sea.

GHEIDI, a town of Austrian Italy, 10 miles S. Brescia. Population 3200.

GHEELLEN, a town of the Netherlands, province of Antwerp. The chief manufacture is of lace; here are also large distilleries. Population 7000.

GHELUWE, a town of the Netherlands, in West Flanders. Population 3100.

GHEENT, a large city of the Netherlands, the capital of East Flanders, situated on the Scheldt, where that river is joined by the Lys. These rivers, with two smaller streams (the Lievre and the More), and a number of navigable canals, divide the town into no less than 26 islands, which are joined together by upwards of 300 small wooden bridges. The circuit of the walls within which Ghent is inclosed, is little less than 15 miles. A large proportion, however, of this vast space is occupied, not by buildings, but by gardens, orchards, and corn fields, as well as by the canals and rivers. Most of the canals are bordered with magnificent quays, some of them with beautiful rows of trees, forming convenient promenades. The streets are in general wide and straight; but some of them are narrow, and do not admit of two carriages passing abreast. The houses are large, but not elegant. Among the objects of curiosity which Ghent presents to the traveller, the ramparts occupy a prominent place, from their great extent, and the delightful promenades which they afford. The public squares are 13 in number; the principal one contains a pedestrial statue of the emperor Charles V. Among the public buildings, the cathedral is highly worthy of attention, not for its outward appearance, but for the splendour and richness of its interior; also the Benedictine abbey of St Peter. The inside of this and several of the churches in Ghent is of marble; there are eight in all, each possessing a certain degree of elegance. The town-hall, notwithstanding the mixture which it presents of ancient and modern architecture, is still a grand building. The other objects of interest are the public library, the beautiful botanic garden, the maison de force, and the numerous public walks. Ghent was noted at an early period for its manufactures. Lace of great fineness, cotton, linen, and, in a more limited degree, silk and woollens, are still manufactured. Here are also several tanneries, sugar refineries, and paper manufactures; but the great branch is cotton-weaving, in which the manufactures maintain a hard struggle with their rivals in England. A brisk corn trade is likewise carried on here. It has academies for drawing, architecture, and the fine arts; also a great provincial school or college, for Latin, Greek, mathematics, rhetoric, and poetry, and the French, English, and German languages. The citadel of Ghent, built by Charles V., is one of the largest in Europe, but not proportionally strong. Population in 1810, 58,000; at present 61,000. 30 miles S. W. Antwerp. Long. 3. 43. 50. E. Lat. 51. 3. 21. N.

GHIERIAN, a fortress of the south of India. Long. 73. 6. E. Lat. 16. 32. N.

GILLAN, a province of Persia, which extends upwards of 200 miles along the south-western shore of the Caspian sea. Population 50,000 families.

GHISLAIN, a town of the Netherlands, 3 miles W. Mons. Population 850.

GHISTEL, a town of the Netherlands, 5 miles S. Ostend. Population 1850.

GHIZNE, a city of Afghanistan, once the capital of a very powerful empire, but now scarcely retaining a vestige of its former grandeur.

GHORAGHAUT, the capital of a district of the same name in Bengal. Long. 88. 25. E. Lat. 25. 13. N.

GHUR MOHTESIR, a town of Hindostan, province of Delhi, on the Ganges. Long. 78. 2. E. Lat. 28. 50. N.

GHURKA, a town of Hindostan, province of Dowlatabad, better known afterwards by the name of Aurungabad. It has lost much of its ancient splendour: it has still a very extensive market-place or bazar; and there are yet some magnificently ruins, particularly the palace and gardens of Aurungzebe; and the tombs of some religious persons. Long. 76. 3. E. Lat. 19. 46. N.

GHYNETTE, a town of Bengal, on the Hoogly river, 16 miles N. Calcutta.

GIACOMA, a town of Naples, in the Principato Citra. Population 2450.

GIANT'S CAUSEWAY, a promontory on the north coast of Ireland, county of Antrim.

GIAT, a town of France, in Auvergne, with 1050 inhabitants.

GIAYENNE, a thriving town of Piedmont, at the foot of the Cottian Alps. The manufactures are linen, leather, and silk. Population 7500. 17 miles W. Turin.

GIROLDKRAUSEN, a town of Hanover, 6 miles N. Duderstadt. Population 1700.

GIHRALEON, a town of Spain, in Andalusia, 44 miles W. Seville. Population 2800.

GIBRALTAR, a well known promontory in the south of Spain, at the entrance from the Atlantic into the Mediterranean, near the part where the sea between Europe and Africa is narrowest. It consists of a great rocky mountain, running from north to south, about three miles in length, from half a mile to three-fourths in width, and from 1200 to 1400 feet in height. On the north side is an isthmus, about a mile and a half in length, and half as much in breadth, which connects this vast mass of rock with the continent. The northern front of the rock is almost perpendicular; the east side is full of frightful precipices; while the south, being narrow and abrupt, presents hardly any possibility of approach, even to an enemy in command of the sea. On none of these sides has this tremendous mass ever been attacked. There remains only the western front, which is almost as abrupt as the others, but which may be approached in shipping from the bay, and presents a kind of pied a terre in the level spot on which the town is built. Here accordingly have the efforts of assailants been directed, and here are the great batteries and works of defence. The importance of Gibraltar arises chiefly from its bay, which is of great extent (9 miles long and 5 broad), and forms a convenient naval station, being protected from the more dangerous winds. Gibraltar was first fortified in the modern style in the reign of the Emperor Charles V. It was taken by the English in 1704, soon after the commencement of the war of the Spanish succession; it has since been repeatedly besieged (first in 1705, next in 1727, and lastly in our first American war), but always without success, the natural strength of the place being such as to enable the garrison to bid defiance even to the most formidable display of artillery. The town of Gibraltar stands not on the promontory, but at its foot, and on the north-west side. Though fortified in itself, its chief protection is derived from the batteries on the neighbouring heights, which sweep both the isthmus and the approach to the town by water. The last siege displayed the power of artillery in every shape. The town was then almost entirely destroyed, but it was afterwards rebuilt on an improved and much enlarged plan. The houses have flat roofs, and large bow windows; they are generally painted black, with a white strip to mark each story or floor; the black is intended to blunt the dazzling rays of the sun. One large street traverses almost the whole town; it is nearly half a mile in length, and full of shops. In other parts the inhabitants are too much crowded; as was fatally exemplified in the rapid spreading of the contagion in 1894. The population of the town, exclusive of the garrison, is above 12,000, partly British, partly Spaniards, Italians, Jews, and even Moors, all attracted by mercantile enterprise. The place is a general cabotage for the manufactures of England, and other produce, such as sugar, rum, tobacco, rice, flour, wines, fruits, silk, and wax. The chief public buildings are the navy hospital, the victualling office, the barracks, and the house of the lieutenant-governor. The places of worship are an English church, a Catholic chapel, and three synagogues; here is also a small but elegant playhouse; and, what is of great importance to officers stationed in this secluded spot, a garrison library. 16 miles N. Ceuta, 70 S. Seville. Long. 5. 19. 4. W. Lat. 36. 6. 42. N.

GIBRALTAR, STRAITS OF, form the passage between the Atlantic and the Mediterranean. The narrowest part (15 miles across) is not opposite to Gibraltar, but about 8 miles to the westward. A strong current always runs through these straits, from the ocean into the Mediterranean.

GILSON, a county of the United States, in Indiana, on the Wabash. Population in 1815, 5320. Chief town Princeton.

GILSON PORT, a thriving place of the United States, containing 60 houses, situated on the Bayou Pierre, one of the channels through which the overflowing waters of the Mississippi are conveyed to the gulf of Mexico.

GIBYLE, a seaport of Tripoli, at the mouth of the river Jebelée. Its former extent and beauty is proved by the heaps of ruins, and by the fine pillars which are scattered up and down in the vicinity. 12 miles S. S. W. Tripoli.

GIEZ, a small town of France, on the Loire, 33 miles S. E. Orleans. Pop. 5150.

GIENGEN, a town of Württemberg, on the Brenz, 20 miles W. Donauwert. Pop. 2000.

GIENKORTE, a large village of Denmark, a little to the north of Copenhagen.

GIERACE, a town of Naples, in Calabria Ultra. It contains 13 churches, 4 monasteries, and 6000 inhabitants. 34 miles E. N. E. Reggio.

GIESSEN, a town of Hesse-Darmstadt. It has some manufactures of woollen and cotton. Pop. 7790. 36 miles N. E. Mentz.

GIERROOK, a village of the Netherlands, in Overysel, with 1500 inhabitants.

GILROOD, a village of Scotland, in East Lothian, 4 miles S. Haddington.

GILHONY, a town of Hanover, 11 miles N. Brunswick. Population 1650.

GIGLESWICK, a township and parish of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 7484 of the parish 2517.

GIGHA, one of the Hebrides, lying 3½ miles off the west coast of Kintyre, in Argyllshire, and about 7 miles in length, and 2½ in breadth. Population 753.

GIGLIO, ISOLA DI, an island on the coast of Tuscany. Long. 10. 53. E. Lat. 43. 24. N.

GIGNAC, a town of France, in Lower Languedoc. Population 2800.

GIRON, a town of Spain, province of Asturias, 18 miles N. Oviedo. Population 3200.

GILA RÍO, a river of New Spain, in South America, which discharges itself into the gulf of California, in the 32d deg. of N. lat.

GILDERSON, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire, 6 miles S. W. Leeds. Population 1592.

GILBUNT, a town of Naples, in the Capitanata, with 2150 inhabitants.

GILES, a county of the United States, in the west part of Virginia, inclosed by Greenbrier, Monroe, Montgomery, Thawell, and Kenhawa counties. Population 3745. Slaves 242. Chief town Davisburg—24, in West Tennessee, on Elk river, bordering on Alabama. Population 4510. Slaves 733. Chief town Pulaski. At the court house is a post-office.

GILEK, ST. IN THE FIELDS, a parish of England, in Middlesex. Population 52,703.

GILLES-LES-BOUCHERIES, St. a town of France, 10 miles S. S. E. Nancy. Pop. 5050.

GILGON, a township and parish of England, in Yorkshire. Population of the township 982; of the parish 2002.

GILLINGHAM, a village and parish of England, in Dorsetshire, 4 miles N. W. Shaftsbury. Population 3850.

GILLINGHAM, a village of England, in Kent, inhabited principally by persons belonging to the dock-yard. The streets are wide, and, from their declivity, remarkably clean. 1½ mile N. E. Chatham. Pop. 6200.

GILLIS, ST., a town of the Netherlands, in East Flanders. Population, including the parish, 3200.

GILSELAND, a watering place of England, in Cumberland, 18 miles N. E. Carlisle.

GILLY, a town of the Netherlands, 3 miles E. by N. Charleroy. Population 3050.

GILMARTON, a post township of the United States, in Stafford county, New Hampshire, 17 miles N. E. Concord. Pop. 4334.

GILMERFON, a village of Scotland, in Mid-Lothian. The inhabitants are mostly colliers.

GILORO, one of the Molucca islands, in the Eastern sea. It is of an extremely irregular form, consisting of a long mainland, extending in length north and south 220 miles, with two large peninsulas, which are divided from each other by a deep bay, projecting from its eastern side. On the north and south of these bays, the land forms other two peninsulas, so that the island may be said to consist of four peninsulas, which are separated from each other by deep bays. Long. of the town of Ossa, 128. 22. E. Lat. 0. 43. N.

GILZEN, a village of the Netherlands, 8 miles S. E. Breda. Population 1850.

GIPRICH, a town of the Prussian states, near Cologne. Population 1400.

GIRONT, a town of France, in Gascony, 17 miles E. Auch. Population 2100.

GINDLINGEN, a village of Germany, in Baden, with 1200 inhabitants.

GINGER, a celebrated fortress, and capital of a district of India, in the Carnatic. Long. 79. 34. E. Lat. 12. 15. N.

GINECULPHI, St., a small town on the lake of Geneva, 6 miles S. by W. Vevay.

GIRIKEN, a village of the Netherlands, 6 miles S. E. Breda. Population 2150.

GIOJA, a town of Naples, province of Bari. Population 1800.

GIURGETY, a town of European Turkey, in Walachia. 40 miles S. W. Bucharest.

GIORSIO A CREMANO, St., a town near Naples, with 1900 inhabitants.

GIORGIO, St., a neat and thriving town of Piedmont, 6 miles N. W. Chivasso. Pop. 6000.

GIORGIO, St., a small fortified town of Austrian Italy, 5 miles S. E. Verona.

GIORGIO, St., a town in the island of Gozo, belonging to Malta. Population 2000.

GIORGIO LA MOLARA, St., a town of Naples, 3 miles S. E. Benevento. Pop. 6000.

GIORNICO, or IRNIA, a small town in the south of Switzerland, 13 miles N. Bellinzona.

GIOVANNI CASTEL SAN, a small town of Italy, 6 miles W. Piacentia.

GIOVANNI IN GALDO, St., a town of the Neapolitan territory. Population 2500.

GIOVANNI ISOLA DI ST. See Isola.

GIOVANNI ROTONDO, St., a town of the Neapolitan territory. Population 4500.

GIOVANNI SAN, a town of Tuscany, near the Arno. Population 1700.

GIOVENAZZO, a town of Naples, in the province of Bari. It is defended by a castle, contains four churches, four convents, and 5000 inhabitants. 10 miles W. N. W. Bari.

GIRARDEAU, the capital of a district of the United States, on the Mississippi, 35 miles above the mouth of the Ohio. Pop. 300.

GIRDLENESS, a promontory on the east coast of Scotland, 2 miles S. Aberdeen.

GISEH, a large town in Upper Egypt, about a quarter of a mile from the river, and nearly two miles in compass. 215 miles S. Cairo. Long. 31. 5. 2. E. Lat. 37. 22. N.

GIRGENTI, a city of Sicily, in the Val di Mazzara, nearly three miles from the coast. Here stood the ancient Agrigentum, the magnificent ruins of which are still to be seen. The modern town, however, is not flourishing; the wretched management of the Sicilian government, and an undue proportion of ecclesiastics, being all adverse to its prosperity. It stands on a high hill, and commands a most beautiful prospect; but it is neither clean nor regularly built. The harbour is at a considerable distance, and was burned by a very fine mole, erected at the public expence in 1752. Population in 1790, 20,000; now reduced to 12,000. 60 miles S. Palermo, and 27 N. W. Alicata. Long. 33. 49. E. Lat. 37. 22. N.

GIRONDE, a large village of France, in France, 34 miles S. W. Colmar. Pop. 1700.

GIRONDE, an extensive department in the S. W. of France. It extends along both sides of the Garonne. Population 515,000, of whom about 80,000 are Protestants.

GIRONDES, a town of France, department of the Gironde. Population 1100.

GIRONA, St., a town of France, department of the Arriege. Population 2500.

GIRVAN, a town and parish of Scotland, in Ayrshire. The town is pleasantly situated on the Girvan, at its confluence with the Irish sea, and has a commodious harbour. Population of the parish 4490.

GISBURN, a township and parish of England, in Yorkshire, on the river Ribbles. Pop. of the township 690; of the parish 2530.

GISONS, a town of Upper Normandy, department of the Eure. Population 3500.

GITCHELIN, a town of Bohemia, 51 miles E. N. E. Prague. Population 2400.

GIVET, a strong town of France, department of the Ardennes, 16 miles N. E. Rocroy.

GIVELIANO, a considerable town of Naples, with 8000 inhabitants.

GIULIANO SAN, a town of Sicily, in the Val di Mazzara. It contains 9 convents, 15 churches, and an hospital. Pop. 10,000.

GIULIANO SAN, a small town of Piedmont, with 2400 inhabitants.

GIVORA, a small town of France, department of the Rhone. Population 1700.

GIVRY, a town of France, in Burgundy, 4 miles W. Chalons. Population 2600.

GIZEH, a large village of Egypt, on the Nile, nearly opposite Cairo, 3 miles S. W. Cairo.

GLADBACH, a town of the Prussian provinces on the Rhine, in the duchy of Juliers, on the small river Niers. Population 6000. 210 miles N. Juliers.

GLADSMUIR, a parish of Scotland, county of Haddington. Population 1623.

GLAMMIS, a village and parish of Scotland, 54 miles W. Forfar. Pop. 2009.

GLAMORGAN, the southernmost county of Wales, one of the largest and most populous of this principality, and by far the most distinguished for its commerce and manufactures. At its eastern extremity, where the river Rumsey divides it from the county of Monmouth, it is about 25 miles broad, but becomes gradually narrower as it approaches Caermarthenshire towards the west. It contains about 627,000 acres, or 822 square miles, with 107 inhabitants to each. It is divided into ten hundreds, and 118 parishes. Landaff, the city, and seat of a bishop's see, is now a miserable village; while other thriving towns have grown up in different places, viz. Cardiff the county town, Swansea, Neath, Bridgend, Cowbridge, Maestriesent, Caerphilly, Merthyr Tydfil, Llanthor, &c. It sends two members to parliament, one for the county, and one for the boroughs, Cardiff, Swansea, Neath, Llanthor, and Llanthor. The southern district, which comprehends the low land along the sea coast, and some miles into the interior, is termed the Vale of Glamorgan, one of the richest spots in all Wales. From this base, however, the land rises rapidly towards the north, forming mountains of considerable elevation, some detached, but most of them running in long ranges from north to south, with deep and broken valleys interposed; and terminating a few miles beyond the county, in the great ridge which here traverses Brecknockshire from east to west, and of which they thus form only the lateral and subordinate branches. The chief rivers are the Rumsey, the Taaff, the Ely, the Ewerny, the Oguiore, the Avon, the Neath, the Swansea, and lastly, the Loughor, which divides the county from Caermarthenshire. About half the population of this county are employed in agriculture, to promote which, a society has been instituted. The usual crops are wheat, barley, and oats, with a rotation of the common green crops. Grazing is practised to a great extent, and the horned cattle are much esteemed. The horses are handsome, strong, and active, well adapted either for draught or the saddle. The sheep vie in form and quality with the best English breeds, and afford excellent wool. But it is its mineral riches which have within the last half century raised Glamorganshire to such consequence. It has inexhaustible fields of ironstone, with coal and limestone to extract the purer metal. The coal not only supplies the numerous iron-works of the county, but furnishes an important article of export trade, and draws also to its neighbourhood immense establishments for the smelting of copper, the ore being transported for this purpose from Cornwall, North Wales, and Ireland; the iron again is exported in great quantity, and affords at the same time the materials for extensive tin-plate manufactories, the tin being also brought from Cornwall. The irregular and broken figure of the ground where these minerals are deposited, presents peculiar facilities for their extraction. There is here no occasion for any very deep pits, and for powerful machinery to empty them of water; the mines are opened in the bottom of the valleys, and these natural drains keep them perfectly dry. Besides these minerals, which supply this county so amply with building materials, it contains also lead and copper ore in small quantity. Of mineral waters there is only one, which is at Swansea. The principal iron-works are Merthyr Tydvil, the greatest of the kind perhaps in the world, Aberdare, Abernaut, and those in the vales of Neath and Swansea. Round Neath and Swansea are great collieries, though these also in general accompany all the iron and copper works. The chief tin and copper works too are in the neighbourhood of these towns; and here a very great proportion of all the copper in Britain is smelted: at Merthyr Gruffydd also, above Landaff, there is an extensive tin work. This county contains, besides, manufactories of earthenware, woollen goods, soap, &c. The principal canals are the Cardiff to Merthyr Tydvil, the Neath, the Swansea, and the Aberdare. Glamorganshire abounds with Welsh, Norman, and Roman antiquities. Population 161,737.

GLAN, a small river of Carinthia, which rises near Kostenberg, and falls into the Gurk, 4 miles E. Clagenfurt.

GLANDREVE, a town of France, in Provence, situated on the river Var.

GLANDFORD BRIDGE, a town of England, in Lincolnshire. Population 1674.

GLARUS, or GLARIS, a canton of Switzerland, bounded by those of St Gall, the Grisons, Uri, and Schwitz. Its superficial extent is about 400 square miles, and its population nearly 30,000.

GLARUS, the chief town of the above canton, near the Jilth. Population 2500. 33 miles E. Lucerne.

GLASGOW, a city of Scotland, in the county of Lanark, which has been long distinguished for its extensive commerce and manufactures. It is one of the most ancient towns in Scotland, its origin being generally attributed to St Mungo, or St Kentigern, who is said to have founded a bishopric here in the year 580, which was afterwards erected into an archiepiscopal see in 1484. The principal part of the city occupies a plain on the north side of the river Clyde. Its length and breadth is ascertained by two main streets which cross each other at right angles, and run, the one east and west, about 1½ mile, the other three-fourths of a mile long. The town contains three large and elegant squares, St Andrew's, St Enoch's, and George's squares. Of the public buildings in Glasgow, the cathedral, or high church, at the north end of the High-street, is a most splendid edifice, and perhaps the most entire specimen of Gothic architecture that is to be found in Scotland. It was begun by John Arbuthnot, bishop of Glasgow, in 1123, and was continued by successive bishops, until it was finished in the manner in which it stands at present. The original plan of this cathedral was in the form of a cross, though the transverse part has never been built. It is 284 feet long, 63 broad, and 90 feet high within the walls, with two large towers, on one of which a spire was built about the year 1420, making the whole 220 feet in height. Besides this, there are several other churches, of which the most remarkable are St George's and St Andrew's, both of which have very elegant fronts, with fine steeples. The College church is a plain building, partaking of the Gothic, with a small steeple in front, containing a clock and bell. The Tron church was built in 1704, on the site of the old one, which was destroyed by fire in 1793. Besides these churches, there are, the North-west church, of an oblong form, with a transverse aisle, and a steeple 140 feet high; St Enoch's church, with a lofty and handsome steeple; and the Barony church. The Episcopal chapel, immediately behind St Andrew's square, is a handsome oblong building. A magnificent Roman Catholic chapel was erected in 1816, in Clyde-street. There are altogether within the city nine parish churches, including the Barony; four chapels connected with the establishment; one covenanted Presbyterian, one Antiburgher, three Burgher, and three Relief meeting-houses; two Tabernacles; one English, and one Scotch Episcopalian chapel; one Independent, two Baptist, and two Methodist meeting-houses; one Roman Catholic, and one Unitarian chapel. The Glasites, Bereans, Universalists, &c. have all places of worship. The college buildings, and the houses for the accommodation of the professors, are situated on the east side of the High-street, near the Blackfriars or College church. They are very extensive, having a front of 305 feet to the High-street, and 292 feet from east to west. The easternmost range of buildings, erected more than 200 years ago, were taken down in 1811, and a magnificent range erected on their site. This new erection, which is 160 feet long, and 50 feet deep, contains the anatomical theatre; the common hall, 73 feet long; and rooms for the humanity, Greek, logic, chemistry, medical, and mathematical classes. The library is a handsome insulated building. On the south-east extremity, the faculty hall, fronting the High-street, is a very spacious room, handsomely wainscoted. The chapel, in which the professors and students attend divine service, is fitted up in a suitable manner. The Macfarlane observatory is erected near the east end of it. This celebrated seminary of education was founded in 1450, by William Turnbull, bishop of Glasgow. About 1400 students attend the university. There is a valuable and extensive library; besides which, the celebrated Dr William Hunter of London bequeathed to the university his whole museum, one of the most valuable collections in Europe, of natural history, paintings, medals, anatomical preparations, books, &c. &c.; the medals alone are estimated at £30,000. At present the establishment in the university consists of a lord chancellor, lord rector, dean of faculty, the principal; and professors of divinity, church history, oriental languages, natural philosophy, mathematics, moral philosophy, logic, Greek, humanity, civil law, materia medica; anatomy, practical astronomy, and the regius professors of natural history, surgery, midwifery, chemistry, and botany. There is also another institution, founded by the late Mr Anderson, where lectures are given on natural and experimental philosophy, on mathematics, on chemistry, botany, and natural history. The town-hall buildings have an elegant and magnificent appearance. In 1701, a subscription was opened by way of rentine, for building a coffee-room and hotel, at 107 shares, at £40 each. The coffee-room is one of the most elegant in Britain, being 74 feet long, and of corresponding dimensions in height and breadth. The jail formerly stood contiguous to the town-hall, but having become too small for the increasing population of the city, it was taken down in 1812, and an elegant new building has been substituted in its place. A large quadrangular building contains the various court rooms and offices where the city and county business are transacted, with a prison for debtors and felons, who have here a small space allotted to walk in. The merchants' hall was some time ago taken down, but the steeple which was attached to it still remains: it is 104 feet in height, and is considered one of the handsomest in the city. The other public buildings are the assembly-rooms, the surgeons' hall buildings, the city guard-house, bridewell, the theatre, a range of spacious barracks, and an observatory. There are numerous charitable institutions, various hospitals for the sick and infirm, a lunatic asylum, a magdalene asylum, besides mortifications for charity schools. The city of Glasgow having extended into large suburbs both to the north and south, on the opposite shore of the Clyde, these are connected with the body of the city by three handsome stone bridges and a wooden one. The Clyde is navigable for vessels drawing seven or eight feet water, as far as the lowest bridge; and a quay extending a quarter of a mile down the river, affords every accommodation for trade. The manufacture of linens, lawns, embryos, and other articles of similar fabric, was introduced into Glasgow about the year 1725, when it was superseded in 1787 by the introduction of muslins. In 1730, the manufacture of green bottles was introduced; and flint glass and cud-bear in 1777; in 1732 paper-milleries for inkles and delft were established; in 1785 the dyeing of cottons in turkey red colour was begun; and a manufactory of Bandano handkerchiefs has been since established, which has raised the character of that branch of trade all over Europe. Previous to the union, the trade of Glasgow was chiefly confined to Holland and France. After this, however, the English colonies being opened to the Scotch, Glasgow engaged extensively in the trade of Virginia and Maryland, importing chiefly tobacco. The West India trade afforded another outlet to the increasing capital of Glasgow; and this branch of commerce has since greatly increased. Glasgow is celebrated for its great establishments for the cotton manufacture, of which some idea may be formed from the following facts, namely, that there are 10 works for weaving by power, which contain 3800 looms, producing 8400 pieces of cloth weekly; and it appears from a late investigation, that there are about 32,000 hand looms. There are 17 calendar houses, who have 39 calendars moved by steam; these calendars daily 118,000 yards of cloth, besides dressing 116,000, and glazing 36,000 yards. There are 10 calico printing works, 9 iron foundries; and 73 steam engines connected with the city. About the year 1172, Glasgow was erected into a burgh by William (sur-named the Lion), king of Scotland. In 1450, James II. erected the city and barony of Glasgow into a regality, in favour of the bishop. In 1611, James VI. granted the city a very ample charter, by which it was erected into a royal burgh, to be holden under his majesty in free burghage. In 1636, Charles I. granted further privileges, which were confirmed with additional privileges, by an act in 1690. The government is vested in a provost and three bailies, a dean of guild, deacon-convenor, and a treasurer, assisted with a common-council of 15 merchants, and 12 tradesmen or mechanics. The communication of Glasgow with the country along the shores of the Clyde, has been greatly aided by the use of steam-boats, of which there are now no less than 16 plying on the Clyde. It communicates also with the surrounding country by various canals. The suburbs are extensive, and contain several populous and industrious villages, which carry on extensive manufactures. There are also several print-fields, and extensive bleachfields, in the vicinity of the place. Population in 1780, 42,842—in 1785, 45,880—in 1791, 60,578—in 1801, 83,769—in 1811, 110,460—in 1821, 147,043. Long. 4. 15. 51. W. Lat. 55. 52. 10. N.

GLASGOW, PORT, in the county of Renfrew, Scotland, about 2½ miles farther up the frith of Clyde than Greenock. The town is very neatly built, and surrounded with many pleasant villas, with their gardens. The harbour is judiciously planned, and the graving dock is the first of the kind that was constructed in Scotland. Besides the parish church, there are two other places of public worship here. Part of the magistrates are appointed by the city of Glasgow, and the other part by trustees for the community, who were at first chosen by all the proprietors of ground in the town, but have since continued to elect themselves. Being the port of Glasgow, it is a great rendezvous for shipping. Pop. 5202.

GLASGOW, a post town of the United States, and capital of Warren county, Kentucky, 145 miles S. W. Lexington. Population 244.

GLASGOW, a town of Ireland, county of Monaghan, 5 miles N. N. E. Monaghan.

GLASS, a parish of Scotland, in the county of Aberdeen. Population 1888.

GLASSER, a small river of Scotland, county of Stirling, which falls into the Kelvin.

GLASSERTON, a parish of Scotland, in the county of Wigton. Population 1057.

GLASFORD, a parish of Scotland, county of Lanark. Population 1504.

GLASTONBURY, a town of England, near Wells, in Somersetshire, famous for the ruins of its abbey, the oldest, and for a long time the most magnificent in England. The town is situated on a low marshy peninsula, formed by the stagnant waters of the Brue. The church of St John is a handsome building, with a lofty tower of great lightness and beauty. Population 2630. 130 miles W. by S. London.

GLASTONBURY, a post township of the United States, in Hartford county, Connecticut, on the east side of Connecticut river 8 miles below Hartford. Population 2760.

GLATT, a river of Switzerland, canton of Zurich, which falls into the Rhine.

GLATT, a large village of Switzerland, in the canton of Zurich.

GLATT, UPPER and LOWER, two large villages of Switzerland, in the canton of St Gall.

GLATZ, or KLABSKO, a tract of country in the central part of Germany, surrounded by Silesia, Moravia, and Bohemia. It belongs to Prussia, and has a territorial extent of 550 square miles. Population about 100,000.

GLATZ, the capital of the above country, on the Neiss, in a narrow valley between two lofty hills. The chief manufactures are leather and carpets. Glatz surrendered to the Prussians in 1742, was taken by the Austrians in 1759, but restored at the peace of 1763. Population 6700. 94 miles E. Prague. Long. 16. 26. E. Lat. 50. 16. N.

GLAUCHAU, a town of Saxony, on the Mulda. It has manufactures of cotton. Population 4000. 53 miles W. Dresden.

GLAZEBARD, a township of England, North Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1043.

GLEN, a river of England, which falls into the Wash, 5 miles N. E. Spalding.

GLEN MAGNA, a hamlet of England, 6 miles S. E. Leicester.

GLENBERRIE, a parish of Scotland, in the county of Kincardine. Population 1277.

GLENBUCKET, a parish of Scotland, in the county of Aberdeen. Population 479.

GLENCAIRN, a parish of Scotland, county of Dumfries. Population 1801.

GLENCOE, a vale of Scotland, in Argyllshire, near the head of Loch Fivie.

GLENDOW, a valley of Scotland, in the counties of Dumblarton and Stirling.

GLENDOCK, a village of Scotland, county of Sutherland.

GLENELG, a parish of Scotland, in Inverness-shire. Population 2807.

GLENELLY, a village of Scotland, in Inverness-shire, on the west coast.

GLENHOLM, a parish of Scotland, county of Peebles. Population 233.

GLENISLA, a parish of Scotland, county of Forfar. Population 1144.

GLENMITCH, a parish of Scotland, in the county of Aberdeen. Population 2223.

GLENDONCHAY and INISHAIL, two united parishes of Scotland, county of Argyll. Population 1122—314.

GLENFEE, SPITAL OF, a pass in the Highlands of Scotland, near the head of the Black water or Shee, 22 miles N. Cupar Angus.

GLENHIEL, a parish of Scotland, county of Ross. Population 768.

GLENTILT, a narrow pass in the Highlands of Atholl, in Scotland.

GLENTATHEN, or LINTHATHEN, a parish of Scotland, in Forfarshire. Pop. 941.

GLEYWITZ, a town of Silesia, with 2000 inhabitants. 22 miles N. E. Ratibor.

GLITNESS, one of the smaller Shetland Isles, 11 miles N. Lerwick.

GLIUTA, a river of the territory of Ragusa, which flows into the Adriatic.

GLOGAU, a large district of Silesia, bounded on the one side by Prussian Poland, and on the other by Lusatia. Its territorial extent is 1826 square miles; its population about 180,000.

GLOGAU, a strongly fortified town of Silesia, the chief place of the above district, about a mile from the Oder. Its chief edifices are the garrison church, the Lutheran church and school, the synagogue, two hospitals, and a Catholic academy. On an island formed by the Oder, is the cathedral. Population 9000. (80 miles N. W. Breslau.

GLOGAU, JATTLE or UPPER, a small town of Silesia, with 2300 inhabitants. 67 miles S. E. Breslau.

GLOMME, a river of Norway, which falls into the Cattegat at Fredericksund.

GLOWS, a town of the Netherlands, 6 miles N. W. IJge. Population 1500.

GLOSSOP, a parish of England, in Derbyshire. Population 13,766.

GLOUCESTER, one of the western counties of England, situated along the vale of the Severn, 65 miles, with a breadth never greater than 35, and at a medium 26 miles. It is within the parallels of 51. 28. and 52. 12. N. lat. and 1. 38. and 2. 42. W. long. and bounded by the counties of Hereford, Worcester, and Warwick, towards the N., Oxford, Wilts, and Somerset, to the E. and S., and Monmouthshire and Hereford on the W. It contains 1920 square miles; 4 divisions, 28 hundreds, and 320 parishes; 1 city, Gloucester, and part also of Bristol, and 28 market towns. Though principally an agricultural, it is a very considerable manufacturing, and somewhat too of a mining county. The country is diversified in its aspect; and is divided into the Hill, the Vale, and the Forest. The Severn and the Avon mark out an extensive vale of the richest soil, the most genial climate, and every way adapted to the raising of corn and fruit, and the grazing of cattle. This district is divided into Upper and Lower, or the vales of Gloucester and Berkeley. The vale of Berkeley is chiefly devoted to the produce of the dairy and the rearing of cattle; in the upper vale they also raise a good deal of corn. Here all the Gloucester cheese is produced, with excellent butter; and in the vale of Berkeley all the double Gloucester or double Berkeley, which is much superior in quality. The produce of the orchard forms also a capital object with the vale farmers; great quantities of cyder and of perry are made annually, and this manufacture extends into the other districts. On the west of the Severn, and entirely detached by it from the rest of the county, rises to some elevation, a district occupied principally with a great forest; while on the east of the Severn, and parallel with it to the distance of six to ten miles, runs through the whole of the county, from Bath on the Lower nearly to Evesham on the Upper Avon, the range of the Cotswold hills, chiefly devoted to the pasture of sheep. Of the minerals of Gloucestershire, coal, iron, and limestone, are the principal. The coal supplies the immense consumption of the Bristol manufactories, and even in some degree of Bath. Limestone is also produced. Blue claystone for building is found in the vale; freestone of excellent quality, with stone tiles, on the Cotswold hills, and paving stones and grits in the forest. The mineral waters of Cheltenham and of Clifton in this county have been long noted. There are manufactures of tin plate, edge tools, brass wire, wire cards, pins, and nails; but the most important manufactures are those of superfine broad cloth, of Spanish wool. To the above may be added thin worsted stuffs and carpets at Cirencester, stockings at Tewkesbury, rugs and blankets at Dursley, and felt hats in some of the villages. Only one navigable canal, the Stroudwater, has been finished in Gloucestershire, which connects by means of the famous tunnel of Sapperton, the navigation of the Severn with that of the Thames. There are canals in progress. Population 335,843.

GLOUCESTER, a city of England, the capital of the above county, on the Severn, about 30 miles above its junction with the Bristol channel. Though the Severn here divides itself into two branches, thus forming the island of Alney, it is still navigable for barges, and at spring tides for brigs also, and other keel vessels of moderate burden. The chief manufactory at Gloucester is that of pins, which is here the most extensive in the kingdom; and a bell foundry has also been long established. The city consists chiefly of four spacious streets, meeting each other in the centre. The public buildings are handsome; but the chief object of interest is the cathedral of St Peter, originally the abbey. This magnificent building is remarkable for combining in one specimen the architecture of successive ages, the Norman and Saxon, with some of the finest examples of the Gothic or English. Gloucester contains also five parish churches, several meeting houses, and a synagogue; two grammar schools, a charity school for the education, clothing, maintenance, and apprenticing of 20 poor boys; and several hospitals; two commodious market-houses; a custom-house, and a modern theatre. The county jail is built on the site of the ancient castle. A magnificent shire-hall has been recently built. There is, besides, a house of industry and a county infirmary, under excellent regulations. A mineral spring, surpassing those of Cheltenham in its powers, has lately been discovered. A handsome pump-room has been erected, with hot, cold, and vapour baths. Gloucester is the see of a bishop. It returns two members to parliament, the number of electors being 2000. It is governed by a mayor, 12 aldermen, &c. Population 9714. 106 miles W. by S. London.

GLoucester, a port township and port of entry of the United States, in Essex county, Massachusetts, 34 miles N. E. Boston. Pop. 5943.—2d, A township in Providence county, Rhode Island. Pop. 2310.—3d, A county in New Jersey, extends across the state, from the Atlantic to Delaware river, bounded N. by Burlington county, E. by the Atlantic, S. by Cape May, Cumberland, and Salem counties, and W. by Delaware river. Pop. 19,744. Chief towns Woodbury and Gloucester.—4th, In Virginia, on the W. shore of the Chesapeake, bounded N. by Piankintank river, E. by Matthews county and Chesapeake bay, S. by York river, and W. by King-and-Queen county. Pop. 10,427. Slaves 5780.—5th, A township in Gloucester county, New Jersey, on the Delaware, 3 miles below Philadelphia. Population 1736.

GLUCHOV, a town of European Russia, government of Czernigor. Population 7000. 40 miles E. S. E. Novgorod Siwerskoï. Long. 34. 20. 15 E. Lat. 51. 40. 30 N.

GLUCKSTADT, a town of Denmark, in the duchy of Holstein, on the Elbe. It is a regular and well built place, with a harbour. Here also is a magazine, an arsenal, a foundry, a house of correction, a workhouse, and a navigation school. Population 5200. 28 miles N. W. Hamburgh.

GLUCENTZ, a small town of Tyrol, on the Adige, 36 miles W. Brixen.

GLUVEREN, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 787.

GLUVIAN, St., a township of England, parish of St Gluvias, Cornwall.

GLYN TRAIAN, a township of Wales, in Denbighshire. Population 875.

GLYN, a county of the United States, in Georgia, bounded N. by the Alapamaha, E. by the Atlantic, S. by Camden county, and W. by Wayne county. Pop. 3417. Slaves 2845. Chief town Brunswick.

GNESNA, a town of Prussian Poland, government of Bromberg. It contains eleven churches, and three religious houses, with a theological seminary. Population 3500, including 1000 Jews. 150 miles W. Warsaw. Long. 17. 42 E. Lat. 52. 26 N.

GOA, a district of India, belonging to the Portuguese, in the province of Bejapoor, 40 miles long by 20 broad, situated on the western coast of India, between the 15th and 16th degrees of N. lat.

GOA, a celebrated city of India, and the capital of all the Portuguese settlements in that country. It is situated on an island of about 24 miles in circumference, at the mouth of the Mandora river. This fact consists of two cities; the old one, which is 8 miles up the river, and which, though now almost deserted, contains many magnificent churches, and excellent specimens of architecture. The principal inhabitants reside in the new city, which is at the mouth of the river, within the forts. It possesses two harbours, well defended by strong castles and batteries, mounting very heavy cannon. The towns are also fortified, but are of too great an extent to withstand a siege. It still carries on an inconsiderable trade with the mother country, with China, and the coast of Africa, but its expenses far exceed its revenues. The inhabitants of the city and island are computed to amount to 20,000, but of these are very few genuine Portuguese. Long. 73. 57 E. Lat. 15. 30 N.

GOAVE, GRAND, a town of the island of Hispaniola, 10 miles S. W. Leogane.

GOAVE, PETIT, a seaport of Hispaniola, with a good harbour. Long. 73. 37 W. Lat. 18. 26 N.

GONIX, a town of France, department of the Aisne. Population 1750.

GODANK, a town of Hindostan, in Bejapoor, on the Cutpurba. It has manufactures of cotton and silk. Long. 75. 6 E. Lat. 16. 20 N.

GOCIN, a town of the Prussian provinces of the Rhine. Population 2400.

GOCHSHEIM, a town of Germany, 27 miles N. N. W. Stutgard. Population 1500.

GOD'S HOUSE, LEAGUE OF, one of the three principal districts into which the Swiss canton of the Grisons is divided.

GODALMING, a town of England, county of Surrey, on the Wye. It has manufactures of fleecy hosiery, blankets, worsteds, cotton cloths, &c. Population of the parish 4000. 4 miles S. W. Guildford.

GODAVERY, a noble river of India, which rises on the eastern side of the mountains called Bala Ghaut, about 70 miles to the north-east of Bombay. It is computed to be 800 miles in length. On reaching Rajamundry in the Northern Circars, it divides into two main branches, one of which falls into the bay of Bengal, a few miles south of the town of Coringa, and the other a little below Narsipora, forming between them the island of Nagur, which comprehends 500 square miles.

GODESBERG, a village on the Lower Rhine, 2 miles from Bonn. Population 1600.

GODMANCHESTER, a suburb of Huntingdon, England, from which it is divided by the Ouse. Population of the parish 1953.

GODOLPHIN, a small village of England, in Cornwall, famous for its tin mines.

GOES, a town in the island of South Beveland, with a harbour. It has manufactures of salt. Pop. 3700. 10 miles E. Flushing.

GOHNA, a fortified town, and capital of a district of the same name, in Hindostan. Long. 78. 21 E. Lat. 26. 21 N.

GOJAN, a province of Abyssinia, 86 miles in length, and 40 in breadth.

GOIANA, a city of Brazil, province of Itamarca. Long. 35. 16 W. Lat. 7. 30 S.

GOIAZ, a province or capitania of Brazil, bounded chiefly by Minas Geraes on the E., Mato Grosso W., and Para N. Its greatest extent in length is from Lat. 6. to 21 S. Villa Boa, its principal town, is situated in Lat. 16 S. It possesses many gold mines, some of which produce gold of a very fine quality.

GOJERAZ, a town of Upper Austria. Pop. 3200. 5 miles N. Hallstadt.

GORTA, a town of Italy, on the Mincio. Pop. 1000. 9 miles N. N. W. Mantua.

GOLBORNE, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 1316.

GOLCAR, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 2666.

GOLCONDAH, a town of Hindostan, strongly fortified both by nature and art. Long. 78. 36. E. Lat. 17. 13. N.

GOLDAP, a town of East Prussia, 76 miles E. S. E. Königsberg. Population 2800.

GOLDBERG, a town of Silesia, on the Katsbach, 11 miles S. W. Liegnitz. Pop. 6000.

GOLDINOW, a town of Russia, government of Courland, 52 miles W. by N. Mitau. Population 1000.

GOLBLAUTER, a village of Prussian Saxony, forest of Thuringia. Population 1000.

GOLLETTA, or GOULETTA, the port of Tunis, forming the channel of communication between the lake and the sea.

GOLLACOURT, a village of France, department of the Oise, near Nogou.

GOLLUM, a town of Prussian Poland, 42 miles E. Bromberg. Population 1200.

GOLMIZ, a town of Upper Hungary, palatinate of Zips. Population 5000.

GOLNOW, a town of Pomerania, 14 miles N. E. Stettin. Population 2150.

GOLLOS, a thriving village of the north of Greece. Houses 700.

GOLSPIZ, a parish and village of Scotland, in Sutherlandshire. Pop. of the parish 1036.

GOMEROON, called also BUNDER ABRAS, a celebrated seaport of Laristan, in Persia, on a bay of the gulf of Ormus. It is the port of Schiras, and of all the south of Persia, but is now decayed. Long. 56. 12. E. Lat. 27. 18. N.

GOMER, a town of Hungary, on the Sajo, capital of a county of the same name, 180 miles E. by N. Vienna. Population 2000.

GOMERA, one of the Canaries, consisting properly of one high mountain, in winter covered with snow. It is about 20 miles long, and 10 wide. Population 7000. 18 miles S. W. Teneriffe.

GOMERSALL, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Pop. 5952.

GOMMERWIZE, a small town of French Flanders. Population 2290.

GOMAVE, an island on the western side of St Domingo, in the bay of Leogane. It is 40 miles long, and generally 9 broad. Pépita Gomave is a smaller isle, 40 miles W. by N. Port au Prince.

GOMAVE, a seaport in the same island, at the head of a bay of the same name, on the north side of the bay of Leogane. Long. 78. 36. 45. W. Lat. 18. 27. N.

GOMERIN, a large town, the capital of Abyssinia, three or four leagues in circumference, and situated on a hill of considerable height. It contains 16,000 families; but the houses are only of one story, built of clay, with the roofs thatched in the form of cones. Long. 37. 46. E. Lat. 12. 30. N.

GOMERIN, a fortified town on the coast of the Black sea, 60 miles E. N. E. Trebizond.

GOMONINS, a town of Russian Poland, government of Grodno. Population 1400.

GOMONINS, a town of France, 9 miles N. Paris. Population 2500.

GOMONINS, a village of Württemberg, 7 miles S. E. Tübingen. Population 1750.

GOMONINS, a town of France, in Anjou. Population 1800.

GOMONINS, one of the smaller Banda islands.

GOMONINS TELLO, a town of the island of Celebes. Long. 123. E. Lat. 4. 28. N.

GOOCHLAND, a county of the United States, in Virginia, on the N. side of James river, inclosed by Louisa, Hanover, Henrico, Powhatan, and Fluvanna counties. Pop. 10,303. Slaves 5464. 32 miles N. W. Richmond.

GOOD HOPE. See Cape of Good Hope.

GOONOR, a town of Hindostan, province of Beeder. Long. 77. 51. E. Lat. 16. 40. N.

GOODWIN SANDS, a range of sand-banks in the English channel, off the coast of Kent. They extend 10 miles in length.

GOOLGURGE, a town of Hindostan, province of Allahabad, district of Bundelcund. — Another in the province of Aurnghabad.

GOOMAH, a town of Hindostan, province of Bahar. Long. 85. 20. E. Lat. 24. 24. N.

GOOMER, a town of Hindostan, at the north-west extremity of the Northern Circars. Long. 84. 65. E. Lat. 19. 53. N.

GOOMTRY, a river of Hindostan, which joins the Ganges, about 14 miles below Benares.

GOONER, a river of Hindostan, province of Sindh, which, with the Loonee and the Indus, forms a very large island called Majur.

GOORACKPOOR, the capital of a district of the same name in Hindostan. Long. 83. 22. E. Lat. 26. 45. N.

GOOSE CREEK, four rivers of the United States; one in New Jersey, one in Kentucky, one in North Carolina, and a fourth in Virginia, which enters the Potomac.

GOOSE ISLAND, in the river St Lawrence, 12 miles below the island of Orleans.

GOOSEBERRY ISLANDS and ROCKS, on the coast of the United States, in Essex county, Massachusetts. — Also small islands near the east coast of Newfoundland.

GOPANOW, a town of Hindostan, province of Oude, on the Gomaty. Long. 86. 34. E. Lat. 27. 39. N.

GOPPINGEN, a best town of Suabia, with 4300 inhabitants. It has manufactures of woollen stuff, pottery, ware, and paper. 29 miles N. W. Ulm.

GORAHATY, a town of Bengal, government of Nizamat, Novgoud. Pop. 1600.

GORCAN, or GARBEN, the capital of a district of the same name, in Hindostan. Long. 84. 36. E. Lat. 26. 26. N.

GORGUN, a fortified town of South Holland, on the Merwe, with a harbour, 20 miles S. Amsterdam.

GOSNAY, a town of France, in Provence, with 3400 inhabitants.

GOSNAY, a parish and village of Scotland, in Berwickshire. Pop. of the parish 740.

GORDON, a town of France, department of the Lot. Population 2700.

GORK'S ISLAND, an island in the North Pacific ocean. Long. 172° 30' W. Lat. 60° 40' N.

GORKH, an island of Holland, near the mouth of the Maase, 10 miles in circuit.

GORKH, a town of South Holland, on the above island. Population 700.

GORKE, a small island, or rather rock, off the coast of Africa, little more than a mile from Cape Verd. It produces nothing, and its importance is solely derived from its inaccessible situation, on a naked rock of black basalt, rising to the height of 300 feet. It was first occupied by the Dutch, and afterwards was taken by the French, to whom it was finally ceded by the treaty of Nimeguen. Since that time the French have made it the bulwark of their possessions in Africa. On a sandy plain, at the foot of the rock, is the town of Gorke, supposed to contain about 6000 inhabitants. It is the entrepot for all the French trade with the opposite coast of Africa.

GORGUE, a town of French Flanders, on the Lys. Population 3000.

GORIKSEFEN, a village of Silisia, 65 miles W. Breslau. Population 2100.

GORITZ, or GORZ, a province of the Austrian empire, situated between Germany and Italy, and bounded N. E. and S. by the duchy of Carniola, and W. by the Venetian states. Population 116,000.

GORITZ, capital of the preceding province, on the Isonzo, 20 miles N. N. W. Trieste.

GORINGSTON, a parish of England, in Suffolk. Population 1920.

GORLINGEN, a village of Wirttemberg, balliwick of Leonberg. Population 1150.

GORLITZ, a town of the Prussian states, in Upper Lusatia, on the Neisse, noted for its woollen and lined manufactures. It contains six churches, the chief of which has an excellent organ. Here also is a spire of great height. Pop. 4500. 50 miles E. Dresden.

GOSNISCARTZ, a town of European Russia, government of Niznei-Novgorod. Population 6000.

GOSNINCHTSE, a town of European Russia, 32 miles E. S. E. Penza. Pop. 3000.

GOSN, a town of France, 9 miles N. W. Mayenne. Population 1800.

GOSNRYE, a town of the Netherlands, in Friesland. Population 1100.

GOSY, a neat village of Ireland, in Galway, 10 miles S. S. E. Galway.

GOSWON, a township of England, in Lancashire, 4 miles S. E. Manchester. Pop. 1004.

GOSZYA, or KOSZYO, a thriving town of Macedonia, 20 miles E. by S. Dimitzro.

GOSZ, a town of France, 7 miles S. W. Metz. Population 1600.

GOSWORTHY, a parish of England, in Lincolnshire. Population 1918.

GOSWOLD, a post township of the United States, in Litchfield county, Connecticut. Pop. 1441.—3d, Of Orange county, New York. Pop. 3150.—4th, Of Oswego county, New York. Pop. 1273.—4th,

Of Belmont county, Ohio. Pop. 1110.—5th, Of St Clair county, Illinois. Pop. 1728.

GOSLAR, a town of Hanover, principality of Hildesheim, on the Gussa. It is an old place, with crowded streets and mean houses. Population 4700. 23 miles S. Brunswick.

GOSPORT, a seaport town of England, in Hampshire. It is situated on a projecting point of land at the western side of the entrance to Portsmouth harbour. On the southwest is a commodious bay, called Stoke's bay. Numerous government works and magazines have been established here, for supplying the wants of the navy; extensive barracks also for the accommodation of the military. Gosport has of late been regularly fortified on the land side, by a line of bastions, redoubts, &c. The principal street extends westward from the harbour to the works, and contains many handsome houses. In the town is an extensive iron foundry, for the manufacture of anchors, and other articles required for shipping. It has a chapel, which is spacious, and the interior is neatly fitted up. There is also a Catholic chapel; a meeting-house for dissenters, who have an academy for their young clergymen; charity schools, almshouses, a neat theatre, and a commodious work-house for the poor. To the south of the town stands Haslar royal hospital, for sick and wounded seamen, a magnificent building, capable of accommodating 3000 patients. Pop. 6184. 1 mile N. W. Portsmouth.

GOSAU, a small town of Switzerland, in the canton of St Gall, 7 miles W. St Gall.

GONSELIEZ, a village of the Netherlands, 6 miles N. Charleroi. Population 3000.

GOSTADT, a mining town of Saxony, circle of the Krageburge. Population 1250.

GOSTYK, a town of Prussian Poland, 37 miles S. Posen. Population 1340.

GOTHA, a town of Saxony, capital of the duchy of the same name, on the Leine. It has a castle, which overlooks the town, in which the duke resides. Here also is a valuable library, an arsenal, and an extensive cabinet of natural history, artificial curiosities, and medals, with a suitable library; also several charitable establishments. Gotha has a few manufactures of porcelain, woollen and cotton stuffs. Population 11,000. 78 miles W. S. W. Leipzig.

GOTHA, SAKE, a principality of Germany, in Saxony, comprising the greatest part of the south of Thuringia. Its superficial extent exceeds 500 square miles. Pop. 61,000.

GOTHA-FLY, a great river in the S. W. of Sweden, which rises in the Norwegian Alps, and divides into two branches, both of which enter the Cattegat, one after passing through Gottenburg, the other a few miles north.

GOTHARD, ST., the name of a very elevated track in the central part of Switzerland, between the cantons of Uri and Tessin. It consists properly of a circular plain, surrounded on all sides by some of the greatest mountains of the Alps. Height above 8000 to 12,000 feet above the level of the sea.

GOTHLAND, the name of the southern and most fertile division of Sweden, comprising all the country to the southward of the Lake Vener, and having thus the Cattegat, the Sound, and the Baltic, for its maritime boundaries. Its superficial extent is about 40,000 square miles. Population 1,500,000.

GOTHLAND, an island of the Baltic, near the south-east coast of Sweden, and belonging to that crown. It forms, along with some very small islands that surround it, a province, having a superficial extent of 700 square miles. The island is hilly on the coast, but level in the interior. It produces corn, and has excellent pasturage. Wisby is the capital. Population 31,000. Long. 18. 5. to 19. 6. E. Lat. 56. 54. to 57. 56. N.

GORTALENGO, a town of Austrian Italy, 17 miles S. Brescia. Population 2500.

GOTTENBURG, a large and thriving town in the south-west of Sweden, situated near the mouth of the large river called Gotha-Elf. It stands in a marshy plain, surrounded by precipitous ridges of naked rocks, rising to the height of from 100 to 300 feet, but intersected by several cultivated openings. The town is divided into Upper and Lower. Though perfectly level, the houses, owing to the marshiness of the ground, are all built upon piles. The principal street, called Great Harbour-street, runs from east to west, and divides the town into two nearly equal parts. The Upper town, from its situation, is built with less regularity; but it has an imposing appearance, the houses rising one above another, in the form of an amphitheatre. The only considerable public edifices of Gottenburg are the exchange, the extensive buildings belonging to the East India company, an hospital, and a magnificent church built since 1812, with stones from Scotland. The only curiosities of the place are a few private collections of paintings. The harbour is commodious for vessels of moderate size, and has a fort on a small rocky island, to defend the entrance. It has manufactures of coarse linen and woollen stuffs, leather, sail-cloth, ropes, some silk and cotton goods, soap, tobacco; also sugar refineries. Iron and steel, furnished by the rich mines of Warmland, form the principal articles of export, and, after these, herrings, linen, timber, tar, train oil, and alum. Here is a large provincial school, a mercantile academy, and an academy of science and literature, incorporated in 1775. The English language is pretty generally spoken here, the language being many of them English. Few merchants suffered more from fire. Pop. in 1790, 24,000. now 24,000. 40 miles S. 1791, July 14, long. 11. 57. 45. E. Lat. 57. 44. N.

GOTTENBURG, a town of Lower Silesia, 12 miles S. W. So. a town of Bohemia, 34 miles S. W. So. a town of Saxony, 1650.

GOTTENBURG, a province in the south of Denmark, under by Brunswick, Hildesanover, &c.

sheim, the Prussian states, and Hesse-Cassel. Its superficial extent is 1225 square miles, and its population 176,000, chiefly Lutherans.

GOTTINGEN, a town in the south of Hannover, and capital of the province of Gottingen. It stands in a pleasant valley, on a canal branching from the Leine. Its streets are wide, well paved, and well lighted at night; its situation healthy. It was formerly fortified; but the walls are now demolished, and laid out in public walks. Gottingen is a place of antiquity, and was, some centuries ago, included in the list of Hanse towns; but its chief title to notice arises from its celebrated university, founded by George II. in 1734, which embraces all the great departments of literature and science, and has now attained to great celebrity. To the university is attached a library, consisting of 200,000 volumes. In 1751, an academy of sciences was also established here, to which the scientific world is indebted for many valuable improvements and discoveries. There are in Gottingen four Lutheran and two Calvinist churches; also a Catholic chapel. Here are also some manufactures of linen and woollen. Population 8500, exclusive of military or students. 51 miles E. S. E. Paderborn. Long. 9. 55. 15. E. Lat. 51. 31. 54. N.

GOTTINGEN, a small seaport of Sweden, 28 miles S. W. Stockholm.

GOTTLENEN, a small town of Switzerland, on the Rhine, 3 miles S. W. Constance.

GOTTSCHKE, a town of Lower Carniola, 20 miles S. S. E. Laybach. Population 1000.

GORAN, a parish of Scotland, partly in Lanarkshire, and partly in that of Renfrew. Population 4325.

GORDA, a town of South Holland, on the Issel. It has large manufactures, partly of porcelain, but more of tobacco pipes. The church of St John the Baptist, at Gorda, is one of the handsomest and largest in the country. The great market-place is of a triangular form, with a handsome town-house, built in 1440, standing in the centre. Population 12,000. 9 miles N. E. Rotterdam.

GOVERNULO, a small town of Austrian Italy, on the Mincio, 12 miles S. E. Mantua.

GOVORE, a town of Piedmont, 6 miles N. Alb. Population 2500.

GOUR, or GAUR, also called Lucknow, a very ancient Hindoo city of Bengal, and for 360 years the capital of that country under the Afghan dynasties. The ruins of this celebrated place still exist on the Ganges.

GOUANON, a small fishing village of Scotland, in Kincardineshire, 2 miles S. Bervie.

GOUARY, a town of France, in Brittany, 45 miles N. W. Vannes. Population 3700.

GOULMAR, a town of Normandy, on the Eure, 24 miles E. Rouen. Population 2350.

GOUGUES, a small town of Scotland, in Renfrewshire, 3 miles W. Greenock.

GOZZO, a small island in the Mediterranean, a little to the north-west of Malta.

It is rocky, but fertile. Its superficial extent is 37 square miles. Population 12,000.

GRAAF RHYNET, the most eastern district in the territory of the Cape of Good Hope, 250 miles in length, and 100 in breadth. Pop. 4262 Christians, 984 slaves, and 3047 Hottentots. 800 miles E. S. E. Cape Town.

GRABOW, a town of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, on the Elbe. Population 2350.

GRACIAS A DIOS, a city of the province of Honduras, 140 miles E. Guatemala. Long. 90. 6. W. Lat. 14. 30. N.

GRADISKA, a strong fortress of European Turkey, in Lower Bosnia.—Also a small but strongly fortified town of Austrian Friuli. Population nearly 1000.

GRAFENHAI, a town of Saxe-Coburg, principality of Altenburg. Population 1200.

GRAFRATH, a town of Westphalia, 20 miles E. Dusseldorf. Population 1650.

GRAFTON, a county of the United States, in New Hampshire, bounded N. by Coos county, E. by Strafford county, S. by Cheshire and Hillsborough counties, and W. by Connecticut river. Pop. 28,462. Chief towns Haverhill and Plymouth.—2d, A post township of Windham county, Vermont. Population 1865.—3d, A township of Rensselaer county, New York. Pop. 1410.

GRAGLIA, a town of Piedmont, near Biella. Population 2600.

GRAGNANA, a town of Naples, in the Principato Citra. Population 5100.

GRAHAMSTON, a village of Scotland, in the county of Stirling.

GRAINE, ISLE OF, a small island opposite Shepey, at the mouth of the Thames.

GRAITNEY, a parish and village of Scotland, in Dumfriesshire. The village of Graitney, or Greta Green, is famous for the marriage of fugitive lovers from England, which are generally celebrated here. Pop. 1945.

GRAITZ, a fortified town of Saxony. It has manufactures of woollen, cotton, and leather. Population 6200. 12 miles S. W. Zwickau.

GRAMAT, a town of France, 28 miles N. E. Cahors. Population 1850.

GRAMMONT, a considerable town of West Flanders, on the Dender. It is divided by that river into Upper and Lower. It has manufactures of linen, carpeting, and paper. Pop. 6000. 14 miles E. by S. Oudenarde.

GRAMPIAN MOUNTAINS, a chain of mountains in Scotland, which stretching, like a mighty wall, along the southern front of the highlands, extends across the island from the district of Cowal, in the shire of Argyre, on the Atlantic, to Aberdeenshire, on the German ocean; and then forming another ridge in a north-westerly direction, extends to the county of Moray, and the borders of Inverness. Their general height is from 1400 to 3500 feet above the level of the sea, and several peaks rise considerably higher. The height of Ben Lomond, in Dumfriesshire, is 3267; of Ben Ledy, 3000; Ben More, 3303; Ben Lawers, the chief summit, 4015; Sheehallion, 3364; and Ben Vorlich, 3300.

GRAMPOWN, a town and borough of England, in Cornwall. It sends two members to parliament, chosen by not more than 40 voters. Pop. 668. 37 miles S. W. Lanesmead.

GRAN, or KERTHEGOS, a free town of Hungary, at the conflux of the Danube and the Gran, and the capital of a county of the same name. The castle stands on a lofty hill on the banks of the Danube; the town-house also is a good building. Population 8000. 76 miles S. E. Presburg.

GRAN, a considerable river of Upper Hungary, which flows into the Danube.

GRANADA, an extensive maritime province in the south of Spain, nearly 200 miles in length, and varying from 40 to 70 in breadth. Its length is nearly from east to west, having on the south the Mediterranean, on the north a part of Andalusia; its south-west extremity approaches Gibraltar. Among the mountains, a calcareous soil, in many places unproductive, is prevalent; but the valleys contain a rich and fertile mould. The Vega (orchard) de Granada, where the capital is situated, is one of the richest and most delightful spots in the world. This fertility is owing chiefly to the copious streams that flow from the mountains in summer, on the melting of the snow. Vines are cultivated on the sides of the hills, but the wine is indifferent. Silk is more attended to. Along the coast are raised indigo, coffee, and sugar.

GRANADA, a celebrated city in the south of Spain, and capital of the province of that name. The situation is highly romantic. The town exhibits to the approaching traveller the form of a half moon, its streets rising above each other, with a number of turrets and gilded cupolas, the whole crowned by the Alhambra, or palace of the ancient Moorish kings, and in the back ground the Sierra de Nevada, covered with snow. But on entering the gates all this grandeur disappears; the streets are found to be narrow and irregular; the buildings display visible marks of decay, and are inferior to those of many other towns in Spain. Granada is built on two adjacent hills, and divided into four quarters. The river Darro flows between the two hills, and traverses the town, after which it falls into the larger stream of the Xenil, which flows outside the walls. In point of extent Granada is nearly as great as in the days of its prosperity. The cathedral is an irregular but splendid building; the archbishop's palace is also extensive and elegant; likewise the mansion occupied by the captain-general of the province. But the grand ornament of Granada is the Alhambra. Though now, like the town, in a state of decay, it remains sufficiently show its original splendour. It commands a beautiful prospect; but a still finer is afforded by another Moorish palace, called the Generalife, built on an opposite hill, and the retreat of the court during the heat of summer. Granada has various manufactures, such as silk and woollen stuffs; it has also a minery, and a manufactory of gunpowder and saltpetre. Granada is the seat of a university. Pop. 66,000. 123 miles E. Seville, 234 S. Malaga. Long. 3. 46. E. Lat. 37. 10. N.

GRANADA, NEW, a viceroyalty of South America, called the New Kingdom of Granada, bounded N. by the Caribbean sea, and the province of Costa Rica in the kingdom of Guatemala; E. by the government of Caracas, Spanish Guiana, and Portuguese Guiana; W. by the Pacific ocean; S. by the river Amazons and the viceroyalty of Peru. Its extent, from 3. 36. S. lat. to 12. N. lat., is about 930 geographical miles, its mean breadth being 240. This extensive viceroyalty is divided into the following provinces, namely, Jaen de Bracamoros, Quixoa, Maynas, Quitó, Tacames, Popayan, Antioquia, Santa Fe, San Juan de los Rios, Merida, Santa Martha, Cartiagena, Choco, Darien, Panama, and Veragua; the three last of which are known by the distinctive appellation of Terra Firma. The climate is various, the country being extensive, and diversified by the lofty ridges of the Andes. This kingdom is extremely rich in mines, particularly in gold; and the silver procured here is also remarkably pure. It is watered by numerous rivers, some of which are very large. Of these the river Magdalena is the principal. The Rio de Bogota is also a large stream. The population of the whole kingdom, according to the estimate of Humboldt, amounted, in 1800, to 1,800,000.

GRANADA, a city, of the province of Jaen, on the shore of the lake of that name. Long. 47. 46. W. Lat. 10. 12. N.

GRAKARD, a neat and comfortable town of Ireland, county of Longford, 11 miles N. E. Longford.

GRAND AZEE, a town in the island of Hispaniola. Long. 74. 5. W. Lat. 18. 16. N.

GRAND-BOURG-SALONAC, a town of France, department of La Creuse. Pop. 2600.

GRAND CHANTY, a town of France, in Brittany. Population 4150.—Another of the same name, department of the Loire Inferieure. Population 1200.

GRAND ISLE, an island of Lake Ontario, about 39 miles in length, and 4 in breadth.

GRAND ISLES, two large islands in Lake Champlain, of which the Americans have changed the French name to North Hero and South Hero.

GRAND LEMPS, a town of Dauphiny, department of the Isere. Population 1700.

GRAND LUC, a town of France, department of the Sarthe. Population 2100.

GRAND MANAN, an island in the Atlantic ocean, opposite to Passamaquoddy bay, on the east border of the United States. Long. 68. 43. W. Lat. 44. 48. N.

GRAND RIVER, a river of the United States, in Louisiana, which enters the Missouri about 250 miles from its mouth.—2d. Of Louisiana, which enters the Arkansas about 200 miles from the Mississippi.—3d. In the Michigan territory, which falls into Lake Michigan—

4th. In Ohio, which falls into Lake Erie.—Also the name of several rivers of Canada.

GRAND TRAVERS, islands at the entrance into Green bay, in Lake Michigan.

GRANDE, a river of Peru, joins the Guapiri.—2d. Of Brazil, province of Bahia, falls into the Rio Francisco. Lat. 11. 24. E.—3d. Of Brazil, falls into the Atlantic. Lat. 14. 26. S.—4th. Of Zanguebar, in Eastern Africa, enters the Eastern sea, Lat. 2. S.

GRANDE, Rio, a considerable river of Western Africa, which falls into the Atlantic, about 200 miles to the south of the Gambia.

GRANDMEU, a town of Brittany, 11 miles S. W. Nantes. Population 2100.

GRANDOLA, a town of Portugal, south of the Tagus, with 800 houses.

GRANDREE, a town of France, in Champagne, on the Ayr. Population 1360.

GRANDREUX, a town of France, department of the Lorene. Population 1660.

GRANDVILLIERA, a town of Picardy, 17 miles N. N. W. Beauvais. Population 1630.

GRANGE, a parish of Scotland, in Banffshire. Population 1482.

GRANGEMOUTH, a village of Scotland, in Stirlingshire, situated on the angle which is formed by the river Carron and the great canal which joins the friths of Forth and Clyde. It carries on a considerable trade.

GRANSE, a town of the Middle Mark of Brandenburg. Population 2050.

GRAS, a town of Provence. Pop. 1750.

GRAS, a town of Spain, in Arragon, 63 miles E. N. E. Saragosa.

GRANSON, a town of Switzerland, 6 miles S. W. Neuchatel. Population 2160.

GRANTA, a river of England, which rises in Essex, and uniting with another river, forms the Cam.

GRANTHAM, a borough and market town of England, in Lincolnshire, on the Witham. The town is neat and clean, and consists of four principal streets. The church is an elegant building of stone, lighted with pointed windows, and celebrated for its spire, 273 feet high. The guild-hall was rebuilt in 1787, with the addition of a large assembly room. The town has derived much benefit from the canal begun in 1794, and extending from Grantham to the Trent. It sends two members to parliament. Population 3120. 30 miles N. Lincoln.

GRANTOWN, a village of Scotland, in Morayshire, 364 miles S. E. Fort George.

GRANTVILLE, a seaport of Normandy, department of La Manche, on a rocky peninsula. It has a considerable traffic, particularly with the neighbouring island of Jersey. 12 miles N. W. Arranches.

GRANTVILLE, a post township of the United States in Washington county, New York, 60 miles N. E. Albany. Population 3117. It contains three villages.

GRATTENHALL, a township of England, in Cheshire. Population 400.

GRATZ, a mining town of Bohemia, 25 miles S. W. Prague, with 450 houses.

GRASS, a river of the United States, in St Lawrence county, New York, which runs into the St Lawrence.

GRASSH, a neatly built town of France, department of the Var. It has a traffic in silk, in leather, and soap; also in liquors of different kinds. Population 12,500. 19 miles W. S. W. Nice.

GRASSINGTON, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 983.

GRASSMERE, a township of England, in Westmoreland. Pop. 324; of the parish, 1778.

GRATIOSA, one of the Azore islands, 30 miles in circumference. Long. 37. 56. W. Lat. 39. 2. N.

GRATZ, a town of Styria, on the river Muhr, capital of a circle of the same name, comprising the northern part of Lower Styria, lying on both sides of the Muhr, having an area of 2100 square miles, and 293,000 inhabitants. The town owed its origin to the strength of its citadel, which is built on a very steep hill on the banks of the Muhr. It has a lyceum, an academy, and a large school. The houses are of stone, and the town is in general well built. It has 22 churches and chapels, great and small; the cathedral is not new, but was formerly the parish church. The most striking edifice in the place is a mausoleum erected to the Emperor Ferdinand II. Gratz contains several manufactures—hardware, stoneware, and saltpetre; also cotton and silk. 100 miles S. W. Vienna. Long. 16. 26. 16. E. Lat. 47. 4. 2. N.

GRATZ, one of the circles into the duchy of Styria is divided.

GRATZ, a town of Bohemia, 94 miles S. Prague. Population 1450.

GRATZ, or GRONZISKA, a town of Prussian Poland. Population 2800.

GRADENTZ, a town of West Prussia, at the confluence of the Vistula and the Ossa. It has manufactures of cloth, extensive breweries, and some trade in corn and tobacco. Population 6700. 55 miles S. Dantzic.

GRAVE, a town of the Netherlands, in North Brabant, on the Meuse, 9 miles S. by W. Nimwegen. Population 1600.

GRAVE, LA, a village of France, department of the Upper Alps. Population 1550.

GRAVELINGHE, a town of French Flanders, on the Aa. Population 2600.

GRAVENMACHERN, a town of the Netherlands, 12 miles S. W. Trever. Pop. 2000.

GRAVESEND, a small place in South Holland, 14 miles S. of the Hague. Pop. 750.

GRAVESEND, a market town of Kent, on the south side, and not far from the mouth of the Thames. It is 21 miles below London, on the great road to Clitham and Canterbury. It is a great rendezvous for shipping. Most of the vessels in the East and West India trade, and indeed outward bound ships in general, are here supplied with live and dead stock, and vegetables. Several boats set out regularly with the tide for London, and return with it again. The numerous shipping which usually lie at anchor in the channel, keep up a constant influx of seamen and strangers. The bathing-house draws additional visitors in the summer season; and from all these circumstances, this town presents a continued scene of bustle and activity. The inhabitants are much engaged in seafaring employments. A small manufactory for cables and ropes is also carried on here; and there is besides, a yard for ship-building, in which several men of war and frigates have been built. The church, dedicated to St George, is near the river. The town-hall, built in 1764, is situated near the middle of the High-street. A small but neat theatre was built in 1808, and a handsome chapel in 1812; on the north side of the London road. A new wharf and crane were erected in 1767, and more recently two batteries of 16 guns each. Population 3814.

GRAVESEND, a township of the United States, in King's county, Long Island, New York, 24 miles S. New York. Pop. 520.

GRAVESEN, a town of France, 6 miles N. E. Tarascon. Population 1000.

GRAVINA, a town of Naples, province of Bari. It is a bishop's see, and contains nine churches. Population 3800. 27 miles S. Trani. Long. 16. 31. E. Lat. 40. 54. N.

GRAULHET, a town of France, in Langue-doc. Population 1600.

GRAUPEN, a mining town of Bohemia, 17 miles N. E. Leutmeritz. Population 1000.

GRAY, a town of France, department of the Upper Saone. It contains 5000 inhabitants, and has a great trade with Lyons in corn, wood, and iron. 28 miles N. E. Dijon.

GRAYSON, a county of the United States, in Kentucky. Population 2301. Slaves 103. —2d, Of Virginia, inclosed by Washington, Wythe, Montgomery, and Patrick counties, and North Carolina. Population 4841. Slaves 270. Chief town Greenville.

GRAZALEMA, a town of Spain, in Granada, 8 miles W. Ronda. Population 5000.

GREASBROUGH, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1252.

GREASELEY, a parish of England, in Nottinghamshire. Population 4241.

GREAT ISLAND, an island on the coast of Ireland, county of Cork.

GREAT ISLAND, in Bass's strait, between New Holland and Van Diemen's Land.

GREAT RIVER, a river of the United States, in Virginia, which runs into Stanton river.—Also of Canada, which runs into the St Lawrence.

GREATHAM, a township of England, in Durham. Population 446.

GREATHAMLEY, a township of England, in Derbyshire. Population 705.

GREENSTEIN, a town of Hesse-Cassel, on the Esse. Population 1200.

GREENA, a town of European Turkey, in Thessaly, 54 miles S. W. Salonica.

GREENING, a town of the Bavarian states, on the Schwarzbach. Population 1200.

GREECE, a maritime country in the south-east of Europe, once independent and highly celebrated, but subject since the 15th century to the government of the Turks. Modern Greece extends from Lat. 37. to 42., having a length of nearly 400 miles, and a mean breadth of about 160. It is divided into four pachalics; 1st, Tripolitza, comprising the whole of the Morea; 2d, Egripos, or Negropont, containing the island of that name, along with part of the adjoining mainland; 3d, Joannina, including Thessaly and part of Albania; and 4th, Salonica, in which are comprehended the southern parts of Macedonia. Each of these is governed by a pacha. Iivadia is the name, not of a pachalic, but of the country corresponding to the part of ancient Greece outside of the Peloponnesus. It comprises the ancient Acarnania, Etolia, Doris, Locris, Phoris, Attica, and Beotia. The Morea, or Peloponnesus comprehends the ancient Achaia, Argolis, Elis, Arcadia, Messenia, and Laconia. The islands of Greece may be divided into those of the Archipelago, and those of the Ionian sea: the latter are now formed into an independent republic, under the protection of Great Britain. The total population of this extensive country is between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000, of which the half are Greeks; the rest are Albanians, Turks, and, in a smaller proportion, Jews. The principal towns are, Salonichi, Seres, Joannina, Argyro Castro, Berat, Arta, Prevesa, Larissa, Negropont, Iivadia, Athens, Salona, Zeitun, Tripolitza, Argos, Patras, Napoli di Romania, and Napoli di Malvasia. The general aspect of Greece is mountainous; and it is intersected, particularly in the north, by continued ranges, several of which are interesting from their scenery, but more from their classical recollections. The principal rivers in Greece are, the Achelous, now called the Aspropotamo; the Peneus, the Salympria; the Eurotas, the Iris; and the Pamisos. All the rest are insignificant streams. Greece has a number of inland lakes, none of which, however, are any way remarkable. Its coasts are deeply indented with bays and creeks, which form a number of excellent harbours. The climate of Greece is very propitious; the air is temperate, and on the whole healthy, excepting in the neighbourhood of marshes, which, from the neglected state of cultivation, have become too numerous. The country produces corn, cotton, silk, wool, rice, and tobacco. But agriculture, speaking generally, is in a very backward state in Greece; and it is only in Thessaly, and the south of Macedonia, that the vestiges of ancient industry are to be discovered. The Morea, though susceptible of the highest degree of cultivation, is almost entirely neglected. Many of the mountains of Greece, particularly in Acarnania and Arcadia, are covered to a great extent with useful timber; some contain valuable metals, and others are almost entirely composed of marble. The inhabitants of Greece may be divided into three distinct classes, Greeks, Albanians, and Turks. The Greeks, it is well known, have, ever since their first conquest by the Turks, groaned under their oppression. The time for their emancipation seems now, however, to be arrived. A formidable insurrection has broken out, and still continues, against the Turkish authority. The Turks have sent different armies into Greece, for the purpose of reducing the insurgents; but these have been defeated and driven back with loss; and the Greeks, having organized a regular force, have now every prospect of establishing their independence.

GREEN, a county of the United States, in the S. W. part of Ohio. Population in 1816, 2000.—The name also of several townships.

GREEN RIVER, a river of the United States, in Kentucky, which joins the Ohio.

GREEN BRIAR, a county of the United States, in Virginia. Population 5914. Slaves 404. Chief town Lewisburg.

GREEN BRIAR, a river of the United States, in Virginia, joins the Kenhaway.

GREEN ISLAND, in the Atlantic, near the coast of Main.—2d, Near the east coast of Antigua.—Another a mile N. E. St Thomas.

GREEN ISLAND HARBOR lies on the west end of the island of Jamaica.

GREEN MOUNTAINS, a range of mountains in North America, extending through Massachusetts and Connecticut, and terminating in New Haven.

GREEN RIVER, in Canada, runs into the St Lawrence.—2d, In Vermont, falls into the Connecticut.

GREEN SPRING, a village of the United States, in Virginia, noted for a battle fought near it in 1781.

GREENE, a county of the United States, in New York, on Hudson river. Pop. 19,536.

—2d, Of Kentucky. Pop. 6733. Slaves 1401. Chief town Greensburg.—3d, Of Tennessee, Pop. 9713. Slaves 656. Chief town Greenville.—4th, Of Pennsylvania, bounded N. by Washington county, E. by the Monongahela, S. and W. by Virginia. Pop. 12,544. Chief town Waynesborough.—5th, Of North Carolina. Pop. 4867. Slaves 1842. Chief town Snowville.—6th, Of Georgia, on the Oconee. Pop. 11,679. Slaves 5236. Chief town Greensborough.—7th, Of Mississippi, bordering on the state of Alabama.—8th, A post township in Kennebec county, Maine, on the Androscoggin, 24 miles S. W. Augusta. Pop. 1277.—9th, Of Chenango county, New York. Pop. 1279.—10th, Of Greene county, Pennsylvania. Pop. 1708.

GREENHAM, a tithing of England, in Berkshire. Population 847.

GREENHILL, a hamlet of England, in Kent, on the banks of the Thames.

GREENLAND, an extensive country, which properly belongs to neither of the two continents, unless, as has been conjectured, it be united to North America, to the north of Davis's straits. It is the most northern country of the western hemisphere of the globe, and reaches, as far as has been discovered, from Cape Farwell, in Lat. 55. 30, to the 70th degree of N. lat. On the west it is bounded by Davis's straits; on the north by some unknown ocean, or by the north pole; on the east by the icy sea, and a strait which separates it from Iceland; and on the south-east by the Atlantic ocean. A central ridge of lofty mountains, covered with perpetual snow, stretches from north to south, and divides Old Greenland into East Greenland and West Greenland. Owing to its northern position, Greenland is, as may be imagined, exposed to all the rigours of the frozen zone. During summer the heat, particularly in the islets, is very great, inasmuch that, in the month of July, Fahrenheit's thermometer sometimes rises to 84 degrees in the shade. In the inlets and bays which intersect the coast of Greenland, immense masses of ice are accumulated during a series of years, which being loosened during the heat of summer, lose their points of support from the shore, and plunge into the ocean with a thundering noise. Being afterwards set adrift by the currents, they embarrass the navigation of the polar seas, and become the terror of the mariner. Those masses of ice are formed both of fresh and of salt water, and sometimes rise more than 600 feet above the surface of the water. The salt water ice occurs in immense fields of many thousand fathoms in length and breadth, divided by fissures, but following close on each other. When the wind begins to blow, and the sea to rise in vast billows, the violent shocks of those masses of ice against each other, fill the mind with astonishment and terror. The coasts of Greenland are surrounded by many thousand islands of different sizes, on which the native inhabitants frequently fix their residence, on account of their good situation for sea game. The animals which are most abundant in Greenland are white hares, rein-deer, dogs resembling wolves, arctic foxes, and white bears, which are very fierce and mischievous. Here are found also ravens in great numbers, eagles of a very large size, falcons, and other birds of prey; and likewise a linnet, which warbles very melodiously. The seas abound in whales, seals of different kinds, sea cows and sea unicorns, sword-fish, porpoises, halibut, turbot, cod, haddock, with various other sorts of white fish. The Greenlanders of both sexes are generally short, or under the common size, but well proportioned, fat, and plump. They are miserably poor, depending on hunting and fishing for their subsistence; and in their houses and manner of living have all the disgusting habits of savages. Greenland was first discovered by the Europeans in the 8th or 9th century. A colony was established, which continued to increase and thrive; and in a little time the country contained 12 parishes, 100 villages, 1 bishop's see, and 2 convents, under the jurisdiction of the archbishop of Drontheim. A colony had also been settled in West Greenland, which maintained a constant intercourse with Europe, and increased to four parishes, containing 100 villages. This colony, from about the year 1408, appears to have been entirely neglected, but in 1803 its inhabitants amounted to 6621; and including the Moravian settlements and the natives, mostly converted to Christianity, the total population of the western coast of Greenland was supposed to amount to 20,000.

GREENH V, a parish and town of Scotland, county of Berwick. Pop. of the parish 1349.

GRENOCK, the chief seaport of Scotland, in Renfrewshire, on an estuary of the Irish channel, which meets the river Clyde several miles farther inland. It contains many neat and well built houses, but its streets are ill regular and narrow; and its general appearance is far from being elegant. In the centre of the town is a square, on the south side of which is a neat church, with a spire 146 feet high. There are other two established churches, the West and the East church. There is besides, a large chapel, in which divine service is performed in Gaelic; also congregations of Roman Catholics, Independents, Methodists, Baptists, Burghers, Antiburghers, &c.; there is also abundance of schools. The other public buildings consist of an infirmary, erected in 1808, and a bridewell erected in 1800. In what are called the commercial buildings, there is a large room appropriated to newspapers and nautical intelligence, and open, without introduction, to all strangers; another apartment, exclusively for underwriters and insurance-brokers; under the same roof is a suit of apartments for balls and concerts; and immediately attached, forming as it were a part of the same building, is a neat theatre. The new custom-house is a very splendid edifice, being in front 120 feet broad, and on each end upwards of 50 feet. It includes also the excise. The manufactories of the place are sugar-houses, rope-works, soap and candle-works, tan-works, potteries, bottle and crystal-works, breweries, a sailcloth manufactory; to these may be added ship-building to a great extent, in which the place has long excelled. The herring fishery is the oldest, and still the greatest branch of local industry in Greenock. Prior to 1097 it was an inconsiderable fishing station; but on the 12th of March, in that year, the directors of the Scottish Indian and African company came to a final resolution to erect salt-works in the frith; and out of circumstances that occurred in the deliberations of that sitting, the attention of the superior Sir John Shaw, was directed to the maritime advantages of the situation. The municipal constitution of Greenock well deserves attention, every proprietor of ground within the town having a vote in the election of the magistrates; and all the other public functionaries of the town, such as the trustees for the harbour, &c. deriving their power from the same source; the public accounts also being always open to inspection. The harbour is very spacious and commodious; within these few years the quays have been removed farther out to a greater depth of water, and new quays have been built to the eastward of the old harbour. Population in 1757, 3900; in 1811, 19,042; in 1821, 22,088. Long. 0. 15. 02. W. Lat. 55. 57. 2. N.

GRANNOCK, a small tributary stream of the river Ayr, in Scotland.

GRANNS NORTON, a parish of England, county of Northampton. Population 740.

GREENABROOK, a post town of the United States, Caroline county, Maryland.—2d, Of Greene county, Georgia, 30 miles S. Athens.

GREENBROOK, a post township of the United States, in Winchester county, New York. Population 1802.

GREENVILLE, a county of the United States, in Virginia, inclosed by Brunswick, Southampton, and Sussex counties, and North Carolina. Population 6853. Slaves 4590. Chief town Hickford.—2d, A post township in Greene county, New York. Pop. 2300.—3d, A post town and capital of Pitt county, North Carolina, 23 miles from Washington.—4th, A post town and capital of Greenville county, South Carolina.—5th, A post town and capital of Green county, Tennessee.

GREENVILLE, a district of South Carolina. Population 13,113. Slaves 2353.

GREENVILLE BAY, a town and port of entry on the east side of the island of Grenada.

GREENWICH, a market town of England, in Kent, on the Thames, immediately below Deptford. It was formerly the seat of a palace in which the kings of England used occasionally to reside; it is now celebrated for the splendid hospital into which this was converted; and, above all, distinguished in the history of science for its observatory. The manor of Greenwich seems to have been acquired by the crown, at the time of the conquest, and has ever since remained in the hands of the royal family. Greenwich was the residence of Edward I.; the palace was built in 1433, by the duke of Gloucester. Edward IV. enlarged and improved it; Henry VII. resided much in it; and here Henry VIII., Queen Mary, and Queen Elizabeth, were all born. It was a favourite residence of Queen Elizabeth and other succeeding sovereigns, and the buildings were gradually enlarged and improved, until they have attained their present state of extraordinary magnificence, and instead of 300, as at first suggested, now accommodate nearly 3000 seamen, whilst 5400 out-pensioners are assisted from the funds.

Greenwich hospital consists at present of four extensive piles of building or wings, entirely detached from each other, into the four corners nearly of a great square, but so connected at the same time, by the conformity of their dimensions, their figures, and the general arrangement of their decorations, as still to form a complete whole. The principal front of this compound structure, which is nearly all of Portland stone, is towards the Thames on the north. The north-west angle is occupied by King Charles's building, the north-east by Queen Anne's, both of them lying next the river; and the posterior wings towards the south are formed of King William's building on the west, and Queen Mary's on the east. The two northern wings are separated by a square of 270 feet wide; and so also would the two southern, but that the space between them is filled up on each side by two colonnades, only 115 feet asunder, supported by six double columns and pilasters; while a spacious avenue through the hospital from the town, divides these squares from each other, and thus also divides the whole of the northern half of the building from the whole of the southern. In the middle of the great square is a statue of George II. sculptured by Bysrache, out of a single block of white marble. Extending 365 feet along the front, the intervening bank of the Thames is formed into a terrace, with a double flight of steps to the river in the middle. King Charles's building contains apartments for the governor and lieutenant-governor, the council room, fourteen wards for the pensioners, and various other chambers. Queen Anne's building is occupied with officers' apartments, and 24 wards. King William's contains the great hall, vestibule, and dome, designed and erected, between 1690 and 1703, by Sir Christopher Wren. This building contains 11 wards. Queen Mary's building comprises the chapel, built from the designs of Stuart, on the site of a former edifice, destroyed by fire in 1778. One of the highest efforts of West, the shipwreck of Paul, forms the altar-piece; and, on the whole, this superb edifice forms one of the finest specimens of the Grecian style in this country. The pensioners to be received into the hospital must be aged and maimed seamen of the navy, or of the merchant service, if wounded in battle; and marines and foreigners who have served two years in the navy. The total expense of the establishment is L.60,000 per annum. Greenwich park was detached from the palace when this became part of the hospital, and is still in the hands of the crown. The ranger's lodge now forms the centre of the naval asylum, designed for the support and education of the orphan children of seamen. On a rising ground in the park, and commanding one of the richest and most varied prospects that can well be conceived, stands the royal observatory, for ever celebrated by the great names with which it is associated. Besides the principal hospital, Greenwich contains two for the poor, and several charity schools. The church is an elegant stone building; it was erected in 1718. The private buildings are handsome, but the streets are in general irregular. Population 23,712. 44 miles E. London-bridge. Long. 0. 0. Lat. 51. 32. N.

GREENWICH, a post township of the United States, in Hampshire county, Massachusetts, 20 miles E. Northampton. Pop. 1238.—2d, East, A post township and capital of Kent county, Rhode Island, 18 miles S. Providence. Pop. 1830.—3d, West, a township in Kent county, Rhode Island. Pop. 1019.—4th, A post township in Fairfield county, Connecticut, on Long Island sound, 38 miles E. New York. Pop. 3533.—6th; In Washington county, New York, on the Hudson, 8 miles W. Salem. Pop. 3749.—6th; In Cumberland county, New Jersey, on Cohamny creek, 15 miles S.E. Salem. Pop. 3753.—7th; In Gloucester county, New Jersey, on the Delaware, 6 miles S. E. Philadelphia. Pop. 2839.—8th; In Sussex county, New Jersey, on Delaware river. Pop. 2532.—9th; In Berks county, Pennsylvania. Pop. 1104.—10th; A post village in Charleston district, South Carolina.

GREEN, a river of Ireland, county of Kildare, which joins the Barrow.

GREGORIO, SAN, a town of Naples, with 4200 inhabitants.

GRUPPENBERG, a town of Silesia, on the Queiss. Population 3400.

GRUPPENHAGEN, a town of Pomerania, on the Oder. Population 3400.

GRUPPSWALDE, a town of Pomerania, on the Rik, 15 miles S. E. Stralsund. Pop. 3800.

GRENADE, an island in the West Indies, about 20 miles long from N. to S. and about 10 broad in the centre, but gradually narrowing towards both extremities. The face of the country is mountainous, a ridge of high land crossing it from N. to S. which is not however inaccessible in any point, and it abounds in springs and rivulets. On the whole, it appears to be fertile in a high degree, and, by the variety as well as excellence of its returns, seems adapted to every tropical production; but the quantity of land cultivated has never exceeded 50,000 acres. Grenada was discovered by Columbus in the year 1498. It was originally settled by the French, and in 1762 was taken by the British, to whom it was confirmed by the peace of 1763. It has fallen off in population since it came into the possession of the British. Population in 1811—Slaves 29,351; whites 771; free people of colour 4210; total 31,362. 123 miles S. W. Barbadoes. Long. 61. 43. W. Lat. 12. 31. N.

GRENADE, two towns of France, in Gascony. Population 3250.—1350.

GRENADELLAS, a cluster of islands in the West Indies, dependent on Grenada.

GRIGNON, a town of France, department of the Isere, and divided by the river Isere into two parts, which are joined by two bridges. The streets are tolerably wide and regular, but the houses ill built; and part of the town is exposed to inundation from the Isere. Grignone, though not a fine town, has several spacious squares. It is surrounded with ramparts. The public buildings are the ancient Hotel de Lesdigueres, now the town-house, with its spacious gardens used as a public promenade; the court-house, an elegant Gothic building, situated in a square; the cathedral, a heavy edifice, also in the Gothic style. On an eminence, near the middle of the town, stands the ruins of a once strong chateau, called the Bastille. The town has a university, a great provincial school, an academy of arts and sciences, societies of medicine and agriculture, schools of surgery and midwifery, and the artillery school. To these institutions belong a library of 60,000 volumes, a museum, a botanical garden, a cabinet of natural history, and a small cabinet of antiquities. The principal manufactures of Grignone are of gloves, cotton articles, and different kinds of liquors. It has likewise manufactures of hemp. Population 23,000. 27 miles S. Chambery.

GREASE, a town on the N. E. coast of Java. It has comparatively few European inhabitants, but the native population and Chinese are still numerous. Long. 112. 50. E. Lat. 7. 2. S.

GRAVEN, a town of the Prussian states, on the Ems, with 3480 inhabitants.

GRAUSEN, a town of Germany, in Saxony. Population 1500. 10 miles N. Erfurt.

GREWELTHORPE, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire, 6½ miles N. W. Rippon. Population 527.

GRAY, or UPPER LEAGUE, one of the three leagues into which the canton of the Grisons, in Switzerland, is divided. Pop. 20,000.

GREZ, a town of South Brabant, with 1000 inhabitants. 11 miles S. by E. Louvain.

GRICHHEAD, a cape on the west coast of the island of Barra, one of the Scotch Hebrides. Long. 7. 31. W. Lat. 60. 59. N.

GRICHHEIM, a village of Hesse-Darmstadt. Pop. 1700. 5 miles W. by S. Darmstadt.

GRIGNAN, a town of France, in Provence. Madame de Sevigné died here in 1696. Pop. 1700. 14 miles S. S. E. Montelimar.

GRIGNON, a neat town of France, department of the Gironde. Population 1350.

GRIMBERGEN, a town of the Netherlands, 6 miles N. Brussels. Population 2700.

GRINLEY, a parish of England, county of Worcester. Population 660.

GRIMM, a town of Pomerania, with 1400 inhabitants. 17 miles S. Stralsund.

GRIMMA, a town of Saxony, on the Mulda, 15 miles E. S. E. Leipzig. It has woollen, linen, and cotton manufactures. Pop. 3000.

GRINEAR, one of the Hebrides, on the coast of Scotland, 2 miles long.

GRIMSBY, GREAT, a market, borough, and seaport town of England, in Lincolnshire, on the Humber. It has a considerable trade, principally with the Baltic and along the coast. The church is large and handsome, and contains many ancient monuments; and the steeple affords an excellent specimen of the pointed, or Gothic architecture. Grimsby is a borough of great antiquity, and sends 2 members to parliament. Pop. of the borough and parish, 3004. 36 miles N. E. Lincoln.

GRIMSTON, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Pop. 1124.

GRINCELEY, a parish of England, in Nottinghamshire. Population 647.

GRINSTEAD, EAST, a borough and market town of England, in Sussex, containing some neat modern houses, but irregularly built. The church is a large and handsome building. Pop. 3152. 20 miles S. by E. London.

GRINSTEAD, WYSE, a parish of England, in Sussex. Population 1229.

GRINWICH, a parish of England, North Riding of Yorkshire. Population 5300.

GRISSON, one of the smaller Grenadillas, in the West Indies.

GRISSON, COUNTRY or, a canton in the east of Switzerland, the largest of the republic, bounded by Upper Austria, Venetian Lombardy, and the small cantons of Ticino, Fri, Glarus, and St Gall. It comprehends no less than 60 principal and lateral valleys, and has, in all, a superficial extent of 2500 square miles. The natural division of the country is into five great valleys, viz. those of the Anterior and Posterior Rhine; that of the Engadin, or valley of the Inn; that of the Albula; and lastly, that of the Prettigau. The surface is very mountainous throughout, the country being intersected by several lofty ranges of the Alps, some of them of great elevation, and covered with glaciers. In the highest ranges, winter reigns throughout the year; in the elevated plains and meadows, the summer continues for only three months; but, in the lower valleys, the climate is mild and pleasant during a considerable part of the year. The division into three leagues still remains, viz. the League of God's House, the Grey League, and the League of the Ten Jurisdictions. Population 73,000.

GRISSOLTE, a town of France, in Languedoc, on the Garonne. Population 2100.

GRODNO, a town of Russian Poland, on the Niemen. It consists of a mixture of wooden huts, and of houses once the residence of noblemen, but now neglected and in ruins. It is the seat of an academy, and has in the town and neighbourhood manufactures of silk, linen, and fire-arms. Population 5000. 140 miles N. E. Warsaw. Long. 23. 49. 45. E. Lat. 53. 40. 30. N.

GRODNO, an extensive province or government of Russian Poland, forming part of Lithuania, and adjacent to the governments of Wilna and Minsk. Its superficial extent is fully 11,000 square miles; its population about 620,000.

GROUNDE, a town of Hanover, principality of Calenberg, on the Weser. Near it is a monument in commemoration of a battle fought here in 1421. Population 700. 9 miles S. Hanneln.

GROEL, or GROENING, a town of the Netherlands, province of Gelderland, 19 miles E. Zutphen. Population 1900.

GROEVE, a river of Wales, which falls into the Uk, near Llangany.

GROENINGEN, a considerable province of the Netherlands, bounded by the German ocean N., by Hanover E., and by the Dutch provinces of Overthe and Friesland S. and W. Its superficial extent is about 770 square miles. The surface is level, and the whole province is intersected by canals and wet ditches. Its chief wealth lies in its pastures, which are uncommonly rich, and feed an excellent breed of cattle. Pop. 116,000.

GROENINGEN, a large and well built town of the Netherlands, capital of the province of the same name, on the Hunze and Fivel. It has three public squares, and several handsome public buildings; in particular, the prince's palace, the meeting-house of the provincial assembly, the arsenal, and the custom-house. The church of St Martin is in the Gothic style, with a tower of great height, which affords an extensive prospect from its summit. The university of Groningen, founded in 1614, and endowed with the revenues of several monasteries, has long borne a respectable character. The harbour is commodious, and pretty large. Population 20,500. 100 miles N. E. Amsterdam. Long. 6. 35. E. Lat. 53. 12. N.

GROENINGEN, a town of Westphalia, on the Bode. Population 2250.

GROENINGEN, a town of Wurtemberg, with 2200 inhabitants. 7 miles N. N. W. Stuttgart.

GROETENBROEK, a town of South Holland, with 1100 inhabitants.

GROETENBROEK, a town of North Brabant. Population 2800. 10 miles S. S. W. Breda.

GROENNA. See Tolu Groen.

GROSS-BORNA, a town of Wurtemberg. Pop. 2250. 18 miles N. Stuttgart.

GROSSENHAUSEN, a town of Saxony, circle of Meissen, on the Roder. It has an establishment for printing cotton; also woollen manufactures. Pop. 3500. 8 miles N. Meissen.

GROSSETO, a town of Tuscany. Population 2000. 70 miles S. Florence.

GROSSWIG, a village of Prussian Saxony, 3 miles S. by E. Torgau.

GROTHAN, a small town of Silesia, principality of Neisse. The chief article of trade in this place is yarn. Population 1650. 14 miles N. Neisse.

GROTON, a parish of England, in Suffolk, 1 mile N. Ipswich. Population 597.

GROTON, a post township of the United States, in Middlesex county, Massachusetts, 34 miles N. W. Boston. Pop. 1886.—2d, In New London county, Connecticut, at the mouth of the Thames. Population 4451.

GROTTA MINARDA, a town of Naples, in the Principato Ultra. Population 2250.

GROTZINGEN, a town of Germany, in Baden, with 1600 inhabitants.

GRODIA, a small island of France, on the coast of Brittany. Population 3600.

GROUPES, a handsome town of Brazil, with a fine and capacious harbour, and good anchorage. Lat. 26. 26. S.

GROVE, a town of the Netherlands, in Friesland. Population 1490.

GROZENEN, a village of Germany, on the Pinz. Population 1100.

GROZENHAGEN, a principality in the kingdom of Hanover, on the east side of the Leine. Population 60,000. This principality forms, by a late division, part of the province of Göttingen.—It was the name of a castle, now in ruins.

GROZOLLO, a town of Piedmont, district of Turin. Population 2900.

GAUHA, a village of Naples, to the east of the capital. Population 3100.

GRUNAU, a village of Silesia, near Herschberg. Population 1800.

GRUNBERG, a town of Silesia, principality of Glogau. It has manufactures of cloth. Pop. 6000. 30 miles N. W. Glogau.

GRUNBERG, a town of Hesse-Darmstadt, near the Lahn. Population 2100.

GRUNINGEN, a town of the Swiss canton of Zurich. Population 1300.

GRUNSTADT, a town of the Bavarian circle of the Rhine. Population 2300. 22 miles W. N. W. Spire, and 23 E. Mentz.

GRUYERE, a town of Switzerland, noted for its cheese. Population 1800. 22 miles E. N. E. Lausanne.

GRYFF, a river of Scotland, in Renfrewshire, joins the Black Cart, near Paisley.

GSHAT, a town of Russia, government of Smolensko. Population 2500.

GUABARE, a tributary of the Orinoco, in New Granada. Long. 60. 12. W. Lat. 4. 18. N.

GUADALAVIAR, a large river of Spain, enters the gulf of Valencia, in Lat. 39. 26. N.

GUADALAXARA, a province of Spain, in New Castile. Its area is 1050 square miles, with 122,000 inhabitants. It forms an elevated plain, intersected by mountains, and traversed by the Tagus.

GUADALAXARA, the capital of the above province. It is indifferently built. Its only remarkable edifice is a palace of the Duke del Infantado, and a cathedral. It has a large manufacture of cloth for account of government. Pop. 12,000. 70 miles E. S. E. Segovia. Long. 3. 22. 15. E. Lat. 40. 33. N.

GUADALAXARA, a province or intendancy of Mexico, bounded N. by the intendancies of Sonora and Durango, E. by the intendancies of Zacatecas and Guanajuato, S. by the province of Valladolid, and W. for a length of 369 miles, by the Pacific ocean. Its greatest breadth is 300 miles, and its greatest length is 350 miles. It contains 2 cities, 6 towns, and 323 villages. Pop. in 1803, 630,500.

GUADALAXARA, the capital of the above intendancy. It is both large and handsome, containing 8 squares, many convents, and two colleges for education. Here is a manufactory of cigars; and the natives make a sort of jars of a fine scented earth, which are in much request. Population 19,500, consisting of Spaniards, mulattoes, and mestizos. 280 miles N. W. Mexico. Long. 103. 52. 16. W. Lat. 21. 3. 0. N.

GUADALIXON, a river of Spain, province of Jaen, which falls into the Guadalquivir.

GUADALMER, a river of Spain, which joins the Guadalquivir in Spanish Estremadura.

GUADALUPE, an island of the West Indies, and one of the largest and most valuable of the Caribbean islands. It is situated in Long. 62. W. and in Lat. 18. 20. N., and is between 60 and 70 miles in length, and about 25 miles in its greatest breadth. It is divided into two parts by a channel, in breadth from 30 to 80 yards. This channel runs north and south, and communicates with the sea on both by a large bay at each end, of which that on the north is called Grand Cul de Sac, and that on the south Petit Cul de Sac. The east part of the island is called Grand Terre, and is about 57 miles from Antigua point. This part is about 150 miles in circumference. The west part, which is properly Guadaloupe, is subdivided by a ridge of mountains into Capes-terre on the west, and Basse-terre on the east. This is 36 miles from north to south, and 23 where broadest; and about 130 in circuit. Both parts would be joined by an isthmus 6 miles in breadth, were it not cut through by the river. In many parts the soil is rich, and not inferior to that of Martinica. Its produce is the same with that of the other West India islands, namely, sugar, coffee, rum, ginger, cocoa, logwood, &c. The island is well stored with horned cattle, sheep, horses, &c. This island was first discovered by Christopher Columbus. It was taken possession of by the French in 1638, who drove the natives into the mountains. In 1760, it was taken by a British squadron, and was restored to France at the peace of 1763. It was again taken by the British in 1794; but was retaken by the French in 1795. In 1810, it was again taken possession of by a British armament; and in 1814, was restored to the French. Population in 1812, according to a return to the British house of commons; whites 12,747; slaves 94,328; negroes 7764; total 114,839.

GUADALUPE, a river of Mexico, province of Texas, enters the gulf of Mexico.

GUADALQUIVIR, i. e. the Great River, one of the largest rivers in Spain. It rises in the province of Granada, traverses Andalusia, passes by Andujar, Cordova, and Seville, and falls into the Mediterranean about 20 miles N. W. Cadiz, Long. 4. 35. W. Lat. 36. 46. N.

GUADALUPE, a town of Spain, province of Toledo, on a river of the same name, 45 miles S. W. Toledo. Population 3000.

GUADALUPENA, a tributary of the Guadalquivir, in Spain.

GUADARRAMA, a river of Spain, in New Castile, joins the Tagus 9 miles below Toledo. Also a small town on the above river.

GUADAMAR, a river of Spain, which joins the Guadalquivir, below Seville.

GUADIANA, the ancient Ana, a large river of Spain, which running westward, passes by Ciudad Real, Merida, and Badajoz, and entering Portugal, falls into the sea between Ayamonte and Castel Marim, in Long. 7. 26. W. Lat. 37. 10. N.

GUADIANO, a river of Spain, in Granada, which falls into the Mediterranean.

GUADILAR, a river of Spain, which joins the Guadalquivir, 16 miles below Cordova.

GUADIX, a town of Spain, in Granada, near the Guadalquivir. It has 5 churches and 7 convents, with 6300 inhabitants. Here are manufactures of hemp and flax, also of silk. The climate is temperate, owing to the elevated situation among the mountains. 28 miles E. N. E. Granada.

GUAILLA, of HUAILLA, a province of Peru, 46 miles long, and 10 broad.

GUAIMA, a town of the Caracas, province of Venezuela. It has a celebrated port, defended by a castle, which is however, open to the swell of the ocean. The town of Guaira is so surrounded with mountains, that there is no visible horizon. The climate is in consequence hot and unhealthy. The town is defended by regular batteries. On the 20th March 1812, this unfortunate town was laid in ruins by an earthquake. Pop. 6900. 7 miles N. Caracas. Long. 67. 2. W. Lat. 10. 40. N.

GUALDO, a small town of the Popedom. Population 3000. 6 miles N. Nocera.

GUALION, a district of Hindostan, province of Agra, situated between the 26th and 27th degrees of N. lat., and the 78th and 79th of E. long.

GUALION, a celebrated fortress of Hindostan, in the province of Agra, situated on a hill, at the bottom of which stands the town, which is large and populous, and carries on a considerable trade between the Mahratta and British territories. Long. 78. 14. E. Lat. 26. 18. N.

GUALLAGA, a large river of South America, which enters the Amazonas, in Lat. 7. 16. S.

GUALTENO, a town of the states of Modena. Population 4150.

GUAM, or GUANON, one of the Ladrone islands, about 120 miles in circuit, high and shelving on the east side, and fenced with steep rocks, opposed to the perpetual beating of the sea. As the climate is very fine, vegetables and fruits are in great profusion, particularly guavas, bananas, coconos, oranges, and limes. The inhabitants are dispersed in 21 hamlets or villages, chiefly situated along the coast; for the interior is yet over-run with woods, and in a state of nature. All pursue agriculture; and the facility of obtaining other subsistence, induces them to neglect the fishery. The Spaniards have a settlement on the island. The natives were greatly reduced in number by their barbarities, when they first invaded the island.

GUAMA, a large river of Brazil, which enters the Amazonas at the town of Para.

GUAMACHUCO, a province of Peru, 30 leagues long, and 10 wide. It is mountainous and cold. Population 11,000. The capital is of the same name.

GUANAKERA, or HUANALINKA, a province of Peru, 200 miles long, and 90 broad.

GUAMANTA, a town of Peru, and capital of a province of the same name. It is a handsome town. The buildings are all of stone. The public places and squares are magnificent. It has various parochial churches, besides the cathedral, and several other places of worship, with numerous convents. There is also a university. 188 miles S. E. Lima. Long. 76. 40. W. Lat. 12. 50. N.

GUAMES, a river of Quilo, province of Pastos, which runs east into the Putumayo.

GUAMOCO, a city of the province of Antioquia, in Granada, 32 miles N. E. Antioquia.

GUANAM, a town of the Caracas, province of Varinas, on a river of the same name. The streets are straight, wide, and the houses, without being sumptuous, are neatly built. There is an hospital, with a moderate revenue; but the parish church is large, handsome, and adorned in a superior style. The inhabitants chiefly depend on the produce of their pasture lands. Population 12,300. 193 miles S. S. W. Caracas. Long. 68. 55. W. Lat. 8. 14. N.—The river Guanare runs into the Apure.

GUANAXUATO, one of the twelve intendancies of Mexico, wholly situated on the ridge of the Cordillera of Anahuac, and the most populous province of the whole viceroyalty. The population is also more equally distributed. Its length is 52 leagues; and its breadth 31 leagues. It is chiefly noted for the riches of its mines, which exceed those of Potosi. There are, in the intendancy of Guanaxuato, 3 cities, 4 towns, 37 villages, 33 parishes, and 448 farms. Population 517,500.

GUANAXUATO, a large and flourishing city of Mexico, in the intendancy of the same name. The population within the city amounts to 41,000; and in the mines surrounding the city, of which the buildings are contiguous, to 20,000; altogether to 70,000. The ground on which the city is built is 8836 feet above the level of the sea. Long. 101. 54. 45. W. Lat. 21. 0. 15. N.

GUANCABAMBA, or CHAMAYA, a river of Quilo, province of Jaen de Bracamoros, which falls into the Amazonas.

GUANCAMELICA, a town of Peru, and capital of the province of Angaraes. It is situated in a broken and uneven glen of the Andes, so elevated, that the temperature is extremely cold, and the weather perpetually changing. It is noted for its rich mines of gold and silver in the neighbouring mountains. It has also a celebrated mine of quicksilver. 140 miles S. E. Lima. Long. 74. 51. W. Lat. 12. 50. S.

GUANEA, a province of Peru. Population 10,000. Its capital is of the same name.

GUANCOCO, the capital of a province of the same name in Peru, now reduced to a miserable village. Long. 75. 36. W. Lat. 10. 2. S.

GUAPORA, a large river of Brazil, which flows into the Arinos, and their conjoined streams form the great river Tapaya.

GUARAVICHE, a river of South America, in Cumana, which enters the gulf of Paria, in Lat. 10. S. N.

GUARDA, a fortified town of Portugal, province of Beira. Population 3300.

GUARDABAN, a smaller town of Spain, in Valencia, at the mouth of the Segura. Population 4200. 17 miles S. S. W. Albant.

GUAREMA, a town of Naples, in the Terra di Lavoro. Population 4100.

GUARMA, a town of Spain, 30 miles S. S. E. Madrid. Population 3260.

GUARDA, a town of Naples, 11 miles E. Molise. Population 1800.

GUARDIA, a town of Spain, in Galicia, 14 miles W. S. W. Tuy. Population 1600.

GUARDIA LOMBARDA, a town of Naples, in the Principato Ultra. Population 2800.

GUARDIALFERRA, a town of Naples, province of Molise, 16 miles N. E. Molise. Population 1600.

GUARENNA, a town of Piedmont, 6 miles N. by W. Alba. Population 2200.

GUARICO, a large river of the Caraccas, which falls into the Apure.

GUAROCHERI, the capital of a district of the same name in Peru. Long. 76. 18. W. Lat. 11. 53. S.

GUASTALLA, a fortified town of Italy, capital of a duchy of the same name, at the confluence of the Crostols and the Po. After various changes, the duchy now belongs to the Archduchess Maria Louise, late empress of France. Pop. 5500. 21 miles S. Mantua. Long. 10. 39. 46. E. Lat. 44. 54. 58. N.

GUATIMALA, one of the nine independent governments into which the Spanish possessions in America are divided. It extends, according to its political limits, on the narrow part of the continent of America, from the provinces of Oaxaca and Vera Cruz, in Mexico, southward to Veragua, on the isthmus of Darien, and includes various districts but little known.

GUATIMALA, a province of the above government, which extends about 130 leagues along the coast of the Pacific ocean, and is in some places from 30 to 40 in breadth. It is bounded N. E. by Vera Paz and Chiapa, E. by Honduras, S. W. by the Pacific ocean, S. E. by Nicaragua, and N. and W. by Oaxaca. It is a mountainous country.

GUATIMALA, SANTIAGO DE, the capital of the above province and government, founded in 1524. It was twice destroyed by an earthquake. The city, now rebuilt, stands 25 miles to the south of the old town. It is a magnificent place, adorned with churches and monasteries, and an university, reckoned one of the best in the empire. Population 19,000. Long. 22. 40. W. Lat. 14. 28. N.

GUAYARI, a river of the Andes of Quito, which falls into the Orinoco. Lat. 4. 20. N.

GUAYABANDA, a river of Peru, which runs into the Guallaga. Lat. 7. 23. S.

GUAYAQUIL, a province of Quito, in South America, which extends 110 miles from north to south, its jurisdiction commencing at Cape Panto to the north, in Lat. 22. S. and extending as far as the mouth of the river Tumbes, in Lat. 3. 25. S. It is bounded in that direction by the province of Truxillo, and that of Piura, in Peru. E. by that of Cuzco, N. by that of Esmeraldas, and N. E. by those of Riobamba and Chimbo. It is of an extremely hot and humid temperature, and its territory is largely fertile.

GUAYAQUIL, the capital of the above province, on both sides of the river of the same name, over which is a wooden bridge. It is about 1½ miles long, and built of good houses; but these being mostly of wood, it is liable, in consequence, to conflagrations, by which it has frequently suffered. It has a celebrated commercial port in the river Guayaquil, and an excellent dock to the south, on the shore of the same river. Population 20,000. 150 miles S. S. W. Quito. Long. 79. 40. W. Lat. 2. 11. 21. S.

GUAYAQUIL, a river of this province, which has its rise in the Andes. It enters the sea in the gulf of its name, in Lat. 2. 27. S.

GUSSO, or EVUGGIO, a town of Italy, at the foot of the Appennines. It manufactures woollen and silk stuffs. Population 4000. 35 miles N. Spoleto.

GUTH, a town of Lower Lusatia, at the junction of the Laubst and the Nebes. It has manufactures of cloth, and a considerable trade in flax and linen. Population 6000. 70 miles N. N. E. Dresden.

GUDI, a town of India, province of Mysore. Long. 77. 10. E. Lat. 13. 7. N.

GURGON, a town of France, department of the Morbihan. Population 2400.

GURMENEX, a town of France, department of the Loire Inferieure. Pop. 3000.

GURE, a town of France, department of the Morbihan. Population 4800.

GURRANNE, a town of France, department of the Loire Inferieure, between the mouth of the Vilaine and the Loire. It has extensive manufactures of salt. Population 7300. 26 miles W. Nantes.

GUERARD, a town of France, department of the Seine and Marne. Population 1650.

GUERCHÉ, I. A., a town of France, 18 miles E. S. E. Rennes. Population 3000.

GURET, a town of France, department of La Creuse, 221 miles S. Paris. Pop. 3400.

GUERLESQUIN, a town of France, in Brittany, 11 miles S. E. Morlaix. Pop. 1800.

GUERNICA, a town of Spain, province of Biscay, 22 miles N. N. E. Vittoria.

GUERNSEY, an island in the English channel, near the coasts of Brittany and Normandy, lies in the spacious gulf termed Mount St Michael's bay. Guernsey extends nine miles in length, by six in breadth, and is about 30 in circuit. It is abundantly watered, though, from its limited size, none of the streams are considerable. The soil, especially in the low part of the island, is rich and fertile, and yields very fine pasture. Vegetables are in great variety, and of an excellent quality. Timber is neither luxuriant nor lofty, and the hedges are chiefly composed of furze, sown on banks of turf. Most kinds of fruit grow in profusion; and so genial is the climate, that myrtles and geraniums flourish in the open ground, and even the orange tree will fruitify, with very little shelter in winter. The fig tree attains great luxuriance, and sometimes reaches a remarkable size. One of the most useful vegetables is a marine plant, called by the generic name of trac, which is used both for fuel and manure; but, to prevent the indiscriminate destruction of it by the inhabitants, two seasons, midsummer and Michaelmas, are appointed for its collection. Most of the natives have a greater resemblance to the French than to the English nation. All their domestic utensils and implements of husbandry are after the French fashion, as also their dress, speech, and mode of living. These, however, among the higher ranks, are receiving great modifications from an increasing intercourse with England. Both the judicial and executive authorities are exercised by a convention of several different bodies, collectively designated the Assembly of the States. The whole consist of a bailiff, 12 jurats, the procureur, or attorney-general of the royal court, the 8 rectors of the 10 parishes, 2 constables from each parish, and 132 douzainiers from the whole. But the task of raising money, to defray public expenses, is committed to what is called the States of Deliberation, a political body, composed of the bailiff, 12 jurats, and a procureur, the 8 rectors of the 10 parishes, and the united voice of the constables and douzainiers of each parish; the total number of voters being 32. Application must, however (unless in cases of peculiar emergency), be made to the king, for permission to carry into effect the levies proposed by this convention. Guernsey is divided into 10 parishes, the churches appertaining to which were consecrated between the years 1111 and 1312. The Calvinists and Methodists are very numerous, and have several chapels. The Roman Catholics are few. The society of Friends, or Quakers, are rather increasing in numbers. Population 20,627. 26 miles W. S. W. Cape la Hague, 36 W. by S. Cherbourg, 94 S. W. Portsmouth. Long. 2. 40. W. Lat. 49. 33. N. GUERNSEY, a county of the United States, in Ohio. Population in 1815, 4000. Chief town Cambridge.

GUETARIA, a fortified castle and small town of Spain, 9 miles W. St Sebastian.

GURIAN, a town of Silesia, 17 miles E. Glogau. Population 2800.

GUIANA, an extensive country of South America, which is bounded by the great river Orinoco N. and N. W., by the river Amazon S., by the Atlantic ocean E., and by the Spanish territories of New Granada W. It is situated between the parallels of 3.20. N. and 5.0. lat., and between 50. 40. 70. 20. W. long. from the meridian of London. This extensive territory is occupied by four powers, namely, the Spaniards, the Portuguese, the French, and the Dutch. The southern part of the country belongs to the Portuguese. By a treaty concluded with France in 1801, the Portuguese territories were terminated on the north by a small river, which discharges itself into the Amazon in 0.20. N. lat. below Fort Macapa. French Guiana is bounded E. by the river Cayana, which mingles its waters with those of the Amazons; N. by the Maroni; E. by the Atlantic; and W. by the Spanish frontier. The Dutch possessions of Surinam, Essequibo, and Demerara, are bounded E. by the Atlantic, S. by the river Maroni, N. by the Essequibo, according to treaty, but they have clandestinely carried these limits to Cape Nassau, and W. by Spanish Guiana. The Spanish part of Guiana is bounded E. by the Atlantic, from Cape Nassau to the mouth of the Orinoco, distant the one from the other about 30 leagues. The river Orinoco is its southern limit for about 550 leagues from the sea; it then becomes its western boundary; while Portuguese Guiana serves for the boundary on the north. Guiana, according to some, was discovered by Columbus in the year 1498. It was visited by Sir Walter Raleigh, who, in 1595, sailed up the Orinoco above 600 miles, in search of the supposed El Dorado. It was settled by the English, from whom it was taken by the Dutch, and confirmed to them at the peace of Breda. The Dutch colonies in Guiana were taken by the British in 1796. They were surrendered to Holland at the peace of Amiens. In the subsequent war, they were again taken by the forces of Great Britain, and now remain in her possession, by the treaty of Paris, concluded in 1814. In 1586, the city of St Thomas was founded in Spanish Guiana, about 50 leagues from the mouth of the Orinoco. It was gradually removed, in 1764, about 40 leagues farther from the sea. The French undertook the colonisation of Cayenne, or French Guiana, in 1635. Guiana is of a mild climate for a tropical country. The range of the thermometer on the sea coast, and during the dry season, which is reckoned the hottest, is from 84 to 90; but in general it is confined between 73 and 84. In the interior it seldom rises above 80, and during the night frequently falls as low as 60 or 60. Along the sea shore, and for a considerable way into the interior, the country is an extensive and uniform plain of unequalled fertility. In advancing into the interior, the country rises into mountains, many of which are sandy and barren, and covered with rocks, and frequently contain a great variety of mineral substances. Rich and fertile vallies are interspersed throughout these mountainous tracts. These uncultivated parts are covered with immense forests, which are intersected with deep marshes, and by extensive savannahs or plains covered with luxuriant herbage. The country is intersected by the tributary streams of the Orinoco and the Amazon. The principal rivers flow into the Atlantic; they are the Essequibo, the Demerara, the Berbice, the Canje, the Courantyne, the Surinam, the Comuwine, the Cottica, the Copename, the Saranica, and the Marawina. Guiana is overgrown with the most luxuriant vegetation, abounding in the finest woods, in fruits of every description, and in an infinite variety of both rare and useful plants. Many of the trees grow to the height of 100 feet, and consist of every variety, of such as are valuable for their hardness and durability, as well as of others, which are richly veined, capable of taking the finest polish, and well adapted for all sorts of ornamental furniture; while others yield valuable dyes, or exude balsamic and medicinal oils. The fruit trees are in great variety, and the fruits they yield are of the most exquisite delicacy and flavour. Wild animals and beasts of prey are abundant. These are the jaguar, which is a powerful and ferocious animal; the cougar, or red tiger, resembling a greyhound in shape, but larger in size; the tiger-cat; the crabdog, not much larger than a common cat, and exceedingly ferocious; the coatimondi, or Brazilian weasel; the great ant-bear; the porcupine; the hedgehog; the armadillo; the sloth; the opossum of different kinds; the deer; the hog; the agouti; the lizard; the camellion. In the rivers are to be found the alligator; the tapira, resembling the hippopotamus of the old continent, but of much smaller size, not being larger than a small ass, but much more clumsy; the manatee, or sea-cow, about 16 feet in length; the paca, or spotted coney; and the pipa, a hideous and deformed animal. Of the serpent tribe there are various species, from the large aboma snake, which grows to the length of 20 and 30 feet, to those of the smallest size. The woods of Guiana are filled with every variety of the feathered species, many of which, there is reason to believe, are but imperfectly known to naturalists. Those most commonly seen are the crested eagle, a very fierce bird, and very strong; the vulture; the owl; the black and white butcher bird; parrots of different kinds, and of the most brilliant plumage; the toucan; the pelican; the tiger bird; herons of different kinds; the flamingo; the humming bird of various species; the plover; the woodpecker; the mocking bird. The vampire bat is also found in Guiana, and grows to an enormous size, measuring about 32 inches between the tips of the two wings. It sucks the blood of men and cattle when they are fast asleep. After it is full, it discharges the blood, and begins to suck afresh, until it reduces the patient to a state of great weakness. The rivers of Guiana abound with fish, many of which are highly prized by the inhabitants; and owing to the heat and moisture of the climate, insects and reptiles of all sorts are produced in such abundance, that the annoyance from this source is inconceivable. These insects are, flies, ants, mosquitoes, cockroaches, lizards, jack-spaniards, a large species of wasp, fire flies, centipedes, &c. The native inhabitants of Guiana are continually receding from the districts which are occupied by the Europeans. They chiefly consist of the following tribes, namely, the Caribbees, the Worruas, the Accawaws, the Arrowauks. From the earliest period, the Dutch colonies in Guiana have been exposed to depredations from fugitive negroes, who, at different periods, have been driven, by the excessive cruelty of their masters, to take refuge in the woods. At one time the colony was threatened with destruction from these bands of deserted slaves. As the European troops who were sent against this enemy generally fell a prey to the climate, a corps of manumitted negroes was formed, by whom the slaves were pursued into the woods, and the colony has been since freed from this source of annoyance.

GUIRARRA, a river of Ireland, county of Donegal, which runs into the Atlantic.

GUICHEN, a town of France, in Brittany. Population 2760.

GUINNESS, a river of Ireland, county of Donegal, which runs into the Atlantic.

GUIGLAN, a town of France, department of Finisterre. Population 2800.

GUIENNE, a large province in the southwest of France, to the north of Gascony, and in general separated from it by the great river Garonne. The modern division of this extensive tract is into five departments, viz. the Gironde, the Lot and Garonne, the Dordogne, the Lot, and the Aveyron.

GUJERAT, or GUJRAT, a very large province of Hindostan, situated principally between the 21st and 24th degrees of northern latitude. It is bounded N. by the province of Ajmeer, E. by Malwah and Khandeish, S. by Auranjabad and the sea, W. by a sandy desert, the gulf of Cutch, and the sea. It has been computed to be 320 miles long, by about 180 broad.

GUILDFORD, a market and borough town of England, the capital of Surrey, on the Wye, which is here navigable for barges from the Thames, the central arch of the stone bridge having been enlarged to let them pass. It has a considerable trade to London in timber, corn, malt, and beer. Guildford is one of the best inland towns of its size in the kingdom, large, clean, and well built, consisting chiefly of one spacious street, which running along the declivity of a considerable chalk hill, presents a very striking appearance to the stranger. It contains three parish churches, and various other public buildings; but is chiefly noted for its castle, situated about 300 yards southward of the High-street, and supposed to have been a palace of several early Anglo-Saxon kings. The other principal buildings are an hospital; a free grammar school, a guild-hall, a jail, a theatre, and several meeting-houses for dissenters of different denominations. It sends two members to parliament. Population 3161. 20 miles S. W. London.

GUILLESBOROUGH, a township of England, in Northamptonshire. Population 860.

GUILFORD, a county of the United States, in North Carolina, inclosed by Rowan, Rockingham, and Orange counties, and Virginia. Population 11,420. Slaves 1467.

GUILFORD, a post township and borough of the United States, in New Haven county, Connecticut. Population 3845. — 2d. Of Windham county, Vermont. Pop. 1672.

GUILIAC, a town of France, in Langue-done, on the Tarn, 30 miles N. E. Toulouse. Population 6500.

GUILDSBOROUGH, a town of England, in the North Riding of Yorkshire. It consists of one spacious street, and has a neat and pleasing appearance. It was formerly noted for its alum-works, which are now superseded by others nearer the coast. Population 1812.

GUIMARÃES, an inland town of Portugal, on the Ave, province of Entre Douro e Minho. The streets are wide and clean, and the houses neat. Here are manufactures of damasked linen for table-cloths; also of knives. The town contains four churches and six convents. Pop. 7500. 30 miles N. N. E. Oporto.

GUINEA, a name which modern Europeans have uniformly applied to a large extent of the western coast of Africa, of which the limits are not very definite. The European geographers, however, seem now to have agreed in fixing as the boundaries of Guinea, the Rio Mesurado and the western extremity of Benin, comprehending a space of about thirteen degrees of longitude. This large territory is usually divided into four portions, called the Grain coast, the Ivory coast, the Gold coast, and the Slave coast.

The Grain coast, called also the Malaghetta, or Pepper coast, extends from the Mesurado to the village of Growa, about ten miles beyond Cape Palmas. The aromatic plant from which this coast derives its name, appeared, when Europeans first landed on this coast, a delicious luxury. As soon, however, as they became familiar with the more delicate and exquisite aromatics of the east, this coarser one fell into disrepute; and as this coast afforded neither gold nor ivory, and was not favourable for procuring slaves, it has been comparatively little frequented. The principal forts erected here by the Europeans are Grand Bassam, Singwin, Sestro, Grent and Little, Garfaway, and Growa.

After passing Growa, about ten miles to the east of Cape Palmas, commences what by European navigators is termed the Ivory coast. This name is obviously derived from the great quantity of ivory, or elephants' teeth, which is brought down from the interior countries. These are sometimes so large as to weigh 200 pounds, and an European traveller has seen 10,000 pounds sold in a day. Gold is also tolerably plentiful. Although the Ivory coast is thus tolerably supplied with materials of trade, it has never been very extensively frequented. The Ivory coast is populous and thickly set with villages, but does not contain any town of much consideration. It reaches to Cape Apollonia. The finest parts are those in the vicinity of the Great Drowin, and the Rio St André.

The Gold coast extends from Cape Apollonia to the Rio Volta, which separates it from the Slave coast. Of all parts of Guinea, and indeed of the African coast, it is the one where European settlements and trade have been carried to the greatest extent. This coast has been frequented at different times by the Portuguese, the Danes, Swedes, Dutch, and British. Britain has now a more extensive footing upon this coast than any other nation. She maintains a range of forts, the expense of which is defrayed by the African company, but of a grant of £23,000 per annum, made by government for that purpose; but the trade is thrown open to all the subjects of the British nation. Although the Gold coast is situated almost immediately under the line, the thermometer has scarcely been known to rise above 83 degrees, and the common heat of midsummer is only from 85 to 90. The general appearance of the country from the sea, suggests the idea of an immense forest, parts only of which are cleared for the purpose of cultivation. High lands are seen in various directions, crowned with lofty trees and thick underwood; the soil along the coast varies, from a light sandy and gravelly texture, to a fine black mould and loamy clay. As we advance into the interior, it sensibly improves, and, at the distance of six or eight miles from the shore, becomes rich in the extreme, and fit for any species of cultivation. The natives inhabiting the Gold coast present a considerable variety. The most prominent place is held by the Fantees. Of late years, another power, before almost unknown to Europeans, has occupied a conspicuous place. This is Ashantee, the sovereign of which has waged repeated and successful wars against the Fantees. Cape Coast Castle is the capital of the British settlements on the Gold coast; and forts are also maintained at Accra, Dixcove, Sucondee, Commendo, and Annamaboe. That at Winnebah has been given up.

The Slave coast extends from the Rio Volta to the bay and river of Lagos, which separate it from Benin. Of all the parts of native Africa yet explored by Europeans, this is the one where cultivation and the arts have been carried to the greatest perfection. The country here was in a most flourishing and prosperous state, when it received a fatal blow, about the middle of last century, by the invasion of the king of Dahomey, who having conquered it, reduced the principal towns to ashes, and massacred a great proportion of the population. This coast has since continued to form part of the territory of Dahomey, and is governed by a viceroy, who resides at Grijewee; but under this ferocious and military tyranny it has never recovered its ancient wealth and prosperity.

GUINEA, New. See Papa.

GUINEGAST, or ENGUINGASTRE, a village of France, department of the Pas de Calais, noted for the Battle of the Spurs in 1513.

GUINES, a town of France, department of the Pas de Calais. Population 2350.

GUINGAMT, a town of France, department of the Cotes du Nord. It has a trade in flax, linen, fruit, and cotton. Population 5200. 328 miles W. Paris.

GUJOLLE, a town of France, department of the Aveyron. Population 1900.

GUIPANA, the largest of a group of islands called the Cervine islands, in the Adriatic.

GUYET, a town of France, department of the Ille and Vilaine. Population 3000.

GUIPUSCOA, a district of the province of Biscay, in Spain, bordered partly by the sea, and partly by the French frontier. It is hilly, but fertile and populous, containing 105,000 inhabitants, on a territorial extent of 640 square miles. Chief town St Sebastian.

GUISCARD, a town of France, department of the Oise. Population 1800.

GUISE, a town of France, on the Oise, 14 miles E. St Quentin. Population 3050.

GUISELEY, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1913.

GUISHYEN, a river of Ireland, county of Mayo, runs into the Moy.

GUJENDERGHUR, a large and fortified town of Hindostan, province of Bejapour. Long. 73. 56. E. Lat. 15. 43. N.

GULAS, a small straggling village of Scotland, in Haddingtonshire, 2 miles E. Aberlady.

GULAN NESS, the southern point of the frith of Forth, Scotland. Long. 2. 44. W. Lat. 56. 5. N.

GULF STREAM, a remarkable current in the ocean, which runs along the coast, at unequal distances, from Cape Florida to the isle of Sables and the banks of Newfoundland, where it turns off and runs down through the Western islands; thence to the coast of Africa, and along that coast in a southern direction, till it arrives at, and supplies the place of, those waters carried by the constant trade-winds from the coast of Africa towards the west, thus producing a constant circulating current.

GULE ISLAND, a small island near the coast of North Carolina, in Pamlico sound.

GUMMINEN, one of the governments into which East Prussia has been lately divided. It comprises Prussian Lithuania, and is bounded by Russia, the kingdom of Poland, and the government of Königsberg. Its superficial extent is 6150 square miles, with 350,000 inhabitants.

GUMMINEN, the chief place of the above government, on the Pissa. It is neatly built. It trades in corn, and has manufactures of woollen, linen, and leather. Population 5300. 65 miles E. Königsberg. Long. 22. 35. 18. E. Lat. 54. 31. 38. N.

GUMRACINIA, a considerable town of Thrace. Population 6000, Greeks and Turks.

GUNDLIRSSEN, a town of the Bavarian states, on the Brenz. Population 2100.

GUNDUCK, a considerable river of Hindostan, which falls into the Ganges at Hajypore.

GUNDWAGAN, or GOANDWAGAN, an extensive province of Hindostan, extending from the 15th to the 25th degrees of northern latitude. It is bounded N. by the provinces of Allahabad and Bahar; S. by Orissa and the river Godavery. To the E. it has parts of Orissa, Bengal, and Bahar; and to the W. Malwah, Derrar, and Allahabad. Its length may be estimated at 400 miles, by about 180 in breadth.

GUNDYCOTTA, a fortress of Hindostan, province of Cuddapah.

GUNGPOORA, or KANGPOORA, a town and fortress of Hindostan, province of Delhi.

GUNPOWDER, a river of the United States, which flows into Chesapeake Bay.

GURA, or KOESZEO, a town of Hungary, 58 miles S. by E. Vienna. It has woollen manufactures. Population 4900.

GUNTERSDORT, a village of Silesia, noted for a severe action between a French and Russian corps, on 16th November 1805.

GUNTOON, one of the districts of Hindostan, on the western side of the bay of Bengal, called the Northern Circars.

GUNTROON, the capital of the above district, and station of the civil establishment. Long. 80. 30. E. Lat. 16. 26. N.

GUNTS, a river of Bavaria, which falls into the Danube.

GUNTZBURG, a town of Bavaria, 15 miles E. Ulm. Population 2800.

GUNZENHAUSEN, a town of the Bavarian states, 10 miles S. S. E. Anspach. Population 1500.

GUOK, a river of Germany, which runs into the Drave.—It has a town of the same name on its banks.

GURKEFELD, a town of Lower Carniola, on the Save. Population 2200.

GURBAN, the capital of a district of the same name, in Hindostan. Long. 80. 15. E. Lat. 23. 10. N.

GURRUMCONDAN, a town of Hindostan, in the Carnatic. Long. 78. 40. E. Lat. 13. 45. N.

GURTNAMACKIN, a river of Ireland, which falls into Galway bay.

GUSTROW, a town of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, principality of Wenden, on the Nebel. Here are several breweries and brandy distilleries. Population 6000.

GUTERLOH, a town of Westphalia, government of Minden. Population 1700.

GUTPURBA, a river of the south of India, which falls into the Kistna.

GUTTSTADT, a town of East Prussia, 60 miles E. Königsberg. Population 2550.

GUTY, or GOOTY, a celebrated fortress of India, and capital of a district of the same name. Long. 77. 35. E. Lat. 15. 2. N.

GUT'S CLIFF, a hamlet of England, in Warwickshire, 1 mile N. Warwick.

GUXELIAN, a city of Asia Minor, on the site of the ancient Magnesia, noted for the remains of antiquity in its neighbourhood. Long. 27. 50. E. Lat. 37. 45. N.

GWANA, a river of Wales, in Pembrokeshire, which falls into the Gwyn.

GWAYN, a river of Wales, in Pembrokeshire, which enters the sea at Fishguard.

GWROES, a river of Wales, in Anglesey, which enters the Irish sea below Llanbaderick.

GWYLET, a river of Wales, in Caernarvonshire, which falls into the Irish sea.

GWENDRATHVAG, a river of Wales, which falls into the Bristol Channel.

GWENASOW, a river of Wales, in Denbighshire, which falls into the Dee.

GWILLY, a river of Wales, which falls into the Towy at Abergwilly.

GWYNT, a river of Anglesey, which falls into the Kevenny opposite Llangristolls.

GWYTHIEL, a river of Wales, in Radnorshire, which falls into the Aro near Kyneton.

GY, a town of France, department of the Upper Saone. Population 2100.

Gyromotos, a town of Hungary, with 8000 inhabitants. 21 miles W. S. W. Erlau.

György, St., a town of the military frontier of Croatia. Population 2000.

GYULA, or JÜLIA, a market town of Hungary, near the Korea. Population 4250. Long. 21. 15. 45. E. Lat. 46. 38. 43. N.

H.

HAA, a small island of Scotland, in the county of Sutherland.

HAAGE, a village of North Brabant, 2 miles S. W. Breda.

HAARLEM, or HAERLEM, a large city of the Netherlands, in North Holland. It stands on the river Spaaren, about 3 miles from the sea, and communicates with Amsterdam, Leyden, and the lake of Haarlem, by several navigable canals. It was formerly a place of strength, but the ramparts are now converted into public promenades. A number of canals traverse the town in different directions, some of them bordered with trees. Among the public edifices are the stadthouse, an elegant building, containing a valuable collection of pictures; a mansion or palace of the royal family; and several charitable institutions. The number of churches, great and small, is 15: the principal one is said to be the largest in Holland, and contains a collection of antiquities of the time of the crusades. The other objects of interest are the town library, the anatomical theatre, and the botanical garden. The only literary institutions here are, the academy of sciences, founded in 1752, and the horticultural society; to the former belongs a valuable museum. Here are several manufactures on a small scale, viz. jewellery, cotton, linen, and silk stuffs, thread, and ribbons. Haarlem has long been celebrated for its bleaching grounds. It carries on an extensive traffic in flowers, particularly tulips. Population 22,000. 11 miles W., Amsterdam. Long. 4. 38. 19. E. Lat. 52. 22. 56. N.

HAARLEM, LAKE OF, an extensive lake of the Netherlands, 14 miles square.

HAASTRECHT, a village of South Holland, 3 miles E. Gouda. Population 1200.

HABELSCHWERDT, a town of the Prussian states, county of Glatz. Population 2800.

HABERGHAM EYES, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 4612.

HABENIM, a town of France, department of the Upper Rhine. Population 1450.

HACHA, a river of South America, which flows into the Atlantic, in Lat. 11. 31. 30. N.

HACKETSTOWN, a small neat village of Ireland, in the county of Carlow.

HACKETSTOWN, a post township of the United States, in Sussex county, New Jersey.

HACKINSACK, a river of the United States, in New Jersey, which joins Passaic river.

HACKINNSACK, a post township of the United States, in Bergen county, New Jersey. Population 1918.

HACKNEY, a large and populous village and parish of England, in Middlesex, 2 miles from London, to which it is joined by several new rows and streets. It contains one parish church, and several chapels for dissenters, a free school, a charity school, and 17 almshouses. A new church on a large scale was begun in 1791: the old church had subsisted ever since the reign of Edward II. It has also a receptacle for lunatics. St John's palace, an ancient house in Well's-street, now let out in tenements to poor families, is believed to have been the residence of the prior of the order of St John of Jerusalem. In this parish, south of Seabridge, are the Temple mills, once belonging to the knights templars. Population 22,494.

HADDAM, a post township of the United States, in Middlesex county, Connecticut. Population 2205.

HADDENHAM, two parishes of England: the one in Cambridgeshire; the other in Buckinghamshire. Population 1725—1294.

HADDINGTON, a royal burgh of Scotland, and chief town of the county of Haddington, on the Tyne. It consists of four streets, which cross each other at right angles. The principal street is broad and spacious, and contains many good houses, having been greatly improved within the last 26 years. The other streets are also well built. Of the public buildings, the parish church is the most remarkable. It is a large and venerable structure, 210 feet long from east to west, 110 feet broad in the transept, and 65 feet broad in the choir. The town-house and county-hall are handsome buildings. There are two bridges over the Tyne. About a mile to the eastward of the town stood the abbey of Haddington, founded in the year 1174, by Adda, mother of Malcolm IV., and William the Lion. Haddington appears to have been formerly a fortified place; and some fragments of its walls still remain. It is governed by a provost, 3 bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and 18 councillors and deacons of trade; and joins with Dunbar, North Berwick, Jedburgh, and Lauder, in sending a member to parliament. There are four fairs annually, none of them of much importance; but there is a weekly market on Friday, reckoned the greatest in Scotland, at which all kinds of grain are sold for ready money. It was in the suburb of Nungate that John Knox was born. A species of coarse woollens was formerly manufactured here to a considerable extent; but that trade has of late years been rather on the decline. A large distillery has lately been established. Population 5255. 16 miles E. Edinburgh, 11 W. Dunbar, 9 S. W. Berwick.

HADDINGTON, or EAST-LOTHIAN, a county of Scotland, bounded E. by the German ocean, N. by the frith of Forth, W. and S. W. by the county of Edinburgh, and S. and S. E. by the county of Berwick. It is about 24 miles long, and about 18 broad. Its superficial area contains about 297 square miles, or 190,363 English acres, of which about 64 parts are arable, 16 meadows or low lying land, and 20 parts, or one-fifth of the whole, consists of hills and marshes, of which a great part is uncultivated. Haddington may be distinguished into the four following districts: 1. Coastland; 2. Midlands; 3. Uplands; and 4. Mountainous, or Lammermuir district. The first is a shelving or sloping track of land, affording a fine fertile soil; the second is a ridge of ground north of the Tyne, sloping partly to that river and partly to the coast land. The third consists of a track of varied breadth, elevated above the midlands, and continuing along the base of the mountains, nearly the whole extent of the county. The whole consists of an extensive range of mountains, which commences at the south-west extremity of the county, and terminates at a high promontory called St Abb's Head, on the east shore. The western part of the county is full of coal, and in different parts of it there are considerable beds of limestone. It is well watered. The principal river is the Tyne. Haddington is one of the most fertile counties in Scotland; and, from its high state of cultivation, produces great quantities of wheat and other grain. The inhabitants on the sea coast employ themselves in the making of salt, and in fishing. At some places the linen and woollen manufactures have been established; and there are four large distilleries within the bounds of the county, all well employed. The chief towns are the three royal burghs of Haddington, North Berwick, and Dunbar. Population 35,127.—The name also of a parish.

HADDON, a town of Scotland, in Aberdeen-shire, 9 miles N. N. E. Inverury.

HADDON, EAST and WEST, two parishes of England, in the county of Northampton. Population 617—893.

HADERSLEEN, a town of Sileswick, on a bay of the Little Belt. Population 3200.

HADHAM, GREAT and LITTLE, two parishes of England, in Hertfordshire. Population 1208—787.

HADLEIGH, a market town and parish of England, in Suffolk, on the Bret. The daily manufacture of the place is the spinning of yarn for the Norwich weavers. Population 2029. 7 miles W. Ipswich.

HADLEY, a village and parish of England, in Middlesex. Population 926.

HADLEY, a post township of the United States, in Hampshire county, Massachusetts, on Connecticut river. Population 1247.—3d. Of Saratoga county, New York, on Hudson river. Population 1725.

HADLOW, a parish of England, in Kent, 3 miles N. E. Tunbridge. Population 1787.

HADRAMAUT, a large province of Arabia, occupying the greater part of the southern coast upon the Indian ocean, along which it extends from Yemen to Oman.

HÄMUN, a celebrated range of mountains in European Turkey.

HAERINGHE, a town of West Flanders, 12 miles W. Ypres. Population 1700.

HAERLENECKE, a town of West Flanders, on the Lys. Population 3000.

HAERDONCK, a town of East Flanders, 13 miles N. E. Dendermond. Pop. 2258.

HAF, an extensive bay or gulf of Pomerania.—2d. Of East Prussia, which communicates with the Baltic.—3d. A very extensive bay of the Baltic, on the coast of East Prussia.

HAFNERZELL, a town of Bavaria, 8 miles N. Passau. Population 1800.

HAGEN, a town of the Prussian states, county of Mark. Population 1650.

HAGETMAN, a town of France, 5 miles S. E. Tartas. Population 2350.

HAGUE, a large and beautiful town in South Holland, 10 miles S. S. W. Leyden, and 30 S. W. Amsterdam, and nearly 3 from the sea coast. It yields to few cities in Europe in the beauty of its streets, the stateliness of its buildings, and the pleasantness of its situation. The principal streets of the Hague are wide, straight; and handsome. The largest street is called the Voorhoit, and contains a succession of elegant edifices; but the most attractive part of the town is one of the public squares, called the Vyverburg; it is of an oblong form, with a beautiful walk, and an avenue of trees on one side, while the other is bordered by a large basin of water and superb edifices. There are here five other squares, and a fine park, all of which form pleasant promenades. Of the public buildings, the old palace is an enormous pile of building, presenting specimens of almost every species of architecture. The mansion of the family of Bentinck, that of Prince Maurice, and the new palace begun by William III., are all deserving of attention. The number of churches is 14; and there are also several charitable institutions. The greatest drawback on this pleasant town arises from the neglect of the canals, several of which are stagnant, and emit a disagreeable smell, which forms a strange contrast to the general cleanliness of the place. The environs of the Hague contain a number of villas; but their principal ornament is the rural palace, belonging to the Orange family; above a mile to the north of the town. The house resembles a gentleman's country seat, and has nothing princely, except some public rooms, and a fine gallery of paintings. To the west of the Hague is Scheveling, a neat fishing village of about 300 houses. The fine avenue from it to the Hague is closely planted on each side with oaks, beeches, and limes, of a magnificent height. On the opposite side of the Hague, and at a distance of about a mile and a half in a south-east direction, is the castle of Ryswyk, which gave name to the well known treaty of 1697. The Hague became, so long ago as 1260, the residence of the governors or counts of Holland. It suffered greatly in its importance after the erection of Holland into a kingdom by Bonaparte. It is now, along with Brussels, the alternate residence of the king and legislature. The manufacture of porcelain, and the printing of books, particularly French books, are the only branches of industry entitled to notice. Population 42,000.

HAGUENAU, a town of France, on the Moselle. It has several manufactures of tobacco, madder, and earthen-ware. Population 7100. 20 miles N. Strasburg.

HAIDHAUSEN, a town of Bavaria, 1 mile from Munich, with 2000 inhabitants.

HAIDINGSFELD, a town of Franconia, 3 miles S. E. Wurzburg. Population 2000.

HAIGH, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 1300.

HAILEY, a hamlet of England, in Oxfordshire, 1 mile N. Whitney.

HAILSHAM, a town and parish of England, in Sussex. Population 1278.

HAIMBURG, a town of Lower Austria, on the Danube. Population 2700.

HAIRA, a large and beautiful river of St Domingo, which falls into a bay of the same name, about 12 miles W. St Domingo.

HAINAU, a town of Silesia, 50 miles W. by N. Breslau. Population 2000.

HAINAUT, an extensive inland province of the Netherlands, bounded on one side by the French frontier, and on the other sides by Flanders, South Brabant, and the province of Namur. It has a superficial extent of 1700 square miles, and is watered by the Scheldt, the Sambre, and the Haine. Population of the whole 473,000.

HAINE, a river of the Netherlands, in Hainaut, which falls into the Scheldt.

HAITERBACH, a town of Wirtemberg, on the Neckar. Population 1600.

HALASZ, a town of Hungary, with 8700 inhabitants. It is composed of an assemblage of cottages.

HALBERSTADT, a city of the Prussian states, the capital of a principality of the same name, containing 100,000 inhabitants. It is a place of great antiquity, built chiefly in the Gothic style. The Catholics have 3 churches and 2 monasteries; the Lutherans have 6 churches. The principal buildings are, the cathedral, the Jewish synagogue, and the ancient palace, now converted into the town-house and excise-office. Here are several manufactures on a small scale, viz. of woolen, linen, leather, gloves, paper, wax, and calico. Pop. 13,000. 28 miles S. W. Magdeburg.

HALDENLEBEN, New, a town of the Prussian states, on the Ohre. Population 3200. 14 miles N. Magdeburg.—Old Haldensleben has 1000 inhabitants.

HAIDENWANG, a village of Bavaria, 54 miles S. S. W. Augsburg. Population 1700.

HALE, two townships of England, in Cheshire and Lancashire. Population 958.—630.

HALESOWEN, a market town and parish of England, county of Salop. The parish church is a fine structure, much admired for its spire, supported by four curious arches. The town has not much trade. Here is a manufacture of nails and various sorts of hardware. Population 10,946. 7½ miles S. W. Birmingham.

HALESWORTH, a market town of England, in Suffolk, on the river Blyth. It is of considerable antiquity, and has a handsome Gothic church, and a charity school. Population 2166. 32 miles N. N. E. Ipswich.

HALEWOOD, a village of England, in Lancashire, on the Mersey. Population 934.

HALF-MOON KEY, a small island near the south coast of Jamaica.—Also two small islands in the bay of Honduras.

HALIFAX, a populous and thriving market town and parish of England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, long noted for its woollen manufactures. The town stretches along a gentle declivity, for three quarters of a mile; the streets are narrow and irregular; the houses in general well built, mostly of stone, and some of brick, and many of them large and handsome. The parish church is a spacious and handsome Gothic building. A large and elegant new church was erected in 1798. There are besides, seven meeting-houses for Methodists, Independents, Quakers, and other dissenters; also a blue-coat hospital, a free school, and a theatre. The chief articles of manufacture are shalloons, tammies, duroys, everlasting, calimancoes, moreens, shags, serges, baize, narrow and broad cloth, coatings, and carpets; also kerseys, both for domestic wear and for clothing the troops abroad. Several cotton manufactories have been erected; and this branch of business is increasing. Excellent wool cards are also manufactured here; and great quantities of freestone, with which the neighbourhood abounds, are sent to London. For the convenience of trade, a cloth or piece hall has been erected in the town: it is a large and elegant building of freestone, and has 316 separate rooms for the reception of goods, of which £1,60,000 worth are generally exposed for sale at a time. Population 12,628. 18 miles S. W. Leeds. Long. 1. 55. W. Lat. 53. 44. N.

HALIFAX, a county in the east part of the province of Nova Scotia. The capital is of the same name, situated on the west side of a spacious bay. It is laid out in oblong squares, on the declivity of a hill, and the streets are parallel and at right angles. At the north extremity of the town is the king's naval yard, completely built, and supplied with stores of every kind for the royal navy. The bay or harbour of Halifax is capable of containing any number of the largest ships with ease and safety. Population 18000; according to some, 16,000. 49 miles S. W. Truro. Long. 63. 35. 45. W. Lat. 44. 44. N.

HALIFAX, a county of the United States, in Virginia, bordering on North Carolina. Population 22,133. Slaves 9663.—2d, A county in North Carolina, inclosed by the counties of Northampton, Edgecomb, Bertie, and Warren. Population 15,620. Slaves 6624.—3d, A post township in Windham county, Vermont. Population 1738.—4th, In Plymouth county, Massachusetts. Population 708.—5th, In Dauphin county, Pennsylvania. Population 1365.—6th, A post town and capital of Halifax county, North Carolina, on the Roanoke. It is regularly laid out, and contains a court-house and jail. 36 miles N. Tarborough. Lat. 36. 13. N.

HALING, small island in the English channel, near Portsmouth, with three villages.

HALL, or SUBANIAN HALL, a fortified town of Wirtemberg, on the Kocher. The town-house, the academy, and the church of St Michael, are the chief public buildings. Here are excellent salt-works, Population 5500. 30 miles N. E. Stuttgart.

HALLADALE, a river of Scotland, in Sutherlandshire, which falls into the Pentland frith.

HALLAM, UPPER and NETHER, two townships of England, Yorkshire. Pop. 1018—3200.

HALLAND, a province of Sweden, in South Gothland, bounded by West Gothland, Smaland, Scania, and the Cattegat. Pop. 73,600.

HALLATON, or HALLOUGHTON, a town of England, in Leicestershire. Pop. 644.

HALLE, a large town of the Prussian states, in Saxony, on both sides of the Saale, over which it has five bridges. It is built in the form of an irregular square, and has several suburbs. Its university is of high literary reputation. In the suburb of Glaucha is the orphan hospital, and Canstein's establishment for printing the scriptures. Here are two public libraries, that of the university, and that of the town. Among the lesser establishments is a cabinet of natural history and mechanics; also an apothecaries' hall. Different journals and periodical papers of merit are published at this place. Halle contains several buildings, which, if not splendid, are remarkable, such as the red tower, which rises to a height of 260 feet, the church of St Ulrich, and the town-hall, which contains the hospital. Of its castle, called Moritzburg, only one wing now remains, and it is used as a Calvinist church. The Lutherans have here seven parish churches, and the Jews a synagogue. The inhabitants of Halle have several manufactures, viz. woollens, stockings, silk, leather, buttons, hardware, &c.; but the principal is that of starch. It has salt-works in its vicinity. Pop. 25,000. 56 miles S. by E. Magdeburg. Long. 11. 54. E. Lat. 51. 29. N.

HALLE, or HAUX, a town of South Brabant. Pop. 3760. 10 miles S. W. Brussels.

HALLEIN, a town of the Austrian states, duchy of Salzburg, on the Salse. It has some inconsiderable manufactures of needles and of cotton, and very extensive salt-works. Population 4600. 9 miles S. E. Salzburg.

HALLEWIN, a town of French Flanders, near Lille, with 400 houses.

HALLIM INNTHIAS, a town of Tyrol, on the Inn. It has a convent and mint, and extensive salt-works. Population 4200. 9 miles N. E. Inspruck. Long. 11. 32. E. Lat. 47. 17. N.

HALLIWELL, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 2282.

HALLOWELL, a post township of the United States, in Kennebec county, Maine, on Kennebec river. Population 2068.

HALLSTADT, a town of Upper Austria, on a lake of the same name. Pop. 1700.

HALMOE, a small island in the Baltic, belonging to Denmark. Long. 10. 30. E.

HALLNSTADT, a town of Sweden, on the Cattegat, at the mouth of the Nissa. Population 1350. 96 miles W. N. W. Carlscrona.

HALSALL, a township of England, in Lancashire, 4 miles N. W. Ormskirk. Population 970.

hálmon, dō' oū kai ē baodisia in Essex, with a manufacture of baize and says. The church is handsome, and the streets spacious. Pop. 3850. 46 miles N. E. London.

HALTON, a town of England, county of Chester. Population 1068.

HALTON, a township of England, in Lancashire, on the Lune. Population 1027.

HALTWHITTLE, a town of England, in Northumberland. Population 707.

HAM, a hamlet of England, in Surrey, on the Thames. Population 961.

HAM, FANT, a village and parish of England, in Essex. Population 1424.

HAM, WEST, a village and parish of England, in Essex, on the Lea. Population 9793.

HAM, a town of France, in Picardy. Population 1800. 42 miles S. E. Amiens.

HAMADAN, or AMADAN, a city of Irak, in Persia. It was taken and destroyed by Timur. It is famed for the manufacture of leather. Pop. 40,000. Long. 4. 8. E. Lat. 34. 55. N.

HAMAH, a flourishing town of Syria, on the Orontes, 62 miles S. E. W. Aleppo.

HAMBIC, a town of Normandy, with 5660 inhabitants. 9 miles S. E. Coutances.

HAMULE, a river of England, which rises in Hampshire, and falls into the Southampton water.

HAMBLEDON, a parish of England, county of Buckingham. Population 1281.—2d, Two parishes of England, in Southampton and Surrey. Population 1086—381.

HAMBURG, a post township of the United States, in Berks county, Pennsylvania.

HAMBURGH, the greatest commercial city in Germany, on the north bank of the Elbe, here from 3 to 6 miles wide, about 78 miles from its mouth. The city is much intersected by water communications, formed partly by the Elbe, partly by the Alster, a tributary of the Elbe. The ground on which Hamburg stands is rather elevated, except in the insulated part, where the high tides, when swelled by north-west winds, overflow the streets and cellars. The streets are narrow, crowded, and irregular, and the houses awkward and old fashioned. They are in general of great height, and built of brick and wood. In the quarter called the New Town, many of the houses are, however, neatly built, and some streets elegant, particularly on the Alster. Hamburg has several suburbs. On its east side, between the Elbe and Alster, stands the suburb of St George. On the west side is the Hamburger Berg, another populous suburb, separated from Altona only by a wall. Here, adjacent to the Elbe, are the large oil works belonging to the Greenland fisheries, and at some distance two hospitals and a workhouse. On the north side of Hamburg, along the Alster, is a suburb lately begun, and containing a number of elegant houses. In the extent of its water communications, Hamburg may be compared to a Dutch city. The Alster forms, outside of the town, a large basin, resembling a lake; and within the town it forms another of less extent, called the Binnen Alster, which serves as a harbour. An arm of the Elbe also forms two ports, one on the east for boats, and another on the west, called the Niederbaum, for ships. Besides the Alster, a small river, called the Bill, flows by the east side of the city. Hamburg is fortified by a moat and a mound of such breadth, that several carriages may go abreast. During the time that the town was in the hands of the French, great additions were made to the outworks. Of churches, there are in Hamburg five large and eleven small: that of St Michael, a modern edifice, and that of St Peter, are remarkable for their elegant spires. The exchange hall is a recent building, fitted up with elegance, and containing, under the same roof, a hall for the display of works of art, a reading-room on a large scale, and saloons for various public purposes. The other principal buildings are the old exchange, the different hospitals, and the obelisk in honour of Professor Busch. The refining of sugar is carried to a considerable extent in Hamburg; and the printing of cotton, linen, and handkerchiefs, gives occupation to many hundred workmen; also dye-works and machinery for twisting tobacco. There are other manufactures on a small scale, of whalebone, jewellery, soap, wax, whale-oil, silk,uffs, gold and silver lace, needles, cards, and soap, and particularly stockings. Accordingly, Hamburg has long been a commercial place of the first importance. It is a great entrepot for European goods of all descriptions, with which it supplies all the countries lying along the Elbe, different districts on the Rhine and the Lower Maine, and a part of the Prussian and Austrian dominions. They also buy up the products of these countries, of which linen and flax are the chief. The trade in timber is also of great importance. The other articles of trade are very various, and consist of all descriptions of produce. The vessels that now frequent the port of Hamburg may be averaged at 2000. The coasting trade with Bremen, Embden, and Amsterdam, is carried on by flat-bottomed vessels. The bank of Hamburg was founded in 1619, not for the purpose of issuing notes, but to secure a permanent and uniform currency. The established religion in this city is the Lutheran, but complete toleration prevails. Hamburg has many patriotic and charitable institutions; and no Protestant city of its size contains a greater number of hospitals. The literary institutions of Hamburg, and the valuable collections of paintings, prints, and objects of natural history, all shew that the ardour of commercial enterprise has not stifled the love of more ornamental pursuits. The town library is large, containing, it is said, 100,000 volumes. Here is published the Hamburger Correspondenten, a newspaper of the largest circulation of any in Germany. The constitution of Hamburg, like the late constitution of Holland, is an aristocracy, checked by the authority of the citizens at large. The aristocratic part consists of the senate, to the number of 28 voting members. The burghesses, or citizens, act by delegation in various ways; first, by a commission of 15, called the council of elders; next, by the council of 60; and again by an assembly of 180. The senate alone can propose a law; its adoption or rejection rests with the representatives of the citizens. The city revenue exceeds £150,000, and arises chiefly from customs and assessed taxes. The territory of Hamburg hardly exceeds 133 square miles. It consists of a small district lying around the city, of the town and bailiwick of Cuxhaven, at the mouth of the Elbe, and some villages scattered in the duchy of Holstein.

Hamburg was founded in the reign of Charlemagne. In 1241, it concluded with Lubeck a treaty that formed the basis of the Hanseatic league. The kings of Denmark, in the quality of counts of Holstein, claimed a sovereignty over the city, till 1700, when Hamburg received a full confirmation of her rights as an independent city of the German empire. In 1810, it was incorporated into the French empire, and declared the capital of the department of the Mouths of the Elbe. The city, after being occupied by the French armies, who were ordered to defend it to the last extremity, was evacuated in May 1814. Hamburg then regained, under the allied powers, its independence. Population 115,000, and its territory comprehends about 15,000 more. 30 miles S. S. W. Lubeck, 84 N. Hanover, and 448 N. E. London. Long. 9. 58. 35. E. Lat. 53. 32. 51. N.

HAMZA, a river of Hanover, which falls into the Weser at Hameln.

HAMELN, a town and fortress of Hanover, at the confluence of the Weser and the Hamel. The town is well fortified, and has manufactures of tobacco, hats, and woollens. Population 5000. 25 miles S. W. Hanover.

HAMILTON, a town and parish of Scotland, county of Lanark, near the confluence of the Clyde and Avon. It is irregularly built, and has a prison and town-house, and three hospitals. The parish church is handsome; there are, besides, other three churches for dissenters. Hamilton palace, the residence of the family of that name, formerly stood in the middle of the town; but the lower part having been purchased by the Hamilton family, was pulled down, in order to give scope for the improvement and extension of their pleasure grounds; and the town has since stretched to the south and west, leaving the palace detached from it. It was erected into a burgh of barony in 1456, and in 1544 it was erected by Queen Mary into a royal burgh; but its rights yielded up to the duke of Hamilton, who in 1670 restored to the community its former privileges, and erected it into a burgh of regality, dependent on him and his successors, in which state it still remains. It has a manufacture of cotton. Pop. 7613. 11 miles S. E. Glasgow.

HAMILTON, a county of the United States, in New York, inclosed by the counties of St Lawrence, Franklin, Essex, Washington, Saratoga, Montgomery, and Herkimer.—21, In the south-west part of Ohio, on Ohio river. Population in 1818, 18,700.—Also the name of several townships.

HAMM, a town of Prussian Westphalia, near the confluence of the Assc and the Lippe, noted for its excellent hams. Population 3100. 17 miles S. Munster.

HAMME, a populous and trading town of East Flanders, adjoining a canal which communicates with the Scheldt. Population 8370. 6 miles N. Dendermonde.

HANNELSBURG, a town of the Bavarian states, on the Saale. Population 2300.

HAMMERSMITH, a township of England, in Middlesex, on the north bank of the Thames. It is daily increasing in population, and is now nearly joined, by a continued range of buildings, to Kensington. The houses are well built; and along the Thames is a number of handsome seats and villas. The chapel is in the centre of the town. Here is a good charity school; a large work-house, and several chapels for dissenters; also a long established runnery, which was begun in 1689, as a boarding-school for ladies of the Catholic persuasion. Population 8809. 3½ miles W. London from Hyde Park.

HAMORT, a town of the Netherlands, 42 miles N. Liege. Population 1600.

HAMPSHIRE, HANTS, SOUTHAMPTON, one of the southern counties of England, on the English channel, including also the Isle of Wight, and in some points of jurisdiction the more distant islands of Jersey and Guernsey. It is bounded S. by the English channel, and the sound which cuts off the Isle of Wight; N. by Berkshire; E. by Surrey and Sussex; and W. by Wiltshire and Dorsetshire. It lies within the parallels of 50. 42. and 51. 21. N. lat., and between 0. 44. and 1. 52. W. long.; is at a medium 38 miles from N. to S., and 35 from E. to W., with 40 of sea-coast; and contains about 1500 square miles, with 165 inhabitants to each. It is divided into 39 hundreds, and 293 parishes, has one city, Winchester the county town, 29 market towns, viz. Southampton, Portsmouth, Christchurch, Andover, Lymington, Basingstoke, Alton, Romsey, Fareham, &c. and about 1000 villages and hamlets. Hampshire is distinguished as an agricultural, though its sea-coast has also rendered it a considerable maritime and commercial county; while the mildness and healthiness of its climate, the agreeable diversity of its surface, its vicinity to the sea, and the beautiful scenery which it everywhere commands, contribute to make it very desirable as a place of residence. The chief rivers are the Auburn and Loddon, falling into the Thames; the Anton or Test; the Itchen, which flows towards the channel; the Avon; the Bolder Water, which empties itself near Lymington; and the Exe. These rivers are navigable for a considerable way up. There are besides various convenient canals, which greatly aid the communications of the country. Along the coast also, and in the sound which divides it from the Isle of Wight, are numerous excellent harbours and roadsteads, of which Portsmouth and Yarmouth are the chief. About one-half of the land is devoted to pasturage, one-fourth is arable, and the remainder is occupied with extensive forests of oak, and large tracks of waste and open heath, especially on the borders of Dorsetshire. Exclusive of the forests, the wastes are estimated at 100,000 acres. These forests supply great quantities of oak for the navy, and of excellent oak-bark, but they have been much reduced for want of new plantations to continue the supply. Hampshire is famous for the breeding of cattle, especially hogs and sheep, its bacon being reckoned the best in the kingdom. It produces excellent wheat; a kind of hay from its water meadows, which are very extensive, and managed with great skill; and very fine honey. Barley, peas, rye-grass, trefoll, &c. are also much cultivated. Hampshire has manufactures of woollen goods, cloth, shal-lons, serges, &c. Malt and leather are made at Basingstoke. Silk, straw-hats, paper, vast quantities of common salt, and of Epsom and Glauber salts, are also manufactured in the county. Population 223,294.

HAMPSHIRE, a county of the United States, in Massachusetts, on both sides of Connecticut river, and inclosed by Franklin, Worcester, Hampden, and Berkshire counties. Pop. 24,523. Chief town Northampton.

HAMPSHIRE, a county of the United States, in Virginia, inclosed by the Potomac, and the counties of Berkeley, Frederick, and Hardy. Population 6784, including 929 slaves. Chief town Romney.

HAMPSHIRE, NEW, one of the United States of America, is situated between lat. 42. 42. and 45. 13. N., and between 70. 40. and 72. 28. W. long. from Greenwich; bounded N. by Lower Canada; E. by the district of Maine, S. by Massachusetts, and W. by Connecticut river, which separates it from Vermont. Its length from N. to S. is 168 miles, and its greatest breadth on the 43d parallel is about 90; but it gradually decreases as it runs northerly. The area is about 9491 square miles, or 6,074,240 acres, of which nearly 100,000 are covered with water. The following table exhibits its division into counties, with the population of each:

Counties.	Townships.	Population.
Cheshire	35	40,988
Coos	24	3,991
Grafton	35	26,462
Hillsborough	42	49,249
Rockingham	46	50,175
Strafford	31	41,595
	213	214,460

This state has but about 18 miles of sea-coast at its S. E. corner. In this distance there are several coves for fishing vessels, but the only harbour for ships is the entrance of Piscataqua river, the shores of which are rocky. The shore is mostly a sandy beach, adjoining to which are salt marshes, intersected by creeks, which produce good pasture for cattle and sheep. The soil of the lower hills, valleys, and banks of the rivers, is very fertile, and produces excellent grain of every kind. Agriculture is the chief occupation of the inhabitants: beef, pork, mutton, poultry, wheat, rye, Indian corn, barley, pulse, butter, cheese, hops, esculent roots and plants, flax, hemp, &c. are raised in immense quantities in New Hampshire, both for home consumption and exportation. Apples and pears are the most common fruits cultivated. The country, to the distance of 20 or 30 miles from the sea shore, is generally level, after which it rises gradually, swelling into hills, and lastly into a chain, called the White mountains, which form a very elevated ridge, rising in some parts to the height of 7000 feet above the level of the sea. Several kinds of earths and clays, for bricks and pottery, are found in this state; also marl, red and yellow ochres, steatites or soap rock, mica or talc. Iron ore is also found. Freestone, fit for building, and also a green stone, converted into millstones, abound. In some places crystals have been discovered; also alum, and vitriol, which is generally found combined in the same stone with sulphur. The hills and mountains are covered with pine, oak, walnut, cedar, hemlock, fir, beech, maple, balsam poplar, and butternuts. The animals are the moose deer, the black bear, which commits great ravages among the sheep, the racoon, the wild cat, the beaver, &c. The birds are the partridge, quail, wild pigeon, and wild turkey. The bays and rivers abound with cod, salmon, smelt, eels, trouts, &c. The most considerable rivers of this state are the Connecticut, Merrimack, Piscataqua, Saco, Androscoggin, Upper and Lower Ammonoosuck, besides many other smaller streams. The chief lakes are Winnipicogee, Umbagog, Sunapee, Squam, and Great Ossipee. The climate combines great extremes both of heat and cold. There are in this state manufactures of tow-cloth, iron works, bricks and pottery; also gunpowder, spirits, malt liquor, pot and pearl ashes. At Exeter there is a manufactory of saddlery, a duck manufactory, six saw-mills, and a paper-mill. Hoops and staves are also manufactured. The chief exports from the state are Indian corn, live stock, beef and pork, pickled fish, whale oil, ship timber, tar, lumber, pot and pearl ashes, tow-cloth, butter and cheese, flax-seed, and bricks. The imports are West India rum, gin, molasses, wine, sugar, tea, coffee, cotton, cheese, salt, nails, sea-coal, steel, lead, and grindstones. The legislature has given great encouragement to the establishment of schools, academies, and public libraries, with which the state is well supplied. The legislative power in this state resides in a senate and house of representatives. The senators are 13 in number, and are elected annually by citizens paying taxes. The house of representatives is composed of delegates from the different towns. The governor is chosen annually by the electors.

HAMPSTEAD, a populous village of England, in Middlesex. It is situated on the declivity of a high hill, from which there is a beautiful prospect of the metropolis and the adjacent counties. According to tradition, this was formerly a hunting seat of James II. Population of parish 7263. 4 miles N. Tyburn turnpike, London.

HAMPSTEAD, a post township of the United States, in Rockland county, New York, 15 miles N. W. New York. Pop. 2313.

HAMPTON, a village of England, in Middlesex, near which is the magnificent palace of Hampton Court. Population 3549. 14 miles W. London.

HAMPTON, LITTLE, a seaport of England, in Sussex, at the mouth of the Avon. Population 1166.

HAMPTON WICK, a hamlet of England, in Middlesex. Population 1261.

HAMPTON, a township of the United States, in Windham county, Connecticut. Pop. 1274. —The name of several other townships of the United States.

HAMPTON, a township of England, county of Durham. Population 562.

HANAU, a considerable town of Hesse-Cassel, on the Kinzig. It is divided into the Old and New-town. The Old town is ill built, but contains a magnificent castle, and a gymnasium, or classical school. The New town is much larger, with regular streets, and a large square, in which is the council-house. A deep canal goes from the Maine to the walls of the town, for the convenience of trade. The inhabitants manufacture watches, jewellery, cambrics, and hats; also silk. Wood, iron, corn, and flour, form articles of traffic; and there are here no prohibitions or injurious restrictions on trade. In 1792, Hanau was attacked by the French; it was entered by them in 1796, in 1797, and afterwards in 1805. Population 12,000. 13 miles E. Frankfurt on the Maine. Long. 8. 59. E. Lat. 50. 9. N.

HANBURY, a parish of England, county of Worcester. Population 1042.

HANCOCK, a county of the United States, in Maine, on both sides of Penobscot bay, bounded N. by Penobscot county, E. by Washington county, S. by the Atlantic, and W. by Lincoln county. Population 30,031. Chief town Castine.—2d, In the western district of Georgia, on the E. side of the Oconee. Population 13,330. Slaves 6456.—3d, Of Mississippi, on Lake Borgne, and separated by Pearl river from Louisiana. Population in 1816, 1000. Slaves 333.—4th, Of Ohio, formed in 1820, in the Indian reservation.

HANCOCK, a post township of the United States, in Hillsborough county, New Hampshire, 13 miles E. Keene, 23 S. W. Concord. Population 1184.—2d, Of Berkshire county, Massachusetts, 20 miles N. N. W. Lenox. Population 1049.

HANDFORTH, a township of England, county of Chester. Population 1745.

HANDWORTH, two parishes of England, one in Staffordshire, the other in Yorkshire, 4 miles E. Sheffield. Pop. 3082—2173.

HANGMAN'S POINT, a cape of Ireland, at the entrance of Kinsale harbour.

HANGTCHENGTOU, a large city of China, capital of the province of Tcheking, at the extremity of the great canal which extends southward from Peking. Long. 110. 46. E. Lat. 30. 20. N.

HANGWALL, a town and fortress of Ceylon. Long. 80. 3. E. Lat. 7. 1. N.

HANHAM, a hamlet of England, county of Gloucester. Population 1006.

HANLEY, a market town of England, in Staffordshire. It has a principal share in the manufacture of the potteries. The church is an elegant structure. About a mile to the south-west is the superb mansion of Mr Wedgewood. Population 5622. 2 miles N. E. Newcastle-under-Lime.

HANNY, EAST, a township of England, in Berkshire. Population 587.

HANNO, a small island in the Baltic, on the coast of Sweden.

HANOVERA, a country in the north of Germany, still comprehended in the Germanic confederation, though politically united for a century past with Britain, and dignified since 1815 with the title of kingdom. Its figure somewhat resembles an oblong square, having the Elbe along its north-east side, the German ocean on the north-west, Dutch Friesland, with Prussian Westphalia, on the south-west, and Saxony on the south-east. In point of extent, the Hanoverian territory is equal to an oblong square of 150 miles by 100, being about 14,600 square miles, or the half of Scotland. It lies between 6. 51. and 11. 51. of E. long., and 51. 18. and 53. 54. of N. lat., and has a population of 1,300,000, of whom about 200,000 were acquired by treaty in 1815. At that time it was divided into the following eleven provinces: Cadenberg, Gottingen, Lüneburg, Hoya and Diepholz, acquired in 1643 and 1656; Hildesheim, acquired partly in 1619, partly in 1815; Osnaburg, acquired in 1648; Verden, acquired in 1715; the duchy of Bremen, which is distinct from the town, acquired in 1719; Bentheim, acquired in 1753; East Friesland, acquired in 1815; Lingen, with part of the lordship of Rheina, acquired in 1815; the lordship of Meppen, acquired in 1815. These provinces are subdivided into 107 bailiwicks. The chief towns are, Hanover (the capital), Embden, Hildesheim, Lüneburg, Osnaburg, Gottingen, Zell, Clausthal, Goslar, Eimbeck, Hameln, &c. With the exception of the Harz, and other elevated tracts in the south, the territory of Hanover consists of an immense plain, with gentle undulations, but hardly any thing that can be called a mountain. In the south the vallies are fertile; in the north are many barren heaths and moors: the most productive tracts are those along the banks of the rivers, which have been reclaimed from a marshy state. The mountain tract of the Harz is covered with vast forests, which are particularly valuable in this quarter, as they afford fuel for the supply of the mines with which the country abounds, and which are still more valuable than its forests. Those of silver were discovered so early as the year 966, and are supposed to have been the first opened in Europe. Iron, copper, and lead, are wrought here to a great extent; also zinc and sulphur, with green, blue, and white vitriol. The iron mines are the most productive; and their annual tenth yields a revenue of about £116,000 sterling. The rivers of Hanover are the Elbe, joined by the Jetteze, the Ilmenau, the Oste, the Weser, which receives the Leine, the Ocker, the Innerste, the Ruhme, and the Embs, joined by the Stunte and Haze. The chief lakes are those of Steinbude and Dummer. The Harz being a mountain tract, is, like other mining districts, deficient in corn. The duchy of Lüneburg contains immense heaths, called, on account of their barrenness, the Arabia of Germany. These are turned to account as sheep walks, and in some degree as affording nourishment to bees. The corn cultivated is, as in Britain, a mixture of wheat, barley, and oats, but with a considerable proportion of rye and buck wheat; peas and beans are very generally raised; but agriculture is in many parts of the kingdom in a very backward state. Thread and linen manufactures are carried on in various parts. The other manufactures of the kingdom are coarse woollens, paper, leather, and glass, carried on in a number of places, but on a small scale in each. The only town which has a maritime trade of consequence is Embden. Four fairs are held annually at Hanover, and two at Osnabrück. The goods imported from abroad are English manufactures and colonial produce; linen from Friesland and Prussia; broad cloth, silk, and jewellery, from France. The chief exports are coarse linen, iron and copper from the Hartz, timber cut into planks, along with horses and black cattle from various parts of the country.

The revenue of Hanover amounts to a million sterling; and principally arises from a land-tax, the post-office, an impost on carriages, horses, and other articles of luxury; on certain imports from abroad; also on mines and forests. The Lutheran is the prevailing religion in Hanover, but complete toleration is granted to all sects. The Calvinists amount only to 40,000; and the Catholics, of whom the greatest number are in the principality of Osnabrück, do not exceed 160,000. A portion of the ecclesiastical property, formerly belonging to Catholic establishments, is now set apart for the maintenance of the Lutheran clergy; but the greatest part is appropriated to the university of Göttingen, the lyceum of Hefeld, and other public institutions. Elementary schools are established in every village; others, somewhat more comprehensive, are provided in the small towns; and in the more populous places are academies, or high-schools, for the education of those further advanced.

Hanover has been governed for more than a century by the king of Great Britain. At the diet of Germany, the king of Hanover occupies the fifth rank, taking precedence of all except Austria, Prussia, Bavaria, and Saxony. The crown is hereditary in the order of primogeniture, and the succession is limited to the male line. The king's power is not unlimited; it has a counterpoise in the states, which consist of the Wollfenbuttel nobility, the heads of the church, and the deputies of the towns. No tax can be levied, or new law made, without the consent of the

The fault of the constitution is, that undue power to the nobility, and it gives as in 1694 that the elector of Hanover raised to the electoral dignity. married Sophia, a daughter of the Elector of Brunswick, and grand-daughter of James II. and, his son proved the nearest Protestant heir to the crown of Great Britain after Queen Anne, to whom he succeeded in 1714. Hanover, in 1801, was taken possession of by the king of Prussia. In the war of 1803, the first act of Bonaparte was to overrun it. In 1806, Hanover was ceded by the French for a time to the Prussians. Part of it was annexed to the kingdom of Westphalia, and the rest remained in the possession of the French. At the end of 1810, Bonaparte declared a farther part of it annexed to France. At last, on the expulsion of the French from Germany, in October 1813, the whole electorate was restored to the sovereign of Great Britain; and the course of events having annulled the electoral office, he assumed in 1815 the title of king of Hanover.

HANOVER, a city of Germany, the capital of the kingdom of that name, on the Leine. It is in the form of a half moon, and is separated by the river into two parts, called the Old and New town. These were formerly surrounded with walls and ditches; but in 1780, part of the ramparts were levelled, and laid out into streets, and the rest formed into an esplanade, where a very elegant monument has been erected to Leibnitz. The town has an antiquated aspect. This is particularly the case in what is called the Old town; but improvements are going on with greater spirit in Hanover than in most continental towns. The New town, which stands on the right side of the river, is built in a much better style than the Old. The public buildings are the elector's palace, a large edifice of late erection, having been destroyed by fire, and rebuilt in 1791; the public library, founded by Leibnitz, containing the archives of the kingdom, and a good collection of books. There are five Lutheran churches; the Calvinists and Catholics have each their chapels; and the Jews have a synagogue. The charitable institutions are an orphan-house, two hospitals, and two poor-houses. For the purpose of education there is a gymnasium, a female school of industry, and several elementary schools. The Großmann is a school erected in 1796, for the education of 40 sons of Hanoverian nobles. The other objects of curiosity for travellers are the mews, the church of the castle, the gardens of the Baroness Deken and of Count Walmoden, the wood of Ellenztied, and the Lutheran burial-ground, a large field surrounded by a parapet. Another remarkable object is Herrenhausen, a country mansion of the royal family, at some distance from the town. The inhabitants of Hanover derive their chief support from the presence of the court, and the residence of the gentry of landed property. They have, however, some manufactures on a small scale, such as gold and silver lace, the printing of cotton and linen, the preparation of cichory for coffee, brewing, making of vinegar, &c. Population in 1811, 51,000, now 25,000. 154 miles W. Berlin. Long. 9. 42 51. E. Lat. 52. 22 25. N.

HANOVER, a county of the United States, in Virginia, between Chickahomby and Pamunky rivers. Population 15,082. Slaves 8464.—The name also of several townships.

HANZEBOEK, a town of East Flanders, 10 miles W. Ghent. Population 2450.

HANSE TOWNS, the name of a well known association of cities of Germany, and other countries, for the protection of trade, which subsisted from the 13th to the 17th centuries. The basis of the league which united them, was laid by a commercial treaty between Hamburg and Lubek in 1241. The object of these two cities was to secure their mutual independence, to employ their joint efforts to clear the highways from robbers, and the seas from pirates; and to establish conjunct deliberations on affairs of trade. To this association other towns afterwards acceded, so that the Hanseatic league consisted of 64 commercial towns, and was capable of carrying on naval operations on a large scale.

HANSLOP, a town and parish of England, in Buckinghamshire. Pop. of the parish 1479.

HANST, a town of Hindostan, province of Delhi. Long. 76. 10. E. Lat. 28. 46. N.

HANTS, a county of Nova Scotia, beginning about 30 miles from Halifax, 20 miles square, and well watered.

HAPAE, a cluster of islets among the Friendly islands.

HARBOROUGH, or MARKET HARBOROUGH, a market town of England, county of Leicester, on the Welland. It has a manufacture of tammies, lustrings, &c. Population 1873. 83 miles N. W. London.

HARBOUR ISLAND, one of the smaller Bahama islands.

HARBOUR ISLAND, a small island of the United States, in Pamlico sound, N. Carolina.

HARBURG, a town of Hanover, duchy of Luneburg, on the Elbe, 7 miles S. Harburg. Population 3650.

HARDIN, a county of the United States, in Kentucky, on the Ohio, adjoining Knox county. Population 8471.

HARDENBERG, a town of the Netherlands, 10 miles S. W. Coeverden. Population 2600.

HARDERWYK, a town of the Netherlands, in Gelderland, on the Zuyder Zee, 40 miles E. Amsterdam. Population 3750.

HARDHEIM, a town of Germany, in Baden, on the Erf. Population 1750.

HARDINGVELDT, a village of Holland, 16 miles S. E. Rotterdam. Population 2100.

HARDISTON, a township of the United States, in Sussex county, New Jersey. Population 1702.

HARDWICK, a post township of the United States, in Worcester county, Massachusetts. Population 1657.—3d, A township of Sussex county, New Jersey. Population 2561.—

3d, A small town of Bryan county, Georgia.

HARDY, a county of the United States, in Virginia, bordering on Maryland. Population 5225. Slaves 746.

HARE ISLAND, an island in the middle of the channel of the St. Lawrence, 103 miles below Quebec.

HARFIELD, a parish of England, in Middlesex. Population 1228.

HAREWOOD, a parish of England, in Yorkshire, 8 miles N. Leeds. Pop. 1003.

HARFLEUR, a town of France, in Normandy, on the Lezard. Population 1800.

HARFORD, a county of the United States, in Maryland, bounded N. by Pennsylvania, E. by the Susquehanna. S. E. by Chesapeake bay, and W. by Baltimore county. Pop. 21,250. Slaves 4431. Chief town Bellair.

HARFORD, a post town of the United States, in Harford county, Maryland.

HARLECH, a small town of Wales, county of Merioneth, on the bay of Cardigan. It is noted for its ancient castle, almost entire, though fast going to decay. 24 miles S. Caernarvon.

HARLESTON, a town of England, in Norfolk, on the Waveney, over which is a bridge. Population 1641. 17 miles S. Norwich.

HAREING, EAST, a town of England, in Norfolk, 21 miles S. W. Norwich. Pop. 867.

HARLINGEN, a town of the Netherlands, in Friesland, on the Zuyder Zee. It is of a square form, with neat, straight, and clean streets, intersected with canals. Its harbour is large, and well frequented. Population 7300. 66 miles N. N. E. Amsterdam.

HARLOW, a town of England, in Essex, 24 miles E. London. Population 1928.

HARMONY, a township of the United States, in Clark county, Ohio. Pop. 1200.—

2d, Of Posey county, Indiana, on the Wabash.

HARO, a town of Spain, province of Burgos, 32 miles N. E. Burgos. Pop. 3500.

HARPERSFIELD, a post township of the United States, in Delaware county, New York, 20 miles N. E. Delhi. Pop. 1691.

HARPSWELL, a township of the United States, in Cumberland county, Maine.

HARPTREE, EAST, a village of England, in the county of Somerset, noted for the mines of lapis calamaris in the neighbourhood. Population of the parish 627.

HARNATON, a township of England, 8 miles N. E. Durham. Population 2317.

HARRINGTON, a village and small seaport of England, in Cumberland. The harbour has been recently improved, and the place has been advancing in prosperity. Here are two yards for ship-building, a small iron foundry for the use of the collieries, a copperas work, and one of the finest rope-walks in the county. Population 1848. 24 miles S. Workington.

HARRINGTON, a township of the United States, in Bergen county, New Jersey.

HARRIS, a peninsula of Scotland, in the Hebrides, comprehending the southern part of what is called the island of Lewis, from which it is separated by a narrow isthmus of about 6 miles. Long. 6. 54. W. Lat. 57. 57. N.

HARRIS, SOUND or, a channel between the islands of Harris and North Uist.

HARRISBURGH, a post township of the United States, in Dauphin county, Pennsylvania. Population 2267.

HARRISON, a county of the United States, in Virginia, inclosed by the counties of Ohio, Monongalia, Randolph, Kenbawa, and Wood. Population 10,000.—2d, In the N. E. part of Kentucky. Population 7552. Slaves 1195. Chief town Cynthiana.—3d, Of Ohio, between Jefferson and Tuscarawas counties. Population in 1815, 7300. Chief town Cadiz.—4th, Of Indiana, on the Ohio. Population in 1815, 6760. Chief town Corydon.

HARRISON, a township of the United States, in Westchester county, New York, 30 miles N. E. New York. Population 1119.—2d, Of Harrison county, Indiana. Population 1123.

HARROW-ON-THE-HILL, a village of England, in Middlesex, situated on the highest hill in the county, and commanding one of the finest prospects of the metropolis on the east. It is famous for its free school. Pop of the parish 2017. 10 miles N. W. London.

HARROWGATE, a village of England, West Riding of Yorkshire, famous for its mineral springs, and now one of the principal watering places in the north of England, having nine large and commodious inns, besides private boarding-houses, and buildings of all descriptions, annually on the increase. It is divided into High and Low Harrowgate. The former, situated on the top of the high ground which rises gently from Knaresborough, commands an extensive prospect of the distant country. The springs are of two kinds, differing considerably in their properties, the one being chalybeate, and the other the strongest sulphureous waters in England. The chalybeates are both at High Harrowgate, and they possess qualities nearly similar. The old Spa was discovered in 1571; it has a handsome dome over it. The Towd well is half a mile to the westward. The sulphur springs are at Low Harrowgate, inclosed in a stone building. In 1723, a new spring was discovered here, called the Crescent well, of a middle nature, between the sulphur and chalybeate. St Mungo's well, about four miles from this place, is used as a cold bath; and at Knaresborough there is also a curious dropping well, of a petrifying quality. Population 1934. 3 miles N. W. Knaresborough, 211 N. London.

HARLEBEN, a town of Prussian Saxony, on the Bode. Houses 320.

HARTFORD, a county of the United States, in Connecticut, inclosed by the state of Massachusetts, and the counties of Tolland, Middlesex, New Haven, and Litchfield. Population 44,743. Chief town Hartford.

HARTFORD, a post township of the United States, in Windsor county, Vermont. Pop. 1631.—2d, Of Washington county, New York, 8 miles N. E. Sandyhill. Pop. 2389.

HARTFORD, a city of the United States, in Hartford county, Connecticut, and one of the capitals of the state, regularly laid out on the Connecticut, 123 miles N. E. New York. Population 3065.

HARTINGTON, LOWER QUARTER, UPPER, MIDDLE, and NETHER QUARTER, four townships of England, in Derbyshire. Population 2218.

HARTLAND, a market and seaport town and parish of England, in Devonshire, near the promontory of Hartland point. The church is a large and handsome building. The descent to the quay has been cut out of the cliffs, and is very steep. Here is a herring fishery on the coast. Population 1903. 277 miles W. London.

HARTLAND POINT, a cape of England, at the entrance into the Bristol channel, and forming the S. W. corner of Barnstaple bay.

HARTLEBURY, a village of England, Worcestershire, at the junction of the Stour and Severn, 10 miles N. Worcester. Pop. 1857.

HARTLEPOOL, a market and seaport town of England, in the county of Durham, not far from the Tees mouth, on a promontory, encompassed on all sides by the German ocean, except the N. W. Its old defences are now in ruins. The harbour also is in a neglected state, and the trade inconsiderable. The public buildings are the church, a town-hall, a free and charity school, a custom-house, and a Methodist chapel. Population 1242. 19 miles E. Durham.

HARTLEY, or HARTLEY PANS, a well built, populous, and improving seaport of England, in Northumberland, on a bold rocky shore. It owes its prosperity chiefly to the mineral riches of the neighbourhood, and to the excellent harbour of Seaton Sluice, half a mile to the north, which they have caused to be constructed. The works are principally of coals, salt, coppers, and glass. The site of the ancient castle was a little to the south-west. Nothing now remains of it but the chapel. Pop. 1795. 6 miles N. Shields.

HARTWELL, a hamlet of England, in Warwickshire. Population 662.

HARTWELL, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 675.

HARWICH, a well built seaport borough, and market town of England, on a peninsular point of land on the Essex coast, at the mouth of the Stour and the Orwell, which are navigable 12 miles above the town. It is the port from which the packets sail regularly, in time of peace, for Holland and Germany; the seat of a navy yard; and also a considerable bathing place. The town consists of three principal streets, and various lanes, branching off in different directions. The public buildings are, the chapel built by the earl of Norfolk at the beginning of the 13th century, the town-hall in the principal street, the jail, the free school-house, and the custom-house. The Stour and the Orwell form a spacious bay on the north and west of the town; and running southwards on the east of the town, they fall into the sea about a mile below it, in a channel from two to three miles wide, according to the state of the tide; and it is in this channel that the harbour is situated. It is protected from the attacks of an enemy by the fort of Langard, and the entrance is narrowed by shoals and sands, so that it is of very difficult access. Two light-houses have lately been erected on the Harwich side, to facilitate the entrance by night. The harbour, when entered, is of great extent, and forms, united to the bay, a roadstead for the largest ships of war, and for an immense number of vessels at a time, upwards of 300 sail having anchored here with ease. Upwards of 3000 tons of shipping, and 500 seamen, are employed in the North sea fishery, and a few also in carrying fish to the London market; and a constant traffic is carried on up the river to Ipswich and Manningtree. There is a yard for building and repairing ships, well furnished with store-houses, launches, and other conveniences. Harwich sends two members to parliament. Population 4040. 71 miles N. E. London. Long. 1. 17. E. Lat. 51. 57. N.

HARWICH, a post township of the United States, in Barnstable county, Massachusetts.

HARWINTON, a township of the United States, in Litchfield county, Connecticut.

HARWOOD, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 1809.

HARWOOD, GREAT, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 2104.

HANNOVERODE, a town of Germany, near the Hartz mountains. Population 1800.

HANSLØE, a small island of Denmark, in the Cattegat. Long. 11. 45. E. Lat. 56. 11. N.

HASLACH, a village of France, 18 miles W. Strasburg. Population 1450.

HASLAND, a township of England, in Derbyshire. Population 770.

HASLEMERE, a town of England, in Surrey. It sends two members to parliament. Population 857.

HASLINGDEN, a market town of England, county of Lancaster, on the Swinmel. Here are flourishing manufactures of woollen and cotton. There is a neat church, and two chapels for dissenters. Population 6596. 17 miles N. Manchester.

HASLINGTON, a township of England, county of Chester. Population 985.

HASSELT, a well built town of the Netherlands, on the Demer, 15 miles N. by W. Maestricht. Population 6000.—Also a small town, 10 miles E. Campen. Pop. 1150.

HASSEN, properly ASERGHUNA, a town and fortress of Hindostan. Long. 76. 21. E. Lat. 21. 32. N.

HASLACH, a fortified town of Germany, on the Kinzig. Population 1500.

HASLOCH, a small town of Germany, 6 miles E. Neustadt. Population 2850.

HASTINGS, an ancient borough and market town of England, on the eastern extremity of Sussex, famous for being the place near which William the Conqueror landed in England, and for the battle of Hastings fought in the neighbourhood. It is now in great repute for sea-bathing. It is one of the Cinque Ports. The pier was destroyed by a storm in the reign of Elizabeth. It had a good trade, which has now declined, and an excellent harbour now choked up. It has still a small coasting trade to London; great quantities of mackerel, herrings, soles, &c. are also sent by land to London, as soon as they are caught. The building of small coasters, but especially boats, is carried on to some extent, and with great skill; and a lime company employs a number of hands. But the prosperity of the town has of late received a new impulse, from its fame as a watering place, on which account it is greatly resorted to. Its situation is beautiful; and the environs also abound with picturesque scenery and delightful walks and rides. A walk, called the Marine Parade, has been formed on the west of the town. The public buildings are, two very ancient churches; the town-hall, built in 1700, with the market-place under it; the custom-house, which employs 12 riding officers; two excellent free schools; and a barrack for foot soldiers. The remains of an ancient castle are still to be seen. Two miles from the town is the stone on which William is said to have dined when he landed here; it is still called the Conqueror's stone. Hastings sends two members to parliament. Population 5096. 36 miles S. E. Tunbridge.

HATCHY, a river of the United States, in Tennessee, which joins the Mississippi.

HATFIELD, or BISHOP'S HATFIELD, a town of England, county of Herts, on the Lea. Queen Elizabeth and Edward VI. were conducted hence to be crowned. Here is the magnificent seat of the Marquis of Salisbury. Pop. 3215. 19 miles N. London.

HATFIELD, a village of England, county of York, in Hatfield Chase. The church is large, and has a lofty elegant tower. Population 1948. 8 miles E. Doncaster.

HATFIELD BROAD OAK, a town and parish of England, in Essex. Pop. of the parish 1693.

HATHAZ, a town of Hungary, 11 miles N. Debreczin. Pop. 4000, chiefly Calvinists.

HATFIELD, a town of England, in Devonshire, with some woollen manufactures. Population 1499. 28 miles N. W. Exeter.

HATHERN, a town and parish of England, in Leicestershire. Population 1144.

HATRASS, a fort and town of Hindostan, province of Agra, 18 miles S. Coel. Long. 78. E. Lat. 27. 40. N.

HATTEM, a town of the Netherlands, on the Yssel. Population 2400.

HATTERAS, a most remarkable and dangerous cape on the coast of North Carolina. Lat. 35. 15. N.

HATTINGEN, a town of Westphalia, 25 miles N. E. Dusseldorf. Population 2000.

HAVANNAH, the capital of the island of Cuba, on the north coast, at the mouth of the river Jagua. The harbour is one of the best in the world, being capable of containing commodiously 1000 ships. It has so narrow a channel, that only one vessel can enter at once. The channel is strongly fortified; the city is also surmounted with works, all of them furnished with artillery even to profusion. A square citadel is erected near the centre of the town, of great strength. The captain-general's palace is in it; and here the treasure is deposited. The city contains 11 fine churches, 2 hospitals, a dock-yard, lazaretto, and numerous public buildings: an aqueduct supplies the shipping with water, and turns the saw-mills in the dock-yard. The town stands in a plain on the west side of the harbour; and the houses, which are elegant, are mostly of stone. There are several convents; and the great square is a fine ornament of the place. This city has been frequently attacked: it was taken in 1636 by a French pirate, but ransomed for 700 dollars; it was again taken by the English, and by the French, and by the Buccaneers. In 1762, it was taken by the British; but restored in 1763. The trade of this port is computed to amount, by importations (the exportations being chiefly in sugar, wax, and coffee), to 20 millions of piasters. Population 25,000. Long. 62. 14. W. Lat. 23. 12. N.

HAVANT, a town in England, in Hampshire. Population 2000.

HAVOURDIN, a town of French Flanders, 4 miles S. E. Hisle. Population 1800.

HAVEL, a navigable river in the north of Germany, which falls into the Elbe.

HAVELBERG, a town of Brandenburg, 56 miles N. W. Berlin. Population 2000.

HAVERFORDWEST, a town of Wales, in Pembrokeshire, on the western branch of the river Cleddau, which is navigable at spring tides for vessels of 100 tons burthen. The town being situated on the declivity of a hill, its interior is very uneven, and the streets are narrow. There is, however, a considerable number of good houses in the town; and many of the streets are neat and clean. The principal public building is the guildhall, three churches, and one in the suburbs; also handsome chapels for dissenters. A new jail has been lately built for the town, and one for the county. Here is a great corn market, a fair for horses, and six annual fairs for cattle. Haverfordwest is a county of itself, and sends one member to parliament. The castle, when perfect, must have been a large and magnificent structure. The keep is the only portion that now remains entire. Pop. 4055. 17 miles N. Pembroke.

HAVERRILL, a town of England, in Essex. Population 320.

HAVERRILL, a post township of the United States, in Grafton county, New Hampshire, on Connecticut river, 30 miles above Dartmouth college. Population 1105.—2d, Of Essex county, Massachusetts, pleasantly situated on the north side of Merrimack river, 13 miles W. S. W. Newburyport. Population 2682.

HAVRE, a town of France, in Languedoc. Population 3050.

HAU DE GRACE, or LE HAVRE, an important commercial and strongly fortified town of France, at the influx of the Seine into the English channel. It consists of long and narrow streets. The fronts of the houses are lofty, but have a heavy and mean appearance. The harbour, which has a long pier, is capable of containing 600 or 700 vessels, and has a depth sufficient to float ships of war of 60 guns. Havre is a place of great bustle and activity, being the export of Paris. The manufactures comprise sail-cloth, cordage, tobacco, lace, and earthen-ware. Here are also several building docks and a sugar refinery. The fortifications of Havre were brought to their present state of perfection by Bonaparte, who also improved the harbour and docks, and erected two light-houses. Havre was bombarded by the British in 1759, 1794, and 1795. Pop. 31,000. 112 miles N. W. Paris. Long. 0. 6. E. Lat. 49. 29. N.

HAUSAY, one of the smaller Shetland islands, on the coast of Scotland.

HAUSRECKVIEHVEL, L. a. "Quarter of Hausrude," a circle of Upper Austria, bounded by the Danube, the circle of the Traun, and Bavaria. Its superficial extent is 733 square miles. Pop. 109,000. The capital is Lantz.

HAUTERIVE, a town of France, department of the Upper Garonne. Pop. 2009.

HAWARDEN, a town of North Wales, in Flintshire, situated on a small river running into Chester new channel of the Dee. There is here a large iron foundry; also considerable potteries. Near the town are the remains of the castle of Pen y Llwy, once very strong. Pop. 964. 7 miles W. Chester.

HAWES, a township of England, in Yorkshire. Population 1408.

HAWICK, a town and parish of Scotland, county of Roxburgh, at the confluence of the rivers Tiviot and Slitrig, the latter dividing it into two parts, which are connected together by two stone bridges, one of which bears evident marks of antiquity. The town has of late years been considerably improved in its general appearance. Besides the established church, there are Burgher, Antiburgher, and Relief meeting-houses. There is an excellent public library in the town, begun in 1760. It is a burgh of barony, and possesses all the immunities and privileges of a royal burgh, except that of sending members to parliament. Considerable manufactures are carried on here, of carpets, Scots blankets, lamb-wool stockings, thongs, and gloves. It also carries on a good trade in the tanning of leather, and in the dressing of sheep skins. Population, including the suburbs, 4387.

HAWK'S BAR, a bay on the coast of West Florida; westward of Mobile bay.

HAWKINSRIVER, a river of New Holland, which falls into Broken bay on the east coast. It has its rise among the Blue mountains, far into the interior, and is a large river, subject to sudden swellings, to the height of 70 or 80 feet above its ordinary level, which sweep the adjacent country with wide inundation.

HAWKESHEAD, a market town of England, county of Lancaster. Pop. 892.

HAWKESBURY, a parish of England, in Kent. Population 2250.

HAWKINS, a county of the United States, in Tennessee, on Holston river. Pop. 7643. Slaves 930. Chief town Rogersville.

HAWKSWORTH, a township in England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 323.

HAWORTH, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 4000.

HAWES, a river of Wales, in Montgomeryshire, which falls into the Severn.

HAWKES, a township of England, 3 miles S. E. Whitby. Population 684.

HAY, a market town of Wales, county of Brecknock, on the Wye, over which there is a bridge. Pop. 1319. 16 miles N. Brecon.

HAYDOCK, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 810.

HAYE DU PAYS, LA, a town of Normandy. Population 1960.

HAYES, a village and parish of England, in the county of Middlesex. It has a large church. Population 1830.

HAYE, a river of Guadeloupe, which rises in the S. E. part of the island.

HAYE, a village and fort of England, in Cornwall, on the River Haye.

HAYNICHEN, a town of Saxony, 25 miles W. Dresden. Population 2430.

HAYZBROUK, a well built town of French Flanders, 27 miles W. by N. Lille. Population 6600. It trades in thread, linen, &c. Long. 2. 37. E. Lat. 50. 43. N.

HAZENSWOON, a village of the Netherlands. Population 2800.

HEADGE, a township of England, in Derbyshire. Population 1743.

HEADINGLEY, a township of England, 24 miles N. W. Leeds. Population 2134.

HEAND, St., a town of France, 27 miles S. W. Lyons. Population 2700.

HEANOR, a township of England, 9 miles N. E. Derby. Population 2364.

HEAP, a township of England, in Lancashire, 3 miles S. E. Bury. Population 6552.

HEATH, a hamlet of England, in Bedfordshire. Population 720.

HEATE, a village of England, in Yorkshire, 1 mile S. E. Wakefield. Pop. 741.

HEATH CHARNOCK, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 623.

HEATHFIELD, a parish of England, in Sussex. Population 1613.

HEATHVILLE, a township of England, in Staffordshire. Population 788.

HEATON, a township of England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire. Pop. 1217.

HEATON, a township of England, in Staffordshire. Population 391.

HEATON, GREAT AND LITTLE, two townships of England, in Lancashire. Population 224-430.

HEATON KIRK, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Pop. 2180.

HEATON NORRIS, a township of England, Lancashire, 14 mile N. Stockport. Pop. 6058.

HEAVITREE, a village of England, in Devonshire, 14 mile from Exeter. Pop. 1253.

HEBDEN, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 377.

HEBRIDES, or WESTERN ISLANDS, a cluster of islands, situated on the western coast of Scotland, in the Atlantic ocean. They extend about 160 miles in length, from the Butt of Lewis, their northern extremity, in 58. 24. N. lat., to the small island of Sanday, on the coast of Kintyre, in 56. 22. of the same lat.; and they are from 10 to 30 miles in breadth. They contain, as nearly as can be computed, 2,000,000 of English acres.

The principal islands are Lewis, and its adjacent islands, belonging to Ross-shire; Harris, North Uist, Benbecula, South Uist, Skye, Barra, Kigg, and the smaller neighbouring islands, attached to Inverness-shire; and Rum, Muck, Canna, Coll, Tyrie, Mull, Lismore, Staffa, Luing, Scarba, Colonsay, Oronsay, Jura, Islay, Gigha, Cara, &c. belonging to the shire of Argyll. To these we may add those islands which lie in the firth of Clyde, to the eastward of the peninsula of Kintyre, viz. the isles of Bute, Arran, Cambrays (Greater and Lesser), and Inch-marnock, which form the shire of Bute. The various tracts of ground and clusters of rocks, thus detached from the main land, are estimated to amount to 800, of which 86 are inhabited, and are calculated to contain 70,000 inhabitants. The ancient history of these islands is involved in obscurity. It appears certain, however, that they were ruled by their own independent princes until the 8th century, when the Pictish kingdom was overthrown by Kenneth II. They continued, during to 10th, 11th, and 12th centuries, the haunts of pirates, who infested the neighbouring countries; and when they came under the dominion of the kings of Scotland, their chieftains were long lawless and turbulent, until, by the gradual increase and consolidation of the royal power, and by the progress also of regular order and good government, these remote parts of the kingdom were slowly brought within the control of the supreme power. The act of parliament of 1748, abolishing all heritable jurisdictions, gave the final blow to the influence of the independent chieftains of the western isles.

HEBRIDES, New, a group of islands in the South Pacific ocean, discovered by Quiros in the year 1606. In 1773, Captain Cook surveyed this group, and he gave to the whole the appellation of New Hebrides, from considering them to be the most western islands of the Pacific ocean. They are situated between long. 166. 41. and 170. 21. E., and lat. 14. 20. and 20. S., extending 125 leagues, in the direction of N. N. W. $\frac{1}{2}$ W. and N. S. E. $\frac{1}{2}$ E. The following is a list of them, viz. Pic d'Isle, Terra Austral, St Bartholomew, Isle of Lepers, Aurora island, Whitemud isle, Mallicollo, Ambrym, Apes Paoon, Three Hills island, Shephard's isles, Monument, Two Hills, Montague isle, Hinchinbrook isle, Sandwich island, Trompango, Tanna, Irronan, Immer, and Annotom.

HEBRON, a town of Palestine, 27 miles S. W. Jerusalem.

HEBRON, a post township of the United States, in Washington county, New York, 8 miles N. Salem. Population 2430.—The name of several other townships.

HECHINGEN, a town of Germany, 39 miles S. Stuttgart. Population 2000.

HECKDYKE, a river of England; in Nottinghamshire, which falls into the Funt.

HECKENDWICK, a township of England, 8 miles from Wakefield. Pop. 2579.

HECLA, a volcanic mountain in the southern part of Iceland, near the coast. Height 5000 feet.

HECTON, a post township of the United States, in Tussocks county, New York, 10 miles S. Ovid. Population 1653.

HECHMAN, a river of the United States, in Virginia. It joins with the Robinson to form the Rappahannock.

HEBON, a market town of England, near the mouth of the Humber. It sends two members to parliament. Population 902. 2 miles E. Hull.

HEBESIA, one of the great divisions of modern Arabia. It consists of a plain, which extends along the Red sea from Mount Sinai to the frontier of Yemen. It contains the famous capitals of Mecca and Medina.

HEERDE, a large village of the Netherlands, in Gelderland. Population 2600.

HEERLEN, a town of the Netherlands, 14 miles N. W. Maastricht. Population 3500.

HEERMUND, a river of Persia. It rises near Cabul, and falls into Lake Zerrah.

HEIDELBERG, an ancient city of Germany, on the Neckar. The streets are narrow and gloomy. The chief buildings are the town-house, the hospitals (three in number), several churches, and the university. Here is a stone bridge over the Neckar, 700 feet in breadth. The old fortress, called Treutz-kaiser, is also worth notice. The ancient electoral palace stands on a hill near the town, and though in ruins, is still a very interesting object. Heidelberg has long been celebrated for its university, founded in 1386. It has inconsiderable manufactures of woollens, cotton, silk stockings, paper, and tapes, &c. Pop. 16,000. 10 miles S. S. E. Mannheim. Long. E. 41. 38. E. Lat. 49. 21. 43. N.

HEIDELBERG, a township of the United States, in Dauphin county, Pennsylvania, 74 miles N. W. Philadelphia. Pop. 3332.—The name of several other townships.

HEIDELBERG, a town of Germany, in Baden, 17 miles S. Heidelberg. Pop. 1850.

HEIDELBERG, a town of Franconia, 17 miles S. Aspech. Population 1800.

HEIDELBERG, a town of Wirtemberg, 21 miles N. W. Ulm. Population 1900.

HEIDELBERG, a township of England, county of Durham. Population 557.

HEIDELBERG, a town of Wirtemberg, on the Neckar, 25 miles N. Stuttgart. It has a well endowed academy, a public library, and an orphan-house. Population 6000. 25 miles N. Stuttgart.

HEILIGENBERG, a town of East Prussia, on the Jura. Population 2000.

HEILIGENBERG, a walled town of Prussian Saxony, near the Lüne. Pop. 3350.

HEILIGENBERG, a town of East Prussia, on the Alle, 26 miles S. Königsberg. Pop. 2300.

HEILIGENBERG, a small island of the Hebrides, on the coast of Scotland.

HEIL, a river of England, in Cornwall, which joins the Fal.

HELDER, a town of North Holland, opposite the Texel. It was taken by the British, under Sir Ralph Abercromby, in 1799. Population 2400. 24 miles N. Alkmaar.

HELEN'S ST., a road or bay in the English channel, on the coast of the Isle of Wight.—2d, One of the Scilly islands, about a mile N. Eresca.

HELENA ST., an island in the Atlantic ocean, standing entirely by itself, detached from any group, and about 1200 miles from the nearest land, on the coast of Southern Africa. It was discovered by the Portuguese in 1501. It was afterwards possessed by the Dutch; and finally came into the possession of the English about the year 1651, in whose possession it has, with a short interval, ever since remained. St Helena is 104 miles long, by 6½ broad, and about 28 miles in circumference. It presents to the sea, throughout its whole circuit, nothing but an immense wall of perpendicular rock, from 600 to 1200 feet high, like a castle in the midst of the ocean. On entering, however, and ascending by one of the few openings which nature has left, verdant valleys are found interspersed with the dreary rocks. The loftiest eminence is called Diana's peak, situated nearly in the centre of the island, and rising to the height of 2700 feet. In the south-west quarter there is a conical hill, called High Peak, or High Knoll, the elevation of which is not much inferior. There are also lofty peaks, called Sugar Loaf and Ladder Hill. The other rocks and hills are thrown together in the wildest confusion, like nature in a state of chaos. There are only four openings in the great wall of rock which surrounds St Helena, by which it can be approached with any kind of facility. These are James's or Chapel bay, being the one on which the town is built, and on which alone there is any beach; Rupert's bay, Lemon valley, and Sandy bay. These are all strongly fortified. The climate of St Helena is not liable to the extremes of heat or cold; but it is moist, and liable to strong gusts of wind. It is exempt, however, from thunder and lightning, storms and hurricanes. The sky, in consequence of the superabundance of moisture, is often clouded; and only about one day in three is supposed to be illumined by sunshine. Of this small portion of ground which is fit for cultivation, a part is exceedingly fertile. Potatoes, which are the principal object of culture, have, in fourteen years, produced an average more than two crops in the year. St Helena, at its first discovery, presented an immense forest. Its chief and precious trees were ebony, red-wood, and gum-wood. About 1790, the plain was nearly stripped of trees; and in its place there began, in a few years, to spring up a species of wild-grass, which converted the ground into excellent pasturage. Since that time, the rearing of sheep and goats has been the principal object of agricultural industry. There is only one place in the island which can be called a town, situated in a narrow valley, between lofty mountains, called James's valley. The town is entered by an arched gateway, within which is a handsome parade, about 100 feet square. On the left side are the government-house and the main guard-room; the former, inclosed with a wall, bearing an appearance of emporium, is called the castle, within which is the residence of the governor and the public offices. The church, a handsome building, fronts the gate; and on the right of it is a neat little square. The principal street begins between the church and a small plantation in James's valley, and consists of about 30 houses, most of them neat and well built. At the top two other streets branch off to the east and west; in the latter are the barracks, the new garden, the hospital, and a number of shops, well stored with all sorts of European, Indian, and Chinese commodities; but the houses are in general far inferior to those in the lower part of the town, where the principal inhabitants reside. Long 15.53. W. Lat. 5.49. S.

HELENA ISLAND, St., an island of North America, on the coast of South Carolina.

HELENA PARISH, St., in Beaufort district, South Carolina, consists of a cluster of islands on the S. W. side of St Helena island, one of the largest of which is Port Royal.

HELENSBURGH, a village of Scotland, county of Dumbarton, opposite Greenock.

HELYER, St., the capital of Jersey. It is situated on the east side of St Aubin's bay. Within the last 20 years it has been greatly enlarged and improved, having become, from an insignificant village, with old thatched houses, and ill paved streets, a genteel and respectable looking town, consisting of several streets, diverging from a square, in which, raised on a pedestal, stands a gilt pedestrian statue of George II. in a Roman dress. On one side of the square is the court-house, and not far from it is the government-house. The parish church was completed in the year 1341, but has since been greatly enlarged and altered. There are, besides, chapels for Calvinists and Methodists. The Roman Catholics assemble in a private house. It has a work-house and a public hospital, a new prison, a small theatre, and a public library. A lighthouse is a strong fortress, on a rocky island in St Aubin's bay, about a mile from St Helier - of which it defends the entrance; and another fortification has recently been constructed. Three gazettes are published weekly in French, and one in English. Population 10,118. 4 miles E. St Aubin. Long. 2.14. W. Lat. 49.13. N.

HELIGOLAND, of HELSINGBORG, a group of small islands in the North sea, belonging formerly to Denmark, now to Great Britain, and situated about 30 miles from the mouth of the Weser, the Elbe, and the Eider. It consists of the principal island, surrounded into the Cliff and the Low Land; the smaller island, called the Dünen; and several sandbanks and rocks, of which that called the Monk is the most conspicuous. Heligoland has two good harbours; and to the east of the Dünen is a road, where vessels may anchor in 48 feet of water. Population 2000, who subsist chiefly by fishing and acting as pilots. It was taken from the Danes by the British, in 1807, and rendered a depot for merchandise. At the peace of 1814 it was retained by this country.

HELVIC SKERRIES, a cluster of small islands belonging to the Scotch Hebrides.

HELVETIA. See Dardanelles.

HELVETIA, a town of Spain, province of Murcia. It contains two churches, two hospitals, and 6100 inhabitants.

HELVETIA, a river of Saxony, in Thuringia, which falls into the Elster at Artern.

HELVETIA, a town of North Brabant, on the Aa. Population 2600.

HELVETIA, a river of Scotland, in Shetlandshire, which falls into the German ocean 3 miles S. Ord of Caithness.

HELVETIA, a town of England, in Yorkshire, near the Rye, with manufactures of cotton and linen. Population 1920.

HELVETIA, a town of the states of Brunswick, principality of Wolfenbüttel. Its principal buildings are, the church of St Stephen, the council-house, and the university, now suppressed. Population 3300.

HELVETIA, a town of Sweden, opposite to Helsingör. A pier of stone was lately constructed, which has greatly improved the port. The width of the Sound is about three miles. It has little trade. Here is the principal ferry from Sweden to Denmark. Population 2150. Long. 12.43. 16. E. Lat. 56. 2. 55. N.

HELVETIA, a town of Finland, at the mouth of the Wamma, with a good harbour. It has a trade in corn; also in fish, wax, and deals. Pop. 3200. 104 miles E. S. E. Aft.

HELVETIA, an extensive province in the north of Sweden, in Norland, bounded by the gulf of Bothnia, Gasteria, and Dalsen. Its superficial extent is about 470 square miles. Population 62,000.

HELVETIA and HELVETIA, two small islands on the E. side of the gulf of Bothnia.

HELVETIA, a town of England, in Cornwall, on the coast, not far from its mouth into the sea. It is one of those towns pointed for the stamping of the clay and h ving a good harbour, it has a considerable trade. It sends two members to parliament. Pop. 2672. 12 miles E. Penzance.

HEUVOETSLUYA, a well built fortified town of South Holland, on the south side of the island of Voorn. It has an excellent harbour, large enough to contain the whole Dutch navy. Here are extensive magazines and dock-yards for the construction and repair of ships of war; also a naval school supported by government. Heuvoetsluya was taken by the French in January 1795, and evacuated by them in 1813. Population 1200.

HENET, HENFETAD, a town of England, in Hertfordshire. Its female inhabitants are much employed in the plaiting of straw. Population 3902. 23 miles N. W. London.

HENNA, a city of Syria, on the borders of the desert, 120 miles S. Aleppo. Long. 37. 20. E. Lat. 34. 25. N.

HENDERSON, a county of the United States, in the north-west part of Kentucky. Population 4703. Slaves 1514.—2d. A post town and capital of Henderson county, Kentucky, on the Ohio, 75 miles below Louisville. Pop. 169.—3d. A post township in Jefferson county, New York, on Lake Ontario, 8 miles S. of the mouth of Black river. Pop. 1138.

HENDON, a parish of England, in Middlesex. Population 3100.

HENEAGO, or HENEAGUAS, two of the most southern of the Bahama islands.

HENEGLO, a town of the Netherlands, in Gelderland, with 2050 inhabitants.

HENIN-LIETARD, a town of France, department of the Pas de Calais. Pop. 2400.

HENLEY IN ARDEN, a town of England, in the county of Warwick. Pop. 1249.

HENLEY UPON THAMES, a town of England, county of Oxford, on the Thames. It has a considerable trade to London, in malt, flour, corn, and wood. A handsome stone bridge has been lately erected over the Thames. The church is ancient and spacious; the lofty tower was built by cardinal Wolsey. Pop. 3609. 35 miles W. London.

HENLOREN, Cape, the south-west side of the entrance of Delaware bay, as Cape May forms the north-east side, being 18 miles apart. Long. 75. 28. W. Lat. 35. 50. N.

HENNON, a town of France, department of the Morbihan, on the Blavet, 15 miles N. E. L'Orient. Population 4000.

HENNENSBORR, a town in Upper Lusatia. It has manufactures of linen and woollen stuffs. Population 4360.

HENNENSBORR, a village of Silesia, principality of Jagerndorf. Population 2000.

HENNENSBORR, a manufacturing village of Prussian Silesia. Population 3500.

HENNENSBORR, a town of Upper Lusatia. Pop. 3000, chiefly Moravian brethren.

HENRICHEMONT, a town of France, department of the Cher. Population 2600.

HENRICO, a county of the United States, in Virginia, inclosed by the counties of Hanover, Charles city, and Gloucester, and by James river. Population 9940. Slaves 4454.

HENRY, a county of the United States, in Virginia, inclosed by Franklin, Patrick, Grayson, and Montgomery counties. Population 5611. Slaves 1755. Chief town Martinsville.—2d. Of Alabama.—3d. Of Kentucky, on the west side of Kentucky river, at its confluence with the Ohio. Population 6777. Slaves 1137. Chief town Newcastle.—4th. Of Ohio, on Maumee river, formed in 1820, in the Indian reservation.

HENRY, a cape of the United States, in Virginia. Long. 78. 16. W. Lat. 37. N.

HENSHAW, a township of England, in Northumberlandshire. Population 693.

HENSHINGHAM, a township of England, 14 mile N. E. Whitehaven. Population 600.

HEOLLEWERSWID, a hamlet of Wales, in Glamorganshire, 5 miles from Caerphilly.

HEPTENHRIM, a town of Hesse-Darmstadt, 12 miles E. Worms. Pop. 3200.

HEPTONTALL, a township of England, 8 miles W. Halifax. Population 4543.

HERWORTH, a township of England, 8 miles S. Huddersfield. Population 1048.

HERAT, the Aria of the Greeks, a very ancient city of the province of Khorsaan, in Persia, on the high road from Persia and Tartary to Hindostan. It is favourably situated for commerce; and has also been the route of all the invading armies, and has been often plundered, sacked, and burnt. In 1783, when it was visited by Mr Forster, it possessed a considerable share of commerce. It has an extensive manufacture of carpets; and some good horses are bred in the vicinity. Long. 62. 20. E. Lat. 34. 50. N.

HERAULT, a maritime department in the south of France, in Languedoc, bounded along its S. E. side by the Mediterranean. It has a superficial extent of 2830 square miles, with fully 300,000 inhabitants.

HERAULT, a river of France, which runs into the Mediterranean, Long. 3. 40. E. Lat. 43. 18. N.

HERBIERS, a town of France, in Votitou. Population 1900.

HERBIGNAC, a town of France, in Brittany. Population 2700.

HERBLAIN, St. a town of France, in Brittany. Population 1800.

HERBLON, St. a town of France, in Brittany. Population 2200.

HERNOLDHEIM, a town of Germany, in Baden. Population 1750.

HANNON, a town of Germany, in the duchy of Nassau. Population 2400.

HERENT, a town of the Netherlands, province of Limburg. Population 1500.

HERCULANEUM, an ancient city of Italy, 5 miles east by south of Naples, near the site of which the modern Portici now stands. It was destroyed by an eruption of Mount Vesuvius in A. D. 79; and its site had long been a matter of local discussion, as it had been completely buried under volcanic substances to a depth of 70 feet. At last, in the year 1711, digging a well in his garden, found some pieces of fine marble. Since this period the ground has been excavated, and the ancient city discovered, in the state in which it was when it was buried under the volcanic eruptions. Many valuable antiquities have been found, the whole calculated to convey a most accurate idea of the manners of antiquity.

HERCULEANUS, a town of the United States, in the state of Louisiana. Pop. 206.

HENRYNA, a stream, or rather river, of Greece, in Boeotia, with two sources.

HEREFORD, one of the western counties of England, on the borders of Wales. It is bounded N. by Shropshire, S. by the counties of Gloucester and Monmouth, E. by Worcester, and W. by Brecknock and Radnor; its greatest length being 38, and its greatest breadth from east to west 33 miles. It is within the parallels of 51.50. and 52.20. N. lat. and 2.30. and 3.10. W. long.; contains about 600,000 acres, or 970 square miles, with 100 inhabitants to each; 11 hundred, 221 parishes, 1 city, Hereford, the county town; 7 market towns, Wrothly, Leominster, Ross, Ledbury, Kington, Bromyard, and Pembridge, the two first being also boroughs. It sends 8 members to parliament for the county, the city, and the two boroughs, two for each. Herefordshire is essentially and almost solely an agricultural county. There is scarcely any department of husbandry which it does not cultivate, and few in which it does not excel; and it is especially famous for its cyder. The aspect of the county is throughout rich and beautiful in the extreme; no ranges of mountains, but gentle eminences, swelling in every direction, with valleys between, and everywhere covered with plantations, orchards, and meadows, inclosed with hedges and rows of trees, and in the highest state of cultivation. The chief rivers are the Wye, the Eonise, the Lug, the Arrow, and the Munnow. The inland navigation has not been much improved artificially. The soil of Herefordshire is everywhere of uncommon fertility, arising partly from the subsoil of limestone on which it chiefly rests; it is mostly clay, mixed with marl and calcareous matter. In some parts the limestone passes into variegated marble. Red and yellow ochres, with tobacco pipe clay, are frequently met with. Fuller's earth is dug near Stokely; and iron ore occurs on the borders of Gloucestershire, but is not worked. Population 163,243.

HEREFORD, an ancient city of England, in Herefordshire, of which it is the county town, situated on the Wye, over which it has a stone bridge of six arches. The manufactures are gloves, hannels, and hats, but none of them to any extent. The charitable institutions, hospitals, and almshouses, are very numerous. The principal public buildings are the cathedral; the bishop's palace; the county jail, of the best construction, and under excellent regulations; a small but neat theatre; the old town hall, a curious wooden fabric; the guildhall; and the shirt-hall.

The plan of the cathedral is that of a cross, with a small transept towards the east; and a chapel: the north porch is particularly admired. It has also chapels for Presbyterians, Methodists, Dissenters, Roman Catholics, and Quakers; an infirmary, a lunatic asylum, and a free grammar school. The town was anciently fortified with a wall and ditch, and a very large castle; only a small part of the wall remains; and the site of the castle, called the Castle-green, forms now an agreeable promenade, and is much admired. Hereford is governed by a mayor, 6 aldermen, a common council of 31, a high steward, and a recorder. It sends two members to parliament, elected by the freemen only, in number about 1000. Population 9990. 136 miles W. N. W. London. Long. 2.42. W. Lat. 52.3. N.

HEREWACAPPEL, a village of North Holland, 7 miles N. Alkmaar.

HERFORDIA, a town of the Netherlands, province of Antwerp, on the Nethe. Here are manufactures of lace; also some distilleries. Population 3600.

HERFORD, a town of Prussian Westphalia. It has a large manufactory of cotton thread; also of linen. Population 6000. 11 miles E. N. E. Rayenberg.

HERFORD'S ISLANDS, a group of islands in the South Pacific ocean, discovered by Lieutenant Hergeot in the Dadalus. They extend from Long. 210. 47. to 220. 21. E. Lat. 7. 53. to 9. 14. S.

HERIO, a town of France, in Brittany. Population 2500.

HERICOMAT, a town of France, department of the Upper Saône. Pop. 1500.

HERINKEE, a town of the Netherlands, in South Brabant. Pop. 3300.

HERIBAU, a town of the Swiss canton of Appenzel. It has 6500 inhabitants, who manufacture cotton, linen, and a kind of muslin extremely fine. 10 miles N. W. Appenzel.

HERKIMER, a county of the United States, in New York, bounded N. by St Lawrence county, E. by Montgomery county, and a small angle of Otsego county, S. by Otsego county, and W. by Oneida and Lewis counties. Pop. 22,048.—22, A township and village in the above county. Houses 94.

HERMANNSTADT, a town of Transylvania, on the Szeben. It has a convent and three monasteries, one of which belongs to the Greek monks of St Basil. The other remarkable objects are the orphan-hospital, the barracks outside the town, and the theatre. Its chief manufacture is soap and candles. Population 16,000. 202 miles S. E. Vienna. Long. 24. 4. 13. E. Lat. 45. 43. N. E.

HERMANNSTADT, a town of Bohemia, with 1600 inhabitants.

HERMIT, a river of Scotland, county of Roxburgh, which falls into the Liddel.

HERMABORP, two villages of Silisia. Population of each 1300.

HERIKUPT, a river of Afghanistan, which enters the sea of Zerra, or Aria Pale.

HERRAD, a river of Hungary, which falls into the Theysse.

HERRALS, or HERRHALS, a village of Lower Austria, near Vienna. Pop. 1600.

HERRANI, a small town of Spain, in Guiposcoa, 1½ league from the Bidasoa.

HERRNAND, a very extensive government in the north of Sweden, comprising the provinces of Angömannland, Jemphand, and Medelpad. Population 100,600.

HERRNAND, capital of the government just mentioned, on the island of Herno, in the gulf of Bothnia, and united to the continent by a bridge. Population 2500. 210 miles N. by W. Stockholm.

HERO, NORRIS and BOURN, two islands in Lake Champlain.

HERRI, a river of Germany, in Saxony, which falls into the Werra.

HERNANDEZ, a port of Chili, province of Quillota. Lat. 32. 11. S.

HERNENBURG, a town of Wirtemberg, 11 miles S. E. Stuttgart. Population 1900.

HERNENBURG, a small town of Hungary, 4 miles N. N. W. Neusohl, situated in the midst of copper mines.

HERNENBURG, a town of Upper Lusatia, 6 miles S. Loban, built for the use of the Moravian brethren. Population 1500.

HERNY, a town of France, department of the Cher. Population 1000.

HERNBERG, a small town of Bavarian Franconia, on the Pegnitz. Pop. 1600.

HERNBERG, a town of the Netherlands, province of Liege, on the Meuse. Pop. 4750.

HERTFORD, one of the middle counties of England, bounded S. by Middlesex, N. by Cambridge and Bedford, E. by Essex, from which it is partly divided by the river Lea, and W. by Buckingham and Bedford. Its boundaries are chiefly artificial, and extremely irregular. It is within the parallels of 51. 36. and 52. 4. N. lat.; between 0. 12. E. and 0. 45. W. long.; contains 530 square miles, with 210 inhabitants to each; 8 hundreds, 135 parishes, and 19 market towns, of which Hertford, St. Alban's, Ware, and Royston, are the only ones of much consequence. It sends six members to parliament, for the county, and the two boroughs, two for each. The soil of Hertfordshire is naturally barren; but its vicinity to the metropolis has contributed to fertilize and to enrich it: so that it is a very considerable agricultural county, while the mill-rivers and uncommon beauty of the climate, with an agreeable diversity of surface, have made it a favourite country residence. A ridge of chalk hills skirts the northern boundary. They are elevated 800 or 900 feet above the sea, and they divide the waters of the Ouse or the north, from those which flow so abundantly through the county to the Thames. The principal rivers are the Ouse, the Lea and its branches, the Maron, the Beane, the Rick, and part of the Stort, which discharges to the west, north, and east; and the Colne, the Ver, and the New River, which latter issuing near Amwell and and running in an artificial channel for 40 miles, supplies the capital with water. The Grand Junction canal passes through the south extremity of the county. The prevailing soils are loam and clay. The produce is wheat, barley, oats, &c. The woodlands of Hertfordshire are extensive. Hertfordshire carries on a great trade in malt. The manufactures of the county are inconsiderable. Population 129,914.

HERTFORD, an ancient town of England, the capital of Hertfordshire, on the Lea, which is here navigable for barges. It contains two parish churches, a neat sessions house, a town-hall for the quarter sessions and county courts, a jail and penitentiary house, built on the plan of Howard, and a market-house. At the distance of two and a half miles on the London road, stands the East India college, founded to co-operate with the famous college at Calcutta, in training young men for the company's service. It was founded in May 1696. It has also a school belonging to Christ-church hospital, London: a grammar-school, two meeting-houses for dissenters, and one for the Quakers. Hertford is governed by a mayor, high steward, recorder, aldermen, &c. and sends two members to parliament, the number of voters being about 700. Hertford is of considerable antiquity. Population 4265. 21 miles N. London.

HERTFORD, a county of Lower Canada, on the St. Lawrence, bounded E. by Cornwallis county, and W. by Dorchester county.

HERTFORD, a county of the United States, in North Carolina, enclosed by Virginia, and the counties of Chatham, Bertie, and Northampton. Population 6053. Slaves 2005.—23. A post town and capital of Perquimans county, North Carolina, on Perquimans river, 10 miles N. E. Edenton.

HERVE, a small but thriving town of the Netherlands, 11 miles S. E. Liège. Pop. 3300. It has a small manufacture of woollens.

HERZFU, a village of the Bavarian circle of the Rhine. Population 2200.

HERZFU, a town of Hanover, 14 miles S. Goslar. Population 2540.

HERZFU, a town of Saxony, on an island in the Black Elster. Pop. 2000.

HERZFU, a strongly fortified town of France, department of the Las de Cabus, on the Canche. It has manufactures of stockings, caps, &c. Population 5000. 27 miles W. Arras.

HERZFU, a district in the west of Germany, bounded by Hanover, the Prussian states, Franconia, Hesse-Darmstadt, and Nassau. The territorial extent of the whole, including all detached districts, is 4350 square miles. The population, in 1812, was 545,000, of whom the far greater number are of the reigning family, Calvinists. The chief towns are Cassel (the capital), Hanau, Marburg, and Fulda. The Hesse-Cassel territory is far from compact; it consists of the following parts:—Hesse, Upper and Lower; the great duchy of Fuld; the territory of Hanau; lastly, the lordship of Schmalcalden. In general, the surface of the country is hilly, and even mountainous. The rivers are the Werra, the Fulda and the Biemel, the Main, the Eder, the Schwalm, and the Lahn. The pasturage is good; and the mountainous nature of the country is highly favourable to the production of wood and minerals. Copper, silver, iron, cobalt, salt, vitriol, alum, pitcoal, marble, and basalt, all enter into the long list of substances obtained from the bowels of the earth. In the end of 1813, the elector, who had been expelled from his territory by Bonaparte, returned, and was acknowledged by the allied powers.

HESE-DARMSTADT, or the GRAND DUCHY OF HESSE, an extensive territory in the west of Germany, situated near the Rhine, and belonging to a branch of the house of Hesse. Like the electorate, this territory is by no means compact, being divided into two distinct parts, which are separated by a long stripe of land, extending from east to west, along the north bank of the Maine, and belonging to Hesse-Cassel. The southern of these divisions comprises 2000 square miles, and a population of 350,000; the northern division, nearly as extensive, but less fertile, contains 1930 square miles, and a population of 260,000. The capital of the former is Darmstadt; of the latter Giessen. Few states have benefited more than Hesse-Darmstadt from the consequences of the French revolution. The territory of Hesse-Darmstadt is fully as mountainous as that of the kindred principality of Hesse-Cassel; and is equally noted for its metallic products, particularly iron, copper, and lead. The principal rivers, after the Rhine and Maine, are the Lahn, the Nidda, the Ohn, the Schwalm, and the Itter, all to the north of the Maine. The constitution of Hesse-Darmstadt is a monarchy, limited by states or representatives. The crown is hereditary in the male line.

HESE-HOMBURG, a small principality of Germany, near Frankfort, belonging, with the title of landgrave, to a younger branch of the family of Hesse-Darmstadt, and containing about 21,000 inhabitants.

HESEL, a small river of Westphalia, which runs into the Ems.

HEALE, a township of England, East Riding of Yorkshire, 5 miles W. Hull. Pop. 1021.

HEATHERGILL, a township of England, in Cumberland. Population 776.

HETTOWRA, a town of Hindostan, in Nepal. Long. 83. 22 E. Lat. 27. 14 N.

HETTSTADT, a town of Saxony, 8 miles N. Mansfeld. Population 2750.

HEVENHAM, a hamlet of England, in Westmoreland. Population 1401.

HEVES, a small town of Upper Hungary, in a palatinate of the same name, 61 miles E. Pest.

HEVEN, a township of England, in Northumberland. Population 612.

HEUSDEN, a strong town of the Netherlands, in North Brabant. Pop. 1700.

HEWORTH, HIGH and LOW, two townships of England, in Durham. Pop. 3031.

HEXHAM, a market town of England, in Northumberland, situated a little below the junction of the North Tyne with the South. It has manufactures of tanned leather, shoes, gloves, hats, and other trades; but the town is chiefly remarkable for the antiquities with which it is surrounded, and the historical events connected with it. The neighbourhood abounds with ruined castles, monuments of battles and heroes; with Roman relics, altars, inscriptions, &c. The cathedral church of Hexham was founded in 674. It was destroyed by the Danes. Another was begun in the reign of Henry I. part of which still remains. Near this are also two stone towers, which appear to be of high antiquity. Near the town, in 1163, a battle was fought between the houses of York and Lancaster. Pop. 5436. 20 miles W. Newcastle.

HEYDE, a town of Denmark, 50 miles S. S. W. Slawick. Population 2400.

HEYDENFELD, a town of Bavarian Franconia, on the Maine. Population 1600.

HEYST-OB-DEN-BERG, a town of the Netherlands, province of Antwerp. Pop. 5300.

HEYESBURY, or HABESBURY, a town of England, in Wiltshire. It has a manufactory of woollen cloths. Population 1320.

HIAQUI, Rio, a river of New Spain, which enters the gulf of California.

HIATSTOWN, a village of the United States, in Middlesex county, New Jersey, 13 miles N. E. Trenton.

HICKMAN, a county of the United States, in West Tennessee. Population 2563.

HIELMAR, a lake in the central part of Sweden, about 40 mil. long.

HIERES, ISLES OF, a cluster of small islands in the Mediterranean, near the south coast of France.

HIERES, a town of France, department of the Var, 9 miles E. Toulon. The neighbourhood is marshy, and the air unhealthy. From a salt lake in the neighbourhood, a large quantity of salt is obtained, and exported; oil, wine, and fruit, are also exported to Toulon and Marseilles. Population 7000. Long. 6. 7. 55 E. Lat. 43. 7. 2 N.

HIGHAM, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 891.

HIGHAM FERRERS, an ancient market town of England, in Northamptonshire, 15 miles N. Bedford. Population 677.

HIGHGATE, a populous village of England, in Middlesex, 34 miles N. W. St Paul's.

HIGHGATE, a post township of the United States, in Franklin county, Vermont, on Missisque bay, in Lake Champlain, 33 miles N. Burlington. Population 1874.

HIGHLAND COUNTY, a county of the United States, in the state of Ohio, bounded S. by Adams's county, E. by Pike, N. by Ross, Clinton, and Fayette, and W. by Clermont. Pop. 7300. Chief town Hillsborough.

HIGHLAND, a natural division of Scotland, comprehending the mountainous part of the country to the north and north-west, in contradistinction to the Lowlands, which comprehend the south and south-east districts. The appellation of Highlands also extends to the Hebrides, or Western Isles. This extensive tract of country is divided into two parts, the West Highlands and the North Highlands; the former of which contains the shires of Argyll and Bute, and part of Perth and Dunbarton, with the islands belonging to them; and the latter comprehends the counties of Inverness, Ross, Sutherland, the districts of Atholl, Rannoch, and the isles of Sky, Lewis, and others belonging to Inverness and Ross. The extent of this greater district, from Dunbarton to the borders of Caithness, is upwards of 200 miles, and its breadth varies from 80 to 100. The whole of this district is wild, rugged, and mountainous. The proportion of arable land in this mountainous district is not great. It is chiefly bound on the banks of lakes and rivers, and in the vallies, where there are tracts of fertile soil, which amply repay the labour bestowed upon it. Of late years, industry and improvement have made a rapid progress in the Highlands. The inhabitants are now beginning to avail themselves of the resources yielded by their country for an advantageous commerce, and to devote their labour and capital to their mines, their woods, their extensive pastures, and their fisheries.

HIGHLAND, a mountainous tract of country on the banks of Hudson's river, in the state of New York, between 40 and 60 miles N. New York city.

HIGHWORTH, a market town of England, in Wiltshire. Population 1888.

HIQUET, a Spanish town of St Domingo, on a river of the same name. Population of the town, with its adjoining district, 3500.

HIJAN, a town of Spain, in Arragon, 29 miles S. E. Saragosa. Population 2500.

HIJELLER, capital of a district of the same name in Bengal, on an island near the western bank of the Hoogly, and the first town to be seen after entering the river. There is here an extensive salt manufactory belonging to government. Long. 88. 10. E. Lat. 21. 50. N.

HIJLAIRE, St., a village of France, department of the Cher. Population 1900.

HIJLAIRE SUR AUTRE, St., a town of France, department of La Vendee. Population 1900.

HILDRUNSHAUSEN, SAXE, a duchy in the interior of Germany, bounded by Saxo-Meinungen and Saxo-Coburg. It contains a territorial extent of 217 square miles, with 32,000 inhabitants.

HILDRUNHUSEN, capital of the above duchy, on the Werra, 20 miles N. W. Coburg. Population 2500.

HILDEBRUNN, a considerable province in the south of Hanover, lying between 51. 44. and 52. 23. of N. lat. and adjacent to the province of Gottingen. The superficial extent of the whole is estimated at 600 square miles, and the population at 130,000.

HILDESHEIM, an old and irregularly built city, now subject to Hanover, and the chief town of the above province, near the river Innerste. Its walls have been demolished, and converted into public walks. The town is divided into old and new. The cathedral is a large Gothic building. The Catholics have ten other churches, the Lutherans eight. The other public buildings are the episcopal palace, the council house, the arsenal, the public stables, and the mint. Population 11,000. 20 miles S. E. Hanover.

HILLAH, or HEILLAH, a town of Asiatic Turkey, in the province called Irak E. rabi, or the Pachalic of Bagdad. It lies about 60 miles to the south of Bagdad, on the western bank of the Euphrates, and on the borders of the great Syrian desert. It contains about 12,000 inhabitants. The town is well built, has an extensive and well regulated bazaar, several stately caravanseras built of Babylonian brick, and a number of coffee-houses along the banks of the river. A quarter of the town is situated on the eastern bank, and is connected with the other by a bridge of boats, but is not nearly so considerable as the western quarter. The Euphrates widens considerably as it approaches Hillah, where it is about 200 paces wide, and is navigable for flat bottomed vessels not exceeding fifty tons burden, during 6 months in the year. In the neighbourhood are the ruins of Babylon.

HILLEGOMERS, a village of South Holland, 3 miles N. Rotterdam. Pop. 3000.

HILLEROD, a town of Denmark, in the island of Zealand, 15 miles N. N. W. Copenhagen. Population 1200.

HILLINGDON, a parish of England, in Middlesex. Population 2886.

HILLSBOROUGH, a county of the United States, in New Hampshire, bounded N. by Grafton county, E. by Rockingham county, S. by Massachusetts, and W. by Connecticut river, which separates it from Vermont. Population 49,240.

HILLSBOROUGH, a post town of the United States, and capital of Orange county, North Carolina, on Fno river, 17 miles above its confluence with Little and Flat rivers. It is situated in a hilly, healthy, and fertile country, and contains about 80 houses, a court-house and jail, and an academy. 41 miles N. W. Raleigh, 100 W. N. W. Newbern. — Also the name of several townships.

HILLSBOROUGH, a town of Ireland, county of Down, of modern erection, and neatly built. It has a magnificent church, with a lofty spire. 20 miles S. W. Belfast.

HILLSBORO, a post township of the United States, in Columbia county, New York; 16 miles E. Hudson, 33 S. E. Albany. Population 4162.

HILLTOWN, a township of the United States, in Bucks county, Pennsylvania. Population 1335.

HILTON HEAD, the most southern point of land in South Carolina.

HILVAREKSEK, a village of North Brabant, with 1900 inhabitants.

HILVERSUM, a town of North Holland, 6 miles S. Naarden. Population 2400.

HIMALAY MOUNTAINS, a stupendous range of mountains, which separate Hindostan from Tibet and Tartary.

HINCHINBROOK ISLAND, an island on the west coast of North America, in Prince William's sound. Long. 213. 50. to 214. 24. E. Lat. 60. 24. N.

HINCKLEY, a town of England, in Leicestershire. It has a flourishing manufacture of coarse cotton stockings, thread, and worsted. It is also noted for its fine ale. Besides the church, there are four meeting-houses and a Catholic chapel. Population 4216. 13 miles S. W. Leicester.

HINDELANG, a town of Bavaria, principally of Augsburg. Population 2000.

HINDELOPEN, a town of the Netherlands, in Friesland. Population 1500.

HINDERWELL, a township of England, North Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1483.

HINDIA, a fortified town of Hindostan, on the Nerbuddah river. Long. 77. 10. E. Lat. 22. 31. N.

HINDLEY, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 3757.

HINDOX, an island on the Norway coast, 180 miles in circumference.

HINDOX, a market town of England, in Wiltshire. Population 830.

HINDOSTAN, the Country of the Blacks, a name given to it by the northern Persians, and now in general use, but by the aborigines called BHARATA, an extensive region of Asia, comprehending, in its greatest extent, all the countries lying between the 65th and 95th degrees of eastern longitude, Kandahar and Assam having formerly been reckoned in it. Its extreme breadth, reckoning from the northern boundary of Cashmeer to Cape Camorin, is about 27 degrees of latitude; if to which is added Ceylon and the other dependent islands, it will approximate nearly to the size of Europe, with the exclusion of Russia. This region has, from time immemorial, been inhabited by an idolatrous people, now generally known by the name of Hindoos, but divided into a number of principalities, constantly fluctuating in extent, population, and power. At the demise of Aurangzebe, which took place in 1707, Hindostan was divided into the following provinces, all of which still retain the names they then bore; therefore, to avoid repetitions, in giving the list of them, we will add the state to whom they now respectively belong, beginning on the north-west boundary, viz.

Cabul, including Candahar and Cashmere,—

The Afghans.

Tahore, or Panjab,—Sikhs.

Moultan,—The Afghans, and several Hindoo or Seik chiefs.

Sinde,—Several Mahometan chiefs.

Delhi,—The British, and a number of Hindoo and Seik chiefs.

Seringgur,—The rajah, for whom it has lately been recovered from the Nepalesses.

Nepaul,—The rajah of, called the Ghurk-hali.

Bootan,—The Lania of Tibet.

Assam,—The rajah of Assam.

Ajmeer,—The rajahs of (Oleypore, Jypore, Joudpore, and several other Hindoo chiefs, some of whom are Mahrattas.

Agra,—The British, Mahrattas, Jauts, and several other Hindoo chiefs.

Oude,—The British, and Nabob of Oude.

Allahabad,—The British, Mahrattas, and several Hindoo chiefs.

Bihar,—British.

Bengal,—British.

Gujerat, including Cutch,—British, Mahrattas, and a number of independent petty chiefs.

Malwah,—The Mahrattas, and several other Hindoo chiefs.

Benar,—The Mahrattas and Nizam.

Orissa,—British and Mahrattas.

Khandeish,—Mahrattas.

Dowletabad or Aurungabad,—Mahrattas and Nizam.

Golconda,—Nizam.

Circars,—British.

Dejapore, or Visiapore,—Mahrattas and Nizam.

The remainder of the country south of the Kistna was never completely subdued by the Moguls, but in 1707 was possessed by several independent chiefs. It is now divided into the following districts:—

Concan,—Belonging to the Mahrattas.

Mysore,—Rajah of Mysore.

Cochin,—Rajah of Cochin.

Travancore,—Rajah of Travancore.

The remainder of the country is now in possession of the British, viz. Canara, including Bednore, Malabar, Cuddapah, Adoni, Carnatic, Coimbatore, Dindigul, Madura, and Tinnevely. Of Ceylon, all the sea coast belongs to the British; the interior till lately to the king of Canily, at present in a state of confusion. The principal rivers of Hindostan are the Indus, Junna, Ganges, Goggrah, Brahmapootra, Soane, Nerbuddah, Puddar, Taptee, Godavary, Kistna, and Mahanudda. There are up lofty mountains except the Himmaleh, and those which divide Bengal from Ava. The population of modern Hindostan has been calculated to exceed 100,000,000. The bulk of these are idolaters, but are divided into three great sects or religions, viz. 1st, The worshippers of the Triad, Brahma, Vishnu, Siva. 2^d, The followers of Buddh, believed by them to have been an incarnation of the Deity, whose principal tenet is to avoid putting any animal to death. 3^d, The Jains, whose principal object of worship is Parismawath, a deified saint. The next numerous class of inhabitants are Mahometans, and may perhaps amount to one-eighth of the number of Hindoos.

Hingham, a market town of England, in Norfolk, 14 miles W. Norwich. Pop. 1442.

Hingham, a post township of the United States, in Suffolk county, Massachusetts, 14 miles S. E. Boston. Pop. 2392. It contains three churches, and a well endowed academy.

Hindobaka, a town of Spain, in Cordova. It manufactures coarse cloth. Pop. 4000.

Hippobolus, a town of England, 2½ miles from Halifax. Population 3936.

Hippolyte, St., a town of France, in Languedoc, on the Vidourle. It has manufactures of leather and woollen stuffs. Population 5100. 31 miles W. by N. Nismes.

Hippolyte, St., a town of France, in Franche Comte, 4 miles E. N. E. Besancon. Population 5000.

Hippolyte, St., a town of France, in Upper Alsace. Population 1700.

Hirschberg, a well built town of Silesia, in the principality of Jauer, at the confluence of the Bober and the Zacker. It carries on a trade in linen and wool. Here are also some woollen manufactures. Population 6000. 33 miles W. Schweidnitz.

Hirschberg, a town of Saxony, county of Reuss, on the Saale. Population 1300.

Hirschfeld, a walled town of Hesse-Cassel, on the Fulda, with 5500 inhabitants. It has the best regulated Calvinist gymnasium in the electorate. Its manufactures are cloth and leather. 25 miles N. Fulda.

Hirschhorn, a town of Hesse-Darmstadt, on the Neckar. Population 2100.

Hirson, a town of France, department of the Aisne, on the Oise. Population 2150.

Hirtowa, a fortified town of European Turkey, on the Danube, 61 miles S. W. 15 miles.

Hirshorn, an island of Sweden, at the mouth of the Gotha-Elf, 16 miles long, and 6 broad. Long. 11. 4. 8. E. Lat. 57. 45. N.

Hirshwola. See Domingo, St.

Hirshin, a well built market town of England; county of Hertford. It carries on a trade in malt. The church is a handsome structure of stone. There are several meeting-houses, a free and a charity school, and 8 almshouses. Population 4336. 16 miles S. E. Bedford.

Hirtzow, an island on the coast of Drontheim, in Norway, with 3700 inhabitants.

Hitzing, a large manufacturing village of Austria, between Vienna and Schoenbrunn.

Hwassee, a river of the United States, which enters the Tennessee from the south.

Huain-an-foo, a large city of China; province of Kiangnan. Long. 118. 47. E. Lat. 33. 30. N.

Hoanghe, or Yellow River, a great river of China, and one of the most prominent features in the geography of that vast empire. Though broad and rapid, it is in many places so shallow as to be unfavourable for navigation. It is also liable to overflow its banks, so that it has been necessary in many places to raise dikes for the defence of the surrounding country.

Hochmuer, a village of Germany, in Badent, with 1200 inhabitants.

Hochtrau, a large village of Lower Austria, on the March. Population 1340.

Hochfelden, a town of France, 12 miles N. W. Strasbourg. Population 1630.

Hochheim, a town of Germany, with 1800 inhabitants. 4 miles N. E. Mentz.

Hochkircn, a village of Upper Lusatia, noted for the defeat of the king of Prussia, sustained by Marshal Daun in 1758.

Hocast, a town of Germany, in Nassau, on the Maine, with 1600 inhabitants. 17 miles N. E. Mentz.

Hochstadt, a town of Franconia, on the Aisch. Population 1300.

Hochstadt, a town of the Bavarian states, at the influx of the small river Egried into the Danube, noted for the defeat of the French and Bavarians. by the duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene. The action took place between this town and Blenheim, in 1704. Population 2300. 19 miles N. W. Augsburg.—The name of several small towns in Germany.

Hocking river, a river of the United States, in the state of Ohio. It has its rise near a branch of the Scioto, and falls into the Ohio at Tray, in N. lat. 38. 57. after a course of about 80 miles.

Hodder, a river of England, in Yorkshire, which falls into the Ribble at Mytton.

Hodderston, a market town of England, in the county of Hertford, near the Lea. It consists of two streets about a mile in length. Population 1394. 17 miles N. London.

Hodmsert, a town of the Netherlands, province of Liege. Population 2000.

Honnert, a township of England, in Salop. Population 2117.

Hornic, a small island of France, on the coast of Brittany, 9 miles E. Belleisle.

Horgard, a town of the Netherlands, in South Brabant. Population 2250.

Hof, Hoff, or Stadt zum Hof, a town of Franconia, on the Saale. It has manufactures of woollens, cotton, and leather; also extensive breweries. Population 5000. 46 miles N. E. Bamberg.

Hof, a town of Moravia, with 1700 inhabitants. 8 miles N. E. Olmutz.—The name also of several other small German towns.

Hoff, a small town of East Prussia, 4 miles S. Landsberg.

Hoff, a river of the Prussian states, which falls into the Roer opposite Arensburg.

Hog Island, one of the smaller Shetland islands.—The name also of several small islands on the coast of North Carolina, Virginia, Rhode Island; also of several islands in the Eastern sea.

Hog Islands, a cluster of small islands on the coast of Ireland, county of Kerry.

Hog's Head, a cape of Ireland, forming the eastern boundary of Malinbegg bay. Long. 10. 13. W. Lat. 51. 13. N.

HOERLANDT, a village of the Netherlands. Pop. 1700. 9 miles E. S. E. Groningen.

HOCHTUN, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 2111.

HOCHTUN, THE, a dangerous reef of rocks among the Bahamas.

HOCHTUN, LA, a town of France, in Normandy, department of La Manche. It was the scene, in 1692, of a famous sea-fight between the French fleet and the English. Population 2000.

HOCHTUN, a county of Suabia, now belonging to Wirtemberg, and situated in the thinly peopled track of the Black Forest.

HOCHTUN, a town of Bohemia. Pop. 1400. 5 miles E. Koniggratz.

HOCHTUN, a town of Bohemia, on the Elbe. Population 2100.

HOCHTUN, a town of Saxony. Population 2000. 7 miles S. Gera.

HOCHTUN, a village of Bavaria, 20 miles E. Munich, containing 40 houses; noted for the defeat of the Austrian army on 3d December 1800, by the French, under Moreau.

HOCHTUN, a town of Moravia, on the Sava, with 1500 inhabitants.

HOCHTUN, a town of Saxony, with a manufacture of cotton stuffs; and mines of silver and arsenic in the neighbourhood. Population 3000. 7 miles W. Chemnitz.

HOCHTUN, a village of Wirtemberg, with 2450 inhabitants.

HOCHTUN, a fortress belonging to Wirtemberg, 9 miles N. E. Schaffhausen.

HOCHTUN, a market town of England, in Lincolnshire. The church is a fine Gothic structure. Pop. 3621. 12 miles S. Boston.

HOCHTUN, a township of England, about a mile from Leeds. Population 7151.

HOCHTUN, a township of the United States, in Worcester county, Massachusetts.

HOCHTUN, a market town of England, in Devonshire. Population 1440.

HOCHTUN, a town of Barbadoes, on the west coast.

HOCHTUN, a village of the United States, in Talbot county, Maryland.

HOCHTUN, a hamlet of England, in Derbyshire. Population 563.

HOCHTUN, a town of Moravia, with 4300 inhabitants. 44 miles E. Brunn.

HOCHTUN, a town of Hungary, on the Morava. The manufacture of white ornamental stone is considerable here. Population 4000. 45 miles N. Presburg.

HOCHTUN, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 1091.

HOLLAND, a maritime province of the Netherlands, remarkable above all others, even in that populous country, for the density of its towns and villages, and for the triumph of persevering industry over the difficulties of nature. Under the present title will be described the province properly so called, and consisting of two parts, North and South Holland. They form a narrow track, extending from lat. 51. 40. to 53. 10. N., in length about 90 miles, in breadth varying from 25 to 40. The greatest breadth is in the south. This province is bounded W. by the German ocean, N. by Zealand, E. by the Zuyder Zee and the province of Utrecht. The superficial extent of the whole province of Holland is about 2100 square miles. The whole province contains 37 cities and towns, 38 smaller towns with markets, and 418 villages. The division into the two governments of South and North Holland is recognised by the constitution of 1814; the former contains 1170 square miles, with 380,000 inhabitants, and is divided into the six districts of the Hague, Leyden, Rotterdam, Dordt, Gorcum, and the Briet; while North Holland, which, in official papers, is called by its ancient name of West Friesland, contains 930 square miles, with 350,000 inhabitants, and is divided into the four districts of Amsterdam, Haarlem, Hoorn, and Alkmaar. The following are the chief towns: Amsterdam, Rotterdam, Hague, Leyden, Haarlem, Dordt, Delft, Gouda, Alkmaar, Hoorn. The national religion is Calvinism; but there is a Lutheran congregation in every town of consequence; and among the lower classes the Catholics are numerous.

The whole province of Holland is a continued flat, and lies so low as to be under the level of the sea at high water: the tide is prevented from flowing in by means of dikes and natural sand-banks. The numerous canals and ditches which traverse the province in all directions are likewise provided with dikes, and serve not only to promote internal communication, but to drain the country of superfluous water. In addition to the two great rivers which water this province in common with the rest of the Netherlands, viz. the Rhine and the Maase, Holland has several smaller rivers peculiar to itself, such as the Vecht, the Amstel, the Zaan, the Schie, the Rotte, and the Spaaren; but they have so little current as to be more properly canals or water courses. The principal lake is that of Haarlem. The soil is in general rich, consisting of a deep fat loam. From the humidity of both soil and climate, there is little of the province under tillage, and that little is in South Holland. The crops principally cultivated are wheat, rye, barley, hemp, and flax. The agricultural wealth of the province at large consists in its pastures, which are almost unrivalled in the abundance and luxuriance of the grass which they produce. The manufactures of Holland, though no longer extensive, embrace a variety of articles, viz. linen, woollen, and leather; also paper, wax, refined sugar, starch, and in certain districts pottery and tiles. Large quantities of oil are likewise made, particularly at Schiedam, near the Maase. The extent of the commerce of the united provinces was long the admiration of Europe. Of this commerce the province of Holland, in particular Amsterdam and Rotterdam, enjoyed by far the largest share. A concu-rence of unfortunate circumstances had, however, considerably reduced it before the French revolution; that event, joined to the long war with England, and Bonaparte's anticommercial schemes, brought it to the lowest state of depression. Its trade has now, however, begun to revive. The fisheries of Holland were formerly very productive, being prosecuted with great industry, not only on their own coasts, but at a great distance, on the shores of Scotland, and in the deep sea.

Holland, in the middle ages, was subject to the government of counts or earls, and exposed to all the evils of military contests with the Frieslanders on the east, and the Fleinish on the south. After its emancipation from the dominion of Spain, it was ruled, with some interruptions, by the house of Orange. In 1795, it was conquered by the French; and afterwards, under Bonaparte, reduced into a province of France, from which it was freed in 1813, in consequence of the misfortunes that befell the French armies. From that time the history of Holland forms a part of that of the larger government of the Netherlands.

HOLLAND DOVE, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 629.

HOLLAND, NEW, an island in the South Pacific ocean, the largest in the world, and long supposed to form a part of a great southern continent. It stretches from east to west above 2600 miles, between Sandy Cape and the entrance of Sharks Bay; and it is above 2000 miles in length from Cape York on the north, to Wilson's promontory in 39. 10. S. lat. The country was first discovered by the Dutch in 1605; and was visited in 1616 by Dirk Hartag, who commemorated his visit in a plate of tin left behind him, which was found by some of our navigators in 1801. It was occasionally visited by the Dutch navigators till the end of the century. It was visited by Captain Cook in 1770; and was determined by him to be an island. It was afterwards visited by Captain Furneaux in 1773, by Vancouver in 1791, by the French navigator Bruni d'Entrecasteaux, and in 1795—1799, by Bass and Flinders; and afterwards, in 1801, Captain Flinders made a complete survey of its coasts. The coast of this extensive island is extremely diversified in its appearance, having in some parts, at the distance of several miles, ranges of small and sterile islands; in other parts the shores are steep and inaccessible; while, on the northern coast particularly, and in the gulf of Carpentaria, they are very flat, and to all appearance sandy and barren. On the east coast there is a singular barrier of coral reefs, which, according to Captain Flinders, extends along the coast in a north-west direction, from about 23 degrees of S. lat. to Torres strait in lat. 30 degrees S.; being a space of about 840 miles. On the north, the coast of New Holland is indented by the gulf of Carpentaria, which is 400 miles wide at the entrance, and penetrates 500 miles into the land. Sharks bay, where Dampier anchored in 1689, was ascertained by the French expedition to be 30 leagues deep. On the south coast is King George's sound, Port Philip, and Western Port, at the second of which a British settlement was established in 1804. There are also two remarkable inlets, one called Bonaparte's gulf by the French, and Spencer's gulf by the English, 48 miles wide at the mouth, and penetrating the land 185 miles, when it terminates in a point exactly opposite the bottom of the gulf of Carpentaria; the other, called the gulf of St Vincent, penetrates the land about half the distance of Spencer's gulf. On the east coast Botany Bay is the most important inlet, from the flourishing settlement connected with it. The most important river, which has yet been discovered is Hawkesbury river, which falls into Broken bay, near Port Jackson, to which it is navigable for the largest vessels. Other rivers have been discovered beyond the Blue mountains, which run inland into the land, and great hopes were entertained that they reached the ocean; but being explored by different expeditions, they were found to terminate in swamps. To the southward of lat. 33. or 34. the country is generally low and level.

The quadrupeds of New Holland are the kangaroo of various species; the wombat, a squat, thick, short-legged, and rather inactive quadruped, about the size of a large dog; the native dog of New South Wales, with a considerable resemblance to the wolf, and remarkable for its ill-nature and viciousness; the ornithorhynchus paradoxus, an amphibious animal, and very singularly formed, and of the mole species, but considerably larger than that animal. Besides these, there are the opossum, the flying squirrel, the kangaroo rat, and the large fox bat. The animals imported by the Europeans have generally thriven well. A cow and a bull having strayed into the woods, have propagated there, and the country is now filled with wild cattle. Deer have also multiplied in the same manner, and have been seen straying wild in the woods. Sheep and hogs have also succeeded well; but the breed of goats has not improved. Among the birds are the black swan, cassowary or emu, mountain eagle, and menura; which is an elegant bird, with a shewy and brilliant appearance. There are besides, parrots of different sorts, pigeons of various species, the thrush, the hawk, the cassowary, the cockatoo, &c. Shell-fish are numerous on all the islands and shores, and great shoals of whales and dolphins fill the seas. Seals and other sea animals are so numerous, that profitable fisheries have been established in Bass's straits and other parts, for their oil and skins.

The inhabitants of New Holland are of the middle stature. They have a large misshapen head, slender extremities, and the belly projecting as if swollen. Their noses are flat, nostrils wide, eyes much sunk in the head, and covered with thick eye-brows. Their lips are thick, and the mouth extravagantly wide; but when opened, it discovers two rows of white, even, and sound teeth. Many have very prominent jaws. The colour of the skin is reddish at first, and then deepens almost to African blackness. Both sexes use the disgusting practice of rubbing fish oil into their skins; but they are compelled to this as a guard against the effects of the air, and of mosquitoes and flies, some of which are large, and bite or sting with much severity. In their habits the natives of New Holland are as barbarous as can be imagined. Every day are men and women to be seen in the streets of Sidney and Parramatta, naked as in the moment of their birth. They are still as unprotected as ever against the inclemencies of the weather, or against the extreme of absolute famine, the great evil of a savage life. Their habitations are as rude as imagination can conceive. Under the article South Wales, the reader will find a full account of the settlement made by Great Britain on the coast of New Holland in 1788.

HOLLAND'S POINT, on the coast of Maryland, on the west of Chesapeake bay. Long. 71. 28. W. Lat. 38. 42. S.

HOLLAND, PRUSSIAN, a town of East Prussia, on the Weeske. Population 3100.

HOLLAND, Ux, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 3042.

HOLLIS, a township of the United States, in Hillsborough county, New Hampshire, 9 miles S. Amherst. Population 1520.

HOLLINGSLOUGH, a township of England, in Staffordshire. Population 560.

HOLLINGWORTH, a township of England, in Cheshire. Population 1293.

HOLLIS, or PHILLIPSBURG, a post township of the United States, in York county, Maine, on Saco river, 42 miles N. York. Pop. 1427.

HOLLISTON, a township of the United States, in Middlesex county, Massachusetts, 27 miles S. W. Boston. Population 2223.

HOLME, a parish of Scotland, in Orkney, which gives name to Holme sound, leading into the German ocean by Stromness.

HOLMEK, a township of England, in Herefordshire. Population 324.

HOLMES, FLAT and STREET, two small islands in the Bristol channel, three leagues south of Cardiff.

HOLOWSKY, a town of European Russia, in the neighbourhood of Mohilev.

HOLSTEN, an extensive duchy of Germany, belonging to Denmark, and bounded W. and S. by the German ocean and the Elbe, E. by the Baltic, and N. by Sleswick. Its form is compact; its superficial extent about 3250 square miles; its population (1818) 360,000; the prevailing religion the Lutheran. Holsten has few mountains. Its principal rivers are the Elbe, the Eyder, and the Buz; the only lake worth mentioning is the Fluken. Its chief productions are wheat, barley, and oats; potatoes, hemp, and flax, with some hops and fruit; but its principal wealth is in its pastures. The chief mineral products are lime and salt. Its chief towns are Altona, Rendsburg, Kiel, and Gluckstadt. The king of Denmark had originally a seat at the German diet, on account of his Holstein possessions; but in 1806, on the formation of the confederation of the Rhine, this privilege was lost. In 1813, on the establishment of the Germanic confederation, he was re-admitted into that body by the congress of Vienna.

HOLSTON, a large river of the United States, which has its rise in Virginia, and falls into the Tennessee.—There is a settlement of the same name on this river.

HOLT, a hamlet of England, in Wilts, noted for its mineral waters, discovered in 1710.

HOLT, a town of Wales, in Denbighshire, on the Dee. There are no remains of its castle. It sends a member to parliament, along with Ruthyn and Denbigh. Population 866.

HOLT, a neat town and parish of England, in Norfolk. It has a church, a meeting-house for Quakers, and a free grammar school. Pop. 1348. 24 miles N. W. Norwich.

HOLTON, a large village of the Netherlands, in Overijssel. Population 3000.

HOLUSI, or HOLAN, a small and scattered town of Iceland, at the mouth of a river on the north coast. It has a cathedral, a printing office, and a school. Long. 13. 6. W. Lat. 65. 42. N.

HOLY ISLAND, an island of the German ocean, on the coast of England. It lies opposite Northumberland, about 8 miles S. E. of Berwick-upon-Tweed, and so near the mainland that it may be crossed by horses and carriages, if they avoid the quicksands, every ebb-tide; but still in all civil matters it belongs to the county of Durham. The island is a continued plain, about 9 miles in circumference, and contains about 1000 acres, one half being sand-banks. The soil is rich. On the south-west of the island lies the town, inhabited principally by fisher men. It is a bay, on the east of it, is a small harbour, well known to seamen for the shelter it affords during an eastern storm; and on the opposite side stands the castle. Near the town are the remains of the monastery. Long. 1. 48. W. Lat. 55. 40. N.

HOLYCROSS, a parish and township of England, in Worcestershire. Pop. 1924.

HOLYHEAD, a seaport town of Wales, situated near the point of the peninsula or island which projects from the western end of the Isle of Anglesey, and now a place of considerable importance, since it has become the great port of communication to the Irish capital, and the rendezvous of the mail packets. A pier has been constructed, to admit vessels to land or sail at all times of the tide. A light-house is erected on the island with stack. The town of Holyhead consists principally of a long street, with detached buildings. Population 2195. 278 miles N. W. London.

HOLYWELL, a town and parish of North Wales, in Flintshire, formerly an inconsiderable village, but now become, from the mineral riches, and the vast manufactures carried on in the neighbourhood, a rapidly improving and flourishing town. It is here that the great lead mines of Flintshire are situated. The principal manufactures round Holywell are immense copper and brass works, with an extensive cotton-mill. The situation is recommended by the easy access to the sea, and the vicinity of the Flintshire coal pits. The machinery at these works is set in motion by a stream which issues from the remarkable Holy Well of St. Wulfrid, boiling up with violence as from a chudron. The manufactured copper and brass is all shipped on the Dee just below the manufactory, to the warehouses of the company at Liverpool, whence great quantities of these goods are sent to London, America, and India. The houses are well built. The church is a plain neat building; and there are four other places of worship for Catholics and dissenters. Adjoining to St. Wulfrid's well is a peat chapel. Population 8309. 11 miles E. St. Asaph.

HOLZMINDER, a town of Germany, at the confluence of the Weser and the Holz. It has large iron-works. Population 3300. 20 miles W. Grubenlagen.

HOMBURG is HANAU, a walled town of Germany, 20 miles S. Cassel. Pop. 2300.

HOMBURG, a town of the Bavarian circle of the Rhine. Population 1800.

HOMBERG ON THE HEIGHT, a town of Germany, 9 miles N. Frankfurt. Pop. 3000.

HOLLER, a township and village of the United States, in Cortlandt county, New York.

HOMOCITTO, a river of North America, in the territory of the Mississippi, which enters the Mississippi about 30 miles below Natchez.

HONAN, a city of China, in the province of the same name. Long. 112. 9. E. Lat. 34. 44. N.

HONDA, a town of South America, in Granada, on the Magdalena. Long. 74. 54. W. Lat. 5. 12. N.

HONDA, BAY OF, or RAYANONDA, a large and convenient bay on the coast of South America, in New Granada. Long. 71. 6. W. Lat. 12. N.

HORVER, a river of Wales, which joins the Ushant Brecknock.

HORROD, a river of South America, in the province of Darien.—Also one of Mexico.

HORNSCHOOT, a town of French Flanders. Pop. 3200. 11 miles S. E. Dunkirk.

HONDURAS, a large province of North America, in the Kingdom of Guatemala, bounded N. by the gulf or bay of Honduras, W. by Vera-Paz, E. by the Caribbean sea, S. by the province of Nicaragua. Length 300 miles, breadth 160. Honduras was discovered by Columbus in 1502. This country is of a hot and moist temperature, and the soil is of great fertility. The track of country which is known under the appellation of the Mosquito shore, lies between 16. 19. and 18. 25. N. latitude, and between 83. 55. and 87. 50. W. longitude. The sea coast (in a general view) forms an angle, somewhat obtuse, at Cape Gracias a Dios, in latitude 18. 0. and longitude 83. 55. From this cape the extent westerly is 65 leagues, and southerly 95, making in the whole a coast of 180 leagues; the westerly extremity is Cape Honduras, latitude 16., and the southern boundary is that branch of the lake of Nicaragua called Nicaragua river, in longitude 84. 10. This extensive country belongs to the Mosquito Indians, who never were subdued by the Spaniards, though they were very cruelly treated by them. These Indians have, however, always been friendly to the British, who have accordingly settlements in the country, inhabited by about 1100 settlers, including slaves. It is into this country that Sir Gregor Macgregor is now carrying settlers.

HONDURAS, BAY OF, a very large and convenient bay, situated between Cape Honduras, in Lat. 15. 0. N., and that of Coteche, at the eastern extremity of the province of Yucatan, in 21. 0. N. It is formed by the coast of the province of Honduras on the south, and that of Yucatan on the west. It is well known from the settlements which the British have made in it, for the cutting down of mahogany and dye-woods. The principal of these, and indeed the only regular settlement they have in this country, is the town of Badize, on the coast of Yucatan, placed at the mouth of the river of that name. It consists of about 200 white inhabitants, and somewhat more than 500 people of colour and free blacks. The cutting of mahogany and logwood forms the sole occupation of these settlers; and for this purpose some of them have established themselves 200 miles above the mouth of the river Badize.

According to Captain Henderson, to whom we are indebted for a very judicious and interesting account of this settlement, the climate is superior to many other parts of the American continent. With the exception of a few months in the year, the country is refreshed by regular sea breezes, accompanied by an average heat that may be taken at the temperature of 80 degrees. The soil of such part of the country as has been employed by the British, is of extraordinary fertility, and yields in abundance all sorts of tropical produce; such as sugar, indigo, cotton, coffee, &c.; also maize, Indian corn, various other species, cassava-root, of which a very valuable species of bread is made; and, lastly, the plantain, which flourishes under the united influence of a tropical climate and a generous soil. Independent of the mahogany and logwood trees, there is a great variety of other kinds, the growth of Honduras, fitted in as many ways for the most useful purposes.

but more particularly for those of a maritime nature. The locust tree, which affords another valuable gum, is likewise common. Of the trees which furnish dyewoods, the most plentiful and easily obtained are those of the logwood and fustic. The trees and shrubs which are of a medicinal nature, grow in almost boundless variety. The wild animals are tigers of two kinds, one of which is black, both very ferocious; the Mexican wild cat, very destructive to the smaller kinds of stock, such as poultry; the deer, and a species of gazelle, or antelope; the peccary and the warree, which are both animals of the hog kind; the gibeunite, which is a small animal, greatly resembling, though it is somewhat larger, than a guinea pig; the agouti, or Indian coney; the armadillo of various species; the caqui, which is particularly destructive of vermin, and rather strikes with its teeth than lacerates, always lacerating in a most severe degree; the ant-eater, the opossum, the racoon, the grey fox, the red squirrel, and the Mexican porcupine. The tapir is sometimes met with on the banks of rivers; and the monkey tribe are numerous in all their varieties. The manati or sea cow is seen sporting on the surface of the different lagoons. The feathered inhabitants of this region are to be found in the most splendid variety, and the most brilliant attire. In all directions, the approach of the extensive coast which lies contiguous to the bay of Honduras is attended with immediate anxiety and danger, both from the small rocky islets and keys with which it is environed, and from the strength and direction of the currents.

HONDURAS, SEA OF. This appellation is sometimes given to that part of the North sea which is bounded N. by the island of Cuba, S. by the Mosquito shore, S. W. by the bay of Honduras, W. by the peninsula of Yucatan, N. W. by the gulf of Mexico, E. N. E. by Jamaica and the Caribbean sea.

HONFLEUR, an irregularly built and ill fortified town of France, department of Calvados, on the Seine, opposite to Havre de Grace. It has a good harbour, and a maritime trade. It has manufactures of lace, hardware, vitriol, and alum. Population 9600. 30 miles N. E. Caen. Long. 0. 14. 14. E. Lat. 49. 25. 13. N.

HONITON, a borough, market town, and parish of England, in Devonshire. The inhabitants deal in manufactures, chiefly of lace and edgings. The town consists chiefly of one large and handsome street. The church contains some ancient monuments; and there is a neat chapel of All Saints, and three meeting-houses for Presbyterians, Baptists, and Independents. Honiton sends two members to parliament. Population 3200. 16 miles E. Exeter.

HOWLEY, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire, Population 2501.

HOOD'S ISLANDS, the most northerly of the Marquis of Mendoza's islands, in the South Pacific ocean. Long. 138. 52. W. Lat. 9. 26. S.

HOOGVEEN, a town of the Netherlands, 14 miles W. N. W. Caenoven. Pop. 4850.

HOOLAND, a town of the Netherlands, province of Utrecht. Population 1400.

HOOLZEX, a town of South Brabant, 12 miles N. E. Ypres. Population 3500.

HOOGHLY, formerly called Golia, a town of Bengal, and formerly the capital of a district of the same name, between the 21st and 23d degrees of N. lat. It is situated on the western bank of the Bhaguratty river, and is supposed to have been founded by the Portuguese about the year 1538, who, being expelled in 1632 by the Mogul troops, Hooghly became the imperial port. In the year 1658, the English, and soon after the Dutch, obtained permission to erect factories; but a dispute arising with the English, recourse was had to arms, and the town was burnt down, with 600 houses. The nabob, who resided at Dacca, highly incensed, sent a large force to expel the English from Hooghly; but previous to its arrival, the English had fled. Hooghly was taken on the 10th of January 1767, by the British; but it was shortly after retaken by the Nabob Seraj-ad-dowleh; and in the month of June was again taken possession of by the British. The port duties were transferred in 1706 from Hooghly to Calcutta. Since then, most of the opulent inhabitants have removed to Calcutta. The site of the old English factory is now occupied by a handsome jail lately erected. Long. 80. 23. E. Lat. 22. 24. N.

HOOGHLY RIVER, properly the BHAGURATTY, a river of Bengal, formed by the junction of the two western branches of the Ganges, the Dummooda, and Hoopnarain rivers. The entrance to this river is rendered extremely dangerous and difficult, by reason of numerous sand-banks, which are frequently shifting. The spring tides also run up with great violence, advancing at the rate of 15 miles an hour, and frequently overturn boats, and drive ships from their anchorage. All the towns belonging to the European nations, and several others occupied by natives, stand on its banks; and few rivers can boast of a more extensive commerce than it carries on.

HOOGSTRAATEN, a town of the Netherlands, province of Antwerp. Pop. 1600.

HOOKSTOWN, two villages of the United States, in Maryland and North Carolina.

HOOLE, GREAT, a township of England, county of Lancaster. Population 644.

HOOLY ONORE, a town of India, province of Mysore. Long. 76. 41. E. Lat. 13. 44. N.

HOOPER'S ISLAND, of the United States, in Dorchester county, Maryland, in Chesapeake bay, 7 miles long, and 2½ broad.

HOORN, a considerable seaport of North Holland, on the Zuyder Zee. The principal manufactures are of woollen cloths and carpets; ship-building also is carried on to a considerable extent. Its harbour is the best on the coast of that sea. Population 9900. 16 miles E. Alkmaar.

HOORN ISLANDS, two islands in the South Pacific ocean. Long. 171. 30. E. Lat. 15. S.

HOOSAC, a post township of the United States, in Rensselaer county, New York, 20 miles N. E. Troy. Population 8117.—2d, A river of New York, which falls into the Hudson.

HORE, a river of Scotland, in Sutherlandshire, which falls into the sea on the east side of Loch Eribol.

HORR, a town of Gaspe county, Lower Canada, on Chalour bay.—2d, Of Durham county, Upper Canada, on Lake Ontario.—Also several townships of the United States.

HORR, a river of Jamaica, which runs into the sea, 5 miles S. Kingston.

HORR LAND, an island in the South Pacific ocean. Long. 32. 11. E. Lat. 46. 45. N.

HORRELL, a township of the United States, in Cumberland county, New Jersey. Population 1937.—2d, Of Hunterdon county, New Jersey, on Delaware river, 11 miles N. Trenton, 14 W. Princeton. Population 2563.—3d, Of York county, Pennsylvania. Population 1577.—4th, Of Washington county, Pennsylvania. Population 2193.—5th, A post township in Bedford county, Pennsylvania. Population 1297.—Also the name of other townships.

HORKINS, a county of the United States, in Kentucky. Population 2964. Chief town Madisonville.

HORWOOD, a township of England, in Lancashire, 8 miles N. Manchester. Pop 1304.

HORADJOWITZ, a town of Bohemia, on the Wotawa. Population 1800.

HORN, a small town of Württemberg, on the Neckar. Population 1700.

HORNBY, a township of England, in Yorkshire. Population 2475.

HORER, a mountain of Arabia Petrea, celebrated in scripture history.

HORGEN, a town of the Swiss canton of Zurich, 10 miles S. S. E. Zurich.

HORN, a town of Westphalia, 11 miles N. Paderborn. It has manufactures of woollens. Population 4800.

HORN, a small town of the Netherlands, 9 miles N. W. Ruremond.

HORN, an island on the coast of West Florida, between Ship and Massacre islands, 17 miles long and 2 broad.

HORN, CAPE, a celebrated promontory on the south coast of Terra del Fuego, and the most southern extremity of South America. Long. 67. 46. W. Lat. 53. 54. S.

HORNBURG, a town of Saxony, on the Ilz. Population 2400.

HORNBY, a town of England, county of Lancaster, on the Leyne. Population 477.

HORNCASTLE, a well built market town of England, in Lincolnshire, on the Bane. It contains a public dispensary, with various schools. Pop. 3058. 21 miles E. Lincoln.

HORNCHURCH, a town and parish of England, co. of Essex. Population 1038.

HORNCLIFF, a township of England, in Durham, 5 miles W. S. W. Berwick. Pop. 351.

HORNEBURG, a town of Hanover, on the Aua. Population 1350.

HORNHAUSEN, a village of Prussian Saxony, 20 miles N. W. Halberstadt.

HORNHEAD, a cape of Ireland, county of Donegal. Long. 7. 51. W. Lat. 54. 13. N.

HORNINGSHAM, a village and parish of England, in Wiltshire. Population 1267.

HORNSEA, a market town of England, in Yorkshire, 15 miles N. Hull. Pop. 790.

HORNSEY, a parish and very pleasant village of England, in Middlesex, a favourite retreat with the citizens of London, 5 miles N. London. Population 4122.

HORR, I. E. a town of France, department of the Mayenne. Population 1650.

HORNSCHITZ, a town of Bohemia, 13 miles E. S. E. Glitschin. Population 9000.

HORSE, one of the Orkney islands, on the coast of Scotland, 3 miles E. Pomona.—Also a small island near the S. W. coast of Ireland.

HORSENECK, a village of the United States, in Fairfield county, Connecticut, where the Dutch defeated the Indians, after a severe battle in 1646.

HORSENS, a seaport of Jutland, on the Cattegat. It has manufactures of flannels and other woollen stuffs. Population 2400. Long. 9. 52. E. Lat. 55. 52. N.

HORSEY ISLAND, off the coast of England, in Essex, 6 miles round. 4 miles from Harwich.

HORSFORTH, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 2824.

HORSHAM, a town of England, county of Sussex, on the river Adur. The church is a fine old building, with a lofty spire and a large east window; and there are places of worship for Presbyterians, Baptists, Quakers, and Methodists. A new and commodious county jail has been erected, and the town-hall has been enlarged. Horsham returns two members to parliament, chosen by 25 voters. Population 4575. 20 miles N. W. Brighton.

HORSELEY, GREAT and LITTLE, two parishes of England, in Gloucestershire. Pop. 623—238.—The name also of other parishes.

HORSELEY WOODHOUSE, a township of England, in Derbyshire. Population 502.

HORST, a town of the Netherlands, province of Limburg. Population 9000.

HORTOX, a township of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 7192.

HORWICK, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 2675.

HORWITZ, a town of Bohemia, 18 miles N. N. W. Koniggratz. Population 2400.

HORWITZ, a town of Bohemia, 28 miles S. W. Prague.

HOSTALRIC, a town of Spain, in Catalonia, on the Torjers, 36 miles E. N. E. Barcelona.

HOSTIMUAI, a small well peopled town of Mexico, in the Intendency of Sonora.

HORZFELT, a town of Transylvania. Population 3000.

HORTETOTA, a people who inhabit the southern part of the continent of Africa, bordering on the Cape of Good Hope. Their country extends eastward along the sea-coast to the territory of the Kaffres, and is bounded N. by the Orange river, which separates them from the Bushuans and Damarus. The races of Hottentots may now be divided into three; the inhabitants of the colony; the Bosjesmans, or wild Hottentots, who inhabit the mountainous districts, extending along the northern frontier of the colony; and the Namaquans, who occupy the north-western coast. The Hottentots of the colony of the Cape of Good Hope, who have been subjected to European sway, have of late years rapidly diminished in their numbers, and are not now supposed to be within the vast limits of the colony, more than 15,000. The chief causes are extreme poverty, scantiness of food, and constant dejection of mind, arising from the treatment they receive from an inhuman and unfeeling peasantry, on whom they have now become dependent. The Hottentots are a mild, quiet, and timid people, perfectly harmless, honest, and faithful; and, though extremely phlegmatic, are kind and affectionate to each other, and not incapable of strong attachments. Like all savages, they are much given to intemperance, which is their ruin, and a real disease, which only terror can cure; and they will rather fast and sleep the whole day, than seek food by hunting or digging the ground. At the same time, when food is supplied to them, they are the greatest gluttons on the face of the earth. In their persons they are by no means devoid of symmetry; clean limbed, well proportioned, and erect. The face is in general extremely ugly; the nose often remarkably flat, though this feature differs in different families. The cheek-bones are high, prominent, and form nearly a triangle with the narrow pointed chin. The teeth are beautifully white, while the colour of the skin is a yellowish brown, resembling that of a faded leaf. The intellects of this race are extremely confined. They can scarcely reckon any period beyond a day, or any number beyond five. Their arts and manufactures are confined to the preparation of poisons, the making of bows and arrows, of musical instruments, and coarse earthen-ware, and the sewing together the skins of sheep, for their winter garments, with the skins or intestines of animals. The Bosjesmans Hottentots inhabit the most inaccessible parts of that lofty chain of mountains which, under the names of the Sneeuwberg and Nieuweldt Gebirge, forms the northern boundary of the colony. These rugged haunts, and their own valour, have enabled them to preserve their independence; but a deadly hostility has long subsisted between them and the colonists, fomented by a long series of mutual injuries. The Bosjesmans make incursions into the plantations, carry off the cattle and sheep, and frequently kill the farmers and their domestics; while the colonists, in return, give them chase continually, shoot them wherever they are to be found, and carry off their women and children as slaves. The Bosjesmans are among the ugliest of human beings. They exhibit in excess all the deformities observed in the Hottentots of the colony. They are extremely diminutive in size, have flat noses; and the high cheek-bones, and prominent chin, suggest the apish character, which is not belied by their keen eye, always in motion. The Bosjesmans, however, far from being indolent like the Hottentots, display incredible activity. Their mechanical skill appeared in their arrows, which were finished with great neatness; in the baskets placed in the rivers for the purpose of taking fish, ingeniously contrived, and very well executed; in the mats of grass of which their huts were composed; and in their imitations of different animals, designed on the smooth faces of rocks. The Bosjesmans are lively and cheerful. Though confined generally to their hovel by day, from the fear of surprise, they sometimes dance on moonlight nights, from sunset to sunrise. The Namaqua Hottentots inhabit the N. W. parts of the colony. In general they are taller and less robust than the eastern tribes. Some of the women have elegant figures, and a good deal of vivacity and activity.

HOTZENBURG, a town of Austrian Silesia, 20 miles N. Troppau. Population 2500.

HOVAR, an island of France, on the coast of Brittany, 7 miles N. E. Belle Isle. Pop. 250.

HORMANT, a town of France, on the Voges, 17 miles S. W. Nancy. Population 1700.

HORNANDERS, a town of South Brabant, 11 miles S. E. Louvain. Population 2500.

HORNBURY, a village and parish of England, in Norfolk. Near it is the magnificent seat of the Earl of Cholmondeley.

HORNCHURCH, a township of England, 7 miles S. E. Manchester. Population 2000.

HORCOMBES, or SPRING, a township of England, county of Durham. Pop. 2005.

HORNSLOW, a town of England, in Middlesex, on the Colne, on the edge of Hounslow Heath. On the heath are many vestiges of ancient encampments. 9 miles W. London.

HORWANG, a province of China, which occupies nearly the centre of the empire, and is divided into two parts, the North and South, by the river Kiang-lo.

HORSERONCK, a river of the United States, in Connecticut, which rises from two sources in Berkshire county, Massachusetts, and falls into Long Island sound.

HORSER, one of the smaller Shetland isles.

HORSSA, or HYRSSA, an extensive country of Central Africa, upon the shores of the Niger, with a capital of the same name.

HORSTON AND KILLALLAN, two united parishes of Scotland, in Renfrewshire. Pop. 2317.

HOU-TSUNG, a city of China, the first class, in Tscheking.

HOWARD, an island in the Red Sea, on the coast of Abyssinia. Long. 49. 30. E. Lat. 12. 30. N.

HOWDEN, or HOVEDEN, an ancient town of England, in Yorkshire, about a mile from the Ouse. It contains a church, and the remains of the ancient palace of the bishops of Durham. Pop. 2080. 25 miles W. Hull.

HOWE'S ISLAND, one of the cluster called Queen Charlotte's islands. Long. 164. 43. E. Lat. 11. 10. S.

HOWE'S ISLANDS, two small islands in the South Pacific ocean. Long. 154. 7. W. Lat. 16. 46. S. Long. 159. 4. W. Lat. 31. 36. S.

HOWTH, a fishing village of Ireland, on a peninsula of the coast, which forms the northern boundary of the bay of Dublin; and, from its elevation, and the two light-houses built on it, forms an excellent landmark to the mariner by day and night. A magnificent harbour has been constructed here, in order to afford shelter to such vessels as are bound for the port of Dublin.

HOXE, a parish of England, in Suffolk. Population 1066.

HOYER, a fortified town of the Prussian states, on the Weser. Population 2900.

HOY, one of the Orkney islands, 15 miles long, and 6½ miles at its greatest breadth. Population 266.

HOYA, a considerable province in the south-west of Hanover. Population 90,000. Its capital is Hoya. Population 1700.

HOYER, a town of Sleswick, with a harbour, noted for its oyster fishery.

HOYLAND SWAIN, a township of England, in Yorkshire. Population 733.

HOYM, a town of Saxony, on the Selke. Population 1750.

HRADISCH, a town of Moravia, 30 miles S. Olmutz. Population 1700.

HUACINE, the easternmost of the Society islands. It is 24 miles in circumference. Long. 150. 53. W. Lat. 16. 43. S.

HUMELY, a town of Hindostan, province of Bejapore. Long. 75. 10. E. Lat. 15. 24. N.

HURET, ST., a town of the Netherlands, province of Liege. Population 1300. 40 miles S. E. Namur.

HURET, ST., a town of Prussian Westphalia. Population 2000.

HUSNICKEN, Gross, a village of East Prussia, government of Königsberg, remarkable for having the only amber mine in the world.

HUCHSWAGEN, a town of the Prussian states of the Rhine, 26 miles E. S. E. Dusseldorf. Population 4300.

HUNDERSFIELD, a market town of England, on the river Colne, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, one of the principal seats of the woollen manufacture in the kingdom. The woollen goods manufactured are narrow and broad cloths, serges, kersycmieres, and various other kinds. They are exposed for sale in the market-hall; perhaps, with the exception of Leeds, the greatest mart for woollens in the kingdom. The market-hall is a circular building of two stories, divided into two courts, and subdivided into ranges, the streets, where the merchandise is exposed-upon stalls. There are several medicinal springs in the neighbourhood. Population 13,284. 8 miles S. E. Halifax.

HUNE, a river of England, which runs into the Tees, 7 miles above Barnard Castle.

HUNSON, a city and port of entry of the United States, and capital of Columbia county, New York, is finely situated on the east bank of the Hudson river, which is navigable to this place for the largest ships. Its growth has been very rapid. It was founded in 1784; in 1786, the population was 1500; and in 1810, 4048. It is regularly laid out in streets and squares, and contains an academy, 2 banks, 4 printing offices, and 4 houses of public worship, 1 for Friends, 1 for Presbyterians, 1 for Methodists, and 1 for Episcopalians. The creeks on the borders of the town afford fine seats for mills and manufactories; and a few years since, Hudson was regarded as the third town in the state in manufactures, and the fourth in commerce. 30 miles S. Albany, 130 N. New York. Lat. 42. 14. N.

HUNSON, a river of the United States, in New York, one of the best for navigation in America, rises in the mountainous region on the west of Lake Champlain, and pursuing a southerly course of more than 300 miles, communicates with the Atlantic, below New York city. It is navigable for ships to Hudson: for large sloops to Albany, near the head of the tide, 160 miles from New York; and for small sloops, to Troy, 6 miles further. It is connected by a canal with Lake Champlain; and the grand canal now in progress, will soon connect it with Lake Erie.

HUNSON'S BAY, a large bay of North America, situated to the north of Canada, reaching, in its whole extent, from Long. 78. to 95. W. and from Lat. 52. to 68. N. It is so called from Henry Hudson, who discovered it in 1610. The eastern boundary of the bay is Terra de Labrador.

HUNSON'S RIVER, a short river of the United States, which flows into Cheapeak bay.

HUNSON'S STRAITS, or FRONISHA'S MISTAKEN STRAIGHT, the narrow sea between the Atlantic ocean and Hudson's bay.

HUNDICKSWALL, a thriving seaport of Sweden, in the province of Helsingland. Population 1500. Long. 17. 7. 59. E. Lat. 61. 43. 45. N.

HUE, or HUETO, the capital of Cochin-China, divided into two parts by a large river.

HVEEN, or WEEN, a small island of the Baltic, in the Sound, 9 miles from Kleinäre. Pop. 300. Long. 12. 43. E. Lat. 55. 55. N.

HUEYMA, a town of Spain, province of Jaen, on the Odiel. Population 2400.

HUEYMA, a maritime town of Spain, province of Seville, 67 miles N. W. Cadix. Population 5000.

HUESCA, a town of Spain, in Arragon, on the Isuela. It has a university, a cathedral, and manufactures of cloth and leather. Population 6800. 30 miles N. E. Saragossa.

HUZCAR, a town of Spain, province of Granada, 70 miles N. E. Granada. Population 3000.

HUKTA, a town of Spain, province of Cuenca. Population 2300.

HUGUESCOTE, a hamlet of England, in Leicestershire. Population 603.

HUILQUELEMO, a province of Chili, between Chillan, the Andes, the river Biobio, and Pucachay; 60 miles long, and 36 broad.

HUIZEN, a village of the Netherlands, in North Holland. Population 1000.

HULMPOOKUZ, a town of Bengal, district of Midnapore. Long. 80. 15 E. Lat. 22. 37. N.

HULIX, a town of Moravia, 12 miles S. Pottau. Population 2000.

HULL, a river of England, in Yorkshire, which rises among the eastern Wolds, and falls into the Humber at Hull.

HULL, or KINGSTON UPON HULL, a seaport town of England, in the East Riding of Yorkshire. It is situated on the great inlet of the Humber, at the point where this receives the river Hull; and from the facilities for trade which it thus acquires, has become one of the first commercial towns in the kingdom. The harbour is artificial, being formed by deepening and widening the channel of the river; and vast docks have been erected, for the accommodation of the shipping. Hull has navigable communications inland, either by rivers or canals, to York, Sheffield, Leeds, Manchester, Liverpool, Nottingham, Birmingham, and Bristol; and is equally open on the east, to the eastern coast, the Continent, and the North sea. The foreign trade is principally to the Baltic and to the whale fishery; but a regular traffic is also kept up to the southern parts of Europe, to the West Indies, and to America. The coasting trade for coals, corn, wool, manufactured goods, &c. is prodigious; and the inland trade exceeds that of any other English port. Various manufactures of the coarser kinds are also carried on at Hull, viz. an iron foundry, a large soap work, two sugar houses, and several white lead manufactories; breweries, rope-works, and ship-building yards, besides flour mills with excellent machinery, and extensive lint-seed oil mills. The town itself has within the last 30 years been greatly enlarged. From the point where the two rivers meet, it extends westwards, nearly two miles along the northern bank of the Humber, and rather more towards the north along the western bank of the Hull. From these streets various others, though by no means upon a uniform plan, branch off into the interior. The older streets are narrow, inconvenient, and disagreeable; but the spirit of improvement, and the taste for elegance and ornament, is visible in the newer parts of the town, the streets being here spacious and regular, and the buildings elegant, many of them magnificent. The public buildings are, the Trinity church, which is a large and beautiful structure of Gothic architecture, and of exquisite workmanship, partly built about the year 1312; St Mary's and St John's churches, the latter a neat and simple brick building. Besides these, there are chapels for the various classes of dissenters and sectaries. Of the charitable institutions, the oldest is the Trinity-house, for the relief of decayed seamen and their widows. The charter-house hospital was founded by Michael de la Pole in 1384, for the support of poor pensioners; and there are, besides, seven other hospitals for the poor. The grammar-school was instituted in 1436; the school-room is one of the best in England. The vicar's school was begun in 1734; and there are various charity and subscription schools, some of them on the Lancasterian system. The other public buildings are the citadel, situated on the east bank of the river, for the defence of the harbour and the town; the custom-house, the theatre, the jail, the library, &c. In the market-place stands a beautiful equestrian statue of William III. The old dock was begun in 1775; it enters immediately from the river Hull, about 300 yards from its mouth; it is 700 yards long, 65 wide, and 22 deep, and will contain 130 vessels of 300 tons. It covers an area of 10 acres. The Humber dock was begun in April 1807; it opens into the Humber by a lock which will admit a 50 gun ship, and which is crossed by an iron bridge. There are also several dry docks for repairing vessels. The old walls have been entirely demolished by the extension and improvements of the town. The town sends two members to parliament, elected by the burgesses. Pop. 28,591; but including the county part, 31,423. 30 miles S. E. York. Long. 0. 16. W. Lat. 53. 45. N.

HULL, a town of York county, Lower Canada, on Ottawa river.

HULME, a township of England, 2 miles S. E. Manchester. Population 4234.

HULME, LEYENS, a township of England, 3½ miles S. E. Manchester. Population 708.

HULS, a town of the Prussian states of the Rhine. Population 1700.

HULST, a strongly fortified town of the Netherlands, in Dutch Brabant, 20 miles N. E. Eclou. Population 1700.

HELTON, LITTLE, MIDDLE, and OWEN, three townships of England, in Lancashire. Population 2465—533—591.

HUMBER, a river of England, one of the largest in the kingdom. It divides Yorkshire from Lincolnshire, is formed by the junction of the Ouse, the Aire, and the Trent, and is the principal outlet for the waters which fall on the eastern side of the kingdom. At the mouth of the Trent, where the Humber properly begins, the river is more than a mile in breadth. It thence flows in an easterly direction towards Hull, gradually widening its channel to between two and three miles, and empties itself into the German ocean, between the promontory of Spurnhead and Sullisect, in a vast estuary, six or seven miles wide.

HUMEN, a river of Newfoundland island, which falls into the gulf of St Lawrence.

HUME, a village of Scotland, in the county of Berwick. Population 401.

HUMMELSTOWN, a township of the United States, in Dauphin county, Pennsylvania.

HUMMOCK ISLAND, a small island in the East-Indies. Long. 123. 50. S. Lat. 24. 15. N.

HUMP ISLE, an island in the Eastern seas, about 50 miles in circumference. Long. 135. 30. E. Lat. 2. 30. S.

HUMPHREY, a county of the United States, in West Tennessee. Population 1511.

HUNSBARCK, an extensive district of the Prussian states, on the Lower Rhine.

HUNFLEET, or HUNSLER, a township of England, liberty of Leeds. Pop. 8171.

HUNGARY, an extensive country in the south-east of Europe, forming, under the title of kingdom, a considerable part of the Austrian dominions. The name of Hungary has been used in very different significations, at different epochs. Hungary properly so called, is of a compact form, its length being about 370 miles, and its general breadth above 300. It is bounded W. by part of Germany, N. by Galicia, E. by Transylvania and Wallachia, S. by Turkey, Slavonia, and Croatia. It lies between 16. 5. and 27. 6. E. long. and 44. 13. and 49. 26. N. lat. and has a territorial extent of 84,500 square miles. Its population is stated, by the latest calculations, at 7,300,000. The chief towns are Pest, Buda, Debreczin, Presburg, Szegedin, Ketskemet, Theresienstadt, Erlau, Schennitz, Zombor, Neusatz, Miskoltz, Stuhl-Weissenburg, Nagy Koros, Jass-Bereng, Raab, Szathmar-Nemethy, Meva, and Cserniz. The Austrian division of Hungary is divided into four great circles: 1st, the circle to the north of the Danube; 2d, the circle to the south of the Danube; 3d, the circle to the north and west of the Theys; and lastly, the circle to the south and east of the Theys. These circles are divided into counties, of which there are 13 in the first circle, and 11 in each of the others. These four circles form the chief part of the Hungarian territory; but a long track along the southern frontier is distinct, and governed by a kind of military constitution, the inhabitants being exempted from taxes, on condition of being ready to take-up arms when called on by government. The smaller districts are Faznya, Great and Little Cumania, and the Heyduke towns, all in the interior of the country; and the 16 towns of Zypps, situated on the northern frontier.

The surface of Hungary varies extremely in the different provinces. The Carpathians, an immense mountain chain beginning near Presburg, divide it from Austria and Moravia. They rise to the height of 8000 feet, and form at the tops immense masses of granite, totally destitute of vegetation. Besides these, there are in the north and west several detached ranges of very considerable extent. Hungary contains, however, immense plains. The great rivers of Hungary, which have their rise out of the kingdom, are the Danube, the Szamos, the White Koresch, the March, the Marosch, and the Drave. The Carpathians pour down into the plain the Theys, the Waag, the Gran, the Poprad, and the Temea. All these fall into the Danube. There are several lakes, and a number of marshes, in Hungary. The climate of Hungary differs of course in proportion to the elevation of the ground. Among the mountains cold is predominant, and the snow lies on the ground for many months. In the south, the climate is in general mild; in the sandy districts, extremely hot; but on the banks of the rivers, and near the marshes, damp; and dampness, indeed, is a prevailing characteristic of the climate of the level part of Hungary. The mineral products of Hungary are important, consisting of gold, silver, copper, iron, and zinc. Gold is also occasionally found in the sand of rivers, and is washed by the gypsies. Precious stones of several kinds are discovered in the mountains. The extensive plains lying along the great rivers, possess all the richness of an alluvial soil. In the north, clay, stone, and gravel, predominate, and the ground produces but a scanty return, after considerable labour. In the south, too, there are many tracks unfit for the purposes of agriculture. The large heaths of Debreczin and Ketskemet are covered either with sand, or with the most scanty vegetation. Several other tracks are covered by moving sands; and these are said in some cases to be increasing. In the north, barley, common rye, and ikritza (a productive species of rye introduced from Moravia), are most frequently sown; in the south, wheat, maize, millet, and, in the marshes of the Bannat, rice. Oats are cultivated throughout the kingdom. Potatoes are raised by the Slavonians and Germans, and pulse by the followers of the Greek church. Hemp and flax are cultivated here; also tobacco and saffron. The climate is favourable to various kinds of fruit; and great quantities are produced, though its culture is very little attended to. Many parts of the country are favourable to pasture. Next to the cultivation of corn and the breeding of cattle, the making of wine forms the most extensive branch of rural industry. The Hungarian wines vary greatly, both in taste and strength. The well known Tokay is the best, and after it come the wines of Rust, Odenburg, Menes, St George, Buda, and Erlau. Hungary abounds in wood.

Hungary has long been celebrated for its pastures. The Hungarian oxen are large and well shaped, and generally of a milk or grey white colour, with lofty and spreading horns. Some of the sheep are very fine, particularly a peculiar breed, with forked horns. The horses of Hungary seldom reach a great height, and are incapable of drawing heavy loads; but they surpass almost all other horses in Europe in elegance of shape, as well as in rivalry and swiftness. Bacon being a favourite food, the number of hogs is great. Buffaloes also are found in certain parts of the country. Game of all kinds is plentiful; and bees are also abundant.

The administration of justice is entirely in the hands of the nobles, each of whom has his prison and his local magistrate. The constitution of Hungary is a compound of monarchy and aristocracy. The king, as the great executive magistrate, has very ample prerogatives. In religious matters, he has much more power than is common in Catholic countries, conferring archbishoprics, bishoprics, and high ecclesiastical offices, without any interference of the pope, though these dignitaries do not enter on their spiritual functions till their nomination be confirmed at Rome. The diet of Hungary is composed of four states or classes: 1st, the Catholic prelates; 2d, the magnates; 3d, the representatives of the inferior nobles; and 4th, the representatives of the royal free towns. The magnates and prelates form a chamber by themselves, and the representatives form another. The periodic assembling of the diet, as prescribed by law, is only once in five years; but its meetings are much more frequent. Hungary is by no means a manufacturing country; and, except for the preparation, in the first stage, of such products as minerals, tobacco, or potash, or such articles as essential oils from the resinous trees, or leather from the hide, there are very few establishments worth mentioning. Of the exports from Hungary, the chief is corn, which is sent either into the other Austrian states, or to the seaports on the Adriatic, sometimes to the amount of 200,000 quarters a year. Next to corn comes tobacco, both on account of its value, and the number of hands that it employs; and, in the third place, wine, particularly that of Tokay. Wool also is an important object of export; the others are wax, tallow, potash, alum, antimony, gall nuts, &c. Of manufactured articles, none are exported, except leather, linen, and iron. The imports are chiefly manufactured goods and colonial produce. The revenue produced by Hungary to Austria amounts to between three and four millions sterling. Its military force consists of three parts, the standing army, the occasional levy called insurrectio, and the permanent militia of the southern frontier. The Hungarians are divided into Catholics, Protestants, and members of the Greek church. Education in Hungary is in a very backward state, yet each parish, whether Catholic or Protestant, has its school. The towns have schools on a larger plan; also seminaries for forming teachers. There are also universities and lycæums in different places; all which establishments labour under one great defect, that the same teacher undertakes a number of branches, it being nothing uncommon for one master to give lectures on theology, physics, mathematics, languages, rural economy, philosophy, and natural history. Their salaries are also quite inadequate.

HUNGERFORD, a market town and parish of England, partly in Berks. and partly in Wilts. It is situated on the Kennet. The church is an ancient building; and near it is a free grammar school. Population of the parish 3024. 25 miles W. Reading.

HUNTERY BAY, a bay on the coast of Lake Ontario, in North America.

HUNZELER, the name of a fortress in the east of France, once of great strength, but demolished since 1816, on the left bank of the Rhine, in Alsace, not far from Basle; and constructed by Vauban in 1679. The village adjacent has only 900 inhabitants, but is well built. The barracks of the garrison were fitted to contain 4000 men.

HUNNABY, a town and parish of England, in Yorkshire. Population 1010.

HUNSWORTH, a township of England, in Yorkshire. Population 879.

HUSSEY, a river of Westphalia, which runs into the Weser.

HUSTON'S ISLAND, lying off the north-west extremity of Van Diemen's Land.

HUTCHINSON, a county of the United States, in New Jersey, on Delaware river, inclosed by the counties of Sussex, Monmouth, Somerset, and Cumberland, and by Delaware river. Pop. 21,653. Chief town Trenton.

HUTCHINSONS, a village of the United States, in York county, Pennsylvania, 25 miles W. York.—Also a town in St. Maurice county, Lower Canada.

HUTTING CHALK, a river of the United States, in Virginia, which runs into the Potomac, at the S. corner of Columbia district.

HUTTING CHALK TOWNSHIP, a village of the United States, in Dorchester county, Maryland, 18 miles N. E. Cambridge.

HUTTINGDON, a county of England, bordering on the Fenby district of Cambridge and Linn. Except on the south-west, where it is bounded by Bedfordshire, it is completely surrounded by the counties of Cambridge and Northampton, the former lying on the south-east and north-east, and the latter on the north and west. The boundaries are mostly artificial, and very irregular; but the figure on the whole approaches to a square. The greatest length from north to south is 30 miles, and the greatest breadth from east to west 23 miles. It contains about 210,000 acres, or 310 square miles, with 120 inhabitants to each. This district is divided into four hundreds, and 107 parishes; and comprises six market towns, that of Huntingdon being the capital. Huntingdon is almost entirely a farming county; the north and north-eastern parts consist of fens, which are a portion of the midland division of that extensive tract denominated the Bedford Level, which extends through the counties of Cambridge, Lincoln, &c.; and is subject to inundations from the rivers Ouse and Nen, the only two rivers. Towards the western and southeastern boundaries, however, the land rises considerably, leaving an intermediate valley for the waters of the Ouse, which traverses the southern angle of the county, and for various streams which descend into it from the sides of the hills. There are several large meres or lakes, of which Whittlesea, though much smaller than formerly, is the largest. The soil is mostly clay; and there are no minerals of importance in the county. The uplands were anciently united in one large forest, and peculiarly adapted to the pleasures of the chase, whence the name of the county is derived. The most celebrated article produced by the dairies of Huntingdonshire is the cheese termed Stilton, which is chiefly made at a village of that name. Population 46,771.

HUNTINGDON, the capital of Huntingdonshire, on the Ouse, which being here navigable for barges and small vessels, affords the inhabitants a considerable trade in coals, wood, &c. The brewing trade is also carried on to some extent; but the chief support of the town arises from its being the seat of the county business, and of the assizes. The principal public buildings are the church of St Mary's, the church of All Saints on the north, and the town-hall on the south of the market-place. There are also two meeting-houses, appropriated to Quakers and other dissenters. It is the native place of Oliver Cromwell, whose baptism is entered in the register here for the year 1599. It is a borough by prescription, and sends two members to parliament. Population 2806. 15 miles N. W. Cambridge.

HUNTINGDON, a county of Lower Canada, on the south side of the St Lawrence.

HUNTINGDON, a county of the United States, Pennsylvania, inclosed by the counties of Centre, Mifflin, Franklin, Bedford, and Cambria. Pop. 14,778.—2d, A post township and capital of Huntingdon county, Pennsylvania, on the north side of the Juniata. Pop. 1698.—3d, A township of Adams county, Pennsylvania. Pop. 1014.—4th, Of Luzerne county, Pennsylvania. Pop. 1114.

HUNTINGDON, EAST, NORTH, and SOUTH, three townships of the United States, in Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania. Population 1267—3345—1656.

HUNTINGTON, a post township of the United States, in Fairfield county, Connecticut, on the Housatonic, 17 miles W. New Haven. Pop. 2770.—2d, Of Suffolk county, on Long Island, New York, 40 miles E. New York. Pop. 4124.—3d, Of Ross county, Ohio, on the Scioto, 3 miles S. Chillicothe. Pop. in 1810, 1625.

HUNTER, a town and parish of Scotland, Aberdeenshire. The town is situated on the point of land formed by the confluence of the Bogle with the Deveron, over which is a handsome bridge. A manufacture of cloth is carried on here. Population 3349.

HUTTON, CREEK, a parish of England, in N. York. Population 661.

HUNTSVILLE, a post township of the United States, and capital of Madison county, Alabama. Houses 100.

HUNDSFORD, a township of England, in Cheshire. Population 1082.

HARDWAR, or HAREDWARA, a town of Hindostan, province of Delhi, on the Ganges, a great resort of Hindoo pilgrims. Long. 78. 2. E. Lat. 29. 57. N.

HUREL, a town of France, department of the Allier. Population 1700.

HURLEY, a township of the United States, in Ulster county, New York, 3 miles W. Kingston. Population 1333.

HURON, a county of the United States, in Ohio, on Lake Erie and Sandusky bay. Chief town Avery.

HURON, a lake of North America, and one of the largest in the world. It lies between 43. 10. and 47. 30. N. lat., and between 80. 45. and 84. 45. W. long.; and communicates with Lake Superior by the straits of St Mary on the north-west, with Lake Michigan on the west, and with Lake Erie on the south, by the river and lake of St Clair. Its greatest length from west to east is 218 statute miles; at the western extremity it is less than 100, and at about 100 miles from its eastern shore, barely 60 miles broad; but near the centre it suddenly bends away southward to the breadth of 180 miles; measuring the circumference through all its curvatures, will give a distance of little less than 812 miles.

HURON, a river of North America, which enters Lake Erie 7 miles S. Malden.—2d, A small river which falls into Lake St Clair.

HURRIAL, a town of Bengal, district of Rajesky. The East India company have here a factory for the purchase of silk and cotton cloths. Long. 89. 17. E. Lat. 24. 19. N.

HURST CASTLE, a fortress of England, in Hampshire, 2 miles W. Yarmouth. Here Charles I. remained for several days previous to his trial.

HURST PIERREPOINT, a parish of England, in Sussex. Population 1321.

HURWORTH, a township of England, in Durham. Population 811.

HUS, a town of Moldavia, on the Pruth, 70 miles S. W. Bender.

HUSUM, a seaport of Denmark, on the Aue, on the west coast of the duchy of Sleswick. The town contains a sugar-refinery and oil-mills; also dyeing and bleaching establishments. Ship-building is carried on to a considerable extent. Population 4000. 16 miles W. Sleswick.

HUTTANY, a town of Hindostan, province of Bejapores. It is a populous and extensive place, and carries on a considerable trade with Bombay and Surat. Long. 75. 20. E. Lat. 16. 59. N.

HUTTON, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 613.—2d, Craxswick, East Riding of Yorkshire. Population 217.—3d, Reuby, North Riding of Yorkshire.

Population 913.—4th. SHEAFF, North Riding of Yorkshire. Population 736.

HEU, an ancient town of the Netherlands, 16 miles E. Namar. Population 590.

HUYTON, a township of England, in Lancashire. Population 561.

HUTZEN, a village of the Netherlands, in North Holland. Population 1900.

HYACINTHE, ST., a village of Lower Canada, on the Yamaska river. Houses 90.

HYDE, a township of England, in Cheshire. Population 3365.

HYDE, a county of the United States, on the coast of North Carolina. Population 6029. Slaves 1852. Chief town German-town.

HYDERABAD, an extensive province of Hindostan, formerly called Telingam, and afterwards Golcondah, situated chiefly between the 16th and 19th degrees of northern latitude, and, strictly speaking, confined to the country between the rivers Godavery and Kistna. It is about 350 miles in extreme length, and about 300 in breadth.

HYDERABAD, the capital of the above mentioned province, on the Musa, about 6 miles from Golcondah. It is a populous city, of about seven miles in circumference, and is surrounded by a stone wall. It contains two palaces, and some handsome mosques. Long. 78. 52. E. Lat. 17. 17. N.

HYDERABAD, a city of Hindostan, and capital of the province of Sindh. The fortress stands on a rock, the foot of which is washed by a branch of the river Indus. There is a good bazar and several handsome mosques inside the fort. A considerable trade is carried on, by means of the river, with Multan, Tattah, and ports at the mouths of the Indus.

Population 15,000. Long. 68. 41. E. Lat. 25. 22. N.

HYDRA, or IDRA, a small island in the Grecian archipelago, whose present population originated in a colony of Greek refugees from the Morea. It is about 10 miles long and 2 broad. Its town, called also Hydra, is built on the acclivity of a number of pyramidal rocks, rising in an amphitheatre around its port. The houses are almost all built of stone. The port is in the form of a crescent, and though not large, is deep and commodious. The number of vessels belonging to Hydra amounts to 200. It trades not only to the ports of the Archipelago and Mediterranean, but to France, Spain, Italy, and other countries. Population 20,000. Long. 23. 30. E. Lat. 37. 20. N.

HYDRAB, a considerable town of the province of Tunis, on the immediate frontier of the Algerine territory, 150 miles S. W. Tunis.

HYTHE, a town of England, on the coast of Kent; one of the Cinque Ports. Its trade declined from the filling up of its harbour. It has since revived. Its principal buildings are ranged in one long street, which runs parallel with the sea. Several smaller streets, however, branch off at right angles from this chief thoroughfare. The church is a large and curious structure, in the form of a cross, with a tower at the west end. In a vault or crypt under the chancel is an immense quantity of human bones, ranged in a pile about 20 feet long and 7 high. These are traditionally said to be the remains of persons slain in a battle between the Britons and an invading army, in the fifth century. It has a court-hall, two hospitals, and a small theatre. Population 2161. 9 miles S. W. Dover.

I.

IRANAD, one of the Philippine islands. Lat. 11. 30. N. N.

IRAGUE, a town of South America, in New Granada, 70 miles W. S. W. Santa Fe. Population 400 housekeepers.

IBARRA, the capital of a province of the same name, in South America. The streets are wide, straight, and convenient. Population 12,000. 42 miles N. E. Quito.

IBARS, ST., a town of France. Pop. 3300.

IBBERVILLE, an outlet for the overflow waters of the Mississippi, during the seasons of inundation. It enters Lake Maurepas.

IBERI, or CARACARAS, a large lake of South America, in Paraguay.

IBERIA, NEW, a village of Louisiana, district of Attacapas, 200 miles W. New Orleans.

IBERIAN MOUNTAINS, the most extensive mountain chain of Spain, beginning to the west of the Ebro, and extending to the shores of the Mediterranean.

IBI, a town of Spain, in Valencia, 61 miles N. by W. Valencia. Population 3209.

IBROS, a town of France, department of the Upper Pyrenees. Population 1500.

IBRIM, a town of Nubia, in Africa, 120 miles S. Syene.

IBSTOCK, a parish of England, in Leicestershire. Population 1741.

ICA, the capital of a province of the same name, in Peru. It has several convents, and a college; also a glass foundry. 140 miles E. S. E. Lima.

ICELAND, a large island in the Atlantic ocean, belonging to Denmark, and situated from 63. to 67. of N. lat., and between 12. and 25. of W. long. Its distance from the colonised part of Greenland is 166 miles; from the uninhabited part only 95; from the Faroe isles 220; and from Drontheim in Norway 330. Its length from east to west is about 280 miles, its mean breadth from north to south 210. Its surface is in the highest degree rugged and mountainous: its soil is so ungrateful, that it produces no corn, and hardly any of the necessaries of life; while dreadful volcanic eruptions take place in many parts of the island. The population, accordingly, does not exceed 50,000. The number of villages does not exceed 6 or 7. The principal range of mountains runs from east to west; of these, 10 or 12 are covered with perpetual snow, and accumulations of ice, like the glaciers of Switzerland. The highest mountains in the island vary from 3000 to 6000 feet in height, and are called Skapta, Katoja, Bluerutte, Torsa, Oera, and Hekla. The last, though by no means the highest, has, from its numerous and dreadful eruptions, become the most celebrated mountain of Iceland. This country is watered by a number of rivers, which have, in general, a turbid appearance, and some of them a peculiar taste and smell. There are also a number of lakes. No part of the globe presents such a number of volcanic mountains, so many boiling springs, or such immense tracts of lava. Every hill almost is volcanic; and there are at least 30 with remarkable craters. The hot springs in Iceland are of all different temperatures, from the heat of common water, to a state of violent ebullition; and are sometimes impregnated with sulphur and other mineral substances. The most remarkable of these springs are called the Great and the New Geysers, a name derived from the Icelandic verb geysa, to "rage;" they throw into the air great jets of boiling water, accompanied with a noise like the firing of cannon, and a trembling of the adjacent ground. In the north-east part of the island, near My Vafn, are three hot springs, hardly inferior to the Geysers; also a sulphur mountain, on which vast beds of sulphur are covered with so thin a crust as to be very dangerous to the passenger. Near this mountain also, at the depth of 600 feet, is seen a row of large cauldrons of boiling mud, 12 in number. In another valley, there are no less than 16 boiling cauldrons. At the north-east extremity of the island, is the cavern of Sutzkellir, formed of lava, 40 feet in height, 50 in breadth, but no less than 4300 in length. The climate of Iceland is not more severe than might be expected from its high latitude. Fogs are frequent, but the air, on the whole, is reckoned wholesome. No corn of any kind is raised. No woods are to be seen, but here and there a few stunted birch trees. Grass, and a few hardy shrubs, are almost the only natural productions of the soil. Potatoes have been introduced, and cultivated with some success. Tolerably good pastures are found, which afford sustenance for sheep and black cattle. There are few goats or pigs. Reindeer have increased wonderfully; but they are almost all wild. Bears are sometimes brought to the island on the drifts of ice; except these, foxes are the only wild animals. Eagles, hawks, falcons, and all kinds of sea-fowl, are uncommonly abundant in Iceland. Large flocks of geans, as well as wild ducks, frequent the lakes and marshes. The of the eider duck form an important article of export. The fisheries are prosecuted with great activity; and at Niardvirk, on the east of the island, are no less than 300 boats. The exports are fish of all kinds, oil, tallow, butter, wool, worsted stockings, down, and feathers; also the skins of sheep, foxes, and other animals. The imports, though small in value, are various, consisting of corn, spirits, wine, beer, paper, soap, salt, iron, tar, coal, cordage, manufactured articles, and articles of colonial produce. The inhabitants of Iceland live almost entirely on fish or salted animal food, which, joined to their want of cleanliness, engenders cutaneous diseases under their worst forms: even the leprosy is not unfrequent. They are grave, and in general religious; and the means of education are by no means wanting. The principal school, held at a place called Bessastadt, near the west coast, has three masters, who teach the classics, theology, and the Danish language. Iceland is governed as a dependency of Denmark, and is divided into 4 provinces, and 19 shires. The chief authority is in the hands of a governor, who has a general superintendence, and under whom each of the four provinces is governed by a bailiff. In each shire is an officer who collects the taxes, holds courts of justice, and has nearly the same functions as the county sheriffs in Scotland. The religion of Iceland is the Lutheran. The church establishment consists of a bishop, 19 provosts, and the parish priests. In 1774, Iceland was taken possession of by a colony from Norway. In 1387, it was transferred with Norway to the crown of Denmark. About the year 1530, the reformed religion was introduced, and a translation of the Bible into Icelandic appeared in 1584. Since then, the history of this island exhibits nothing remarkable.

ICKHAM, a parish of England, in Kent. Population 321.

ICKHAMSHAM, a parish of England, in Sussex. Population 586.

ICKLETON, a parish of England, in Cambridge. Population 672.

ICKLINGHAM, a parish of England, in Suffolk. Population 424.

ICOLIBAIL. See Iona.

ICY CAPE, a cape on the west coast of N. America. Long. 193. 20. E. Lat. 70. 20. N.

IDAXHA A NOVA, a town of Portugal, 4 miles S. W. Idanha a Velha. Houses 500.

IDANHA A VELHA, a town of Portugal, province of Beira, 22 miles S. S. W. Alfayates.

IDZ, a parish of England, in Devonshire. Population 724.

IDLE, a parish of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 4606.

IDLE, a river of England, in Nottinghamshire, which falls into the Trent.

IDUNA, a town of the south of Germany, in Carstela, remarkable chiefly for its mines. The minerals are marble, jasper, firestone, sulphurated iron, with some indications of coal; but the most valuable and most abundant ant is mercury. The principal public buildings are an elegant church, an hospital, and a dispensary. There are a few silk-manufactures in the town. Population 3500. 32 miles N. N. E. Trieste. Long. 14. 2. 5. E. Lat. 46. 0. 44. N.

IM-TEIN, a town of Germany, with 2000 inhabitants, and manufactures of woollen. 10 miles N. Mentz.

IF, a small island of the south of France, 3 miles S. W. Marseilles.

IFREIN, a parish of England, in Sussex, 7 miles N. E. Horsham. Population 700.

IGLA, or IGIAWA, a small river of Moravia, which joins the Schwanza.

IGLAR, a fortified town of Moravia, near the Igla, and capital of a circle of the same name. It has a large provincial school, six churches, and two convents. Here are extensive manufactures of woollens. 62 miles S. E. Prague. Long. 15. 36. 15. E. Lat. 49. 23. 29. N.

IGLESIA, a town of Sardinia, with some trade in olives, honey, and cheese. Population 6000. Long. 9. 0. E. Lat. 39. 15. N.

IGLO, or NETBORI, a town of Hungary, county of Zips, on the Kunnut. It has a brisk trade in linen. Population 5360.

IGRANDE, a neat town of France, department of the Allier. Population 1700.

IGUALADA, a town of Spain, in Catalonia, on the Noya. Its principal manufactures are painted calicos and flannels. Population 12,000. 34 miles W. N. W. Barcelona.

IGUARAPU, a town of Brazil, province of Paraiha. It stands two leagues from the sea, on a creek. Population 500.

IGUASSU, a river of Brazil, which falls into the Parana, Lat. 23. 17. S.

IGUEBELLA, a town of Spain, 69 miles N. Murria. Population 2100.

IJUNA, GREAT, a river of Prussia, which joins the Frische Haf, 9 miles below Danzig.

ILANMORE, a small island in Clew Bay, on the west coast of Ireland—Also one of the smaller Hebrides, on the coast of Scotland.

ILANZ, or ILANIZ, a small town of Switzerland, 40 miles S. E. Lucerne.

ILCHWATER, or ILWICHTER, a borough and market town of England, in Somersetshire, on the Yeo or Ivel, over which is a stone bridge of two large arches. It is a place of great antiquity, and had once 16 churches; but is now a place of comparatively little consequence, and has scarcely any trade. Pop. 802. 43 miles N. N. E. Exeter.

ILDEFONSO, St., a town of Spain, in Segovia, on the mountain of Guadarrama. It has manufactures of steel and linen; also one of glass, at which are made the splendid and costly mirrors sold at Madrid. It is a place of recent date, and owes its origin to the erection of the magnificent royal palace of La Granja. Population 4300. 40 miles N. by W. Madrid.

ILDEFONSO, St., a town of Mexico, province of Oaxaca, 60 miles N. E. Oaxaca.

ILE, a river of England, in Somersetshire, which runs into the Parrett.

ILE, I., a town of France, department of the Tarn, on the Tarn. It has manufactures of woollen and ribbons. Pop. 5400.

ILE, I., a small river in the interior of France, which falls into the Dordogne, near Libourne.

ILE ADAM, I., a small town of France, on the Oise. Population 1400.

ILE D'IEU, I., a town of France, on an island of the same name, on the coast of Poitou. Population 2000.

ILE JOURDAIN, I., a town of France, on the Sarre, department of Gers. Pop. 1200.

ILFA, a river of Wales, in Pembrokeshire, which runs into the sea.

ILFORD, GREAT, a village of England, in Essex, on the Roding. It has an hospital and chapel still standing, which were founded in the reign of Stephen. Pop. 2972.

ILTRACOMPT, a market town and seaport of England, in Devonshire, at the mouth of the Bristol channel. It carries on a considerable trade, chiefly in ore, corn, &c. from Cornwall and Devonshire to Bristol, and employs a number of vessels in the herring fishery of the Bristol channel. It has an excellent harbour, and of late years has become a fashionable watering place. Population 2622. 10 miles N. Barnstaple.

ILVIA, a town of Portugal, province of Beira. Population 1200.

ILVIA, the capital of a province of the same name in Brazil, on the river of its name. Population 200 Portuguese families. 93 miles N. Porto Seguro.

ILVOS, a large river of Brazil, province of Ilheus, which unites at, and enters the sea. There is an island of the same name at its mouth, in Long. 36. 27. W. Lat. 14. 37. S.

ILVU, a lofty peak of the western Andes, seen from the city of Quito. Height 17,236 feet.

ILWICK, a parish of England, in Derbyshire. Population 3600.

ILZ, or ILZ, a river of France, in Alsace. It falls into the Rhine near Strasburg.

ILZ, a river of Germany, which falls into the Elbe; N. W. Paderborn.

ILVIA, a thriving place of Hungary, on the Waag. Population 1200.

ILVIA, a town of France, department of the Lacaen Pyrenees, on the Tel. Pop. 2000.

ILVIA, a river of France, department of the Dordogne. It falls into the Dordogne. Another which joins the same near Rennes.

ILVIA, a department in the north-west of France, including the north-east part of Brittany, and bounded partly by the English channel, but more by the frontier line of other departments of Brittany. Its superficial extent is about 2750 square miles; its population is very considerable, amounting to 500,000. The surface is in general level, or intersected by hills of little elevation. It is watered by the rivers Ille, Vilaine, May, and Seiche.

ILVIA, a large river of Suabia, which rises in the Tyrol, and joins the Danube near Ulm.

ILLERTIMEX, a town of Bavaria, on the Iller, 12 miles S. Ulm. Population 1100.

ILLERCA, a town of Spain, 20 miles S. S. W. Madrid. It has several remarkable public buildings. Population 5700.

ILLERES, a town of France, department of the Eure and Loir. Population 2700.

ILLERSBERG, a village of Wirttemberg, 17 miles N. W. Stuttgart. Population 1100.

ILLINOIS, one of the United States, bounded N. by the North-West Territory, E. by Indiana, S. by Kentucky, W. by Missouri. It extends from Long. 87. 17. to 91. 50. W. and from Lat. 37. to 42. 30. N. Extent about 50,000 square miles, or 32,000,000 acres. The state is bordered on three sides by the great rivers Wabash, Ohio, and Mississippi; its north-east corner touches upon Lake Michigan, and it is intersected by the Illinois and Kaskaskia, which run from N. E. to S. W. into the Mississippi. The settlements at present are principally confined to the banks of the Mississippi, the Kaskaskia and its branches, and there are a few on the Wabash and the Ohio. The northern and central parts of the state have been very imperfectly explored. In 1817, there were in Illinois upwards of 16,000,000 acres of land belonging to the United States, obtained by purchase from the Indians. The portion of these lands, lying between the Illinois and the Mississippi, has been assigned by Congress as bounty lands to the soldiers who enlisted during the late war. The whole amount surveyed is about 5,530,000 acres, equal to 3,640 square miles, and is divided into 240 townships. This land is represented to be of an excellent quality. The greater part of the state is either flat or rolling. Extensive prairies constitute two-thirds of its surface. The soil may be divided into six classes:— 1. Bottoms, bearing a heavy growth of timber. This land is of the first quality, and is found on all the principal rivers. It varies in width from 50 rods to 2 miles, and is of inexhaustible fertility. 2. Newly formed land found at the mouths of rivers. There are many thousand acres of this land at the mouth of the Wabash, and at the confluence of the Ohio with the Mississippi. It is annually inundated, and is very unhealthy. 3. Dry prairies, approaching the rivers, and bordering on the bottom land, but elevated from 30 to 100 feet. The prairies of the Illinois river are the most extensive of any east of the Mississippi, and have alone been estimated at 1,200,000 acres. This soil is not inferior to the first rate river bottoms. 4. Wet prairie, found remote from rivers, or at their sources. The soil is generally cold and barren, abounding with swamps and ponds, and covered with a tall coarse grass. 5. Timbered land, moderately hilly, well watered, and of a rich soil. 6. Hills, of a sterile soil, and destitute of timber, or covered with stunted oaks and pines. Corn is at present the staple production. Wheat does well, except on the bottoms, where the soil is too rich.

Tobacco grows to great perfection. Flax, hemp, oats, Irish and sweet potatoes, do as well as in Kentucky. Among the minerals are iron, coal, and copper. Salt springs also are numerous. Illinois was admitted into the union in 1818. The constitution provides that no more slaves shall be introduced into the state. The seat of government, for the present, is at Kaskaskia. A canal has been projected to unite the head waters of the Illinois with Lake Michigan. The Illinois and the Chicago, a southern river of Lake Michigan, are so connected, that in freshets boats pass readily from one to the other. For the improvement of this navigation, the government of the United States have appropriated 100,000 acres of land. Population in 1810, 12,203; in 1818, 35,220; in 1820, 50,335.

ILLINOIS, a river of the United States, formed by the union of the Kankakee and the Desplaines, in the north-west part of Indiana, and traversing the state of Illinois in a south-west direction, nearly 400 miles, joins the Mississippi, in Lat. 32. 18. N. 18 miles above the mouth of the Missouri, 1160 above New Orleans, 1400 from Buffalo, New York, on Lake Erie. The river is 400 yards wide at its mouth.

ILLIRICH, a town of France, in Alsace, on the Ill. Population 1600.

ILLOGAN, a parish of England, in Cornwall. Population 5170.

ILLOK, an ancient town on the southern frontier of the Austrian empire, on the Danube, in the county called Syrmia. 60 miles W. N. W. Belgrade. Long. 18. 3. E. Lat. 45. 23. N.

ILLYRIA, a country in the south of Europe, lying along the west shore of the Adriatic, the extent of which has varied very considerably in different ages. Austrian Illyria is now the only country called Illyria in official papers, and consists of Carinthia, Carniola, the vicinity of Trieste, Austrian Friuli, the canton of Cividad, Venetian Istria, a part of Croatia, and several islands in the gulf of Quarnero. It lies between 13. 14. and 16. 0. of E. longitude, and 44. 30. and 46. 25. of N. latitude, and is bounded by Salzburg, Styria, Croatia, the Adriatic, the government of Venice, and the Tyrol. It is called the kingdom of Illyria, and consists of the two governments of Trieste and Ljubljana, the former maritime, the latter inland. These are subdivided into the circles of Trieste, Karstadt, Goritz, Fiume, Laibach, Neustadt, Adelsberg, Klagenfurt, and Villach. The chief towns are those that give name to the circles. The country is mountainous, being intersected by the Carinthian and Julian Alps, interspersed with beautiful and fertile valleys. The principal rivers are the Save, the Drave, the Laibach, and the Lonca. The country produces vines and the finer fruits of the south of Europe; also flax. The forests supply immense quantities of timber; silk is also cultivated. The mineral kingdom is extremely rich. Copper and iron mines abundant; while at Lissa quicksilver and cinabar are produced in large quantities. The other mineral products are calcamine, vitriol, alum, salpêtre, and pit coal: on the coast, sea-salt is made to a large extent. The pastures are in general good. The manufactures consist of linen, woollen, and silk; straw-plaiting, and, in particular situations, of hardware. This country passed under the dominion of Bonaparte after the campaign of 1800. The operations of the Austrians and British for its recovery took place towards the close of 1813. Population 1,220,977.

ILLYRIAN ISLANDS.—Under this name it is common to comprise the islands in the Adriatic, lying along the coast of Dalmatia. They are numerous: the principal are Veglia, Cherso, Arbe, Pago, Isola, Giussa, Brazza, Lesina, Lissa, Curzola, Sabioncello, Melada, and Lagosta. They all belong to the house of Austria.

ILME, a small river of Germany, in Saxony, which falls into the Saale at Sulza.

ILME, a town of Germany, 17 miles S. E. Erfurt. Population 1500.

ILME, a small river of Bavaria, which rises near Aicha, and falls into the Danube.

ILME, a small river of Hanover, which falls into the Leine.

ILMEN, a large lake of European Russia, 48 miles long, and from 12 to 18 wide. The town of Novgorod stands near its banks.

ILMENAU, a town of Germany, in Saxo-Weimar, on the Ilme. Population 2000.

ILMINGTON, a parish of England, in Warwickshire. Population 722.

ILMINGTON, a market town of England, in Somersetshire, on the Ille, and at the crossing of the roads from London to Taunton, and from Bristol to Honiton and Exeter. The clothing trade, for which this place was noted, has greatly declined. The church is a fine Gothic building. Population 2150. 32 miles N. N. E. Exeter.

ILMSTADT, a town of Germany, in Thuringia. Population 1500.

ILVA, a river of European Russia, which falls into the Don at Fort Donskaya.

ILZ, or ILZ, a river of Germany, which runs into the Danube at Ilzstadt.

ILZEHAUSEN, a town of Saxony, on the Ilse. Population 1600.

ILZELD, a walled town of Germany, in Wittenberg. Population 1500.

ILWORTH, a parish of England, in Devonshire. Population 1122.

ILWY, EAST, a township and parish of England, in Berkshire. Population 676.

ILZT, or YLTZT, a town of the Netherlands, in Friesland, 68 miles N. E. Amsterdam.

ILZTADT, a small town of Bavaria, at the confluence of the Danube and the Ill.

ILWY, or ILMST, a town of the Tyrol, near the Inn. Population 2300.

IMBETTA, a country of Asia, to the north of Persia. It stretches along the southern coast of Caucasus, having the Black sea on the west, and Georgia on the east, and lies between the 43d and 44th degrees of north latitude.

IMMENHAUSEN, a town of Germany, 37 miles N. Camel. Population 1230.

IMMENSTADT, a town of Bavaria, 13 miles S. by W. Kempten. Population 1000.

IMMENTHAL, St. or EMMENTHAL, a town of the Swiss canton of Berne. Population 260.

INOLA, a fortified town of Italy, in the Ecclesiastical state, delegation of Ravenna, on a small island formed by the Santerno. It is defended by a strong castle, and has a hospital and a theatre. Its streets are neat, and contain several churches and other buildings worth the attention of the traveller. Population 8400. 18 miles S. E. Bologna.

INFERNAL, a city of Chili, now a miserable village, on the Cauten, 327 mile. S. S. E. Santiago.

INCA, a town of the island of Majorca, 17 miles E. N. E. Palma. Population 900.

INCE, a township of England, in Lancashire, 1½ mile E. Wigan. Population 1362.

INCE BLINDLE, a hamlet of England, 8 miles N. W. Liverpool. Population 472.

INCAJADA DE BARRAGAN, a town of South America, 21 miles W. Buenos Ayres.

INCH, an island of Ireland, in the county of Donegal, 6 miles N. W. Londonderry.

INCH, a parish of Scotland, in the county of Wigton. Population 2380.

INCH, a parish and village of Scotland, county of Aberdeen. Population 1050.

INCH-COLA, a small island in the frith of Forth, 2 miles from Aberhour.

INCH-GARVIE, a small island of Scotland, in the frith of Forth, near Queensferry.

INCH-KIRRIE, a small rocky island in the frith of Forth, about half way betwixt Leith and Kirkcaldy, now occupied as a pasture ground. A light-house, with a revolving light, has been erected on it, for the security of vessels navigating the Forth.

INCH-KENNETH, one of the smaller Hebrides, lying between the islands of Mull and Icolmkill.

INCH-MANNOCH, a beautiful island of Scotland, in the frith of Clyde, about a mile long.

INCHTERRA, a parish and village of Scotland, in Perthshire. The village is situated between Perth and Dundee. Pop. 985.

INCHVRA, a village of Scotland, in Perthshire, on the Tay, 6 miles below Perth.

INCISA, a town of Italy, in Piedmont, on the Belbo. Population 2000.

INDERHAY, a small island at the mouth of the Persian Gulf. Lat. 26. 40. N.

INDIA, a corruption of Indu, the name given to that region of Asia lying to the south of Tartary, and between Persia and China, with the islands dependent thereon. Besides Hindostan, it contains the Birman empire, the kingdoms of Siam, Cochin-China, Tonquin, Tibet, Japan, Ceylon, and a number of small principalities; all of which will be described under their respective heads.

INDIAN RIVER, a small river of North America, which falls into the Ohio.

INDIAN CREEK, a small stream which enters the Ohio.—Another which runs into the Chesapeake.

INDIAN ISLAND, a small island near the coast of North Carolina, at the mouth of Pamlico Sound. Long. 70. 50. W. Lat. 35. 23. N.

INDIAN OLD TOWN, an island and township of the United States, in Penobscot county, Maine, in Penobscot river, just above the Great Falls. Here are about 100 families of Indians, the remains of the Penobscot tribe, with a Roman Catholic church and priest.

INDIAN RIVER, a river of the United States, on the east coast of Florida, flows south, and enters the sea in Long. 80. 10. W. Lat. 7. 30. N.—2d, In Sussex county, Delaware. Its mouth is in Lat. 38. 10. N. 11 miles S. Cape Henlopen.—3d, A small arm of the sea, in Washington county, Maine, setting up between Addison and Jonesborough.—4th, A river in New Hampshire, one of the sources of Connecticut river. It unites with Leach river in Lat. 45. N. after a course of about 30 miles.—5th, In New York, which rises in Lewis county, and after a course of 100 miles, joins the Oswegatchie, 7 miles above its entrance into the river St Lawrence.

INDIAN TOWN, a village of the United States, in Dorchester county, Maryland, on the south side of the Choptank, 3 miles N. W. New Market.—2d, Of Currituck county, North Carolina, 31 miles from Norfolk, Virginia, 60 E. N. E. Edenton.

INDIANS, one of the United States, bounded N. by Michigan Territory, E. by Ohio, S. by Kentucky, and W. by Illinois. It lies between Lat. 37. 15. and 41. 50. N. and between Long. 84. 12. and 87. 49. W. Its greatest length from N. to S. is 207 miles, and its breadth is 155. Extent 33,000 square miles. Population in 1800, 2500; in 1810, 24,520; in 1815, 68,784, exclusive of Indians. The Ohio forms the southern boundary of the state. Lake Michigan touches it upon the north. The northern part of the state is watered by the Illinois, and the rivers which flow into Lake Michigan; but the Wabash is the great river of Indiana. It receives the waters from two-thirds of its surface. White river, the principal tributary of the Wabash, is formed by two branches, which spread out widely through the whole southern half of the state. White water river in the S. E. is a tributary of the Miami. The white population in 1815 was confined to the southern part of the state, and almost entirely to the counties bordering directly on the Wabash, the Ohio, and the White water. The northern half is occupied by Indians, and has been very imperfectly explored. A ridge of hills commences near the mouth of the Wabash, and runs in a north-east direction nearly parallel with the Ohio, at no great distance, producing a broken and uneven country. North of these hills lie the flat woods, 70 miles wide. Running on all the principal streams, except the Ohio, there are strips of better and prairie land, of a rich soil, usually from 3 to 6 miles in width. The prairies on the Wabash are the finest land in the state. Remote from the rivers the country is barren, and the soil light. Between the Wabash and Lake Michigan, the land is mostly level, and interspersed with woodlands, prairies, lakes, and swamps. The principal productions are wheat, Indian corn, oats, rye, flax, hemp, potatoes, and tobacco. In the vicinity of Vevay, the vine is cultivated with success. On the banks of the Wabash, in the upper part of its course, the best kind of coal is found in inexhaustible quantities; and near the sources of several of the navigable rivers, there are salt springs, from which salt in abundance may be procured. Near Corydon is a large cave, abounding with Epsom salts and saltpetre. Corydon is the seat of government. Vincennes is the largest town.

INDIANS, the name by which the various tribes of aborigines scattered over the extensive continent of America are distinguished. They are divided into numerous nations, in a state more or less savage, and with all the peculiar characters which distinguish savage life. A description of many of these tribes will be found under their respective appellations. They generally decline as the civilized population advances into the country; though reservations of land are always made by the government of the United States, for their support.

ISLANDS EAST. Under this head is comprehended all that vast track of country which is situated to the south of Tartary, between Persia and China, as well as the islands in the Eastern sea, such as Borneo, Sumatra, Ceylon, Java, the Maldives, Celebes, Moluccas, Philippines, &c.; a full account of which will be given under their different appellations.

ISLANDS WEST. Under this denomination is comprehended that immense chain of islands which extend in a curve from the Florida shore on the northern peninsula, to the gulf of Venezuela on the southern. This name was given to them by Columbus, under the notion that they formed part of the Indian continent, to which it was the object of his first voyage to find a western passage; and the name has still been retained, though the mistake has been discovered. The following is a list of the principal of these islands:—Curacao, Trinidad, Tobago, Grenada, St Vincent, Barbadoes, Martinico, Dominica, Mary Galante, Guadeloupe, Antigua, Barbuda, St Christopher, St Eustatius, St Bartholomew, St Martin, Anguilla, St Thomas, Porto-Rico, St Domingo, Jamaica, Cuba, and the Bahamas, which are frequently included under the general appellation of West Indies. A separate and full description of all these islands will be found under their respective denominations. In most of these islands European colonies have been established, whose industry is directed to the cultivation of their peculiar produce, which is exported to Europe in exchange for manufactured goods. It does not appear that their population is increasing.

LENSKAYA, a river of Asiatic Russia, to the eastward of the Lena. It falls into the Frozen ocean, Long. 144. E. Lat. 73. N.

INDORE, a city of Hindostan, province of Malwah, and capital of the Mahratta chief Malhar Row Holkar. The city is extensive, but contains few good houses. Long. 76. 10. E. Lat. 22. 51. N.

INDUS RIVER is said to have its source in a range of the mountains of Tartary, lying between the 38th and 39th degrees of N. lat. After passing the city of Lhidack, in Thibet, it takes a south-westerly course, and forcing its way through the mountainous land the Hindoo Koh, enters Hindostan about the 35th degree of northern latitude. Its course is generally to the south. In lat. 29. 20. it is joined by the five rivers of the Punjab, united into one stream, called the Punjab; whence declining to the south-east, it enters the province of Sindh, between the 25th and 26th degrees of latitude. It is again divided by a large island into two considerable branches, the principal or western branch, after passing the city of Tatta, divides into several streams, which form a Delta similar to that of the Nile or Ganges; they are, however, so shallow, as to be only navigable by boats; and although the tide enters them with great violence, it does not run up above 70 miles.

INDRAPURA, a district on the south-west coast of the island of Sumatra. Its chief town is of the same name.

INDRAPOUR, a river of the above district, which descends from the mountains of Korinchi, and is considered the largest river of the west coast of Sumatra.

INDRE, a river of France, which falls into the Loire between Saumur and Tours.

INDRE, one of the smaller departments of France, bounded by the departments of the Loir and Cher, the Creuse, the Upper Vienne, the Vienne, and the Indre and Loire. Its superficial extent is about 2360 square miles; its population 205,000. The principal rivers are the Indre, the Creuse, the Bonzonne, and the Aisne.

INDRE AND LOIRE, another department of France. It comprises almost the whole of the Touraine, and is bounded by the departments of the Loir and Cher, the Indre, the Vienne, and the Maine. The principal rivers are the Loire, the Vienne, the Cher, and the Indre. Population 275,000.

INRIENTES, VILLA NI EVA DE LOS, a town of Spain, in New Castile. Population 6000.

INCHESTONE, a town of England, in Essex. Population 747.

INDELMUNSTER, a town of West Flanders, 6 miles N. Courtray. Population of the parish, 4978.

INDEWON, a village of England, West Riding of Yorkshire. Population 1502.

INDOLSTADT, a town and fortress of Bavaria, on the Danube, 30 miles S. W. Regensburg. Population 5000.

INDORVILLE, a town of France, department of the Lower Seine. Pop. 4206.

INDORNI, a town of France, on the Loire. Population 1000.

INERL, a town of France, department of the Loire. Population 2900.

INERL. See Peterburg, Government of.

INIS BORRIN, two islands near the west coast of Ireland.—There are numerous small islands, on the coast both of Scotland and Ireland, beginning with Ine.

INISBOUGH, a town of Ireland, in Kilkenny, 13 miles S. W. Kilkenny.

INISOW, a parish of England, in Worcester. Population 1667.

INNA, a very large river in the south of Germany, which rises in the Swiss canton of the Grisons, where it forms the romantic vallies called the Upper and Lower Engadine. It traverses the Tyrol from west to east, and separating Austria and Bavaria, falls into the Danube at Passau.

INSTRATH, a village and parish of Scotland, in Renfrewshire. The village is pleasantly situated near the mouth of the Leithen. Population 2344.

INVERCT, a village of Scotland, in the county of Wigton, with a harbour.

INVERCT, a parish of Scotland, in the county of Haddington. Population 924.

INNSBRUCK, (i. e. Bridge of the Inn), the capital of the Tyrol, at the confluence of the Sill and the Inn, with a beautiful bridge over the latter river. There are several public edifices, more remarkable, however, for size than elegance, such as the government-house, the town-house, the opera, the arsenal, and the barracks. The only buildings of taste are the small chapel erected by the empress Maria Theresa, to the memory of her husband, and the great hall in the palace, which was the favourite residence of the princes of Tyrol. Here is a lyceum or academy, a medical school, and another establishment called the general seminary for Tyrol. The only manufactures worth noticing is a large cotton work. Population 19,000. 62 miles S. Munich. Long. 11. 23. 45. E. Lat. 47. 14. 30. N.

INNTAL, the valley, in the Alps through which flows the Inn. See Engadine.

INNSBRUCK, (i. e. the Quarter of the Inn), a large district or circle of Upper Austria, containing the territory lying between the Danube, the Inn, and the Salza.

INNOVA, a town of European Russia, 278 miles E. S. E. Moscow. Population 3000.

INSKE, a township of England, in Lancashire, 5 miles from Kirkham. Pop. 730.

INSERBERG, a town of East Prussia, on the Angerap. Population 5300. 50 miles E. Königsberg.

ISTRNA, a town of Piedmont, on the Lago Maggiore. Population 4500.

IVLER, a village of Scotland, Perthshire, at the confluence of the Tays with the Tay.

IVLEARY, a royal burgh of Scotland, and the chief town of the county of Argyll, in a parish of the same name. It is situated on a small bay, 8 miles from the head of Loch Fyne. The town, though small, is neat and handsome. It has a church, and a new jail, which contains also a range of handsome court and county rooms. It was erected into a royal burgh by a charter from Charles I. and joins with Ayr, Irvine, Rathesay, and Campbellton, in sending a member to parliament. The chief support of the place is the herring fishery, which appears to have flourished from time immemorial. Population, including the parish, 1137.

INVERARIES, a parish of Scotland, county of Forfar. Population 946.

INVERARIES, a parish of Scotland, in Elginshire and Banffshire. Population 2481.

INVERARIGGAIN, a parish of Scotland, county of Argyll. Population 651.

INVERARISK, a parish of Scotland, county of Mid-Lothian. Population 7436.

INVERGORDON, a village of Scotland, county of Ross, on the firth of Cromarty.

INVERGOWRIE, a village of Scotland, on the Tay, 2 miles W. Dundee.

INVERHAILION, a parish of Scotland, county of Angus. Population 1745.

INVERKEITHING, a royal burgh and seaport of Scotland, county of Fife, on the north coast of the firth of Forth. It is of great antiquity, and joins with Dundee, Culross, Queensberry, and Stirling, in sending a member to parliament. The harbour is commodious. Pop. of the parish 2512.

INVERKEITHING, a parish of Scotland, county of Banff. Population 577.

INVERKEITHING, a river of Scotland, in Sutherlandshire, which runs into Loch Inver.

INVERLOCHY, an ancient town of Scotland, in Inverness-shire, now destroyed. Its ancient castle has outlived all history, and all tradition of its owner, builder, and age.

INVERNESS-SHIRE, one of the largest counties in Scotland, bounded N. by Ross-shire and part of the Moray firth; E. by the counties of Nairn, Moray, and Aberdeen; S. by those of Perth and Argyll; and W. by the Atlantic ocean. It is about 94 miles in length from east to west, and about 50 miles at its greatest breadth. It has, besides, a small insulated district between the counties of Banff and Moray, annexed to it; also several of the Hebrides are politically attached to the county. These are Harris, North and South Uist, Benbecula, Skye, Barra, Eigg, and the smaller islets which are situated on the coast. The surface of this county is in general extremely rugged and uneven, consisting of vast ranges of mountains, separated from each other by narrow and deep valleys. These mountains stretch across the whole country, from one end of the island to another, and lie parallel to every valley, rising like immense walls on both sides, while the intersected country sinks down between them, with a lake, or rapid stream, at the foot of the mountains, and the sea, flowing in the centre. The Great Glaciation Glen, which runs in a straight line nearly north and south-west, divides the county into two almost equal parts. The northern extremity of this glen opens by the river Ness into the Moray firth, and following it south-westwards from this point, we find it occupied by Lochs Ness, Oich, and Lochy, whence it extends into the Atlantic ocean by the long inlet of the sea called Loch Linnhe. There are eight other inferior straths or valleys, which are subordinate to this great valley, and join it from different directions. In the northern part of the county is found the great glen of Strath Glass, with its tributaries, running nearly north-east, and opening into the firth of Beaully. To the south of the town of Inverness there are other straths bordered by mountains; and farther south, in the district of Badenoch, we find the great strath of the Spey. In this county are the lofty mountain of Ben Nevis, 4370 feet high; Meallaurvounie, 3060 feet high; Cairngorm and Brae Riach, the one 4244, and the other 4301 feet high. The principal rivers of Inverness-shire are the Ness, the Lochy, the Beaully, and the Spey; those of inferior note are the Findhorn, the Nairn, and the Nevis, all of which are fed by numerous smaller streams. Of these may be mentioned the small river Foyers, noted for its tremendous cataract. Mineral springs are rare; but sulphurous and chalybeate springs are found in various situations. The western shore is broken by numerous creeks, bays, and arms of the sea. On the confines of the county there are extensive tracts of wood, which are evidently the remains of much larger forests. Huge trunks and stocks of trees are everywhere found in the extensive moors. The climate is various. On the west coast the rains are heavy, and of long continuance; while on the east coast the climate is much drier. The soil is very various. Moor, moor, and heathy ground, in the opinion of some intelligent persons, cover two-thirds of the shire of Inverness. One-fourth part only is reckoned, according to the best accounts, to be arable land; and it is supposed that there are 26 of the remaining parts covered with heath, incumbent on moss, or on a till bottom. The clayey soil forms but a small part of the land. The haugh or alluvial soil along the banks of the rivers, or the shores of the lakes, is more frequently met with, and is of the richest quality. The principal employment of the farmer is the management of black cattle and sheep, especially the former; and numerous herds of goats are also to be found in every district. The mountains and forests are inhabited by herds of red and roe deer; the alpine and common hare, and other game, are also abundant. Wild geese are numerous, large, and very fierce; but are also hangers, and the different varieties of the weasel tribe; and the lakes and rivers abound with others. Most of the species of eagles, hawks, and owls, of different sorts, are to be found in this county. Black game, grouse, and ptarmigan, are numerous; also partridges, woodcocks, and snipes. Pheasants have been lately introduced, and are beginning to multiply. The rivers abound with salmon; and in the lochs the char is found in great perfection. Limestone is found in every district of the county, in many places approaching to the nature of marble. Inverness-shire contains only one royal burgh, viz. Inverness, and several small villages. The Gaelic is the prevailing language; but in the neighbourhood of Inverness the English language is spoken. In order to curb the power of the Highland chieftains, in 1715 and 1745, Fort George, Fort Augustus, and Fort William, were constructed. The military roads in this county, made by the soldiers under General Wade, never fail to excite the astonishment and gratitude of travellers. By the spirited exertions of the gentlemen of this populous county, the commerce and industry of the inhabitants have of late been greatly increased; and to facilitate the communication with the most remote parts, roads and bridges are now forming, under the direction of government, through every district of this extensive shire. The valued rent, as stated in the county books, is £.3180. 9s. Scots; real land rent £.70,530 sterling. Population 90,157.

INVERNESS, a royal burgh of Scotland, and chief town of the above county, situated on both sides of the river Ness, at its entrance into the Moray frith. Inverness has long been considered as the metropolis of the Highlands. It is a large and handsome place, adorned with many elegant houses and buildings. The older and larger part of the town occupies the eastern bank of the river; and it is connected with the western division of the town by an inconvenient antique bridge of seven arches, built in the year 1686, on which a toll is levied. The eastern part of the town bears an appearance of antiquity. The western part is of more modern erection, and is not so extensive. There are two parish churches; in the one English is preached, and in the other Gaelic; in the chapel of ease, English and Gaelic alternately. There are also Episcopalian and Methodist chapels. Nearly in the centre of the town stands the court-house, connected with the tolbooth, a handsome modern building, with a fine tower, terminated by a very elegant spire, which received considerable injury from the earthquake of 1816. The other public buildings are the town-hall and the assembly-rooms; the latter was originally of a greater height; but the roof and upper story having been injured in 1800 by a fatal explosion of gunpowder, both were taken down, and the building finished in its present form: the royal infirmary, the royal academy, and a neat little theatre. Some part of the ramparts of the ancient castle of Inverness still remain. At the entrance of the river into the sea stand the ruins of a fort, erected by Cromwell from an old monastery of Dominicans, founded in the 13th century. Inverness being the great thoroughfare to the northern counties, is greatly resorted to in the summer season by strangers; and the inns and hotels afford excellent accommodation. The shops are also numerous and handsome; and the whole town wears an aspect of cheerfulness and neatness, very different from its appearance in former times, when in the important article of cleanliness it was very deficient. Inverness is a burgh of great antiquity. The first burgh charter was granted to the town by Malcolm Canmore in the year 1067, which has been renewed by successive sovereigns, until the reign of James VI. when the constitution or set of the burgh was finally settled. From the time of the revolution to about the year 1715, Inverness was in a declining state; but for the last 40 years, it has been in a rapid state of improvement. It is now almost wholly rebuilt, and its limits are yearly extending on every side. The principal manufactures are of hemp and flax. Tartan cloth for the Highland markets is manufactured in considerable quantities. There are also several tan-works and candle-works, and a tobacco manufactory. An iron foundry has also been established for some years. There are three printing-offices, and two newspapers published in Inverness. The harbour is safe and commodious. Inverness, in conjunction with Fortrose, Nairn, and Forres, sends a member to parliament. Population 12,264. 38 miles W. Elgin, 118 W. N. W. Aberdeen, and 156 N. N. W. Edinburgh. Long. 4. 5. W. Lat. 57. 30. 5. N.

INVERSID, a fort of Scotland, in the county of Stirling, 13 miles N. Dumblane.

INVERMUN, a small village of Scotland, in Aberdeenshire, on the Ugie.

INVERMURRAY, a parish of Scotland, county of Aberdeen. Population 1129.

INVERURAY, an ancient royal burgh in the county of Aberdeen, seated on the point of land formed by the confluence of the Don and Ury, over each of which bridges have been built. It joins with Kintore, Cullen, Banff, and Elgin, in sending a member to parliament. Population of the parish 1129. 16 miles W. Aberdeen.

INWARDLEIGH, a parish of England, in Devonshire. Population 540.

IONA, ICOLMILL, or I-COLUMA-KILL, one of the western islands of Scotland, in the Atlantic ocean, separated from the western point of Mull by a narrow channel, called the Sound of I. The island is about 2½ miles in length, and on an average it is 1 mile broad, containing an area of 1200 acres. Icolmkill is chiefly interesting to the antiquarian, for the ruins of its ancient religious edifices. These were established, about the year 565, by St. Columba, who left Ireland; his native country, with the intention of preaching Christianity to the Picts. The remains of these edifices, almost all constructed of fine granite, together with crosses and sepulchral monuments, are the antiquities now extant. The exact date of none of the former is known, but the church is said to have been built by Queen Margaret towards the latter end of the 11th century. It is built in the form of a cross, 164 feet long without, and 34 broad: the body of the church is 60 feet in length, and the two sides of the transept or cross are each 30 feet long and 18 broad within the walls. The east window is a beautiful specimen of Gothic workmanship. In the middle of the cathedral rises a tower 22 feet square, and between 70 and 80 high, supported by four arches, and ornamented with 14 pinnacles. Here are the tombs of 48 Scottish kings, 4 kings of Ireland, 8 Norwegian monarchs, and 1 king of France. South from the cathedral and St. Oran's chapel are the ruins of the nunnery, the church of which is pretty entire; and here also are several monuments. 36 miles from the mainland.

IONIAN ISLANDS, sometimes called the Republic of the Seven Islands, a small and recently constituted republic in the south-east of Europe, consisting of seven principal islands, and a number of islets, extending along the south-west coast of Greece, from 36. to 40. N. lat., and from 19. 30. to 23. 10. E. long. The seven principal islands are Corfu, Cephalonia, Zante, Santa Maura, Ithaca or Thinki, Cerigo, and Paxos. Corfu is the most northerly, and lies opposite to Albania; Paxos, Santa Maura, Ithaca, Cephalonia, and Zante, follow each other in succession to the southward, lying along the coasts of Albania and the ancient Elis; but Cerigo is detached, being 150 miles to the south-east of Zante, and opposite to the coast of the ancient Laconia. The population, by a return made in 1807, amounts to 206,000. Almost all these islands are of an irregular form, and much indented by the sea. Their surface is for the most part uneven, containing a number of barren rocks and hills, interspersed, however, with fertile plains and valleys. The productions are corn, vines, olives, currants, cotton, honey, wax, &c. Salt seems to be the most extensive manufacture, and next to it olive oil. Wine and brandy, as well as different kinds of liquors, are likewise made in considerable quantities. A coarse cotton cloth is made in Cephalonia. The imports are salt fish, sugar, and drugs; also a limited quantity of woolen, linen, and hardware. These islands were taken possession of during the last war, by the British, who expelled the French from them. They still remain in possession of British.

IPSWICH, a parish of England, in Devonshire. Population 815.

IPSWICH, a parish of England, in Hertfordshire. Population 71.

IPSWICH, a parish of England, in Wiltshire. Population 715.

IPSWICH, a parish of England, in Wiltshire. Population 1425.

IPSWICH, the chief town of the county of Suffolk, in England, on the Orwell. The streets are narrow and irregular. The houses are many of them handsome modern buildings; and the rest, though old, are substantial and commodious. The town contains a number of streets, and 12 churches, in the structure of which there is nothing remarkable. The other principal public buildings and institutions are the town-hall, the shire-hall, a new county jail, a market-place, a custom-house, and a public library; also the town and barge jail in St. Matthew's street; the house of correction, standing in an airy situation near the county jail; chapels for the Independents, Unitarians, and Baptists; an assembly-room in Northgate-street; a custom-house on the quay, which borders the Orwell; and a handsome iron-bridge lately erected by Mr Cubitt, civil-engineer; a free grammar-school; three charity-schools; a national-school, containing 180 boys and 120 girls; a Lancasterian school, opened 8th July 1811, with 200 boys; and an excellent county charity for the relief of the widows and orphans of poor clergymen. At a short distance from the town is the race-ground, where the races are annually held in July. Adjoining to the east side of St. Peter's church-yard stands a gate, which is the only relic of the college founded by Cardinal Wolsey. The trade of the town is considerable, chiefly in the malting and exportation of corn. It has also a considerable coasting and a small share in the foreign trade. Ipswich was formerly famous for its manufactures of broad cloth, and of the Ipswich double, the best canvas for sail-cloth; but the only manufacture it now has is the spinning of yarn for the Norwich weavers. The corporation or civil government of Ipswich consists of two bailiffs, a high steward, a recorder, twelve portmen, of whom four are justices of the peace, a town-clerk, 24 common council, two of whom are coroners, two chamberlains, and various other officers. Ipswich sends two members to parliament, the electors amounting to between 800 and 900. Population 17,165. 18 miles N.E. Colchester.

IPSWICH, the Agwan of the Indians, a post township and port of entry of the United States, in Essex county, Massachusetts, on Ipswich river, 12 miles S. Newburyport, 27 N. E. Boston. Pop. 3560.

IRAK, a province of Persia, bounded E. by Fars and Khuzistan, E. by Khuzistan and the Great Salt desert, W. by Kurdistan, N. by Azerbaijan, Gilan, and Mazanderan.

IRBIT, or IRBITSKAYA, a town of Russia, on the river Irtys, and the frontier of Siberia. It is an emporium for Siberian furs, and other Asiatic merchandise passing into Europe. Pop. 3400. 142 miles N. E. Ekaterinburg. Long. 63. 50. E. Lat. 57. 35. N.

IRAPU, an ancient market town of England, in Cumberland. Population 164.

IRAZZELL, a county of the United States, in the west part of North Carolina. Pop. 10,972. Slaves 2432. Chief town Statesville.

IRELAND, a large and fertile island of Europe, in the Atlantic ocean, lying to the west of Great Britain, from which it is separated by the Irish sea, or St George's channel, in some parts 120 miles broad, in others not above 12 miles. The country is situated between Long. 6. and 10. 10. W. and Lat. 51. 15. and 55. 13. N. Its greatest breadth between Erraghlin Head, in Mayo, and the mouth of Strangford lough, is 143 Irish, or 102 English miles, while between the bays of Dublin and Galway the distance is only 86 Irish, or 54 English miles; and between Dundalk and Ballyshannon only about 73 English miles. According to the computation of Du Roufort, it contains considerably more than 30,370 English acres, or 19,150,000 English acres. The calculations of Mr Wakefield make the superficial contents amount to 22,201 English square miles, or 20,457,974 English acres; while others reduce the account to 27,157 square miles.

Ireland is divided into four great provinces, viz. Ulster, Leinster, Connaught, and Munster, which are again divided into 32 counties, containing 3436 parishes. Ulster, which occupies the northern part of the kingdom, contains nine counties, viz. Antrim, Armagh, Cavan, Donegal, Down, Fermanagh, Londonderry, Monaghan, and Tyrone. Leinster, situated to the east, contains twelve counties, viz. Carlow, Dublin, Kildare, Kilkenny, King's County, Longford, Louth, Meath, Queen's County, Wick, Wexford, and Wallow. Connaught, towards the west, contains five counties, viz. Galway, Leitrim, Mayo, Roscommon, and Sligo. Munster, which occupies the southern part of the kingdom, contains six counties, viz. Clare, Cork, Kerry, Limerick, Tipperary, and Waterford.

The face of the country affords a pleasing variety of surface. In some parts there are rich and fertile plains, watered by large and beautiful streams, while in other parts hills are found in frequent succession, which give an agreeable diversity to the scenery. The mountainous chains of Ireland are neither numerous nor important; for though the country no doubt contains many hills of considerable elevation, yet they are not of that height, nor are they collected into such masses, as to give to Ireland the character of a mountainous country. The hilly parts of Ireland are in general of easy ascent, and admit of culture a considerable way up their sides; some of them, however, are precipitous, and terminate in cones or spires. The principal rivers are the Shannon, the Banagher, the Blackwater or Broadwater, the Liffey, the Boyne, the Suir, the Barrow, the Slane, and the Binn; the principal lakes or loughs, Lough Neagh, Lough Lene, and Lough Corrib. Lough Lene, or the Lake of Kilmarney, is the most distinguished for its beauties. The harbours of Ireland are very numerous: those are, Waterford and Cork harbours on the south; Bantry and Dingle bays on the south-west; the estuary of the Shannon, and the vast bay of Galway, on the west; that great opening on the north-west, of which the bay of Sligo is a part, Lough Swilly and Lough Foyle on the north, are the most considerable. On the east side are the harbours of Belfast and Newry, and the barred havens of Dublin, Droghda, and Wexford. The principal commercial towns are Dublin, Cork, Belfast, Limerick, and Waterford.

The climate of Ireland is in general more temperate than the climate of other countries in the same latitude. The heat of summer is less oppressive, and the cold of winter less severe. It is also much more inclined to moderate falls of rain being more frequent; and the atmosphere, even when there is no rain, being impregnated with a moisture which affects the walls of houses, as well as furniture, and other articles. The soil of Ireland is, generally speaking, a fertile loam, with a rocky substratum. The bogs of Ireland form a very remarkable feature of the country. These are of different kinds, and in some places are very extensive. In the reports of the commissioners as pointed in 1802, to inquire into the nature and extent of Irish bogs, their extent is stated at 2,130,000 English acres. The greater part are considered by the commissioners to form a connected whole; and a portion of Ireland, of little more than one-fourth of its entire superficial contents, and included between a line drawn from Wicklowhead to Galway, and another drawn from South-head to Sligo, was supposed by the commissioners to comprise within it six-sevenths of the bogs in the island, exclusive of some mountain bogs and bays of less extent than 500 acres. They were perfectly convinced of the impracticability of draining these marshes. Ireland is said to rest on a bed of granite; and granite is accordingly abundant; also limestone. A great variety of marbles is found; also gypsum, father's earth, and coal. Precious stones have been discovered in Ireland, namely, beryls, and thyras, and jaspers; and also various species of crystals, which are hard, large, and very brilliant. Pieces of native gold have also been found. The lead mines in Antrim, Sligo, and Tipperary, formerly produced considerable quantities of silver. No copper mine is at present wrought in Ireland, although copper is found in different quantities. Iron ore is abundant; and in the middle of the 17th century iron-works were very common. Mineral springs, chiefly chalybeates, are found in almost every county. The animals found in Ireland do not materially differ from those in England.

The agriculture of Ireland is rather in a backward state, though in many counties improvements begin to be adopted. Of late years there has been a great extension of tillage, as is evident from the increased quantities of corn which are now exported to Great Britain. Wheat is grown in various counties, but oats are most extensively cultivated. Ireland has been long celebrated for the immense quantity and excellent quality of potatoes, which it produces. Flax is also grown. The dairy husbandry is the most extensive and the best managed in Ireland. The linen manufacture is the staple branch of Irish industry. The cotton manufacture, which is of late introduction into Ireland, is spreading rapidly. The manufacture of muslins is also carried on in some parts. The distillation of spirits has long been carried on in Ireland to a great extent, both legally and illegally; and there are breweries in different parts. Ireland imports from Great Britain, iron, hops, shot, pepper, tea, pearl-shells, seeds, tobacco, spices, indigo, drugs, colours, alum, coals, cotton-wool, logwood, silk, calicoes, earthenware, hardware, beer, sugar, coffee, cabinet and upholstrey goods, hats, &c.; and exports to Great Britain, corn, hides, horse hair, provisions, butter, whisky, cattle, flax-seed, yarn, tallow, &c. The trade between France and Ireland is considerable; from France she imports wines particularly, and exports to France, provisions, linch, &c. Portugal sends her wines, particularly her port, and her fruits, &c. and receives provisions, butter, &c. The trade with Spain consists nearly of the same articles. The commerce between Ireland and the north of Europe is principally carried on through England. With North America and the West Indies the trade is very extensive. To the former Ireland sends her linens principally, and occasionally butter; and receives from it flax-seed, &c. To the West Indies Ireland sends linens, provisions, &c. and receives sugars, &c. The exports from Ireland, estimated at their official value, amounted, for the year ending January 1817, to £6,703,799; the imports to £5,004,690. In Ireland the public revenue arises from much the same sources as in Britain, namely, customs, excise, stamps, post-office duties, assessed taxes, &c. It amounted, in the year ending 1817, to £2,109,171. The expenditure amounted to £1,461,266; and the debt of Ireland amounted, in the same year, after deducting what was redeemed by the sinking fund, to £1,414,411,180. The exchequer of Ireland is now incorporated with that of Britain; and it is in contemplation, as soon as it can be safely accomplished, to assimilate the antics of the two countries. The established religion is the Protestant, though the great majority of the people are Catholics. Population in 1754, 2,372,634; in 1767, 2,511,276; in 1785, 2,845,932; in 1791, 4,206,612. Since this period, the population has increased beyond 5,000,000.

IRELAND, one of the Bermuda islands.

IRELAND, New, a long narrow island in the Eastern seas, north from New Britain, extending about 180 miles, and in general very narrow. It is situated between Long. 150. 30. and 153. 5. E. Lat. 3. 40. and 5. 0. S.

IRISH SEA, that part of the Atlantic ocean which washes the coasts of Great Britain and Ireland.

IRISH-TOWN, a bathing village of Ireland, bay of Dublin, near the mouth of the Liffey.

IRITINA, a river of Brazil, which runs into the Atlantic, Lat. 21. S.

IRAX, a river of England, in Lancashire, which falls into the Irwell.

IRKOUTSK, an extensive government, comprehending all the eastern part of Siberia, or Asiatic Russia. It is bounded E. by the Pacific ocean, or more properly by its gulfs, called the seas of Kamtschatka, Okhotsk, and Anadyr; N. by the Frozen ocean; W. by Tobolsk; S. by vast chains of mountains, continued from the Altay, under the appellations of the Sayanskic, Yablonoy, and Stanovoy mountains, which separate it from the vast regions of Chinese Tartary. It extends about 28 degrees from east to west, and 25 from north to south, and comprises 126,400 square geographical miles. It is traversed by the Lena, which is a great river. The Olonek, the Indigirka, and the Kovyma, are also large rivers which fall into the icy sea. Population 375,150.

IRKOUTSK, one of the four circles into which the above government is divided.

IRKOUTSK, a city, the capital of the above government and district, on the Angara. The houses are of wood, and the streets unpaved. It contains 2 cloisters and 33 churches. Irkoutsk is the residence of the officers of government, and the station of a considerable body of troops; it is also the seat of an archbishopric. Government maintains here a seminary, a popular school, and a school for the Japanese language and navigation. Irkoutsk possesses also a great commercial importance. It appears half a Chinese town, from the quantities of porcelain, enamelled and bequeered ware, and Chinese articles of dress and furniture, with which the houses are filled. Pop. 11,202. Long. 103. 30. E. Lat. 52. 16. 41. N.

IRKUT, a river of Siberia, which falls into the Angara, opposite Irkoutsk.

IRQUOIS, or the Six Nations, a confederacy of Indian nations, in North America.

IRRAWADDY, the principal river in the Birman empire. It enters the Birman dominions in or about the latitude of 25. 0. N., and directing its course west-south-west, passes the cities of Umrappaora and Old Ava. In Lat. 21. 45. it is joined from the north-west by the Keenduen river, and in Lat. 17. 50. it divides into two branches, one of which running to the south-west, passes the town of Persaim or Bassen; the other running to the south-east, passes Rangoon; but these branches again subdivide into many streams which are met by the tide. The intermediate space is formed into a Delta, similar to that of the Nile.

IRY, a river of England, in Cumberland, which falls into the Irish sea.

IRYING, a river of England, in Cumberland, which runs into the Eden.

IRYTSCH, a great river of Northern Asia, which rises in Independent Tartary. At Samara it joins the Obi, which gives name to the united stream.

IMOLEA, an inland town of Spain, province of Jaen. Population 2200.

IRVINE, of JAWINE, a seaport and ancient royal burgh of Scotland, in Ayrshire, on the Irvine, and in a parish of the same name. The principal public buildings are the church, surmounted with an elegant spire; the town-hall, which stands in the middle of the street; and, at the north end of the town, a new academy. The harbour is tolerably commodious. There is a yard for ship-building, a large tan-work, a rope-work, and a bleachfield; also cotton manufactures. Pop. of the parish 7007.

IRVINE, a river of Scotland, in Ayrshire, which falls into the frith of Clyde at Irvine.

IRUN, a town of Spain, in Guipuscoa, about a mile from the Bidasoa. Population 1100.

IRWELL, a river of England, in Lancashire, which runs into the Mersey.

ISERN TILLE, a town of France, department of the Cote d'Or. Population 1600.

ISABELLA, St., a town of Brazil, 130 miles N. E. of Salvador. Lat. 11. 10. S.

ISABELLA, a river of St Domingo, which enters the sea, near the city of St Domingo.

ISABELLA POINT lies on the north side of the island of St Domingo. Lat. 19. 59. 18. N.

ISCHIA, a town of Upper Austria, noted for salt-works. Population 4500. 27 miles S. E. Salzburg.

ISCHIA, a small island in the gulf of Naples, 6 miles from the coast. Its superficial extent is 25 square miles. Vines and olives are raised in abundance; also silk. Here are likewise some good pastures. The principal mineral production is sulphur. In 1807, Ischia was taken by a British and Sicilian force. Population 22,500.

ISCHIA, the capital of the foregoing island, on the north coast. It is defended by a citadel, built on a rock of lava. Pop. 3100.

ISCHIM, a town of Siberia, capital of a circle of the same name, situated on the Ischim, which falls into the Irtysh. Population 1000. Long. 69. 20. E. Lat. 56. 30. N.

ISCHITELLA, a town of the kingdom of Naples, province of Capitanata. Pop. 3100.

ISER, or GISER, a river of Bohemia, which flows into the Elbe at Alt Bunzlau.

ISER, a large river of Bararia, which joins the Danube at Deckendorf.

ISER (Circle of the), in Bavaria, has been divided since 1803. It lies between 10. 46. and 12. 31. of E. long. and 47. 20. and 49. 46. of N. lat. and is bounded partly by the Bavarian circles of the Regen and the Upper Danube, partly by the Austrian states. Pop. 603,000.

ISERE, a considerable river of France, which rises in the Alps, and joins the Rhone.

ISERE, a department in the S. E. of France, forming the N. W. part of the old province of Dauphine, and bounded by Savoy, and the French departments of the Upper Alps, the Drôme, and the Rhone. Superficial area 3410 square miles. Population 472,000.

ISERLOHN, a town of Prussian Westphalia. Velvets, silks, and ribbons, are made here; also hardware of various kinds. Population 4100. 41 miles E. Düsseldorf.

ISERNIA, a town of Naples, at the foot of the Appennines. Part of the town was destroyed by an earthquake in 1805. 30 miles N. Capua. Population 6000.

ISIGNY, a town of France, in Normandy. Population 1900.

ISIS, a name given to the river Thames.

ISJUM, a town of European Russia, on the Donetz, 6 miles S. E. Charkov. Pop. 4300.

ISLA, a river of Scotland, county of Forfar, which falls into the Tay at Kinclaven. It is noted for a fall of 70 or 80 perpendicular feet.—Also a river in the county of Banff, which falls into the Deveron.

ISLAMABAD, a town of Bengal, capital of the district of Chittagong, on the Curram-pooly river, at the distance of 10 miles from the sea. Long. 91. 42. E. Lat. 22. 22. N.

ISLAMABAD, a town of Cashmere, on the Jhylyur. Its principal manufacture is shawls. Long. 74. 7. E. Lat. 34. 6. N.

ISLAY, ILAY, or ILA, one of the Hebrides, for western islands of Scotland, to the south-west of Jura, and belonging to the county of Argyll. It is of an irregular form, about 31 miles in length, and 24 broad. It contains about 154,000 acres, of which about one-seventh may be stated to be in cultivation; two-sevenths are rugged mountains, rocks, or hills; three-sevenths hill pasture, coppice wood plantations, and natural grassings, impervious to the plough; and one-seventh moors, peat mosses, and unreclaimed wastes. In this island agriculture is now carried on with great energy, and after the most improved mode. The land produces good crops of barley, oats, pease, and flax. The linen manufacture is carried on to a considerable extent. About 200 tons of kelp are manufactured annually. The rents in 1779 were £2700, and in 1807 they exceeded £11,000. Population in 1801, 6821; in 1811, 11,500; in 1821, 16,000. Its inhabitants are rapidly increasing.

ISLE ROYAL, an island on the north-west side of Lake Superior, about 100 miles long, and in many places about 40 broad.

ISLE OF WHITHORN, a harbour and village of Scotland, in Wigtonshire.

ISLE OF WIGHT, a county of the United States, in Virginia, on the south side of James river. Population 9180. Slaves 4041. Chief town Smithfield.

ISLEHAM, a parish of England, in Cambridgeshire. Population 1710.

ISLESBOROUGH, a township of the United States, in Hancock county, Maine.

ISLEWORTH, a village of England, in the county of Middlesex, and parish of Isleworth. It is pleasantly situated on the banks of the Thames, opposite Richmond; is a large and busy village, and contains many good houses, inhabited by genteel families. Population of the parish 5250. 8 miles W. London.

ISLINGTON, a village of England, in the county of Middlesex, and parish of St. Andrew.

London, formerly a pleasant country town. It is chiefly composed of the dwellings of retired citizens, and other persons connected with the capital; while it yet retains much of the character of an ancient town, in the display of a considerable number of old buildings, formerly inhabited by distinguished persons. The neighbourhood abounds with pleasing walks, the fields being uninclosed, and intersected by the meander of the New River; while the adjacent tea-gardens and taverns, all in fine open situations, and furnished with bowling-green, &c. afford excellent recreation and amusement to numbers from the metropolis. The chief public buildings in Islington are the parish church; an elegant and costly chapel of ease, erected near Highbury, to accommodate the increasing inhabitants; and near it charity schools for the education of 500 children on Bell's system. A Sunday school has likewise been lately established; and the dissenting chapels are numerous and large, with charitable institutions attached to each. Near the New River head is a mineral spring, called Islington spa, which resembles in its quality and effects the water at Turbridge wells. Islington contains an extensive manufactory of white lead, a large manufactory of floorcloth, a fur manufactory of considerable extent, besides others of less consequence. Population of the parish 22,417.

ISMAIL, or ISMAILOW, a large and strong town of Bessarabia, on the north side of the principal arm of the Danube, about 33 miles from the Black sea. It is a mile in length, and half a mile in breadth, and is surrounded by a moat and earthen ramparts. It carries on a considerable trade in the products of Moldavia; and the Armenians settled here have thriving manufactures of leather and shagreen. It was stormed by the Russians, under Suwarow, in 1790, and was given up for three days to the pillage and massacre of these barbarians. 268 miles N. Constantinople. Long. 28. 50. 15. E. Lat. 45. 21. N.

ISMAILOW, an imperial palace of Russia, 12 miles from Moscow, with a village near it of the same name.

ISNIK, a town of Asia Minor, the ancient Nice. It now contains scarcely 300 houses. Long. 29. 50. E. Lat. 40. 16. N.

ISNY, a town of Germany. 46 miles S. Ulm. Population 2200.

ISOLA, a town of Austrian Illyria. 7 miles S. Capo d'Istria. Population 2600.

ISOLA, a town of Naples. Population 2800.

ISOLA, a town of Piedmont. Pop. 2500.—Also a town of Naples. Population 2600.

ISOLA GROSSA, an island of the Adriatic, on the coast of Dalmatia, 30 miles long, and 2 broad.

ISPAIGNAC, a town of France, department of the Lozere. Population 1900.

ISPAHAN, or SPAHAN, the capital of Persia, and long celebrated as one of the most splendid cities of the east. It was taken by Anwar in 1837, who gave it up to indiscriminate massacre. It revived from this calamity; and at length Scha Abbas, the ablest and most fortunate prince of this dynasty, fixed at Isfahan the seat of his dominion, and spared no cost in embellishing it with the most splendid edifices. In 1722, it was taken by the Afghans, and many of its most superb edifices entirely destroyed. In 1727, it was retaken by Nadir Shah; but no pains were taken by that conqueror to restore its former prosperity. Since that time Isfahan has never been a royal residence, and it has gone gradually more and more into decay, and presents only the wreck of what it formerly was. A person may now ride for miles amid its ruins. It still contains, however, according to Olivier, 50,000, and according to Mr Kunzeir, 200,000 inhabitants. Isfahan, according to Chardin, was 24 miles in circuit, and contained 172 mosques, 43 colleges, 1800 caravanseras, 273 public baths, and, according to some travellers, a population of 1,100,000. The most splendid edifice was the palace, built by Scha Abbas. The walls and buildings of the palace remain still nearly entire; but it has been stripped of all its costly furniture, and every thing valuable which could be removed. The Meydan, as a square, seems equally distinguished: it is one-third of a mile in length, and about half that breadth. It was formerly encircled by a canal, bordered by very fine plane-trees; but all vestiges of both are now obliterated. The finest shops of the town are here. There are some very fine buildings, particularly mosques, in the whole circuit of it; but the palace, forming one of the sides, is its chief ornament. Another remarkable object is the Char Bagh (four gardens), a name given to an avenue of more than a mile, reaching from the Meydan to the mountains east of Isfahan. It is composed of four rows of very large and beautiful plane-trees. There are several handsome bridges in Isfahan. The mosques also display great magnificence. The principal one is of vast extent, built of stone, with a lining of marble, the cupolas ornamented with gold, and the gates with silver. The streets are narrow, winding, and irregular; and being quite unpaved, the wind, when it is high, raises such clouds of dust, that the sun cannot be seen. The manufactures of Isfahan are still very extensive. In gold brocade this city is unrivalled. It is also the greatest emporium of inland commerce in the Persian empire, being the chief medium of communication with India and Cabul on one side, and Turkey on the other. Isfahan, after being thus desolated by foreign wars and revolutions, has of late begun to revive, chiefly through the exertions of Hajee Mahomed Hussein Khan, who has raised himself to the first situation in the empire, and acquired immense wealth, which he employs in the improvement of his native city and province. Long. 52. 50. E. Lat. 32. 25. N.

ISSRI, OUD, a river of the Netherlands, which enters the Zuider-Zee below Kampen.—2d, LITTLE, a river of the Netherlands, which joins the Maase, near Rotterdam.

ISSELMONDE, an island of the Netherlands, formed by the Maase, the Merwe, and the Yssel. It contains a village of the same name. Population 1100.

ISSELSTEIN, a town of the Netherlands, 6 miles S. Utrecht. Population 2100.

ISSOIRE, a town of France, department of the Puy de Dôme. It has some fortifications. Population 5000.

ISSOUDEX, a walled town of France, department of the Indre. It has manufactures of stockings, hats, and leather, and a saltpetre work. Pop. 10,000. 74 miles S. E. Tours.

ISSUN, a village of Prussian Westphalia, 6 miles N. E. Guelibres. Population 2000.

ISSY L'ÉVÈQUE, a town of France, department of the Saône and Loire. Pop. 1800.

ISTREA, a town of France. 13 miles S. E. Arles. Population 2100.

ISTRIA, a peninsula of the Austrian empire, in Illyria, formed by the gulfs of Trieste and Fiume (which indent the land from the Adriatic), and bounded on the north by Carniola. It is situated between Lat. 45. and 46. and was formerly divided into Venetian and Austrian; but, at the peace of Campo Formio, the whole was given to Austria; and though it was afterwards, during some years, in the hands of Bonaparte, it was restored to Austria in 1814, and now forms the southern division of Austrian Illyria. The territorial extent of this peninsula is about 1600 square miles, and the population 141,000. It is a rich and fertile tract, and wants only a ready market for its productions, to render it the most thriving part of the Austrian empire.

ISTWITH, a river of Wales, in Cardiganshire, which falls into the Irish sea.

ITALY, a well known peninsula in the south of Europe, extending from the 37th to the 46th degree of N. latitude, and in one quarter from the 7th to the 19th degree of E. longitude. It is bounded N. by Germany and Switzerland, W. by France and the Tuscan or Tyrrhenian sea, S. by the Ionian sea, E. by the Adriatic and the Austrian province of Carniola. It is 700 miles long, but its breadth is very unequal, from 350 to 75 miles. The main land of Italy is and has long been divided by geographers into three great parts, the northern, the central, and the southern. The first comprises Piedmont and the continental dominions of the king of Sardinia, the Austrian possessions in Italy called the Lombardo-Venetian kingdom, and the duchies of Parma and Modena. Central Italy, less extensive, consists of the Ecclesiastical State; and the small districts of Lucca, Massa di Carrara, and San Marino; while southern Italy consists exclusively of the kingdom of Naples. The principal islands connected with Italy are Sicily, Sardinia, and the Lipari group. The political divisions of Italy are nearly the same now as before the French revolution. The following table exhibits the extent and population of its nine independent states, arranged according to their comparative magnitude.

	Extent in square miles.	Population.
I.—Kingdom of the Two Sicilies.
Naples,	31,000	4,963,000
Sicily, with the Lipari and other isles,	12,600	1,630,000
	43,600	6,610,000
II.—Kingdom of Sardinia.
Piedmont, including the county of Nice,	7,500	1,750,000
Duchy of Montserrat,	900	130,000
Part of the duchy of Milan,	3,300	550,000
Territory of the riservata republic of Genoa,	2,300	532,000
Savoy (not properly a part of Italy),	3,000	450,000
Island of Sardinia, with the small adjacent isles,	9,200	520,000
	27,000	3,934,000
III.—Austrian Italy, or the Lombardo-Venetian kingdom.
Government of Milan,	8,340	2,062,000
Government of Venice,	9,950	1,932,000
	18,290	4,014,000
IV.—States of the Church or Pope's Dominions.
V.—Grand Duchy of Tuscany , comprising the island of Elba and other small possessions, and governed by the archduke Ferdinand of Austria,
	8,500	1,180,000
VI.—States of Parma , consisting of the duchies of Parma, Placentia, and Guastalla, subject to the archduchess Maria Louisa, and to revert eventually to the infant of Spain,
	2,200	377,000
VII.—States of Modena , subject to the Austrian archduke Francis of Este. Duchies of Modena, Mirandola, and Reggio, with the principalities of Carpi and Correggio,
	1,740	332,000
Duchy of Massa, and Principality of Carrara,	320	53,000
	2,060	370,000
VIII.—Duchy of Lucca , subject to the infant of Spain,
	420	120,000
IX.—Republic of San Marino,
	40	7,000
Extent and population of Italy, including Sicily and Sardinia,	117,990	19,914,000
Exclusive of these two islands, Italy contains	65,290	16,099,000

Nothing can exceed the beauty and diversity of the natural scenery of Italy. Its mountains, consisting of the Alps and Apennines, present every variety of form and elevation, of rugged rocks and precipices, thick and extensive forests, water-falls, and all the component parts of picturesque beauty. The vallies are delightful beyond description; and even the plains are enlivened more than in most other countries by gentle elevations, rivers, and woods. The windings of the coast form a number of fine bays; and the clearness of the atmosphere gives to every object a peculiar brightness of colouring and distinctness of outline. Italy abounds in natural curiosities: the most striking are its volcanoes, the principal of which are Mount Vesuvius, near Naples; Mount Etna, in Sicily; and several in the Lipari islands. The chief river of Italy is the Po, which receives as tributaries the Padra, the Maira, the Grana, the Poëcia, the Saogoa, the Belba, the Bormida, the Tanaro, the Doira, the Ticino, the Adda, the Oglio, the Mincio, the Trebia, the Parma, and the Panaro. The other large rivers of the north, or rather north-west, of Italy, are the Adige, the Brenta, the Piave, and the Tagliamento, all flowing southward from the Alps. In the centre or south of Italy, the Tiber is the principal. There is also the Rubicon and the Arno in Tuscany. In Naples, the chief rivers are the Volturno, the Garigliano, anciently the Liris, and the Ofanto, formerly the Aufidus, which flows past Canosa. The principal lakes of Italy are lake Garda, and the Lago Maggiore, or lake of Locarno. After these come the lakes of Lugano, Como, Lecco, and Isco; the lake of Perugia (anciently Trasimene), Bolsena, Castel Gondolfo, Bracciano, Celano, Vagano, and Averno.

In respect to climate, Italy is one of the most favoured countries in Europe. The air is mild and genial almost throughout, the excessive heats of summer being moderated by the influence of the mountains and surrounding sea, and the cold of winter being hardly ever extreme. Many districts of Italy are unhealthy in the summer and autumn months, owing to the malaria, an intermitting fever of the worst kind, which is peculiar to Italy. The cause of this evil has not been accurately ascertained, but is, in all probability, to be sought in the pestilential air of the stagnant marshes. Italy presents a rich and varied spectacle of natural products, of which the most important are vines, olives, and other fruit of great variety, and of the most delicious quality; also corn, though not in great abundance; pulse, and other vegetables; cotton; and, still more, silk. In the north, towards the German frontier, as well as in the Venetian and Genoese territory, and in Tuscany, there are masses of beautiful marble; caverns of crystals are met with in many parts. In Apennines are found alabaster, jasper, rock-crystal, chalcedony, lapis lazuli, opals, with other valuable stones; and these mountains abound in basalt, dried lava, sulphur, porcellanous sand, and similar volcanic matter. Other mineral productions of a different class are alum, copper, and iron. Mineral springs, both cold and hot, are found in various parts of Italy. The mountains and forests contain a number of wild animals; among others the bear, the stag, the marmot, and the badger. The lynx or tiger-cat is found in the mountains of Abruzzo; and the crested porcupine in the south of Italy. Hares, foxes, and the kinds of wild fowl that come under the name of game, are sufficiently abundant. Silk is the staple manufacture, and after it come linen and woollen. Wine and strong spirits are also made in quantities. The articles for commercial exchanges are very limited, and consist less of manufactures than of rude produce. With the Levant their intercourse is still considerable. The other imports are from France, England, Switzerland, and Germany: with the last two the conveyance of merchandise takes place chiefly by land. The imports from England to Italy are coffee, sugar, and other colonial produce; muslins, linens, calicoes, woollens, hardware, and dye-stuffs; also fish, dried and salted, for diet on the numerous days of abstinence from butcher meat enjoined by the Catholic creed. The principal trading places are Naples, Venice, Genoa, Leghorn, Milan, Verona, Bologna, Florence, Civita Vecchia, Ancona, Lucca, and in Sicily, Messina and Palermo.

The established religion throughout Italy is the Roman Catholic; but all other sects are tolerated. The number of archbishops for the whole country is 36. The number of inferior ecclesiastics is surprisingly great: they consist of two great divisions, the parochial clergy and the monastic orders. Italy contains an extraordinary number of hospitals, erected, and in general provided for, in former ages. Her principal universities are those of Rome, Bologna, Padua, Parma, Pisa, Pavia, Naples, and Palermo. The Italians are passionately fond of music; and nothing is more common than to hear the finest airs of Metastasio sung in the streets with correctness and harmony.

ITALY, AUSTRIAN, a kingdom of Upper Italy, belonging to the house of Austria, and situated between 44. 54. and 46. 46. of N. lat. and 8. 31. and 13. 30. of E. long. It is bounded N. by Switzerland and Austria, E. by Illyria, S. E. by the Adriatic, S. by the States of the Church, Modena, and Parma, and W. by Piedmont. The line of demarcation, as laid down by the congress of Vienna, is, 1st, On the side of Piedmont, the Lago Maggiore, and the course of the Ticino; 2d, On the side of Parma, Piacenza, and Guastalla, the course of the Po; 3d, On the side of Modena, the same boundary as on 1st January 1792; 4th, On the side of the Papal States, the course of the Po as far as the confinement of the Goro; and, 5th, On the side of Switzerland, the former frontier of Lombardy, along with the line which separates the valleys of the Valtelline, Bernina, and Chiavenna, from the cantons of the Grisons and Ticino. The name given to this kingdom, in treaties and other public acts, is the Lombardo-Venetian Kingdom, from its two great component parts, which are separated from each other by the river Mincio: that on the right of the river is called the government of Milan, and that on the left the government of Venice. The former is divided into nine provinces or delegations, and the latter into eight: each delegation is subdivided into districts, and each district into comunes or parishes. Austrian Italy was erected into a kingdom by an edict of the emperor of Austria, dated 7th April 1816. Though declared to form a monarchy inseparable from the Austrian empire, it has a separate constitution of its own, at the head of which is a prince of the imperial family, with the title of viceroy. His residence is at Milan.

ITAMARCA, a province of Brazil, bounded N. by the province of Parana, S. by that of Pernambuco, E. by the sea, and W. by the country of the Tapuyos Indians.

ITAMARCA, an island of Brazil, province of Pernambuco, 3 leagues in length, and 2 in breadth. It is about a league from the coast. The capital is of the same name.

ITATA, a province of Chili, bounded N. by Maule, E. by Chilian, W. by the Pacific ocean, and S. by Puchucuy. It is about 20 leagues in length, and 11 in breadth. The capital is Coulema, situated in Lat. 36. 2. S.

ITATA, a river of the above province, in the Chilian Andes, which enters the sea in Lat. 36. S.

ITCHIN, a river of Wales, in Northumberland, which runs into the Eden.

ITUNING, a river of England, in Hampshire, which runs into Southampton water.

ITENES, a large river of Quito, in the province of Mojos, which enters the Mar-more in Lat. 11. 55. S.

ITHACA, or TRIACHI, in the Mediterranean, one of the seven Ionian islands, in the gulf of Patras, in Long. 21. 1. E. Lat. 38. 26. N. It is 18 miles long, and nowhere above 5 broad. Population 8000. It has always been noted for its rugged and barren aspect. The chief productions of the island are olives and currants.

ITHACA, a post village of the United States, in Ulster, and capital of Tompkins county, New York, at the bottom of Cayuga lake, 29 miles from Oswego, and 180 W. Albany. Population in 1818, 611. The public buildings are a court-house and church.

ITROU, a river of Wales, in Radnorshire, which falls into the Wye.

ITYONABA BAY, a bay on the coast of Brazil. Long. 37. 46. W. Lat. 6. 20. S.

ITIQUEIA, a river of Brazil, which falls into the Rio de los Porruos, a tributary stream, joining the great river La Plata, about 500 miles from its source.

ITRAI, a town of Naples, 40 miles N. W. Naples. Population 4500.

ITRUPU, one of the Kurile islands, where the Japanese have a settlement.

ITZENOE, a town of Denmark, on the Stor, with 5000 inhabitants. It carries on a good trade. 31 miles N. by W. Hamburg.

IVER, two rivers of England; one joins the Ouse at Tempsford; the other rises in Dorsetshire, and runs into the Parrot at Langport.

IVEN, a parish of England, in Buckinghamshire. Population 1663.

IVES, St., a borough and market town of England, in Gornwall, on the bay of St Ives. It consists chiefly of one long street, branching off at the south into two smaller ones. The buildings in general are but mean. The church is a low but spacious building. There are Independent and Methodist meeting-houses in the town, and these have Sunday schools for poor children. The chief articles of exportation are slates and pilchards. The pilchard fishery is carried on in the bay to a great extent. To protect the port from the north-west winds, a breakwater has been constructed. St Ives is governed by a mayor, a recorder, 12 capital burgesses, and 24 inferior burgesses. It sends two members to parliament. The number of voters paying scot and lot is 340. Population 3520. 104 miles S. W. Exeter.

IVAS, St., a market town of England, county of Huntingdon, on the Ouse, over which is a handsome stone bridge. Population 2777. 5 miles S. E. Huntingdon.

IVICA, or IVICA, an island of the Mediterranean, belonging to Spain, and the principal of the group called the Pithyusa. Its extent is 190 square miles; its population 15,200. The soil is fertile, producing corn, wine, oil, fruit, flax, and hemp, with little labour. About 15,000 tons of salt are annually got from evaporation; and it forms, with fish and wood, the chief articles of export. 32 miles from Majorca.—The capital is of the same name; and has a good harbour. Population 2700.

IVINGHOE, an ancient market town and parish of England, county of Buckingham. It carries on a manufacture of lace. Population 1665. 6 miles S. W. Dunstable.

IVREA, an old and strong town of Italy, in Piedmont. It has a cathedral, 3 churches, and several convents. 20 miles N. Turin.

IVY BRIDGE, a village of England, in Devonshire, 2½ miles from Bideford.

IXWORTH, a market town and parish of England, in Suffolk. Population 952.

IZZ, a town of France, department of the Mayenne. Population 1000.

IZIEU, a town of France, department of the Loire. Population 2000.

J.

JAAH, a river of the Netherlands, which falls into the Meuse at Maastricht.

JABBEH, a considerable town of Bambara, in Western Africa, on the Niger, 55 miles W. S. W. Segou.

JABLONOW, a small town of Austrian Poland, in Galicia.

JABLUNKA, a town of Austrian Silesia. Population 1700.

JACA, or JACCA, a town of Spain, in Aragon, among the Pyrenees. Population 4000. 45 miles N. Saragosa.

JACATRA, a district of the island of Java, of which Batavia is the capital.

JACI, or JACI, a town of Algeria, a maritime town of Sicily, in the Valley of Demona, not more than 12 miles from the summit of Mount Etna. It is situated on the N. E., and has manufactures of linen. Population 11,000. 10 miles N. N. E. Catania.

JACKSON, a county of the United States, in Georgia, on the E. of the Oconee. Pop. 10,569. Slaves 1216. Chief town Jackson.—3d, Of Alabama.—5d, Of Mississippi, on the Gulf of Mexico, at the mouth of the Pascagoula.—11th, Of West Tennessee, on Cumberland river. Pop. 5401. Slaves 181. Chief town Williamson. At the court-house is a post-office.—5th, Of Ohio, east of Ross and Pike counties. Pop. in 1810, 2600. Chief town Jackson.—6th, Of Indiana, on the east fork of White river. Chief town Brownstown.—7th, Of Illinois, on the Mississippi. Pop. 1294. Chief town Brownsville.—Also the name of several townships.

JACKSON'S RIVER, a head water of James' river, Virginia, which is joined by Carpenter's creek, and receives the name of Fluvannah river. It is noted for a fall of 200 feet.

JACOBS, ST., a village of the Netherlands, province of Friesland. Population 1600.

JACOBSTADEN, a town of Pomerania, 16 miles E. Stargard. Population 1500.

JACOBSTADT, a town of European Russia, government of Finland. Population 1600.

JAEH, an extensive province of Spain, forming the eastern part of Andalusia, and surrounded by the provinces of Granada, Murcia, Cordova, and La Mancha. Its territorial extent is 4730 square miles; and its population 207,000. The chief towns are Jaen, Ubeda, Baeza, and Anduxar. The largest river is the Guadalquivir, which has a number of tributary streams.

JAEH, a considerable city of Spain, capital of the above province. It is surrounded by walls flanked with towers, is neatly built, and has several handsome churches and squares, one of which is spacious, and surrounded by elegant houses. It is a bishop's see; and the cathedral is a noble structure; divided into three aisles, and adorned on the outside with statues and bas-reliefs; in the interior it has magnificent drapery and paintings. Water is distributed to all parts of the town in great profusion, by means of public fountains. It was well known to the Romans. Population 27,500. 65 miles E. Cordova. Long. 3. 51. W. Lat. 37. 43. N.

JAEH DE BRACAMOROS, a province of Quito, bounded N. by Loja, and Quixos and Macos, E. by Miras, W. by Piura, and S. by Caxamarca, or Chachapayas, in Peru. The capital is of the same name. Long. 78. 33. W. Lat. 5. 25. S.

JAHRA, a district of Arabia, S. E. of Yemen, and bordering on Hadramut.

JAFFA, a town of Palestine, near the coast of the Mediterranean, the ancient Joppa. It is now inhabited by Turks and Arabs, with a mixture of Greeks, Maronites, and Armenians. It stands on a small eminence in the form of a sugar loaf. On the summit is a small citadel, which commands the town; the bottom of the hill is surrounded by a wall without a rampart. The general appearance of the place is now very desolate. Its harbour is one of the worst in the Mediterranean. The commerce consists in the importation of grain, particularly of rice, from Egypt. Jaffa has always been a favourite resort of pilgrims to the Holy Land. The Latins, Greeks, and Armenians, have each small convents for the reception of pilgrims. In 1799, Jaffa was taken by Bonaparte. 40 miles W. Jerusalem. Long. 34. 53. E. Lat. 32. 2. N.

JAFESA, the capital of the district of Jaffnapotam, in Ceylon, at some distance from the sea, but communicating with it by a river navigable for large boats. The town is fortified, and possesses also a good citadel, but was taken, after a short resistance, by the British troops, in 1795. It has a manufacture of cotton goods. The inhabitants are principally Mahomedans; but since Ceylon was taken by the English, many of the country-born Dutch families have settled there. Long. 80. 9. E. Lat. 9. 45. N.

JAGGERE, a town of Hindostan, province of Orissa, on the Byturnee. It is still a large straggling town, and has a manufacture of cotton cloths. Long. 86. 35. E. Lat. 20. 50. N.

JAGERSDORFF, Gross, a village of East Prussia, at which the Prussians were defeated by the Russians in 1757.

JACO, SR., a province of Chili, bounded by that of Acumegua N., the Andes E., the river Mapocho S., and Melipilla W. It is 16 leagues in extent, and 12 broad, and is watered by the rivers Mapocho, Colina, and Zampa, and by several other headwater streams.

JACO, SR., the capital of the above province, on the Mapocho, over which there is a beautiful bridge, which connects the city with suburbs. The streets, like those of all the other cities and villages in Chili, are straight, and intersected at right angles, and are 36 geometrical feet in breadth. The great square is 450 feet on each side. In the midst is a handsome fountain of bronze. The most remarkable edifices are the cathedral, the church of St Dominick, and that of the great college formerly belonging to the Jesuits. The private houses are handsome and pleasant, but, on account of earthquakes, are usually of but one story. Besides the suburbs on the other side of the river, there is one to the south, called St Isidoro. The population, 46,000, is rapidly increasing. There are four parochial churches, several convents of monks, besides seven nunneries, a house of correction for women, a foundling hospital, several private endowments, a college of nobility, which was under the direction of the Jesuits, and a Tridentine seminary. St Jago contains a royal university, a mint for coining gold and silver, and barracks for the soldiers. Being the centre of all the commerce of Chili, it abounds with all kinds of meat, fish, and other articles of food, which are obtained from the neighbouring provinces. 55 miles E. S. E. of the port of Valparaiso. Long. 70. 44. W. Lat. 33. 26. S.

JAGO, St, a town of the island of Cuba, long considered the capital of the island, but now reduced from its former splendour. Long. 76. 6. W. Lat. 20. S.

JAGO, St, a large river of Quito, province of Jacn de Bracamoros, which unites with the Paute; and another which enters the Pacific ocean, in Lat. 1. 14. N.

JAGO, St, DE ALANGI, a town of Mexico, and capital of Veracruz, 110 miles S. W. Porto Bello. Long. 80. 30. W. Lat. 8. 12. N.

JAGO, St, DE CAZEN, a populous town of Portugal, 36 miles S. Natal.

JAGUARIBE, a river of Brazil, which enters the Atlantic. Long. 38. 10. W. Lat. 4. S.

JARBE, or JADE, a river of Germany, which forms a considerable bay in the North sea. Long. 8. 12. E. Lat. 53. 20. N.

JARJOW, a town of Hindustan, province of Agra. Long. 77. 52. E. Lat. 26. 59. N.

JATORICK, a river of Russian Poland, falling into the Dniester.

JACZE, or JÄIDSCHA, a town of European Turkey, the residence of the pacha of Bosnia.

JAGIEL, a town and fortress of Hindustan, and capital of a district of the same name.

JALLINDRE, a town of Hindustan, province of Lahore. Long. 75. 25. E. Lat. 31. 16. N.

JALYAN, or JALKAPORE, a town and fortress of Hindustan, capital of a district of the same name. Long. 76. 34. E. Lat. 19. 46. N.

JALOCINA, a river of European Turkey, in Walachia, which falls into the Danube.

JALOFFA, or OUALOFFA, a people of Africa, occupying most of the country between the lower part of the Gambia and that of the Senegal.

JALOGAN, a town of Hindustan, province of Agra, on the Sinde. Long. 79. 23. E. Lat. 20. 7. N.

JAMAICA, one of the West India islands, belonging to Great Britain, and the most considerable and valuable of her possessions in that quarter. It is of an oval form, about 130 miles in length, and, on a medium, about 40 miles in breadth, 30 leagues E. and N. St Domingo. The island of Jamaica is divided into three counties, namely, Middlesex, Surrey, and Cornwall. The county of Middlesex contains eight parishes, one town, and thirteen villages. The town is St Jago de la Vega, or Spanish Town, the capital of the island. The county of Surrey contains seven parishes, two towns, and eight villages. The towns are Kingston and Port Royal. Cornwall contains five parishes, three towns, and six villages. The towns are Savanna la Mar on the south side of the island, and Montego Bay and Falmouth on the north.

A lofty range of mountains, called the Blue mountains, runs through the whole island from east to west, dividing it into two parts, and rising in some of its most elevated parts to 7431 feet above the level of the sea. On the north and south sides of these mountains the aspect of the country is extremely different. On the north side of the island the land rises from the shore into hills, which are more remarkable for beauty than boldness, being all of gentle acclivity, and commonly separated from each other by spacious vales and romantic inequalities. Every valley has its rivulet, and every hill its cascade. On the southern side of the island the scenery is of a different nature, consisting of the stupendous ridges of the Blue mountains, of abrupt precipices, and inaccessible cliffs, approaching the shore.

The soil of Jamaica is in some places deep and fertile; but, on the whole, Edwards pronounced it to be an unfruitful and barren country, compared with those which have been generally regarded as fertile. He estimates the island to contain 1,000,000 acres, of which not more than about 2,000,000 have been granted to individuals by patent from the crown. The island is well watered. There are about 100 rivers, which take their rise in the mountains, and run commonly with great rapidity to the sea on both sides of the island. None of them are navigable except for boats. Black river is the deepest, and has the greatest current. There are springs, both sulphureous and chalybeate, in different parts of the country. The climate of Jamaica on the plains is hot, the thermometer standing at 80 degrees, and in the colder season from 70 to 80. On the higher grounds the cold is greater. The year, as in all tropical countries, may be divided between the wet and the dry seasons. Sugar, indigo, cotton, and coffee, are the most important natural productions of Jamaica. Maize, or Indian and Guinea corn, and rice, are also cultivated. The bread-fruit tree, with several other useful plants, has been introduced by the exertions of Sir Joseph Banks. The island also abounds with different kinds of grass, of excellent quality. The several kinds of kitchen garden produce, namely, those edible roots and pulse which are in use throughout Europe, thrive well in the mountainous parts. There are also excellent vegetables of native growth. The other indigenous productions are plantains, bananas, yams of several varieties, calaloo, a species of spinach, eddoes, cassavi, and sweet potatoes. Fruits are found in equal perfection and variety, and no country affords so magnificent a dessert. The mountains are also covered with extensive woods, containing excellent timbers, some of which are of prodigious growth and solidity; while others, as the well known mahogany, are well adapted for cabinet work.

The indigenous quadrupeds of the island are the agouti, the peccary or Mexican hog, the armadillo, the opossum, the racoon, the musk-rat, the alou, and the monkey. Of these only the agouti and the monkey now remain. Of the lizard there are many varieties. The woods and marshes abound in great variety of wild fowl, some of exquisite flavour. Parrots are still found in the groves; but the flamingo is nowhere to be seen.

The legislature of Jamaica is composed of the governor, of a council nominated by the crown, consisting of 12 gentlemen, and a house of assembly containing 43 members, who are elected by the freeholders. The most important articles of export produced in the island are sugar, rum, molasses, coffee, cocoa, cotton, indigo, pimento, and ginger.

Population of Jamaica at different periods:

Years.	Whites.	Free People of Colour.	Slaves.
1658	4,500	—	1,400
1768	17,947	—	176,914
1807	30,000	10,000	250,000
1805	—	—	280,000

The slaves amounted in 1812 to 319,912. Estimating the other classes at 40,000, the whole population would amount to 359,912. Jamaica was discovered by Columbus in 1494. In the year 1655 it was taken by the English. It was afterwards settled by 3000 British soldiers, disbanded from the parliamentary army, and these were followed by 1500 royalists. From this beginning the colony has gradually increased in importance. Long. 76. 45. W. Lat. 18. 12. N.

JAMAICA, a township of the United States, in Windham county, Vermont. Pop. 896.—2d, Of Queen's county, on Long Island, New York. Pop. 3110.

JAMBA, the capital of a district of the same name in Sumatra, about 60 miles from the sea, on a river which is navigable for boats. The town is large, but the air unwholesome. Long. 103. 39. E. Lat. 1. 24. S.

JAMBUK, a town of European Russia, 76 miles south-west St Petersburg, on the Luga. Manufactures of cloth, cambric, and silk. Long. 21. 50. E. Lat. 59. 30. N.

JANES BAY, a bay situated at the bottom of Hudson's Bay.

JAMES CITY, a county of the United States, in Virginia, between Chickahominy and James rivers. Population 3084. Slaves 2320.—2d, A post town in Madison county, Virginia.

JAMES, FORT, the capital of the English settlements on the Gambia.

JAMES, GREAT AND LITTLE, ST, two of the smaller Virgin Isles, east of Tortola.

JAMES RIVER, a river of the United States, in Virginia, which, after a course of between 200 and 300 miles, falls into the mouth of the Chesapeake, in Long. 76. 20. W. Lat. 37. 2. N.

JAMES, ST, a town of France, in Normandy. Population 2600.

JAMES'S, ST, RIVER, a river of Canada, which runs into the river St Lawrence.

JAMES TOWN, a village of Scotland, Dumfriesshire, built by the mining company for their workmen.

JAMES'S TOWN, in Barbadoes, on the west side of the island.

JAMESTOWN, a post town of the United States, in Prince Edward county, Virginia.—2d, A town in James City county, Virginia, on a peninsula, on the north side of James river, 32 miles from its mouth.—The name also of several townships.

JANLAND, a province in the north-west of Sweden, bounded by Medelpadia, Angermaria, Helsingland, and Norway, and situated between the 62d and 65th degrees of northern latitude. Its superficial extent is nearly 10,000 square miles. Pop. 26,000. The western part of this extensive tract is overrun with vast craggy rocks and high mountains, covered with snow, and intersected with deep vallies and rapid torrents; but the central and eastern part of the province is a champaign country, and contains many fruitful districts. Agriculture is, however, in a very backward state. There are no towns in Jamtland, and only 11 parishes.

JANEIRO, RIO DE, a jurisdiction of Brazil, which has its name from the river Janeiro, which runs through it. It is bounded N. by the province of Espiritu Santo, E. and S. by the Atlantic ocean, and W. by the extensive region of Minas Geraes. It is of an extremely fertile soil, and produces sugar in great abundance, which is accordingly one of its chief exports. The country is mountainous, and is well wooded and watered, there being, besides the river Janeiro, 37 other streams of inferior consequence.

JANEIRO, RIO DE, a city of South America, and the capital of Brazil, situated on a river of the same name, at the head of a large bay. The town stands on a plain close to the shore, on the west side of the bay, at the foot of several high mountains which rise behind it. The houses are generally built of stone or brick. The streets are straight, well paved, and have excellent foot-paths, though they are extremely dirty. The numerous convents and churches are, according to some accounts, well built; while, according to other accounts, they are of a shabby aspect, and loaded with ornaments executed without taste. The cathedral, lately finished, is in a superior style of architecture. Parallel with the beach runs the main street, called Rua de D. Pedro, from which the minor streets branch off at right angles, and are intersected by others at regular distances. The royal palace skirts the beach, and is seen to great advantage from the landing place, which is within 80 yards of its entrance. The harbour of Rio de Janeiro is one of the finest known, and indeed can scarcely be excelled for capaciousness, and the security which it affords to vessels of every description. The entrance into it from the sea does not exceed a mile from point to point; it afterwards widens to about three or four miles; and is intersected in every direction with heavy batteries; all the numerous little islands with which it is interspersed being crowned with artillery. This city is the chief mart of Brazil, and especially of the provinces of Minas Geraes, St Paul's, Goiazes, Cuyaba, and Coritiba. The mining districts, being most populous, require the greatest proportion of consumable goods, and in return send the most valuable articles of commerce; hence innumerable troops of mules are continually travelling to and from those districts. The imports hither from the river Plate, and from Rio Grande de St Pedro, consist in immense quantities of dried beef, tallow, hides, and grain. Those from the United States are chiefly salt provisions, flour, household furniture, pitch, and tar. From the western coast of Africa, Rio de Janeiro imports wax, oil, sulphur, and some woods; also slaves. The imports from the mother country consist chiefly in wine and oil. From Sweden some iron is occasionally brought. The exports consist principally of cotton, sugar, rum, ship-timber, various fine cabinet-woods, hides, tallow, indigo, and coarse cotton cloth, in immense quantities, for clothing the Peons in the provinces of the river Plate. Among the more precious articles of export may be enumerated gold, diamonds, topazes of various colours, amethysts, tourmalines (that are frequently sold for emeralds), chrysoberyls, aqua-marinas, and wrought jewellery. The manufacture of cochineal is carried on here; and there are also considerable works for boiling and converting into oil the blubber of the black whale, which formerly frequented the harbour of Rio Janeiro, but is now caught near the island of St Catherine, and on other parts of the coast. The city is gradually extending, by the erection of public and private buildings. Fahrenheit's thermometer usually stands between 70 and 80 degrees. Population, according to Mr Mawe's estimate, including negroes, the most numerous class, 100,000; other accounts reduce it considerably. Long. 42. 1. 30. W. Lat. 22. 55. S.

JANRAO, a large river, which falls into that large and convenient bay at the head of which the city of Rio Janeiro is situated.

JANZE, the name of various inconsiderable towns of Poland.

JANZE, a town of France, department of the Ille and Vilaine. Population 3500.

JAPAN, an extensive empire, consisting of several large islands, situated at the eastern extremity of Asia. The principal of these islands is Niphon, which extends from north to south in a somewhat winding form, and upwards of 700 miles long, but no narrower, that it does not exceed 80 miles of maximum breadth. The other two islands, Sikok and Kiu-siu, are situated to the south, and so small, that they can scarcely be considered as more than appendages to Niphon. The large island of Jessu, immediately north of Niphon, has been colonised and governed by Japan, though it is scarcely reckoned an integral part of the empire. The three original islands may be computed at about 90,000 square miles. The general aspect of these islands is rugged and irregular, bristling with mountains, rocks, and hills, interspersed with considerable plains in some parts. Some of the mountains are of a great height, and are covered with perpetual snow. Volcanoes and earthquakes are felt in every part of the empire, often to a desolating extent. The latter often swallow up whole cities, and bury thousands of inhabitants in their ruins. The climate of Japan, in consequence of its variety of surface, is liable to extremes both of heat and cold. The thermometer at Nangasaki varies from 0th. to 34.; and even in the southern provinces the ground is occasionally covered with snow. The chief natural riches of Japan are those which belong to the mineral kingdom. Several provinces produce gold in very considerable quantity. Strict limitations, however, exist upon the working of the mines, which cannot be opened without the express permission of the emperor, who demands for himself two-thirds of the produce. Silver is also found; but copper is the metal of all others for which Japan is the most distinguished, and which forms the chief basis of its foreign commerce. Iron is found in three provinces only. Of mineral substances, the most abundant appears to be sulphur. Pearls of a fine quality are found along the shores; also ambergris. The various submarine plants, shrubs, corals, mushrooms, sea fims, corallines, and fuci, with all kinds of shells, are found along the coast of Japan in equal plenty and beauty. Other mineral substances found in this country are naphtha of a reddish colour, apatite, cornelian, and jaspers. The vegetable world in these islands is also rich. Among the most remarkable plants is the rhus vernis, or varnish tree, affording a milky juice, with which the natives varnish, or, as we call it, japane, all their household furniture, dishes, and plates. The mulberry tree is remarkable both for its plenty and utility. The tea shrub is still more common, and its leaves of the same universal use as in China. Their fruits are a species of winter pear, of very large size, and not fit to be eaten raw; nuts, chestnuts, walnuts; also figs, oranges, lemons, apricots, peaches, plums, and a peculiar species of cinnamon. The floral kingdom is fine, and carefully cultivated. The agricultural products are rice, barley, and wheat. Turnips, horse-radish, carrots, melons, gourds, and cucumbers, grow spontaneously. Nothing can exceed the agricultural industry of the Japanese people. A great part of the soil indeed is hilly and irregular; but even the sides of the hills are formed by stone walls into terraces, many of which rising one above another, present often a striking spectacle. The cultivation of the land is considered so sacred a duty, that the law has provided, that he who omits it even for one year, shall forfeit the field so neglected. There are few animals. The sheep, the goat, the ass, the mule, the camel, the elephant, the dog, are all unknown. Oxen and cows are employed merely for labour, milk and butter not being used as articles of food. There is a species of large buffalo, resembling a camel, which is used for draught in the large cities. Horses being employed only for stat - in the retinue of the great, are on the whole far from numerous. The caprice or superstition of a single emperor has introduced the breeding of dogs with a care scarcely known in any other country. There are a few bears, hares, and deer, a species of which last has been tamed. Foxes still keep their ground against the skillful and persevering warfare of the natives, who view them with abhorrence, and regard them as animated by demons. The government is a pure despotism; but the different districts are under the sway of hereditary princes and chiefs, who form a species of feudal aristocracy, and enjoy, within their own districts, a sway almost uncontrolled. Originally the supreme power in Japan was vested in a spiritual ruler, named Dairi; at length, the whole secular power was seized by a distinguished commander, under the name of Kubo Sama, who left to the Dairi only a mighty shadow of dominion. In compliance with popular prejudices, the Dairi was still allowed the same outward splendour as before. He resides in the imperial city of Meaco, and has the revenue of it and the surrounding district allotted to him for the support of his establishment, which consists of all the descendants of the imperial blood, amounting to several thousands. The Kubo Sama, or secular emperor, resides in pomp at Joddo, in a large castle, or fortified palace, situated in the heart of the city. The army maintained by the emperor is stated at 100,000 foot and 30,000 horse. The laws of Japan are severe, and even cruel in the extreme. Pecuniary fines are seldom or never imposed; the preference being given to personal punishments, banishment, imprisonment, and death. This last is inflicted, according to the crime, either by beheading or crucifixion. The Japanese are described by Thunberg as well made, active, free and easy in their motions, with stout limbs, though their strength is not to be compared to that of the northern inhabitants of Europe. They are of a yellowish colour all over, sometimes bordering on brown, and sometimes on white. Ladies of distinction, who seldom go out in the open air without being covered, are perfectly white. The dress consists of loose robes of silk or cotton, resembling our night-gowns, which are worn by both sexes and all ranks. They have a dress of ceremony, which is put on above this on solemn occasions. The principal article of armour is the sabre, in the use of which they are extremely skillful. They use also the bow and arrow; the great have a few muskets; and a very few pieces of artillery are in possession of the imperial guard. No official statement of the population of Japan seems ever to have been obtained by any traveller. It has been estimated to amount to 15 millions. The religious sects in Japan are chiefly two, which are called the Sintos, and the Budos. The former appears to be the native religion of the country; and to resemble much the ancient Greek and Roman mythology. The Sintosists have the general idea of a Supreme Being; but their faith is alloyed with absurd and silly superstitions. The Japanese are an intelligent and curious people, of an active mind, and acquire knowledge with great facility. They possess a certain art of printing, borrowed from the Chinese; but it is executed merely by fixed wooden blocks; nor are they acquainted with moveable types. Engraving is also practised, though in a style much inferior to that of Europe. Theatrical entertainments form a favourite amusement. Among their books, they have extensive works on botany and zoology, in which all the indigenous plants and animals are described, and exhibited in well executed coloured plates. Japan and the neighbouring countries are delineated in maps, which possess topographical accuracy, though without the divisions of latitude and longitude. The principal manufactures of Japan are those of silk and cotton, in which they equal any other Asiatic nation. To this we may add that species of lacquered ware, formed of a mixture of gold and copper, of which they possess almost the exclusive secret, and which from them we call japanned ware. Their architecture is slight, owing perhaps to the frequency of earthquakes. They work well in iron and copper, and have the art of making glass, though not of blowing it. Ship-building and navigation they are wholly unacquainted with, having no vessels except fishing boats, which scarcely venture out of sight of land. Japan was discovered in 1542 by the navigator Mendez Pinto, who was driven by a storm upon its coast. The Portuguese then attempted to open an intercourse with the inhabitants; but after effecting a settlement, they were expelled the country. They were succeeded by the Dutch, who obtained a factory on the island of Firando, and at first carried on a trade in good account; but they were gradually laid under such restrictions, that their profits were much diminished; and they were forced to submit to the most degrading search from the public functionaries appointed to prevent any illicit intercourse with the inhabitants. The imports into Japan consist of sugar, coffee, spices of all kinds, glass, and iron-ware, lead, tin, and various kinds of Indian piece goods. Of the returns, nine-tenths are made in copper; to which is added camphire, lacquered ware, painted paper, and some other trifles. The Russians, by forming establishments on the eastern coast of Asia, became neighbours to Japan; and the merchants of Okhotsk made several attempts to open an intercourse. All these, however, have been repelled in the most decided manner.

JAPARA, a place of great antiquity on the north coast of the island of Java. Long. 110. 34. E. Lat. 6. 23. S.—About three miles inland is the Javanese town of Japara, where the Chinese inhabitants are very numerous.

JARANSK, a town of European Russia, government of Viatka, on the Wyszegda, 93 miles S. N. W. Viatka. Population 5000.

JARETTA, a, one of the largest rivers in Sicily, which falls into the gulf of Catania.

JARNAC, a town of France, on the Charente. Population 1700.

JAROSLAV, a city of European Russia, the capital of a government of the same name, on the Volga, 146 miles N. N. E. Moscow. It is built almost entirely of wooden houses. It has manufactures of linen, silk, and Russia leather; also smaller ones of paper, soap, ropes, brass, white lead, and oil. This place has a noted bell foundry. It has an academy for the education of youths of genteel family. Population 19,000. Long. 40. 10. 15. E. Lat. 57. 37. 30. N.

JAROSLAV, an extensive government in the interior of European Russia, bounded by Vologda, Kostroma, Vladimir, Tver, and Novogorod, and lying between 37. 45. and 41. 15. of E. long. and 56. 44. and 53. 52. of N. lat. Its territorial extent is above 11,900 square miles. Population 800,000.

JAROSLAW, a town of Austrian Poland, in Galicia, on the San. It trades in linen and flax. Pop. 7000. 110 miles E. Cracow.

JASLO, a town of Austrian Poland, in Galicia. Population 1500. It is capital of an extensive district, with 163,000 inhabitants.

JASLOWITZ, a small town of Austrian Poland, in Galicia. Population 2000.

JASSY, a town of European Turkey, in the province of Moldavia, the residence of the hospodar or prince, and the see of the Greek archbishop or metropolitan of the province. Its population has been progressively reduced by the effects of war, fire, and pestilence, to little more than 15,000. At present it shews only the remains of its ancient greatness. The principal streets are paved with logs, and the houses irregularly built. There are not above 200 of stone, and not more than 50 have a second floor. The environs are extremely agreeable and fertile; but the town is unhealthy, owing to the total neglect of cleanliness. Here are schools for teaching reading, writing, arithmetic, the classics, and theology; but the system of tuition is very defective. The environs produce good wine; and a great deal of canvas is made in the town, and sent to Constantinople. The other articles of trade are flax, corn, hides, wool, wax, honey, and tallow. Jassy has been frequently taken by the Russians, but, as yet, always restored at the conclusion of peace. 200 miles E. Oczakow, 370 N. Constantinople.

JASTROW, a town of West Prussia, 67 miles W. Culm. Population 2500.

JASZBERENY, a town of Hungary, on the Salsva, 38 miles E. Pest. Pop. 12,000.

JAFER, a principality of the Prussian states, in Lower Silesia, bounded S. and W. by Bohemia and Lusatia. With a superficial extent of only 1300 square miles, it has about 200,000 inhabitants.

JAFER, a fortified town of Silesia, and the capital of a principality and circle, on a river of the same name. It has manufactures of woollen and cotton, and trades in flax and yarn. Pop. 3600. 16 miles N. W. Schweidnitz.

JAI JAC, a town of France, on the Allionn, department of the Ardèche. Pop. 1500.

JAILLAIS, a town of France, 6 miles N. Poitiers. Population 1400.

JAIROU, a river of Brazil, in the province of Matto-Grosso, which falls into the Paraguay, in Lat. 16. 24. S.

JAIZIEBS, a town of France, department of the Lower Alps. Population 2200.

JAVA, a large island in the Eastern sea, situated between the 6th and 9th degrees of S. lat., and between 105. and 115. of E. long. from Greenwich. It extends from E. to W. and is 612 miles in length, while in its greatest breadth it is 128 miles, and in its average breadth 95. To the S. and W. its shores are washed by the Southern Indian ocean; to the N. W. lies the island of Sumatra, from which Java is separated by a strait 20 miles wide in the narrowest part, known by the name of the Straits of Sunda; to the N. E. Borneo; to the N. E. Celebes; and on the E. the islands of Bali and Madura, from the former of which it is separated by a narrow passage called the Straits of Bali. The island is divided nearly in its whole length by a range of mountains running almost E. and W., and rising to their greatest elevation towards the center, which, however, is much broken. In several hills of the great range of mountains are the craters of volcanoes, which formerly raged with fury, and poured forth torrents of lava; but, at present, none are known to be in activity, though many emit smoke after heavy rain. The most considerable river is that of Joana, and the Seldani, or Tschangang. On the bank or bar, before Batavia, the flood rises about six feet, and higher at spring tides. High and low water likewise occur only once in 24 hours.

